blessed with, but we had the best mother in the world, and that made up for the lack of many other things. Of course, we didn't appreciate that until we grew up," and Uncle John smiled a kind smile at Grandmother Carpenter, who sat in her usual comfortable chair. "We didn't know what all the fuss about Hallowe'en meant and we were too small to understand, but we knew it had something to do with pumpkins, and nuts, and apples, and candles, and witches, and goblins. Coming from school we had to pass a large store that always had displays of fruit and vegetables out of doors and this particular day a bag of English walnuts had been added to the lot. Your father and I planned if the nuts were there at night when we came back from school we would each take two and then we would run for our lives until we could hide them. Those nuts almost burned holes in our pockets, and never a chance did we have to hide them all that day long. At night we had about forgotten about them, although we had made great plans that they were to turn into witches and from witches into fairies, at our bidding. When Mother came to get us ready for bed she touched this hard spot in our little pockets and putting her fingers in my tiny pocket pulled out two English walnuts. They looked bigger to me then than the biggest pumpkin I have ever seen since.

"'Where did you get these?' asked my mother.

"I could not answer I was so ashamed.

"Mother continued to get me ready for bed, and then started to get your father ready, when she found he had two nuts also. We were in our little night-dresses before we could pluck up enough courage to tell our mother where we had got the nuts. She made us understand we had done a great wrong taking what hadn't belonged to us. That wasn't all. She took us downstairs, slipped on our shoes and stockings and over the little night-dresses put our heavy coats and marched us up to the corner of our street to the store from which we had taken the nuts.

"'Mr. Rice, these little boys have been naughty. I think they are sorry and they would like to ask you to forgive them before they say their prayers and go to bed. They have something they want to give you,' said my mother.

"With heads hanging, we pulled out the four English walnuts and told how we had taken them for Hallowe'en in the hope they would turn into witches and fairies. We asked Mr. Rice to forgive us, but we expected to have our heads taken off we were so scared. We always thought he had a reputation for being an awful miser. And we had heard he didn't like children.

"'You have a good woman for a mother, lads,' he said. 'She has taught you how wicked it is to take what don't belong to you. I hope you will grow up to be young men worthy of her. Take these red apples instead of the nuts. The nuts would have a bad taste for you now,' and so saying he placed the largest red apple he could find in our hands.

"Mother took us home and we were soon fast asleep in our little beds, but that was my greatest Hallowe'en. I never forgot it. Now please give me some more marshmallows, for I am going to toast and eat while the rest of you tell your story. Mine is an honest Injun one," said Uncle John.

Morning Prayer

As I begin another day,
I pray thee, Lord, to guide my way,
May all a loving kindness show,
Thy blessings see, thy mercies know.
Teach me thy way, for Jesus' sake.
And should I fail my part to take,

—The Family Altar.

How Our Leaders Divide on Candidates

As Nov. 2 draws near, through one source and another, the public is learning of the intention of men of influence to vote for one or the other of the presidential candidates. A group of thirty-one distinguished men, including twelve college presidents, all of whom are favorable to a league of nations, has declared for Harding. The list is headed with the name of Hon. Elihu Root. The Outlook has been ascertaining the opinion of college presidents the country over. Its returns show 85 votes for Harding and 63 for Cox. Hamilton Holt, editor of The Independent, and other members of the executive board of the League to Enforce Peace have put forth a manifesto signed by 121 persons in favor of Cox on the ground that he stands strongly for the League of Nations. The manifesto says that the affiliations of many of these have been with the Republican and Progressive parties. From these and other sources of information at our command we have prepared the following list of persons in church and administrative circles, with whom our own readers are most familiar. The list is by no means exhaustive, but serves to show a noteworthy cleavage between men equally identified with the cause of religion, patriotism and internationalism.

FOR COX

ANTHONY, Rev. Alfred Williams, Secretary Home Mission Council, New York.
BACON, Benjamin W., professor Yale University, New Haven, Ct.
BATES, Katherine Lee, professor, Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass.
BROWN, Dr. Arthur J., Honorary Vice-President, League to Enforce Peace, New York City.
CROTHERS, Rev. Samuel McChord, Cambridge, Mass.
FARNAM, Henry W., President Connecticut Civil Service Reform Association, New Haven, Ct.
FIFIELD, Rev. L. Wendell, pastor First Church, Sioux Falls, S. D.
GULICK, Sidney L., Secretary National Committee for Constructive Immigration Legislation, New York City.
HOYT, Rev. Arthur S., Dean of Auburn Theological Seminary, Auburn, N. Y.
HUME, Robert, professor, Union Theological Seminary, New York City.
HUNTINGTON, Ellsworth, professor, Yale University, New Haven, Ct.
KING, Henry C., LL.D., President Oberlin College, Honorary Vice-President, League to Enforce Peace, Oberlin, O.
LYNCH, Dr. Frederick, member Executive Committee, League to Enforce Peace, New York City.
MACCRACKEN, Dr. H. N., President of Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
MERRILL, Rev. William P., President of the Church Peace Union, New York.
REYNOLDS, James Bronson, former Assistant District Attorney of New York.
THOMAS, M. CAREY, President of Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Pa.
WHITE, Stanley, Secretary Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, New York.
WOOLLEY, Mary E., President of Mount Holyoke College, Honorary Vice-President League to Enforce Peace, South Hadley, Mass.
CALKINS, Rev. Raymond, pastor First Church, Cambridge, Mass.
NEILSON, W. A., President of Smith College, Northampton, Mass.

FOR HARDING

ABBOTT, Lyman, editor of The Outlook.
BUTLER, Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University.
DABNEY, Charles W., University of Cincinnati.
FAUNCE, William H. P., President of Brown University.
GOODNOW, Frank J., President of Johns Hopkins University.
HIBBEN, John Grier, President of Princeton University.
HOPKINS, Ernest M., President of Dartmouth College.
LAWRENCE, William, Bishop of Massachusetts.
LINDSAY, Samuel McCune, Columbia University.
LOWELL, A. Lawrence, President of Harvard University.
MACCRACKEN, John Henry, President of Lafayette College.
PRITCHETT, Henry S., President of the Carnegie Foundation.
RICHMOND, Charles A., President of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y.
WILBUR, Ray Lyman, President of Leland Stanford University.
GUNSAULUS, F. W., President of Armour Institute, Chicago, Ill.
BRANNON, Melvin A., President of Beloit College, Beloit, Wis.
McKENZIE, F. A., President of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.
SABIN, Ellen C., President of Milwaukee-Downer.
JENKINS, F. E., President of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga.
CULBERTSON, H. C., President of Ripon College, Ripon, Wis.
COLE, Samuel V., President of Wheaton College, Norton, Mass.
PENROSE, S. B. L., President of Whitman College, Walla Walla, Wash.
EDDY, Brewer, Associate Secretary of the American Board.
PATTON, Cornelius H., Secretary of the American Board.

Editorial Sparks

What Makes Radicals

Neglect of the learned professions has synchronized with a rapid growth of radicalism and has, in all probability, been very largely the cause of it. One of the leading arguments for the college drives was that the radicalism which has of late been so pronounced in the universities is in a great measure attributable to unjust salaries and the restriction of opportunity which they involve. Unless the pay of the clergy is adequate there must eventually be a decline in the quality of spiritual leadership. There is scarcely a denomination that does not owe it to itself to adopt a program of $1,500 a year and a parsonage. There is no community that does not owe it to itself and to the nation to see that the program is made possible.—New York Times.

The People Are the Sinners

Governments cannot sin. They haven't a soul. It is people that sin. It is British people that sin against Chinese people, or German people who sin against the natives of Africa, or American people that sin against the people of Haiti. There would be a good deal less international sinning, if people who are responsible for these sins could witness their enforcement. The greediest Briton, we suspect, were he actually to witness millions of Chinese people becoming helpless degenerates through the use of opium, would not for the sake of opium profits continue to force the British Government to sin against China.—The Churchman.

IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE

Washington State Conference

The Washington State Conference was held with Pilgrim Church, Spokane, Oct. 5–7. The program was rich, the general theme being, "Obligations of the Pilgrim Heritage." The attendance was unusually large and the interest sustained to the end. Among the outstanding features of the sessions was: "A School for Higher Training for the Pilgrim Prophet: A prayerful and careful look at ourselves, our work and our objectives, that we may more truly fulfill our obligations to the Pilgrim Heritage," led by Dr. L. O. Baird. Addresses were given by Revs. F. M. Sheldon, Secretary of the Education Society, J. B. Silcox, and W. C. Veazie, respectively, on "The Minister as an Educator, as a Preacher, and as Interpreter of the Spirit." Arrangements were made to publish Dr. Silcox's address.

The first hour of each day was devoted to a devotional study of the book of John: "The Object of the Book," led by Rev. F. O. Wyatt; "The Message of Freedom," by Rev. J. H. Bainton; "More Light, the Pilgrim Heritage," by Rev. Joel Harper. The messages of Dr. H. P. Packard, of Persia, were impressive and stirring. Rev. C. D. Yates, of Kellogg, Ida., preached a helpful sermon. The symposium on evangelism brought out messages both informing and inspiring. The speakers on this subject were Revs. W. R. Marshall, C. H. Burdick, Joel Harper, J. N. Pendleton, R. H. Campbell, Mr. C. C. McEachran and Mrs. O. C. Gaston. The moderator's address, by Rev. P. E. Bauer, "The Gospel for an Age of Waste," was well received.

The meetings held under the auspices of the Women's Boards were full of interest and the reports were encouraging. The banquets under the auspices of the Sunday schools and Pilgrim Legion, conducted by Rev. J. H. Mathews, were largely attended; so also was the Congregational Club banquet on the last evening, when Dr. H. C. Mason gave an address on "Launching Our New Mayflower." The vigorous words of Drs. Kelsey and Hinman promoted the interest of the conference as usual.

The conference pledged itself to raise $87,500 for benevolences the coming year, as its part of the five millions needed. Revs. Wilfred Withington and Jonathan Edwards gave reports of the International Council at Boston.

A resolution on the Japanese problem was passed, expressing to our "Japanese brethren in the United States and Japan, our unswerving faith, that a true Christian democracy realized in both these countries will remove present causes of friction and suspicion." A commission was appointed to promote the tercentenary celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims.

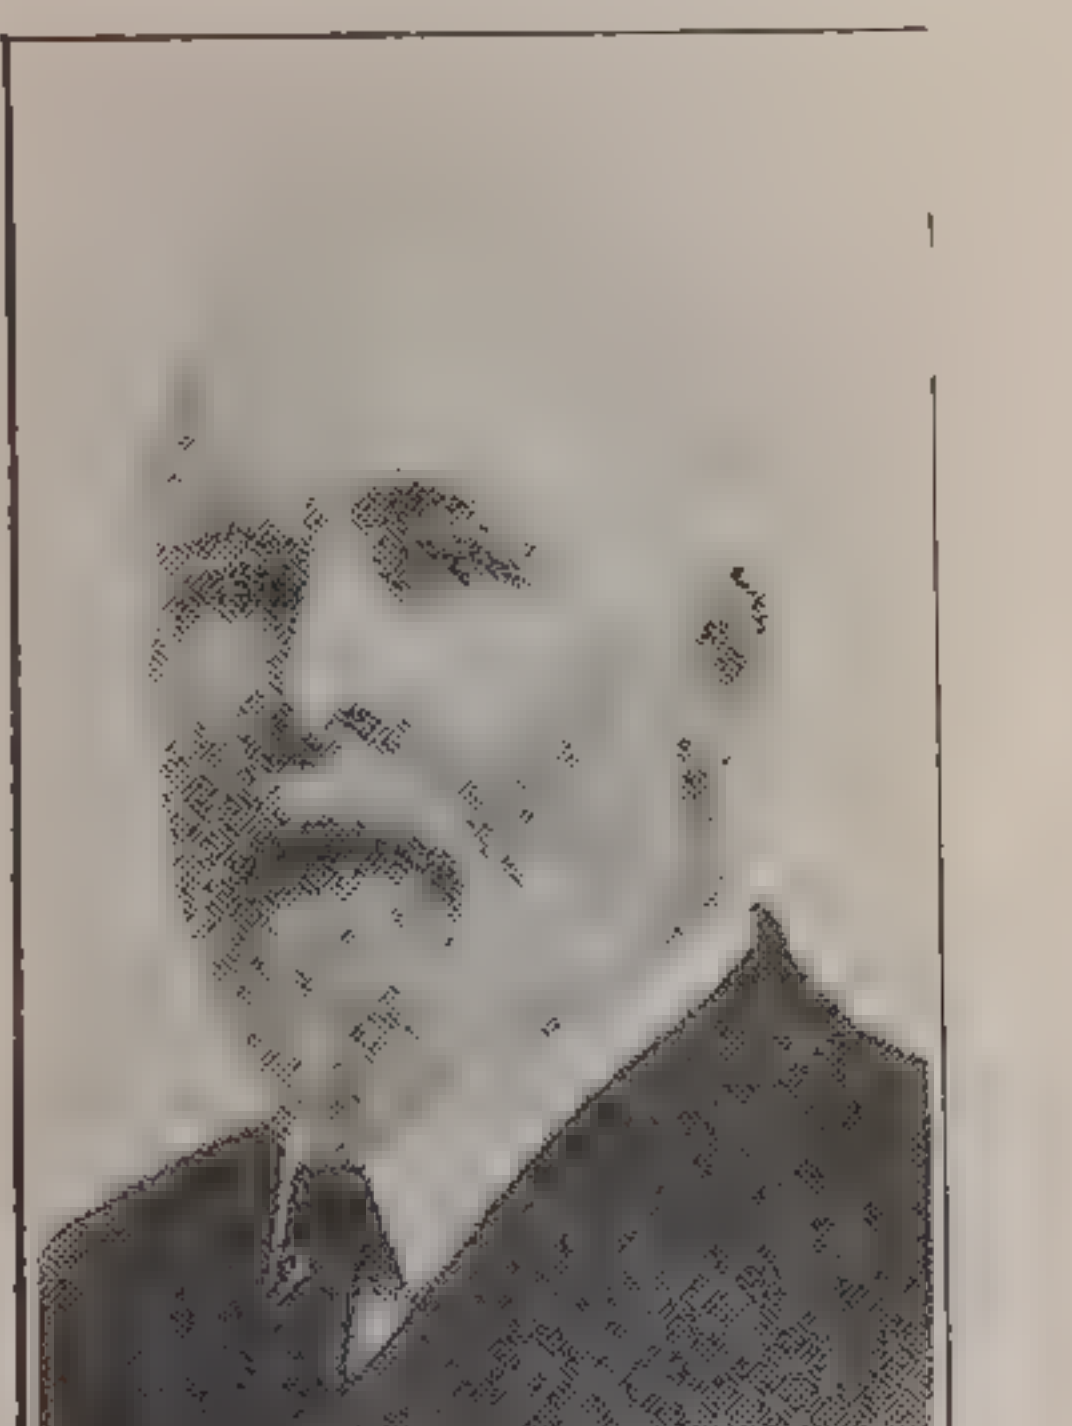
Dr. L. O. Baird, whose work has been especially acceptable and efficient, was elected superintendent for another three years. Pilgrim Church, and the other churches which aided, were fittingly recognized for so splendidly entertaining the large delegation, and Pilgrim's pastor, Rev. J. A. Luckenback, was elected moderator for the coming year. The conference will meet next year at Everett. The memorial service, conducted by Rev. C. R. Gale, for Revs. Elvira C. Cobleigh, J. M. Dick and Dr. William D. Lyman, pioneers in the state who had rendered exceptional service, was fitting and impressive.

J. E.

Our Honored Seniors

"They Shall Still Bring Forth Fruit in Old Age"

III. JAMES MANN CAMPBELL



Dr. James M. Campbell has demonstrated in his own life the title and appeal of one of his books, "Grow Old Along with Me." Born in Scotland in 1840 and educated in the Universities of Glasgow and Edinburgh, his first Congregational pastorate was in Langholm, Dumfrieshire, where he served eight years. He settled in the Middle West in 1874, and has constantly added to parish duties the preparation of a vast literary output. His outstanding contributions to religious literature have given him a high place among the clergy of this country and he has served as an editor of The American Weekly, of The Christian Century and has been a reader for a large publishing house. His work in The Homiletic Review has been followed with much interest from month to month. His seventeenth book, "Christian Science: What It Means and What We Can Learn from It," is just out.

Dr. Campbell is still effectively serving one of the churches at Manhattan in Southern California. His wealth of experience has made him a beneficent influence in the Southland as spiritual teacher, friend and counselor, whose best gift has been himself. He strikes the balance between extremes of view and, far from being a "middle-of-the-road" man, he has pioneered into the most progressive thought without losing any of his zeal and inner flame. From the summit of his years Dr. Campbell sends this message to the readers of The Congregationalist:

" 'The recognition of Christ as Living Lord' which, according to Harnack, was the main feature of the primitive Christian society, is the fundamental thing in Congregationalism. Its original declaration was that 'Jesus Christ is the only head of the Church, and the Word of God its only statute book.' As a movement of spiritual liberation it has always stood for the freedom of the spirit, but only as exercised under Christ. The authority of Christ it has regarded as absolute, and has accepted his word and will as the final court of appeal. As a separate branch of the Christian Church the distinct mission of Congregationalism is to meet the modern-day demand for a type of religion in which the highest spiritual authority is combined with the largest liberty."

Previous sketches in this series related to Dr. Edwin P. Parker of Hartford and Dr. A. F. Beard of New York. Ex-President Seelye will be the subject of the next sketch.

Idaho Has Best Conference in History

The 26th annual conference of the Idaho churches was a history-making session in several respects. A report from the Visitor to the Intermountain Institute, appointed last year, showed that the Institute is a school of junior college grade doing work through sophomore college year, that it is strictly a Christian school with required chapel and church attendance and required Bible study three hours per week. The Conference was invited to nominate a trustee who would be elected by the Board of Trustees. Rev. C. S. Rice was so nominated. It was further voted that the Conference present the school to the C. E. S. as an institute in every way worthy of recognition and of receiving such aid as investigation should justify. This gives Idaho its only school with Congregational affiliation.

The Institute was organized by Rev. E. A. Paddock, pastor of the Weiser church and a graduate of Oberlin. It now has about 120 students, full limit of its accommodation, and has had over 1,500 during its brief history. It is wholly practical, teaching the things that are of most value in Idaho agricultural and business life, at the same time providing such foundation as will be accepted in all colleges and universities for corresponding year credits. Students are encouraged, and for the most part accept the opportunity, to pay a large part of their expenses on the 2,000-acre farm and in the necessary work in the dormitories and boarding-houses. Some of our Congregational schools come to us for assistance in their beginnings. Here we have a school coming as a success with a fair property and seeking alliance because it is a Christian institution, with the breadth of Congregational traditions.

The Conference without a dissenting vote accepted the C. W. M. quota of $10,000 as its apportionment for the next year and the percentages presented by the National Apportionment Committee. In 1919 the state raised nearly $1,000 more than in any year previous to 1918, the Pilgrim Fund was oversubscribed by $2,000 and the full quota of $4,200 for the C. W. M. was pledged last spring. There was naturally some hesitation in presenting such an amount; but it was accepted and Idaho seldom fails in things undertaken.

The Conference appointed a committee to meet with a like committee from Montana, Washington and Oregon should these states accept the invitation in regard to an arrangement of conference dates so that our National representatives like Drs. Burton, Moore, Barton, Patton, Sheldon and representatives from the women's work in various lines, can make a circuit of the four states in two weeks and give us the inspiration of their presence. We are separated by such tremendous distances here that we cannot have our fellowship meetings as is possible in the East. One pastor traveled 472 miles from Challis to Weiser to reach this meeting, 944 miles round trip. We therefore wish to get all the inspiration possible from our national representatives. This we believe can be done by the plan suggested. We had with us Drs. G. A. Hinman and W. K. Bloom, and Rev. F. J. Estabrook from outside of the state.

Our annual report showed increase all along the line. The state has two new churches, a gain of 74 in church membership, of 993 in Sunday school, of 248 in Christian Endeavor. Gifts to National societies show an increase of $941, other Congregational gifts a $214 increase, value of property increase $8,520, home expenses a $3,185 increase, deficit a $6,450 increase. The only decrease was in undenominational gifts.

The final period of the last afternoon was given to a memorial servce for Dr. Herring. Officers for the next year are: moderator, Rev. C. H. Cleaves, Pocatello; registrar, Rev. J. E. Ingham, Boise; president Woman's Missionary Union, Mrs. J. E. Sears, Bruneau; secretary, W. M. U., Mrs. J. E. Ingham, Boise.

J. E. I.

Resigns After Thirty Six Years

The pastorate of Dr. J. C. Goddard over SALISBURY, CT., for 36 years is noteworthy, not so much for its length as for its sustained and improving quality. Dr. Goddard has never ceased growing as a sermonizer, and during the World War did his greatest preaching. It is rare that a country church has had for so many continuous years such strong pulpit work. His pulpit brilliancy has been marked by a spirit of profound reverence, while outside of the pulpit his original wit and humor have made him a widely known after-dinner speaker. In this he was the marked man of his university class. The University of Pennsylvania, though not his Alma Mater, honored itself as well as Dr. Goddard when it bestowed on him the degree of D. D. Few leaders have ever acquired a deeper hold upon the affections of a community than have Dr. and Mrs. Goddard. Their home has been a community blessing. Into it were born eight children of whom any parents would be proud. The youngest, Priscilla Alden, was married this Tercentenary year; and now all eight have homes of their own.

With great reluctance Salisbury accepted Dr. Goddard's resignation only with the understanding that he would live out his life with them as pastor emeritus. The fine public library, the schools and all other institutions of the town rejoice in the thought of his continued counsel and help.

From West to East

CALIFORNIA

Fresno Church to Have New Home

PILGRIM ARMENIAN, FRESNO, has just purchased a site for their new church building at a cost of $18,500. Plans for the new edifice have been under way for some time but have been delayed on account of difficulty in finding just the right location. The funds have been largely subscribed and the work will go forward now that the site has been obtained. This church was a home missionary church within 10 years.

New Life at Glen Ellen

The vicissitudes of life in any new community are well illustrated by the history of GLEN ELLEN. The church was organized because of the needs of the community and while never large in size it was prosperous and helpful. For the last two years, however, owing to the moving away of families that had been interested in the church and the coming in of a large number of Italian-speaking people, there have been no services and not even a Sunday school. Again the scene changes and owing largely to the coming into the community of a husband and wife who are Pomona College graduates, in connection with the helpful work of the pastor of the neighboring church of Sonoma, the interest has been revived. The church has now been yoked with Kenwood, with Rev. Isaac McRae as pastor. Evening services are held with good attendance and the Sunday school has an attendance of 35. On Sept. 29, 14 new members were received into the church.

D. J. S.

REV. HAROLD WINSHIP CARRYING THE GOLD-STARRED FLAG

Two young Congregational preachers—Sergeant Major Harold Winship, pastor of First, Deep River, Ct., in center, with Sergeant J. F. English, student in Hartford Seminary and son of Dr. W. F. English of Hartford, on the right, as they bore the flag with one great gold star for Hartford's soldier dead, at the head of the Hartford Welcome Home Day parade.

Paso Robles Dedicates Parish House

On Sept. 26, the dedication of the parish building at PASO ROBLES occurred, with a delightful all-day service. This provision for social and church school needs marks the culmination of a plan wrought out when the church auditorium was built a number of years ago. The new building cost $6,500 and constitutes an adequate addition to the plant.

Superintendent Kenngott preached the morning and evening sermons and assisted the pastor, Rev. T. M. Lineweaver, in the day's service. At the afternoon session a number of local ministers participated.

First, Los Angeles, Rededicates Church

Building newer and better has been the slogan for the churches in Los Angeles meeting with destructive fires. With that purpose FIRST, LOS ANGELES, entered upon its rebuilding plans for the parish building which was almost entirely destroyed on May 28. Marking its completion, a reception and service of rededication was held Oct. 4. In this service the pastor, Dr. C. S. Patton, and representatives of various organizations which use the building expressed their gratitude over the reconstruction. The redecoration, the installation of new lights and the general provision of added attractiveness make the building a most usable place for its various lines of activity.

Not only in wood and plaster have changes been occurring in First Church. Dr. Patton has introduced this autumn the use of the motion picture at the evening service. The singing of old and familiar hymns from the screen is a feature of the service and Dr. Patton's informal talk applies the lesson of the reel. As compared with attendances of a year past, the new method has increased the evening congregations by over 700 per cent.

The Church school has enlarged its program of religious education. Under the able leadership of the director, Rev. H. F. Burr, the curriculum has been thoroughly revised, a staff of loyal teachers secured, new departmental plans adopted and foundations laid for a program of permanent value.

From Northern to Southern Conference

After two and a half years as pastor of Benicia, Rev. La Rue Watson has accepted a call to Southern California. He undertakes the pastorate of TEHACHAPI this month, a growing farming and orchard district in Kern County, where our church is entering a field formerly held by the Methodists.

In Benicia Mr. Watson has not only ministered effectively to his own parish but has been aggressive in all worthy local enterprises, having been president of the Red Cross Chapter, instrumental in securing a community nurse, and a leader in other welfare undertakings. Mr. Watson's position as Christian Endeavor representative for the Northern California Conference has given him a close connection with young people's work.

S. E. B.

COLORADO

Gov. Shoup Takes Strong Stand

The Christian people of Colorado are rejoicing at the recent action of Gov. O. H. Shoup in forbidding the directors of the State Fair at Pueblo to open the fair on Sunday. Protests from ministers and religious bodies from all over the state poured into the Governor's office and a state law forbidding horse-racing on Sunday made it possible for him to issue a positive order against the advertised plan of the directors.

New Secretary of Building Society

A hearty welcome is being extended to Rev. C. H. Harrison, the new District Secretary of the C. C. B. S., whose office has been moved to Denver and added to our rapidly growing Congregational headquarters.

Denver Happenings

OHIO AVE., DENVER, is rejoicing over the decision of Rev. S. T. McKinney to remain with them. Mr. McKinney had received a call from the Presbyterian Church at Baxter Springs, Kan., at nearly twice the salary he was receiving. Ohio Ave. promptly increased his salary by $900 and on a recent Sunday noon, by a unanimous rising vote of the congregation, pledged him the active support of the members in all his plans. The basement of the new addition to the church building is completed and will be used through the winter without waiting to complete the upper part.

BERKELEY COMMUNITY, DENVER, is enthusiastic over the coming of their new pastor, Rev. G. T. Nichols. Mr. Nichols is a graduate of New Windsor College and Oberlin Seminary, and has a son in Oberlin College. He comes to Denver from Arkansas City, Kan., where he did a splendid piece of work. Berkeley has a wide field to care for and is planning an extensive program.

BOULEVARD, DENVER, under the leadership of Rev. F. G. Brainerd, has adopted the plan of a weekly church night on which the families enjoy the fellowship of a basket lunch, and a devotional service followed by various club activities.

Rev. R. V. Hinkle Becomes State Worker

The state work has lost an efficient general worker in the decision of Rev. P. W. Jones to accept the call of GRAND JUNCTION. Fortunately another good man has been found for the general work in Rev. R. V. Hinkle of Eaton, who took up his new position in the middle of October, with headquarters at Denver.

Church Slogan for Text of Sermon

Rev. Monroe Markley began his eighth year with LONGMONT on Sept. 5, preaching on their slogan: "The Church of the Open Mind, the Aspiring Soul, the Warm Heart and the Helping Hand." The church has been closed during the summer except for one class of girls in the Church school, who refused to miss their lessons and met every Sunday.

Mr. Jones Accepts Grand Junction Call

GRAND JUNCTION, which has been in rather an unsettled condition, received recently a visit of encouragement and counsel from the state missionary, Rev. P. W. Jones. His suggestions seemed so wise that they not only adopted his advice but also decided that he was the one man to lead them in carrying out the plans. So ardently did they press their suit that Mr. Jones finally accepted their call and has entered on his new work, where the church is pressing forward with a definite aggressive policy.

Montrose a Community Church

The new $60,000 community plant at MONTROSE is practically completed and the gymnasium is already in use under the leadership of Mr. Raymond Lewis, the director of recreation. The extension work of the church is now well under way, with a circuit of six regular appointments. A Ford car, with a "movie" outfit, is a great help in giving educational entertainments and in developing a good community spirit. The church is disappointed in the decision of Rev. W. B. McDowell not to accept the position of Director of Extension Work, but the pastor, Rev. Isaac Cassel, is hopeful that the right man will soon be found for this important place on his staff.

W. O. R.

WANTED — CHAUTAUQUA REPRESENTATIVES

Professional men and women or those who have had experience in club or organization work are wanted as field organizers of Chautauquas, booking our programs of Americanization lectures and high-class concerts in a nation-wide campaign. Good compensation. Short term or continuous. Opportunity for those with talent, who make success booking during the autumn to prepare for lectureships and directorships for 1921.

A career in the Chautauqua field awaits you if you can qualify for service with this national institution of recognized merit.

Write for information

The Radcliffe Chautauqua System

W. L. RADCLIFFE, Prop. & Mgr.
Washington, D. C.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Dupree Dedicates Church

DUPREE dedicated their new church Sept. 19. The first step toward building the church was taken by Rev. D. M. Brown during the summer of 1917, when most of the subscriptions were taken. The war and short crops hindered the work. During Rev. L. E. Stayton's pastorate the basement was finished, but owing to the early winter last year the work was discontinued. Early this spring the C. C. B. S. offered such splendid help on the building that the work was taken up and completed.

The visiting clergymen were Supt. W. H. Thrall, Rev. G. W. Reed of McLaughlin, and Rev. H. C. Juell. At the dedication service enough money was received and pledges made to pay the bills and furnish the church.

WISCONSIN

Recognition Service for Rev. T. A. Dungan

A service in recognition of the opening pastorate of Rev. T. A. Dungan with PLYMOUTH, OSHKOSH, was held Oct. 5. Dr. E. B. Allen, of Oak Park, Ill., preached the sermon. Rev. T. R. Faville made the recognition prayer; Rev. W. H. Ziegler gave the right hand of fellowship; Supt. L. C. Talmage gave the charge to the pastor; Rev. H. E. Peabody, the charge to the church and Rev. Walter P. Patton brought greetings from Oshkosh churches.

ILLINOIS

Dr. Breed Closes Pastorate

After serving SUMMERDALE, CHICAGO, four years Dr. D. P. Breed has withdrawn permanently from pastoral service. Two mild attacks of apoplexy have laid him under physical limitations which are likely to be permanent. His pastorate was highly fruitful. Nearly 65 per cent. of the present church membership were received under his ministry. Dr. Breed has been made pastor emeritus and will dwell among the people who have made their neighborhood most homelike to Dr. and Mrs. Breed through years of loyalty and love.

DR. AND MRS. BREED

Mr. W. P. Booth has entered upon the pastorate of the church. He is a well-trained Canadian and is growing into a good place with the church. He is soon to be ordained.

NEW YORK

Prizes for Pilgrim Essays

As a part of their Tercentenary celebration, BROADWAY TABERNACLE, NEW YORK, is offering prizes for essays on the Pilgrims. The prizes are three in number; one for boys and girls under 10 years of age; one for those over 10 and under 15; and the third for adults.

Secure Dr. Parkhurst as Acting Pastor

Dr. C. H. Parkhurst, who has been out of the active pastorate for some years, has just accepted an invitation to serve as acting pastor of MANHATTAN, NEW YORK, during the present season, from October to June. Dr. Parkhurst will be assisted in the pastoral work by Mr. W. H. Bartlett, a graduate of Harvard, who served as second lieutenant in the A. E. F.

RHODE ISLAND

Fairs Net Goodly Sums

DARLINGTON, PAWTUCKET, and HOPE, EAST PROVIDENCE, have recently held successful fairs. Darlington raised $2,000 to apply on the parsonage and Hope cleared $600 to pay on their parsonage.

Barrington Loses Mr. Canada

Rev. P. A. Canada has resigned the pastorate of BARRINGTON to accept social welfare work at Pittsfield, Mass. Since August, 1914, Bar-

OXFORD CHILDREN'S BIBLES

MOTHERS, teach your children to love the Bible. The good thoughts you sow in their minds now will yield a rich harvest of noble acts when they grow older

Oxford Bibles for Children have black and colored illustrations that interest as well as instruct. Some have Special Helps for children.

At All Booksellers
Catalog upon request

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
AMERICAN BRANCH
35 West 32d Street
New York

Money Safe!
Income Certain!

ANNUITY BONDS meet every requirement of a high class investment. Pay as high as 8%. Write for Booklet J.

American Bible Society
Astor Place New York

"Come Ye Apart"
By DR. JOHN H. JOWETT

Dr. Jowett's new Year Book, contains a Scripture passage, a thought and a prayer for a year.
"Dr. Jowett has left America but he is still blessedly with us in these nugget messages."---S. S. TIMES.
ATTRACTIVE BINDING. Net $1.50
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

Record Books for Church and Church School

For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Superintendent, the Secretary. Roll Books, Class Books, Collection Envelopes.

ASK FOR CATALOGUES

14 Beacon Street
Boston
THE PILGRIM PRESS
19 W. Jackson St.
Chicago

rington has received 40 members and benevolences have steadily increased. The sum of $2,000 was raised for the Pilgrim Fund and $1,230 for the Congregational Forward Movement. Mr. Canada had three years at Wellfleet and eight years in New Bedford and is most interested in the new work in which he is engaged. For several years he was on Barrington's School Committee and was Secretary of the Congregational Ministers' Meeting of Providence. G. A. B.

MASSACHUSETTS

Resigns Lee Charge

Rev. C. M. Calderwood resigned the pastorate of LEE on Sept 19, after three years with this church. These years have been marked by steady progress. Mr. Calderwood came to Lee from South Manchester, Ct., where he had enjoyed a successful ministry. While in Lee he has effected a number of important changes; the church has been incorporated, the old system of rented pews has been done away with, a new set of laws and rules for church government has been adopted and the Every Member Canvass inaugurated.

He goes to Glendale, Cal., where he is privileged to enter upon the pastorate of a young and growing church in that sunny land and is at once to begin the erection of a new church edifice.

Mr. Calderwood is a graduate of Grinnell College and Yale University and is eminently fitted for his new field of larger activity. The best wishes of the fellowship of the churches of South Berkshire is his as he leaves this Association for his new field in the West.

M. W. B.

In the Name of God, Amen!

1620 • The Pilgrim Tercentenary • 1920

This valuable handbook (which takes its title from the opening words of the Mayflower Compact) is offered to pastors, together with a Dramatic Service for church and community exercises, and booklets for congregational distribution in preparation for

Mayflower Universal Bible Sunday
NOVEMBER 28, 1920

Send request for descriptive circular

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY
Bible House, Astor Place, New York

CHRISTMAS MUSIC HALL-MACK CO'S FREE
FREE SAMPLES TO SUPT., PASTOR or COM.
of our new Christmas Services

Christmas Helper, No. 8, 15c.
Songs, Exercises, Recitations.
Christmas Story, 25c.
Cantata (easy) for school or chorus.
His Star, 25c. A song story.
In the Garden — By C. AUSTIN MILES.
On Victor No. 18020; Columbia, 78026.
Edison, 80520. Sheet music, 25c at all dealers.

Hall-Mack Co.
Adam Geibel Co. } 1018-20 Arch Street, Phila., Pa.

SELL CANDY

This is a good way to raise funds for church purposes. Liberal profits. Many churches and societies have used this plan successfully.

SEND TODAY FOR ILLUSTRATED CIRCULAR

Mailed free. It tells how to organize to sell candy—gives prices and all particulars.

FRED D. LESURE COMPANY
1A Broad St., Fitchburg, Mass.
WHOLESALE CONFECTIONERS

BROOKE HOUSE
79 Chandler Street, Boston
(Founded in 1892 by the Rev. Stopford W. Brooke.)

A comfortable home for young working women, near Copley Sq. and the Common. Transients accommodated in summer. Apply to Supt.

Walker's the Best Concordance

Over 50,000 more references than any other low priced concordance to the Bible. 980 pages. Cloth $3.00. ½ leather $3.75. Postage 20 cents.

14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

From Brockton to Gardner

Those acquainted with the work of Rev. C. A. McKay with FIRST PARISH, BROCKTON, are sure that First, Gardner, has made no mistake in calling him to that strategic pulpit. The five years of Mr. McKay's pastorate of First Parish have been crowded with a rich and fruitful ministry. A hundred and forty-eight new members have been received, the organization of the church has been improved by the creation of a Church Council, composed of the representatives of the various departments, which has functioned as the voting body of the church between annual meetings. For the first time in its history the church has met its full apportionment for benevolences. A special feature has been the creation of a large Sunday night congregation through a series of high-class, carefully selected and skillfully prepared stereopticon lectures. Mr. McKay has been much in demand for pastoral services outside his immediate parish. He has also done considerable lecture work in Brockton and the vicinity. He has come to be regarded as one of the most eloquent and scholarly preachers in the city.

Mr. McKay's departure has caused widespread regret among all classes of the community. This was well attested by the large audience, composed of members of all the churches, which crowded First Church at his last Sunday evening service in Brockton. H. F. H.

Becomes a Congregational Church

The Union Church of Christ, Point Shirley, Winthrop, was admitted to fellowship in the Suffolk North Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers, at the semi-annual session, Oct. 13, at First Church, Everett. The Point Shirley church has been in existence eight years as an independent mission. The committee to present the plea for admission to the Congregational Association stated that it is organized as a Congregational church, has 28 members, with more in prospect, a Sunday school of more than 50 pupils, is incorporated, owns its house of worship, the property is not mortgaged and the church maintains regular preaching services. The right hand of fellowship was extended by the moderator, Dr. C. L. Noyes, while the official and other members of the association stood, afterwards, singing "Blest be the Tie."

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

BALDWIN, W. E., Athol, S. D., to Lake Preston, S. D. Accepts to begin Nov. 1.

BURDON, H. F., West Medway, Mass., to Gilbertville. Accepts.

DUNLAP, R. A., Second Parish, Portland, Me., to become teacher of Biblical literature and history at Dartmouth College. Accepts and is at work.

LAITE, R. E., Warren, Me., to Forest Ave., Bangor.

MACDONALD, C. C., North Abington, Mass., to Union, Medford. Accepts and is at work.

PATCH, D. I., formerly of Beverly, Mass., more recently with Pilgrim Fund, to Orthodox, Arlington, Mass. Accepts.

PORTER, JOHN, Bowen, Ill., to Wyanet. Accepts.

SNIDER, R. P., Oswego, Ore., to Tallmadge, O. Accepts.

THORP, W. B., First, San Diego, Cal., to Palo Alto. Accepts.

TRACY, C. K., after year in service of denominational campaigns in Massachusetts and South Dakota, to Collinsville, Ct. Accepts and is at work.

TROWBRIDGE, R. A., student at Boston University, to Rowley, Mass.

Resignations

FISK, A. R., Union, Cedar Grove, N. J.

FRAME, E. E., Lockport, Ill.

THORP, W. B., First, San Diego, Cal.

Ordinations and Installations

RITTER, F. S., i., Waverly, Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 1. Sermon by Rev. C. H. Wilson; other parts by Rev. Messrs. J. H. MacMillan, J. H. Robinson, C. W. Carroll, T. A. Moffat, H. L. Everett and G. P. Eastman.

SHAW, G. W., o., Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 28. Parts by Rev. Messrs. J. W. Fifield, James Hyslop, James Alcock, M. H. Turk, C. B. Moody and Albert Wilson.

SMITH, G. B., o., Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 28. Parts by Rev. Messrs. J. W. Fifield, James Hyslop, James Alcock, M. H. Turk, C. B. Moody and Albert Wilson.

Personals

MORRILL, E. E., is now engaged as director of religious education with Hillside Presbyterian Church, Orange, N. J. Mr. Morrill served Congregational churches at Canandaigua, N. Y., and Malden, Mass., afterwards going to the Normal School at Ahmednagar, India, in succession to Rev. A. H. Clark, now Candidate Secretary of the American Board. Conditions of health in Mr. Morrill's family requiring his return to this country, he came back to America in the spring of this year and began service with Hillside Church Sept. 1.

PHILLIPS, G. P., who has been for two years associate pastor of Westchester, N. Y., with special charge of the Chatterton Hill Congregation, presented his resignation to that church early in the fall. Mr. Payson's increasing responsi-

CHURCH FURNISHINGS

THOMAS Individual Cups
Used by over 35,000 churches. Clean and Sanitary. Send for catalog and special offer. Trial free.
Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 5 Lima, Ohio

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER is known all over the country. Four thousand churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars. THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio.

MENEELY BELL CO
TROY, N.Y. AND
198 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY
BELLS

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Desks—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.
DeMoulinBros&Co.Dept. 14 Greenville, Ill.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
79 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

BRONZE
HONOR ROLLS
AND
HISTORICAL TABLETS
REED & BARTON, TAUNTON, MASS.

bilities outside of the church made it impossible for him to continue longer as pastor in charge, although he still remains a member of the congregation.

STEENSON, ISAAC, pastor of Madrid, N. Y., has been given a Ford Sedan by his church people to help him in his work.

WINSHIP, H. S., First, Deep River, Ct., has just been elected Adjutant of the local post of the American Legion. He is already chaplain.

WOODRING, W. H., during the last six years the faithful minister of First, Wellsville, N. Y., is seriously ill and has been ordered by his physician to give up all work for several months. The local daily of Oct. 8 says of him: "Mr. Woodring as pastor of the Congregational Church is well known in our community, but his activities have not been limited to that church or to this town. He became the leader of the no-license fight immediately upon reaching Wellsville, and was a successful leader. He became very active in all of the war work campaigns. He was the county organizer for practically all of the Liberty Loans, and carried on that work in addition to his church duties. Mr. Woodring has abundant energy and enthusiasm in whatever he undertakes, and has doubtless overtaxed his nerve force during the past three years. All our readers will join with the Reporter in expressing the hope that a few months of absolute rest will accomplish very much toward the complete restoration of his health."

Events to Come

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, ANNUAL MEETING, Springfield, Mass., Nov. 17-18.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, ANNUAL MEETING, First Church, Montclair, N. J., Nov. 10-12.

FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA, Quadrennial meeting, Boston, Mass., Dec. 1-6.

RED CROSS SUNDAY, Nov. 14.

RAILROAD YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATIONS OF NORTH AMERICA, International Conference, Richmond, Va., Nov. 18-21.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Nov. 1. Subject, The League of Nations under the Existing Political Conditions. Speaker, Pres. A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Nov. 5, 10.30 A. M. Miss Minnie Hastings of Uduvil, Ceylon, will be one of the missionary speakers.

State Conferences

CONNECTICUT, Park St. Church, Bridgeport, Nov. 9-10.

KENTUCKY, Evarts, Nov. 18-19.

TENNESSEE, Soddy, Nov. 15-16.

RHODE ISLAND, Saylesville, Nov. 9.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Advertising Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

FRANK WOOD SPAULDING

Died, in Clifton Springs, N. Y., Oct. 7, Dr. Frank W. Spaulding, aged 76 years.

Frank Wood Spaulding was born in Bingham, Me., April 29, 1844. He graduated from Bowdoin College in 1872, and from the Medical Department of the University of the City of New York in 1875 as valedictorian of his class.

A petition signed by a large number of the citizens of his native town was sent to him asking him to return as their physician. He practiced there a few months, at the Asylum in Brattleboro, Vt., as associate physician for a year, and then went to Epping, N. H., where he remained for sixteen years as village and country physician and as one of the two physicians of the county almshouse and insane asylum in a neighboring town.

In October, 1880, he married Abby Thayer Stearns, the only child of Rev. Josiah H. Stearns, D. D., pastor of the Congregational Church in Epping for more than thirty years, and a member of the prominent old New England family of that name.

Dr. Spaulding was Superintendent of the Sunday school and a deacon of the church for many years.

A severe attack of pneumonia in 1892 so affected his health that he felt unequal to the exposure of a country practice in New England, and in 1893 he accepted a position on the staff of the Clifton Springs' Sanitarium, ten years of the time as "Medical Director." Here he worked for twenty-seven years, going with no warning from his own office, at the summons of the Great Physician; just a voice out of the Eternal Stillness, and "he was not, for God took him."

Dr. Spaulding was a man greatly beloved, and as the tidings of his death flashed from Maine to California, hundreds of hearts mourned the loss of a true friend, a skilled physician whose place could not be easily filled.

It is hard to sum up the characteristics of such a man. Of wonderfully fine personality, dignified yet gentle, grave yet sympathetic, uniformly courteous, possessed of a keen sense of humor, "a friend of man" and child alike.

He was deeply religious, always present at the sanitarium services, and an enthusiastic attendant at the National Missionary and religious gatherings.

Firm in his convictions, he was nevertheless a seeker after new truth, political, medical, religious, a man of open mind, of warmest heart, of unfailing sympathy. One of the younger physicians on the staff who had been associated with him but a short time remarked, "All I can think of is the quotation from Shakespeare:

"His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix't in him, that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world: 'This was a man.' "

His sense of humor was manifest up to the time of his going. Just a short time before he went to his own office he laid a marked copy of a Republican paper on the desk of one of the librarians who had laughingly declared that she should vote the Democratic ticket.

He was devoted to all missionary interests, so loyal to the interests of the American Board that one of the secretaries wired that he wished a representative of the Board could attend the funeral service.

He was a life-long reader of The Congregationalist and every Sunday afternoon was given to its perusal from cover to cover. It was a family joke if the paper failed to come for some one to say, "Frank will not know it is Sunday without The Congregationalist," even though he always attended church service in the morning.

Dr. Spaulding is survived by his wife, whose life at the sanitarium has been a benediction to all who have come in contact with her, a sister, Mrs. W. H. Rand of Washington, D. C., a niece and three nephews.

Such a life cannot end. Its influence lives on here, and in the broader sphere above. The doctor's office in the Clifton Springs' Sanitarium was but the doorway into a larger, fuller, more perfect, more abounding life with him whose he was, whom he always lovingly and joyfully served. I. V. W.

ABBY STEARNS SPAULDING

Died at Clifton Springs, Oct. 18, Mrs. Abby Stearns Spaulding, wife of Dr. Frank W. Spaulding, aged 73 years.

Abby Thayer Stearns was born in Dennysville, Me., April 22, 1847, daughter of Rev. Josiah H. and Eliza (Kilby) Stearns. Dr. Stearns was Congregational minister at Dennysville but after the death of his wife, when the little girl was about nine years of age, he returned to his native town of Epping, N. H., as pastor of the church. Abby graduated at Abbot Academy in 1868, and returning to her home, helped her father in the active parish work which ordinarily falls to a pastor's wife; she also officiated as church organist and presided over the home.

Her marriage to Dr. Frank W. Spaulding occurred on Oct. 20, 1580. Instead of the 40th wedding anniversary for which they had planned, there is a glorious reunion at the Lamb's Marriage Feast.

Mrs. Spaulding was possessed of rare attributes, always cheerful, kindly, sympathetic and generous. As she went in and out of the sanitarium she seemed much younger than her years indicated, and her presence always brought happiness and sunshine to guests, nurses and employees alike. Goodness and cheer radiated from her, and the path of her feet was always one of brightness. She will be sadly missed from her accustomed place, from her ministry of love, but her lonely heart went out in search of him who had gone so recently, and the physical heart could not bear the strain. With a brief attack of pain, a smile, and she "walks in white

In garments gloriously dight,
In white because she walks with God."

Mrs. Spaulding leaves no relatives nearer than cousins, Mrs. Sheahan of Dennysville, Me., Mr. John T. Vose of Cumberland, Me., Mrs. W. B. Johnson of Woodfords, Me., and Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury of the A. M. A., mother of Dr. Woodbury, superintendent of the sanitarium.

Loving hearts all over this country mourn their great loss in her going, but mourning is turned into joy at the thought of her abundant entrance and the glad reunion.

The Quality Investment

Guaranteed Farm Mortgages

Forty Three Years In Business— Without Loss to A Client

J·L·Pettyjohn & Co.
OLATHE, KANSAS

ONLY STRONG STOCKS Increase Dividends Now
We have offered for years and still recommend:
Naumkeag Steam Cotton . Extra per share $5.00 Oct. 15
Merrimac Chemical . . . " " " 2.00 Sept. 30
Fitchburg Yarn . . . . " " " .50 Oct. 1
Sullivan Machinery . . . Increase over early 1920 .50 Oct. 15
The above concerns have no bonds or preferred stocks so that shareholders participate directly in large earnings. Details on request.
EARNEST E. SMITH & CO.
Specialists in New England Securities
SALEM 52 Devonshire Street, BOSTON SPRINGFIELD
Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges

OUR READERS' FORUM

Nomination Seconded

Dear Mr. Editor:

I second the nomination of Dr. Charles F. Carter as Secretary of the National Council, because he seems especially well fitted. As Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Council, he already knows its work in detail, and in that capacity he has repeatedly been put to the test and never found wanting. If he could be persuaded to accept this position, he would bring to it outstanding ability and sound judgment. He couples efficiency in doing things with unfailing consideration for others. Nor would he be found lacking in the reality and strength of his spiritual leadership. Elijah has been called away from us. Upon whom better fitted could his mantle fall?

Appreciation of the greatness of Dr. Herring's leadership grows. He may be said to have reinterpreted to ministers and churches the New Testament type of oversight, in which a greatly endowed personality manifested his greatness in the completeness of his service. Upon whom is his great mantle to fall? Congregationalists must immediately face this question. Our fellowship is not lacking in capable men, and no post in the denomination offers greater opportunity for service. Of whom could we be more sure than the pastor of Immanuel Church, Hartford?

William Horace Day.

Bridgeport, Ct.

Should the Constitution be Amended?

Dear Mr. Editor:

In the discussions as to the League of Nations the vital point is this: The opponents of the League say that if the United States should enter, then our army and navy would be subject to the call of the Supreme Council, without any action by our Congress. President Wilson says this is not so. Cox affirms his solemn purpose to stand by the Constitution. But on the other hand Harding says that if our military forces were not under the direction of the Supreme Council, then our entrance into the League would not amount to much.

This apparent dilemma calls for careful consideration. Many good American Christians believe that the moral influence of this nation in the League would be very great and beneficial, and that we should enter without further delay, leaving the constitutional questions to be adjusted later. Others, who have more logical keenness, and who are more cautious, think we should know exactly what is involved before we take the decisive step.

While the ultimate purpose of the League is to promote peace, the League itself is no pacifist program. Permanent peace cannot be established until justice is maintained. If the League of Nations is to be effective, the Supreme Council must be able to enforce its authority by an international army maintained for police duty. And if the United States enters the League, it should contribute its quota to such an international police force. Police duty is not war, yet it is evident that we are confronted by a situation which is not provided for in our Constitution. Our nation now has international responsibilities which Washington, Jefferson, and Monroe never dreamed of.

Whatever may be the decision of our people as to our immediate duty, it seems probable that ultimately, in order to perform our part in the affairs of the new world which is to be, we shall need to amend our Constitution.

To present this matter in a definite form, suitable for discussion, I will be rash enough to suggest that possibly an amendment should be adopted something like the following:

Under an international agreement, ratfied on the part of the United States by the President and the Senate, to administer justice and maintain the peace of the world, the army and navy of the United States may be employed for police duty in any part of the world. The scope and conditions of this article may be defined from time to time by act of Congress.

William Colton Clark.

Wilmington, Vt.

The Voter's Responsibility

Dear Mr. Editor:

At so many of the meetings of the International Council, expression was given to criticisms of the United States Senate, the President and "others in authority over us."

Of course we have the freedom of speech which allows criticism; but haven't we the remedy for what we criticize in our own hands?

Shouldn't we—must we not—encourage our young people all over this fair land of ours to think that it is their Christian duty as they reach the age of twenty-one to register, inform themselves of the issues and candidates and vote—not only that year but every year thereafter?

If every person in these United States who believes in business integrity, civic righteousness and patriotism cast his vote to the best of his ability every year, it would not take long to change things for the better. The writer feels deeply the deplorable fact that so many men who consider themselves respectable members of society, take so lightly their responsibility for making and keeping their town, city, state and country respectable.

A Former Anti-Suffragist.

Dr. Herring as an Interdenominationalist

Dear Mr. Editor:

If it is not too late, may I add another tribute to the catholic-minded brotherliness of the late Dr. Herring.

One of the most prominent leaders of the Interchurch World Movement, who was at all the important conferences, tells me that of all the men who represented the different denominations, none was so universally fair or consistently interdenominational in his outlook as Dr. Herring. He stood, from the beginning to the unfortunate end, for the original idea of the Movement—that it should bring the denominations together in common service, that the money should be raised by a common appeal, and not by many denominational appeals, and that interdenominational religious bodies that had their place in the churches should not be excluded.

When the fatal and irretrievable mistake was made to sectarianize the appeals, and the conduct of the Movement, he deplored it, as did many others, but none more than he.

My friend is not a Congregationalist, and he might not care to make this statement over his own name, for obvious reasons, but I am sure he would like to have his opinion recorded, of the brotherly, large-hearted spirit of the beloved leader of Congregationalism.

Francis E. Clark.

41 Mt. Vernon St.,
Boston, Mass.

CLASSIFIED WANTS

Each week this paper goes into over twenty thousand Congregational homes. It is read by those earnest people who form the very backbone of our denomination. Our classified columns offer exceptional opportunities for those who have something to sell or are looking for something to buy, for positions wanted or to be filled, together with many other wants. Classified rates are four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

CASH IN ADVANCE ONLY

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

PASTOR WANTED

Ministers wanted in North Dakota for self-supporting and missionary fields at living salaries. Write Supt. E. H. Stickney, Fargo, N. D.

POSITION WANTED

Trained nurse (male) desires position in private family. Twenty years' experience in private and hospital nursing. Best of references. Address "S. J.," Congregationalist, Boston.

MISCELLANEOUS

Gothic Windows—Church, 16 large, 64 lights, frames, sash, glass, transoms, weights, cords, inside trim, good condition, 2 x 6 studding. Needy church may have for $150. Less than glass is worth. Rev. C. S. Holland, Winthrop, Io.

A Congregational Minister is about to lose all he has, in mortgage on his property. Will someone please buy and hold until the income of $50 per month pays same, or it can be sold. Please write me. "Wife," Congregationalist.

Wanted—To correspond with Christian man familiar with retail grocery business. Object, secure manager for new Co-operative Store, rural community. F. Stacy, Eden Mills, Vt.

Board in modest surroundings wanted by middle-aged lady. Address "K.," care Congregationalist.

Man and wife desire to purchase small house on upper half of Cape Cod for year-round home. M. E. L., Congregationalist.

Japanese goods consigned for church bazaars. Japanese Art & Novelty Company, 100 Prescott Ave., New York.

Everything About Cuticura Soap Suggests Efficiency
Soap, Ointment, Talcum, 25c. everywhere. For samples address: Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. V, Malden, Mass.

Margaret Slattery's Books
The Charm of the Impossible, 50c.
The Girl in Her Teens, 85c.
The American Girl and Her Community, $1.35
The Girls' Book of Prayer, 35c. cloth 60c.
The Girl and Her Religion, $1.25.
Just Over the Hill, $1.25.
The Costly Star, 60c.
Add 10% for postage
14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

In the Church School

(Continued from page 538)

1-9, is a naïve pictorial effort to explain the fact of many languages.

The stories of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph and Moses are all fascinating and furnish excellent material for religious education and moral instruction, if used discriminately. God doesn't sanction such lies as Abraham told Pharaoh and Abimelech, much less does he bring a plague upon Pharaoh and put blame upon Abimelech to help his favorite out of the difficulties his falsehoods brought upon him.

The story of the sacrifice of Isaac probably indicates the doing away of human sacrifice, which the Israelites doubtless practiced in common with their neighbors. Other people offered their sons in sacrifice; can he feel that his God commands less? He will offer the best he has, but God wakens him to the fact that he makes no such requirement.

We must not think that God indorses Jacob's chicanery, even though he uses him in working out his plan. Joseph was a remarkable character, even if he did profiteer for Pharaoh until he had brought all Egypt into slavery.

Moses is an outstanding character giving to Israel most remarkable and fascinating interpretations of God's will. But as we have already seen, the prophets and Jesus did not sanction the idea that God required the people to offer sacrifices. The great contributions are the Book of the Covenant, Ex. 20-23, the 19th chapter of Leviticus, where we have the second great commandment in the 18th verse. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," and the Holiness Code in Deuteronomy in which we have the Ten Commandments repeated in chapter 5: 6-21, though the reason given for the Sabbath differs from that in Exodus. In chapter 6: 4, we have what Jesus called the first great commandment, "Thou shalt love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might." Jesus said, "On these two commandments, the whole law hangeth and the prophets." Matt. 22: 40. And Paul said, "The whole law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Gal. 5: 14.

Next week we shall consider some sayings which seem wholly contrary to the spirit and teachings of Jesus. F. M. SHELDON.

New A. M. A. Secretary

At its October meeting, the Executive Committee of The American Missionary Association appointed Rev. Fred L. Brownlee of Cleveland, O., as its Secretary for the Department of Missions, to succeed Dr. J. E. McAfee and earlier Dr. H. Paul Douglass. Mr. Brownlee has been serving Pilgrim Church, Cleveland, as its associate pastor with Dr. Dan F. Bradley and begins his new duties Nov. 1.

It Will Pay You to Read

BUILDING FOR THE NEW DAY, by PAUL L. VOGT, Ph.D., in Christian Advocate for Sept. 23. Mr. Vogt is Superintendent of Rural Work for the Methodist Episcopal Church. He discusses the questions of church architecture—and gives plans and pictures for convenient, often beautiful and inexpensive church buildings and groups of buildings planned for Methodist churches.

THE EARLIEST MINOR ACCOUNTS OF PLYMOUTH PLANTATION, by CHAMPLIN BURRAGE (Harvard Theological Review, October). Bradford's History was commenced in 1630. This important and interesting article deals with earlier documents published in 1622 and 1624, especially the "Relation," misnamed Mourt's. Mr. Burrage shows that the first section is Bradford's Relation and the second part "is made up chiefly of letters or parts of letters by Winslow. This is reproduced almost entirely, and there are brief references to Porry's "Description of Plymouth Colony," 1622, and to certain other early documents. Of particular interest is the archæological material which is contained in these documents.

An intelligent man gives up his childish notions of science and philosophy, but does not give up science or philosophy. So he outgrows his childish notions of religion, but holds on to religion.—John Andrew Holmes.

CARLETON
COLLEGE
Liberal Arts
Science Music
D. J. COWLING, President
Northfield, Minnesota

ANDOVER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
Cambridge, Massachusetts
Affiliated with Harvard University

A professional training school for Christian Ministers, with a three years' course of study leading to the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. Courses in all departments of Theology, with liberal privileges of election.

For catalogue and information apply to the Dean.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
An undenominational training school for
The Ministry Religious Education
Foreign Missions Social Service
Curricula high grade and modern. Graduate degrees. University of California privileges. Opportunities for the study of Oriental peoples. Open to men and women of all Christian denominations. For catalogue address
WILLIAM FREDERIC BADE, Dean, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

OBERLIN GRADUATE SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY
Suburban to the great steel industrial section of Ohio and in a well-equipped educational center thorough scholarship suffers less distraction than in the city.
For information and catalogue address
G. W. FISKE, JR., Dean, Oberlin, Ohio.

BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
105th year opens Sept. 29, 1920. For College or non-College men. Courses, regular and elective; leading to diploma or degree; modern, thorough, practical. Expenses low. For Catalogue or information address
Prof. WARREN J. MOULTON, Cor. Sec'y.

Union Theological Seminary
Broadway at 120th Street
New York City
The Charter requires that "Equal privileges of admission and instruction, with all the advantages of the Institution, shall be allowed to students of every denomination of Christians."
Eighty-Fifth Year began September 22, 1920
For catalogue, address
THE DEAN OF STUDENTS.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M. A., B. D. and Ph. D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

The Pratt Teachers' Agency
70 Fifth Avenue, New York
Recommends teachers to colleges, public and private schools in all parts of the country.
Advises parents about schools. WM. O. PRATT, Mgr.

Offering Envelopes
For all purposes. Prompt Service
Ask For Prices
14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

GRADUATE BIBLE STUDY
FOR
PASTORS IN ACTIVE SERVICE
AT THE
BIBLE TEACHERS TRAINING SCHOOL
IN NEW YORK CITY.
WILBERT W. WHITE, Ph. D., D. D., President
Intensive study for one Calendar month, in separate Pastors' Department. Continuation courses by Correspondence. First month's term opens Jan. 3, 1921. Register now for any one month, from January to July, 1921. Expenses of this study will be met in most cases partly or wholly by interested laymen and women who desire to stimulate and enrich the life of the Church through Biblical preaching. For information address J. Campbell White, Vice President, 541 Lexington Avenue, New York.

RIPON
A strong, co-educational Christian college, with exceptionally able faculty, complete equipment, and highest educational standing. For young men and women who want the best training in an atmosphere of democracy, culture and wholesome character-building influences.
For catalogue and literature address
RIPON COLLEGE :: RIPON, WIS.

Chicago Theological Seminary
Is affiliated with the University of Chicago. Seminary instruction is supplemented by the varied and limitless opportunities of the University and the Divinity School. Tuition free.
Trains for Pulpit and Pastorate
Missionary Work
Community Service
Religious Education
Opportunity is offered to secure the M. A. degree during preparation for the B. D.; also an annual two-year honor fellowship for post-graduate work.
5757 University Ave., Chicago, Illinois. OZORA S. DAVIS, President.

The Congregational Training School
For Women
Trains for Christian leadership.
The work of Church Assistant, Director of Religious Education, and Instructor in Week-day Religious Education offers opportunity for the finest and highest type of social service.
One and two year courses. Expenses low.
MISS MARGARET TAYLOR, Dean,
5603 Dorchester Ave., Chicago, Ill.

HARTFORD
THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
A Training School for the Christian Ministry
Associated with it are:
HARTFORD SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS PEDAGOGY
Training leaders in religious education
KENNEDY SCHOOL OF MISSIONS
Training for foreign service
Address M. W. JACOBUS, Dean of Seminary, Hartford, Conn.

A SCHOLARSHIP
In PIANO and ORGAN
IS OFFERED in one of the best girls' boarding schools near Boston. If DEFINITELY interested write, giving full particulars about yourself.
M. I., Congregationalist, Boston, Mass.

Benevolent Societies

Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D. D., Secretary; Rev. John J. Walker, Associate Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 609 Congregational House, Boston.

Congregational Board of Pastoral Supply, maintained by the Congregational Conferences of the six New England States, offers aid to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies in New England and elsewhere. Congregational House, Boston, Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Secretary, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D. D., Chairman.

Massachusetts Board of Ministerial Aid. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Zeigler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

The Congregational Church Union of Boston and vicinity (Incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel C. Bushnell, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Fred L. Norton, Sec., 919 Tremont Building, Boston.

Women's Organizations

Woman's Board of Missions, 503 Congregational House, Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

Woman's Board of Missions of the Interior, 19 S. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas., Friday Meeting, 10 A. M.

Woman's Board of Missions for the Pacific, 760 Market St., Room 421, San Francisco. Mrs. Ernest A. Evans, President; Mrs. W. W. Ferrier, Treasurer; Miss E. S. Benton, Secretary.

Congregational Woman's Home Missionary Federation, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Mrs. P. S. Suffern, Treas.; Miss Miriam F. Choate, Sec.

Woman's Home Missionary Association (of Massachusetts and Rhode Island), Mrs. Amos L. Hatheway, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec., 607 Congregational House, Boston.

Boston Seaman's Friend Society

Incorporated 1829

306 Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

President, Samuel Usher; Cor. Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton. A Congregational Society devoted to the material, social and moral welfare of seamen of all nations and supported mainly by the New England churches. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Room at Tarpaulin Cove. Bequests should be made payable to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society. Contributions from churches and individuals solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis.

American Seamen's Friend Society

76 Wall St., New York, Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational National and International Seamen's Society.

Maintains a Sailor's Home and Institute, 507 West Street, New York.

Loan Libraries ($20 each) placed on deep water vessels.

Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.

Publishes the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).

Officers: John B. Calvert, D. D., President; George Sidney Webster, D. D., Secretary. Send contributions to Clarence C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 76 Wall Street, New York.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817.

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps all churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. Carver, Supt.
8 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Connecticut Societies

The Fund for Ministers provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

The Missionary Society of Connecticut, a Constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trusts for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS can reach every principal city and town in the United States through the advertising columns of The Congregationalist and Advance.

For rates and other information write
Kenneth S. Ballou,
Advertising Manager.

National Agencies

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Moderator, Rev. Henry Churchill King, Oberlin, O.
Secretary, Rev. Hubert C. Herring, 289 Fourth Ave., New York
Assistant Secretary, Truman J. Spencer, 289 Fourth Ave., New York
Treasurer, Frank F. Moore, 287 Fourth Ave., New York

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)
14 Beacon Street, Boston
19 West Jackson Street, Chicago

Albert W. Fell, Business Manager
Harry M. Nelson, Treasurer
Vernon M. Schenck, General Sales Manager
A. A. Hagstrom, Western Manager
Kenneth S. Ballou, Advertising Manager

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Established by the National Council at Grand Rapids, in 1919

Dr. Lucien C. Warner, Chairman
Rev. Herman F. Swartz, General Secretary
Rev. James E. McConnell, Ass't Secretary
Walter E. Bell, Treasurer
Rev. John Luther Kilbon, Financial Sec'y

Program for the coming year to include Missionary Education, Stewardship, and a Financial Campaign in behalf of our denominational work.

American Tract Society

Its work is interdenominational, evangelical and international in scope, and is commended by all the churches. It has published the gospel message in 174 languages, dialects and characters. Its colporters meet the immigrants with Christian literature in many languages, and also visit the spiritually destitute. It has issued over 300 publications for the millions in Spanish America, Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. Its literature in the native dialects has been the strong right arm of foreign missions. Its benevolent work is dependent upon donations and legacies.

William Phillips Hall, President.
Judson Swift, D. D., General Secretary.

Donations may be sent to Louis Tag, Treasurer, Park Ave. and 40th St., New York, N. Y., and those from the New England field should be forwarded to Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, Ph.D., 50 Bromfield Street, Boston, Mass.

Religious Notice

Woman's Board of Missions. The Fifty-third Annual Meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions will be held in First Church, Montclair, N. J., Nov. 10–12. Meeting opens Wednesday at 10 A. M., closes Friday noon.—Lucile S. Harvey, Clerk.

RISIBLES

"Is she as sour as she looks?"

"Sour? Why, if that woman gazed aloft on a starry night she'd curdle the Milky Way."

Neighbor: They tell me your son is on the college football team.

Proud Mother: It is quite true.

Neighbor: Do you know what position he plays?

Proud Mother: I'm not sure, but I think he's one of the drawbacks.

As an example of made to order "funny" stuff with a certain edge of wit, this extract from the "Chaparral" has its appeal:

Downanout—Jo Cose: "Is Mr. Downan in?"

Ima Stenog: "No, he went out to lunch."

Jo Cose: "Will he be in after lunch?"

Ima Stenog: "No, that's what he went out after."

Her husband had just come home and had his first meeting with the new nurse, who was remarkably pretty.

"She is sensible and scientific, too," urged the fond mother, "and says she will allow no one to kiss baby while she is near."

"No one would want to," replied the husband, "while she is near."

And the nurse was discharged.

National Societies

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Edward Lincoln Smith	Editorial Secretary
(287 Fourth Ave., New York)	Rev. Wm. E. Strong

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Rev. William S. Beard, Secretary of Promotion
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Secretary of Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Nineteen self-supporting state organizations are in Federated relations with the National Society. The state Superintendent or Secretary is the official representative of all home mission interests.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. George L. Cady, Secretary
Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis, Associate Secretary
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Eskimos, Chinese, Japanese and Hindus; in Island Territories of Porto Rico and Hawaii. New work in Southwest taken under instruction of National Council.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

289 Fourth Avenue, New York City
Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
(Church Extension Boards)
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Rev. Charles H. Richards, Editorial Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. In sixty-six years it has helped to build 4,982 churches and 1,334 parsonages.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Rev. A. E. Holt, Social Service Sec.
Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Missionary Education Sec.
Samuel F. Wilkins, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service and Missionary Education; aids Colleges, Academies, Training Schools, Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities and among immigrants.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

To conserve the welfare of aged ministers or their wives

The Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers

The opportunities of this Fund should appeal to all our ministers under fifty-five years of age.

375 Lexington Ave., New York City
Rev. William A. Rice, Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

COMMISSION OF ONE HUNDRED OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL
Established at Columbus, Ohio, 1917
375 Lexington Ave., New York City
Charles S. Mills, Chairman
Lewis T. Reed, Executive Secretary

A Permanent Tercentenary Memorial Fund of Five Million Dollars, to provide annuities for the old age and disability of Congregational Ministers. The income to supplement payments made by the ministers. Actuarially Sound. Socially Just.

Make checks payable to the
Pilgrim Memorial Fund Commission

Pass on the Word To Your Friends

Now is the Time to Subscribe for

The Congregationalist and Advance

Tell them if they act quickly, they will be Just in Time for the Special Attractions of the Next Few Weeks—

Thanksgiving Number Holiday Book Number

Young Folks' Book Number Christmas Number

Forefathers' Number

Special Articles

A CONGREGATIONAL CATHEDRAL, by George L. Parker

WHAT JOHN R. MOTT SEES IN EUROPE, by Howard B. Grose

THE FORUM MARCHING ON, by George W. Coleman

RELIGIOUS INSPIRATION FROM ENGLAND, by Dr. J. H. Jowett, Rev. Rhondda Williams, Dr. W. E. Orchard, Rev. Sidney M. Berry

OUR PILGRIM MOTHERS AND THEIR DAUGHTERS, by Laura E. Wild

OUR PILGRIM PULPIT—A SHORT SERMON EVERY WEEK, by our Brilliant Younger Ministers

ANOTHER BETHLEHEM, by Shepherd Knapp

WHAT WE HAVE TO BE THANKFUL FOR, by Distinguished Writers

TALES OF THE MAYFLOWER CHILDREN, by Pauline Carrington Bouvé

Inspiring Human Interest Stories, Favorite Poems, Successful Church Methods, Christian Interpretation of Current Events

Subscribe Now and Get This Great Journal the Rest of This Year Free and All of 1921 for Only $3.00 or $2.75 in Church Clubs

Circulation Department

14 Beacon Street
Boston

The Congregationalist and Advance

19 W. Jackson Street
Chicago

THE MAYFLOWER PROGRAM BOOK

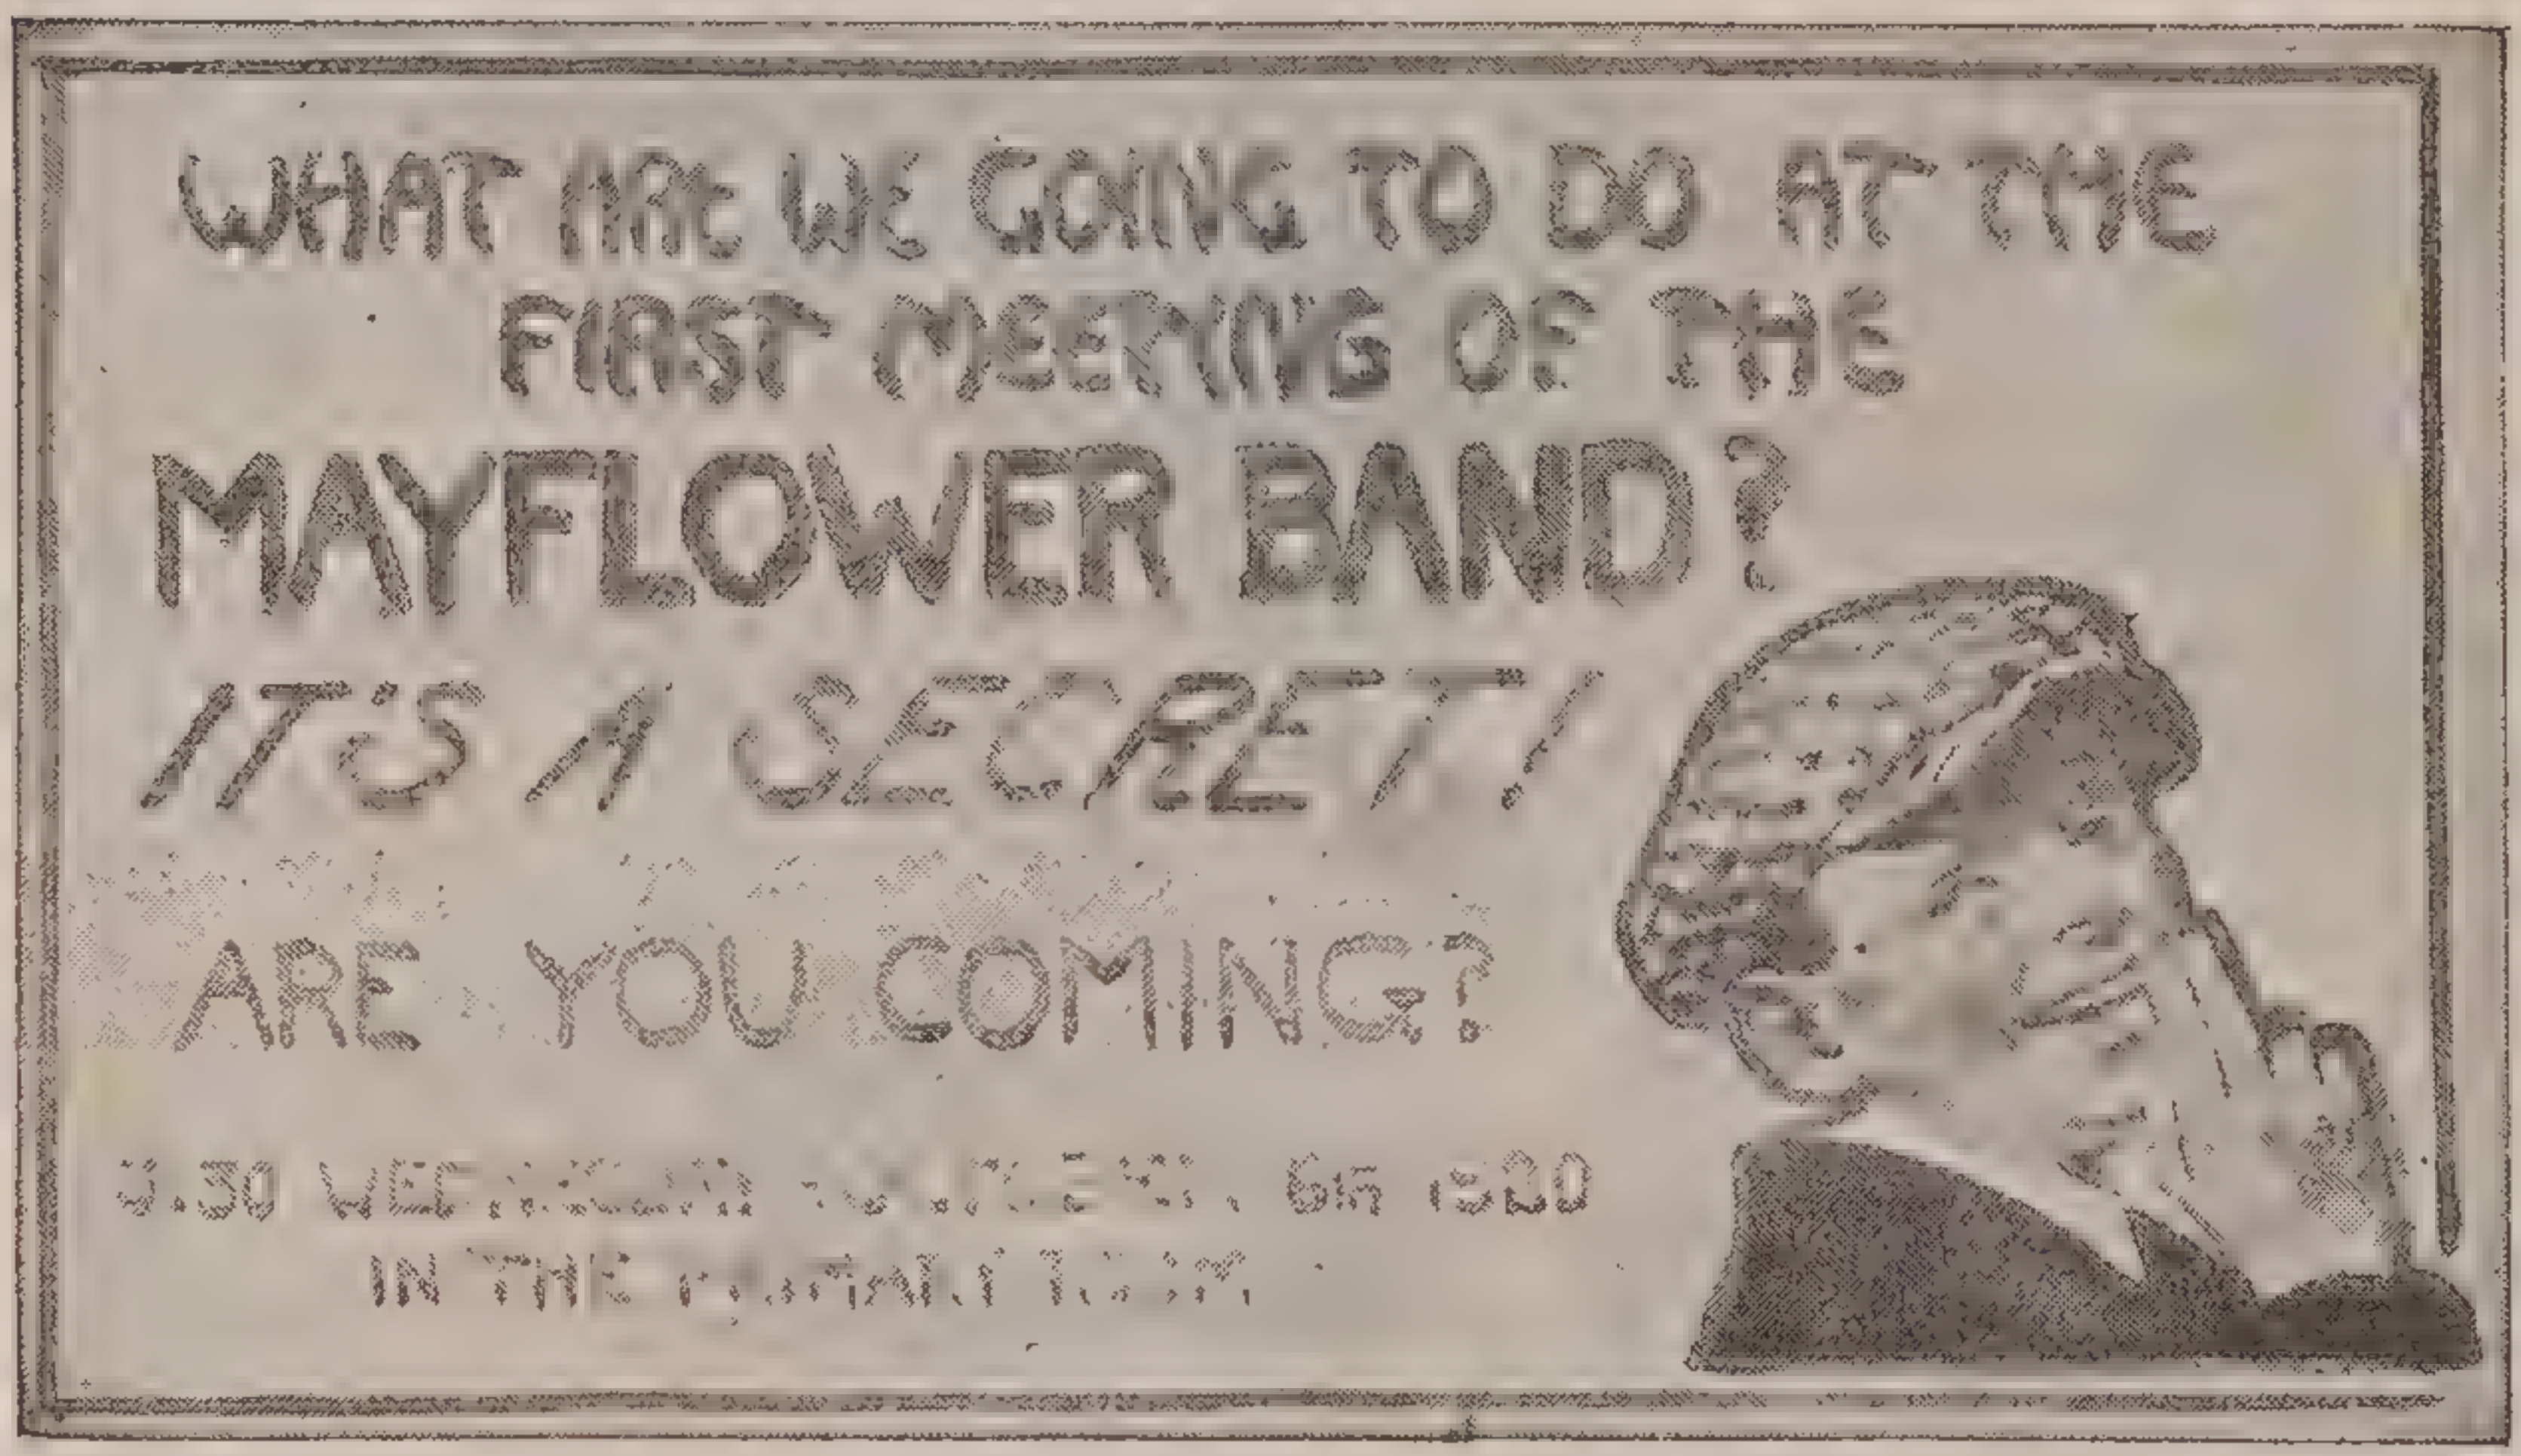
By JEANETTE ELOISE PERKINS and FRANCES WELD DANIELSON

A Week-day Course in World Friendship for Primary Children

(Under 9 years of age)

Equipment for the Course

- Mayflower Program Book
- Envelope of Supplementary pattern (if desired)
- Mayflower Band Buttons (25 in an envelope)
- Mayflower Chart Seals (50 small, 2 large, in an envelope)



WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO AT THE FIRST MEETING OF THE MAYFLOWER BAND?
IT'S A SECRET!
ARE YOU COMING?
IN THE PRIMARY ROOM

Poster Announcing First Meeting

Twenty-six complete programs of stories, songs, games and definite suggestions for service

Purpose

(1) To develop an appreciation of all people near and far who contribute to the child's happiness.

(2) To develop a spirit of comradeship and sympathetic helpfulness toward persons less favored.

(3) To provide actual practice in service.

THEY CULTIVATE THE SPIRIT OF GIVING

The Mayflower Programs will arouse interest in other people and their needs, the children will gain a spirit of giving that will make them throughout their lives loyal supporters of missionary enterprises. Gifts that are the children's own work are effective in accomplishing this end, and so form an important part of the programs. The final program provides for another form of children's service—giving a playlet based on the season's programs, the children thus earning money which will go for mission work.

PRICE $2.00. POSTAGE 10 CENTS

---

14 BEACON STREET
BOSTON

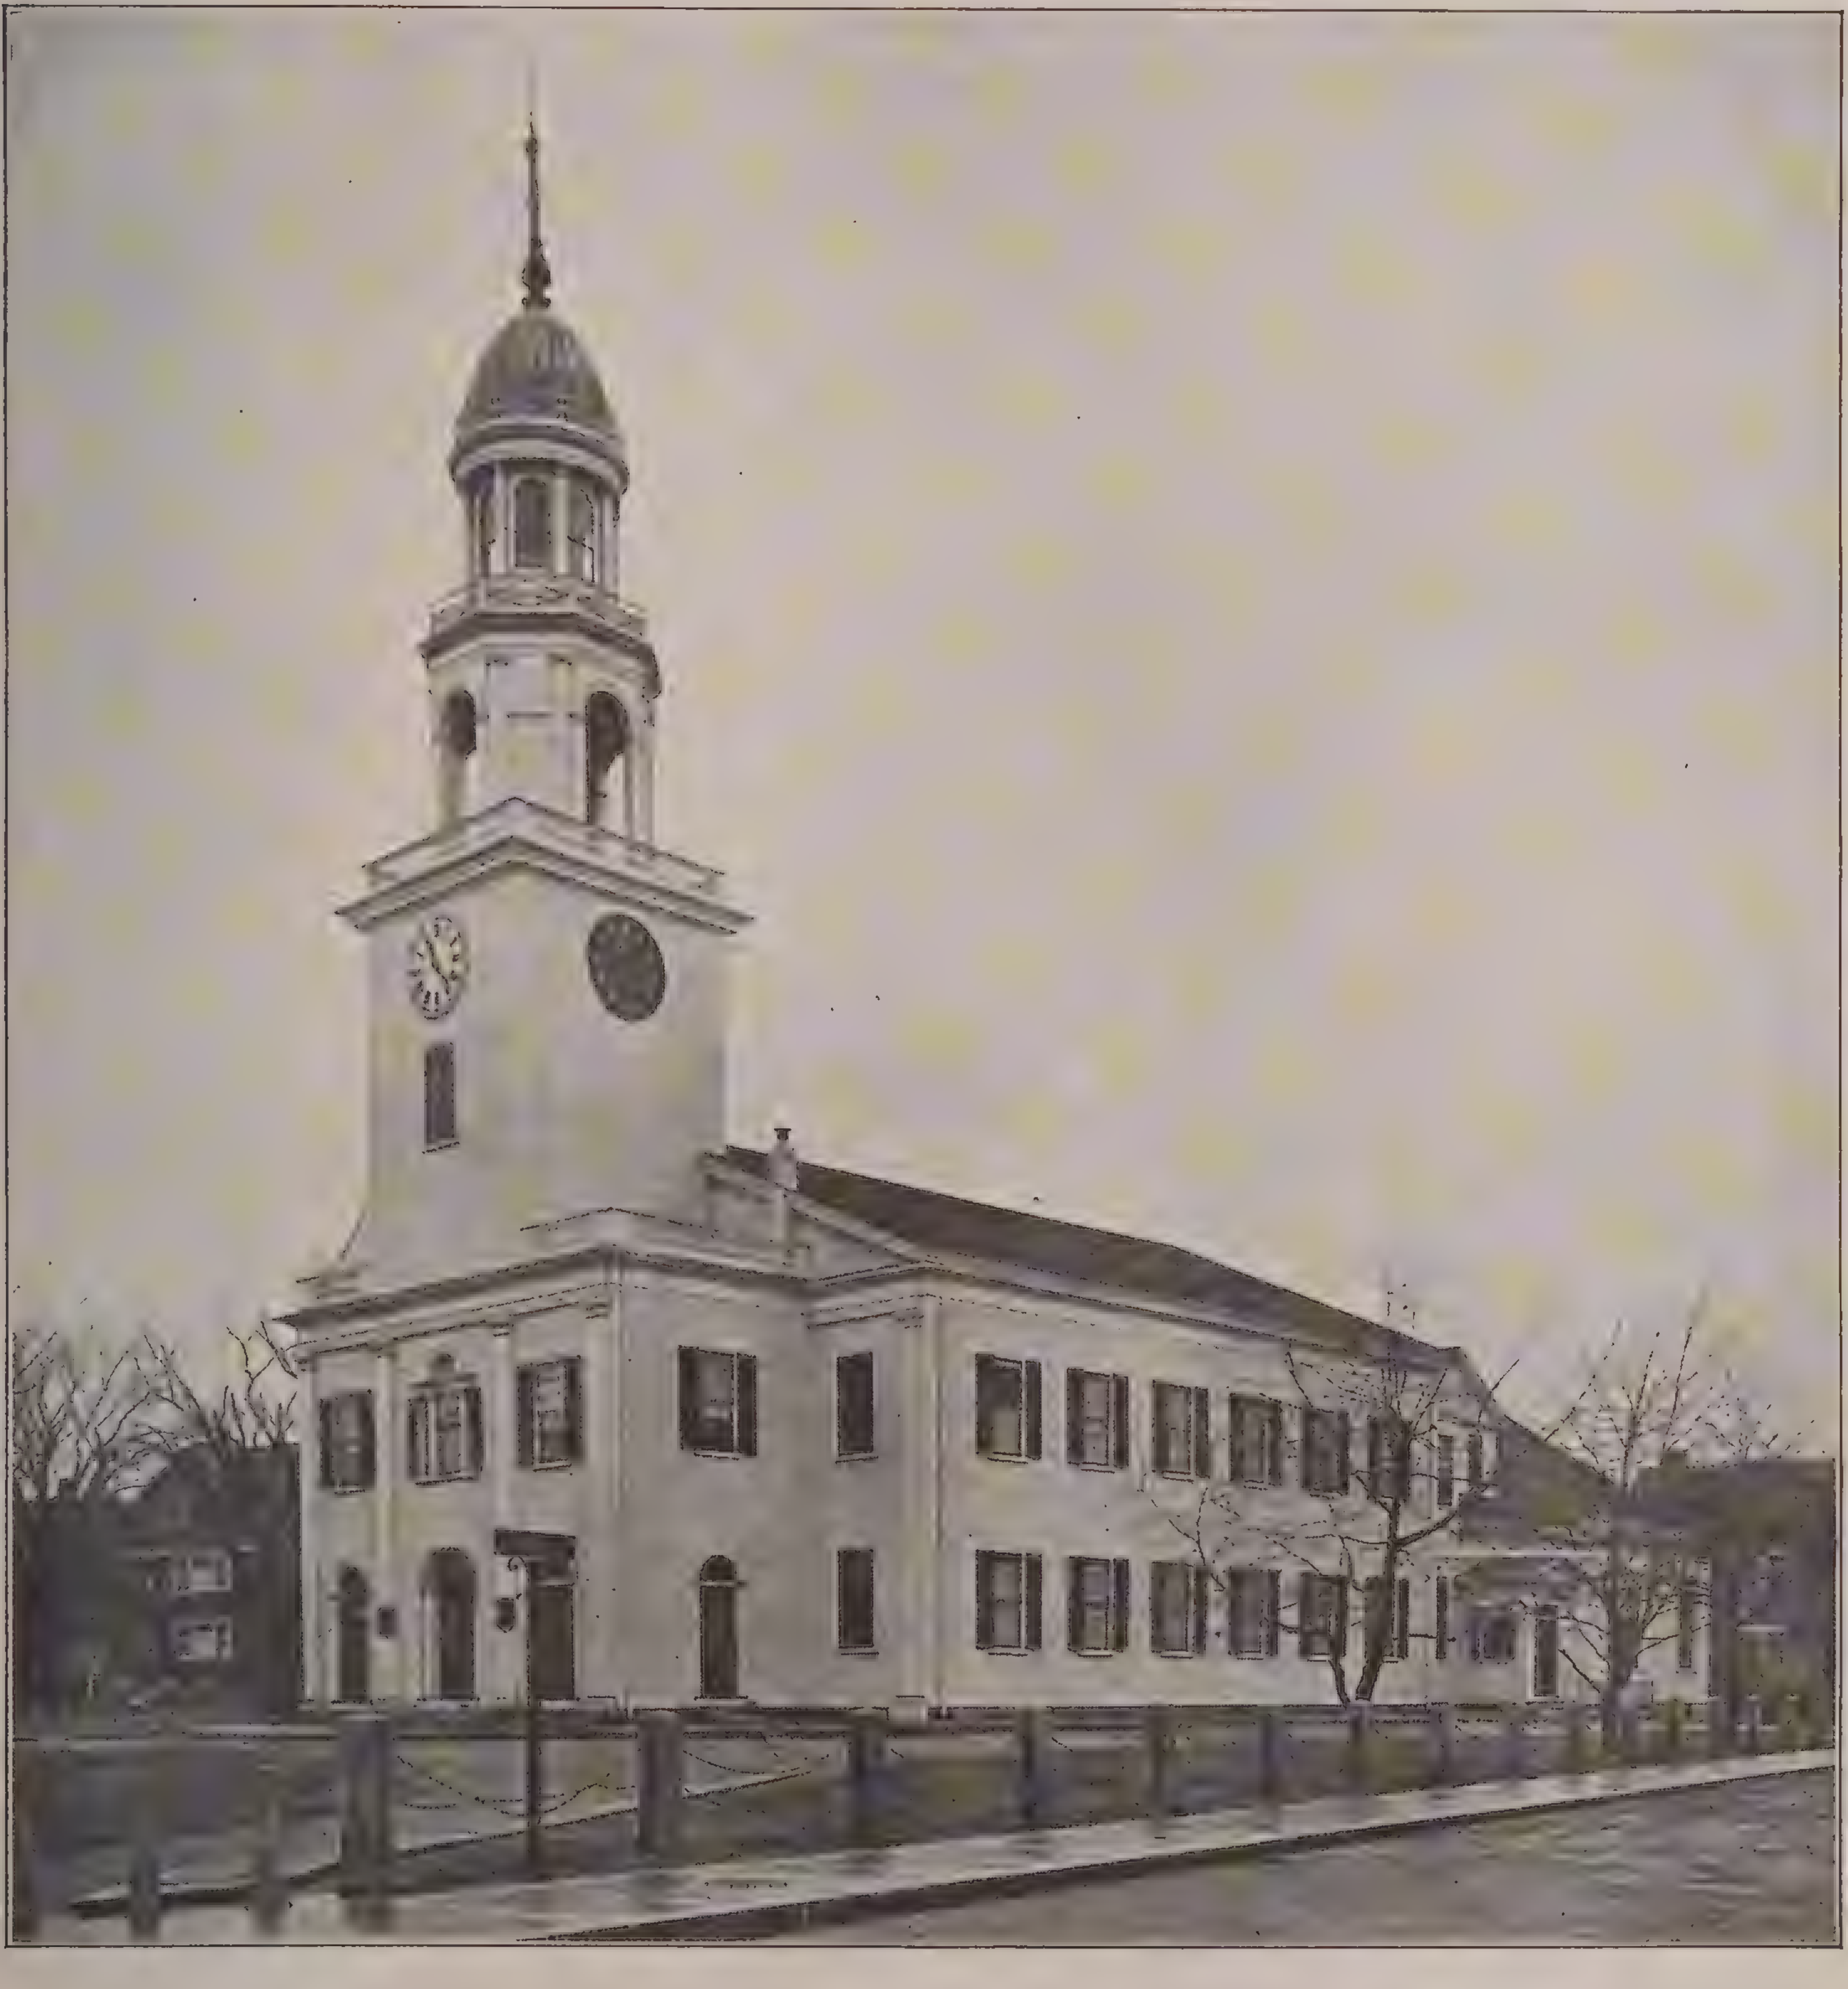
THE PILGRIM PRESS

19 W. JACKSON STREET
CHICAGO

The Congregationalist and Advance

Vol. CV. No. 45

November 4, 1920



SECOND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, DORCHESTER, MASS.

In Our Series of Notable Church Edifices

Second Church, Dorchester

The Second Church in Dorchester District, Boston, Mass., shown upon our outside cover, is one of the historic churches of our country. It was dedicated in 1806; 114 years ago, and was built by a company of private individuals at a cost of $15,000. The pews were sold at auction for more than $25,000, and the surplus was divided among the men who built it. Thus in that far-off time we see that the descendants of the Pilgrims were thrifty.

A great deal of faith was shown by the builders, for the town of Dorchester at that time had only 3,000 inhabitants, and the seating capacity of the church is now 1,000, and no change has been made within the four walls of the church except to add two rows of pews to the balcony.

The steeple of the church was a copy of one built in London, designed by Sir Christopher Wren, the architect of St. Paul's. It has been for more than a century visible from the surrounding country. The bell in the tower was cast by Paul Revere and his name is upon it.

Within the church is the Townsend Memorial Organ of comparatively recent date. The building, which is in the center of a lot of land of more than 40,000 square feet, where four streets converge, is valued with the land at about $200,000. The building like its faith stands foursquare to the world. There was not any cellar when the church was originally built but it was heated by stoves. A cellar was later excavated and furnaces added and electricity installed.

The church has two ancient communion cups, the gift of the First Church in Dorchester, which have been in continuous use, one since 1636 and the other 1678. The latter was the gift of Margaret Thatcher, who was the wife of the first pastor of the Old South Church in Boston.

The church is remarkable in only having four ministers for the first 100 years of its history: Dr. John Codman, who served forty years, Dr. James H. Means, thirty years, Dr. Edward N. Packard, eight years, and Dr. Arthur Little, twenty-five years. Dr. Little was succeeded by Rev. Jason Noble Pierce who resigned a few months ago to become pastor of the First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C. In a metropolitan church at the capital of the nation, he will have larger scope for his talents and ability, and be able to wield a wide influence for the truth. Mr. Pierce had served the church here six years, during one of which he was Senior Chaplain of the Second Division.

The church has a present membership of over 1,500, and a Sunday school of over 1,400.

During the earliest years of Dr. Codman's ministry, serious differences arose between him and his parishioners over the attitude which he should take toward Unitarianism. The parish and a part of the membership of the church insisted on his exchanging with Unitarian ministers. One Sunday morning four stalwart officers were at the foot of the pulpit stairs and forbade his entrance. He preached his discourse from the platform in front of the pulpit, and at noon another minister who had been engaged, preached from the regular pulpit. This brought matters to a crisis and Dr. Codman and his friends purchased the next week a controlling interest in the pews and there was no further trouble. It is impossible at this distance from these events to imagine the bitterness and hostility which these questions engendered, but Dr. Codman's stalwart holding of his position was of great service later to those who held conservative views. This historic pulpit is still preserved, although not used.

From the date of Dr. Codman's ordination which was in 1808, up to the present time, this church has held to the fundamental and cardinal truths of Christianity: a belief in the Triune God, the Deity of Christ, his supernatural birth, his miracles, salvation through his atoning blood shed on the cross of calvary, his resurrection into the glory from which he came, the inspiration of the Bible and the reality of heaven and hell.

Favors the League

Dear Mr. Editor:

I have been a constant reader of your paper for the past thirty-eight years, and was never more pleased with it than today. Especially do I like the stand you have taken on the League of Nations; you could take no other stand and be in line with the spirit of our denomination, and the larger part of the Christian people of the nation.

I do not care to keep company with that class of politicians who represent us in our national Congress, who say, as some of them have, that they would not believe the League of Nations to be right if Jesus Christ said it was, and that old Isaiah was wrong when he declared the time was coming "when nations should learn war no more." How one who accepts the spirit of the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount, can refuse to sanction the League of Nations, properly guarded, I cannot understand.

R. C. DRISKO.

Pomona, Fla.

The Seventy-fourth Annual Meeting of

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

WILL BE HELD AT THE

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

REV. NEIL McPHERSON, D. D., Pastor

and the MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM of SPRINGFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS, Nov. 17-18

Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, D. D., President

PROGRAM

Wednesday, November 17th, 2.30 P. M., at First Congregational Church

1. ORGANIZATION
2. ADDRESSES OF WELCOME:
   For the City and State,
   For the Churches, Rev. Neil McPherson, D. D.
3. RESPONSE: Rev. Oscar E. Maurer, Member of Ex. Com.
4. REPORT OF TREASURER, Irving C. Gaylord, Esq.
5. ANNUAL SURVEY OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, John R. Rogers, Esq., Chairman
6. THE OUTLOOK OF A. M. A. CHURCH WORK AMONG NEGROES, Rev. Alfred Lawless, Jr.
7. CONCERT OF PRAYER, led by Rev. A. F. Beard

8.15 P. M., at Municipal Auditorium

"THE COURT OF BROTHERHOOD"—A pageant presenting the work of the Association among the belated races of the United States, in Five Episodes. A cast of 160 people from the Springfield churches. A selected chorus, assisted by the Jubilee Singers.

Thursday, November 18th, 9.30 A. M., at First Congregational Church

Devotional Service:

1. REHABILITATION OF A. M. A. SCHOOLS, Mr. Arthur B. Holmes, Supervising Architect
2. AFTER-WAR RACE RELATIONS IN THE SOUTH, Dr. Lewis B. Moore
3. RACE VALUES AND RACE DESTINIES, Sec. George L. Cady

BUSINESS SESSION, 11.30 o'clock

Woman's Hour, 2.30 to 4.00 P. M.

Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Sec., presiding

1. THE STORY OF A QUARTER CENTURY, Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury, Field Sec.
2. DR. MARY C. WHARTON, "The Doctor Woman"

Voices from the Field, 4.00 to 5.30

1. THE GLORY OF THE MOUNTAINS, Rev. E. R. Wharton
2. THE FUTURE OF OUR INDIAN MISSIONS, Rev. Rudolf Hertz
3. THE MEXICAN CHILDREN OF MT. TAYLOR, Rev. Otto J. Scheibe

SOCIAL HOUR, 5.30

8 P. M., at First Congregational Church

Devotional Service:

1. THE PILGRIM HERITAGE FOR ALL AMERICANS, Rev. Arthur H. Bradford, D. D.
2. NEW DEMANDS IN NEGRO EDUCATION, Major Robert R. Moton

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Membership: The members of The American Missionary Association consist of delegates elected to the National Council of Congregational Churches, Sixty Corporate Members at Large, delegates elected by evangelical churches not affiliated with the Council and Life Members of this Association. Besides these, pastors and representatives of all contributing churches are cordially invited to be present.

Entertainment: The people of Springfield are making hospitable arrangements for guests and delegates. Comfortable quarters at reasonable rates will be provided for all. Apply promptly to Rev. R. J. Goddard, Faith Congregational Church, Springfield, Mass., Chairman of Entertainment Committee. Upon arrival apply at Information and Entertainment Bureau, in Chapel of First Church, where cards of introduction will be given and Boy Scouts appointed to pilot you to place of entertainment.

JUBILEE SINGERS FROM FISK UNIVERSITY at all sessions

The Congregationalist and Advance

November 4, 1920

Volume CV. Copyright, 1920 All rights reserved Number 45

By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

CONTENTS

PILGRIM VIRTUES IN THE MODERN WORLD—AN EDITORIAL MESSAGE 557
EDITORIAL—A RELIEF 558
  THE CHRISTIAN ATTITUDE ON THE CALIFORNIA JAPANESE QUESTION
  IS PREACHING FUTILE?
  OUR MISSIONARY PROGRAM
  SETTING THE PILGRIMS FORTH
  SIGNS OF HOPE IN EASTERN EUROPE
  THE PARABLE OF THE GOLDEN HAIR
THE EUROPEAN SITUATION AS DR. MOTT SEES IT, by Howard B. Grose 561
THE PILGRIM WAY TO FREEDOM, by Frank R. Shipman 562
OUR PILGRIM PULPIT—OSTRICH PARENTHOOD, by Herbert Atchinson Jump 563
SWINGING AROUND THE CIRCLE, by George Perry Morris 564
THE AMERICAN BOARD IN MARIETTA, by William F. English, Jr. 565
LEAGUE OF THE NEW DAY 565
THE HOUR OF PRAYER—COMMENT ON MIDWEEK AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR PRAYER MEETING TOPICS—CLOSET AND ALTAR 566
AMONG THE NEW BOOKS 567
IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL—DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS. THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE—V. FACING FACTS ABOUT OUR BIBLE 570
WITH THE CHILDREN—TALES OF THE MAYFLOWER CHILDREN. I. LOST IN THE WOODS, by Pauline Carrington Bouvé. THE COMRADES' CORNER 572
IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE—CHURCH NEWS 574

Editor-in-Chief, REV. HOWARD A. BRIDGMAN, D. D.
Managing Editor, ROLFE COBLEIGH
Associate Editor, REV. ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN
Western Editor, REV. R. W. GAMMON, D. D. (Chicago)
Literary Editor, REV. PARRIS T. FARWELL
News Editor, MISS ELIZABETH G. WHITE
Editorial Assistants { MISS FLORENCE A. MOORE
MISS JANET L. SAVAGE
MISS SALLIE A. MCDERMOTT (Chicago)
Contributing Editor, REV. WILLIAM E. BARTON, D. D.
Business Manager, ALBERT W. FELL
Advertising Manager, KENNETH S. BALLOU
Circulation Manager, MISS ETHEL M. WENTWORTH

The Congregationalist and Advance succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Congregationalist, 1849; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday, by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions are discontinued on date of expiration, appearing on the address label of the paper. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to The Congregationalist and Advance, and will be acknowledged by a change of date on the label. Receipt will be sent if two-cent stamp is enclosed with remittance. In renewing do not fail to send exact address as on label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses must be sent in and be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies may be obtained at the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Subscription correspondence may be directed to The Congregationalist and Advance, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Talk of the Sanctum

Pilgrim Virtues in the Modern World

Under this title Dr. Bridgman begins this week a little series of first page messages which seek to relate the virtues for which the Pilgrims are eminent, to the tasks of today. Deservedly the historical element in all that is being said and written concerning the Pilgrims during these commemorative months should have first place, but along with that recognition of what the Pilgrims were and did should go the desire to bring into the life of today those graces and virtues displayed by them that have perennial worth and which were never more needed than in the world of today. Future messages in this brief series will consider THE CONSECRATION OF YOUTH, THE SPIRIT OF ADVENTURE, THE CONQUEST OF HARDSHIP, DEPENDENCE UPON GOD, THE TRANSIENTNESS OF THE EARTHLY LIFE.

The Children and the Tercentenary

Anything that interests the younger generation in the Pilgrims and the things they represented is particularly timely and useful just now. That is why we are glad to begin in this week's issue a series of Mayflower Stories which will depict in bold and attractive lines John Billington, Wrestling Brewster, Humility Cooper, and other of the boys and girls who came over on the Mayflower and shared with the older people the hardships and vicissitudes of those first years in Plymouth. They were real humans—these youngsters who lived three hundred years ago, and Mrs. Pauline C. Bouvé in these sketches has brought out the characteristics that link them with boys and girls of today. She is a popular writer for children. Her "Lamplight Tales," which appeared in the Boston Transcript daily for a number of months, were widely appreciated. The next two stories in the series will be "Keen Eye is Faithful" and "Humility's Pride."

In the Circulation Department—

These are busy encouraging days. We have been sending out our autumn literature to pastors and church agents, and we have been receiving a flood of replies relating to a Congregationalist and Advance Sunday in every church. As we expected, the first Sunday in November was made the Sunday for special presentation of the paper to many congregations, and in many other churches the pastors preferred different Sundays soon. We do not care which Sunday is chosen, desiring only that all our pastors at such times and in such ways as may be most convenient and likely to be most effective present "our own" church and family paper and help to extend its circulation.

Evidence multiplies to prove the increasing appreciation of The Congregationalist and Advance by our readers, and more and more ministers are testifying to its value as a "pastor's assistant." More and more our readers are telling us how much good it does in the home circle and it helps to deepen their spiritual life, broaden their vision and clear their understanding on the great problems of the day.

We are all working for the same great causes. Let us work together and for each other.

From Our Mail Bag

"You are doing a great work. Your paper is right up to the minute. Best today it ever has been." P.
Mass.

PIEDMONT'S GREAT CAMPAIGN

It Has Begun; It Is Going On; It Must Succeed.

A Statement of Important Facts

WHY PIEDMONT'S APPEAL IS NATIONAL

Two maps published by the United States Census make it plain why Piedmont's appeal is national. One illustrates the proportion of the American-born to the foreign-born by heavy lines representing the foreign-born. The South is the only light portion of this map. 974 out of every 1,000 in the South are American-born. The Second illustrates the proportion of illiteracy by heavy lines. The entire South is very dark, some portions almost black. The American-born portion of our nation is the most illiterate portion.

The whole nation is responsible for this condition, and should have a part in changing it. The South will be asked to do its part, and a large part too, in this campaign. Every State of every section is directly interested in promoting general education everywhere in the Nation.

New England passed its educational spirit on through the various developing regions of the West, and backed it up with its money until it reached the Pacific Ocean. Every reason that urged it Westward now urges it Southward. All the other States, who have received, are by that very fact called upon to give. The Western need has vanished in the presence of established institutions with the ideals of the Pilgrims. The Pacific Coast has no farther West. The one great national educational work is in the sparsely settled South with its wonderful resources, whose development has scarcely begun. These two maps are strong arguments for Piedmont College.

WHEREIN PIEDMONT COLLEGE IS DISTINCTIVE

Its location, as indicated by the Census, is the most healthful in America. It is in the heart of the great Piedmont section, close by the Blue Ridge Mountain Range; 1,500 feet above the sea, and surrounded by the lavishing beauty which nature has bestowed upon this region. It is in the geographical center of the South East, on a branch of the greatest railroad system of the South, four miles from its main line.

While it is in no sense a class college, since its student body is made up from the families of the city as well as of the country, it is especially adapting itself to the rural regions of the South, in which four-fifths of its people reside. This strong Anglo-Saxon stock, in both the mountains and lowlands, is a veritable mine of undeveloped possibilities. From these homes should come, and will come, if opportunities are made available, the strongest and most efficient workers in this reconstructed Nation. Ministers, missionaries, and leaders in every legitimate walk in life are here for the training.

The field of Piedmont College is not a local one. Already the College is reaching all the Southern States, and some of the Northern. Spanish-America has been considerably represented in its student body; and would be largely so, if the College felt itself equipped to do the kind of work needed to send these young men back to places of leadership in their own country. Seventeen States and Spain were represented last year.

If these, and related facts, can once be lodged in the Christian consciousness of the Nation, the objectives of this campaign will seem all too small. We ask the Christian part of this Nation to study the facts and to make this College, the manifest child of Providence, their agency for this work of so great importance to the Nation and to the Kingdom of God.

THE FIRST OBJECTIVE

The first thing to be done in Piedmont's campaign for adequate buildings, equipment and endowment is to raise $100,000 to cover this year's budget and necessary incidentals. In the budget, voted by the trustees, the donations were put at $80,000. These were to cover the expenses of the current year and to dispose of the deficit.

The first wing of the dormitory to take the place of Mary J. Green Hall, burned last January, has been built; and the other wing, to accommodate forty more girls, is awaiting the funds with which to build it. Not until this is built will our accommodations equal those we had before the fire. It will take about $15,000 to complete this building. Our sawmill, planing mill, and other wood working machinery are waiting to deliver the lumber. Our efficient builder and his well-trained and tried force of carpenters are ready to begin. All we lack is the funds.

The other $5,000 is needed to do many things about the buildings and grounds incidental to their most successful use.

We hope the friends of Piedmont will join with us most heartily in this effort; that they will send us checks and pledges before January 1st, if possible, to cover this entire amount. The pledges may be paid at any time before the close of our fiscal year, June 30th. We hope, however, they will come in as early as possible, that we may pay our teachers promptly and meet our other bills without impairing our credit.

FOR PIEDMONT'S FIRST OBJECTIVE:

Pres. Frank E. Jenkins, Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga.

To help meet Piedmont's Budget for this fiscal year and for the immediate necessities of the College Plant, I enclose a check (or Money Order) for $............

Name ....

Address ....

Date ....192....

....

Pres. Frank E. Jenkins, Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga.

To help meet Piedmont's Budget for this fiscal year and for the immediate necessities of the College Plant, I will give on or before June 30, 1921, the sum checked below, payable probably about ....192..... If unexpected circumstances should make the payment of this inconvenient, I will try to give notice thirty days before the above date.

( ) $5,000; ( ) $2,000; ( ) $1,000; ( ) $500; ( ) $300; ( ) $250; ( ) $200; ( ) $150;
( ) $100; ( ) $75; ( ) $50; ( ) $25; ( ) $10; ( ) $5; ( ) $..........

Name ....

Address ....

Date ....192....

....

$15,000 Needed Immediately For Teachers' Salaries Now Due And Pressing Bills

The Congregationalist
and Advance

Pilgrim Virtues in the Modern World

I. The Layman's Witness

WHAT we want to obtain first of all from the current celebrations of the Pilgrim Tercentenary is a rebirth of enthusiasm for the solid and enduring virtues which, in the retrospect of 300 years, shed luster on the great adventure of the Pilgrim fathers. Then we want modern Christians by the thousands to dedicate themselves anew to the pursuit and exemplification of these virtues.

It is futile to try to recover and perpetuate in the world today the full Pilgrim and Puritan attitude toward the theater, the dance, the drama, card-playing and Sunday observance. In order through dramatic representations to make more real the outward life of the Pilgrims good people all over the country are utilizing today the very thing which the Pilgrims shunned and hated.

But the main use of these stage delineations and the studied effort of every writer, preacher and orator on Pilgrim themes should be to portray in bold and challenging lines the fundamental and imitable virtues of the men and women of Plymouth. The wonder is that despite their limitations in numbers, financial resources and intellectual outlook, what they did and what their children and children's children did made New England a bulwark of freedom, a nursery of learning, a fountain of moral and spiritual power.

We note first as we study the Mayflower group THE LAYMAN'S RESPONSIBLE PART in the direction of common affairs.

They greatly err who think the Plymouth colony was made up chiefly or largely of ministers, missionaries and ecclesiastics. There was not a minister in the group, according to the canons of their times. They were carpenters, goldsmiths, dyers, printers, coopers, farmers. As manual workers they undertook to supply the primary needs of the colony through what their hands raised and made. They believed that while a man was raising grain or splitting wood or erecting a barn or hunting for venison, he could be honoring God, and by the thorough way in which he goes about his task and by his fidelity to the common welfare be building God's kingdom on the earth.

Unordained men though the Pilgrims were, they felt keenly the obligation of sustaining through those first terrible winters the church which they brought with them; of carrying out the social compact entered into in the cabin of the Mayflower, and of furthering in every way possible the interests of the infant community.

The history of New England Congregationalism is largely the history of great laymen. The Old South, Boston, for example, has been favored with a notable succession of learned and devout ministers, but as Dr. Gordon points out in the volume recently published commemorating the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the church, the Old South from the days of Judge Samuel Sewall down to the late Samuel Johnson—to speak now only of the dead—has been molded and to a great extent directed by the men in the pews. This is equally true with regard to other strong churches.

But times have changed. The layman's witness is not as constant or as forceful as it used to be. Perhaps he is not given a fair chance. Protestantism, yielding to the inevitable tendency toward closer organization, tends toward the placing of ministers in places of influence and power. Most of our secretaries and executive officers are ordained men.

In the sphere of the local church, the witness and the work of the layman is equally needed. Now that prayer meetings have declined, we do not hear as often as formerly the voice of the layman in public attestation of his faith. How singular it is that the Congregational churches, one of whose cardinal beliefs is the priesthood of believers, should, in the course of three hundred years since they went out from Anglicanism on that issue, have ceased largely to utilize laymen in conducting public worship and in preaching the gospel.

The Methodists have far surpassed us in this respect. The Episcopalians and the Christian Scientists also put greater reliance upon and make larger use of unordained men in conducting the worship of the sanctuary. Many an outpost in these bodies is manned solely from Sunday to Sunday by laymen. But how seldom does a Congregational minister invite a layman to stand by his side in the pulpit! How seldom do you see a Congregational deacon or trustee out in the public square telling the crowd what Jesus Christ and his gospel mean to him.

We specify lay preaching not because we think it the main element in the layman's witnessing to the world, but because that side of his service has been understressed of late. It is comparatively easy to get a fair proportion of our laymen to give generously, but it is harder to induce them to open their mouths in public confession of Christ, to give their time and thought to the instruction of a Sunday school class, to handle vigorously and wisely the financial affairs, to go from house to house supplying the needs of individual homes.

We are not forgetful of splendid laymen here and there and of their invaluable contributions to the common cause. We are speaking rather of tendencies.

This Tercentenary must not pass without the fresh dedication of multitudes of laymen to the work of their local churches. None need wait for a nation-wide campaign to enlist them. Something more deep-going is needed than any mechanical device, any temporary spurt fed by campaigns, conventions and banquets. If any layman who reads these lines thinks that his church wants him chiefly for his money, let him understand that money is the last thing the church wants from him. It wants the man himself, a generous share of his interest and energy, his physical presence in the sanctuary, his prayers at the family altar and in the closet, the personal consecration and reconsecration of himself to Jesus Christ.

The church of the Pilgrims, founded, nourished and extended by laymen, calls them in this year when organized Christianity is facing the most solemn and at the same time the most magnificent opportunity in its history, to take up and wear bravely and gladly the mantle of Carver and Bradford, of Winslow and Myles Standish, to the end that this fundamental virtue, this witness-bearing on the part of unordained men who are busy day by day in the markets and on the farms of the nation may in the next few years be so general, fearless and effective that they in their turn shall become the salt, the leaven and the light of the world.

H. A. B.

EDITORIAL

A Relief

It will be a relief to be done with the hot recriminations and mud-slinging that have marked the later weeks of the campaign. Whether the vitriolic element has been greater than in previous campaigns is not to the point just now. There has certainly been enough of it since mid-summer. On the one hand Republicans like George Harvey and William Roscoe Thayer, and on the other hand members of the Cabinet and even the Democratic presidential candidate himself have gone too far in their wholesale and vehement denunciations. In contrast with them Mr. Harding has shown commendable self-restraint. The public is wearied, too, with the exchange of hot telegrams, with quibblings about statements at earlier times and with the constant effort to put the other fellow on the defensive or in the hole. The campaign of 1920 as a whole has not been calculated to elevate the morals of the people, refine the tastes of the rising generation, or to inspire the rank and file on either side with exuberant and unqualified enthusiasm either for the candidates or for the issues and causes represented by them.

But a truce in these fierce political strivings is at hand. May it prove a peace sufficiently enduring to bring about through cooperative efforts of good men and good leaders in both parties such legislation and such administration of public affairs as will conduce to the prosperity of this country and the welfare of the whole world.

The Christian Attitude on the California Japanese Question

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has published a Statement by its Commission on Relations with the Orient bearing directly on the present agitation on the Pacific Coast against the increase of Japanese population and farm ownership. It appeals to men of good will both in Japan and America to refuse to be stampeded into precipitate action by self-seeking political agitators, to make a careful study of all the facts and to await the action of the Conference of the two governments. The apparently well-authenticated reports that this diplomatic conference is already in progress with a view to the formulation of a treaty gives force to this appeal.

To Americans in particular the Statement appeals for remembrance of the international aspects of the question of grave import and affecting not merely the Pacific Coast but also all America. "California's legitimate ends can best be secured through Washington." The statement, while conceding the stress of the present situation, insists that "Only the patient exercise of the principles of honor, justice and fair play between nations and races can afford any real or permanent solution to a confessedly difficult problem. We wish to urge every effort to avoid humiliating, race-discriminatory laws which will only aggravate the situation."

The present proportion of Japanese to the whole population of California, the Statement points out, is that of a very small percentage, which does "not warrant the assertions of agitators." On the other side, the Japanese are reminded that the question is "by no means so simple or easy of solution as the extremists of either side usually represent," and that the misunderstandings, misrepresentations and wrong-doings are not all on one side. The difficulties from the American point of view lie largely in the isolation of Japanese farm-colonies, which tend to remain integrally Japanese, and the double allegiance of Japanese-born children. Legislation is necessary on both sides of the Pacific, but back of legislation must be the patient study and search for a satisfactory solution of a sincere good will.

The whole report is well worth study. It implies, what we ourselves believe, that there should be no exceptional legislation as regards Japanese but that we need a well-considered policy of permitted, but carefully regulated, immigration which will prevent the incoming of larger groups of any nationality than can be easily assimilated, that only those should be admitted who are willing to renounce their former citizenship in favor of allegiance to the United States after a reasonable time for experience and settlement; and that all children born in America should by that fact be held to be Americans and trained in the use of English and principles of American liberty and responsibility. Neither Japan nor any other nation should complain if we object to the establishment of outposts of alien civilizations or of permanently alien social groups on our territory. We have a welcome and a place for prospective American citizens; but not for divided and of necessity divisive groups from any part of the world. And the rule should apply to incomers from all nations alike.

A further document of importance on this subject is an address by Mr. Frank A. Vanderlip before the members of the San Francisco Commercial Club and the Chamber of Commerce, in which he recounted experiences as an invited guest to confer informally with the leaders of Japan in their own country. Mr. Vanderlip reports that these leaders in many departments of Japanese life fully admit that Japanese emigration and settlement in California are not desirable. But he reminds us also that the questions of emigration and of a new home for the overflow of the Japanese population are vital questions for the future of the Japanese people. The address is well worth reading and will do much to strengthen the appeal for a dispassionate and Christian settlement of the questions at issue between the two ocean-separated and ocean-united peoples.

Is Preaching Futile?

An important symposium has recently been published in The Christian Century (Sept. 30) dealing with matters which vitally concern all who are interested in the welfare of the Church. It centers around an article printed several weeks before by the well-known Socialist, John Spargo, in which he raises the question of the value of preaching as now conducted. Mr. Spargo does not attack the Church or religion; far from it. He says of the Church: "It is as enduring as the life of humanity and so long as there is a future for men there will be a future for organized religion and for the Church. . . . Nothing else can take the place of religion in the hearts of millions of men. No social arrangements, however ideally perfect, no ethical system, however exalted, will satisfy as substitutes for religion. These things are temporal: they do not deal with the unseen spiritual things which are so vital to a large part of mankind." But, he believes that the primary function of the Church is the promotion of worship, the training of the spiritual life. He says,"In my humble judgment the Church of the future will exist almost wholly for worship and devotion." Wherein he utters a warning, or a word of guidance, which it behooves the Churches to consider.

But preaching, he declares, is an "anachronism," not "a man-sized job." He seems to judge it largely from the statement of themes as presented in the newspapers! A method of judgment, especially when city papers are examined, which might lead many a man to despair. He also concludes that it is impossible for any man to speak twice a week, on a vast variety of topics, without being superficial. This, briefly is Mr. Spargo's argument.

The paper attracted so much attention that replies were requested. Over sixty manuscripts were submitted. From these six were chosen, and, by referendum, the three best were selected and published in this symposium together with a reprint of Mr. Spargo's article. They were written by Rev. Ernest Bourner Allen, Rev. Lloyd C. Douglas, and Rev. Ellis B. Barnes. To these were added Mr. Spargo's Reply to his Critics and an article from The Outlook by Lyman Abbott on "The Utility of Preaching." The preachers, of course make a strong argument for the value of preaching and the names of great preachers are easily pointed out. But probably Dr. Abbott meets the situation best when he says, "If Mr. Spargo had entitled his article "The Futility of Some Preaching," I should have heartily agreed with him."

The discussion may do much good if it will lead ministers to cling more closely to their specialty, the mediating of the mind of God, through Jesus Christ, to the minds of men, and if it will help the Churches to be more true to their function, the promotion of worship and the culture of the spiritual life. Not that it is not to deal with social themes. It has done so effectively and must continue so to do. What Washington Gladden and Professor Rauschenbusch and F. G. Peabody have undertaken as leaders, thousands of ministers whose names are unknown have undertaken in the humbler places. And as Dr. Allen points out, the churches in recent years have proven themselves a mighty force for righteousness throughout the land.

It is the function of the preachers, under Jesus Christ, not to be the makers of programs for social reform but to be the inspirers of men and women to go forth to their places of work and influence and put into practice the principles of the coming Kingdom of God, love and justice and good will toward men. To quote Dr. Abbott again: "So to interpret an ever present God as to inspire the spirit of obedience to divine law in lawless souls, and give peace to restless souls, hope to cynical souls, and love to selfish souls is to preach, and such preaching is never futile."

Our Missionary Program

On other pages will be found some interesting information about the Congregational World Movement. A news article tells what encouraging progress is being made in launching the campaign throughout the country. On another page is a letter by Dr. Stocking of Upper Montclair telling how nicely the Missionary Education program of the C. W. M. fits into the program of his church. You will want to do likewise when you read what Dr. Stocking's church has done. And in order to do it you will want the literature that is described on the page opposite Dr. Stocking's letter.

Immediate, thorough, enthusiastic study of missionary education will work wonders in any church, not only in support of our missionary causes but to give vision and spiritual dynamic for Christian living and for every department of church work. Missionary intelligence and the missionary spirit are essential to vital Christianity.

Setting the Pilgrims Forth

Not least interesting in the recent developments of the Tercentenary celebrations has been the multitude of dramatic renderings —plays or pageants—of and from the Pilgrim Story. We are printing an admirable one this week, written by President Shipman of Atlanta Theological Seminary, which he calls "The Pilgrim Way to Freedom." And there are many others who have ventured in this field, so that the range of choice of churches, schools and other organizations who may wish to find something along this line is unusually wide.

Into this field the American Bible Society has ventured, first with a "dramatic service"—a pageant in reality—by the practiced hand of the poet Percy MacKaye, in which the advance from darkness to light and freedom is given in a simple sequence of "Actions," each of which advances the thought by picture and recitation or singing, all well within the range of the unpracticed powers of the churches. The Society has sent out also a beautifully illustrated, large-page publication for the proposed Mayflower Universal Bible celebrations which are due on Sunday, Nov. 28. It contains much matter of history and description which will be of use and interest to pastors and people.

While we are on this subject we should like to say a word of farewell and "come again" to the British delegation which has been visiting America in connection with the Tercentenary Celebrations. We hope they enjoyed their wide acquaintance with American people and places and did not feel that the breaking up of their meeting of welcome in New York had any but the militant pro-Irish sentiment behind it. We can assure them that Americans generally are not the enemies but the friends of Great Britain. We could have wished that there had been among them at least one representative of the British Congregational Churches to bring them into close relation to the heirs of the Pilgrim faith and polity. The neglect to appoint such a representative, we fear, is a symptom of what almost seems to be a concerted effort in many quarters to minimize the religious side of the Pilgrim migration and ignore the fact that it was a church which came, and that for the members of that church the transplantation of its life and faith and special witness was the ruling motive.

Signs of Hope in Eastern Europe

There are signs of hope in the religious life of those countries of Central Europe where Mr. John R. Mott finds evidences of social and economic recovery, as indicated by the article which we print this week. Even in Germany there is at least the great deliverance of a complete overthrow of governmental control over church activities and life. The churches are no more to be departments of the state. In the words of Professor Albert Deissmann of Berlin, who has written a survey of the German religious situation transmitted by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, "The revolution has abolished the 'summepiscopate' (the authoritative oversight) of the reigning princes and the German Constitution of 1919 has decreed the separation of Church and State. Professor Deissmann says that, while he notes many signs of convalescence after the collapse of defeat, in general a dark view must be taken. "German Protestantism has surely never seen itself environed by so many difficult tasks as in the present moment."

The active interest in the church and its changes found in Czecho-Slovakia is in marked contrast with this German hesitation or decadence. Our own missions in Bohemia and Moravia are steadily building up a group of free churches. But the people on a wide scale are turning away from the Roman authority, which has denied their desire for a married priesthood, service in the spoken tongue of the people and other reforms, and has put its curse upon those who persisted in going back to the famous days of Huss and the reforming spirit which has kept itself alive in the thoughts and hopes of the people for four centuries of oppresssion. They are passing over to the revived Bohemian Church almost by whole congregations in many places. The movement is popular and spiritual rather than political. It is a remaking from within and not a propaganda from without and bids fair to carry with it a large proportion of the Bohemian people.

Even in Russia there are signs of a stirring of spiritual life. The overthow of the ruling church authorities and the many persecutions and massacres did not kill Christian faith. They have proved a call instead to the essentially religious spirit of the Russian people and in many places spontaneous revivals of religious interest and purpose are reported. When the Russian reorganization comes it will find the church as much in need of rebuilding as the state. And there will be a new spirit of personal thought and responsibility which must find expression.

We have a part to play in the religious reawakening of the war-stricken lands. We are showing Christianity in action in the relief works of the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and other healing and helpful organizations at work in Central and Eastern Europe. We must support them whole-heartedly, with generous gifts and prayers and with them all the other agencies at work. It is going to be a hard, even a terrible winter, through which our efforts must not fail in works of relief and brotherhood.

The Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Golden Hair

The daughter of the daughter of Keturah put her left arm around my neck, and drew my face close down beside hers, and held me where we could look both of us at ourselves in a large Mirror. And I saw therein the face of a dear little girl and the face of a Grandfather who loveth her.

And the little maiden appeared to see something and to miss something in what the Mirror disclosed. For she caught up her Golden Hair with her right hand, and cast it over my head.

And she cried out in great glee, and she said,

See, Grandpa, see. Your hair is Orange-Colored.

And I gave her a good, tight hug and a kiss.

And I took her hand, and we came unto Keturah. And I said unto her, Who saith that Safed is Aged, and where is the man who doth affirm that his hair is Grey? Behold, mine hair is Red-Golden.

And I and the daughter of the daughter of Keturah showed unto her our Stunt. But we did not quite fool Keturah. For she knew what color was mine own hair that was underneath the golden curls of the little damsel.

Yet did I walk away with a lighter step, and I said, Let no man call me old. I have reliable information that mine Hair is Orange-Colored. I am not old, so long as I have a little Granddaughter to keep me young.

Now the season was the Autumn; for the summer was past, and the harvest was ended. And I looked at the Trees, and, behold the leaves thereof were Red and Golden.

And I removed mine Hat, and I addressed Nature, saying,

I am something of a bluffer myself, and I understand thy Camouflage. Thou no less than I dost feel in thy veins the approach of Autumn, and thou makest a Brave Bluff. Thou canst not turn backward the procession of the Seasons, nor bind with the sweet influence of the Pleiades the flight of time nor the coming of the Frost. But thou hast somewhere hidden in the Woods a little Fairy that saith unto thee, Thou still art young; put on thy Glad Rags and Smile. And behold, here thou art, with Winter only two laps behind, and thou art pretending to feel young.

And I said,

Nature, thy method is O. K. and I am glad that out of the mouth of a little girl I have learned the same happy little Bluff. We are neither of us liars. Beneath every leaf that smileth as it prepareth to wither and to drop, is the bud of new life. The smile of the forest in Autumn is the prophecy within its roots of Eternal Youth. It is even so with me. It is not always May. But I am determined to keep my skyline clear and my waistline trim and mine heart young. And if ever I should have a suspicion that mine hair tendeth toward Grey, then I know how to change the color, and to go forth with head and heart both young.

In Brief

Every one has troubles, but wise and helpful people do not advertise them in their gloomy faces.

* *

Come, now, let us reason together. Do we belong to the church of Christ; or do we not? And if we do, are we really trying to make that church efficient for the need of the world in our neighborhood?

* *

Garages, moving picture houses and other "luxury" buildings multiply even in these days when construction is so costly. Meanwhile in almost every city and town in the land decent people with modest incomes hunt high and low for places where they may lay their heads and establish the little homes which are the life of the republic. It really doesn't seem quite right, does it?

* *

According to the statistics available to date the little town of Upton, Mass., claims the largest percentage of women voters, 390 women to 399 men, or within a very small fraction of complete equality. The sober and serious spirit in which the new voters have taken their new duty and opportunity makes it certain that there must have been a good deal of inquiry and careful thinking in Upton.

* *

When Noah landed on Mt. Ararat, could he have conceived that in October in the year of our Lord 1920 a battle would be fought between the Armenians and the Turks on the plains below? We doubt if Noah possessed sufficient foreknowledge thus to penetrate the future, but had he been gifted with such foresight, we presume his sympathies would have been altogether with the Armenians, who worsted their foes in the fight.

* *

The first President of the popular house in the new Parliament of India, which is soon to give a measure of home rule to its vast population of many races and religions speaking some 150 different tongues, is to be Alexander Frederick Whyte, the eldest son of Rev. Dr. Alexander Whyte of Edinburgh, famous among Scottish pulpit veterans. Mr. Whyte knows America well through an eight months' trip as explorer and lecturer. He has been a member of Parliament and during the War was entrusted with important governmental tasks. He will have a difficult and responsible task in establishing precedents and working methods and in reconciling differences among the much-varied elements over whose debates and decisions he is called to preside.

While we are celebrating our own Plymouth Tercentenary we must not forget the celebrations which relate to other events of early colonial history. Both Bermuda and Virginia are older settlements of English than that at Plymouth on this side of the Atlantic and both had legislative bodies in action before the Pilgrims had set foot on Cape Cod and signed the Compact in the Mayflower cabin. Bermuda has just been celebrating the 300th anniversary of the first sitting of its House of Representatives, which convened Aug. 1, 1620, following the Virginia General Assembly of 1619—by a year. This Bermuda House of Assembly convened while the Plymouth Pilgrims were on the slow journey of the converging streams from Leyden and London to Cape Cod. Bermuda was settled by a colony bound for Virginia which was wrecked on the island and, liking it, decided to remain. The celebration of self-government was held at St. Peter's Church at St. Georges, the old capital of the island group and the Prince of Wales timed his return voyage from Australasia so as to be present.

* *

The just-concluded census, which gives the United States a population of something over 105,000,000, will involve some changes in Congressional representation. The Senate remains the same, as there has been no addition of a State. The representation in the House is fixed with reference to a ratio of population, which will probably have to be increased unless the House is to be seriously enlarged. The New York Tribune in an editorial estimate takes the possible ratio of 230,000 as a basis and shows that the sectional changes will not be serious. With that ratio Massachusetts and Connecticut would each gain one congressman and Maine would lose one. New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania would gain two seats each, and Michigan and Ohio three. In the South, Texas would gain two seats. California would have four. Missouri, probably Kentucky and Iowa each would lose a seat. The East would gain seven, the Middle West four, the South four and the Far Wests five. As things now stand "there would probably be a net Republican gain of fifteen in the Electoral College."

* *

At the recent meeting of the English Congregational Union at Southampton, the International Council at Boston in the early summer was the subject of discriminating reviews from the point of view of a number of English delegates. Apparently Dr. J. D. Jones has not changed the opinion to which he gave voice before the Council met, that better results come as a rule from serious and quiet discussion of questions affecting the life and interests of the churches than by imposing demonstrations of a more popular character. However, Dr. Jones felt the Council was well worth while and immensely valuable in promoting Anglo-American friendships and understandings. Sir Arthur Haworth, one of the prominent English lay delegates at Boston, proposed a resolution which was unanimously passed. This was its conclusion:

> This Assembly expresses the hope that by the fraternal intercourse and fellowship of the Conference much may have been done to strengthen and increase the friendship already existing between the United States and the British Empire. May their kindred peoples be led of God into closer fellowship for the peace of the world and for the incoming of the Kingdom of Christ. It would further record its deep regret at the tragic death of Dr. H. C. Herring, to whose labors the Council was so deeply indebted, and would convey to the members of his family and to the American Churches its heartfelt sympathy.

* *

At this Southampton meeting of representative English Congregationalists, Principal A. E. Garvie, who was the chairman of the Union, in his formal address reported on his findings from city to city, as for six weeks before the Boston meetings he sought to cement friendship between England and America. He bespoke for America a measure of patience on the part of Englishmen because of its slowness in coming into the League of Nations, but he was hopeful that ultimately the United States would play its proper part in world politics and adhere firmly to international idealism. Dr. Garvie spoke right out in meeting with regard to the policy of the Supreme Council in undertaking to pass upon certain problems that might better be remanded for settlement to the League of Nations. That part of the address, according to reports in the English papers, did not secure the approbation of the entire audience.

The European Situation as Dr. Mott Sees It

A Series of Impressions and Their Relation to America

By Howard B. Grose, D.D.

Just before Dr. John R. Mott went to Europe in the spring, I had an interview with him which The Congregationalist gave to its readers. Remembering that he predicted it would be the most important of his annual European trips made during the past quarter century, on his return to this country I called on him to see if the prediction was verified in his experience. He felt that it was, and gave me reasons for thinking so.

Naturally, I first wanted to get his impressions of the present situation in Europe, as the matter of greatest significance to us all just now.

Gradual Rehabilitation

What would you state as your first impression, as you review your observations?

The sign of gradual economic rehabilitation, he replied; a rehabilitation so gradual, however, in some countries as to escape the notice of one who had not been able to keep track from year to year.

How would you rank the nations in this progress toward the normal?

I would certainly put Great Britain first as farthest on the path; Belgium second; Czecho-Slovakia third; France fourth, though some parts of rural France would vie for third place; Germany fifth, though this is contrary to the general view, as I was much impressed by the extent of her recovery; rural Hungary sixth; Italy seventh, though she is in a perilous state; Poland eighth, except in the war-swept fringes; Old Austria ninth, though with practically no hope unless an international arrangement is made that will furnish her with credit and raw materials. Otherwise her people are condemned to death. You've got to prime the pump there. The Peace Treaty left her in an impossible condition. Of course Russia comes tenth—an empire of misery with God only knows what further agony to endure, and no hope till a change comes.

Lack of Unity

And your second impression?

The great and omnipresent irritation, suspicion and lack of fundamental unity in Europe. Nations that were getting on together famously in the war are now at loggerheads. The irritation is greater, I believe, than at any time during the war.

To what do you attribute this?

To physical causes bringing reaction, to a recrudescence of national ambitions, fears and cupidity, and also and especially to a lack of really great leadership. Europe needs a world-commanding figure at this hour. Leadership is wanting not only among the statesmen, but also among the churchmen of all the nations and communions. Not that there are not some able men, but that there is no outstanding man with clear vision and ability to carry out a wise and definite policy. The wobbling as to Russia is a case in point.

United States in Bad

A third impression?

The attitude toward the United States. There is no question that we are in bad—much worse than you can realize unless you live long enough abroad to comprehend it. This feeling became almost unbearable. Why, with the exception of Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, almost every country has changed its attitude from extremely favorable to all grades of unfavorable. This attitude ranges from misunderstanding and mystification, through impatience and exasperation and caustic criticism, down to questioning our whole motives in the war and since. It extends from suspicion of ulterior designs on our part, on to bitterness and general disgust.

A Redeeming Factor

But having said that, said Dr. Mott with earnestness, I must immediately add a fourth impression of a great counteracting factor at work in our favor; a factor which, if we can keep it working, will I believe redeem us. I refer to the wonderful ministry of unselfishness and constructive philanthropy and aid rendered by America all through and since the war. No other country is to be bracketed with us in this. I say this not boastfully, but the facts will bear it out. For example, if you were to take out of Poland today the American anti-typhus mission; the American Y. M. C. A., which covers the entire Polish army of 1,250,000 men and is touching all the influential springs of life in Poland; the fascinating beginnings of the American Y. W. C. A. work, including their part in the practical ministry of the Gray Samaritans, selected and trained and sent out by them; the Jewish Joint Distribution Board, whose work I studied with great sympathy and satisfaction; and the American Red Cross, not to mention other American agencies—if you were to cut these out there would be practically nothing left for the amelioration of the tragic lot of this great buffer state of civilization. And this is but one nation. You could make equally well-supported claims in the case of others.

A Healing Network

There is no misunderstanding of this commerce of the heart, he added with feeling. Take the work which the American Y. M. C. A. only has done for the prisoners of war from the beginning of the war to date—a work at one time touching 6,000,000 men, and still ministering to 500,000 unrepatriated soldiers—why, that work alone, when you think of the 6,000,000 families and neighbors affected, has served as a gigantic offset to our political and economic aloofness. This ministry of unselfishness and mercy, in which the true heart and idealism of America are expressed, has furnished those strands of deeper spiritual fiber which are spread like a healing network over all these lands.

Nor is this all, he continued. This does not take into account the helpful reconstructive work which the Christian denominations are doing—the United Lutherans, Northern and Southern Methodists, Presbyterians and Baptists, Protestant Episcopalians, and so on. If this was put together, it would make a profound impression. When people speak of the Church as having failed in the war, they are absolutely inaccurate and unfair. So far is that from true, when the whole matter comes to be completely reviewed, it will be seen that the forces of Christianity in its purest form have acquitted themselves as at no other crisis in the world's history in applying the principles of the Gospel and practicing the spirit of Jesus Christ.

A Hard Winter Ahead

How about the suffering in the various countries?

One of my keenest impressions is of this. I fear that the coming winter is going to be more serious than any since the war broke out. Not only is there want of nourishing food, but depleted systems threaten ravages of disease. My investigations did not reveal adequate constructive measures of relief, and unless these are taken it will be impossible to prophesy the consequences. Certainly hunger, cold, starvation, hopelessness, disease—these are breeders of revolution and anarchy.

America Must Put Its House in Order

What is the net result of your investigations, as to the outlook?

I came back not pessimistic, as so many travelers have done, but with a degree of quiet optimism, based on the unselfish deeds as seen against the black background. Some people see only this background, but one who takes sufficiently wide and long views cannot be pessimistic. The divine arm is not shortened that it cannot save. There is boundless opportunity throughout Europe today for a country like America, with our abundant resources. And this leads me to the last of my impressions—a new and vivid impression of the tremendous importance of America in this hour, and of our getting our own house in order. There are diseases spreading, and the only way is to have vitality enough to drive them off. We must not think to escape contagion if Europe is overspread with it. Our plain and insistent duty is to bring all the forces into play—Christianity, philanthropy, university economics—as well as discovering a distinctive part in the new international political arrangements demanded by the present world situation, and that will prevent a recurrence of the evils that have stricken the world.

Task of "Y" Far from Finished

It may be added that in gaining these impressions Dr. Mott had come into contact with the leaders in state, education and church in the different countries. He says the task of the American "Y" overseas is far from finished, as it is now serving in Europe, Asia and Africa not less than 2,650,000 soldiers and sailors of allied armies and navies, and 500,000 unrepatriated war prisoners and 100,000 members of labor battalions—a total of 3,250,000. It is highly significant, as he says, that the war work of the American "Y" was so well done that virtually every land in Europe, whose leaders were in position to see or know of the "Y" work, are now clamoring for the nation-wide extension of this particular American Association movement and for no other.

Perhaps the most important meeting attended by Dr. Mott was that of the General Committee of the World's Christian Student Federation in Switzerland, with delegates present from thirty-seven nations. This movement was founded by Dr. Mott twenty-five years ago, and he has been its general secretary until this meeting, when he declined re-election but was made chairman of the executive committee. The importance of the Federation as a means of promoting international good will and understanding was recognized and the objects were broadened to include this phase of service to the world. It was also decided to raise a relief fund for distressed students. Another gathering of interest was the International Missionary Meeting at Geneva, which decided to create an International Missionary Committee, the first meeting of which is projected for North America in the autumn of 1921. Both of these meetings have a wide bearing on the future of Christian civilization.

The Pilgrim Way to Freedom

A Pageant of Three Hundred Years Ago

By Frank R. Shipman

President Atlanta Theological Seminary

I.

The scene is Pastor John Robinson's large kitchen in Leyden, Holland. The furnishings will be very plain and not unlike those of a kitchen today, but with an open fireplace instead of a stove. It is a Sabbath day in 1619, and the worship of the Leyden Congregation is just finished. Men, women and children have not yet risen from chairs and benches, but they are relaxing and changing their positions.

John Robinson: And now that we have worshiped Almighty God and listened to his comfortable Word, what was it, Master Bradford, that you desired the speech of the Church about?

William Bradford: Only this, Master Robinson, that I see not how in duty we may longer stay in this land of Holland.

Voices: Why not? I thought so. Has it come to this?

John Robinson: Say on, Master Bradford. Do you long for the plain country villages of England again, and for the farms which we loved?

William Bradford: You know, Master Robinson, it is not that; though surely we are poor enough here. I would not leave Holland from homesickness nor newfangledness nor other giddy humor. No; though our labor is great here and our fare is hard, yet it is rather because we have other work on hand and another kind of war to maintain. Many of the Dutch are honorable men and learned, and they have been kind to us; but there is great wickedness in this country and manifold temptations. Many of our children are following bad courses, to our great grief and to the dishonor of God. Ought we not to shield them and us from such sorrows, most heavy to be borne?

William Brewster: What would you do, Master Bradford?

William Bradford: I would away from here.

Susanna White: Where would you go? I mind me now of the great miseries we endured when we tried to get over here from England?

William Bradford: I have thought of those vast and unpeopled countries of America.

Voices: Oh, oh. No, no. Never.

Mistress Mullins: But there are only savage and brutish men, which range up and down little otherwise than wild beasts.

John Carver: Think of the famine and nakedness and want.

Susanna White: Think of the changes of things, which would infect our bodies with sore sicknesses and grievous diseases.

Mistress Mullins: I have heard that the savage men are not content only to kill, but flay some alive with the shells of fishes, and broil others on the coals, eating collops of their flesh in their sight whilst they live. No, I could never go.

William Bradford: The dangers are great but not desperate. The difficulties are many but not invincible. Many of them are likely, yet they are not certain. Sundry of the things you fear may never befall. Others, by the use of good means, may be prevented. All of them, through the help of God and by fortitude and patience, may either be borne or overcome. Our ends would be good and honorable; therefore we may expect the blessing of God in our proceeding.

Voices (Some of them tearful, all agitated): No, no.

William Bradford: Lastly—and this is not least—we may have a great hope of laying some good foundation for advancing the Kingdom of Christ in those remote parts of the world; yea, though we should be but even as stepping stones unto others for the performing of so great a work.

(A pause, many of the faces brightening with the speaker's own enthusiasm. The silence is broken by the sound of shuffling feet. Four Dutch children—boys or girls—skip in, and a Dutch folk dance follows. The space in front of the Congregation may represent a Leyden street. The men watch with stern faces, the women with interest in spite of their disapproval. The dancers finish and romp off.)

Wrasling Brewster (a boy): Mother, can't I do that?

Priscilla Mullins (an older girl): Yes, I should like to do that.

(The older people are clearly dismayed.)

Elder Brewster: Child, that is sin. We should turn away our eyes from beholding vanity.

Mistress Mullins: Nay, is it so very bad? Lambs and colts, do they not skip and dance?

(Stern murmurs from most of the Congregation, interrupted by the entrance on the street of some Dutch sailors, drunk and tormenting a small Indian boy whom they have brought from the New World. The Congregation watches this spectacle with growing wrath. The sailors stagger off, dragging the boy with them.)

Wrasling Brewster: Father, weren't they funny?

John Robinson: God wills it, Christian friends. We must save our children from such evil sights. For myself I would bear the brunt with you, and so I will unless I am held here by the old and helpless. But go you; and the Lord guide you with his hand, bring you together in the place desired for his Christ's sake, and show you and us his salvation in the end.

All (rising): Let us go, let us go.

Susanna White: I can do all things, Christ strengthening me.

All: Let us go, let us go.

(They troop off the stage.)

II. Leaving England

It is the 6th of September, 1620 (old style), in the harbor of Plymouth. The scene is the empty deck of the Mayflower. The furnishings may be none at all, or the usual objects on shipboard.

Enter some of the crew (not Pilgrims), who engage in some dance like the Sailors' Hornpipe. As the dance is concluding, the Mate comes in.

Mate: Come, stop that. The passengers are coming up on deck, and it be time to cast off.

(The Pilgrim company of the last scene, excepting John Robinson, come in, by twos and threes.)

William Bradford: Friends, we have poured out prayers to God, and we have spent the night with little sleep; but now it is time to be gone. The tide stays for no man.

Susanna White: But, Master Bradford, we have no oil on board, nor a sole to mend a shoe.

John Carver: Nor have we every man a sword to his side, and we want many muskets.

William Brewster: Well, we must trust the good providence of God.

Mistress Mullins: Yes, we are Pilgrims, and we must not look much on such things. Let us lift our eyes to the heavens, our dearest country, and quiet our spirits.

Mate: All away from the gang-plank.

(There is a movement to one side. Sailors enter and go to the rail. The Pilgrims follow and look toward the shore, many in tears, a few waving handkerchiefs and hats. The leaders begin singing the 23d Psalm. All join.)

John Carver: We are off.

Susanna White: Is the wind right, Master Bradford?

William Bradford: Yes, Mistress White.

William Brewster: A prosperous wind.

(Renewal of the tears and the waving.)

John Carver (sternly): Farewell, Babylon! farewell, Rome!

Mistress Mullins: Nay, say not so, Master Carver. Let us remember our parents and the daisied graves beside gray church walls; then let us say, dear England!

William Brewster: Let us pray.

(All except the sailors kneel on the deck with bowed heads.)

III. The Compact of the Mayflower

The cabin of the Mayflower on Nov. 11, 1620 (old style). There is a plain table and a few rough benches, but little else for furnishing. The men and women of the Pilgrim company are sitting or standing about.

William Bradford: Friends, we have been called together in the cabin here because of some new dangers that do assail us. It seems that we are not come to Virginia as we had meant, but that we are in the harbor of Cape Cod. Already some of the strangers amongst us are saying that on shore none of us will have power to command them.

John Carver: Discontented and mutinous speeches!

William Bradford: Well said, Master Carver; and yet, sad to tell, speeches that have some color of truth in them. As we have no patent for this coast, how shall we control these lawless men when we come ashore?

John Carver: Aye, we must look to that. Every one would be his own master, and government would be at an end.

William Brewster: If England has no government for us, we must make one for ourselves.

John Carver: Yes, Master Brewster, and it must be a right one. We have come away from nobles and bishops. Let us make a government in which all shall stand equal. Let us all be bound by such laws of equal bearing as the majority shall adopt.

William Bradford: We have often talked of it on this voyage, and I have here a paper that makes it plain.

Voices: Read it. Read it out, Master Bradford.

William Bradford: In the name of God, Amen. We whose names are underwritten, the loyal subjects of our dread sovereign Lord, King James, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland king, defender of the faith, etc., having undertaken, for the glory of God and advancement of the Christian faith, and honor of our king and country, a voyage to plant the first colony in the northern parts of Virginia, do by these presents solemnly and mutually in the presence of God and one of another, covenant and combine ourselves together into a civil body politic, for our better ordering and preservation and furtherance of the ends aforesaid; and by virtue hereof to enact, constitute, and frame such just and equal laws, ordinances, acts, constitutions, and offices, from time to time, as shall be thought most meet and convenient for the general good of the Colony, unto which we promise all due submission and obedience.

In witness whereof we have hereunder subscribed our names at Cape Cod the 11th of November, in the year of the reign of our sovereign Lord, King James, of England, France, and Ireland the eighteenth, and of Scotland the fifty-fourth. Anno Domini, 1620.

(Exclamations of "Good, good.")

William Brewster: Let us sign it at once, and the Lord prosper our doing.

William Bradford: Master Carver, will you be the first?

(Dumb show, one making way for another; but Carver signs first, then Bradford, then Winslow, then Brewster, then the other men. While this goes on—)

Susanna White: Shall we ever endure to live here, Mistress Mullins?

Mistress Mullins: All things have a weather-beaten face, it is true, Mistress White; but I suppose that is because the summer is done.

(Priscilla Mullins enters.)

Priscilla: Mother, when may we go on shore to stay?

Mistress Mullins: When the shallop is mended to carry our goods, my dear. You know it was much bruised and shattered by the foul weather coming over.

Susanna White: Full of woods and thickets, so wild and savage!

Mistress Mullins (the company is now leaving for the deck): Well, Susanna, we do not desire, do we, to go on the sunny side of religion. Our Saviour did not so for us. In his suffering he took the windy side of the hill.

(Into the empty cabin come a number of boys. They play at leap-frog for a while. One or two, going out, bring in pillows. After a while all are having a pillow-fight. Wrasling Brewster hurts one of the other boys, and in a moment there is a real fight. The two boys close and wrestle. William Brewster enters.)

William Brewster: Tut, tut, Wrasling, no fighting here.

Wrasling: Father, why did you name me "Wrasling," if I can't ever fight?

William Brewster: Not with flesh and blood, son. But there is fighting enough to be done with the devil. Fight with him. God delights to see him overcome by wrastling.

Wrasling: Will there be any fighting to do over yonder (pointing to the land)?

William Brewster (As he and Wrasling leave the cabin): No doubt of it. Many boys will be born there in time to come who shall fight for their Lord God and the Compact of the Mayflower. May victory be theirs on every 11th of November!

("There's a long, long trail a-winding" is softly sung from behind. Toward the end of the chorus, the boys in khaki march quietly across the rear of the stage. After they are gone, the chorus is still being sung.)

IV. SMITTEN DOWN YET NOT DESTROYED

It is the first week in March 1621. The scene is a level spot on Cole's Hill. A light snow covers the ground. There are graves all about, but the soil has been leveled in order that the Indians may not learn how many have died. Priscilla Mullins is discovered, sitting dejectedly on a fallen log.

Priscilla: Father and mother both gone! Only Joseph and I left. Sad, sad, sad! (She buries her face in her hands.)

(Capt. Myles Standish enters.)

Myles Standish: Priscilla! You here?

Priscilla: Why not, Captain Standish? Why should I not come here to weep? (A pause.) Even as you have come here.

Myles Standish: Yes, my Rose lies over there. A white rose she was before she died, whiter than that snow.

(He sits on another log, and draws figures in the snow with his sword. Priscilla weeps silently. Now and then he looks at her.)

Myles Standish: Where is it that Mistress White is buried?

Priscilla: Yonder by the little pine. No doubt Mistress Bradford would be next to her in death as in life, but Mistress Bradford lies out there beneath those cold, cold waters.

Myles Standish: It will not be long now before Master Carver is laid here.

Priscilla: Oh, Master Standish, will there be any end? Here it is but early in March, and near half of us lie beneath this snow.

Myles Standish: Yes, Priscilla, and yet the winter has seemed long—long. How long is it since we landed?

Priscilla: It was the 20th of December when you came on shore, was it not?

(Enter William Bradford, William Brewster, Wrasling Brewster, John Carver, looking very feeble, and a few more. Bradford is speaking.)

William Bradford: Which way soever we turn our eyes (save upward to the heavens) we can have but little solace and content in respect of any outward objects.

John Carver: Master Brewster, say something to sustain us. Much we need the spirit of God and his grace.

William Brewster: My friends, this morning I was reading in the 107th psalm; and I believe (he opens a small Bible in his hand) our children's children will yet say something like this: Our fathers were Englishmen which came over this great ocean, and were ready to perish in this wilderness; but they cried unto the Lord, and he heard their voice, and looked on their adversity. Let them therefore praise the Lord, because he is good and his mercies endure forever. Yea, let them which have been redeemed of the Lord show how he hath delivered them from the hand of the oppressor. When they wandered in the desert wilderness out of the way, and found no city to dwell in, both hungry and thirsty, their soul was overwhelmed in them. Let them confess before the Lord his loving kindness, and his wonderful works before the sons of men.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

The downfall of the church has often been prophesied, but it is an institution that stands through all earthquakes. The wrecking crew has been called out times without number to haul away the débris that was to be left when the church had finally crashed to the earth, but the wrecking crews have perished and their wagons have mouldered into dust, while with each succeeding millennium the heavens are seen to be more deeply pierced by the spire of God's church.

(The faces of all look cheered, Standish has closed his hand over the hand of Priscilla.)

Myles Standish: What "wonderful works" do you think our children's children will see, Master Brewster?

William Brewster: I know not, Master Standish, but the years will tell. I have faith.

(All go off lingeringly. Bradford is last and pauses for a moment alone, after gazing on the graves.)

William Bradford: Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. The years will tell.

(One by one the Years appear, young Feminine Figures, wearing light but bright robes, to contrast with the white ground. They come in to the sound of music. Last of all, America appears and takes the center. They dance with dignity and grace. At the conclusion of the dance they separate, standing back. William Penn, the Quaker, passes across the stage with a few Indians; Oglethorpe and a few Negroes; Washington and Revolutionary soldiers; Lincoln and Lee and companions; Soldiers of the late war and Red Cross nurses. The groups may be changed and added to, according to local interests. Symbolical Figures may appear also—Commerce, Agriculture, Manufacturing, Education, Science, Art. After all have passed, they return informally and come forward with the Years, America still in the center. All join in singing "America, the Beautiful.")

OUR PILGRIM PULPIT

Ostrich Parenthood

By Rev. Herbert Atchinson Jump

First Church, Manchester, N. H.

The daughter of my people is become cruel, like the ostriches of the wilderness.—Lam. 4:3.

It was the insight of Horace Bushnell that discovered the homiletic value of the ostrich. The ostrich is the perfect example of insufficient, indifferent and useless parenthood. She lays her egg in the sand and goes her way. If the sun is kindly, the egg is hatched out by its warming rays. But when the fledgling needs care, then the ostrich is an absentee mother.

The question is pertinent whether much of our parenthood in America is not going the way of the ostrich. Twenty-six million children in our land are receiving no organized religious education in church or Sunday school. They are growing up as spiritual illiterates. The blame is mainly upon the fathers and mothers of today. An irate father was in altercation with his up-to-date high school son. He finally summed up his convictions, "Well, anyway things were different when I was a lad. The old-fashioned son had respect for his father." But the impudent and unconquered son retorted, "But remember, the old-fashioned son had an old-fashioned father to respect."

The parents of old promised to bring up their young in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and sometimes with too much severity they accomplished their vow. Modern parents promise the same thing, and then actually bring up their children in familiarity with the comic supplement of the Sunday newspaper and in monotonously frequent patronage of the movies.

Family prayers are interesting nowadays mainly as an illustration of how completely a highly honored institution of religion may become obsolete in the very circles where once it was esteemed. Probably not five homes out of a hundred in our Congregational fellowship recognize this ancient practice.

Grace at table is fast following in the train of family prayers. Here another opportunity for teaching religion by "the resistless patter of reiterated suggestion" has been lost. What guard-mount is to the soldier in reminding him every day that "I belong to this flag," is accomplished by the simple and yet reverent acknowledgment of Divine love whenever we sit down to the most important aspect of our physical life, namely, our food.

Incidental parental instruction in the literature and the principles of the Christian religion is perhaps the most important channel through which conscientious parenthood can achieve results for Christian nurture. Is there a real father who could not take a half hour each Sunday reading Bible stories to his children? As a matter of fact, many a boy has never once in all his life seen a copy of the Bible in his father's hand. If the Bible has lodgment in that household, it is only as "mother's book." Then such collections of stories as "The King's Highway," or Mrs. Cabot's "Ethics for Children," ought to have continuous employment as tools used by fathers and mothers to secure moral results in the lives of the young.

Lastly, parenthood that would escape the shortcomings of the ostrich species will maintain a truly religious atmosphere in the home. A stream of holy influence flowed for several decades out from the saintly life of the beloved late Prof. Henry Johnson of Bowdoin College. He once told me as his pastor what he regarded as the secret of any Christianity he might possess: "Every morning I begin the day by thinking through the Lord's Prayer, and trying to tune my life to it."

Swinging Around the Circle

Midwest Congregational Colleges and Ministers

By George Perry Morris

A month's sojourn (or rather journeying about) in the upper region of territory watered by the Mississippi and its tributaries has given me some chance to see men who are Congregationalists and who are serving the churches and the colleges.

For instance it was my fortune to be present at the opening session for this season of the Twin Cities Ministers' Meeting, sitting in Dr. Dewey's church in Minneapolis. They talked about their vacation reminiscences, and as far as I could make out most of them had stood by their usual church work at home during the summer; and of those who had gone away, most of them had gone without their wives. Especially was this true where the expense of travel involved was large. Current high rates of travel have ethical as well as economic by-products in salaried men's families that are not dreamt of in the philosophy of federal officials and railway administrators. It was easy to see from the comments at this meeting and from the atmosphere that enveloped it that Minneapolis and St. Paul pastors are of many types yet fraternal in spirit. They seem to be geared for teamwork.

Carleton College

While I was in Minneapolis I had two points of contact with Carleton College. I heard Prof. Ambrose Vernon preach, and I was conversant with the "drive" that Carleton is making for $4,000,000 to put it in shape for its opportunities as an institution that Baptists as well as Congregationalists indorse and to which they intend to give financial aid and also their sons.

Professor Vernon, as the result of his residence in California and in Minnesota, has even more fire to his preaching than when I used to hear him in Brookline and Boston. I infer from what he told me that the democracy and realism of the West have gripped him strongly, and that while still a scholar he is more of a civic force and preacher to the man in the street than he used to be. Just now he is having a chance to preach occasionally to such students of the University of Minnesota as are drawn to him; and it is as a pulpit supply in the cities and larger towns of rapidly evolving Minnesota that he can much extend his sphere of influence due to his post at Carleton.

As for Carleton, it has in President Cowling an executive whose loyalty to it and belief in it are such that he has declined many offers of executive positions far higher in the ranking awarded by academic men or the federal government. He believes profoundly in the small college, in education with a spiritual stamp and ideal; and if he has failed in his laudable effort to induce Presbyterian and Methodist authorities to join the Congregationalists (as have the Baptists) in making the town of Carleton a center for the Protestant Christian, cultural life of a great state, he is not to blame. He has had his vision. Other men of other sects will get it sometime.

The State University's Problems

I went to the opening formal session of the university. It was an imposing sight to see three thousand of the seven thousand enrolled pupils of both sexes; to hear them sing "America" and the university song; and to listen to words from one of the veteran professors and to hear the new president, a trained student of pedagogics, define his policy. But it seemed strange not to see ex-President Northrop on the platform; and quite as odd not to have religion recognized in any way (as it certainly was under the Folwell–Northrop régimes). President Northrop's absence was not due to the fact that he was not in town or that he is not in fairly good health for a man of his years.

On quite good authority I gather that one of several reasons why Dr. Burton did not stay longer at this institution was because he had official and personal reasons for believing that the process of secularization was likely to go on; and that the penalty he would suffer for being as religious and spiritual a leader as he would like to be in a great university center would be increase rather than diminution of friction with the regents. This is not an exceptional case, but it points a moral as to freedom of thought and speech, which is duplicated when you come to talk with members of the faculty dealing with studies that bear on contemporary politics, sociology and economics. There is a great deal of liberalism and progressivism among teachers and students in these superb institutions of the Middle West that is fast passing over into radicalism, and responsibility for it lies with reactionaries and conservatives who hold threats over regents, who in turn intimidate the academic body.

Fraternities, Sororities and Hostels

To combat the compulsory neutrality of state universities on matters of religion and to provide the student bodies with adequate interpreters of Christian ethics the denominations should aid churches adjacent to the university campus and the student quarters, just, for instance, as the Methodist Episcopal church out of its recently acquired vast special fund is already doing at the University of Wisconsin. To fail to do it is to fall below the strategy of the secret societies of these universities. Yet I saw nothing indicating any such appreciation of the rare opportunity at the University of Minnesota. The historic First Church of St. Anthony's Falls, now has at its head a splendid winning type of man able to get at Congregationalists entering and studying at the university, but neither he nor the local laity can do all the work that needs to be done nor provide the sinews of war.

The University of Wisconsin

In Madison both the Protestant and Roman Catholic branches of the fold have had more of a vision and have gone farther in meeting it; but Congregationalists do not lead, as they did in the days of the lamented Updike. The Congregational work needs to be brought nearer the physical heart of the university, as near as the fine new Roman Catholic Church and its social welfare and community service headquarters. It should be fitted for aggressive work with Midwest men and women by a staff of workers who know them because of them. Apropos of Updike, I happened to notice while studying the splendid collections of the State Historical Library that all of his papers covering a residence of a quarter of a century in Madison are in the possession of this library; as also are the papers of former President Merrill of Ripon College.

Chicago Preachers' Meeting

To a former Bostonian and reporter of ministers' Monday meetings for many years it seemed quite like old times to drop into the Chicago Ministers' Meeting and see sitting among the veterans Barton of Oak Park, alias "Safed the Sage," and President Davis of the Seminary, and Richards, formerly of the Mt. Vernon Church, now of Winetka. I missed Noble and Goodwin and Dr. E. F. Williams who were in their prime when I was in the city in 1890; and I could not help noting what a trig, clean-shaven, natty-looking crowd of clerics the men of today are compared with the men who lived when even Christian pastors "swore by their beards." Now they swear at them.

"The Futility of Preaching"

It was plain to see by the theme discussed at this meeting and also by the talk following the formal paper at the Apollos Club, which I attended later, that the Congregational clergy of Chicago and its suburbs are deeply stirred. The attacks of John Spargo on the utility and futility of the pulpit and the symposium of the Christian Century on the same subject are under discussion. The place of the "open forum" in church work is being debated and tested. The elder individualistic and the newer social conceptions of Christianity are in conflict. Eschatology, higher criticism and Christology are relatively dead issues. Adaptation of pulpit message and lay effort to new world conditions and especially to post-war reactions are now the vital issues in dispute; and the younger men are restless and discontented with tradition and conventions and the relative impotence of the church in a maelstrom of life such as the nation and the vast urban center present to the Christian ethic for solution.

Graham Taylor Vigilant

Running true to form Graham Taylor utilized his opportunity at the Apollos Club dinner to advise his brethren on contemporary local politics, and which of two evils they must choose in selecting candidates to vote for if the minimum of harm was to come to the judicial system of the city. Fortunately, in facing state and local issues there seems to be considerable more independence of action being shown by voters than is probable in the presidential election. However, even in this field a straw vote indicated that more of the members of this clerical organization were for the League of Nations, with or without reservations, than against it; and two of the members will vote for Debs.

Race Complications

The Sunday afternoon I went out to the University of Chicago I rode in a surface car passing through the great district now almost solidly populated with recent Negro immigrants from the South. Ere long the car filled up, and about one-third of us were Caucasians, one-third Negroes, and one-third Mexicans. There we sat—or stood hanging on straps—and thought unutterable thoughts about each other, our complexions, our manners, our customs, our morals, and our ultimate destiny as Americans. The invasion of the city and the Middle West by Negroes I had read about, and so was not surprised. But I had to make this trip to note how rapidly the race problem is becoming additionally complex through the entrance of Indians of the peon type with a varnish of Spanish and Roman Catholic cultural ideals. You see them working as track hands on the railways, as laborers on the farms, and as manual laborers in the cities. Some will return to Mexico. As many will not. Chicago, Kansas City and Detroit now have colonies numbering thousands. Protestantism in this new situation has her duties.

The American Board in Marietta

Increasing Need Calls for Larger Program

By Rev. William F. English, Jr.

Profoundly impressed with the urgency of the situation confronting the Board the world around but with a jubilant "carry on" spirit that augurs well for a new year with increasing demands, the two hundred delegates who were privileged to attend the 111th Annual Meeting of the American Board returned home truly inspired with a renewed zeal for pushing the claims of the Board's work before the denomination. The outstanding characteristics of the meeting were the splendid fellowship, enhanced by the hospitality of our hosts, the general high quality of the program and the deep spiritual note throughout.

Delegates and visitors arriving after a rather tedious journey, soon found themselves in the cordial atmosphere of an attractive college town, and almost immediately caught the spirit of a delightfully blended New England hospitality and Western cordiality. Great credit is due the Hospitality Committee of the First Church, under the direction of Mr. W. W. Mills, well known to our fellowship, Mr. G. W. Lansley, a local business man, and Rev. W. L. Goldsmith, pastor of the church, and others who met the delegates upon arrival, escorted them to their places of entertainment by automobile and did far more than could be expected to provide for the comfort and convenience of all visitors. The resolution adopted at the closing session well expressed the feeling of all in these words: "You met us beyond the City Gates, escorted us to your homes, and received us into your hearts. We came as strangers, we departed as friends."

SERIES OF HIGH POINTS

Very truly it may be said that the sessions were one series of high points in the mutual interest and enthusiasm created. Dr. Patton's report for the Home Department pointed out that our missionaries are at the very forefront of the world's best thought, carrying on the spirit of the Kingdom amidst obstacles that are being turned into unprecedented opportunities. Dr. Van Horn struck a similar note in the Annual Sermon, quoting the conversation of Ahab and the Prophet, "Who shall begin the battle?" and the answer, "Thou." Also the significant phrase from Joaquin Miller's poem, "Columbus," "Sail on, Sail on." President Moore rounded out the message of the meetings in splendid fashion at the concluding session Friday morning when he touched upon the deep spiritual note that had been felt by all throughout the sessions. He ably called attention to the fact that the missionaries' hearts go back today in strange fashion and with immense power to the original concept of missions as primarily a religious ministry to men. As the American Board has ever been a leader in missionary strategy and the development of a true science of missions, its vast educational program, so much needed on the field today, is more than ever to be carried on with a deep religious spirit and motive.

NATIVE CHRISTIANS MAKE APPEALS

Seldom, if ever, has there been presented on any program such an array of vital facts depicting crucial situations demanding immediate attention, as those brought by the missionaries recently returned from the field. Such phrases as "The Zero Hour in the Philippines," "Like Bees on the Wing Seeking a Hive," "Budding Bolshevists," are characteristics of the way in which the missionary graphically described the spirit of peoples seeking the Light in a day of world chaos. The program was especially comprehensive in its scope covering not only the customary brief reports of returned missionaries, but sessions devoted to the Pastor's Part in Missionary Promotion, the Congregational World Movement and its relation to the Board's program, a special message on Internationalism by Dr. Strong and a presentation of the New Home Base by Dr. Smith. Dramatic moments were in order as usual at an American Board meeting, such as the ovation to Rev. L. S. Gates, of Sholapur, who has completed 45 years of service in India and to Rev. G. H. Hubbard of Foochow for 37 years in China. At the conclusion of Dr. Barton's Survey of the Foreign Field on Wednesday evening, two native Christians, one from Africa and the other from India, were introduced. The appeals of these young men in behalf of their respective people were most touching and thrilling.

The evening session of Thursday was given over to the presentation of the Romance of Missions and the appeal to young people for life service on the foreign field. Very impressive was the scene when 43 active missionaries were massed upon the platform as the congregation looked into their faces and all sang, "Faith of our Fathers." Eight newly commissioned missionaries were introduced who spoke briefly and effectively, two of whom were commissioned by the President at this service. The session closed with a splendid address for young people by Dr. D. A. Poling of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, who likened the missionary enterprise to a crusade demanding a Cause, a Consecration and a Company.

FACES A DEFICIT

The reports of the 110th year concluding the Board's first "Million Dollar Decade," indicated the greatest year in its history. The total receipts were $1,651,546, an increase of $128,000 over the previous year and an increase of $106,000 from churches and individuals. Seventy-three missionaries were commissioned, the largest group in its history, although it must be borne in mind that a large percentage were short-term appointments. Also the largest deficit in the Board's history was reported, amounting to $242,544. It is assumed that this item will be met by the Congregational World Movement pledges of last spring now being paid in, but it certainly represents a serious mortgage for the future. The fact of such a deficit did not, however, astound such a meeting as that held at Marietta, but actually was met as a challenge. Such was the abounding spirit of conquest and confidence. The officers, members and friends of the Board were urged to co-operate to the fullest extent possible in advancing our denominational program as represented by the Five Million Dollar Goal of the Congregational World Movement. Only in such proportion as this united effort succeeds can the Board be justified in continuing its confidence in our people for the support of our Foreign Missionary Enterprise on its present scale in our 19 stations.

The Board meeting this year produced more of an impression locally than usual, particularly owing to the fact that it was an event of more than ordinary significance for the community in which it was held, but more especially because of the splendid manner in which the meeting was advertised and set up. Considerable space was given to the various sessions in the local press and the Exhibit in the Armory attracted wide attention. People of all faiths were in constant attendance and those in charge have reason to believe that it made a profound impression, especially in the interest aroused by the attendance of large numbers of young people of the high-school age. The direct contact with Marietta College was a pleasing feature, Pres. E. S. Parsons giving the opening address of welcome and opening his residence for a reception on Thursday afternoon. Missionary messages were given by representatives of the Board at chapel services throughout the week, culminating in an address by Secretary Eddy Friday morning which yielded a Student Pledge of $824 for special work in connection with St. Paul's School in Tarsus.

It was indeed a remarkable meeting in its spirit and message. As some one well said, "The family had a great reunion." All present were more than ever convinced of the great work the Board is doing and were strengthened in their determination that its program shall be continued and enlarged with ever increasing urgency and devotion.

Herring Memorial Fund

Subscribers up to Oct. 25, 1920

This is the list of the first subscribers to the Herring Memorial Fund, the purpose of which was announced in our issue of last week. The individual subscriptions range from two dollars to one thousand dollars. The total thus far is $4,402. It should be understood that subscriptions and checks should be sent to the Herring Memorial Fund, 375 Lexington Ave., New York.

Lucius R. Eastman, New York City.
William Grant Smith, Cleveland, O.
(Rev.) H. F. Swartz, New York City.
(Rev.) Charles S. Mills, New York City.
H. G. Cordley, Glen Ridge, N. J.
Herbert J. Brown, Portland, Me.
F. B. Lovejoy, Montclair, N. J.
Lucien C. Warner, New York City.
W. W. Mills, Marietta, O.
(Rev.) Clarence H. Wilson, Glen Ridge, N. J.
O. J. Hill, Kansas City, Mo.
(Rev.) William A. Rice, New York City.
(Rev.) Henry A. Stimson, New York City.
Charles C. West, Montclair, N. J.
Edward T. Wilkinson, Montclair, N. J.
(Rev.) Charles E. Burton, New York City.
(Rev.) Dwight C. Stone, Stonington, Ct.
(Rev.) Franklin W. Barker, Unionville, Ct.

League of the New Day

Next Week's Readings and Prayers

Week of Nov. 8–14

Monday. Israel Comforted. Isa. 54:1-17.
Tuesday. Free Grace. Isa. 55:1-13.
Wednesday. For All People. Isa. 56:1-12.
Thursday. The True Fast. Isa. 58:1-14.
Friday. The Redeemer. Isa. 59:1-21.
Saturday. Zion's Praise. Isa. 60:1-22.
Sunday. Loving-kindness. Ps. 36.

Object for Intercession

For the American People in Their Choice of a President:

Choose thou for us, O God of our fathers and our children, him who shall be our leader in the years before us, so affecting by thy Holy Spirit the thoughts of our people that they may choose aright. And grant to him who shall be chosen an endowment of grace and wisdom. Give him strength for his mighty tasks. Assure him good counsel and may the good will of all the people follow him and a crown of honor come at the end of his work well done. In the name of Christ. Amen.—R.

THE HOUR OF PRAYER

Human and Divine Relations of the Believer

Comment on the Midweek Prayer Meeting Topic for Nov. 7-13

BY ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN

Scripture Passages. Matt. 22:34-46; 1 John 4:11-21.

The Human Soul as a Power Station for the Love of God. In the thought of Christ every man stands between God and his neighbor as a communicating station of power. It is useless to attempt a self-regarding aim for what God gives us, as if we were at the end of the line and there were nothing beyond. Use the image of the electric source and switch station to show how God works through us to reach others. It is when we are ready to pass on what comes to us that we are ourselves strongest in the Christian life. A disconnected switching station is a useless thing. And remember that it was because God can use us that he gives us gifts. Just as a hammer out of the workman's hands tends to rust, so when we decline to let God use us we tend to grow unhappy. The best prayer for the miserable and melancholy people is that God would make them of use. The dull eye brightens when it is on the watch for opportunities, not of meddling but of helpfulness. No man can be in complete despair so long as he is of a little use to somebody.

Keeping the Wire Clear Both Ways. We need to be able to reach God at any moment of our lives. And he is never out of reach. But we need also to be alert for the needs of others. Prayer and provender hinder no man, says the old proverb. Communion with God is a clarifier of thought for work. There is no need that we should be as logy Christians as we sometimes are. You can hardly think of God with the least attention without remembering how the opportunities of God are mostly presented in your relations with your neighbor. The two streams meet in the still pool of the attentive and sympathetic human soul, as the sight of the eye and the light of some distant star come together on the mirror of the eyepiece of a telescope.

Learning about God in Acquaintance with Men. The best field of research for divinity is really in our relations with humanity. That is why we find God in the Bible. It is not merely his commands and promises that speak to us, but also the experience of the men of the old time in their relations with him. That is why Christ came, that he might show us divinity in a human life as the best hope of our getting acquainted with it as it is at work for our salvation. And it is in our relations with our neighbor that we oftenest seem to get new glimpses of what Christ was and is and grow to be like him. The word "godly" for most of us seems to carry with it an overthought of social relations, in which only the witness which Christ asks of us is possible. You cannot bear witness in solitude. And the question of the Apostle John is pertinent here: "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"

Closet and Altar

RESTING IN GOD

Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him and he shall bring it to pass.—Ps. 37:5.

Low grades of being want low objects, but the want of man is God.—Horace Bushnell.

It is man's royal nature which keeps him restless. Foxes indeed have holes, and the birds of the air nests; but no son of man can find where to lay his head except on the bosom of God.—Robertson Nichol.

How happy the hearts which in every situation place unbounded confidence in Jehovah's word! Such may be hedged up on every side, and encompassed like Israel at the Red Sea, with seemingly insurmountable difficulties; yet even here they will follow Israel's example; they will cry unto God and rely upon his mercy. If means can be used, they will use them; if not, they will "stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." "Speak unto the children of Israel, said the Lord, that they go forward." They went: a way was made in the sea, and a path in the mighty waters. Well may it be said, "By faith Israel passed through the Red Sea."—Andrew Fuller.

Rest in the Lord, my soul;
Commit to him thy way.
What to thy sight seems dark as night,
To him is bright as day.

Rest in the Lord, my soul;
He planned for thee thy life,
Brings fruit from rain, brings good from pain,
And peace and joy from strife.

Rest in the Lord, my soul;
This fretting weakens thee.
Why not be still? Accept his will;
Thou shalt his glory see.
—Maltbie D. Babcock.

Hopes and plans of merely selfish advancement are just so much affliction and sorrow sown for you; the eager ambitions that burn in your hearts and stimulate you to work are but driving you off the road; and from them all you must return to the simplicity of God's servants who care only to please him. It is when we have no aim but this that we find rest.—Marcus Dods.

We may spend what we will; there is still enough to spend upon. . . . There is no end of the riches of Christ, no bottom to the ocean sea of God's mercy.—Thomas Hooker.

O God, in whom alone our hearts have rest, help us to trust thee so sincerely that there may be no veil between us and with that security of faith which never wavers in the changes and trials of our life. Spirit of God, our comforter and guide, in all times of our discouragement take of the things of Christ, and show them unto us. Lord Jesus Christ, our fellow heir and fellow sufferer, our Saviour and our Brother, let the fellowship of thy purpose be our rest of heart and our incentive to a continual good will. Amen.
—Isaac Ogden Rankin.

Real Love for Friends

Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic for Nov. 14-20

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: Winning Our Friends for Christ. John 1:40-51.

Light from the Bible Passage

Finding Christ meant everything to Andrew. He wished his brother to have the same experience. He took three steps to bring this about. He first went out of his way to find his brother. He was anxious enough to do that. Having found him, the second thing he did was to tell him what he knew about Jesus. He was convinced that this was the Christ. The third thing was to bring his brother to Jesus, even though it was probably late in the day. He was not satisfied to have his brother think about Christ. He wished him to see him. That he knew would be convincing. When Philip later met Nathanael his first thought was to tell him the good news that Christ had come. He did not leave him without passing on the invitation to "come and see."

Leads for the Leader

Personal work for Christ comes naturally when we are confident of the personal worth of Christ to ourselves. By our own experience we must be sure that Jesus has something of inestimable worth for our friends. To start this meeting right there should be some very careful and prayerful thoughts regarding this.

Follow out the suggestions given above as to Andrew's way of winning his brother. Is there any other way?

Notice how tactfully and yet effectually Philip met Nathanael's light-minded reply (v. 46). Do we lose out here?

Use the thought of our eagerness to bring our friends to a physician who has brought us out of a severe sickness. Work out the parallel in the case of the Great Physician of Souls.

Thoughts for Members

"Come and see"—that is the best remedy for preconceived opinions.—Bengel.

To God the lost to bring,
To teach the way of life to peace—
It is a Christlike thing.—Bishop How.

The man who finds the Messiah in Christ finds a new man in himself. When Christ finds a man, that makes the man a finder of his fellows.—Robert E. Speer.

Speak, for the love of God,
  Speak, for the love of man;
The words of truth love sends abroad,
  Shall never be in vain.—G. B. Bubrer.

A Moment of Prayer

Lord, speak to me, that I may speak
  In living echoes of thy tone;
As thou hast sought, so let me seek
  Thy erring children, lost and lone.

O teach me, Lord, that I may teach
  The precious things thou dost impart;
And wing my words that they may reach
  The hidden depths of many a heart.
—Amen.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

The Mind of the Worker

What's on the Worker's Mind, by Whiting Williams (Scribners). A clear, vivid, entertaining and instructive account of the author's experiences in an endeavor to get close to the workingmen. He put on overalls and hunted for a job. He labored and lived as an unskilled laborer, first in the steel mills, then in a railroad yard, in an iron mine, in a shipyard. It was a hard, dangerous and plucky undertaking. Most of his trouble was with the foremen. This narrative is largely made up of extracts from his daily record. At the end he gives his conclusions, among them is this: "Better jobs and steadier jobs, less tiring jobs, jobs whose human service is better understood, jobs with a better chance to enjoy the satisfactions of their doing, without these being lessened by a grasping foreman representing an unknown employer: this is what the worker wants more than he wants to sit in the chair of the manager or clip the coupons of the owner."

Recent Fiction

In the Onyx Lobby, by Carolyn Wells (Doran). A mysterious murder case in which Pennywise and Zizi are finally called in to discover the criminals. The story is long-drawn out and not very convincing but the plot is ingenious and the solution is well concealed.

City of Endless Night, by Milo Hastings (Dodd, Mead). The city of Berlin in 2151 and after, a black spot on the map of the world. A concrete fortress city of hundreds of millions of inhabitants, living in layers one above another. The man who tells the story succeeding in penetrating to the heart of the city in disguise. It is a work of vivid imagination and describes the working out of eugenics and other social and scientific German theories.

Johnnie Kelly, by Wilbur S. Boyer (Houghton Mifflin). Red-headed Johnnie Kelly, the New York schoolboy, is a lovable scamp, always in mischief, but never false or mean. He becomes a leader of the school and the story of his career is both amusing and suggestive as a study of schoolboy nature and wise school management.

The Adventurous Lady, by J. C. Snaith (Appleton). Lady Elfrida, a young lady of high social rank but tired of the limitations and conventions of the position, persuades a young governess, whom she meets on a certain journey, to change places with her. Both are going among strangers and each attempts to take the other's part. It is a familiar plot but worked out admirably and holds the interest intently. It is an after-the-war story and quite in the new democratic temper of the time.

Christina of the Young Heart, by Louise B. Clancy (Small, Maynard). "A rich female loafer" is what Christine heard herself called. But that was after adversity had begun to teach her some valuable lessons. Certainly her selfishness was colossal and she deserved the privations which poverty brought to her. It is a pleasant old-fashioned tale in which everything turns out wonderfully well.

The Thread of Flame, by Basil King (Harpers). The story of a young American who has lost the sense of his own identity through shell shock. He wakes from a long sleep on a homeward-bound steamer and with recollection on this point gone, the contrast of his self-conscious but cultured manners and ill-fitting clothes, together with his reserve and evident sense of oppression, gain him the reputation of a man escaping from trouble who is seeking to hide himself. The tale of friends made in the effort to re-establish himself in life, of his struggles and mental and moral growth in contact with the working world is interestingly worked out and gives food for thought.

The Air Pirate, by Ranger Gull (Harcourt, Brace and Howe). The most thrilling mystery story that has recently appeared. It transports us to the time when transatlantic travel is by airplane. But the pirate, also, can fly and suddenly he appears in an airship far excelling every other craft in speed and equipment, and pounces like an eagle on its prey, then disappears. The Commissioner of Air Police, with the aid of Danjuro, a wonderful Japanese, at once starts on the search for the pirates. It's a modern Jules Verne kind of a story, with more thrills for the modern reader.

Scribners From What's on the Worker's Mind

The Author Looking for a Job

Egan, by Holworthy Hall (Dodd, Mead). Egan was a lieutenant in the Aviation Corps. He returned from France to find that business tricksters had robbed him of his wealth and the girl he was as good as engaged to had been won by another man. But Egan was proud, plucky and capable. How he made his way in both business and love makes a good story. This author has written nothing better.

For the Best Life

You Can, But Will You? by Orison Swett Marden. Success Fundamentals, by Orison Swett Marden (Crowell). Two more of the Marden inspirational books on much the same lines. Here are some of the themes of the first book, The Magic Mirror, Facing Life the Right Way, and Victory in Your Face. The second book treats of Health and Success, Efficiency, How to Find Yourself, Salesmanship and the Law of Opulence.

The Strategy of Life, by Arthur Porritt (Revell). Talks to boys and young men, on such themes as Making a Life, Character, Jesus as Hero, Religion in Action, The Marks of a Gentleman, Habits and Vices, Purity and Chivalry, Friendships, etc. As Dr. Jowett says: "It is a healthy and wholesome book."

Scoutmastership, by Sir Robert Baden-Powell (Putnam). An admirable handbook for Scoutmasters on the theory of Scout training. It does not go into details concerning scout craft but deals in separate chapters with the fundamental principles of the organization. Too many scoutmasters are concerned with what the scouts do rather than with what they are and with the business of character building without which the whole affair is deficient if not a practical failure.

The Psychology of Nations, by G. E. Partridge (Macmillan). A study of the philosophy of national life showing how the development of a state of mind determines a nation's character and purposes, for instance, Germany's, and warning against radical and superficial thinking in America.

The Young Man and the Law, by Simeon E. Baldwin (Macmillan). A clear presentation of the arguments for and against the law as a profession for young men, emphasizing its high ideals.

On Religious Themes

Pantheistic Dilemmas, by Henry C. Sheldon (Methodist Book Concern). A volume of essays in philosophy and religion. The themes are associated with important issues in the intellectual and religious world of today. The method is first to give an exposition of the subject, followed by a criticism. There is a study of Henri Bergson's philosophy and of pragmatism, of mysticism and Bahaism and of pantheism. There is an estimate of John Henry Newman and of the doctrinal contributions of the Reformation. Professor Sheldon challenges too the notion of a changing God and the attempts to dispense with a soul. The book shows a many-sided scholar and sharp critic. The many friends and students of Dr. Sheldon will be glad to get these essays. Every minister who tries to keep up with the philosophical thought of the day will welcome the timely discussion.

Jesus' Principles of Living, by Charles Foster Kent and Jeremiah W. Jenks (Scribners). The practical value of Christianity is clearly shown in these studies of the life and teaching of Jesus. It is a timely volume having present-day individual, social, national and world problems continually in mind.

America's Stake in the Far East, by Charles Harvey Fahs (Association Press). A vivid discussion of vital present-day problems in Japan, China, Korea, the Philippines. The first chapter is entitled, "Is Japan Becoming a Menace to the Peace of the World?" and opens with two pages of questions. Then follow ten pages of "Reference Material," selected passages from recent books and magazine articles. Thus each topic is treated. It is a volume crammed full of illuminating information.

The Style and Literary Method of Luke, by Henry J. Cadbury (Harvard University Press). This is Part I, "The Diction of Luke and Acts," and deals with such matters as The Alleged Medical Language of Luke, the Size of His Vocabulary and the Literary Standard of His Vocabulary. Part II, on "Luke's Treatment of His Sources," to be issued later.

Christian Union
Congregational Church
Upper Montclair, N. J.

REV. JAY T. STOCKING, D.D.
PASTOR

MRS. CARRIE G. LELAND
ASSISTANT

October 20th, 1920

Reverend Herman F. Swartz, D.D.
General Secretary Cong'l World Movement
287 Fourth Avenue
New York, N. Y.

My dear Dr. Swartz:

I was much interested in the program of the Congregational World Movement for Missionary Education in the churches as you presented it to our Missionary Council last Sunday afternoon. I was struck by the fact that it is not novel, or revolutionary, but that it contemplates only the adoption of methods that have already commended themselves to our own church.

(1) A permanent Committee on Missions, whose duty it is to map out each year a program for the entire church.
(2) A thorough endeavor on the part of each organization in the church to carry out its proper and well-articulated share of the program.
(3) Systematic publicity through pulpit, calendar, distributed literature and the bulletin board.
(4) The adoption of a budget on the part of the church, and each organization, and thorough use of all intelligent means to reach that budget.
(5) The teaching of the principle of stewardship and the ideal of systematic proportional giving.

This is a thoroughly workable program. It has worked wonderfully well here, as you know. It has resulted in the marked growth of the missionary spirit and in vastly increased giving. In five years the annual gifts to benevolence of this church have increased from $3,500 to $10,000. If our churches will only adopt this program we shall be able to carry on our program of missionary enterprise in a worthy way and our church life will be immensely enriched.

If there is anything of value in this story of our experience in Upper Montclair, you are of course free to use it as you will.

Success to you in the big enterprise!

Sincerely yours,

Jay T. Stocking

JTS/A

The Program of the

Congregational World Movement

for 1921 includes:

1. Missionary Education
2. Stewardship
3. Raising the apportionment of $5,000,000

The program of Missionary Education is now fully launched. The following materials are available:

For Young People (17 to 21 years):
"Masoud the Bedouin" (Foreign), cloth,	$1.50
"Saving the Neighborhood" (Home), paper,	.50
For Intermediate Grades (13 to 16 years):
"Shepherd of Aintab" (Foreign, may also be used by Young People), paper,	.50
Frank Higgins' "Trail Blazer" (Home), paper,	.50
For Elementary Grades (6 to 12 years):
"Fez and Turban Tales" (Foreign), paper,	.50
"Mr. Friend-O'-Man" (Home), paper,	.40

These publications may be secured from the Interchurch World Movement, 45 West 18th Street, New York, N. Y., or from the Congregational World Movement, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y. The prices named barely cover the expense of publication.

A Manual of Methods, prepared by Dr. Herbert W. Gates of the Educational Society, showing how to use this material, may be had upon application to Congregational Education Society, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, or your Regional Director.

$5,000,000 for Missions and Education in 1921

WE CAN IF WE WILL

IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL

DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS

The Power and Authority of Jesus

International Sunday School Lesson for Nov. 14. Matt. 8:5-13; 9:35-38.

This is a study of the practical signs of the authority of Jesus as it was shown in his relations with men and women. The incidents are old; the principles that they illustrate are fresh and valid now.

1. True Faith and Healing Power. First, study the faith of the Capernaum centurion. The power to heal the sick man came from Christ; but the means that laid hold on it and made it effective was faith. It is like the water in a great dam. The power lies there in the dam; but in order that it may be delivered against the turbines and transformed into energy for the machines it must be confined in the sluices and penstocks and be given direction. Faith is this great pipe for the energy of God.

If we pick out the one distinct characteristic of the centurion's faith it appears to be its simple sincerity. He laid down no conditions. He was ready to accept the word of Jesus and trust it wholly. He was a soldier. He knew that an officer's command was valid. He knew that the word of Jesus was enough. Now can we meet this test of faith? Do we believe in Jesus so implicitly and are we ready to trust him so fully that we do not make conditions, but simply yield Christ our obedience and trust because we are sure of his power and authority? How shall we renew our confidence in the right of Christ wholly to command our lives, all we have and all we are?

2. The Scope of the Kingdom. Matt. 9:35, 36 is one of those short passages in the gospels through which we catch a vision of the wonderful heart and personality of Jesus. There are certain aspects of his authority revealed here which reward us for study. The scope of his power is as wide as the needs of men. We sometimes think of Jesus as confining his sympathy and service quite closely to the training of the disciples. But he was equally concerned about the people, of every class and rank and need. One of the great words in the gospels is the multitude. It is what an incisive writer had called "Crowds." Jesus saw the crowd and he loved it. He entered into its suffering and he exerted his power over it. The most fascinating and bewildering and challenging thing is a crowd of people. They were there in great numbers. They were needy and bewildered. They demanded all that he had to give to them and he gave it in fullest measure.

The picture is vivid. The most helpless of all groups of animals is a flock of sheep, lacking the personal care of their shepherd and torn and worried by dogs who are killing them instead of caring for them. Jesus saw this. He felt the utter misery of it. He was sure that he could do something to change it all. We see the crowds. Do they arouse our pity or our contempt? It makes a vast difference with us and with others. There are some men who look at masses of men and either despise them or give up doing anything for them in sheer despair. The glory of the life of Jesus is that he looked at the crowd and not only felt the utmost of sympathy for them but also was sure that he could do something for them. What kind of an impression does your community make upon you? What are you trying to do for your community?

3. The Power of Personal Leadership. Jesus saw the crowd and was deeply moved by the sense of their need. He set himself resolutely to do something for them. What method did he use to help them? Jesus understood the power of personal influence in changing the conditions of the troubled and suffering crowd. So he asked the disciples not only to put themselves personally into the problem but also to pray the Lord for many laborers to be sent into the great harvest field of life to gather the priceless fruit for God.

Here we touch one of the most urgent problems of the church today. We have great resources in the way of material equipment. Never were there finer churches or more physical property for doing the work that the church must do in the community. We are well organized. There are so many organizations and schemes that it is difficult to find the energy to run them. What we need is consecrated personality. We have asked the question at least twice before in the class; but it warrants repetition: How many young men and women have gone out of your church into distinct Christian leadership within the past fifteen years? How many of your church young people are now preparing for some kind of Christian life-work? Has your church any program for recruiting for Christian vocations, so that it is doing something to answer the prayer of Jesus? Have you a relative or intimate friend whom you are trying to influence to train for such a vocation? Let us face the situation and try to improve it.

Ozora S Davis

Chicago Theological Seminary.

The Study of the Bible

VI. Facing Facts About Our Bible

In a passage unsuitable for use in family or in public worship we have an extreme though not uncommon account of Jehovah slaying people for sin. Another interesting account of direct action by Jehovah, which indicates how the Hebrew considered all things that occurred as done directly by God, is found in Joshua 10:11, "Jehovah cast down great stones from heaven upon them" (the enemy).

Jesus tells us that "The Sabbath was made for man," yet in Num. 15:32-36, the writer tells us that Jehovah commanded Moses and the congregation to stone to death a man who picked up sticks upon the Sabbath.

In Joshua, chapters 9 to 12, we have an account of the conquest of Canaan, in which all the cities except three or four were destroyed and all the inhabitants were killed. This is all done under the direct, explicit and oft-repeated command of Jehovah.

Admit that the Canaanites were desperately wicked, can we imagine God as Jesus portrayed him, who loves even his enemies, commanding the destruction of these people, even the children? It is almost as easy to imagine that God commanded the Kaiser and his people to invade and destroy Belgium. Dare we any longer contradict Jesus' teaching about God by teaching that God commanded the children of Israel to destroy the Canaanites?

These accounts in Joshua and those in the first chapters of Judges are so contradictory that we should be careful how we use them as historical material. The summary of Joshua's accomplishments as stated in chapters 11:21-23 and 12 is followed in succeeding chapters by wholly contradictory statements. Peoples whom Joshua is said to have destroyed, leaving not a soul alive, are not only still in existence but so formidable that they can neither be driven out nor exterminated. So far from the land being conquered, it is clear from Judges that Israelite and Canaanite are dwelling in the land together, with the former not at all in a conquering rôle.

> When we must go contrary to the explicit teaching of Jesus if we accept and teach many things in our Bible, with whom shall we go, with Jesus or with the other teachers?
>
> Shall we feel bound to accept moral and religious teaching in documents clearly not wholly historical, just because these are in our Bible, especially when they contradict Jesus' teaching? Such a view of inspiration and of Scriptural authority confuses moral standards, denies Jesus' supremacy and authority and retards the Kingdom of God.

As examples of conflicting statements, note that Debir is utterly destroyed in 10:38, 39, yet Caleb makes war against it in 15:15. Chapter 10:33 tells of the complete annihilation of Gezer, but 16:10 tells us that Gezer could not be conquered. Chapter 12:21, 23 tells the fate of Dor and Taanach, but 17:11, 12 gives a different view.

Note the complete conquest indicated in 21:43, 44, then the question Judges 1:1, "And it came to pass after the death of Joshua, that the children of Israel asked of Jehovah, saying, Who shall go up for us first against the Canaanites to fight against them?" Then follows another account of the conquest of parts of the land which had been conquered before and where all the inhabitants had been destroyed. Jerusalem is taken and burned in 1:8, but verse 21 tells us that they did not drive out the Jebusites. The Canaanites in the hill country and the South and in Hebron, formerly destroyed, have to be conquered again according to verses 9, 10. Verse 34 tells us that the Amorites forced the children of Dan into the hill country. Judges 2:8 tells of Joshua dying again.

Whatever their religious value, it seems clear that portions of these books are not reliable historical documents. Judges, on the whole, doubtless gives us more nearly the actual situation as to the settlement and early life in Canaan. Portions of Joshua are idealized history, as seen through the eyes of a writer living several hundred years later. It is obvious that the late editor has woven together two or more accounts of the conquest without successful effort to reconcile them.

In the face of these contradictory accounts, and in view of the supposed commands of Jehovah, so clearly out of harmony with the spirit and teaching of Jesus, it seems clear that we should no longer permit unwarranted ideas of inspiration to keep us from testing all parts of our Bible by Jesus' ideas and ideals. We should frankly correct these inadequate, lower teachings by his teaching. Children and young people will easily understand this and will readily follow us in always going to our highest source of truth and life.

Jesus gives us full warrant for this attitude when he says, "Ye have heard that it was said, An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, but I say unto you, resist not him that is evil," and again, "Ye have heard that it was said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies." Matt. 5:38, 43, 44. In these passages Jesus refers to statements and sentiments expressed again and again in the Old Testament. For examples see Lev. 24:20, Ps. 137:7-9 and 139:19-22.

The question is, Are we going with Jesus Christ in his teaching that God is a loving Father, with good will toward all, and that we should be like our Father and our Master in good will toward all our fellow men—even our enemies—or are we going to teach views of God's attitude to man and of the attitude God would have us take toward our fellow man which contradict Jesus' teaching and spirit? Surely we must go with Jesus, both because his teaching is higher and because the teaching which contradicts his is in documents many of which are not wholly reliable historically, and which clearly reflect both the science and lower moral ideals of their own time.

The essential spirit and teaching of Jesus are easily ascertained and it is not difficult to test all by his central message. Why not go with Jesus Christ, be wholly Christian, rescue essential Christianity from the millstone of un-Christian teaching, and teach only what is highest and best about God and man and life? To do otherwise is to deny Jesus' supremacy and authority.

Questions or suggestions are welcomed.

F. M. Sheldon.

UNLESS IT'S Duplex RICHMOND, VA. PATENTED DE TRADE MARK IT'S AN IMITATION

From Theatre to Church

ON THE night of December 26, 1811—one hundred and nine years ago—the flower of Virginia's social life gathered at the Richmond Theatre to see "The Bleeding Nun"—a triumph of the stage that winter. Suddenly, the cry, "Fire!" was raised. Women shrieked and rushed for the exits; but already it was a blinding sheet of swirling, crackling flame.

Seventy-two of the victims, including the Governor of Virginia, could not be identified and were buried on the spot. From the ashes of the theatre there rose, as a perpetual memorial, Monumental Church.

Today, Monumental Church is one of the many historic spots in Richmond always visited by tourists. Aside from its historical associations, Monumental Church is distinguished in another way. It was the first church in the world to use the Duplex Envelope System. That was eighteen years ago, but Monumental Church still uses it.

From the plant of the Duplex Envelope Company, at Richmond, millions of envelopes are shipped every year to churches from the Atlantic to the Pacific; from the Gulf of Mexico to the Great Lakes — even to churches in Panama, Alaska, Hawaii, Cuba and Porto Rico.

The Duplex Envelope Co.
Originators of the Duplex Envelope System
Richmond, Virginia

WITH THE CHILDREN

Tales of the Mayflower Children

I. Lost in the Woods

By Pauline Carrington Bouve

"John," called Mistress Billington, "where is the flintlock that stood by the chimney-piece last night? When your father comes in at the noon hour he will be asking for it, and what shall I say?"

"Fret not about the fowling-piece, mother," answered a tall, handsome boy of about fifteen years, who entered the door, a string of fish dangling from his shoulder.

"I have brought in enow fish to feed us for a week if they could but be kept fresh. As it is, you will have to give them to the neighbors, who will be glad enow of them, I warrant. See, they be all cleaned and ready to lay upon the coals. Yet there be folk who call me a lazy lout, though ready to eat the food from my gun and line and trap." And he laughed.

"Aye, I know well the truth of what you say," said Mistress Billington, with a smile and a tear that came close together. "There be some degree of truth in what they say, also. But you have not answered me concerning the fowling-piece."

"Well, mother, an' you must know, I loaned the fowling-piece to the Indian lad Keen Eye, the son of Corbitant's sister, who will soon shoot a bullet as straight as an arrow."

"Corbitant's nephew!" shrilled Ellen Billington. "Foolish boy, this will bring more trouble upon us than ever before! Corbitant is against the Colonists, and this Governor Bradford knows well, though he says naught of the matter."

"Corbitant is jealous of Squanto's friendship with us, mayhap, but what of it? Keen Eye wishes to be like the white people, and moreover he is my friend. Aye, without Keen Eye's help, many's the time we would have gone hungry. It is he who showed me where partridges are to be found, and wild geese and turkeys, and to loan him the fowling-piece was but a small return. I may be a shiftless, roistering, boisterous lad, but I do not forget kindnesses."

"That is well, my son, but already your father has been in trouble with those in authority here, and now if you go hobnobbing with Corbitant's nephew and Corbitant becomes an open enemy of the English, your thoughtlessness will fall heavily upon us." As she spoke, the frail, careworn woman laid her hand on the boy's arm.

"I will try to please you, mother," said John Billington, with more gravity than he was wont to show. "After this day I will go no more with Keen Eye, but I needs must keep my word with him today."

Throwing down the fish and catching up his own gun from a deer's horn rack on the wall, the lad strode from the humble cottage and was soon beyond the limits of the two intersecting streets that ran lengthwise and crosswise through Plymouth Towne. As he passed, the lad glanced proudly up at the guns mounted on the rude fortress back of the village, for already the Mayflower children, youths and maidens, felt a sense of ownership in the work of their fathers. As the sound of hammer and saw, which were being busily plied in the settlement, died away, the sounds of nature became louder and clearer in the sunlit morning stillness. John could hear the snapping of twigs as a squirrel or rabbit scurried away in the underbrush, the twitter of leaf-hid birds, the lapping of unseen waters that mingled with the whisperings of the leaves. Suddenly he stopped and bent forward to listen, for another sound had reached his ears. Putting his fingers to his lips, he whistled a low but clear signal, and almost instantly a slender figure darted out from the forest and stood before him.

"So," said John Billington, "you are here ahead of time. I did not think to see you till the sun shone on the second branch of the oak tree at the edge of the opening, where it strikes just before the bell in the fort clangs the noon hour of rest."

"Keen Eye waits not for the sun to tell him his friend comes," replied the Indian boy. "His ears are as keen to hear the footstep of a friend as his eye is to see the hiding place of an enemy."

"That must be true, I trow, for I have learned to tread as softly as you in your moccasins, though my footgear be rough. Methinks I shall soon be almost as good a hunter as you, though I make but a poor showing with bow and arrow, for all my father's talk of the great archers of old in Merrie England. What think you of the firelock? Have you tried setting a mark to shoot at, as I showed you to do?"

"I did even as you said, and the red flame spat out the ball of lead straight, first into the right, then into the left eye of the skull that Corbitant fastened to the tree."

"Marry, you have outdone me as marksman and archer," said John, good-naturedly, knowing well the Indian boy's love of praise.

"Come, and I will show you the tree with skull on it and the holes made by the talking gun," and Keen Eye pointed into the depths of the forest.

John hesitated. He knew that Keen Eye and his father's people were friendly to the whites, but he remembered his mother's words concerning Corbitant's suspected enmity toward the settlers. Then, too, knowing that she would not wish him to wander so far from the settlement, he was about to say that he could not go, when he caught the contempt in Keen Eye's glance, as he said slowly, "Women and white boys cannot follow long trails. It is best for them to stay at home and cook and gut fish." He held out the gun as he spoke and turned swiftly to go.

John said angrily, "Though I was born in a house and am no savage, yet will I shoot, ride, fight, or tramp, and take no odds with any lad of my age, be he black, white, red, or yellow, so lead the way and I follow, wheresoever it may be."

Keen Eye's piercing gaze was fixed upon John Billington's flushed face, but he did not speak for almost a minute. During the silence it flashed through the white boy's mind that he had done a foolish thing, but English pride kept him from frankly acknowledging his mistake.

"A faint stomach and weak legs make a short trail long," said John, at last. "He who boasts should prove his boastings. Come!" and he plunged into the dark forest. "Prove my boast-

(Continued on next page)

The Comrades' Corner

Dear Comrades:

Still the money comes in for our Lunch Fund to take care of those boys and girls down at Dorchester Academy in Georgia. We certainly are going to have a good showing. Among these is Comrade Frances L. Peck, whose father is a professor in the department of history in Grinnell College in Iowa. She sends sixty cents, adding, "My grandmother gave me a dollar for my birthday. I spent forty cents of it to subscribe for Current Events but I am sending the rest of it to you." I should like to amend her letter by saying that she may be sending it to me but it really is going to Dorchester Academy boys and girls.

There is no use trying to shut off on the queer names. I supposed I would be able to do it. It is easy to get some things started; it is very hard to stop them. Comrade Frances says that her grandmother knew of some people by the name of Shugar, Cakebread, Toothacker and Bump. She says in her town there was a lady by the name of Miss Foote who lived at Mrs. Hands' and boarded at Mrs. Legg's and had a friend Miss Stocking. Now of course being a professor's daughter we shall expect that these are all absolutely true. This reminds me of a man whom I met one summer, who said that his mother's maiden name was Mary Hemply Semply, and that she married for her first husband a man by the name of Mr. Cutter so that her name became Mary Hemply Semply Cutter. This husband died and then she married a man by the name of Foote so that her full name would be Mary Hemply Semply Cutter Foote. Now you will have to take my word for that story.

Mrs. M. A. P. Farrington, of our Capital City of Washington, says that being a child yet, of older growth, perhaps it might be in second childhood: "I am much interested in your Corner and each week on reading the contributions thereto, I feel like talking back." Now I wish that more of our Comrades would talk back. She sends in a nice contribution for the Fund and also a clipping from a Washington newspaper with an article on the odd names in their directory. I certainly will have to give you that at some later date. It is rich.

One of the finest letters I have received is from Comrade Marjorie D. Curtis, of Somers, Ct. I shall quote from her letter later. Just now I wish to say that she would like to correspond with a Comrade "on the western coast and if possible a minister's daughter." I think she means the western coast of the United States, and not of Connecticut.

Richard P. Metcalf, whose father is a doctor in Wakeman, O., is another Comrade who would like to exchange letters. (Do they ever wake boys there?—Mr. A.) He wishes to "know something about the insects and birds of the southern states from Florida to Texas." "I might exchange insect specimens with somebody down there."

Applications are coming in every day from those who wish to be enrolled as Comrades. Send in your name and a two-cent stamp to cover the postage on your certificate. These are not quite ready for distribution, but will be shortly. There is a lot of room in the Corner.

Comradely yours,

Mr Alden

(Continued from preceding page)

ings, marry, I will! No naked savage shall outdo me trudging!" and he began to whistle as he boldly followed the Indian boy, whose moccasined feet made no sound on the mould of moss and dead leaves.

This, however, was easier said than done, and he was mortified to discover that Keen Eye had to stop from time to time to wait for him and that the Indian boy was actually altering his usual pace in order not to outdistance him at once. John had the reputation of being the swiftest of foot among the boys of Plymouth Towne, and his galled pride spurred him to quicken his pace, nor did he slacken it even when Keen Eye motioned him to do so, for he was determined not to be the first to show the signs of weariness and hunger.

On and on went Keen Eye, zig-zagging through the forest, following now a scent, now notches cut into the tree trunks, and again thin lines of gray ashes that had been strewn like silver threads among the brown pine-needles and trailing vines. Here and there a sapling bent forward, or two crossed sticks showed Keen Eye that he was going toward the place he wished to reach. As he recognized each guide-mark that would have been invisible to any except Indian or gypsy eyes, he gave a low grunt of satisfaction.

At last he came to an opening. "White boy tired?" he asked, stopping short.

"Keen Eye tired?" asked John.

The two boys gazed steadily into each other's eyes, and the answering flash from each was a challenge sent and accepted. The young Indian brave and the English boy understood each other perfectly. This was to be a trial of strength and endurance between the red race and the white race. As John Billington looked about him, he realized that he was a great distance from the Plymouth settlement and in a dense forest infested with wild creatures, but the sturdy courage of English blood was in him and he was determined that he would prove that he was no coward.

"I will go as far as you go," he said proudly. As he spoke, an arrow whizzed through the air between the two boys and was buried in the heart of a giant oak within two feet of them. They turned sharply as a tall, fierce-looking Indian parted the thick undergrowth and stood before them.

"It is Corbitant, my mother's brother," explained Keen Eye. "Will the white boy bear the test of the Sackima?" asked Corbitant, looking from one boy to the other. "To be taken blindfolded deep into the forest and with bow and arrows, hatchet and knife, with which to get food, be left there till the chief sends warriors to bring him to the village," explained Keen Eye.

As John Billington hesitated, Corbitant's thin lips curled scornfully. "The white boy is afraid," he said. "Keen Eye will show him the trail back to the white men's village." Stung by the hint of cowardice, John Billington straightened himself proudly. "I will stand this test," he said, "and will, please God, get back to my own people before your Sackima—whoever or whatever that may be—sends me aid. So blindfold my eyes and lead me whither you will."

"It is well," said Corbitant, with a grunt, as with a swift, sudden movement he drew a leather bandage across the white boy's eyes, and, taking him by the hand, started off at as rapid a pace as the trail admitted. Keen Eye followed, making strange gutteral sounds which seemed to John to express a mingling of pride, dissatisfaction, and protest.

Corbitant did not utter a word in English, but merely grunted now and then as he hurried the weary boy on into the forest. A hundred thoughts rushed through John's mind as he stumbled along, realizing his own rashness. Where would this fierce chief, who had no liking for the English settlers, leave him? How would he ever find the familiar trail back to Plymouth Towne? What would Master Bradford say about his foolhardiness? And above all, how grieved and frightened his mother would be!

His guide put an end to his unpleasant reflections by coming to a sudden halt. Slipping the bandage from John's eyes and putting a bow and quiver of arrows, an Indian hatchet and knife beside him, Corbitant said, "Now the white boy can prove his boast. Come!" and laying his hand upon Keen Eye's shoulder, turned him about and strode away. In a few minutes their figures were lost in the shadows of the trees, and John Billington was alone in the heart of a dense, unfamiliar forest!

(To be continued)

Copyright, 1920, by Congregational Publishing Society

WANTED — CHAUTAUQUA REPRESENTATIVES

Professional men and women or those who have had experience in club or organization work are wanted as field organizers of Chautauquas, booking our programs of Americanization lectures and high-class concerts in a nation-wide campaign. Good compensation. Short term or continuous. Opportunity for those with talent, who make success booking during the autumn to prepare for lectureships and directorships for 1921.

A career in the Chautauqua field awaits you if you can qualify for service with this national institution of recognized merit.

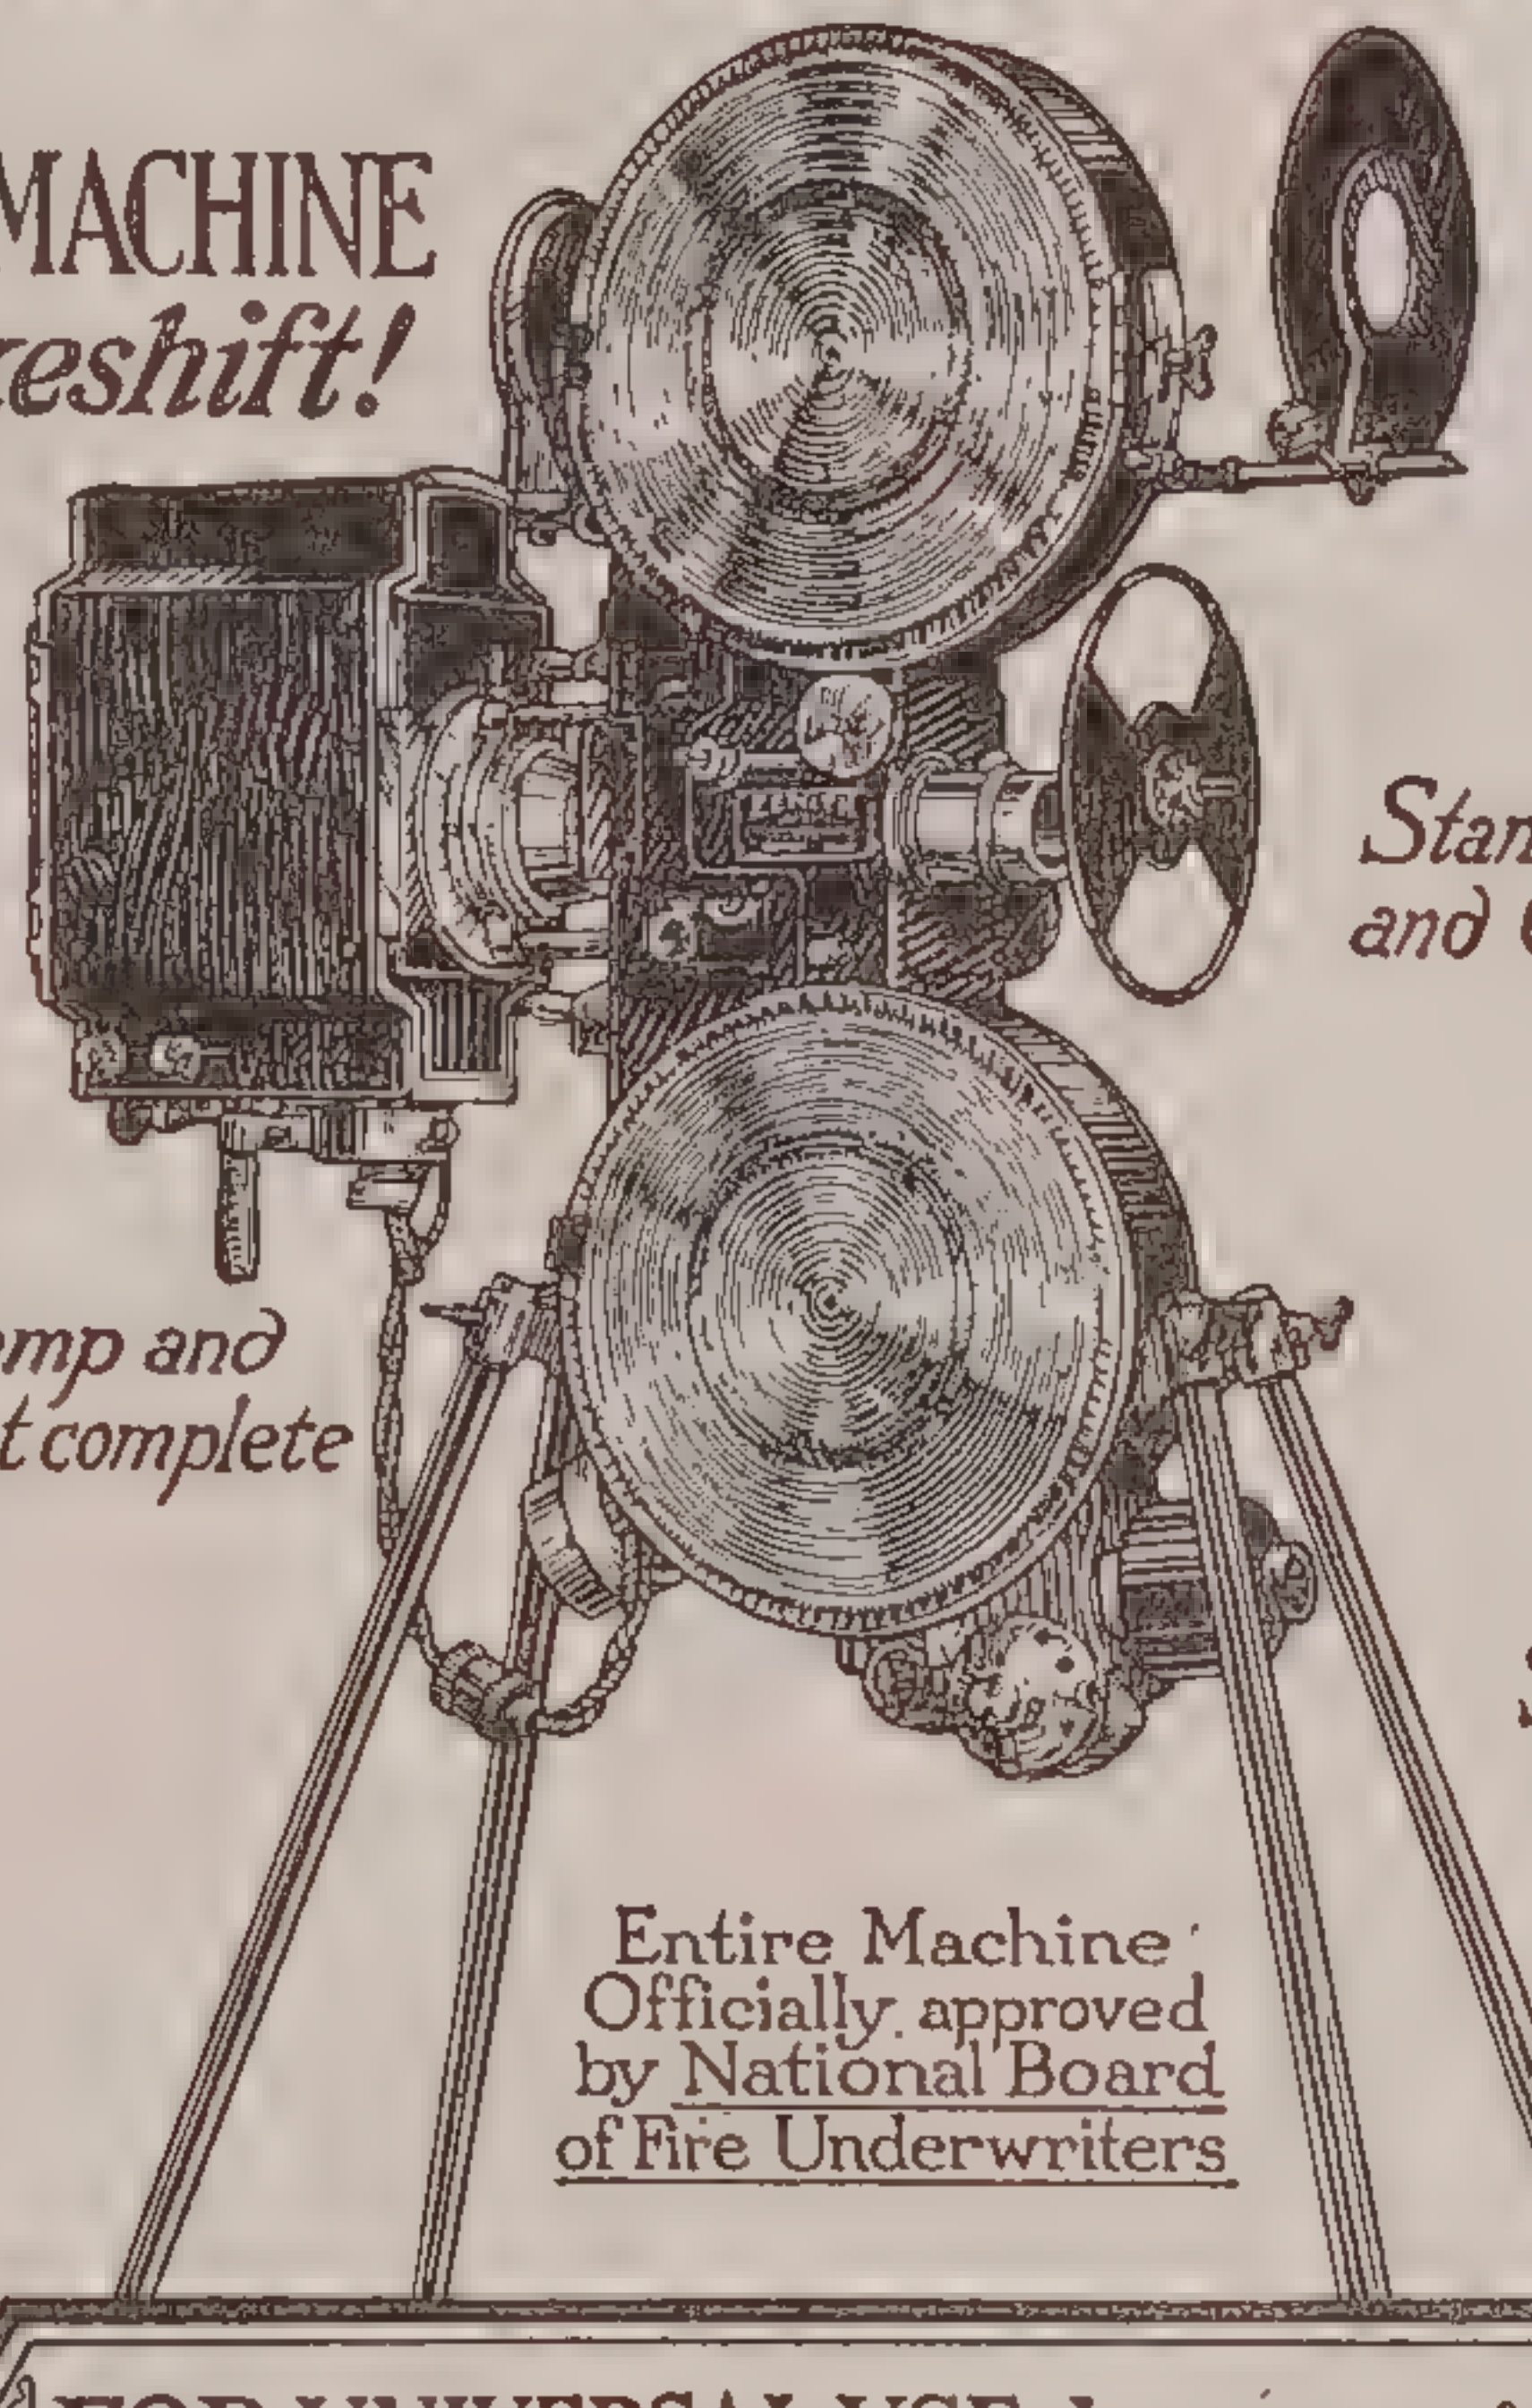
Write for information

The Radcliffe Chautauqua System

W. L. RADCLIFFE, Prop. & Mgr.
Washington, D. C.

The "ZENITH PORTABLE"
MOTION-PICTURE PROJECTOR

A STANDARD MACHINE -not a makeshift!
A novice can operate with absolute safety



Entire Machine Officially approved by National Board of Fire Underwriters

Standard Geneva Star and Cams and Gundlach-Manhattan Lenses

Incandescent Mazda Lamp and Lamphouse Equipment complete

Sold at one half the cost of any other Standard equipment

FOR UNIVERSAL USE because it's SAFE-SIMPLE-SOUND-SURE!

The "ZENITH PORTABLE" has universal motor; alternating or direct current; high or low voltage; stereopticon attachment.

Each part and every machine is honestly built and fully guaranteed.
The "ZENITH" meets every Projector requirement in the World!

Terms if necessary

A few good Dealer and Distributor territories still open

COUPON

Fitzpatrick & McElroy, Dept. Z-24 202 S. State St., Chicago
Gentlemen: Answering your "Zenith Portable" Projector advertisement, I reply:
☐ Yes. ☐ No. Do you need a projector?
☐ Yes. ☐ No. Have you a projector?
☐ Yes. ☐ No. Are you satisfied with your present projector?
☐ Yes. ☐ No. Can we be of any service to you in either motion-pictures or projectors? ....
Name ....
Vocation ....
Street ....
City .... State ....

Fitzpatrick & McElroy
SOLE REPRESENTATIVES
of the
Ford Motion-picture Laboratories
and the
"ZENITH PORTABLE" PROJECTOR
202 South State Street Chicago

IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE

North Dakota Conference

The Pilgrim Tercentenary was celebrated at the meeting of the North Dakota Conference in two notable evening sessions in which Rev. R. A. Beard, pastor of First, Fargo, spoke on "The Pilgrim Tercentenary in the Light of the International Council," and Prof. A. W. Vernon of Carleton College—contrasting the Pilgrims and the Puritans and their contributions to our times—spoke on "Bradford and Winthrop after 300 Years."

President Davis of Chicago Seminary in a conference on "How Shall We Provide Adequate Leadership for Our Churches?" revealed a serious lack of ministers and a falling away from our former high standard of preparation; and in an address on "The Supremacy of Preaching," in which he urged, in place of a random selection of themes, a definite program of purposeful preaching, made a deep impression on the Conference.

The absence of lay delegates was as notable as the large attendance of pastors. The plan in operation for the equalization of traveling expenses provided for the payment of the railroad fares of the delegates of contributing churches. In spite of severe losses from the leadership of the state, and the occasional striking in the sessions of the Conference of a note of discouragement at the general outlook, the emphasis of the Conference upon the Gospel as supreme over the world's needs prevailed, and gave confirmation to the resolution and hope of all.

E. E. K.

The mark of a book written to meet a need

BOOKS WITH PURPOSE

The Church and Industrial Reconstruction

Prepared under the direction of "The Committee on the War and the Religious Outlook"

No problem which the Church faces today is more challenging than its relation to modern industry. The book takes its point of departure definitely from the Christian religion and undertakes to discover what would be demanded by its thorough-going application to the industrial problems of today. Cloth, $2.00.

What Is the Christian View of Work and Wealth?

A "Problem Discussion" Series Book

As in the other books of this series, each chapter in the present volume presents a series of questions followed by up-to-date material representing various viewpoints, given without comment. The concluding devotional section will help to keep discussion on the highest possible plane. Paper, 85 cents.

Community Programs for Co-operating Churches

ROY B. GUILD, Editor

The reports of nine Commissions which met in Cleveland, Ohio, June 1-3, 1920, to deliberate upon a working program of co-operative effort among the churches. Cloth, $1.90.

Jesus the Master Teacher

HERMAN HARRELL HORNE

A new and stimulating way to study the life of Jesus. Arranged in outline question form to lead into discussion on how to handle the teaching aspects of Jesus' work. Cloth, $2.00.

How Jesus Met Life Questions

HARRISON S. ELLIOTT

A "Problem Discussion" Series Book

Can be used for a systematic study of the life of Jesus, or topically for the discussion of present-day questions, with the help of the life of Jesus in their solution, Moffatt's translation of the New Testament is used for the Scripture passages. Cloth, 90 cents.

Jesus and His Cause

A. BRUCE CURRY, Jr.

A "Problem Discussion" Series Book

The Gospel by Mark, from the problem viewpoint. Outstanding problems are studied through questions which bring out the Scripture principles and apply them to present-day issues. Cloth, 75 cents.

At your Bookstore, or from us

ASSOCIATION PRESS

347 Madison Ave., New York

Publication Dept., International Comm., Y. M. C. A.

Secretary of Building Society

Rev. G. T. McCollum, who has just taken up his work as Secretary of the Church Building Society for the Chicago District, had his training at Berea College and Pacific Seminary. He served churches in California in his early ministry and then came to Illinois where he was pastor at Bunker Hill, Dundee and Marseilles. He came to the Superintendency of Illinois at the time when the Home Missionary Society was being made over into the State Conference and the conditions incident to the reorganization were somewhat discouraging. The state was especially slack in financing its home missionary work. Under the quiet, conservative leadership of Dr. McCollum the finances have been put upon a sound basis, the endowment funds largely increased, and the work of the state well organized.

Dr. McCollum's relationship to the ministers and to the rank and file of the churches has been most cordial and brotherly and the churches have responded to his leadership in every way. The work of the C. B. S. in the Chicago District under the leadership of the late Dr. J. P. Sanderson grew rapidly in financial support and in aid given to the churches in planning church buildings so that Dr. McCollum enters a work that is going forward strongly. He will bring to the new task the sound, constructive planning which he gave to the old.

Pilgrim Sermon Topics

In response to our recent request for topics of sermons on the Pilgrims we have received the following lists. Other lists were published in the issue of Oct. 21.

THE PILGRIM LEADERS

(Rev. Newman Matthew, West Parish Church, Andover, Mass.)

John Robinson, the Pilgrim Pastor.
William Brewster, the Ruling Elder.
John Carver, the First Governor.
Robert Cushman, Special Agent.
Samuel Fuller, the Physician.
Edward Winslow, Special Agent and Governor.
Myles Standish, the Captain.
William Bradford, Governor and Historian of the Colony.
The Mayflower Women.

PILGRIM DEEDS AND DOCTRINES

(Rev. C. O. Grieshaber, South Church, Grand Rapids, Mich.)

The Pilgrims' God.
The Pilgrims' Conscience.
The Pilgrims' Liberty.
The Pilgrims' Family.
The Pilgrims' Thanksgiving.
The Pilgrims' Sabbath.
The Pilgrims' Sacraments.
The Pilgrims' Bible.
The Pilgrims' Education.
The Pilgrims' Christmas.

From East to West

MASSACHUSETTS

Rev. B. S. Gilman Victim of Accident

The church in Gardner was shocked Oct. 20 by the instant death of Rev. B. S. Gilman, its pastor for 23 years up to last spring. Since that time Mr. Gilman has been working assidu-

Farmers of New England

Do you want a family
Do you want a man
Do you want a schoolboy to work for you?

Inquiries for work are coming to this office every little while. It is possible we may be able to bring together the person and the job.

No results are guaranteed, but if you will forward definite requests of what you want, rate of pay, school opportunities, etc., we may be able to help in getting you what you want.

Of course there will be no charge by us for this service.

CITY MISSIONARY SOCIETY
14 Beacon Street, Boston
FLETCHER D. PARKER, Secretary.

CHRISTMAS
HALL - MACK CO'S
CANTATAS
FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG PEOPLE

FREE Returnable samples to interested persons.

Tell us, on a postal, your needs for Christmas Entertainment and let us send you examination copies. Do it now.

Hall-Mack Co.
Adam Geibel Co. } 1018-1020 Arch St.. Phila., Pa.

Walker's the Best Concordance

Over 50,000 more references than any other low priced concordance to the Bible. 980 pages. Cloth $3.00. ½ leather $3.75. Postage 20 cents.

14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St Chicago

ously on his farm in Westminster, and it was while he was sitting in his automobile delivery truck in Gardner that a heart attack loosened his grip on the wheel. He was thrown out and struck a tree.

Mr. Gilman was born in Stockbridge, Vt., May 15, 1864, was the valedictorian of his Dartmouth class in 1891 and then was graduated with high honors from Andover Seminary, receiving a fellowship which admitted him to Berlin University for two years. Gardner was his only pastorate and in both church and town he was highly esteemed for his intellectual ability, his sterling character and his friendly spirit. He leaves a wife and three daughters, one of whom is in Mt. Holyoke College. The funeral service was conducted in the church, with Rev. F. J. Fairbanks officiating, assisted by Rev. A. K. Gleason and Rev. C. A. McKay, who has just succeeded Mr. Gilman in the pastorate of the Gardner church.

Mr. Patch Becomes Pastor of Arlington

The acceptance of Rev. D. I. Patch's call to Orthodox, Arlington, is a source of gratification to the members of this church which has been pastorless since the rssignation of Dr. Samuel Bushnell last spring. Dr. Bushnell is now pastor emeritus of Orthodox.

Mr. Patch was born in Farmington, N. H., in 1884 and was educated at the Boston Latin School, Bangor Seminary, Harvard College and Andover Seminary. During his course at Harvard he preached at Newington, N. H., and for the two years following was pastor of Seekonk, Mass., where he was ordained. Then he became pastor of Second, North Beverly, resigning to enter "Y" service during the war and later becoming a chaplain.

During the past year Mr. Patch has conducted successful campaigns for the Pilgrim Fund, the Near East Relief, the Interchurch World Movement and the C. W. M. He was in charge of the Massachusetts Section of the "Congregational World" at the International Council. His call to the Arlington Church, which is in a growing residential suburb of Boston, comes as an enlarging opportunity.

Salary Roll of Honor

Churches Which Have Recently Raised Their Pastors' Salaries

Previously reported, 1,320

1321. Santa Barbara, Cal., First, $1,300.
1322. Essex, Ct., $100 (2d).
1323. Montpelier, Vt., $300.
1324. Thomaston, Ct., $800.
1325. Gardner, Mass., First, $1,500.
1326. Derby, Vt., $200 (2d).
1327. Wilton, Me., $600 (2d).
1328. Denver, Col., Ohio Ave., $900.
1329. Griswold, Ct., $150.
1330. Argyle, Minn.
1331. Madison, Ct.
1332. Arlington, Mass., $1,000.

Helpful Midweek Meetings at Shrewsbury

For several weeks the subjects for the midweek service of First, Shrewsbury, Rev. F. D. Thayer, pastor, are being based upon Professor Kent's handbook, "Jesus' Principles of Living." The aim of this volume is to interpret the teachings of Jesus frankly, simply and constructively in the light of modern conditions, and to make clear the trail that Jesus blazed by which each man may find the larger life in union and cooperation with the eternal Source of all life. This course is proving helpful.

Ordain Miss Brown at New Boston

Woman is truly in this day entering upon a larger field of activity. The South Berkshire Association departed from time-honored custom and on Oct. 5 ordained to the ministry Miss Charlotte Brown, pastor of the church in New Boston. Miss Brown presented a paper which was clear, comprehensive and concise. The Council after deliberation voted to proceed to the service of ordination.

Rev. B. N. Wyman of Lenox was moderator, Mr. Charles Platt of Great Barrington, scribe. The Scripture was read by Rev. James Richmond of Otis, prayer was offered by Rev. M. J. B. Fuller of New Marlboro, the right hand of fellowship was extended by Rev. A. C. Ferrin of Becket Center, the charge to the church was given by Rev. S. P. Cook of Pittsfield, and the charge to the pastor was delivered by Rev. Grace Edwards of Nepaug, Ct. The sermon was preached by Rev. S. W. Beaven of Lake Ave. Baptist Church, Rochester, N. Y., where Miss Brown was for years assistant. The ordaining prayer was by the moderator, assisted by all the ministers present.

The members of the South Berkshire Association feel that a long step forward has been taken in this service, for it is in this way that the church is to provide an adequate ministry for the isolated and enfeebled churches of the Berkshire Hills.

Hope, Springfield, Revises Church Roll

Hope, Springfield, Rev. J. B. Parry, pastor, has just completed, under the direction of Prof. J. T. Bowne of the Y. M. C. A. College a complete revision of its roll. After a lapse of 14 years members removed to other cities have been relocated and attached to churches. Over 300 have been recovered to church life. With a reduction on paper of 350 members the church has increased its missionary contributions from $1,411 at the beginning of the present pastorate to $3,310, taking second place among the Springfield churches in its missionary benevolence. In addition it conducts at its own expense Foster Chapel as a Congregational mission, having had for three years a woman preacher, Mrs. A. J. Treichler. The present indications are that this amount will be exceeded for the year 1920.

The Woman's Guild of Hope is the largest in the city, with more than 500 women actively engaged in the work of the church. The district is divided and groups take care of each member. For 1919 the returns from the Guild work was $2,500 as against $700 in 1915.

During the past summer the Men's Brotherhood of the church, at its own expense, renovated the property and replaced the old sidewalks. Its Executive Committee has just voted to recommend taking responsibility for the salary of the pastor's assistant. The church has generously increased the salary of the pastor $500.

G. E. M.

CONNECTICUT

Change of Pastors at Wilton

Rev. F. M. Hollister, who has been pastor of Wilton for five years, has become Principal of Saluda Seminary, Saluda, N. C., under the A. M. A. Mrs. Hollister teaches in the school.

Mr. Hollister has been succeeded in the pastorate of Wilton by Rev. F. R. Bunker, a mis-

RODEHEAVER'S
VICTORY SONGS
A New Gospel Song Book, Prepared by—
HOMER RODEHEAVER
A great advance in the world of church music. Contains 70 new songs and 259 of the old favorites. The selection meets with hearty approval from song leaders who have seen the new book.
Contains 288 pages of music. Single copies: Manila, 35c; Limp, 40c; Cloth, 50c; Postpaid. In quantities, not prepaid: Manila, 30c; Limp 35c; Cloth, 45c. ——— ☞ Same prices for: AWAKENING SONGS; SONGS OF SERVICE.
ASK FOR OUR COMPLETE CATALOG.
THE RODEHEAVER COMPANY
1090 Monon Bldg., Dpt. C Chicago
814 Walnut St. Philadelphia

A Book for Business Men and Women
Roger W. Babson's
FORWARD-LOOKING WORK
Fundamentals of Prosperity
WHAT THEY ARE---WHENCE THEY COME
A book much needed to-day, by the President of Babson's Statistical Organization, on "Strengthening the Foundation." WORTH MANY TIMES ITS COST!
BOARDS, NET $1.00
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

BOOK OF PRAYERS
Complete Manual of several hundred terse, pointed, appropriate Prayers for use in Church, Prayer Meetings, Young People's Society, Sunday Schools, Missionary, Grace and Sentence Prayers. Question of How and What to Pray in Public fully covered by model, suggestive and devout Prayers. Vest Pocket size, 128 pages. Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid, stamps taken. Agents Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

Margaret Slattery's Books
The Charm of the Impossible, 50c.
The Girl in Her Teens, 85c.
The American Girl and Her Community, $1.35
The Girls' Book of Prayer, 35c. cloth 60c.
The Girl and Her Religion, $1.25.
Just Over the Hill, $1.25.
The Costly Star, 60c.
Add 10% for postage
14 Beacon St. Boston
THE PILGRIM PRESS
19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

The Ambassador

A New Publication
Containing Sermons by Joseph Fort Newton
Minister of the Church of
The Divine Paternity
New York
Formerly Minister of
The City Temple
London
"A witness of the Unseen for those who seek where they do not see."
Published Monthly
50 CENTS PER YEAR
THE MURRAY PRESS
359 Boylston Street, Boston, Massachusetts

sionary of the American Board in South Africa for 30 years. Mr. Bunker, in addition to his pastorate, is working during the week, with the approval of the church, on problems connected with the Interchurch World Movement, with which he was connected for the year of its existence.

Young People Observe Tercentenary

New Milford, Rev. G. H. Johnson, pastor, recently held the annual meeting of the Ecclesiastical Society. Reports showed all bills paid and a generous balance in the treasury. The pastor's salary was raised $300, the fourth unsolicited increase during the present pastorate. The Every Member Canvass was tried for the first time and reports thus far received far excel the most hopeful prediction. The Junior Endeavor Society, which one of the national officers of the C. E. Movement pronounced the best society in the state, resumes its weekly meetings with a large membership.

The Senior Society of Christian Endeavor has just inaugurated a series of monthly meetings commemorative of the landing of the Pilgrims. The first meeting of the series was held on Sunday evening, Oct. 3, and was entitled "From Scrooby to Plymouth." Two addresses were read on this theme and during the reading tableaux illustrating the scenes depicted were presented by members of the society in Pilgrim costumes. The following tableaux were presented: "Service of Worship in William Brewster's House, Scrooby," "Homesick in Leyden," "Farewell to Old England," "Signing of the Compact in the Mayflower," and "Landing in the New World." The next meeting will take up "The First Year in Plymouth."

Home Religion Books (New)

BOOKS WITH PURPOSE AP

EVERY MORNING

by Robert Cluett

A prayer a day for three months, a prayer in harmony with the Bible reading for that day. Not more than five minutes is needed. The choice of topics is a happy one and the prayers are of a high order. Each page of EVERY MORNING is printed in large size, easily read type. Cloth, $1.50.

DAY BY DAY WITH THE MASTER

by Robert Cluett

In this new book Mr. Cluett has in mind the many earnest boys and girls eager to form helpful habits of daily Bible reading and prayer. Readings and prayers for three months—a topic for each day, relating to important incidents in the life of Christ; a few words of comment; a brief Bible passage; a prayer in simple language. Cloth, $1.50.

At your Bookseller's

ASSOCIATION PRESS

347 Madison Ave., New York

Opens School of Religious Education

First, Deep River, has voted to start a School of Religious Education with sessions every Friday evening. The course of study will be "The History and Literature of the Hebrew People," prepared by Prof. R. W. Rogers of Drew Seminary. The pastor, Rev. H. S. Winship, will conduct the course. Special speakers will be secured from time to time from the Hartford School of Religious Pedagogy and the State Sunday School Association. Other courses will be offered later.

RHODE ISLAND

Central Falls Draws All Races and Creeds

Central Falls, Rev. J. D. Dingwell, pastor, celebrated its 75th anniversary right royally from Oct. 3–5. The historical sermon was delivered by the pastor on Sunday morning and was followed by the dedication of a drinking fountain, in memory of two members of the Sunday school who died in the late war in the service of their country, Mr. Robert Cushman, Jr., and Mr. J. Herbert Hanna.

On Monday evening an anniversary community meeting was held. Patriotic and war-time songs were sung and greetings were brought by representatives of the different races and sects of the community. It was a gathering "on the basis of neighborliness and friendship, with creed, nationality and color ignored." Mr. Dingwell was a director in the committee of national defense, also a member of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce, as well as a chief promoter of the civic theater for men of foreign tongue, and the broad way in which the church had ministered was fully attested by speakers from all these realms of life. The meeting was crowned by a masterly address on "The Joy of Getting Together," by Mr. George W. Coleman of Boston.

The anniversary exercises also included a church fellowship service on Tuesday afternoon and a meeting in the evening, which was addressed by Mr. Philip Whitewell Wilson of the London Times and Dr. R. H. Potter of Hartford, Ct.

Associated with Mr. Dingwell in his work as pastor of Central Falls is Mrs. Dingwell, who is equally popular with the church people and exceptionally efficient.

Church at Central Falls, R. I.

NEW JERSEY

Cedar Grove Exceeds Quota

Union, Cedar Grove, raised nearly $400 for the Congregational World Movement last spring, which exceeded their quota.

The pastor of Union, Rev. A. R. Fisk, has recently resigned, his resignation taking effect the last of October.

ILLINOIS

New Members for Naperville

First, Naperville, Rev. William Aitchison, pastor, at the last communion Sunday received 21 into the church, 15 on confession and six by letter. Five of these were baptized at the service. Only four of the group were below 21 years of age. Every department of the church life is active and the church faces the future with much confidence.

MINNESOTA

Rev. A. D. Stauffacher at Northfield

Rev. A. D. Stauffacher, who has just become pastor of Northfield, had his training at the University of Wisconsin, the Evangelical and Chicago Seminaries. He was a missionary in Japan for four years under the Board of the Evangelical Association. At the end of that time he was compelled to return to this country on account of the ill health of Mrs. Stauffacher.

In the spring of 1917 Mr. Stauffacher came into the Congregational fellowship and had his first pastorate at West Pullman, Chicago. He then served First, Alexandria, Minn., for two years. During thist ime 130 members were received, the salary was doubled and the benevolences quadrupled. The church at Northfield is one of the leading church organizations of our fellowship in the state. Its location so near to Carleton College gives it strategic importance. It has been noted for many years for its all around efficiency under the leadership of Dr. E. B. Dean. Mr. Stauffacher's record indicates that he will bring to the church efficient administration.

OLD SOUTH MEETING HOUSE

Milk and Washington Streets, Boston

Sunday Afternoon FORUM Meetings

During November, December and January, beginning November 7 with S. K. RATCLIFFE of LONDON, speaking on "AMERICA'S MISSION TO MANKIND." NORMAN ANGELL, DR. STEPHEN S. [illegible]SE, MRS. FLORENCE KELLY, OTTO H. KAHN, DR. JOHN LOVEJOY ELLIOTT, and President Emeritus ELIOT of Havard University, are others of the speakers.

Concert at 3.15 Address at 3.45

Questions After the Address

FREE

IOWA

Splendid Growth under Dr. Kirbye

Dr. J. E. Kirbye has resigned the pastorate of Plymouth, Des Moines, and is taking part in the campaign carried on to redeem the government of the state from low ideals and corrupt administration. Dr. Kirbye has been 10 years at Plymouth, going there from Medina, O. During these years 700 members have been received and the membership roll is now the largest in the history of the church. A mortgage of $10,000 upon the church was paid in 1913 and there is now about $14,000 in invested funds. During the war the church under Dr. Kirbye's leadership made a wonderful record for real service. Rev. Isaac Cassell was associated with Dr. Kirbye and with the help of other church leaders they made the building a home place for thousands of soldiers who came in from Camp Dodge.

During his pastorate the congregations have steadily grown so that the attendance upon the morning services now averages nearly double that of former years. The income for current expenses this year is about $18,000; the church subscribed $17,000 to the Pilgrim Fund and $35,000 to the C. W. M. and has increased the regular benevolences. Dr. Kirbye has also been active in the development of many social agencies. He will retain his residence in Des Moines while giving himself to public service and will probably return to the pastorate after a year or two.

KANSAS

Manhattan Issues "Who's Who"

Manhattan has just issued an attractive little pamphlet entitled, "Who's Who" of Congregational Church leadership "On the Hill." It is a list of the faculty members in the Kansas State Agricultural College who are members of the Congregational constituency of the local church. It shows that 43 members of that large faculty are more or less intimately connected with the local Congregational church. This list includes the president of the college, the vice-president, two deans, the heads of six departments, and a large number of professors and associate professors. We doubt if any of our colleges affiliated with the Congregational Church can show a larger number of members on the faculty who are affiliated with the local Congregational church. It is an effective piece of publicity to place in the hands of the incoming students and we congratulate the church which has the wisdom to get out this little handbook.

OKLAHOMA

Good News from Kingfisher

Kingfisher reports its Sunday school as a live wire in the church, it having doubled its membership in less than a year. The leader of the school is Jona Ruth, one of the most efficient and up-to-date superintendents in the state. The Woman's Missionary Society of Kingfisher is increasing in influence and numbers constantly. Prayer meetings are well attended, and the Christian Endeavor is large and the meetings full of interest.

The church recently held a "Decision Day" for the Sunday school and congregation and received into church membership 20 on confession and five by letter. Rev. J. C. Warren is now beginning his fifth year as pastor at a substantial increase in salary.

NORTH DAKOTA

New Edifice at Beulah

A new house of worship is being erected at Beulah under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. J. E. Jones. It is a building that will be both a compliment to him and a great credit to the town.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

Ames, C. E., St. Paul, Minn., to Linden Hills, Minneapolis. Accepts and is at work.

Ayers, W. B., Park and Downs, Quincy, Mass., to Grace, Framingham.

Brown, G. E., Humboldt, S. D., to McLaughlin. Accepts.

Brownlee, F. L., associate, Pilgrim, Cleveland, O., to become Corresponding Secretary of the American Missionary Association. Accepts and is at work.

Bunker, F. R., for 30 years missionary of the American Board in South Africa, to Wilton, Ct. Accepts and is at work.

Burkhardt, J. B., recently of Beresford, S. D., to Sanborn and Eckelson. Accepts and is at work.

Fitch, F. F., Third, Oak Park, Ill., to Rock Falls. Accepts and is at work.

Jenkins, D. T., Hettinger and Reeder, N. D., to Leeds. Accepts and is at work.

McLaren, J. M., Sutton, Mass., to Hadwen Park, Worcester.

Moody, I. E., Sherburne, Minn., to Atlantic, St. Paul. Accepts and is at work.

Morris, G. R., Killdeer, N. D., to Haynes and Petrel. Accepts and is at work.

Orton, R. D., Atlantic, St. Paul, Minn., to St. Louis Park and Edina, Minneapolis. Accepts and is at work.

Packard, H. L., Newcastle, Me., to Limerick. Accepts and is at work.

Parker, A. M., Mystic Side, Everett, Mass., to Bridgewater. Accepts.

Parkhurst, C. H., Presb., New York City, to acting pastorate, Manhattan, N. Y., until June, 1920. Accepts and is at work.

Prior, A. E., Midway, N. D., to Cleveland and Medina. Accepts.

Scribner, F. J., Sherman Boulevard, Milwaukee, Wis., to Janesville. Accepts to begin in December.

Shoesmith, William, Onarga, Ill., to Loda. Accepts and is at work.

Simmons, R. B., Shoreham, Vt., to Middlefield, Mass. Accepts.

Stever, F. A., formerly with University of Minnesota, in Agricultural School, Morris, Minn., to Darlington, Wis. Accepts and is at work.

Stillwell, F. E., Wahpeton, N. D., to Forest Heights, Minneapolis, Minn. Accepts and is at work.

White, F. D., Robbinsdale, Minneapolis, Minn., to Waseca. Accepts.

The Quality Investment

Guaranteed Farm Mortgages

Forty Three Years In Business--- Without Loss to A Client

J·L·Pettyjohn & Co.
OLATHE, KANSAS

TODAY

A Dollar Saved is Two Dollars Earned

8% instead of 4%

Recent years have increased stock equities and recent money rates have depressed stock prices to the bargain point. Old established New England industries we believe are the best investments. May we send you a list, each of which is over 50 years old?

EARNEST E. SMITH & CO.
Specialists in New England Securities
52 Devonshire Street, Boston
Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges

Massachusetts General Hospital

Training School for Nurses. Established 1873. 1,350 Graduates. Prepares its students for advanced positions. For particulars consult Circular of Information. Address

Sally M. Johnson, R. N., Supt. of Nurses.
Boston, Massachusetts.

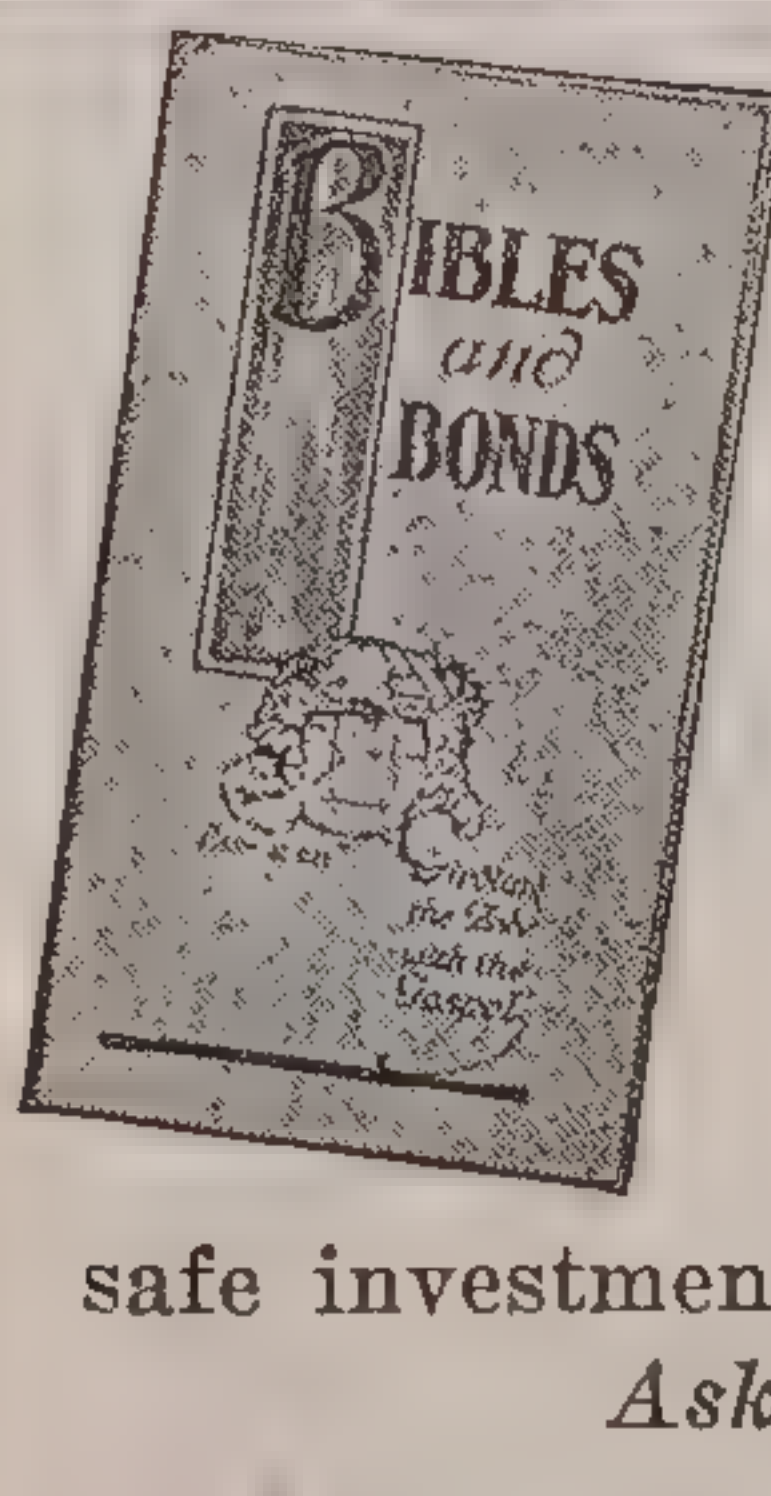
A Sermon By Mail

At the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, New York City, printed copies of the Dr. David James Burrell's sermons are gratuitously distributed at the evening service every Sunday (usually about 35 issues per annum) from October to June, inclusive.

For the convenience of persons wishing to receive the sermons weekly, a mailing list has been established, to which names may be added at any time by the payment of one dollar to cover postage and mailing for one year from date of receipt.

Subscriptions and requests for specimen copies should be sent to

MISS MERCE E. BOYER
1 West Twenty-ninth Street, Room 8, New York City



Write for this Booklet

"Bibles and Bonds" tells the interesting story of a world-wide work and a safe investment yielding as high as 8%.
Ask for Booklet J

American Bible Society
Bible House Astor Place New York

Resignations

BROWN, G. E., Humboldt, S. D.
BROWNLEE, F. L., associate, Pilgrim, Cleveland, O.
FITCH, F. F., Third, Oak Park, Ill.
McALLISTER, F. B., Park, Worcester, Mass.
ORTON, R. D., Atlantic, St. Paul, Minn.
PACKARD, H. L., Newcastle, Me.

In the Name of God, Amen!

1620 • The Pilgrim Tercentenary • 1920

This valuable handbook (which takes its title from the opening words of the Mayflower Compact) is offered to pastors, together with a Dramatic Service for church and community exercises, and booklets for congregational distribution in preparation for

Mayflower Universal Bible Sunday
NOVEMBER 28, 1920

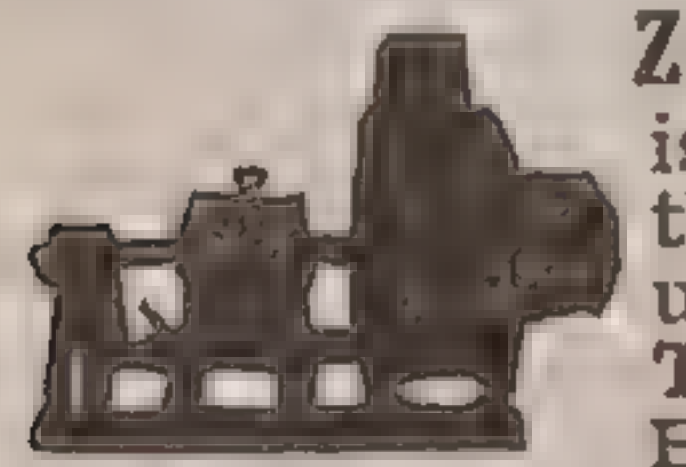
Send request for descriptive circular
AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY
Bible House, Astor Place, New York

CHRISTMAS MUSIC HALL-MACK CO'S FREE
FREE SAMPLES TO SUPT., PASTOR or COM.
of our new Christmas Services
Christmas Helper, No. 8, 15c.
Songs, Exercises, Recitations.
Christmas Story, 25c.
Cantata (easy) for school or chorus.
His Star, 25c. A song story.
In the Garden — By C. AUSTIN MILES.
On Victor No. 18020; Columbia, 78026.
Edison, 80520. Sheet music, 25c at all dealers.
Hall-Mack Co. / Adam Geibel Co. } 1018-20 Arch Street, Phila., Pa.

METHODS of Church School Administration
By HOWARD JAMES GEE
Cloth, $1.00 net
W. C. PEARCE, Internat'l S. S. Ass'n, says: "A rich storehouse of information. Will lead the Sunday-schools forward with mighty strides."
Endorsed by Marion Lawrance, Prof. Athearn, and others
F. H. REVELL CO., 1 8 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

PIPE & REED CHURCH
ESTEY ORGANS
120 BOYLSTON ST.
BOSTON ~ MASS.

PIPE ORGANS
of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.
Electric Organ blowing outfits for organs of any make.
Write, stating which catalog is desired.
Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.



ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
is known all over the country. Four thousand churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio.

BILHORN FOLDING ORGANS THE BEST TELL THE TALE
BEGINNING with STYLE X. We Guarantee
Send for Catalog. Makers of the famous 3 and 5-ply OAK CASES
BILHORN BROTHERS, 136 West Lake St., Chicago Style O

MENEELY BELL CO
TROY, N.Y. AND
198 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

Church Chime Peal BELLS Memorial Bells a Specialty
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY CO., BALTIMORE, MD., U. S. A.

PARKER, A. M., Mystic Side, Everett, Mass.
SCRIBNER, F. J., Sherman Boulevard, Milwaukee, Wis.
SIMMONS, R. B., Shoreham, Vt.
WHARTEN, J. J., Open Door, Minneapolis, Minn.
WHITE, F. D., Robbinsdale, Minneapolis, Minn.
YAEGER, E. J., First, Weymouth Heights, Mass.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
CALIFORNIA
Pasadena, First	20	55
ILLINOIS
Lockport, First	1	6
Naperville	15	21
NEW YORK
Crown Point	1	4
New York, Broadway Tabernacle	2	18
Flatbush	2	12
OKLAHOMA
Jennings	10	10
Kingfisher	20	25

Ordinations

BURNS, V. G., o., Borough Park, Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 22. Sermon by Dr. H. E. Fosdick; other parts by Dr. L. T. Reed, Rev. R. L. Minich and Rev. C. J. Allen.

INGLIS, E. P., o., Pilgrim, Oak Park, Ill., Oct. 19. Sermon by Dr. E. B. Allen; other parts by Rev. Messrs. O. S. Davis, D. D., A. F. Newell, W. E. Barton, D. D., and Mr. F. W. Pringle.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Advertising Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

MRS. ELIZABETH SARGENT CLARK

On Thursday morning, Sept. 30, 1920, while peacefully sleeping, Mrs. Elizabeth Sargent Clark, widow of the late Rev. Nathaniel G. Clark, D. D., the former beloved Foreign Secretary of the American Board, and daughter of the late Rev. Isaac R. Worcester, passed from the earthly to the heavenly world.

Mrs. Clark was in her eighty-fifth year. Her life had been marked by unusual nobility of spirit, unfaltering courage, deep interest in the Kingdom of Christ and devoted service in extending that kingdom. Missionaries of the American Board and the Woman's Board of Missions, those just entering upon their missionary work as well as veterans in the service, will remember with great pleasure their warm welcome at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Clark, where acquaintance soon developed into friendships lasting many years, and into the keenest, most personal interest in them and their work. One of Mrs. Clark's very earnest desires was to further in every way the cause to which her husband devoted his life, and her intelligent, sympathetic interest helped him greatly.

Mrs. Clark was actively interested in founding the School for Girls in Spain, now at Barcelona, and the School for Girls in Turkey, now known as Constantinople College. She was the last surviving charter member of the Woman's Board of Missions and was one of its Vice-Presidents until the time of her death.

One of Mrs. Clark's most marked characteristics, which endeared her to many, was her interest in all sorts and conditions of men and women. It did not matter whether their creed was her creed. Her great heart was large enough for all, and her sympathy and respect for the opinions of others, even when very different from her own, revealed the breadth and depth of her humanity. With malice toward none and charity toward all, she passed her life in doing good. In truth, "her feet trod very near to God."

The writer has a grateful remembrance of that home in which the personal and domestic graces were constantly but all unconsciously revealed, and to the children of that household, the late Mrs. Henry B. Reed, Charles Worcester Clark, and the surviving daughter, Mrs. James W. Rollins, was given an heritage of immeasurable blessing. When, as pastor of the family, at the time of Dr. Clark's passing from this life to a life of even higher service, he called at their home, Mrs. Clark made but one request to be fulfilled at the burial services, that among the passages of Scripture used on

The Congregational Training School For Women
Trains for Christian leadership.
The work of Church Assistant, Director of Religious Education, and Instructor in Week-day Religious Education offers opportunity for the finest and highest type of social service.
One and two year courses. Expenses low.
MISS MARGARET TAYLOR, Dean,
5603 Dorchester Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Chicago Theological Seminary
Is affiliated with the University of Chicago. Seminary instruction is supplemented by the varied and limitless opportunities of the University and the Divinity School. Tuition free.
Trains for { Pulpit and Pastorate / Missionary Work / Community Service / Religious Education
Opportunity is offered to secure the M. A. degree during preparation for the B. D.; also an annual two-year honor fellowship for post-graduate work.
5757 University Ave., Chicago, Illinois.
OZORA S. DAVIS, President.

BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
105th year opens Sept. 29, 1920. For College or non-College men. Courses, regular and elective; leading to diploma or degree; modern, thorough, practical. Expenses low. For Catalogue or information address
Prof. WARREN J. MOULTON, Cor. Sec'y.

OBERLIN GRADUATE SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY
Suburban to the great steel industrial section of Ohio and in a well-equipped educational center thorough scholarship suffers less distraction than in the city.
For information and catalogue address
G. W. FISKE, JR., Dean, Oberlin, Ohio.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
An undenominational training school for
The Ministry / Religious Education
Foreign Missions / Social Service
Curricula high grade and modern. Graduate degrees. University of California privileges. Opportunities for the study of Oriental peoples. Open to men and women of all Christian denominations. For catalogue address
WILLIAM FREDERIC BADE, Dean, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M. A., B. D. and Ph. D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

HARTFORD
W. Douglas Mackenzie, President
Theological Seminary, Dean, M. W. Jacobus
School of Religious Pedagogy, Dean, E. H. Knight
Kennedy School of Missions, Dean, E. W. Capen
Through these associated schools Hartford offers full training for:
1. The Christian ministry.
2. The whole field of religious education.
3. The foreign field.
Each School has its independent faculty and its own institutional life, and together they form one interdenominational institution with the unity of common aim and spirit.

entering the church should be this one, "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory." A verse not only singularly appropriate but conveying a delicate and beautiful acknowledgment of the consecrated life of the venerable secretary.

It was fitting that in the room to which clung the treasured associations and memories of many years, in the beautiful sunlight of a New England October Sabbath, the final service should be conducted by her pastor, Rev. E. H. Byington, assisted by Rev. James L. Barton, D. D., Dr. Clark's honored successor in the Foreign Secretaryship of the American Board, and in the presence of friends and neighbors who filled the house, made dear to all by the memory of the beautiful lives that had been passed there.

On the following day interment was made in the old family lot at Montpelier, Vt.

Events to Come

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, ANNUAL MEETING, Springfield, Mass., Nov. 17-18.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, ANNUAL MEETING, First Church, Montclair, N. J., Nov. 10-12.

FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA, Quadrennial Meeting, Boston, Mass., Dec. 1-6.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Nov. 8, 11 A. M. Subject, Was the Steel Strike Report of the Interchurch a Mistake? Speaker, Rev. Arthur E. Holt.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Nov. 5, 10.30 A. M. Speakers: Miss Minnie K. Hastings, Uduvil, Ceylon; Mrs. C. H. Patton on "Friendly Visits in the Near East," and Rev. Enoch Bell.

RED CROSS SUNDAY, Nov. 14.

State Conferences

CONNECTICUT, Park St. Church, Bridgeport, Nov. 9-10.

KENTUCKY, Evarts, Nov. 27-28.

TENNESSEE, Soddy, Nov. 23-24.

RHODE ISLAND, Saylesville, Nov. 9.

Boston Congregationalism

The Boston Congregational Club held its first meeting of the season Oct. 25. In the absence of the president, Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, Rev. Asa M. Parker presided. A straw vote for President resulted in 159 votes for Harding and 16 for Cox.

The general subject of the meeting was Congregational Interests in Boston. Dr. Doremus Scudder, who has recently become Executive Secretary of the Boston Federation of Churches, spoke on Present Day Tendencies, especially emphasizing and approving united Christian effort and reality in religion.

Rev. Edward D. Gaylord of Pilgrim Church, Dorchester, spoke on "City and Suburb," urging those in the strong suburban churches to contribute more money and leadership to help the city church work. Dr. Herbert W. Magoun of Cambridge, as a layman, speaking on "Where the Laymen Come in," appealed for more practice of practical religion every day in the week by the laymen.

Secretary Fletcher D. Parker of the Boston City Missionary Society, presented a plan to unify the Congregational Missionary agencies of Boston and vicinity. He would unite the City Missionary Society and the Congregational Church Union under a large common board chosen chiefly by the individual churches of Metropolitan Boston and would have the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society withdraw from that territory.

Record Books for Church and Church School

For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Superintendent, the Secretary. Roll Books, Class Books, Collection Envelopes.

ASK FOR CATALOGUES

14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

Dietz Changeable Letter Bulletin Board

has demonstrated to thousands of people that it is a Bulletin Board of Promotion, as it enables the Pastor to announce every public service, thus promoting every church activity. The use of sermonettes attracts attention. Bronze Frame, Steel Letters, Readable 150 feet away.

New Two Pocket Offering Envelopes

The Sundays are numbered and NOT dated. NO LOSS—Good till used. Ready printed with Cong. Church or Cong. S. S. thereon.

A new Treasurer's Loose Leaf Record Book. Ask for samples and lowest prices.

New Catalogue Now Ready. Ask for it.

WILLIAM H. DIETZ

The Church and Sunday School Supply House

20. E. RANDOLPH ST., CHICAGO

Why is it that

Hymns of the Centuries

is used in hundreds of satisfied churches?

Because:

1. All the best of the old favorites are there, set to the right tunes.
2. The new hymns easily sing themselves into the hearts of the people.
3. The words are printed within the staff.
4. Each selection for Responsive Reading occupies one page and one only.

Returnable copy sent free for examination. Do not fail to examine this book if you contemplate a change

A. S. BARNES AND COMPANY, 30 Irving Place, New York

Publishers of Hymn Books since 1851

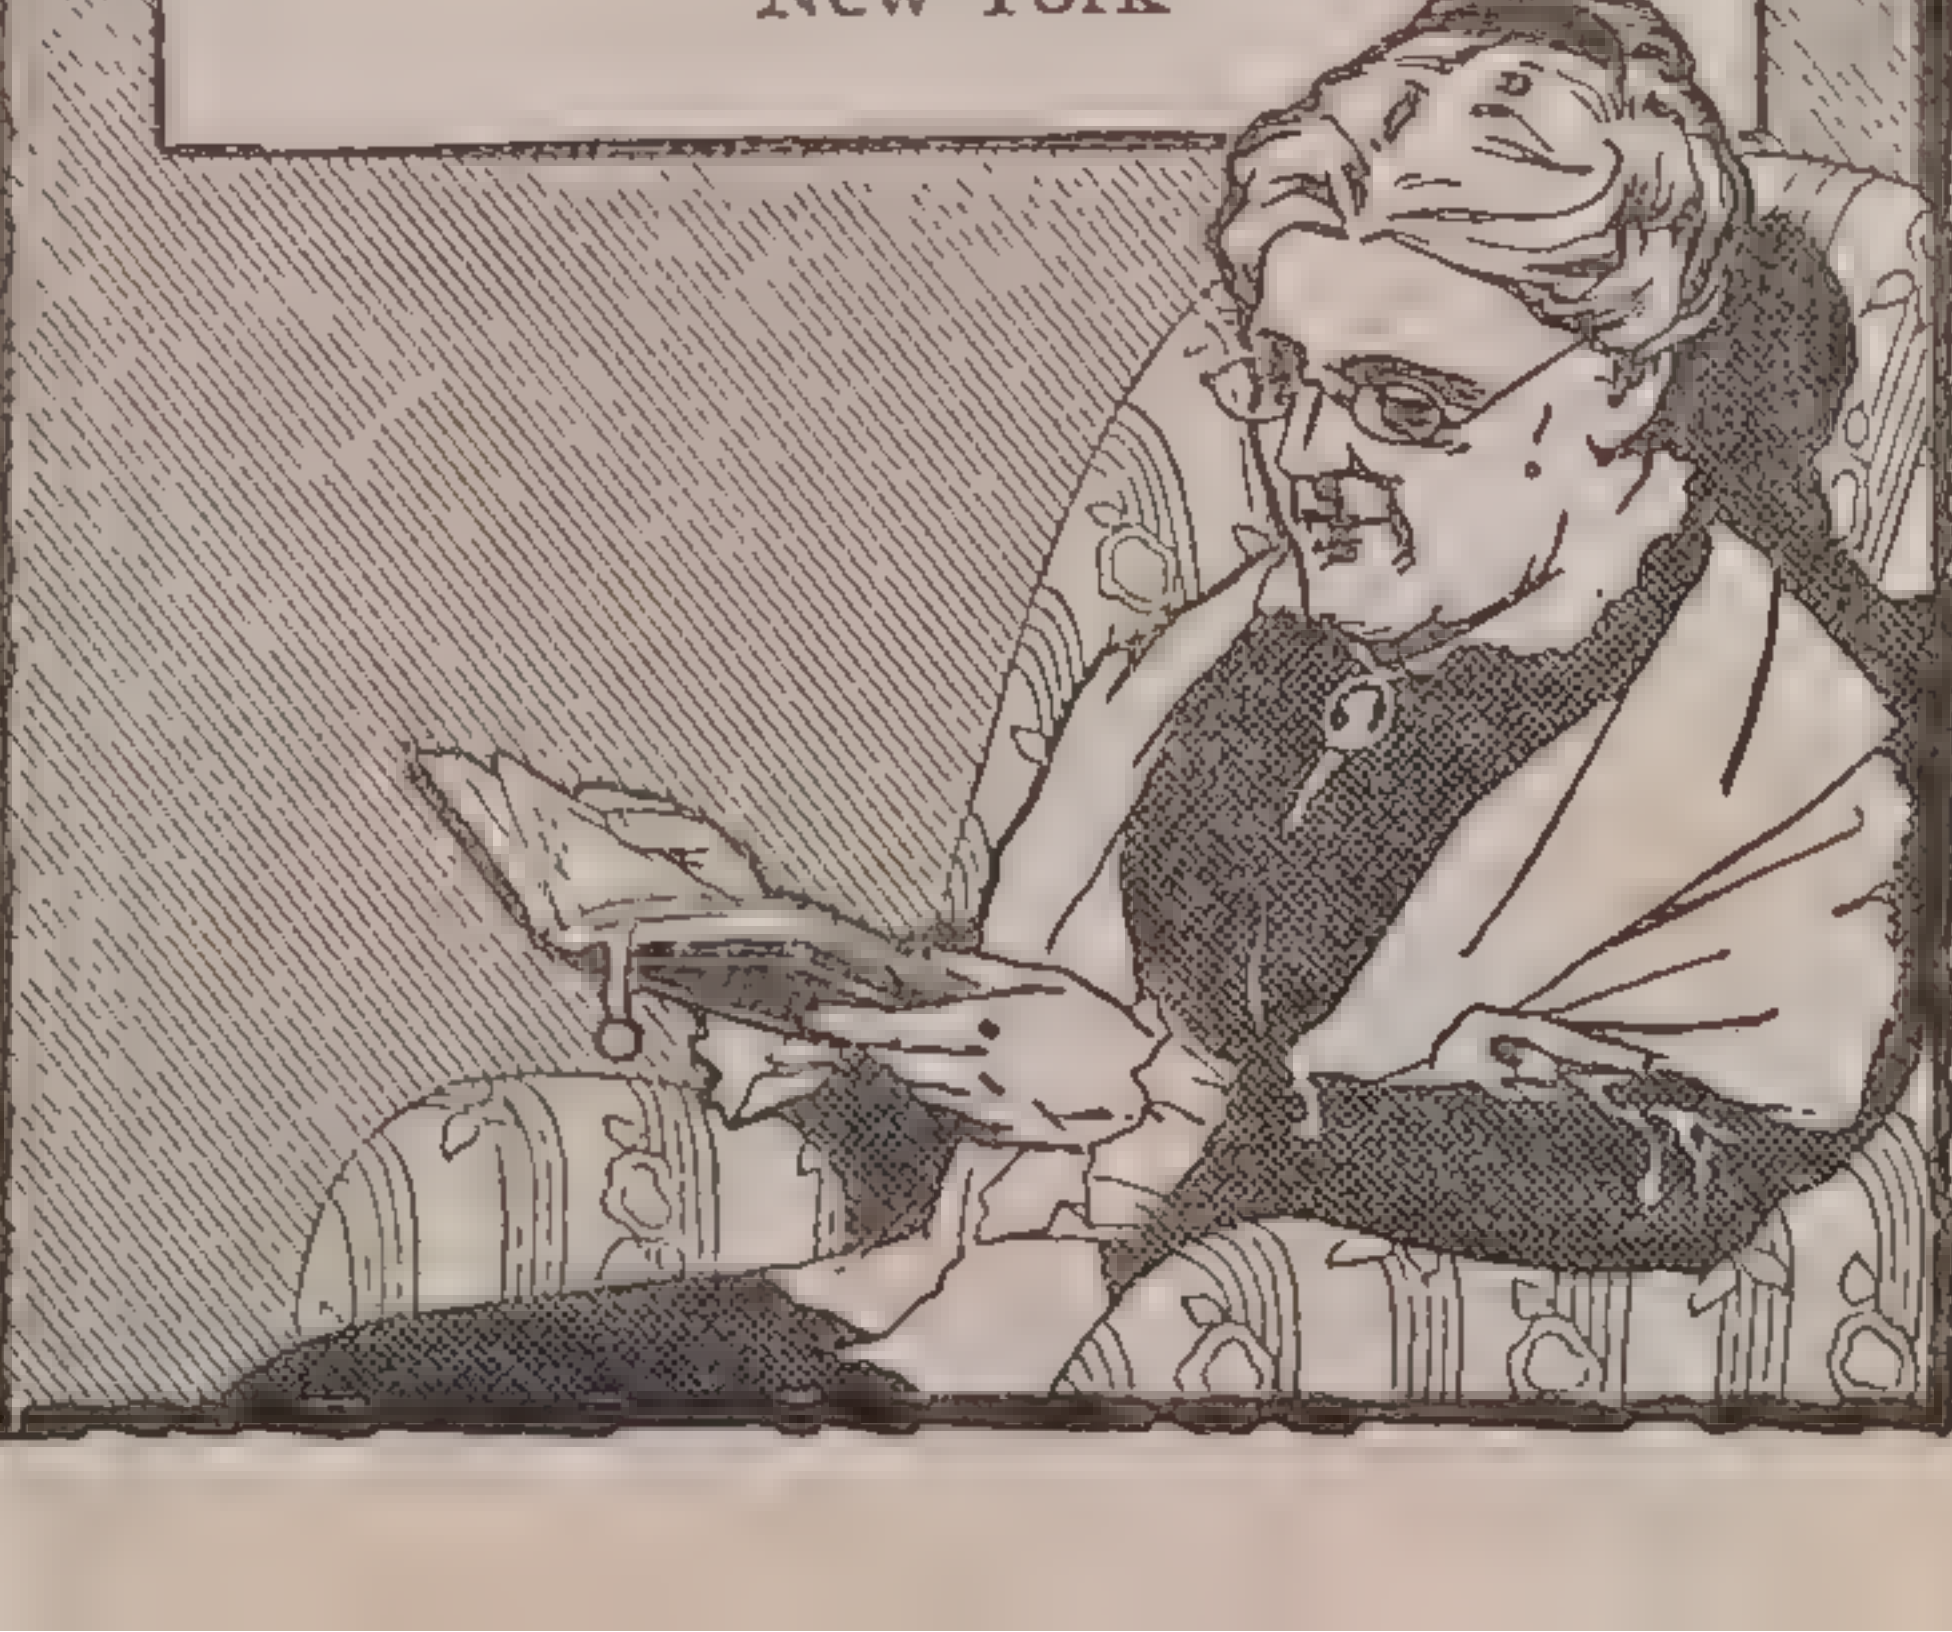
OXFORD LARGE TYPE BIBLES

Older folks, and those with imperfect eyesight, appreciate the ease with which they can read an Oxford Large Type Bible.

The styles on Oxford India Paper are especially desirable, being so easy to read and easy to hold. Many styles to choose from.

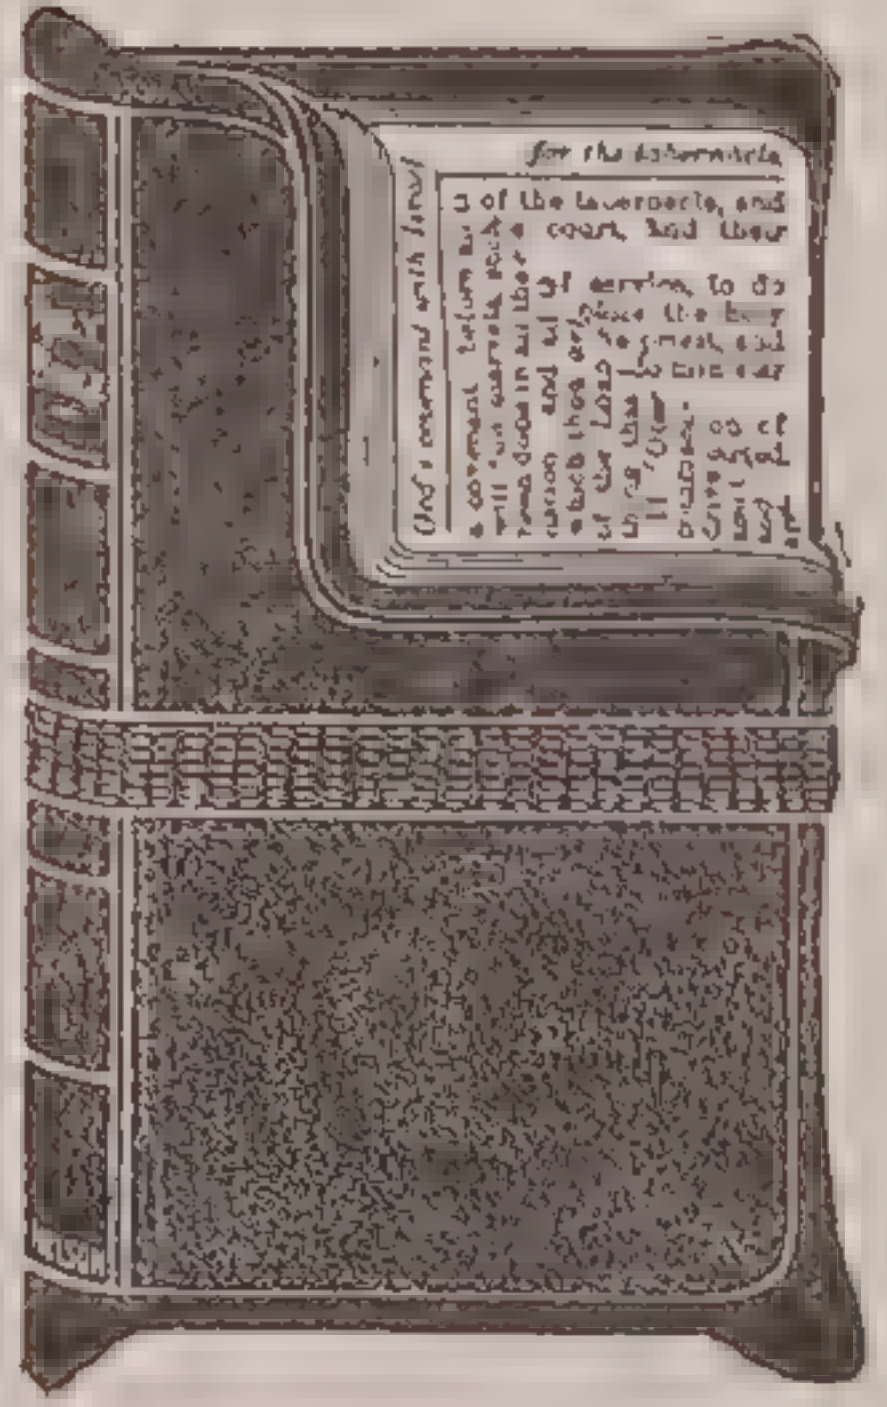
At All Booksellers
Catalog upon request

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
AMERICAN BRANCH
35 West 32d Street
New York



WHERE DID WE GET THE BIBLE?

Talks on the Bible—No. 3



How many books are in the Bible?

Who wrote the books of the Bible?

In what form was the Bible first produced?

In what language was the Old Testament first written?

In what language was the New Testament first written?

All these questions and dozens more of interest to you are answered in the Story of Our Bible. Write today for it to

THOMAS NELSON & SONS

Authorized Publishers
American Standard Bible

383 K FOURTH AVE., NEW YORK CITY

The American Standard Bible text has been adopted by all the leading Colleges, Theological Seminaries, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and Bible Schools in the United States.

The American Standard Bible text is used by over 13,000,000 Sabbath School scholars to study their lessons from.

They realize that they cannot procure a more reliable version of the scriptures.

Boston Ministers Hold Retreat

The eleven weekly ministers' meetings of different denominations of Boston united in a Ministers' Retreat, Monday, Oct. 25. The meeting was held in the Church of the New Jerusalem, a quiet spot in the heart of the city. Hundreds of ministers were in attendance. Dr. E. T. Root of the State Federation of Churches presented Dr. Doremus Scudder, the new executive secretary of the Boston Church Federation. Dr. Scudder said that to the mystical experience of practicing the presence of God, we need to add the mystical experience of practicing the oneness of man. We must learn the art of brotherhood and after the drives for money we must have a drive for righteousness. We need co-operative business for the Lord Jesus Christ.

Dr. Floyd W. Tompkins, rector of Holy Trinity, Philadelphia, spoke of the plan for each church to have a special service of evangelism before Easter. His address was deeply devotional and highly inspiring. It was keenly analytical of the purpose, spirit, and method of the ministry.

Dr. Lemuel C. Barnes, Secretary of the Baptist Home Missionary Society, spoke of the psychological principles behind the work of a pastor. The sphere of action is the will and the nucleating center of the will is attention. The object of our attention is the glory of God in human life of which service to fellow man is the center. Christ is the agent of service and certified testimony, Christlike living is its method.

The speakers declared parish evangelism to be three times more effective than vocational evangelism and called on the churches for a campaign, not to raise money, but to raise the dead, a campaign for lives.

Favorite Poems

Our request for favorite poems has met with a hearty response and we are glad to publish the first of the favorites this week. Mrs. C. E. Latimer, of Lake Forest, Ill., who sends the following poem, writes: "When I was superintendent of the primary department of our Sunday school I had the poem printed on cards and gave the mother of each of my children one of the cards. In a short time I began to receive testimonies of what a blessing it had been in the homes where it went. Several busy mothers told me it was placed on the kitchen shelf over the sink where it could be read while preparing vegetables or washing dishes. Some told of placing it in the corner of a looking-glass where it could be easily read while dressing or combing the hair. Others told of placing it in the Bible where it could be read with the lesson for the day."

Other favorite poems will be printed from week to week. Send to us the poem which has helped you in times of stress and has encouraged you to "carry on" with greater faith and hope. Address Favorite Poem Dept., The Editors, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

For Love's Sake

Sometimes I am tempted to murmur
 That life is flitting away,
With only a round of trifles
 Filling each busy day;
Dusting nooks and corners,
 Making the house look fair,
And patiently taking on me
 The burden of woman's care.

Comforting childish sorrows,
 And charming the childish heart
With the simple song and story,
 Told with a mother's art;
Setting the dear home table,
 And clearing the meal away,
And going on little errands
 In the twilight of the day.

One day is just like another!
 Sewing and piecing well
Little jackets and trousers
 So neatly that none can tell
Where are the seams and joinings—
 Ah! the seamy side of life
Is kept out of sight by the magic
 Of many a mother and wife!

And oft when I am ready to murmur
 That life is flitting away,
With the self-same round of duties
 Filling each busy day,
It comes to my spirit sweetly,
 With the grace of a thought divine:
"You are living, toiling for love's sake,
 And the loving should never repine.

"You are guiding the little footsteps
 In the way they ought to walk;
You are dropping a word for Jesus
 In the midst of your household talk;
Living your life for life's sake
 Till the homely cares grow sweet—
And sacred the self denial
 That is laid at the Master's feet."

Winter Here for Comfort and Economy

You will be astonished and more than pleased with the cheerful, homelike life, the good service, the food, the comfortable rooms, and the pleasant associations at a modern hotel in rural environment, only 100 miles from Boston. Open fires; large sun parlor; library; steam-heated rooms, electrically lighted; outdoor winter sports, as "the weather man permits." Low rates make city housekeeping expensive by comparison. The Northfield is also ideal for holidays, week-ends, and winter vacations. Open all the year.

The Northfield

Write us for terms and illustrated leaflet.

Ambert G. Moody, Mgr. East Northfield, Mass.

CLASSIFIED WANTS

Each week this paper goes into over twenty thousand Congregational homes. It is read by those earnest people who form the very backbone of our denomination. Our classified columns offer exceptional opportunities for those who have something to sell or are looking for something to buy, for positions wanted or to be filled, together with many other wants. Classified rates are four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

CASH IN ADVANCE ONLY

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

PASTORATE WANTED

A pastor well located in the Northwest, whose work is successful, but because of climatic conditions, desires a pastorate farther East and South. He is physically strong; experience in organization; good voice; expository preacher; knows men and life as it is. Address "L. W.," Congregationalist.

PASTOR WANTED

Ministers wanted in North Dakota for self-supporting and missionary fields at living salaries. Write Supt. E. H. Stickney, Fargo, N. D.

HELP WANTED

Good reliable woman, who can cook and take entire charge of house for small family, adults. Someone who will take interest, and who wants comfortable home in country town. Address Box 123, Laurel, Del.

MISCELLANEOUS

Two sisters (working) desire a home with private family within 10c. fare limit of Boston. Both board and room desired. "B. M.," Congregationalist.

Why not earn money making Doll Furniture for Christmas? Easy to make by my improved method. E. B. Lincoln, Hyde Park, Mass.

Wanted—Monday Club Sermons for 1894, 1903, 1906, 1907 and 1908. Pilgrim Press Bookstore, Boston.

Japanese goods consigned for church bazaars. Japanese Art & Novelty Company, 100 Prescott Ave., New York.

The Campaign of the C. W. M.

Encouraging Progress of the Movement

By Rev. James E. McConnell, D. D.
Assistant Secretary

The campaign began with the "Setting Up" Conferences that were held in New York, Sept. 16, and Chicago, Sept. 23. Since that time various Conferences have been called in different parts of the country, and the interest and spirit manifested in these gatherings have been most cordial and encouraging.

The list of Regional Directors published in The Congregationalist of Oct. 7 has been completed by the inclusion of the Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Alaska Territory in the Region of Rev. H. H. Kelsey, D. D., The Region of Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota has been assigned to Rev. William F. English, Jr., the District Secretary for the Interior of the American Board. Rev. John L. Kilbon, the Financial Secretary of the Congregational World Movement, has just been assigned to the Region which includes Ohio, Michigan and West Virginia.

At the New York office an effort is being made to gather and tabulate the figures that are necessary in order to make up the charts showing the benevolent record of each one of our churches for a generation past. The preparation of these charts involves a great amount of labor and something like thirty processes are necessary in making up the percentages involved. If mistakes occur, they will only be such as might be expected under such circumstances.

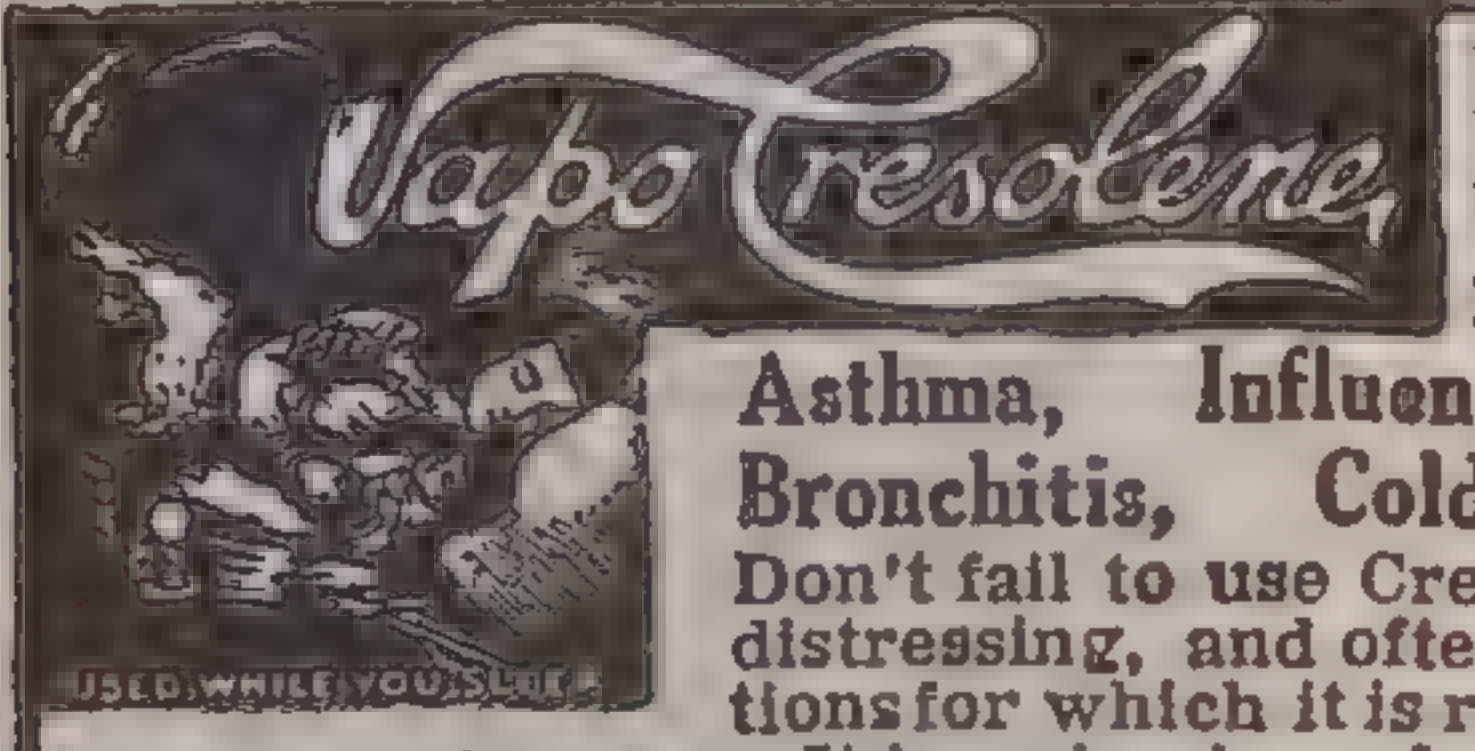
The favorable response of our people generally to the $5,000,000 apportionment may be indicated by the fact that many of the states have signified their acceptance of the amount which was suggested to them. Others, while consenting to assume a less amount than was suggested, have indicated their purpose to press on for the goal named to them. In some instances the acceptance has been qualified, as it must be in all of our Congregational work, by the statement that the churches are the final arbiters with reference to the amount apportioned. Some of the most encouraging items with reference to the suggested apportionment are the following:

The Colored churches have voted, through their representatives at a convention recently held in Atlanta, to raise $25,000 under the 1921 apportionment. This is about one and one-half times the amount which had been suggested as their share. Kansas has apportioned $150,000 among their churches, $42,000 of which will be devoted to causes within the state, and $108,000, if fully raised, will come to the help of missionary and educational work of the denomination. New York State has accepted its full amount of $250,000 and added thereto $25,000 for New York City and up-state missionary work. Wisconsin accepts the amount which has been assigned to that state, $185,000. The Apportionment Committees of Connecticut and of Massachusetts are busy making out their figures upon the basis of the suggested apportionments for those states. Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont are in line to do their full share of the great undertaking.

All along the line there is a disposition, if not to accept the exact amount named, yet to go to the very utmost of endeavor and faith in the effort to reach the desired result.

It would be unauthorized to say that there are not objections and objectors to the plan of so great an advance as is contemplated in our missionary and educational porgram for the coming year. One is reminded of the story regarding the Emperor Napoleon and one of his generals at the time when the great commander told his subordinate to accomplish a certain task. "But, Sire, there are the Alps." "Then there must be no Alps," replied his audacious chief.

We are hoping that our people as a whole may show such a spirit of determination as was evinced by this great general of a former age. The slogan of the founders of our missionary undertaking, which has grown to such vast proportions because of their consecration and enthusiasm, is as pertinent for us of today as it was for them: "We can if we will."



For Whooping Cough, Spasmodic Croup; Asthma, Influenza, Coughs, Bronchitis, Colds, Catarrh.
Don't fail to use Cresolene for the distressing, and often fatal affections for which it is recommended.
Established 1879
It is a simple, safe, effective and drugless treatment.
Vaporized Cresolene stops the paroxysms of Whooping Cough and relieves Spasmodic Croup at once.
In asthma it shortens the attack and insures comfortable repose.
The air carrying the antiseptic vapor inspired with every breath, makes breathing easy, soothes the sore throat, and stops the cough, assuring restful nights.
Cresolene relieves the bronchial complications of Scarlet Fever and Measles and is a valuable aid in the treatment of Diphtheria.
Cresolene's best recommendation is its 40 years of successful use. Send postal for Descriptive Booklet 60
For Sale by Druggists
THE VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt St., New York or Leeming-Miles Building, Montreal, Canada

Don't Wear a Truss
Brooks' Appliance, the modern scientific invention, the wonderful new discovery that relieves rupture, will be sent on trial. No obnoxious springs or pads.
MR. C. E. BROOKS
Brooks' Rupture Appliance
Has automatic Air Cushions. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No lies. Durable, cheap. Sent on trial to prove it. Protected by U. S. patents. Catalog and measure blanks mailed free. Send name and address today.
Brooks Appliance Co., 473 G State St., Marshall, Mich.

CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH
PROMPTLY AND SAFELY RELIEVED BY
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION
ALSO IN
BRONCHITIS, LUMBAGO, RHEUMATISM
W. EDWARDS & SON
London, England
All Druggists or
E. FOUGERA & CO.
90-92 Beekman St. N.Y.

Cuticura Talcum
Fascinatingly Fragrant
Always Healthful
Sample free of Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. V, Malden, Mass. Everywhere 25c.

Offering Envelopes
For all purposes. Prompt Service
Ask For Prices
14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

50 Eggs a Day
Yes — fifty a day. How? Read the letter below.

"'More Eggs' Tonic is a Godsend," writes Mrs. Myrtle Ice, of Boston, Ky. She adds, "I was only getting 12 eggs a day and now I get 50." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," the wonderful egg producer, and you will be amazed and delighted with results.

$1.00 Package FREE

Send the coupon below. Don't send any money. Mr. Reefer will send you two $1.00 packages of "More Eggs." You pay the postman upon delivery only $1.00, the price of just one package, the other package being free. The million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned at any time within 30 days—on request. No risk to you. 400,000 users praise Reefer's "More Eggs."

Poultry Raisers Everywhere Tell Wonderful Results of "More Eggs"

"More Eggs" Paid the Pastor
I can't express in words how much I have been benefited by "More Eggs." I have payed my debts, clothed the children in new dresses, and that is not all—I paid my pastor his dues. I sold 42½ dozen eggs last week, set 4 dozen, ate some, and had 1½ dozen left.
MRS. LENA McBROON, Woodbury, Tenn.

1200 Eggs from 29 Hens
The "More Eggs" Tonic did wonders for me. I had 29 hens when I got the tonic and was getting five or six eggs a day. April 1st I had over 1,200 eggs. I never saw the equal.
EDW. MEKKER, Pontiac, Mich.

160 Hens—1500 Eggs
I have fed two boxes of "More Eggs" to my hens and I think they have broken the egg record. I have 160 White Leghorns and in exactly 21 days I got 125 dozen eggs.
MRS. H. M. PATTON, Waverly, Me.

$200 Worth of Eggs from 44 Hens
I never used "More Eggs" Tonic until last December; then just used one $1.00 package and have sold over $200.00 worth of eggs from forty-four hens. "More Eggs" Tonic did it.
A. G. THODE,
Sterling, Kans., R. No. 2, Box 47.

Send No Money

Don't send any money; just fill in and mail coupon. You will be sent, at once, two $1.00 packages of "MORE EGGS." Pay the postman upon delivery only $1.00, the extra package being FREE. Don't wait—take advantage of this free offer TODAY! Reap the BIG profits "MORE EGGS" will make for you. Have plenty of eggs to sell when the price is highest. Send TODAY—NOW!

E. J. Reefer, Poultry Expert 7968 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.
Dear Mr. Reefer:—I accept your offer. Send me the two $1.00 packages of Reefer's "More Eggs" for which I agree to pay the postman $1.00 when he brings me the two packages. You agree to refund me $1.00 at any time within 30 days, if both of these packages do not prove satisfactory in every way.

Name ....

Address ....

Benevolent Societies

Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D. D., Secretary; Rev. John J. Walker, Associate Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 609 Congregational House, Boston.

Congregational Board of Pastoral Supply, maintained by the Congregational Conferences of the six New England States, offers aid to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies in New England and elsewhere. Congregational House, Boston, Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Secretary, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D. D., Chairman.

Massachusetts Board of Ministerial Aid. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Zeigler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

The Congregational Church Union of Boston and vicinity (Incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel C. Bushnell, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Fred L. Norton, Sec., 919 Tremont Building, Boston.

Women's Organizations

Woman's Board of Missions, 503 Congregational House, Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

Woman's Board of Missions of the Interior, 19 S. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas., Friday Meeting, 10 A. M.

Woman's Board of Missions for the Pacific, 760 Market St., Room 421, San Francisco. Mrs. Ernest A. Evans, President; Mrs. W. W. Ferrier, Treasurer; Miss E. S. Benton, Secretary.

Congregational Woman's Home Missionary Federation, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Mrs. P. S. Suffern, Treas.; Miss Miriam F. Choate, Sec.

Woman's Home Missionary Association (of Massachusetts and Rhode Island), Mrs. Amos L. Hatheway, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec., 607 Congregational House, Boston.

Boston Seaman's Friend Society

Incorporated 1829

306 Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

President, Samuel Usher; Cor. Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton. A Congregational Society devoted to the material, social and moral welfare of seamen of all nations and supported mainly by the New England churches. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Room at Tarpaulin Cove. Bequests should be made payable to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society. Contributions from churches and individuals solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis.

American Seamen's Friend Society

76 Wall St., New York, Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational National and International Seamen's Society.

Maintains a Sailor's Home and Institute, 507 West Street, New York.

Loan Libraries ($25 each) placed on vessels sailing from New York.

Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.

Publishes the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).

Officers: John B. Calvert, D. D., President; George Sidney Webster, D. D., Secretary. Send contributions to Clarence C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 76 Wall Street, New York.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa, Founded 1817.

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps all churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. Carver, Supt.
8 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Connecticut Societies

The Fund for Ministers provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

The Missionary Society of Connecticut, a Constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trusts for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS can reach every principal city and town in the United States through the advertising columns of The Congregationalist and Advance.

For rates and other information write
Kenneth S. Ballou,
Advertising Manager.

National Agencies

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Moderator, Rev. Henry Churchill King, Oberlin, O.
Secretary ad interim, Rev. Edward D. Eaton,
289 Fourth Ave., New York
Assistant Secretary, Truman J. Spencer,
289 Fourth Ave., New York
Treasurer, Frank F. Moore.
287 Fourth Ave., New York

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)
14 Beacon Street, Boston
19 West Jackson Street, Chicago

Albert W. Fell, Business Manager
Harry M. Nelson, Treasurer
Vernon M. Schenck, General Sales Manager
A. A. Hagstrom, Western Manager
Kenneth S. Ballou, Advertising Manager

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Established by the National Council at Grand Rapids, in 1919

Dr. Lucien C. Warner, Chairman
Rev. Herman F. Swartz, General Secretary
Rev. James E. McConnell, Ass't Secretary
Walter E. Bell, Treasurer
Rev. John Luther Kilbon, Financial Sec'y

Program for the coming year to include Missionary Education, Stewardship, and a Financial Campaign in behalf of our denominational work.

Regional Directors for 1920-21

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont: Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Massachusetts, Rhode Island: Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D. D., 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Connecticut, New York: Rev. Charles E. Burton, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Porto Rico: Rev. George L. Cady, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee: Rev. L. H. Keller, D. D., Central Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Colored Churches of South: Rev. Alfred Lawless, Jr., D. D., 45½ Auburn Ave., Atlanta, Ga.
Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia: Rev. John Luther Kilbon, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska: Rev. Robert W. Gammon, D. D., 19 West Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.
Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota: Rev. William F. English, Jr., Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., and 19 So. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana: Rev. W. W. Scudder, D. D., Fountain and Aubert Sts., St. Louis, Mo.
Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico: Rev. W. J. Minchin, D. D., Guardian Trust Bldg., Denver, Col.
Southern California, Arizona: Rev. George L. Kenngott, Ph.D., 831 So. Hope St., Los Angeles, Cal.
Northern California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Alaska: Rev. H. H. Kelsey, D. D., Phelan Bldg., San Francisco, Cal., and Plymouth Church, Seattle, Wash.

All correspondence relative to the local work of promotion should be addressed to the Director of your Region.

American Tract Society

Its work is interdenominational and international in scope, and is commended by all the evangelical churches. It has published the Gospel Message in 178 languages, dialects and characters. Its colporters meet the immigrants with Christian literature in many languages, and visit the spiritually destitute. It has issued over 19,000,000 copies of publications in Spanish and Portuguese for the people of Latin-America. Its benevolent work is dependent upon donations and legacies.

William Phillips Hall, President.
Judson Swift, D. D., General Secretary.

Donations may be sent to Louis Tag, Treasurer, 101 Park Avenue, Cor. 40th Street, New York, N. Y.; those from New England should be forwarded to Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, Ph.D., Field Secretary, 50 Bromfield Street, Boston, Mass., and those from the West and Northwest to Rev. P. Marion Simms, Ph.D., Field Secretary, 420 Valley National Bank Building, Des Moines, Io.

It Will Pay You to Read

The Soviet Government and Industry, by Dr. J. Lewin, from the Berlin Economic and Political Semi-Monthly (The Living Age, Oct. 16). A study and estimate by a German authority who has seen with his own eyes and had access to first-hand testimony of the efforts of the Soviet leaders to rebuild the shattered industries of Russia.

National Societies

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Edward Lincoln Smith	Editorial Secretary
(287 Fourth Ave., New York)	Rev. Wm. E. Strong

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Rev. William S. Beard, Secretary of Promotion
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry,
Secretary of Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Nineteen self-supporting state organizations are in Federated relations with the National Society. The state Superintendent or Secretary is the official representative of all home mission interests.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. George L. Cady, Secretary
Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis, Associate Secretary
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Eskimos, Chinese, Japanese and Hindus; in Island Territories of Porto Rico and Hawaii. New work in Southwest taken under instruction of National Council.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

289 Fourth Avenue, New York City
Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
(Church Extension Boards)
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Rev. Charles H. Richards, Editorial Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. In sixty-six years it has helped to build 4,982 churches and 1,334 parsonages.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Rev. A. E. Holt, Social Service Sec.
Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Missionary Education Sec.
Samuel F. Wilkins, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service and Missionary Education; aids Colleges, Academies, Training Schools, Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities and among immigrants.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

To conserve the welfare of aged ministers or their wives

The Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers

The opportunities of this Fund should appeal to all our ministers under fifty-five years of age.

375 Lexington Ave., New York City
Rev. William A. Rice, Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

COMMISSION OF ONE HUNDRED OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL
Established at Columbus, Ohio, 1917
375 Lexington Ave., New York City
Charles S. Mills, Chairman
Lewis T. Reed, Executive Secretary

A Permanent Tercentenary Memorial Fund of Five Million Dollars, to provide annuities for the old age and disability of Congregational Ministers. The income to supplement payments made by the ministers. Actuarially Sound. Socially Just.

Make checks payable to the
Pilgrim Memorial Fund Commission

Pass on the Word To Your Friends

Now is the Time to Subscribe for

The Congregationalist and Advance

Tell them if they act quickly, they will be Just in Time for the Special Attractions of the Next Few Weeks—

Thanksgiving Number Holiday Book Number
Young Folks' Book Number Christmas Number
Forefathers' Number

Special Articles Soon

A CONGREGATIONAL CATHEDRAL, by George L. Parker

THE FUTURE OF THE INDEPENDENT CHURCHES, by Dr. S. Parkes Cadman

THE FORUM MARCHING ON, by George W. Coleman

RELIGIOUS INSPIRATION FROM ENGLAND, by Dr. J. H. Jowett, Rev. Rhondda Williams, Dr. W. E. Orchard, Rev. Sidney M. Berry

OUR PILGRIM MOTHERS AND THEIR DAUGHTERS, by Laura E. Wild

OUR PILGRIM PULPIT—A SHORT SERMON EVERY WEEK, by our Brilliant Younger Ministers

WHAT WE HAVE TO BE THANKFUL FOR, by Distinguished Writers

ANOTHER BETHLEHEM, by Shepherd Knapp

TALES OF THE MAYFLOWER CHILDREN, by Pauline Carrington Bouvé

Inspiring Human Interest Stories, Favorite Poems, Successful Church Methods, Christian Interpretation of Current Events

Subscribe Now and Get This Great Journal the Rest of This Year Free and All of 1921 for Only $3.00 or $2.75 in Church Clubs

Circulation Department

14 Beacon Street
Boston

The Congregationalist and Advance

19 W. Jackson Street
Chicago

FALL PUBLICATIONS OF THE PILGRIM PRESS

The Pilgrim Press views its new publications with pride in that every book in the list is a splendid contribution to its particular field and will, we believe, continue to be of value for a long time to come.

NEW ENGLAND IN THE LIFE OF THE WORLD HOWARD A. BRIDGMAN

This book is unlike any ever published in that for the first time it brings together the facts which show the exact part which men and women of New England stock had in founding and developing great commonwealths like Ohio, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Oregon, California and other Western and Far Western states. It sets forth the impact of New England upon the Near East, the Far East and the Hawaiian Islands. It describes the share New Englanders had in initiating and carrying forward far-reaching movements in education, reform, philanthropy and religion. The style is animated rather than technical and a series of original charts adds to its usefulness. The early beginnings are graphically sketched, but quite as much emphasis is placed upon present evidences in customs, institutions and laws of the New England seed-sowing.

Numerous charts and illustrations. Tentative Price, $3.00. Postage, 15 cents.

THE HIGHWAY TO LEADERSHIP MARGARET SLATTERY

Thousands and thousands have been tremendously inspired by this remarkable woman's addresses and books. In this new book as a "leader of leaders" she reveals the pathway to leadership.

Chapter Headings: 1. A Leader—One Who Leads. 2. The Eyes that See. 3. The Ears that Hear. 4. The Heart that Feels. 5. The Mind that Interprets. 6. The Courage that Faces Fact. 7. The Confidence that Dares Dream. 8. The Patience that Practices. 9. The Persistence that Overcomes Prejudice. 10. The Will to Follow. Price, $1.50.

THE MAYFLOWER PROGRAM BOOK JEANETTE ELOISE PERKINS and FRANCES WELD DANIELS

The first definite program outline for Mission Bands and similar organizations—as a week-day auxiliary to the church school.

A tremendously important book planned to develop in children of Primary age (6 to 9) appreciation of all people near and far who contribute to their happiness, and a spirit of comradship and sympathetic helpfulness for any less favored; to provide practice in service.

Contents. Twenty-six complete programs of stories, songs, illustrations and conversation. Game periods provided for by over fifty games. Five songs printed in the book. Plans for the use of charts. Suggestions for Radioptican and Shadow Pictures—A fascinating playlet entitled "Every-day Magic" as a climax to this charming course. Price, $2.00. Postage, 15 cents.

PRAYERS OF THE SOCIAL AWAKENING WALTER RAUSCHENBUSCH

(New edition)

There is always a demand for collections of prayers, and among those who have made their appeal to the public in this line none seem to have come nearer to the soul aspirations of their readers than Prof. Rauschenbusch. The book is small enough for the pocket and is attractively bound. Price, $1.00. Postage, 5 cents.

THE CRADLE ROLL OF THE CHURCH SCHOOL LUCY STOCK CHAPIN

Here for the first time we have definite plans for the organization and development of the Cradle Roll, by a skilled expert.

Leaders everywhere will welcome this new book as a much-needed manual on this all-important feature of the Church School.

Chapter Headings: 1. The Baby and Its Mother. 2. The Cradle Roll Standard. 3. Organization. 4. Equipment. 5. Ways of Working. 6. Lessons for the Cradle Roll. 7. Special Days. 8. The Cradle Roll and Missions. 9. Helping the Mothers. 10. Children's Week. Price, $1.25. Postage, 8 cents.

THE MONDAY CLUB SERMONS FOR 1921

For forty-six years this annual volume has maintained its place as a commentary on the International Sunday School Lessons that is "different." Its particular value lies in its unique analysis of the lesson, affording the leaders of adult classes in particular a summary which is unusual, supplementing all other "helps." Price, $2.00. Postage, 12 cents.

14 BEACON STREET
BOSTON

THE PILGRIM PRESS

19 W. JACKSON STREET
CHICAGO

The Congregationalist and Advance

Vol. CV. No. 46 November 11, 1920

EMMANUEL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, WATERTOWN, N. Y.

In Our Series of Notable Church Edifices

The Herring Memorial Fund

Subscribers up to Nov. 1, 1920

The total number of subscriptions is now 103, aggregating $5,880.50. Amounts given this week range from $1 to $500. One man who sends $2 says, "I wish I could make it $2,000." Another who sends $10 says, "I wish I could add two zeros, making it $1,000."

Beale, Arthur S., Lowell, Mass.
Cary, George E., Bradford, Mass.
Garfield, F. L., Chester, Ct.
Packard, H. L., Winchendon, Mass.
Patten, Arthur B., Torrington, Ct.
Phillips, W. L., Shelton, Ct.
Reed, George H., Concord, N. H.
Richards, Charles H., New York City.
Wells, Clarence E., Watertown, Ct.
Pattison, F. W., East Northfield, Mass.
Lathrop, Theodore B., Branford, Ct.
Foster, E. O., Athol, Mass.
Champe, H. C., Gilead, Ct.
Carter, Robert E., Washington, Ct.
Boyd, Rev. and Mrs. H. W., Wareham, Mass.
Barwick, A. W., Plainfield, Ct.
Houghton, Roy M., New Haven, Ct.
Stacy, F. L., Eden Mills, Vt.
Emrich, F. E., Boston, Mass.
Adams, C. C., Burlington, Vt.
Axtell, J. D., Hall, New York.
Briggs, Frank L., Indian Orchard, Mass.
Chase, Leland G., Wilder, Vt.
Cummings, Stanley, St. Albans, Vt.
Fitch, Wells H., Riverhead, N. Y.
Gaylord, J. H., Saratoga, N. Y.
Gillett, Arthur L., Hartford, Ct.
Herholz, R. E., Pine Island, N. Y.
Hiller, C. C. P., Millbury, Mass.
Leverett, T. L., Chenango Forks, N. Y.
Levonian, P. S., Philadelphia, Pa.
Parker, Asa M., Malden, Mass.
Potter, R. H., Hartford, Ct.
Smith, Henry Francis, West Medford, Mass.
Torrey, E. C., Greenwich, Ct.
Vorhees, J. S., Pomfret Center, Ct.
Whitman, N. W., Uxbridge, Mass.
Whittlesey, George N., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Bailey, Arthur W., Holyoke, Mass.
Bliss, C. B., McIndoe Falls, Vt.
Donnell, Rev. and Mrs. Albert, Castine, Me.
Estabrook, William A., Brinefield, Mass.
Johnston, Wilmer P., Washington, D. C.
Lillback, J. E., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Miller, Paris E., South Berwick, Me.
Mitchell, Edwin Know, Hartford, Ct.
Peterson, O. W., Claremont, N. H.
Pierce, Jason Noble, Washington, D. C.
Poor, William G., Upton, Mass.
Porter, Mrs. Nathan T., Montclair, N. J.
Robinson, E. B., Holyoke, Mass.
Snow, Frederic E., Guilford, Ct.
Wild, Edward W., Westminster, Vt.
Day, William Horace, Bridgeport, Ct.
Merchant, Mylon D., Camp Devens, Mass.
Baldwin, Judge Simeon E., New Haven, Ct.
Blomfield, Frank, Montpelier, Vt.
Chase, Loring B., Rumford, R. I.
Commons, W. H., Whitinsville, Mass.
Currier, A. H., Cold Spring on Hudson, N. Y.
Kimberley, F. A., Antwerp, N. Y.
Miller, S. H., New York City.
Owen, George W., Hyde Park, Mass.
Allen, Ernest Bourner, Oak Park, Ill.
Ball, C. Sturgis, Baltimore, Md.
Barton, William E., Oak Park, Ill.
Church of Christ in Granby, Mass.
Benford, George, Grand Blanc, Mich.
Candy, J. F., Geneva, O.
Carroll, Charles W., Philadelphia, Pa.
Davis, Ozora S., Chicago, Ill.
Dyckman, Henry M., Scarsdale, N. Y.
Hamilton, R. A., Orleans, Vt.
Hix, L. B., Chicago, Ill.
Hunt, Henry W., Vermontville, Mich.
Kernen, H. Arthur, Westfield, Mass.
Lloyd, S. A., Wilmette, Ill.

Emmanuel Church, Watertown

The Emmanuel Congregational Church of Watertown, New York, the picture of whose place of worship is upon the cover of this week's issue, was organized in 1887, the first pastor being Rev. W. T. Stokes. During his pastorate the first building, a small frame structure, was erected. For the first twelve years of their history, the church was helped by the Congregational Home Missionary Society.

In 1899, under the pastorate of Rev. Samuel Heckman, they assumed self-support. It was, however, a struggle for them to remain self-supporting. Rev. Hezekiah L. Pyle, who began his first pastorate with Emmanuel Church in 1900, soon saw that the church would never come to any real power unless it changed location and built an adequate building. Rev. James Henry Larson, who became the pastor in 1908, led them to a new location, where in 1913 their new Gothic place of worship was erected. Three thousand dollars was realized from the sale of the old property. That was all the money the church had ten years ago. Today they have a property valued at $100,000.

The church is of Gothic architecture, has a seating capacity of five hundred, and one of the finest organs in the city. The present membership is five hundred. Rev. Hezekiah L. Pyle, the present pastor, is on the third year of his second pastorate with Emmanuel Church.

The Seventy-fourth Annual Meeting of

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

WILL BE HELD AT THE

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

REV. NEIL McPHERSON, D. D., Pastor

and the MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM of SPRINGFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS, Nov. 17-18

Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, D. D., President

PROGRAM

Wednesday, November 17th, 2.30 P. M., at First Congregational Church

1. ORGANIZATION
2. ADDRESSES OF WELCOME:
   For the City and State,
   For the Churches, Rev. Neil McPherson, D. D.
3. RESPONSE: Rev. Oscar E. Maurer, Member of Ex. Com.
4. REPORT OF TREASURER, Irving C. Gaylord, Esq.
5. ANNUAL SURVEY OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, John R. Rogers, Esq., Chairman
6. THE OUTLOOK OF A. M. A. CHURCH WORK AMONG NEGROES, Rev. Alfred Lawless, Jr.
7. CONCERT OF PRAYER, led by Rev. A. F. Beard

8.15 P. M., at Municipal Auditorium

"THE COURT OF BROTHERHOOD"—A pageant presenting the work of the Association among the belated races of the United States, in Five Episodes. A cast of 160 people from the Springfield churches. A selected chorus, assisted by the Jubilee Singers.

Thursday, November 18th, 9.30 A. M., at First Congregational Church

Devotional Service:

1. REHABILITATION OF A. M. A. SCHOOLS,
   Mr. Arthur B. Holmes, Supervising Architect
2. AFTER-WAR RACE RELATIONS IN THE SOUTH,
   Dr. Lewis B. Moore
3. RACE VALUES AND RACE DESTINIES,
   Sec. George L. Cady

BUSINESS SESSION, 11.30 o'clock

Woman's Hour, 2.30 to 4.00 P. M.

Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Sec., presiding

1. THE STORY OF A QUARTER CENTURY,
   Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury, Field Sec.
2. DR. MARY C. WHARTON, "The Doctor Woman"

Voices from the Field, 4.00 to 5.30

1. THE GLORY OF THE MOUNTAINS,
   Rev. E. R. Wharton
2. THE FUTURE OF OUR INDIAN MISSIONS,
   Rev. Rudolf Hertz
3. THE MEXICAN CHILDREN OF MT. TAYLOR,
   Rev. Otto J. Scheibe

SOCIAL HOUR, 5.30

8 P. M., at First Congregational Church

Devotional Service:

1. THE PILGRIM HERITAGE FOR ALL AMERICANS,
   Rev. Arthur H. Bradford, D. D.
2. NEW DEMANDS IN NEGRO EDUCATION,
   Major Robert R. Moton

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Membership: The members of The American Missionary Association consist of delegates elected to the National Council of Congregational Churches, Sixty Corporate Members at Large, delegates elected by evangelical churches not affiliated with the Council and Life Members of this Association. Besides these, pastors and representatives of all contributing churches are cordially invited to be present.

Entertainment: The people of Springfield are making hospitable arrangements for guests and delegates. Comfortable quarters at reasonable rates will be provided for all. Apply promptly to Rev. R. J. Goddard, Faith Congregational Church, Springfield, Mass., Chairman of Entertainment Committee Upon arrival apply at Information and Entertainment Bureau, in Chapel of First Church, where cards of introduction will be given and Boy Scouts appointed to pilot you to place of entertainment.

JUBILEE SINGERS FROM FISK UNIVERSITY at all sessions

The Congregationalist and Advance

November 11, 1920

Volume CV. Copyright, 1920 All rights reserved Number 46

By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

CONTENTS

The Herring Memorial Fund 586
Emmanuel Church, Watertown 586
Pilgrim Virtues in Modern Life—2. The Consecration of Youth—An Editorial Message 589
What the Christian World is Doing 590
Editorial—The Republican Triumph 592
Holding the Standard High
The Parable of the Contented Conductor
Our "Camino Real" 594
From Our Western Window 594
Vis-a-Vis with Dr. Cadman 595
Pilgrim Celebrations in America, by Linley V. Gordon 596
Live University Pastors and Incoming Students 596
Our Pilgrim Pulpit—The Measure of a Man, by Charles E. McKinley 597
Lake Mohonk's Semi-Centennial, by A. E. Dunning 598
What I Read with My Children, by Howard J. Chidley 599
In the Church School—Dr. Davis' Bible Class—The New Missionary Education Chart for Church Schools 600
The Hour of Prayer—Comment on Midweek and Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topics—Closet and Altar 601
Among the New Books 602
With the Children—Tales of the Mayflower Children, by Pauline Carrington Bouvé 603
In the Congregational Circle—Church News 604
With the Schools and Colleges 613

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. Howard A. Bridgman, D. D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
Associate Editor, Rev. Isaac Ogden Rankin
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D. D. (Chicago)
Literary Editor, Rev. Parris T. Farwell
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Editorial Assistants { Miss Florence A. Moore
Miss Janet L. Savage
Miss Sallie A. McDermott (Chicago)
Contributing Editor, Rev. William E. Barton, D. D.
Business Manager, Albert W. Fell
Advertising Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou
Circulation Manager, Miss Ethel M. Wentworth

The Congregationalist and Advance succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Congregationalist, 1849; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday, by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

Rates: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions are discontinued on date of expiration, appearing on the address label of the paper. Remittances: Should be made payable to The Congregationalist and Advance, and will be acknowledged by a change of date on the label. Receipt will be sent if two-cent stamp is enclosed with remittance. In renewing do not fail to send exact address as on label. Change of Address: Both old and new addresses must be sent in and be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies may be obtained at the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Subscription correspondence may be directed to The Congregationalist and Advance, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Talk of the Sanctum

A Little Side Light

In our issue of Sept. 9, Rev. Winfred Rhoades had an article entitled, "A Story and a Question," which has aroused considerable comment from those who like him feel that the message of the pulpit should have a distinctively spiritual character. We adverted to the general subject in an editorial of our issue of two or three weeks later entitled, "Why We Go to Church." And here's a still later word on the subject from a Massachusetts reader: "We have been fed with the housing problem, the labor problem, the race problem, the community problem, etc., ad nauseam, and hunger for the sincere Milk of the Word, that we may grow thereby."

Next Week

Our annual Thanksgiving Number. The first of our special book review issues. Thanksgiving features.

In the Circulation Department—

We are happy and grateful that so many of our ministers are having a Congregationalist and Advance Sunday. We suggested the first Sunday in November as the date for it this season in the churches that found it a convenient time. But we are quite as well pleased to have the paper pushed at the morning service any other Sunday—in November, preferably, but later if you find it best to have it so. As we have said before, the point is to have a special effort made from the pulpit on a Sunday morning before long to get more of our good Congregational church members to take "our own and only" national paper.

Just let us know what you wish to do about it and what you would like to have us do to co-operate. We shall take pleasure in sending the literature you need promptly upon request.

A large number of our ministers realize that the more people in their churches—members or otherwise—who take The Congregationalist and Advance, the stronger, more active and more progressive their churches become. It certainly is the "Best Pastor's Assistant." One must be informed to be deeply interested, and the information, inspiration and good cheer that every issue of the paper brings to every member of the family helps to make the church increasingly a power for good.

Remember that The Congregationalist and Advance is a denominational agency whose purpose is service to our people and our causes and the Kingdom of Righteousness. Subscription money falls far short of paying the cost of the paper. You get more than you pay for. Shall we not all of us get together and work together for each other and the common cause which we have at heart with The Congregationalist and Advance?

If you haven't told us what you can do to help extend the circulation of your paper (for it is yours as well as ours) will you not take up the matter today?

From Our Mail Bag

Professor Taylor's articles in The Congregationalist on the Interchurch Report of the Steel Strike, ought to commend themselves to both sides as discriminating and eminently fair.

C.

I have just read The Congregational World Movement number of The Congregationalist and Advance, "from Kiver to Kiver." It is great.

M.

Nebraska.

WHAT DOES THIS MEAN?

Since January First, Nineteen Fourteen

544 Congregational Churches have been closed up by the Home Missionary Society, National and State.

351 Congregational Home Missionaries have been dropped. 27,000,000 non-Catholic youth under 25 years of age in the United States are not in any Sunday School and have no systematic religious instruction in the public schools.

Two-thirds of our Churches do not own properties worth as much as $10,000 (452 own no property at all).

84%	of our Home Missionary pastors receive salaries	under	$1,500
58%	- - - - - - - -	under	1,200
34%	- - - - - - - -	under	1,000
17%	- - - - - - - -	under	800

Is the condition thus indicated explained, in part at least, by our failure to practice

Christian Stewardship

which probably most Christians theoretically accept?

WHAT ARE THE FACTS?

Last year we gave for our missionary, educational and philanthropic causes

Four Cents per Week per Person

Combining with this our contributions for local church expenses, we gave in 1919 at the rate of

A Tithe of an Income of $174.00 per Year

Can the people of Christ afford not to practice

Proportionate Systematic Giving?

Congregational World Movement
287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

The Congregationalist
and Advance

Pilgrim Virtues in Modern Life

II. The Consecration of Youth

NINE persons out of ten think of the Pilgrim Fathers as elderly men generously supplied with gray hairs and white beards. On the contrary most of them were in the prime of life. Many of them had not reached thirty-five. Elder Brewster was but fifty-four, a year younger than the next President of the United States at the time he will take his oath of office. Carver, the first governor, was forty-five. William Bradford, the historian and governor for the first thirty years, was thirty. Edward Winslow, gentleman, scholar, diplomat, was but twenty-five. John Alden was twenty-one. Capt. Myles Standish was a soldier still in his first strength and probably about thirty-five.

The Pilgrim migration was a venture on the part of young people and people in early middle life. Septuagenarians would not have deemed it prudent to cross a wide and trackless ocean when autumn ruled the North Atlantic. The Mayflower's cargo included not only "laws, truth and freedom," but the germs of the Young Men's and the Young Women's Christian Associations, of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, of the Student Volunteer Movement and of every noble enterprise which in these three hundred years has appealed to the daring and devotion of high-minded youth.

All this from the standpoint of 1620. But if we go back a dozen or fifteen years to the period when the little flock of independents was being harried out of England, we find that the future governor of the Plymouth Colony was then only a lad in his late teens trudging over from the neighboring village of Austerfield to join the Scrooby group that met in secret at Brewster's Manor House. Other of the Mayflower passengers and many whose association with the Pilgrims took them no further than Holland were noticeably young, maturing early, to be sure, in the hard school of discipline, but not losing the buoyancy and adventuresomeness of youth.

All the way down the track of Pilgrim history we see those who at the moment when the tides of vigorous youth were coursing through their veins, dedicated themselves to the service of the church and the state. The great scholars and the statesmen, the prophets and the missionaries, the founders of churches and of the colleges, the philanthropists and the reformers and a secret multitude of uncanonized every-day saints with but few exceptions have been those who began early to follow Christ in the path of serious and unselfish living.

Has the mood of youth changed? You would think so if you judged youth by the fact that in many a Christian house of worship on Sunday morning the ratio of old people to young people and children is ten to one. Has the church become impotent to mediate religion to youth? That would be the conclusion from the fact that forty-seven per cent. of our Congregational churches last year failed to receive any new members on confession of faith.

But, thank God, that is not the whole story. One can pass from Sunday assemblages made up almost exclusively of gray heads into the Church School and find the malleable human material ready to be shaped into the men of the kingdom of God. But even through this instrumentality, is the church reaching and holding the children and the young people of the community? In this field devoted teachers and experts are working. Yet the supply is not adequate. The attitude of the church toward modern methods and teaching material is not always hospitable.

We cannot duplicate exactly in the young people of today the type of religious experience of a former generation. They sometimes disappoint us. They often puzzle us. At times, as when war stirs their deepest impulse, they surprise us with their display of self-forgetfulness. At other times they appear supremely self-centered. They go their fathers and their mothers one better in absorption in the things that are seen and temporal. They need the sympathetic approach, the wise, patient treatment based on the confidence that beneath external indifference, and even revolt, the heart of youth dreams and aspires and can be moved toward God and god-like character. Above all, youth needs today examples, not in biography and poetry only, not even in the Bible only, but incarnated in flesh and blood, of the life that is hid with Christ in God and which is at the same time driven by the impulse to spend itself for others.

These Tercentenary days carry a double appeal. All who have to do with the shaping of young lives must see again in the Pilgrims and in their descendants what youth can do and become when it learns from Christ what life is for and what are life's secure and everlasting foundations and life's most worthy goals.

Youth itself must heed the challenge of the Tercentenary. It calls to you, young men, because you are strong. Freshen this stale, dejected world with your hope and enthusiasm. Pour into business and politics the cleansing streams. Put the vast reservoir of power that you control into great constructive tasks. Be in your own way and place true sons of the Pilgrims.

H. A. B.

WHAT THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IS DOING

A New Dean

Rev. James A. Beebe, D. D.

IN succession to Dr. D. J. Birney, who has just become a Methodist bishop with headquarters at Shanghai, Rev. James A. Beebe, D.D., was installed Dean of the School of Theology at Boston University Oct. 27. An unprecedented and exceptionally valuable program was carried out morning, afternoon and evening. Representatives of twenty theological schools and of about as many universities, colleges and fitting schools, as well as high dignitaries of the Methodist church were present, many of them in academic costume. A number set forth the relationships of the modern theological school to other educational institutions; and of course inspirational addresses were not lacking. The new dean comes from the Iliff School of Theology in Denver. He is a man of force and charm, modern yet sufficiently conservative. His inaugural address on the Authority of the Preacher put the emphasis where it belonged, depicting the theological school as designed first of all to "prepare competent interpreters of the Christian truth, who can state their faith in terms that will compel the assent and co-operation of their hearers."

A Strong School of the Prophets

ANY strengthening of the teaching and administrative force at the Boston University School of Theology such as that just noted has some bearing upon the Congregationalism of New England, and indeed of the rest of the country. The school has nurtured in the past leaders in our body like Charles E. Jefferson and Charles R. Brown and many of its graduates have become pastors of Congregational churches. Members of the present student body often supply our churches or serve as pastor's assistants. Though distinctively Methodist in its affiliations, its three thousand graduates have served nineteen different denominations. The enrollment this year is 244, and the faculty includes fourteen full-time professors and instructors, besides fifteen special lecturers and sixteen part-time professors. In the School of Religious Education are three hundred more students. Certainly Boston University, under the direction of Pres. L. H. Murlin, is doing much toward supplying the religious leaders of the future.

The Pilgrims' Book

THE Pilgrim Tercentenary Celebrations are directing our attention to the fact that the Pilgrims were pre-eminently people of one Book, first of all. They have been noted for their emphasis upon an all round education but they began with the Bible, the great Source Book. Almost every effort made to commemorate the coming of the Pilgrims takes note of this fact, even to the new Tercentenary half dollar which, by the way, is a coin of beauty and of artistic and historic worth.

Frank H. Mann has an informing article in the Church School for November on "The Open Bible Three Hundred Years after the Mayflower." He calls attention to the fact that the American Bible Society is urging the celebration of Mayflower Universal Bible Sunday, Nov. 28. To help in the observance three booklets have been prepared. The first is "In the Name of God, Amen," the second, "The Pilgrim and the Book," these are furnished at 25 cents each. The third is called, "A Little Journey to Plymouth" and is furnished free in limited quantities. These may be ordered of the American Bible Society, Bible House, New York.

As indicative of the interest in the Bible the American Magazine has a popular article in the September number urging Bible reading under the title, "Do you use the World's Best Text Book?" The Tercentenary year is a good time to place a new emphasis upon the study of our great Source Book. Its teachings gave the Pilgrims a religion that was ethical and rational and the religion of this age needs the same sources of inspiration.

Christian Endeavor Progress in Massachusetts

ONE of the largest state Christian Endeavor conventions ever held in Massachusetts closed Oct. 24, in Worcester. Nearly two thousand delegates were present, and the enthusiasm and devotion to the cause has seldom been surpassed in any state. A full-time field secretary, Rev. Frank L. Freet, was chosen, and money raised for his support. Mr. Freet has a notable record in Ohio as a Christian Endeavor leader, and is already extremely popular with the young people. Dr. H. L. McClusky of Worcester, who has served the cause well as president for two years, gives way in this office to Mr. Asa H. Burgess, a young Congregationalist of Plymouth, who has long been prominent in the state board of Christian Endeavor. Since the depletion and distraction caused by the war have been overcome, Christian Endeavor has made large gains in Massachusetts, except in certain Congregational churches. In the Baptist churches and in other denominations, aside from the Methodist, where of course the Epworth League prevails, the society is stronger than ever before in its history. The same thing is universally true throughout the country, as the recent great state conventions in Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland and other states, north and south and east and west, have proved. Nearly a dozen new state field secretaries are desired, and money has been raised for their support when the right men can be found.

Camp Roosevelt

CHICAGO is justly proud of the system of physical-military training developed in connection with her public schools during the past two years. Each boy is enabled to receive ten months of corrective and instructive work in physical upbuilding. Proper conception of law and order is instilled and yet the plan does not seek to make finished military men. Capt. F. D. Beals, U. S. A., with the co-operation of the Board of Education, has been able to work out this scheme of handling boys in large masses with the greatest amount of efficiency and convenience. A large camp has been established near Muskegon, Mich., and has been named Camp Roosevelt in honor of Colonel Roosevelt, the statesman-soldier. The remarkable success of this plan is mirrored by similar efforts in other cities. The camp is proving a splendid force, not only in building up the physique of the boys, but in Americanization and the development of the democratic spirit.

Big Methodist Building in Chicago

WITH characteristic aggressiveness the Methodists are planning to erect a twenty-story building in Chicago on the site of the present First Methodist Church, Clark and Washington Streets. Rev. John Thompson, for some years Superintendent of Methodist City Missions, has just been made pastor of First Church and to him will be committed the supervision of the planning and the building of this great structure. Ground space of 80 feet on Washington Street and 182 feet on Clark has been secured through the purchase of a leasehold at a cost of more than a half million dollars.

The lower stories of the building will house the activities of the Sunday School Board, the Epworth League, and other departments of the church in the Chicago area and there will be social and recreational rooms. The building will furnish also a great number of offices and rooms for many business enterprises and will have an auditorium that will seat 3,000 people. It is planned to make it a center of evangelistic and reform movements. It is expected that a number of the large denominations will locate their offices in the new building which will furnish restaurant and convention room privileges. The First Methodist Church was organized in 1833 and has held the present site since 1834.

A Research Secretary

THE Social Service staff of the Federal Council has been augmented by the appointment of a woman secretary in the person of Miss Agnes H. Campbell, who graduated from Wellesley College in 1917, having specialized in economics and sociology. Miss Campbell will be assistant to Rev. F. E. Johnson, and is well fitted for her work by the positions she has filled. For one year she was assistant in the library of Congress, making a special study of social and industrial problems among the blind. Until January, 1920, she was connected with the Woman's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, doing research work on the tabulation of labor laws, compilation of industrial studies and industrial statistics. The early part of this year she has been research assistant in the Washington office of the Industrial Relations Department of the Interchurch World Movement, making special investigations on child labor, on the deportation and importation of aliens and assisting in special studies of coal mining and railways. All the various denominational social service groups are co-operating with this bureau of the Federal Council, and the appointment of Miss Campbell will make the work of the department more valuable to the Congregational churches by furnishing to its ministry accurate information about social conditions in our country. Miss Campbell's salary is met by the Congregational Education Society. The Research Bureau is at present conducting an investigation of the conditions which led up to the street car strike in the city of Denver, the results of which will be published at an early date. The Episcopalians have contributed $2,500 toward the support of this Bureau of Survey and Research, the Baptists $2,500, and it is expected that the Presbyterians will follow in due time, so that together with the contribution of the Congregationalists in Miss Campbell, the foundation has been laid for an Interchurch Bureau.

Agnes H. Campbell

Northfield Schools Popular

AT the recent annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Northfield Schools, the president, Mr. W. R. Moody, announced the completion of a special fund of $100,000 which the Trustees early in the year set out to raise to meet the cost of some additions to the plant and other expenses. The attendance in the schools during the past year has taxed them to their full capacity. In Northfield Seminary there were 538; in Mount Hermon, 739; a total of 1277. In the latter case the larger attendance is due to the half-year added by the summer term, which has steadily increased in attendance during the past twenty years, reaching this year 415. The student body has representatives from not only every section of the United States and dependencies, including even the Canal Zone and the Virgin Islands, but also from 38 foreign countries. At Mount Hermon 104 of the students are of foreign birth, and at Northfield Seminary 38. Many of these students purpose returning to their own countries. During the year 12,058 persons have contributed $112,831.92 toward the general expenses of the schools, $21,122.70 of which was contributed by 2685 former students. This is the largest amount ever contributed by former students in any one year.

The War's Effect on English Sunday Schools

THE Sunday School Chronicle, an English weekly, states that during the past year Anglican Sunday schools have lost 7,741 teachers and 103,406 scholars, while the Free Churches have lost 1,661 teachers and have gained 20,160 scholars. A comparison with the figures for 1914 shows that since the outbreak of the war the Church of England has lost 39,845 teachers and 630,669 scholars and the Free Churches 41,156 teachers and 284,519 scholars. This means that during the past six years nearly one million children have been withdrawn from religious instruction in excess of the number who have joined the schools during that time. Reports during recent months have, however, shown a substantial increase in numbers.

Christian Endeavor Holiday Homes

THE British Endeavorers have set about solving the vacation problem in a practical way by establishing eight or nine "Christian Endeavor Holiday Homes" in different parts of England and Scotland. That there is a holiday problem every one will admit who visits the present-day summer resorts and sees young people given up to nightly dances in public dance halls, to the dime-novel movies and other unwholesome amusements. They often go back to business or school less fitted for their work because of the vacation. These Holiday Homes in Great Britain are not money-makers, though they are on a strictly commercial basis. Preference shares are sold on a five per cent. basis, and the vacationists pay on the average about $10 a week for excellent food and a bed in a comfortable room, each room in the dormitories accommodating from two to six or eight. Some of the "homes" are beautiful buildings with attractive grounds, some are school buildings that afford excellent accommodations. All are in charming locations. Though the plan has been in operation for several years, none of them have failed to pay the guaranteed interest on the money invested and to lay by a considerable sum each year for the improvement of the premises. The applications for entertainment cannot all be filled by any means, and by one of them 1,200 applicants had to be refused this year. A genuine holiday is enjoyed by all, not constant meetings or study classes, but wholesome sports and games, excursions to points of interest arranged every day for those who desire them; Sunday services and a simple song and prayer service at bedtime. An international feature has been added by the visits of French, German and Scandinavian Endeavorers who are often entertained for a week, free of expense. There are few more important philanthropies (not charities) than to provide wholesome and happy holidays for self-respecting young people, who wish to pay their way, but who cannot afford ordinary hotel prices and who enjoy something besides midnight dancing and lolling on hotel piazzas. Who will help in such an enterprise?

Japanese Christians Take a Progressive Stand

THE Federation of Churches in Japan has just sent to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America resolutions passed at their recent annual meeting showing their keen interest in Christian internationalism. The Christian body in Japan, while small numerically, is influential, numbering many from the educated and the official classes. The resolutions state, in regard to the Korean affair, that they "unhesitatingly acknowledge that among the policies adopted and carried out by the authorities there have been many things which we cannot approve," and express the hope that Japan shall guide the Korean people with justice and humanity. The Japanese Christians hope for better relations with China, after admitting that their attitude toward China has not been altogether open and impartial, and reaffirm their intention of returning Tsingtau "in the proper time and in the proper way." The resolutions go on to deny that Japan is a militaristic nation, and hail the League of Nations as the best hope for international peace.

EDITORIAL

The Republican Triumph

The "Why" of It is Clear—

First and foremost was the tremendous eagerness for relief from Democratic mismanagement, incompetency and autocracy at Washington, real and suspected. Even if the Republicans framed too severe an indictment, the undisputed and painful facts were sufficiently glaring to provoke popular resentment of colossal proportions.

Second, the handicaps under which the Democratic campaign labored. One was a second-rate candidate, whose violent speeches and previous affiliations with the "wets" lost him many votes. Another was his inevitable though perhaps not altogether just association with the methods and policies of the man whom he aspired to succeed and the régime which he was bound to defend. Another was the general belief, in the North at least, that the Democratic party is not so competent to administer public business as is the Republican, and that it is more of a sectional than it is a national party, with undue preponderance in the government, especially during the last eight years, of the section whence its presidential votes chiefly come. Still another was the defection because of their antipathy to the League of so many Irish voters usually counted safe for the Democratic ticket.

Third, the impossibility of segregating absolutely a single clear-cut moral issue from a great complex of considerations which helped to determine the voters' choice. This split believers in a League of Nations into two opposite camps, imposed upon conscientious men and women the task of thinking their way deliberately out of a muddle and led ultimately to a cleavage between members of the same household, who following alike scriptural precedent and the genius of genuine democracy, did ultimately what seemed to them right in their own eyes.

Fourth, the superb organization of the Republican party, behind which were wealth, brains, enthusiasm and hard work, not only on the part of paid officials but on the part of tens of thousands of voluntary workers, including a host of women. That Indianapolis Presbyterian layman, Will H. Hays, whom the National Republican Committee had sense enough to select as its chairman two years ago, proved himself the man for the task. The result shows what organization can accomplish with the voters of this country, provided the organizer has any kind of a just cause.

The very dimensions of the Republican triumph are sobering. May all who had a share in it exhibit that same fine spirit of humility which Mr. Harding showed when on Tuesday night he said:

> It is all so serious, the obligations are so solemn that instead of exulting I am more given to prayer to God to make me capable of playing my part, and that all these calls to responsibility may meet the aspirations and expectations of America and the world.

Even such a victory as this is not a mandate for the Republican party to allow its policies to be controlled by men of the type from whom Theodore Roosevelt revolted in 1912, or to permit our national attitude toward the League of Nations to be shaped by Senators Borah, Johnson, Brandegee, Moses and other "bitter-enders" rather than by men of international sympathies within the Republican party like Elihu Root, Ex-President Taft and A. Lawrence Lowell. Mr. Harding's intention seems to be to try to reconcile conflicting elements. In view, however, of the complex character of the great electorate which has lifted him to power, which comprehends many friends of Irish freedom, many who are more loyal to Germany than to America, many materialistically minded native Americans out for business and pleasure only, and on the other hand, many high-minded citizens, including not a few sincere champions of a League of Nations, Mr. Harding will have to prove to the country that he can be firm and fearless as well as friendly and irenic. At critical times in the four formidable years that are before him, he will be upheld in every clean-cut decision for righteousness and human brotherhood by that plain Vermonter, Calvin Coolidge, whom Massachusetts long ago learned could stand like a rock in the whirl of politics and in whom it continues to have faith that when elevated to the vice-presidency he will stand for the best ideals of old New England.

These men only need to do their best in order to win and hold the confidence of many who have seen fit to oppose them at the polls. These men, with the advisers whom they will summon to their side, are capable of leading America forward in the right path. They will need, and we believe they will seek, the wisdom that cometh from above. They need, and they should have, the prayers and the co-operation of all Christian people in this country and the world over.

* *

The fact that Japan is not a Christian nation was emphasized last week in the worship at a shrine just opened in Tokio of the late Mikado Mutsuhito at which great crowds gathered to worship his spirit. The present emperor and empress had their special time of worship, the whole city was illuminated and public exhibitions of theatrical shows and geisha dances were given on open air stages in all the wards of the city. But the fact that Japan is not a Christian nation is all the more reason why we should send Christian witnesses and teachers to Japan.

Holding the Standard High

Shall we make Christian faith effective by lowering, or by lifting its unique claims upon the attention and obedience of men? Is Christ to be less, or more, to us and to the world as the years go on and the changes come? May it not be possible to pay too great a price in betrayal of high quality in seeking popular support? On our answer to this question depends, we believe, the future of the churches in our own communion and of all the organizations and individual members of the Universal Church. In service and in relation to all earthly honor Christ is willing to take the lowest place. But in his relation to his followers he claims not only leadership but the authority of a leader whose word is not to be lowered or set aside. It was not out of character for him to say, with a view into the future of humanity, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

An English newspaper, The Saturday Westminster, speaks this warning in view of certain tendencies of the day and of new estimates which are urged upon us of relative importance in our thinking:

> In the age that is coming the Christian faith will have to make either much bolder or much lower claims. If the pitch is reduced many more will join in—but only for a time. A Christianity, which is willing to abdicate its royal dignity and take its place as one interest among many will not greatly interest mankind.

It is a good test both of pulpit work and every-day thinking to ask whether we are giving his rightful place to Christ, his promises, his companionship, his purposes. We do not really widen the scope of our individual or church life when we let down the bars and see Christ crowded out of the place of his supreme authority. Our faith so diluted will cease to be strong and active enough to serve as an effective solvent for the troubles of our confused and difficult world. For people will not then be interested enough to pay it the compliment either of attention or hostility. A faith that makes no demands and arouses no opposition is certain to become of little use to the world.

* *

We have no news as we go to press of the result of the California referendum on alien ownership of land. As a preliminary to the vote the Acting Secretary of State issued a warning that the people of California have no power by legislation to overthrow Federal statutes or treaties, which are the supreme law of the land. Under-Secretary of State Davis said:

> The movement in California to recast the State laws affecting alien land tenure has been receiving since its inception the close and interested attention of the Department of State. The relation of certain treaty provisions to the proposed measure is being discussed clearly and ably in California and will doubtless prove an element in the State's decision as to the adoption or rejection of the proposed measure.

In the meantime the department has had numerous discussions of the most friendly and candid nature with the Ambassador of Japan and it is believed he thoroughly realizes, as we have sought to make clear, that no outcome of the California movement will be acceptable to the country at large that does not accord with existing and applicable provisions of law, and what is equally important, with the nation's instinct of justice.

The Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Contented Conductor

The Conductor who took up my Ticket had upon his arm many Golden Stripes. And I said unto him, I perceive that thou hast been long upon the Road.

And he said, Forty and two years have I been a Passenger Conductor, and before that I ran a Freight, and before that I was a Brakeman.

And I said, Thou dost not look it.

And he said, If I still have Vigor for a man of mine age it is because I have learned two things. The first is to think first what is best and endeavor to attain it. The next is to be content with what I get. For how shall a man do otherwise and profess to trust his God?

Now, in about two hours the rear Truck of the Tender of the Locomotive jumped the track. And the Train was going fast, so that before it stopped it ran for more than its length, and the deep cuts of the Derailed Truck showed in the Ties behind the Train. And it was lucky that we were not Piled in an Heap.

And I walked forward to the Locomotive and stood beside the Conductor as he directed the Train Crew. And he gave them few orders, but when he spake they got busy and did as he said.

And I inquired of him, saying, Is thy Philosophy working well?

And he answered, Sure thing. We have everything to be thankful for. No one is hurt. The Truck is uninjured. The day is fine for outdoor work. And I have a Train Crew that can coax a recalcitrant Truck back on the track like Mary's Little Lamb.

And even as he spake, the Flanges returned to the Rails, and the Whistle blew for the Flagman, and the Conductor said, All Aboard.

Then did the Conductor come back and speak unto me, saying,

Thou art a Scholar. I am a Roughneck. But if I had thine Ability and thy Pulpit, then would I stand and speak unto men and women, saying,

Hearken unto me, and take good heed. Thine Imagination can depict no Heaven fairer than this Good Old World might be if ye would only take it at its best, and Trust God, and stop worrying. For which is worse, to be an Atheist and believe in no God, or to profess to believe in God and then distrust his care? Surely if there be any sin against the Holy Ghost is it not this, to profess to believe in the Guidance of God, and then to worry as if the Devil Owned the Planet and was keeping it for Home Consumption?

And I said unto him, Though thou call thyself a Roughneck, yet dost thou preach a Mighty Practical Gospel.

And he said, yea, and I live it. Therefore have I on mine arm these many stripes, and in mine heart the song of youth and the joy of life. And it costeth very little, and the wealth of rubies is not to be compared unto it.

Now the Train had lost but Forty Minutes, which is not much more than it sometimes taketh to replace a Punctured Tire. But the Train sped on its way, and we pulled in On Time.

And I bowed before him as I left the Train, and shook his hand. And he said, A quiet mind tendeth to a level head. Therefore do we the more quickly get back upon the Rails, with good courage, and good steam pressure, and here we are.

And there we were, even as he said.

* *

We like the schooner race in which the Gloucester fishing boat Espéranto won over its Nova Scotia rival much better than the America's Cup races of the summer. For one thing the boats that raced at Halifax in November were not afraid to go out to sea when the wind was blowing.

In Brief

Now that the election is off our hands, let's get busy about church work.

* *

Gear the local association up to the local church. The automobile can be made helpful at this point.

* *

Are you starting on your program for Forefathers' Day? It is well to be seasonable both in preparation of sermon material and in securing speakers, for anyone who has anything worth while to say about the Pilgrims will be in demand.

* *

Vice-President-elect Coolidge has kept his record of political victories clean. Seventeen times he has run for office since he was first elected a member of the City Council of Northampton, Mass. He might repeat to-day the remark with which he answered the congratulations of a personal friend and political opponent who said: "I didn't vote for you, Cal." "Well, said the future Vice-President, "somebody did."

* *

Curious what trifles sometimes sway voters. As for example in the case of that Massachusetts voter who turned down Cox for the presidency "because he had put a ban on hunting." This new voter, who did not happen to be a woman, had confused the Republican candidate for the governorship of Massachusetts with the Democratic candidate for the presidency. Evidently Nimrod figured in his thought more mightily than either of the Coxes.

* *

The Executive Committee of the Congregational National Council has just fixed the next meeting of the body at Los Angeles beginning July 8, 1921, and going on presumably for a week as heretofore. This moving forward of the time from the last week in June, which had been tentatively selected will enable ministers and educators to close up their year's work in season for the long journey which Eastern delegates will have to make across the continent.

* *

It is good for your widow that you should be a British subject if you are going to be killed by brigands in Mexico. The widow of Mr. Benton, killed by Villa, has secured a lump sum of $10,000 and a pension of $2.50 per day. And she has behind her the British government to see that it is duly paid. Mr. Benton was killed in 1914 and his widow is a Mexican, but the special public interest in the decision is that the delay in settlement has prevented a British recognition of the Mexican revolutionary government.

* *

The death of King Alexander of Greece, of blood poisoning resulting from the bite of a pet monkey, has resulted in an offer of the throne to his younger brother Paul. This offer is, however, contingent on a declaration of the new king repudiating the claims of his father, the former King Constantine, and his older brother to the throne. King Paul, if he accepts these conditions and gives himself entirely to his people and not to family interests, will be a king of the British type, a monarch who rules and does not govern. With such a king and continued advance under the leadership of Venezelos and wise successors, Greece should be able to unify the large territories which have come to her under the peace settlements and their century-long separated peoples of Greek race and tongue.

* *

In the unhappy Irish situation, with an apparent stopping of all wheels of progress toward mutual understanding and a satisfactory settlement, we note with satisfaction the appeal published in the London Times for special prayer. The appeal, which is signed by fifteen bishops, Irish and English, and by many other Christian leaders of England, Scotland and Wales, and in which the friends of England and Ireland in America might well join, says:

> The trouble deepens as the weeks roll on. Nothing has been done by man's wisdom so far to improve the situation effectually. Surely the time has come for a great united effort of prayer to Almighty God for help, on the part of all the Christian Churches and Fellowships in Great Britain and Ireland. With the utmost humility, therefore, we venture to appeal to all our fellow-citizens in the Christian community to join in such an effort of prayer for the restoration of good will and mutual confidence by the realization of Christ in the hearts of us all.

OUR "CAMINO REAL"

Southern California Conference

In 1887—31 Churches—1,549 Members—
Budgets $71,262
In 1919—113 Churches—18,233 Members—
Budgets $394,798

Value of Church Property	$2,075,500
Average Pastor's Salary	1,500
Pilgrim Memorial Fund Quota	$154,000
Pledges	166,873
Emergency Fund Quota	75,000
Pledges	35,536
Estimated	40,000

LOS ANGELES CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
EXTENSION SOCIETY
Organized 1912—Nine New Churches, with Membership of 922

Total Number of Churches in Los Angeles	26
Membership	5,548
Sunday School Membership in New Churches	1,029
Total Sunday School Membership	4,456

Seven New Church Buildings

* *

The above statement, printed on a large cardboard, attracted considerable attention at the exhibit at the International Council in Boston. It reveals a remarkable growth in the thirty-two years since the Southern California Conference was organized.

Not so long ago, it was declared that Congregationalism could not be propagated west of the Hudson River; and, later, that it had reached its Ultima Thule at the Chicago River. Beyond that were the insurmountable Rockies and the great American desert. But, while Congregationalism has been stationary or only slightly advancing in its original habitat, it has flourished in the Golden West and by the western sea. In competition with numberless sects, fads and fancies, it stands in the forefront of the denominations. The fourfold growth in churches and the twelvefold increase in church membership in thirty-two years promises well for the future. Last year, while other denominations reported net losses throughout the country and our own denomination only a slight gain, the Southern California Congregational churches made a net increase of 395.

Los Angeles is now the first city on the Pacific Coast not only in population but in the number of its industries and the value of its industrial productions. The marvelous development of Los Angeles is due not to the addition of populations by annexation, but to its unexcelled climate, its abundant supply of good water, and the "open shop," as well as to its admirable location on the ocean, the rich ranching and fruit country about it, and to the production of oil and gas in the immediate vicinity.

In this great and growing country, churches with Congregational affiliation have a special opportunity, free as they are to adopt their own by-laws and elect their own officers without interference, to baptize by immersion or affusion, to be either high or low church, broad and never narrow, with three gates on a side and four sides. In the midst of the perplexities and frictions of life, these churches with their democratic origin and polity will hold fast to that which is good, seeking to make democracy safe for the world; will take courage at the opportunities offered them, making the most of their independency and ecclesiastical freedom; and yet will play the game with all the other churches and denominations.

In the face of economic profiteering, social unrest, political chicanery, ecclesiastical competition, what shall we do? In the face of numberless calls for men and money, for social service and religious ministry, what shall be our answer? With the various candidates appealing to us for our suffrage and platforms for our loyalty, to whom shall we go and where shall our citizenship be? There can be but one answer: Our loyalty is and must continue to be to Jesus Christ, and to his cause. And the Congregational churches must show the way.

G. F. K.

FROM·OUR·WESTERN·WINDOW

The Congregational World Movement

Congregational folk the country over have been watching with some anxiety for the response of the churches to the demands to be made upon them for our work for the year 1921. As before indicated in The Congregationalist, the Congregational World Movement quota is to be merged with the apportionment of the churches. This means that the apportionment figures, instead of being $2,000,000 are $5,000,000. This is exactly the amount of the combined apportionment and the Congregational World Movement quota for 1920. The apportionment for 1921 should have been $6,000,000 adequately to care for the missionary work of our churches, but the unanimous feeling was that $5,000,000 was all we could hope to raise. This cut of a million dollars will undoubtedly seriously handicap some of our work.

The response of many of the churches so early in the campaign is exceedingly encouraging. Many of our states have accepted the apportionment assigned with little change and are setting about raising it with good courage. Illinois furnishes an example of the feeling that permeates the churches. The Apportionment Committee of this state, together with the Apportionment Committee of Chicago Association, the latter representing about 150 churches, met and decided that the amount assigned by the Congregational World Movement, $500,000 was more than the state could hope to raise and it was unanimously voted to apportion to the churches of the state $400,000.

The committee having the matter in charge in Chicago Association called together the pastors of 20 of the largest churches, churches that would have to pay 86 per cent. of the total apportionment of Chicago Association. These men voted unanimously to ask the Apportionment Committee to assign $500,000 to the Illinois churches and they agreed to do the best that they could to have their churches accept and raise the full amount. The Apportionment Committees have unanimously voted to follow the suggestion made by these pastors.

* *

Subsequently two large, enthusiastic meetings were held in Chicago to consider raising the apportionment and Dr. Cornelius Patton was the speaker. To the first meeting were invited pastors and leading laymen of all the churches save the 20 largest. After the presentation of the case by Dr. Patton and the spreading before the representatives of the figures that would apply to their church, they enthusiastically agreed to do their utmost to go over the top. The other meeting was made up of nearly a hundred representatives of the 20 largest churches. The note struck was one of courage, of faith, of belief that the thing could be done, and of determination on the part of pastors and laymen to do their utmost to make the apportionment for 1921 a success.

The apportionment figures were taken to an Association Meeting down state, an association that has no large churches. In quite a number of these the apportionment for benevolences for 1921 amounts to more than the pastor's salary. The amounts were so large that some of the pastors were "jarred" when they first considered them. After conference over the matter it was the consensus of opinion that the association ought to accept the apportionment assigned and pastors and laymen agreed to heartily support the Movement and do everything possible to raise the full amount.

* *

When it is taken into account that the regular apportionment of the State of Illinois heretofore has been only $200,000 and that the state has never raised of that apportionment more than $150,000, the results of the meetings noted above are most encouraging. It has to be taken into account also that Illinois subscribed last year on the Congregational World Movement of her quota of $290,000, only $125,000. Leaders who have been in touch with the present movement in Illinois believe that there is a spirit that will carry the state near to the goal of $500,000 next year. If this is done it will be a great achievement. For the most part the leaders of our churches in Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, and other states are tackling the problem with just as much courage as has been exhibited in Illinois. The great success of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund, of the Mid-West Education Fund, and of the Congregational World Movement, together with the belief that our full apportionment for 1920 has been subscribed, has given our people great courage. There is a new feeling of optimism. We are surely not downhearted. The great American Board Meeting at Marietta added to our enthusiasm and set many of our people on fire. We believe that the $5,000,000 ought to be raised, that it can be raised, and we are willing to sacrifice ourselves to raise it.

* *

The committee of laymen appointed by the National Council to secure increases in ministers' salaries with Mr. Frank Kimball as chairman has brought about great results. A large number of churches have responded nobly to the call. Apparently many more should take this matter to heart. Dr. Joseph B. Hingeley of the Board of Conference Claimants of the Methodist Episcopal Church has lately made a report of the survey of ministers' salaries in the leading denominations of America. This reveals that in 16 denominations 4,829 ministers receive less than $500 a year; 14,423 others receive between $500 and $1,000; 12,873 draw salaries between $1,000 and $1,500. The average of salary lists for seven denominations are as follows:

Episcopalian	$1,242
Presbyterian (North)	1,177
United Presbyterian	1,096
Reformed Church (Dutch)	1,170
Methodist Episcopal (North)	1,176
Congregational	1,042
Baptist (Northern)	950

The average salary of Congregational ministers in America is a little over $1,000—what of the men who are at the lower end of this scale? In 1919 65.5 per cent. of our ministers received less than $1,500 and 30 per cent., less than $1,000. Our churches and our missions at home and abroad are suffering greatly because of the lack of leaders. Does not our difficulty in geting strong men and women to give themselves for leadership in the work of the Kingdom go back in some measure to our niggardly methods in dealing with them? If we expect to go forward our giving ought to go up to the standard which we are now setting for it and if we maintain this standard in benevolences our more generous attitude there will be reflected immediately in greater generosity in dealing with our pastors.

R. W. G.

Chicago, Nov. 2.

Vis-a-Vis with Dr. Cadman

Reactions from His Summer in England

"Splendidly fit" for another busy and productive year—his twentieth—at his big church in Brooklyn, for the Sunday afternoon work which he has been carrying on at the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., for a number of years, and for a few of the many opportunities for lecturing here and there throughout the country which are at his disposal the year around, is Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, after an interesting summer in England. As I sat with him for an hour the other day and listened to his unstudied, rapid-fire, but extremely discerning comment on men and things on both sides of the Atlantic, noted the erectness of his carriage and felt the firmness of his handclasp, I said to myself, "Here is one metropolitan minister who doesn't scant his parochial duties either, and who keeps up his studies during vacation days, with whom hard work evidently agrees." The accident which deprived him for a time of the use of his right arm and at the same time deprived the International Council in Boston of his anticipated address, has left no traces of the temporary embarrassment it caused him. He is already plunging into the autumn round and is giving his congregation a series of sermons on immortality, striking a note which he considers important both as a corrective of fanciful views and as a real stimulus to Christian faith.

Dr. Cadman, as was to be expected, creditably represented America at Tercentenary celebrations in Plymouth and elsewhere. He spoke of the interest which dignitaries of the Established Church and officials of the government have taken in the commemoration, particularly on its civic side. To them the outcome of the Pilgrim adventure is the America of today with all its resources. The Archbishop of Canterbury, with whom Dr. Cadman took tea at Lambeth Palace, jokingly remarked to him, "I suppose if the Pilgrims had found on board the Mayflower an Anglican bishop, he might have lost his ears." But he found this highest official of the English Church, as well as the Bishop of Winchester, with whom he had a long conversation, most urbane and cordially appreciative of the motives that led the men of the Mayflower to cut loose from England and gracious in their attitude toward the non-conformity of today.

* *

This led me to ask Dr. Cadman about the Lambeth proposal emanating from the Bishops in conference, and looking toward a reunion of Christendom. His attitude corresponds to that of many of our English brethren, who welcome the overture as a step in the right direction. Dr. Cadman himself would not object to being one among other non-conformists to receive a supplementary ordination. And when I asked him if he considered it consistent for one who did not feel that the rite carried any special additional grace to receive it at the hands of one who felt that it did, he replied, "I should look upon it as a good man's blessing, like the hand of Lincoln upon me, for example, that would broaden my opportunities and usefulness in the Christian Church." Dr. Cadman has been thinking seriously of late concerning the future of Independency pure and simple, and has promised to write an article for The Congregationalist embodying his views on this subject in connection with the Lambeth Proposal.

Dr. Cadman's Sundays abroad are appropriated to such an extent by congregations who wish to hear him preach that he heard only one sermon. This was preached by Dr. Orchard of London, with whose intellectual virility he was impressed, as well as with the fact that the response of the London public to the ritualistic elements in his service shows a genuine craving for symbolism on the part even of those who class themselves as non-Anglicans. He feels that Dr. Orchard in his blending of broad theology and the sacramentarian element in worship is too far ahead of the rank and file to be as influential as he might be in that particular.

Taking up the mooted question of whether the English preaching is more evangelical than American and more pronounced in its emphasis on Christ, Dr. Cadman was not inclined to institute a contrast unfavorable to America. He feels that the English preaching is different, but not necessarily more Christocentric. He thinks that Christ is so glorious and many-sided that there is room in the pulpit for stressing varied aspects of his personality and message. But he has little sympathy with a pulpit that emphasizes solely the human Jesus, any more than he has with a pulpit that makes a shibboleth of "the deity of Christ"—a phrase which he thinks should be interpreted by every preacher or theologian using it. A third mis-emphasis in his opinion is to preach Christ from the semi-materialistic point of view, as do the premillenarians in their advocacy of a theory which history has utterly discredited. These points Dr. Cadman is amplifying in the new book soon to appear entitled, "Ambassadors of God."

Dr. Cadman

* *

Naturally our talk drifted on toward social and political conditions abroad. He thinks that organized labor has lost rather than gained in its appeal to public sympathy during the years since he was in England. The growth among trade unionists of class consciousness and of a group dictatorship, the revelations concerning the subsidy which the Russian Soviet government paid to the labor organ, The Daily Herald, have made the public at large more critical. It is suspected that organized labor, for example, wants the mines nationalized not so much for the nation's sake as for its own sake, and that at heart labor may be as selfish as is the grasping capitalist. Dr. Cadman believes that the old type of industrial worker such as his father employed in Middle England, who was restrained by religious convictions bred in his sires by the Wesleyan movement, has largely disappeared from English life. It is a scramble now, and the old order is changing, but Dr. Cadman cannot conceive of a new order which can dispense with the services of men of exceptional ability and initiative.

Though an ardent champion of America's entrance into the war, even before our country seemed as a whole ready for it, Dr. Cadman, through what he learned in England this summer, declares plainly in favor of a generous treatment of Germany. He finds little hatred in England toward the fallen foe. Moreover, the situation on the continent should arouse the pity of the world. According to Mrs. Bramwell Booth's figures, there are a million starving or undernourished children in Germany, another million in Austria and two million in Poland. The Berlin hospitals are full of children with broken bones due to little falls which would not harm a properly nourished child.

Dr. Cadman sensibly parries the newspaper man's queries as to what is going to happen in England and the world. Not a wholesale admirer of Lloyd George, he nevertheless thinks that he is the only man in sight now for the leadership of England. He is not sure that either in England or America we have reached the bottom of the valley or fully learned the outstanding lesson of the war, that God's will must be done on earth as it is in heaven.

H. A. B.

W. H. M. A. Meets in Boston

The semi-annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Association was held with the first annual meeting of the Suffolk Alliance in Mt. Vernon Church, Boston, Oct. 27. With a stirring challenge that we live up to our highest Christian ideals, Mrs. George W. Coleman urged our special attention to the critical racial and capital versus labor conditions in our land.

Pleasant Hill Academy on the Cumberland Plateau in Tennessee was vividly portrayed by its "Dr. May" Wharton. What a field for the harvest! Handsome, strapping youth, willing to tackle any problem, however difficult, but equally ready to play marbles, and give up for a week's rest, sitting on the porch, after three days' work on the farm. How shall such as these be persuaded that three months' schooling is not a thorough education! Why shouldn't a baby snuff tobacco? "Isn't my grandfather's diet as good as your grandfather's?" But the power of suggestion is wonderfully contagious and even though we are hopelessly unemotional in our religious observances, repeated questions among the five-year-olds, "How many drank coffee for breakfast this morning?" bring encouragingly fewer hands.

In 1891 a young Schauffler graduate entered the boarding house of some mill workers in Braddock, Pa., to invite them to a Protestant service. Strange as it may seem, they went; made fun of the service; but stranger still, they went again and again. They began to read the Bible and truly feasted on it. Then they formed the first Slovak Congregational church in the world with twelve members. One of these young men, Andrew Gavlik, was encouraged to go to the Slavic department at Oberlin College and for twenty years has been pastor of the Slovak Congregational church at Duquesne, Pa.

The day was replete with expressions of great opportunity, the country over, crowned with the vision of our "templed hills in Massachusetts," brought by Rev. John J. Walker. Equally strong was the evidence of courage and faith to improve the opportunity.

Pilgrim Celebrations in America

Speakers in Sixty Cities

By Linley V. Gordon

For several months plans have been going ahead for mass meetings to be held under the auspices of the American Mayflower Council. In sixty cities churches, educational institutions, clubs, chambers of commerce, historical societies and other groups are combining their energies in an effort to make these mass meetings the outstanding event of the winter season. At each meeting there are to be two speakers: one from the other side of the sea, the other an American. Eminent preachers, professors and journalists are leaving New York and other cities to participate in the campaign. Among the American speakers are Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, Dr. John H. Finley, Dr. J. Percival Huget, Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, Dr. Frederick Lynch, Bishop William F. McDowell, Dr. Richard Roberts, Dr. Herbert L. Willett, Dr. Talcott Williams, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, D. E. L. Powell and Dr. Gaius G. Atkins.

The British delegation is made up of Rev. R. C. Gillie, Canon E. A. Burroughs, Rev. Alexander Ramsay, Mr. E. Harold Spender and Mr. P. Whitwell Wilson.

Mr. Gillie is the minister of the Marylebone Presbyterian Church, one of the most influential congregations in London. He is President-designate of the National Free Church Council of England. He is one of the foremost speakers of England and is keen on questions of social reform.

Dr. Ramsay is preacher of the largest English Presbyterian Church in London. He was a delegate to the recent World Conference on Faith and Order in Geneva and to the conference of the World Alliance for International Friendship in St. Beatenberg, Switzerland.

Rev. Canon E. A. Burroughs is Fellow and Chaplain of Trinity College, Oxford; Canon of Peterborough Cathedral; Chaplain to His Majesty the King and Examining Chaplain to the Bishops of Liverpool and Exeter. He came into prominence during the war for his work among the soldiers. Canon Burroughs has been a prominent member of the Mansfield Conference, which during the last years has been discussing the questions of intercommunion and interchange of pulpits between the Church of England and the Free Churches.

Mr. E. Harold Spender is well known as author, journalist and lecturer. He is the author of noted biographies on Herbert Henry Asquith and Lloyd George and has written numerous other books and magazine articles.

Mr. P. Whitwell Wilson, now representing in New York the Daily News of London is well known to Americans. He was a member of Parliament from 1906 to 1910 in London and representative of the London Daily News for twelve years. His books "The Christ We Forget" and "The Church We Forget," are of striking originality and have gone into many editions.

The French Government is sending Gen. Robert George Nivelle, Commander-in-Chief of the French Army, Dec. 1916–May 1917, and M. André Monod of Paris, Secretary-Treasurer of the United Protestant Committee for War Relief in France and Belgium. M. Monod has long desired that the Protestant Committee of France might co-operate in the Tercentenary Celebrations.

What follows is the schedule of the Mayflower Council mass meetings. Dr. Jefferson and Dr. Ramsay will speak in Albany, Nov. 15; Syracuse, Nov. 16; Auburn, Nov. 17; Rochester, Nov. 18; Buffalo, Nov. 19–21; Bridgeport, Nov. 22; New Haven, Nov. 23.

Canon Burroughs will be in Trenton, Nov. 15; Baltimore, Nov. 16; Washington, Nov. 17; Pittsburgh, Nov. 18; Harrisburg, Nov. 19–21; Scranton, Nov. 22. The Canon's speaking companion in the first three cities will be Bishop William F. McDowell, and in the last three, Talcott Williams, Dean of the School of Journalism, Columbia University.

Dr. Samuel A. Eliot of Boston and M. André Monod of Paris will be in New Orleans, Nov. 14; Houston, Nov. 15; Dallas, Nov. 16; Oklahoma City, Nov. 17; Little Rock, Nov. 18; Wichita, Nov. 19; Memphis, Nov. 20.

Mr. Harold E. Spender will speak in Springfield, Nov. 15; St. Louis, Nov. 16; Kansas City, Nov. 17; Topeka, Nov. 18.

General Nivelle's schedule is as follows: Chicago, Nov. 14–15; Milwaukee, Nov. 16; Madison, Nov. 17–18; Indianapolis, Nov. 19–21; Louisville, Nov. 22; Cincinnati, Nov. 23; Lexington, Nov. 24.

Dr. J. Fort Newton and Rev. R. C. Gillie will address the meetings in Detroit, Nov. 15; Pontiac, Nov. 16; Akron, Nov. 17; Dayton, Nov. 18; Columbus, Nov. 19; Cleveland, Nov. 20–22.

Dr. J. Percival Huget and Mr. P. Whitwell Wilson are to be in Portland, Nov. 15; Providence, Nov. 16; Manchester, Nov. 17; Worcester, Nov. 18; Springfield, Nov. 19; Hartford, Nov. 20.

Live University Pastors and Incoming Students

Preparing for the Spiritual Education of American College Men and Women

Many parents will be as intensely interested in the character-building preparations now on foot in the colleges as they are in the personnel of the faculty and the line-up of the football team. In the great majority of institutions a definite, planned work is going on. We publish below a number of communications upon efficient church work in our American student bodies. These communications will serve also as a clearing house for the most effective, up-to-date methods of work among our college men and women—the leaders of tomorrow. We shall be glad to receive other such communications from college pastors and pastors in college towns who are doing an aggressive work for students. The following communications are among the first received. Others will follow.—EDITORS' NOTE.

Religious Work at New Hampshire State College

By Rev. Vaughn Dabney

Durham, N. H.

As there is no other place, either at the college or in the village, where the thousand young men and women of the New Hampshire State College may worship save in the historic old Congregational Church in Durham, the members make it known through the pastor at the opening convocation that the students are not only wanted and needed in the Community Church but urged to join its associate membership.

On the first Friday night of the college year the several hundred members of the entering class pour into the church vestry for the annual Freshman Frolic. Here they learn the college songs and cheers, get acquainted, do "stunts," eat whatever ice cream the jealous sophomores haven't borrowed (?) from the kitchen below, and listen respectfully to words of welcome and counsel by pastor and college president.

Comes the first Sunday: Before morning worship faculty members conduct student Bible classes. As the hour for the church service draws nigh, student activities increase. Junior girls slip downstairs to make ready for the kindergarten that tired mothers may worship in peace of mind; members of the college glee clubs may be heard rehearsing the morning anthem; student ushers drawn from some college fraternity are busy carrying chairs into the church; a group of upper class men meet with the pastor for a short prayer service. In the Church school, which meets after morning worship, the plans call for student classes and student teachers for village children. In the afternoon a delegation from the college Y. M. C. A. starts off with the pastor to conduct services in a near-by schoolhouse. At seven in the evening the Student Forum meets in the vestry.

The plans for the first Sunday will be carried out during the entire year, varied with afternoon vesper services by the orchestra and glee clubs. On a Sunday a student may find at the church anything from a tea to a prayer meeting. Throughout the college year various socials and pageants are given at the church, and in June a strawberry sociable for the seniors corresponds to the freshman frolic.

The church shares in the planning and execution of campus religious activities. In Durham the work of such splendid organizations as the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. is considered as an extension of the work of the church, so strongly has the idea of a community of worship and service taken hold of the students and townspeople. The new college Y. M. C. A. Secretary is associated with the minister as an interdenominational student pastor. Plans have been made by both of these organizations together with the associate members of the church for an intensive campaign this next year to enlist the students in Bible study, in discussion of such books as Holt's "The Bible as a Community Book" and Rauschenbusch's "The Social Principles of Jesus," in community service and in the Student Volunteer Movement. With the inspiration of the Des Moines convention, the Stitt Wilson meetings of last spring, and the summer conferences at Northfield, Silver Bay and Camp Maqua, the Christian students are ready for a busy year. It is the prayer of the church that the number of New Hampshire students now thinking of entering the ministry may be greatly increased this year, thus justifying the conviction of the president of a Western theological seminary that the State Agricultural College is the most promising recruiting station for the Christian ministry.

At Iowa State College

By Rev. H. H. Lindeman

College Minister, Ames, Io.

Our work for the students this year will fall into two divisions: (1) General religious and social work by churches and "Y" associations co-operating; (2) Our own Congregational work.

1. As churches and "Y," we welcomed incoming students at trains and helped them locate; made a hard drive on "All-out-to-church" Sunday, the first Sabbath of the year; had an all-college rally on the second Sunday, in the interest of church attendance and affiliation. We are to hold special rallies on the first Sundays in the second and third quarters, under the leadership of Dr. Ozora Davis and "Dad" Elliott. A parting urge will be given in May during a two days' visit of Dean Brown of Yale. There will also be combined and co-ordinated socials, and mid-week Bible discussions and prayer groups.

2. Congregational activities: All-Congregational "Mixer" second Friday night; Freshman Mixer, with our faculty members present; every freshman entertained in a Congregational home before Thanksgiving; about twelve general socials during the year; open house for group gatherings every Friday and Saturday night; as many as possible enrolled in Sunday morning Bible classes at the church and at Frisbie House, also in our Frisbie Fellowship at the college and Christian Endeavor at the church; evening service especially planned for students; lunch served for students just preceding Endeavor; social half hour following evening service; large student chorus leads the singing and furnishes good training for its members; Tercentenary pageant in November; frequent contact with students by bulletin, letter, phone or call.

The city minister, with the college minister, and their wives, are always on the alert to help all students in any way needed. We make the church and Frisbie House just as interesting and homelike as we know how, and we drive strong on religion!

For Our Congregationalists at Wisconsin

By Rev. J. E. Sarles

Congregational University Pastor, Madison, Wis.

Nearly five hundred new Congregationalists have entered the University of Wisconsin this fall.

After their addresses were obtained, fifty members of our Congregational Students' Association Cabinet called upon them, welcomed them to our University Congregational circle, and offered to accompany them to church. Those who are church members were invited to become associate members of the First Church, Madison. This they can do without discontinuing their home membership, giving them local church relations during university residence, at the same time strengthening the cause at the campus by declaring in large groups their loyalty to the church. About 200 joined the Madison church in this way last year.

Later, a canvass for a working fund will be made through the entire Congregational student body, conducted by the students themselves. The fund will be divided, a part going to First Church, Madison, in which the students worship, a part used to defray the expenses of the Congregational Students' Association, and 20 per cent. will go to Congregational benevolences.

Opportunity will be given students to become members of the large First church chorus, one of the finest in the country, conducted by Prof. E. B. Gordon of the University.

Our student organization, the Congregational Students' Association, comprises seven departments; Church, Music, Publicity, Religious Education, Social, and Social Service. The activities are planned by the cabinet, and all Congregational students are members.

Our Congregational churches maintain at the University of Wisconsin a University Pastor, who is virtually the associate pastor of every church from which our young people go to Madison and who is constantly in the service of our students. For housing our activities at the campus our Congregational churches have provided the University Parish House. This is the University Pastor's residence, and affords a home atmosphere in which the work is carried on. Each Tuesday evening, cabinet members will assist Mr. and Mrs. Sarles in entertaining groups of students at the Parish House with games, singing and refreshments. In this way we plan to come into social contact with all our new students during the year. On Sunday evenings, Professor Gordon will conduct a song hour at the Parish House. On Wednesday evenings, Mr. Sarles will lead a group in the study of the Bible in the light of modern scholarship. At other times he will hold personal conferences with the students in the Parish House study. Later on, Dr. D. S. Robinson, of the Philosophy Department at the University, will give a series of Sunday noon lectures similar to his course, "Religion and Life," that was so enthusiastically received last year.

During the year, two or three banquets will be held, the speaker for each being one of our foremost denominational leaders. It is planned to have these men remain for another day, address large student audiences, and hold conferences.

We are striving to do all we can for our Congregational young people who come to Wisconsin, to keep strong their religious interests, and help them develop in this as well as other departments of thought. But we believe that a vast deal can be done for them by giving them experience in actual service. Thus, by the laboratory method, so effective in fitting students for successful careers in other lines, we plan to send out in our graduates young men and young women who will be capable leaders in the church of tomorrow.

Does Prohibition Pay?

In his annual report just issued, the clerk of the Municipal Court in Boston, Edward J. Lord, states that the arrests for drunkenness in 1920 have decreased by nearly 18,000 when compared with the previous year, when 31,630 persons were arrested. He testifies that there has been no great increase in the use of drugs.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue states that instead of the enormous falling off in the country's revenue predicted as a result of prohibition, the revenues are over $1,500,000,000 greater than last year. The net cost of collecting this enormous sum, moreover, was considerably less than last year.

The Iowa Supreme Court has refused to acquit a grocer charged with the sale of flavoring extracts of high alcohol content, ruling that it is not material whether or not the article is intended for use as a beverage, as long as they are potable and contain alcohol in measurable proportions.

As the result of prohibition in Toronto, only six persons have applied for admission to the city shelter homes, as compared with 181 in the year 1914, the last normal year. In the same year, 103 families were supplied with groceries by the city authorities; this year only 38 have made application for such aid. Applications to the city relief officer have been reduced by more than 50 per cent. since the advent of prohibition.

OUR PILGRIM PULPIT

The Measure of a Man

By Rev. Charles E. McKinley

Central Church, Galesburg, Ill.

"Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?"—Matt. 6:27.

To add a cubit to one's stature is indeed a marvelous thing. But it is one of the marvels that is constantly taking place; just like the marvel next mentioned by our Lord, the marvel of the glorious apparel of the lilies.

It is the marvel of the child that becomes a man. The infant adds a cubit, two cubits, even three cubits, to his stature. The child that stands eighteen inches high when he begins to walk may readily become a six-foot man.

But he does not do it by taking anxious thought. That is the point. He does it in quite another way, the same way that the lilies get their gorgeous raiment, by just growing.

What Jesus had in mind throughout this passage was growth according to an inward law of being implanted by the Creator in the child and in the lily. The stature of the man in the one case, the beauteous clothing of the lily in the other, can be acquired only on the terms that God has prescribed in their respective laws of being.

Now suppose we understand "stature" to refer not to height of body nor length of years, but, as is suggested by the translation, "the measure of his life," to the size of the life that a man lives.

Instantly the question takes a corresponding form: Which of you by being anxious can add anything to the bigness of his life? Which of you can add a single cubit to the breadth of your mind, the reach of your vision, the capacity of your heart, the measure of your manhood? Which of you by being anxious, by taking strenuous thought, can do a single thing to make himself a larger man?

That is a very searching question for all who are interested in education. We are taking much anxious thought to get some bigger men and nobler women out of our schools and colleges. But young people have to come to their larger intellectual, moral and spiritual life just as the infant comes to possess the stature of a man and the meadows adorn themselves with the beauty of the lilies. There is a law within, a law of growth and development, and there is no way under the skies to attain the desired end but just to fulfill that law.

All the additions to the measure of life that really add anything, the things that

"Swell the man's amount,"

that make for larger manhood, that build up a personality that is broad visioned and large minded, that make one a moral force and a leading spirit, are things that come not by anxious thought but by complete obedience to the Creator's will: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

It Will Pay You to Read

THE RUSSIAN DEBACLE, by LEONHARD HORST, from the Cologne Journal (The Living Age, Oct. 16). A vivid and interesting account by an eye-witness of the retreat and reception at the German border of the Russian troops who were recently interned in Germany after their defeat by the Poles.

THE SMALL ENTENTE, by MAXWELL H. H. MACARTNEY (The Fortnightly Review, October). An interesting study of events, personalities and policies which have united Rumania, Czecho-Slovakia and Jugo-Slavia in an alliance which may affect the history of Europe and the world.

Lake Mohonk's Semi-Centennial

Its Work for Dependent Races and for Peace

By Rev. A. E. Dunning, D.D.

There is only one Lake Mohonk Mountain House. No imitations have yet succeeded in reproducing it. This seems to be the testimony of about all the many thousands who have visited it. It is not a hotel. Its proprietors have always called it The House. It combines the values of a family with guests, a club and a resort for those who are looking for recreation of body, mind and spirit. Lake Mohonk is the realization of an ideal.

The House has attracted public attention, however, mainly by its service to our country in two directions. Fifty years ago, when it was first opened to guests, the condition of American Indians was appealing strongly to the sympathies of Christian people. The movement of emigration westward from the North Atlantic Coast and the Middle States was invading the territories the Indians claimed as their own. White men were hunting their game, prospecting for gold, silver, copper, coal and iron, building railroads through their reservations, settling on their lands. Indians were fighting whites, tribes were fighting one another, missionaries and teachers, Catholic and Protestant, were colliding in their efforts to civilize and Christianize the Indians. The United States Government made treaties with Indian tribes as "nations." These treaties were misinterpreted and misunderstood by the contracting parties, federal legislation was crude and some of it unjust in its treatment of Indians. Societies were organized to protect their interests and Congress, responding to appeals from these bodies, appointed a Board of Commissioners of Indian Affairs.

The founder of Lake Mohonk House was one of its members, appointed in 1879. Albert K. Smiley belongs to the Society of Friends. He was a man of kind heart, wise head, inventive genius, and a practical philanthropist. In the autumn of 1883 he invited the members of the Board, together with a number of persons well informed concerning the condition of the Indians, to be his guests for several days, to discuss measures for their improvement. The conference proved so successful that it became a national institution. The number of invited guests increased annually till the carefully selected list rose to three hundred or more. Members of Congress, governors of states and territories, jurists, editors, presidents of universities, clergymen Protestant and Catholic, government agents, teachers, missionaries and Indians assembled on the mountain-top by the lakeside and threshed out differences of opinion, undisturbed by spectators, uninfluenced by popular pressure from without.

Mr. Smiley's hospitality was unlimited. From Tuesday, on leaving the train at New Palz, N. Y., till their return on Saturday after their six-mile ride down from the mountain they were entertained without expense to themselves. The afternoons were given up to recreation. Horses, carriages and boats were placed at their disposal. The sturdy and benevolent personality of the host was felt everywhere. In such an atmosphere it was difficult for differences to become acrimonious. It is within the bounds of truth to say that the larger part of the beneficent legislation on Indian affairs by Congress, the appointmnt of Indian officials, and the general conduct of agencies have been determined in the Lake Mohonk Conferences during the last thirty-five years.

Many will remember the scandals formerly connected with the administration of Indian affairs. Many more who were once excited over them have forgotten them. Able commissioners have sought against great obstacles to secure education, just distribution of property, and citizenship for the Indians. Hon. Franklin K. Lane, just after resigning his position in the Cabinet as Secretary of the Interior, said, "The Bureau of Indian Affairs has in the last seven years handled hundreds of millions of dollars belonging to the Indians—more money than had ever before passed through its hands. It has been the only seven years in our history in which there has not been a scandal in that very delicate department of public work."

This was a well-deserved compliment to Commissioner Sells for his wise and competent service. It was made possible in no small degree by the support given to his predecessors and himself through the Mohonk Conferences. These Conferences have been interrupted since 1916 because of the World War. The present management of the Mohonk House in this year's bulletin announced that another conference would be held in October. For various good reasons it was found best to postpone this meeting. But the Board of Indian Commissioners met there Oct. 19 and spent three days considering important matters in their care.

After our war with Cuba, when Hawaii, the Philippines and Porto Rico had come under the care of the United States the Mohonk Conference in 1904 was enlarged to include "other dependent peoples." Representatives from these countries, official and other, attended, and their affairs were annually discussed by them and by representatives of the United States Government.

Several years before the League to Enforce Peace was thought of, and four years before the first Peace Conference was held at The Hague, Mr. Smiley assembled the first Mohonk Conference on International Arbitration. It was held in June, 1895. Year after year this mountaintop attracted men and women of eminent authority in international law, from all parts of the United States and Canada, from South America, the nations of Europe and the Orient. All invited guests were entertained by Mr. Smiley at his own expense. This conference has exerted a much wider influence than the other. Extended reports of discussions, and of resolutions adopted were given by the press of this and other countries. The minutes of each conference, stenographically reported, were issued in full till the outbreak of the war suspended the meetings. The last one was held in May 1914.

Since the death of Albert Smiley the Mohonk House has been owned and administered by his younger brother Daniel Smiley and his family. The same beneficent spirit pervades it as from the beginning. The ideal of the older brother is being enlarged and extended by those who have inherited it. The latest addition is a boarding school for boys. It was opened in January, 1920. The fall term began Oct. 1 with a faculty of five teachers and a goodly number of students, who are eligible from ten years of age till they are prepared to enter college. A portion of the house will be open during the entire year, in order that parents and friends of the pupils may visit them for longer or shorter periods. Girls in such families living in the house will be received as day scholars.

It would be difficult to imagine a more attractive home school for growing youth. Outdoor life is emphasized. The estate includes eight square miles of mountain, forest, lake and farms. Its waters have lately been stocked with fish. There are sixty miles of fine private roads and twenty-five miles of bridle and footpaths. The lake affords fine skating in winter, and tennis courts, ball field and golf links are all that could be desired. It is easily accessible, about fifteen miles west of Poughkeepsie. Lake Mohonk's Mountain House is now entering on its second half century with assurance of still larger success in its mission for our country and for the world.

Atlanta University Pageant

The pageant called "The Open Door," which is to be staged in Symphony Hall, Boston, Tuesday evening, Nov. 16, for the benefit of Atlanta University, is a unique and vital little morality play which grew up in and through the school life of Atlanta University. Mrs. Alice Holdship Ware, the author, is the wife of Edward Ware, President of Atlanta. With the creative insight of an artist and a musician she has caught the deeper meanings of the life of the Colored people and throughout the play has given the spiritual interpretation to their history, building the story around the beauty of the old Negro spirituals.

To Nathaniel Dett's Juba Dance the Wild Men of Africa perform their rituals, before King Ignorance. Greed leads to the throne the

The Wild Men in Atlanta University Pageant moaning slaves. Hate, with her urn of tears, and bringing Prejudice her son, pays her vow to Ignorance. In this darkest hour, comes Education dispelling Ignorance and all his ugly train. Even Prejudice is astounded and abashed when Education lifts the bandage from his eyes and he sees the truth.

The lighter parts in the pageant are taken by such characters as Indolence, Foolish Smattering, and Gay Philander, who lead some of the eager youth back by the way that Ignorance has gone! Finally three heralds in graceful and reverent rhythm bring the Star of Aspiration to Education, and summon all youth to enter the Open Door.

"The Door is open, there need be no dark, Behold the Star! The Star will lead you on."

At their bidding the chorus of a hundred people, who have given a concert of the Spirituals before the pageant began—to tune our heart to its meanings—rise, and to the glorious strains of James Weldon Johnson's hymn, "Lift every voice and sing," pass up onto the stage and through the "Open Door."

The pathetic slave songs and the marvelous old Negro "spirituals" are rendered under the direction of an authority on this form of native music, Edward Boatner, and a Negro orchestra will be led by another specialist in Afro-American music—Clarence Cameron White, who has spent years in getting down in notation the precious old traditional, unwritten melodies of his race. There will be ceremonial dances and "interpretive rhythms" to Coleridge-Taylor's music.

But behind all these notable artistic effects is the consciousness of a deprived race pleading its cause with the dominant race. What the Negro is asking through this pageant is the chance vouchsafed to the wretchedest immigrant from the Old World—an education. Now that the General Education Board has offered to give $10,000 for necessary repairs to Atlanta University if an equal amount can be raised by friends of the institution, this gives incentive to help push this pageant. In Savannah and in Atlanta the spectacle has already been given with success.

What Books I Read With My Children

By Howard J. Chidley

I approach this subject, I confess, with great trepidation. We have all had the experience of recommending to a friend some book which thrilled us, only to find that it met no response from him. I remember some years ago recommending Butler's "The Way of All Flesh" to a parishioner who was having some difficulty in bringing up a rather obstreperous boy, thinking that she might find help in it for her own problem. She not only got nothing out of it, but berated the author for having written it! My bump of caution was enlarged by that incident.

I am equally sure that I shall be slain by some reader of this article for the sin of omission. He will lay it down saying, "Why he didn't even mention ————'s book, the most wonderful children's book ever written." I plead guilty in advance to the omission, but I am writing on "What Books I Read with My Children." For the sake of orientation, let me say these particular children happen to be girls seven and a half and six years of age.

Frank W. Boreham tells somewhere of a home he visited in Australia where the children invariably ask their father at supper time if it is to be a "Slipper Evening." A slipper evening means an evening when he is to be at his own fireside. A "boot evening" is one in which he has an engagement out of the home. The slipper evenings are the children's delight, for they know their father will read with them. I believe in slipper evenings. My own time for reading with my children is the half hour before they go to bed. We draw up the big chair before the fireplace these fall evenings, and, with a girl on either arm of the chair, we read together. Sometimes we vary this with a story-telling evening. The children furnish the characters, each suggesting one or two characters, as the case may be, and I am supposed to make up the tale. With four characters, such as a dog, a bear, a wolf and a lion, the plot, as one can suspect, is sometimes complicated. But imagination is allowed to run riot and the suspense is breathless. But usually we read.

Three Hundred Years Ago

Red Letter Dates in The Pilgrim Calendar

To help make more real the famous voyage and landing which is being commemorated this month and next in many parts of the world, the following dates should be at hand for frequent reference. This Pilgrim Calendar starts with the first sight the Mayflower passengers had of land and follows them along their way during the two eventful months of November and December. The reckoning is New Style rather than the Old Style of the Julian Calendar, which prevailed among Protestant nations in the days of the Pilgrims. Inasmuch as for many years the anniversary of their landing at Plymouth has been observed on Dec. 21, New Style, it seems desirable to conform the earlier dates to the same style of reckoning:

Nov. 19. Signs of land.
20. Discovered Cape Cod (somewhere about Truro).
21. Cape Cod (Provincetown) Harbor. Go ashore to cut wood. Compact signed in cabin.
22. Sunday. All on ship for rest and worship.
23. The shallop put ashore for mending. The women land and wash soiled clothes.
25. First exploring party of sixteen starts.
27. The party returns with Indian corn and report of Indians.

Dec. 1. Weather turns cold and stormy.
6. Second exploring party of 34 (nine sailors) goes ashore. Peregrine White born.
8. Expedition returns with corn. Eighteen men remain on shore over night.
13. Much illness from exposure.
16. Third exploring party seeks a harbor for settlement. Eighteen—including Standish, Carver, Bradford and others—with ship's mate, who has been at Plymouth.
17. Mrs. Dorothy Bradford drowned.
18. The exploring party lands in the night on Clarke's Island, Plymouth Harbor.
21. Twelve Pilgrims landed from shallop at Plymouth and explored. (Forefather's Day as we celebrate it.)
23. Return to the MAYFLOWER at Provincetown Bay.
24. The MAYFLOWER sails for Plymouth.
26. Anchors in Plymouth Harbor.
27. Sunday. All stay on ship.
28. Exploring parties out on shore.
30. Town site determined.

The Peter and Polly books have been great favorites. There is a series, "Peter and Polly in Spring," "Peter and Polly in Summer," "Peter and Polly in Autumn," and "Peter and Polly in Winter." These books have developed interest in country and outdoor life. Then, of course, there are Grimm's Fairy Tales, Stevenson's "Child's Garden of Verse," "Flower Children," "The Uncle Remus" stories, Kate Dickinson Sweetser's "Book of Indian Braves," diluted and retold in simple language, John Martin's books, and "Alice in Wonderland."

Peculiarly enough the children have become interested in The Canterbury Tales. The reason, I suspect, is because of a beautifully illustrated edition which they like to look through and have the stories of the pictures told. These stories are also diluted and expurgated when told them! They also like to be told about Bunyan's Pilgrim, although they are not old enough to have "Pilgrim's Progress" read to them. Two other books, parts of which they enjoy, are Laura Richard's "The Golden Windows" and "The Silver Crown." In the matter of strictly religious stories I have found "The Bible Story," Dean Hodges' "When the King Came," and certain books of children's sermons very useful.

I believe also in reading to them the Bible straight, choosing the stories which will appeal. They do not understand all of it, but they will catch the majesty of its diction and the sonorousness of its phrases and the flavor of its spirit. For this Bible reading I have found "The Soul of the Bible" useful. We read it for morning devotions. I had great delight two years ago writing up the stories of their dolls for these two children. The titles ran somewhat like this, The Doll with the Crimson Hair, The Doll the Puppy Worried, The Clown Doll, Teddy Bear, The Doll That Swallowed Her Eyes, etc. This volume of stories has never seen the light of day in print, but it is worn ragged, not because of its literary virtues, but because it speaks to the child's own experience. There is a valuable hint for parents in that.

But far beyond what these children may get from these excursions into bookland I prize chiefly the opening companionship of my mind with theirs in the fellowship of good books. We stand on a common ground there. It gives me a new hold upon them, to which I hope they will look back with pleasure across the years.

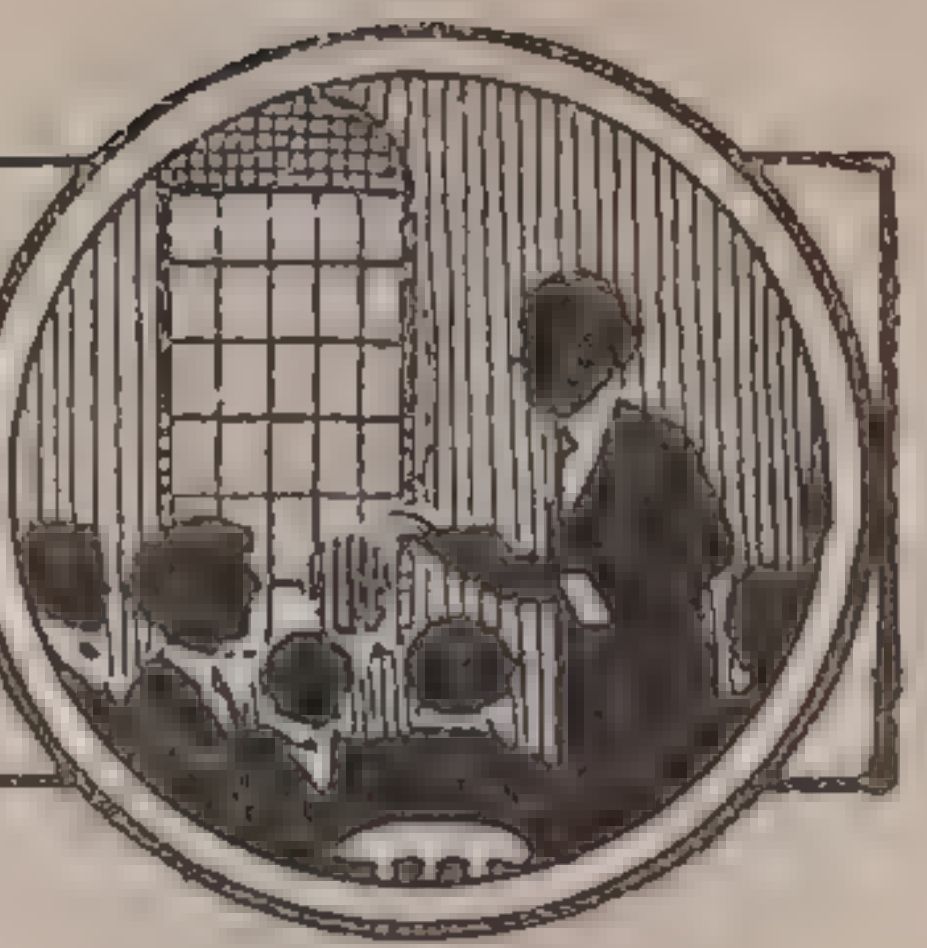
I firmly believe in the cultivation of a child's taste for good books. I wish mine to grow up in the atmosphere of books. It will be an antidote to the hurry of life. Children today seem to be restless for excitement. They wish to be entertained. The moving picture has sophisticated them without educating them. The automobile has given them the gadding habit. Beyond what books may do for them in the way of unlocking the doors of imagination and storing their minds with worth-while information there will be the salutary lesson of learning to sit still and the art of entertaining themselves.

Then there is the matter of the child's own library. I have tried not to let their library become a repository merely for the hazard of gift books. They have their own bookcase in their day nursery which is slowly being filled with books chosen with discretion and of which they are the owners. They are taught to respect books and to care for them.

I am heartily in sympathy with Children's Book Week. I hope it will stimulate parents to buy books discriminately for their children and that it will enrich American children by giving them the pride of ownership in good books which will go with them through life. We need more "slipper evenings." We need more children's books in the home.

Winchester, Mass.

IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL



DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS

The Twelve Sent Forth

International Sunday School Lesson for Nov. 21. Matt. 10: 5-8; 29-31; 37-42.

The sending out of the Twelve marks the beginning of another stage in the work of Jesus. He had himself always felt the pull of the neighboring towns and was not willing to remain content with a permanent residence or unchanged group of friends. Now he begins to send his comrades afield also. Their work may be studied under three phases:

1. A Mission. They were sent out under the stress of a commandment and the urgency of an inner conviction. The call of the crowd sounded in their ears; but also the thrust of their own deep love and purpose sent them on. The Christian religion always has been marked by the missionary motive. It has been unwilling to remain in the boundaries of its own achievements or be content with its gains. And it is so today. The Christian people think of their faith as meant to embrace and conquer the whole world. They will not stop short of realizing the promise that every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that Christ is Lord.

This missionary passion and purpose is not shut up to the men and women who go to foreign lands as the heralds of Christ. Every Christian must respond to this obligation. If he cannot go himself he can help send his representative. He can think in the terms of the world-wide gospel and he can love and pray in the light of the universal Kingdom. This consciousness of the Christian mission is a fine test of the reality and vitality of the faith of the individual and of the church. It measures accurately the depth and genuineness of our loyalty to our Master. Do you feel this pull and drive of the missionary motive? Does it make you want to do something personally in behalf of Christ's gospel?

2. A Message. It is given in v. 8. They are to declare that the Kingdom of Heaven is near at hand. The Christian gospel is a message, as distinct from a mere proposition or interesting literary statement. It is not something to be discussed; it is something to be proclaimed. The messenger does not stay to argue about his message. He speaks it out with forthright conviction as to its genuineness and importance. This matter of the Kingdom of God is good news. It means that there is a better world in the making and that God is not going to fail in his program for humanity. When Jesus came into the world and began to teach men and women how to live it was the greatest event that ever happened. His words were full of new and majestic meaning. They were not uncertain either in their content or their form. Those who speak in his name have the right to affirm as positively and courageously as he did the whole truth about God's relation to the world. It is a message. It is good news. It brings life and joy and power.

3. A Passion. There is no better word that we can find to describe this sense of urgency and this glow of love which marked the work of the first disciples of Jesus as they went everywhere telling the people that they were sure of good news for the individual and for the people. They had found the Christ. They had also found the springs of a new life for themselves and for their comrades in their friendship with him. He had made a new world for them and they were living in it with such peace and joy and consciousness of power as they never had known before. They were dead in earnest about this. They wanted every one to know it and they affirmed that it was true without any least hesitation.

This is one of the most important factors in the success of their work. They were positive and they were sure. Men and women like to hear some one speak who knows what he is talking about and backs every statement he makes by the assured results of the truth in his own experience. Men who saw the first disciples of Jesus marked the difference in their lives which their contact with their Master was making. Then they heard the words of these enthusiastic witnesses. There was no conflict between their testimony and their character.

How can we restore this sense of mission, message and passion to our Christian experience and practice today? Nothing is more vital. Every disciple of Christ now is as much under obligation to make his life a mission as were the first friends of Jesus. How can it be accomplished now, in your community and church?

Ozora S Davis

Chicago Theological Seminary.

The New Missionary Education Chart for Church Schools

Four years ago The Tercentenary Chart was devised to provide a course of missionary education centering in the work of our Congregational societies. Over 1,800 schools have been using it with results that justify its continuance with some changes and improvements.

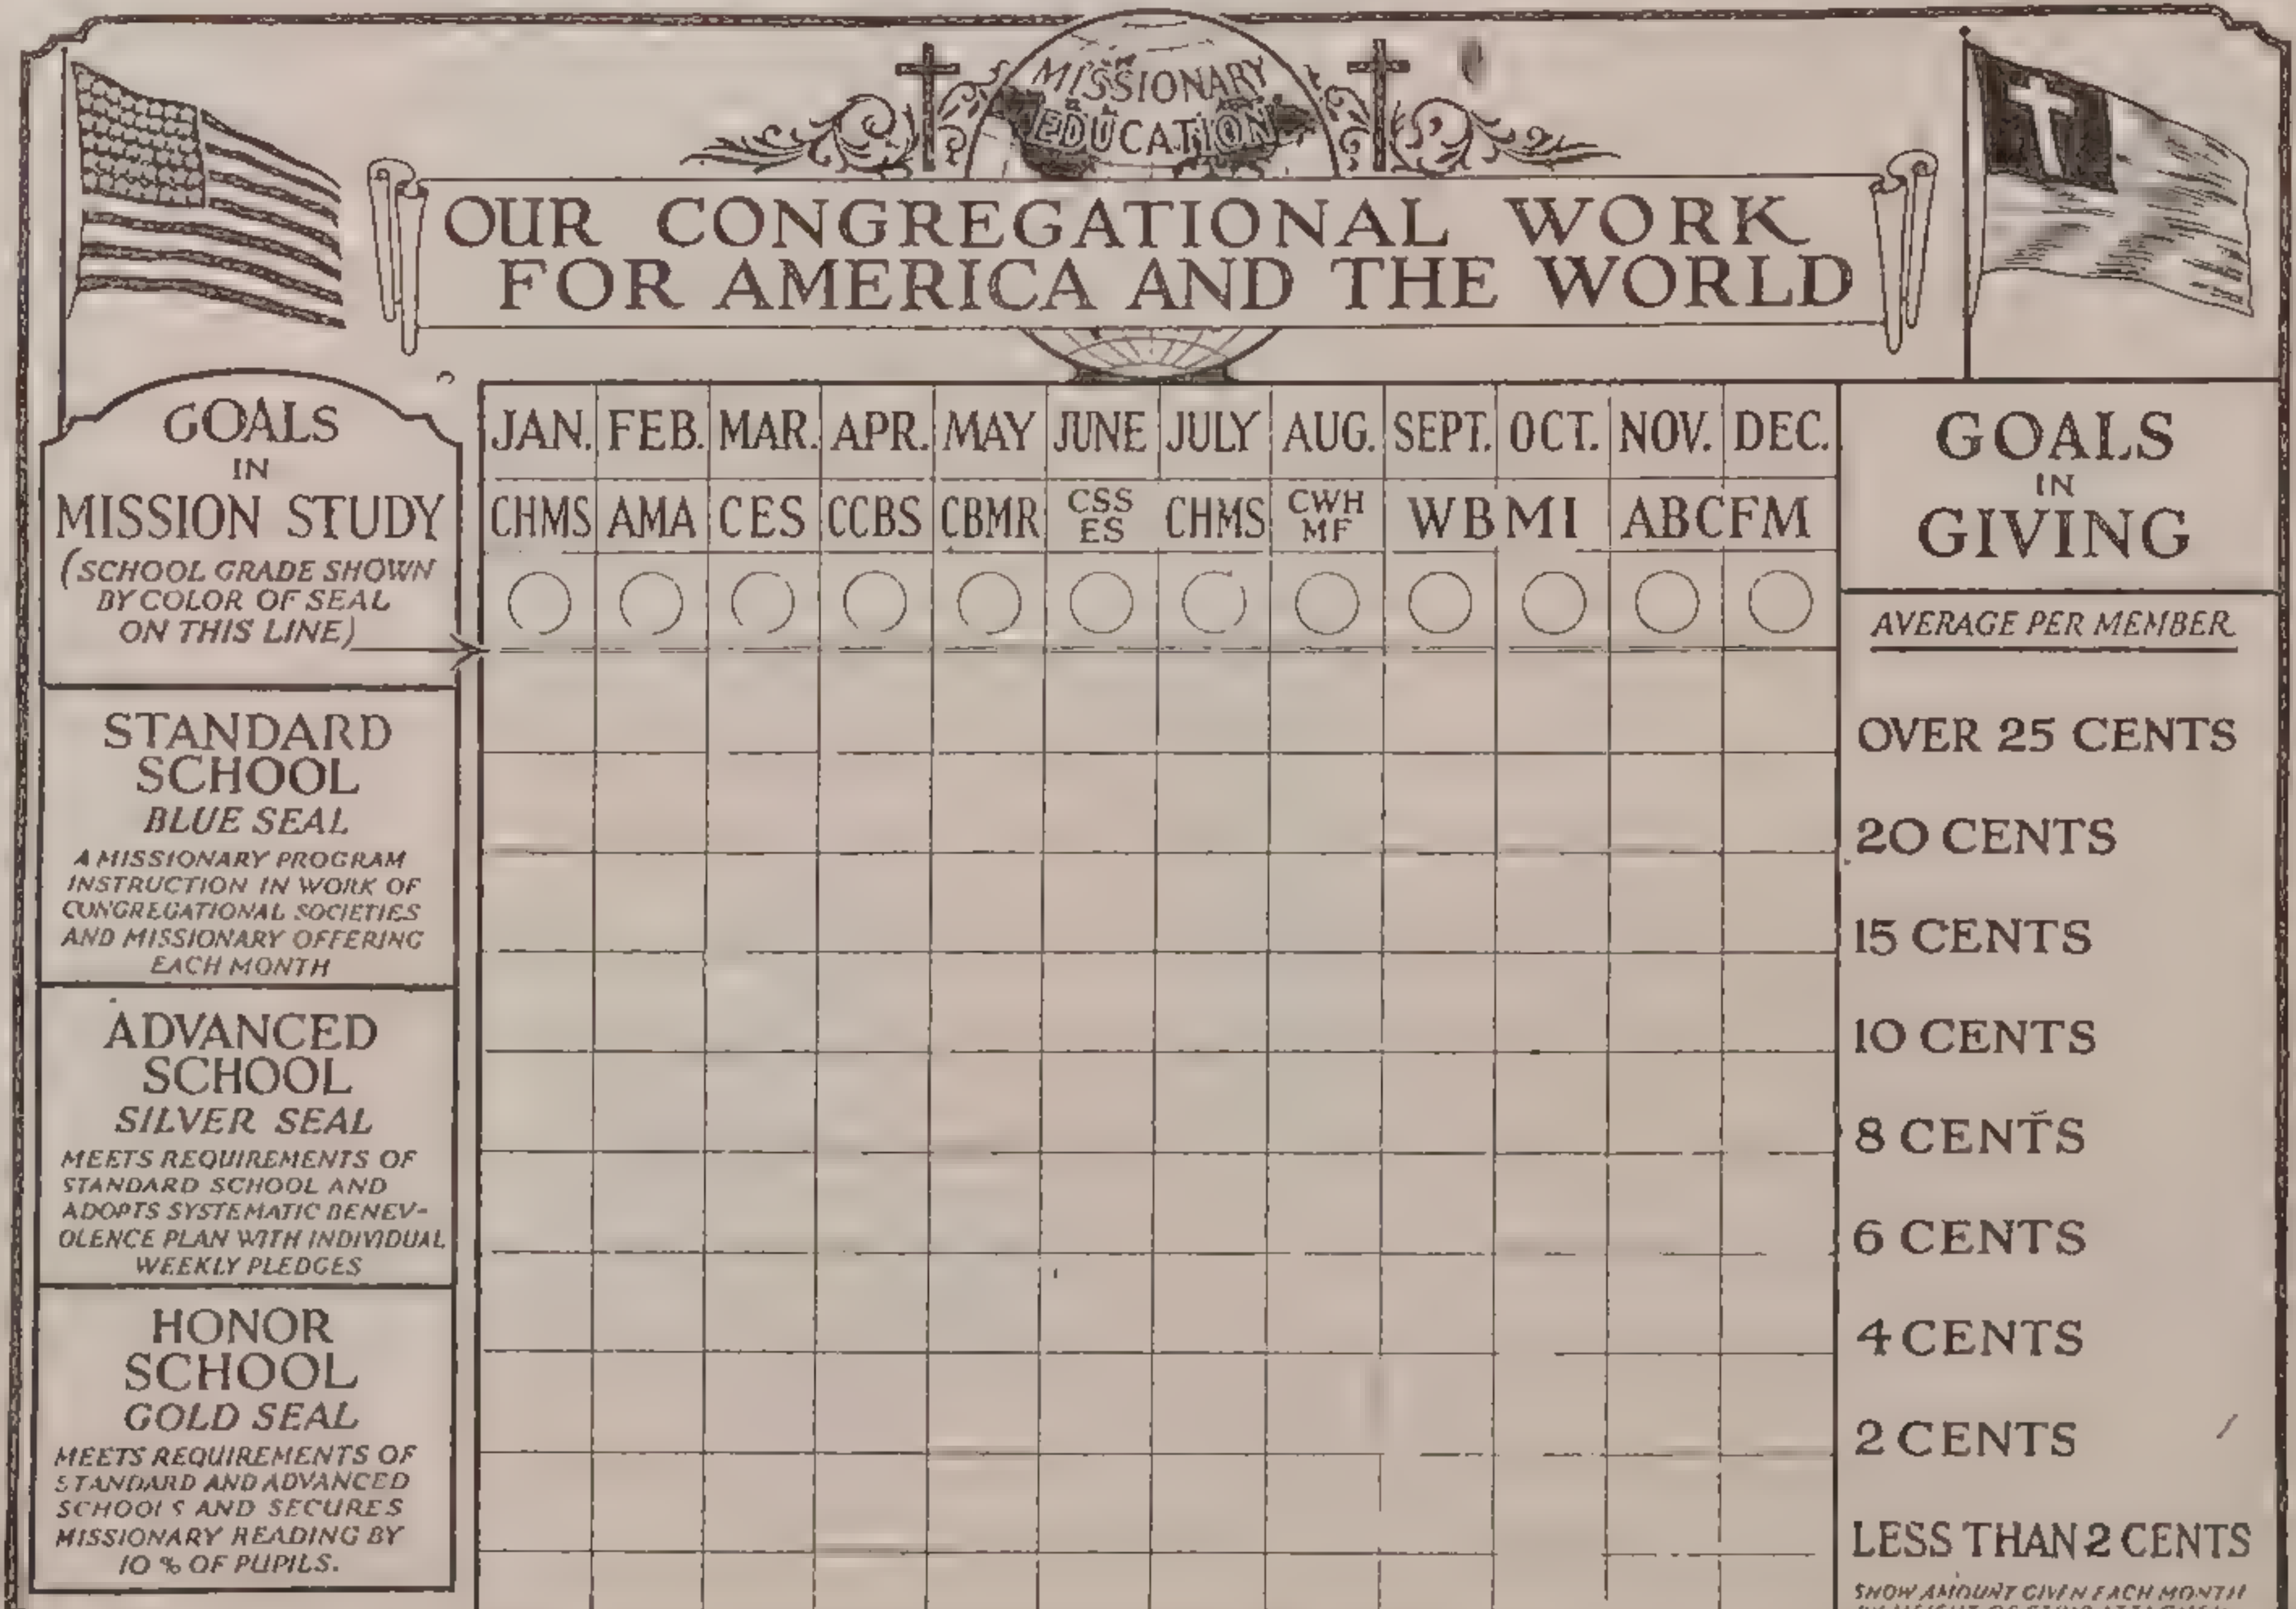
The new Chart for 1921 is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is designed to present, in concrete and graphic fashion, the record of the school's attainments in mission study and in giving. The graded requirements and instructions appear on the chart itself in such a manner as to make it tell its own story to anyone who may observe it.

There are three grades for which the schools may qualify. The Standard School is one that conducts at least one missionary program a month, gives regular instruction in the work of the Cngregational missionary societies, and gives something each month to their work. The Advanced School meets the requirements of the Standard School and, in addition, adopts the systematic benevolence plan with individual pledges payable weekly or at regular intervals. The Honor School meets both the Standard and Advanced requirements and also secures the reading of at least one missionary book a year by ten per cent. or more of the Pupils enrolled in all grades above the Primary Department. The grade attained each month is indicated by affixing a seal of the proper color in the space provided at the head of the column for that month.

The lower part of the central space provides for a graphic record of the gifts of the school from month to month. This is made by affixing a strip of colored paper in the column for the month, long enough to reach from the bottom up to the cross line representing the average gift per member, as indicated in the space at right of chart.

Full information and instructions for enrolling will soon be sent to all schools.

H. W. Gates.



MISSIONARY EDUCATION
OUR CONGREGATIONAL WORK FOR AMERICA AND THE WORLD
GOALS IN MISSION STUDY
(SCHOOL GRADE SHOWN BY COLOR OF SEAL ON THIS LINE)
STANDARD SCHOOL
BLUE SEAL
A MISSIONARY PROGRAM INSTRUCTION IN WORK OF CONGREGATIONAL SOCIETIES AND MISSIONARY OFFERING EACH MONTH
ADVANCED SCHOOL
SILVER SEAL
MEETS REQUIREMENTS OF STANDARD SCHOOL AND ADOPTS SYSTEMATIC BENEVOLENCE PLAN WITH INDIVIDUAL WEEKLY PLEDGES
HONOR SCHOOL
GOLD SEAL
MEETS REQUIREMENTS OF STANDARD AND ADVANCED SCHOOLS AND SECURES MISSIONARY READING BY 10 % OF PUPILS.
JAN. FEB. MAR. APR. MAY JUNE JULY AUG. SEPT. OCT. NOV. DEC.
CHMS AMA CES CCBS CBMR CSS ES CHMS CWH MF WB MI ABCFM GOALS IN GIVING
AVERAGE PER MEMBER
OVER 25 CENTS
20 CENTS
15 CENTS
10 CENTS
8 CENTS
6 CENTS
4 CENTS
2 CENTS
LESS THAN 2 CENTS
SHOW AMOUNT GIVEN EACH MONTH BY HEIGHT OF STRIP ATTACHED IN THE PROPER COLUMN

Christian Education Not Apart

The Christian education of children is not something apart from the rest of their education; it consists rather in the Christian motive and spirit which animates the whole of their upbringing. There is no phase of the life and training of children which we have discussed together in the present course, which has not its direct bearing upon the development within them of Christian character. Even sound physical nurture, to quote Bushnell again, is a means of grace. The forming of right habits, the expansion of life through play, work and study, the companionship of good books and friends, growth in unselfishness and in the capacity and disposition to serve, all are important elements in their training for Christ. Enlistment with him involves the whole of life.

Luther A. Weigle in the "Church School"

THE HOUR OF PRAYER

A Task for the Churches

Comment on the Midweek Prayer Meeting Topic for Nov. 14-20

BY RAYMOND CALKINS

Topic: Christian Internationalism—A Task for Our Churches. Phil. 1:1-11, 27-30; 2:5-11.

God's Love for Mankind. The original Hebrew conception of the state was exclusive and provincial. The Hebrews were the special children of God. He was their Protector against all other peoples. Other nations were to be subordinate and subservient to the Hebrew nation. See how this idea is brought out in such passages as Isaiah 61:4-6.

The later prophets rose to a much higher and truer conception of the Hebrew state in its relation to other nations. According to this conception, the Hebrew people were to be the instrument and agent of God in establishing his kingdom on earth, and in disseminating the knowledge of the true God. The glory of the Hebrew nation was not to consist in possession of the special favor of God, but in the propagation of the knowledge of his love for all mankind. Study in this connection such passages as Isaiah 49:3, 6, and the book of Jonah.

Should Seek to Minister. When Jesus taught that men ought to love one another, there is nothing to show that the law of love was changed or abrogated as the size of the human group to which it applies was enlarged. In a word, the law of service applies to nations as well as to men. It was the unflinching application of this principle to the national life that caused the first recorded conflict between Christ and the leaders of the Jewish people. He insisted that the Jewish nation should find its life in losing it; should seek not to be ministered unto but to minister. This idea ran counter to the chauvinistic ideas of the time and brought Jesus under the charge of being unpatriotic and a traitor to the national ideals. See St. Luke 4:18ff, St. Matt. 20:28.

State as Helper of Other States. The New Testament reiterates Jesus' teaching with respect to the state as a servant of God and the helper of other peoples and nations. When St. Paul announces the truth that he who ascended was he who first had descended (Eph. 4:9), it is probable that he was thinking of the difference between a Roman and a truly Christian imperialism; the first of which was built on power, the second, on service.

Thus Christian internationalism is simply the reproduction in our modern world of the idea of prophets, of Christ, and of the Apostles, of the state as the servant and helper of other states.

How has this idea been flouted and ignored by modern diplomacy? What instances can you point out of an attempt to realize it in the political history of any modern state? To what course of conduct would the application of such a principle lead America at the present time? What does it teach us about the League of Nations, about assuming a mandatory of Armenia, and other issues before our nation at the present time?

REFERENCES: Frederick Lynch, D. D., The Christian in War Time; Charles E. Jefferson, D. D., What We Have Learned from the War; William Pierson Merrill, D. D., The Christian Nation.

Closet and Altar

THE SYMPATHETIC HEART

Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ.—Gal. 6:2.

Christ sympathized because Christ understood. His present sympathy is built upon a full understanding glorified by perfect love. He rejoices with us because he sees the prospect of our victory. And so we may rejoice with men as victors yet to be.—I. O. R.

When thou seest a poor man, my brother, an image of Christ is set before thee. And in the weak behold the weakness which he took upon himself.—Francis of Assisi.

No jewel out of setting shows
As in its own fit nook. So let us learn
To look upon these various lives, that turn
To one illumining center. Lo, each glows
In the full brotherhood of Christ's dear face,
And is, by that relationship divined—
The bond that glorifies your life and mine—
Forever lifted out of commonplace.
—Lucy Larcom.

If we could harness the Niagara of sympathy, and set it to work in educating the ignorant, in helping the helpless, in nursing the sick, in reclaiming the fallen, what gracious revolutions would be worked in a day! Feeling is worth nothing if it bear no tangible fruit. Our Master wept, but he also bled. "He that goeth forth weeping," not he that stays at home weeping, "shall doubtless come again, bringing his sheaves with him."—William L. Watkinson.

Wheresoever thou findest the least trait of Christ's image, if thou lovest him, thou wilt honor it; or if there be nothing of this to be found in him thou lookest on, yet observe what common gift of any kind God hath bestowed on him, judgment, or memory, or faculty in his calling, or any such thing; for these in their degree are to be esteemed, and the person for them. And as there is no man so complete as to have the advantage in everything, so there is no man so low and unworthy but he hath something wherein he is preferable even to those that in other respects are much more excellent.—Robert Leighton.

Teach us, O Lord, that sympathy with the needs and hopes of others which will make our lives like thine. Help us to be alert to discover in the ways of men the traces of thy thought. Keep us from centering all our wishes on our own advancement or enjoyment. Enlarge our vision of the world until it is as wide as opportunity and hope. Forgive us our sins of inattention and neglect and help us to be joyfully aware of all the claims of brotherhood and all thy purposes of giving and of aid which may be fulfilled through us. And to thy name be glory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

—Isaac Ogden Rankin.

The Thankful Life

Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic for Nov. 21-27

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: The Thanksgiving Habit. Ps. 103:1-22. (Thanksgiving meeting.)

Light from the Bible Passage

This is a selection from the "songs of a thousand years." This is a song of gratitude, not for material things chiefly, but for spiritual. Pardon for sins and redemption are more wonderful than bountiful provision for our bodily needs. Real thanksgiving demands the participation of all of the faculties of mind and soul. It is more than a mere enumeration of benefits that may have come our way. God's remembrance of us is perennial and immeasurable—infinite is the thought (vs. 11 and 12). The thankful life links us with the hosts of heaven.

Leads for the Leader

It is evident from the topic of this meeting that it is intended that this shall be something other than an occasion for cataloging our blessings on one particular day in the year.

Emphasize the call to observe Thanksgiving in some more significant way than physically. Are eating an unusually large meal and watching a football game sufficient to express our thanks?

What is the effect of the thankful habit on our use of our time and resources?

Consider this habit and a wider use of prayer.

Thoughts for Members

A thankful heart means a thankful life.

Thinking thanks may be quite different from saying them.

We may not be able to list our blessings in just the terms of this psalm, we may not have had these experiences at all; but the habit of tracing the blessings of life to their first cause in God is the best way of making this mood of personal exultation permanent.—Cleland B. McAfee.

O God, I thank thee for each sight
Of beauty that thy hand doth give—
For sunny skies, and air, and light;
O God, I thank thee that I live.

That life I consecrate to thee;
And ever, as the day is born,
On wings of love my soul would flee,
And thank thee for another morn—

Another day in which to cast
Some silent deed of love abroad,
That greatening as it journeys past
May do some earnest work for God—

Another day to do, to dare,
To tax anew my growing strength,
To arm my soul with faith and prayer,
And so reach heaven and thee at length.
—Caroline A. Mason.

A Moment of Prayer

O Thou who givest us all things which we enjoy, impress upon our oft indifferent minds the obligations we owe to thee and to thy children, of grateful thinking and living, that at all times, from the depths of our souls, we may bless thee. Amen.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Men and Events

The Paths of Inland Commerce, by Archer B. Hulbert (Yale University Press). There is no more interesting and picturesque narrative in the admirable Chronicles of America than this (Vol. 21) which deals with the historical aspects of our inland transportation from the days of the Indian trail and the pack-horse to the time of the steamboat and the railroad. Here is the history of road-making with its toll-gates and bridges and the famous conestoga wagon, an American invention which "must forever be remembered with respect." There is a chapter on The Flat Boat Age, "the riverman, his art, his language, his traffic, seem to belong to days as distant as those of which Homer sang." Then came the steamboat, the development of commerce on the Great Lakes, the building of canals and railroads. It is a wonderful story and well told.

The Agrarian Crusade, by Solon J. Buck (Yale University Press). This excellent monograph (Vol. 45 in the Chronicles of America) is prepared by the Associate Professor of History at the University of Minnesota. It deals with that phase of history which began with the Grange, passed through Greenbackism and Populism and culminated in the free silver campaign in 1896. A concluding chapter on the Leaven of Radicalism covers, all too briefly, the farmers' movements of more recent years, referring in a paragraph only to the Nonpartisan League. But for the ground which the book covers there is no better popular history. It is well written and very interesting.

Crowding Memories, by Mrs. Thomas Bailey Aldrich (Houghton Mifflin). A reservoir of good stories is this volume of reminiscences. Funny things have a way of happening for people blessed with a sense of humor as were Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich. How they enjoyed life! It was by no means all amusing, either. The beginning of the book deals with the sorrows of Edwin Booth and his more unhappy brother. Of course the horizon steadily widened for this interesting young couple. Their first visit to Europe is naïvely rehearsed. It is easy to see them dining out in London and pretending that the august butler is really the king. There are queer little touches like that which describes Browning as clutching his crush hat and sitting on it through dinner. In later years they receive in their own home, Dickens, Bret Harte, Mrs. Stowe and Mark Twain and other distinguished guests. Many have described such experiences but not from the same angle. These records are unique.

Westward with the Prince of Wales, by W. Douglas Newton (Appleton). A vivid and entertaining account of the journey of the Prince of Wales, in the fall of 1919, from Newfoundland, across Canada to the Pacific and back again, concluding with his visit to Washington and New York. Everywhere the Prince was given a truly royal welcome. Mr. Newton was authorized correspondent on the journey and writes not only with accuracy but also with charm and humor.

Reminiscences of Daniel Bliss, edited and supplemented by His Eldest Son (Revell). These reminiscences were written after the veteran missionary and educator was more than eighty years old and have been ably and sympathetically edited. The book is interesting reading from the standpoint of a real revealing human document, as a study of Christian missions in Syria for more than half a century, as the intimate history of the Syrian Protestant College and as an example of the broad faith and abundant labors of the American foreign missionary. Amherst men will enjoy it for its story of his college days. It is the kind of a life story to read aloud before the fire this winter, and to let sink into your soul—when you are worried with the world's crass materialism.

Frank Higgins, Trail Blazer, by Thomas D. Whittles (Interchurch Press). Here is a hero story worth while. Frank Higgins, who lived for and served and saved the lumberjacks of the Northwest, is a man's man all right and manly Christianity incarnate. It is a good thing to have this biography in short popular form. It will grip 'teen-age boys as well as red-blooded men. "I would give twenty years of my life if I could have the devotion of men as Higgins has it," said a man who witnessed the results of his work. Higgins gave the last full measure of his devotion as the price of that influence—and he passed on and up before he was fifty.

Revell

Rev. Daniel Bliss

Shepard of Aintab, by Alice Shepard Riggs (Interchurch World Movement). Here is a hero story to stir the blood, written by the daughter of Dr. Shepard and including the recollections of his son, his sister and his wife. There are stories of summer outings and hunting trips, of bandits and facing the furious mobs, and of modern miracles of the surgeon's knife. It is full of thrills and adventure. It is full too of devoted faith, of the love and sympathy of a "friend to man." In itself it is a great argument for medical missions. "Shepard of Aintab" deserves a place on the world's honor roll and this tribute of his daughter puts him there.

Fellow Laborers, by T. H. Walker (J. McKelvie & Sons). This volume contains the "Lives" of seven leaders of Congregationalism in Scotland and really constitutes a contribution to the religious history of Scotland during the latter half of the nineteenth century and the beginning of the twentieth century. The honor roll consists of William Adamson, Alexander Brown, Robert Craig, William Dunlap, George Gladstone, James Ross and Ambrose Shepherd. The writer, who was a delegate to the International Council at Boston, shows a fine gift of appreciation and sympathy in his work.

Elsie Inglis, The Woman with the Torch, by Eva Shaw McLaren (S. P. C. K.). The story of a woman physician who gave her life to the poor of Edinburgh, to the work for the women of Scotland, and to heroic service in Serbia and Russia during the war. "By her knowledge she cured the wounds of the Serb soldiers. By her shining face she cured their souls. Scotland hardly could send to Serbia a better Christian missionary."

Mystery Stories

The Peddler, by Henry C. Rowland (Harpers). One of the best stories of the season in plot, interest and character-drawing. The Peddler, a returned army officer, traveling in a van and selling all kinds of handy articles, is an adventurous, mysterious, capable and entertaining character. It will not be fair to the reader to explain the plot of the story, but it is thrilling and entertaining from beginning to finish.

Bull-Dog Drummond, by Cyril McNeile (Doran). A scoundrel of the deepest dye concocts a plot which threatens England. Murder is a commonplace in his methods. Bull-Dog Drummond, worthy of his name, looking for excitement, finds himself involved in an adventure which calls for all his ability and energy, and in a romance which will satisfy the most exacting. It is a rushing story, with plot and counterplot.

The Pointing Man, by Marjorie Douie (Dutton). A remarkable mystery story, located in a Burmese city. A boy has disappeared and is supposed to have been murdered. The English police are baffled but a secret service agent is called and with great skill unravels the mystery. The Oriental atmosphere lends much interest to an unusually good story.

The Summons, by A. E. W. Mason (Doran). A story of superior merit in literary value, plot and human interest. It is a war-time story and combines romance and mystery. There are German spies, English secret service men, plot and counterplot, fair maidens and brave men.

The Devil's Paw, by E. Phillip Oppenheim (Little, Brown). A typical Oppenheim war-time story. Certain labor leaders in England are plotting to bring about secretly a peace favorable to Germany. How this is discovered and thwarted makes a stirring tale. The characters are well drawn and the story is well told, as usual.

The Green Eyes of Bast, by Sax Rohmer (McBride). A mysterious and rather gruesome story of a series of murders, and connected with them all, the appearance of a strange woman who, at night, has luminous eyes, shining in the dark like the eyes of a tigress. The police are baffled for a long time and, in fact, never wholly solve the mystery.

No Clue, by James Hay, Jr. (Dodd, Mead). A detective story with an intricate plot and well concealed solution.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Tales of the Mayflower Children

II. Keen Eye is Faithful

By Pauline Carrington Bouve

What Happened in the First Installment—John Billington has made a friend of Keen Eye, the nephew of the Indian chief, Corbitant, who is unfriendly to the settlers at Plymouth. Keen Eye leads John deep in the forest as a test of the ability of a white boy to follow a long trail. They meet Corbitant, who challenges John to bear the test of Sackima—to be taken blindfolded into the forest and with bow and arrows, hatchet and knife, with which to get food, to be left there till the chief sends for him. John accepts.

The feeling of loneliness that fell over John Billington like a pall was paralyzing in its effect upon the boy. Never before had he felt entirely helpless, and for an hour or two he sat leaning against the trunk of a great pine tree, almost in a stupor. How could Keen Eye, who had seemed his friend, leave him in this way? Was all the Indian race treacherous? This was the first bitter thought in his mind. No, Samoset and other chiefs had been friendly and even generous to the white men, he reflected.

It was not strange that these tribesmen remembered the treatment they had received at the hands of the cruel Englishman, Hunt, who some years before had kidnapped some of them and sold them in Europe. These unfortunate warrior slaves had finally made their way back to their native American shores. While living in Cornhill, London, with John Slanie, a merchant, they had learned to speak a little English. Some of the red men, too, had picked up a smattering of broken English from the English fishermen at Monhiggon, in Maine. It was this knowledge that had so astonished the Pilgrims when Massasoit, the great Sagamore, held out his hands and said in rough, gutteral accents: "Welcome, Englishmen! Welcome!"

Keen Eye had seemed his friend. Under Corbitant's influence, would he now betray him? This question came to his mind again and again, and yet he certainly thought he had caught a note of protest, nay, almost defiance, in the Indian lad's voice as he spoke to his uncle in a language John did not understand. As the hours passed and no sound broke the stillness save the cries of birds and hooting of owls, all hope left his heart, but a dogged resolve to make an effort to get back to the clearing, from which point he was sure he could find his way home, gradually formed and grew in his mind.

It was now too dark to find his way without the aid of a light, but he did not dare to strike his tinder-box lest he might set fire to the pine underbrush, for a fresh, cold breeze had risen. He must wait until morning, he decided, before venturing forth; and the best thing to do would be to climb into some tree, which would not only afford protection from prowling wild beasts, but would be a warmer and dryer place of refuge than the sodden earth.

Though stiff and weary, he yet managed to climb far up among the friendly branches of a large oak, and, where three limbs branched out, found a resting place which might have been comfortable enough in daylight and for a short time, but was not a pleasant place for an all-night vigil. For hours the boy half sat, half leaned in his leafy perch, straining his eyes and ears as the sound of crackling twigs and wind-swayed branches broke the forest stillness. But even danger cannot always keep a tired boy awake, and, as the night wore on, John dozed, only to awaken with frequent starts. He shifted his position often, for he knew it would not do to fall sound asleep, and he also tried to keep awake by counting over to himself all the geese and ducks he had shot since the landing of the Mayflower, and the number of times he had gone fishing with Keen Eye. Try as he would, however, his eyes would close, and at last all memory of his day's adventure, from his meeting with Keen Eye to his being left alone either to starve or find his way back to the colonists' settlement, faded from him.

How long he slept in his forked nest among the branches he never knew, for the sun was shining when he was aroused from a dream of his mother calling him to light the fire. He sat up so suddenly that he almost lost his balance, for he did not at first recollect where he was, so vivid had been his dream. As he rubbed his eyes he heard a low chuckle, and looking down, saw Keen Eye under the tree, looking up at him.

"Come! I will lead you to the village of the Manomets," said the boy. "The chief wishes to trade skins to the white men for knives and a copper chain such as they gave to Massasoit, and will welcome you and feed you. Come!"

"Right gladly will I follow any trail that leads to food and fire," said John, as he swung himself from his perch, "for I am fairly perished with cold and hunger. But what said Corbitant about your coming for me?"

Keen Eye cast a swift glance about him and touched a brown finger to his lips.

"Corbitant knows only that I have gone to trap a fox. Keen Eye is the son of a warrior, and warriors let not their friends die for want of food. Take and eat." Taking a piece of dried venison and a bit of maize cake from his leathern pouch, he handed them to John, who seized the food and ate it ravenously before he thanked his friend, for he was half famished.

"The meat and bread have put new life in me," he said, "and I thank you, and will ever remember this day's kindness. Now indeed I be ready to go to the end of the world with my faithful friend. Let us hasten, for I am stiff with cold."

It was about noon when Keen Eye struck a plainly marked trail, and two hours later they reached the shore, where the smoke from a large fire rose before a group of about twenty wigwams. The squaws were busy roasting venison and baking maize cakes on flat rocks heated in the coals. The savory odor of the food made the hungry boy dizzy. Keen Eye advanced boldly, and it was clear that his story of the white boy's adventure pleased and interested his listeners, for the chief and the young braves came forward and by their gestures made John understand that he was welcome. They piled a birch-bark platter with food and set it before him, making motions with their fingers to their mouths, an invitation which he accepted with more promptness than good manners, perhaps. The simple savage folk nudged each other and grunted with satisfaction as they saw the food disappear before the hungry boy's attack. Then an old squaw said something to the chief, who led his guest to a wigwam, and, pointing to a pile of deerskins, said, "Sleep! Sleep!" And John Billington, with no thought of anything save his weary limbs, threw himself down and in three minutes was sound asleep.

When he awoke, another day had dawned, and his Indians friends were gathered about him with garments of leather, bead necklaces, and all the articles of their native dress, which they made him understand he was to wear in exchange for his own muddy and sodden homespun clothing. Thinking it wise to accept what was offered in a spirit of friendliness, he made haste to put on the strange garments. The chief then led him to a pool of water, and, as he was looking at the reflection of himself with something very like admiration, Keen Eye came running to them crying out, "White men come! White men come!" as he waved his arms toward the sea. For a moment the face of the chief of the Manomet village darkened, but it quickly cleared as he bade both lads follow him to meet the strangers.

An odd feeling came over John Billington, for he knew that these were his friends, and he felt that his appearance would not please them. There was nothing to be done, however, but go forward in all his savage finery.

There was subdued excitement in the village, but the Indians soon assumed a stolid air as if it were no unusual happening to have visitors from Plymouth Towne, and the chief went forward to the water's edge, where the little shallop from Plymouth was making ready to anchor.

The Chief of the Manomets received the white men with great dignity. "The son of the white chief is safe," he said. "Will not the white braves smoke the peace-pipe and eat deer's meat with their red brothers, that there may be friendship between them and the Manomets?"

"Right gladly would we do that, were it not that the boy's absence hath caused great alarm, and we may not tarry," answered John Alden, who was spokesman. "We thank thee for the care and protection given him, and we have brought these knives and this fustian cloth as tokens of our gratitude and friendship," and he placed before the Indian chief the articles enumerated as he stepped ashore. "Bring the lad hither."

The stalwart chief beckoned to Keen Eye to fetch the white boy. But as John ran eagerly forward, John Alden motioned the canoe in which he had been paddled ashore from the shallop to be turned back toward the little vessel. "Nay, lad," he said as John stood before him looking shamefaced, though his heart was full of joy at the thought of home and his mother's face. "Nay, thou hast given trouble enough. Foot it through the water in thy gewgaws as thou art. I trow thy coming in this gear will make such holiday show for all the maids and lads in the settlement that thou wilt be slow to put thy betters to so much pains again soon!"

With a burning cheek and a sore feeling in his heart, John Billington thanked the Indian chief for his hospitality, said farewell to Keen Eye, and waded out to the waiting shallop while the sailors jeered and shouted that a strange sea beast was bearing down upon them. Their jibes were bitter to bear, John thought, after the dangers he had borne, but Master Alden and Captain Standish and the Governor had much on their side, too, and at all events there was comfort in the thought that his mother would be glad to see him, no matter what clothes he wore, and that Keen Eye—the friend in whom he had believed—Keen Eye had been faithful!

Copyright, 1920, by Congregational Publishing Society

IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE

What Women Have Done

Best Achievements of Church Women's Societies

Exhibit and Cake Contest

By Rosa H. Banks

We are a small, rural community, our church numbering about 150 resident members. This summer, at the annual midsummer bazaar given by the Ladies' Sewing Society of this church, in addition to the usual booths for fancy work, candy, ice cream, bread and cake, general utility articles and children's department, two new features were introduced.

One of these features (originated by one of the members) consisted of a "National Exhibit," presided over by Uncle Sam and Aunt Columbia. The idea consisted of 48 ladies, each choosing one state in the Union and procuring at least one donated article from that state, to be, if possible, typical of the state, these articles to be on sale. Each lady chose a state in which lived some friend to whom she could write for assistance. It was left to the originality of each lady to work up the exhibits of her state. Quite a rivalry existed among the ladies in making their states excel both financially and in attractiveness. The states were judged on various points—attractiveness, amount of money received and variety of exhibits.

Here are just a few of the states with their most typical exhibit: Texas, fresh figs; Nevada, copper dish; Maryland, canned tomatoes; Arkansas, bag of rice; Maine, salt codfish; Colorado, a ring containing one of Colorado's gems; Ohio, two carving knives; Iowa, bunches of grains and packages of Quaker Oats; Virginia, peanuts.

The lady having Vermont in charge converted the pail of Vermont maple sugar into little cakes, thus doubling its value.

Connecticut, our own state, was worked up in rather an original manner. Only articles beginning with letters in the word Connecticut were solicited. These are a few of the articles representing the letter C: A sack of Cracked Corn, donated by a local merchant; articles of China, Cash (a bottle containing $11 donated in ten-cent pieces). For I was Ice Cream, donated by an ice cream manufacturer. An Umbrella, donated by a store, represented U. Several pounds of nutmegs stood for N and eggs for E. These are just a few of the articles on this table.

There were souvenir post cards from each state. Some of these were sold in sets, one from every state. The collections representing the state capitol buildings were very interesting.

The National Exhibit alone brought in over $200.

The other special feature consisted of a cake contest. Three prizes of ten, seven and five dollars were offered for the best cakes, judged on the following points: appearance, texture, lightness, flavor and baking. The cakes were sold after being judged. This contest proved a great advertisement for the bazaar. Many delicious cakes were entered, some with ingenious decorations.

The whole bazaar netted $450, $530 having been taken in.

Greenfield Hill, Ct.

A Fair-less Church

By Mrs. Thomas O'Hallaran

The best achievement by a church Women's Society that I know about was that achieved by the women of the First Congregational Church of San Diego, Cal. The church is fairless, sales-less, dinner-less, tea-less, social-less, dinners, teas and socials being given frequently but entirely in the interest of the social life of the church, not to raise money. When any charge is made it is only to cover the cost of the food, not for profit. How is it done? Do they live without money? No. Like all women, they simply must have money. Including their pledges to the Women's Missionary Boards, the women adopt a budget each year of from twelve to fourteen hundred dollars. Regular gifts of money to five local charities are made monthly. They also meet their share in the expense of janitor service, telephone, furniture and furnishings for the church interior.

Several weeks ago we asked our readers to send us short stories, telling what has been accomplished by some of our most successful church women's societies and explaining just how they did it. The replies are varying and all of them suggestive, making it difficult for us to decide which of a number of good articles is the best. The prizes have been awarded to: (1) Mrs. Rosa H. Banks of Greenfield Hill, Ct., who writes on "A National Exhibit and a Cake Contest;" (2) Mrs. Thomas O'Hallaran, of San Diego, Cal., whose article is entitled "Expending Energy in the Right Direction;" and (3) S. Irene Barbour, of Huntington, Ind., who describes how her Woman's Society made possible the education of a young woman ambitious to become a missionary. We are also publishing one other article submitted in the contest, which, with several others we shall print later, deserves honorable mention.

How do they get the money? For they do, and for some years have been the envy of such women's church societies in this city as are still plodding along with fairs, sales, etc., in the old benighted way.

If a body of women agree to do a thing, look for its accomplishment. First, the women agreed—agreed that they had spent too much for what they got in the old manner of "raising money," and so they agreed to give it in pledges, paid monthly. In the fall of each year, each woman, using her conscience, gives an extra gift of money, equal to what a fair or sale always cost her, as a thank-offering that she is released from the labor and perplexities that attend the "getting up a fair." One woman said, "Well, it always cost me $10 anyway, but I am not going to give any such sum." But there have always been "slackers," and there always will be, and likewise there have always been the loyal ones, and always will be (and they outnumber the former many times). These measure their pledges and their extra gift in love and gratitude, and love, we know "never faileth."

"But it is so sociable to meet and make things for a sale. It creates and increases social intercourse," is heard on every side.

Perhaps—but granting it, cannot women be as sociable, when meeting to sew for needy children, as for a "sale," as do the women of this society once every month? But the materials, they cost money, how are they provided? Californians like "showers," and two are held each year for this department. There things new and old, and "siller and gold" are "showered" onto the tables, made ready in faith that they will be filled, and the Children's Homes, Red Cross, Associated Charities, and individual needy cases of the city are not strangers to the product of the busy hands and hours spent in happy comradeship in achieving this truly Christlike service.

San Diego, Cal.

Educating a Future Missionary

By S. Irene Barbour

A church in Huntington, Ind., found in its midst a young woman, motherless, and whose father saw no good in college education, especially for girls. He, therefore, made all manner of objections and quite refused to help make it possible for her to go farther than through high school. To the girl this was so great a grief that to her pastor's wife, who had the good fortune to be of a sympathetic nature, she came saying, "I cannot give it up. I think of it days and dream of it nights. How can I be a missionary without an education? And how can I give that up when it has been the hope of my life?"

The Mistress of the Manse pondered the matter in her heart until finally wisdom seemed to be given, as she thought why should not our Woman's Union adopt Margarita and send her to college? The first thing must be an outfit of sensible substantial clothes. We can help make many of them. Some who cannot make clothes will donate money with which shoes and other necessary things can be bought. Money for board and tuition must also be raised but with a church as large as ours, that can easily be done, once the people are interested. So the telephone was busy as one and another was informed.

It was my good fortune to be in the midst during these days and election returns are not watched any more closely than were these returns to this appeal. A Sunday school class would get a good wool serge and see that it was becomingly made. A young married woman who had many pretty clothes would gladly turn over a few for such a good cause. A pretty evening gown was thus assured. One never-to-be-forgotten day 20 or more ladies met at a country home where our college-girl-to-be was doing her part toward supplying future needs by helping through the summer vacation (?) with the housework. Busy were the fingers and happy the hearts as one garment after another was ready to be started, then assigned and finally finished. But happiest of all was the girl who saw her dreams coming true. And when a day or two later, I, an unseen listener, heard her say to the instigator of all this, "I hugged and kissed everything that was made," I felt this surely is the beginning of the best achievement by a church woman's society and this is the story of its beginning. The end will be as the Father wills, for it has all been done in his name and for his cause.

Huntington, Ind.

Carpeting the Church

By Abbie L. Bancroft

Among the many notable achievements by Plymouth Church Women's Society, Worcester, Mass., the most unusual, perhaps, was the method of recarpeting the auditorium.

The following circular letter was sent to members of the church and congregation and to former members living in other cities and towns and even in other countries:

> As may be known to you, The Woman's Association of Plymouth Church have assumed the large responsibility of recarpeting the auditorium, together with other necessary repairs.
>
> This entails upon them the necessity of raising a sum of more than sixteen hundred dollars.
>
> The Association faces the situation with undaunted courage, but have the feeling that many would consider it a privilege to assist in the good work. With this in mind we suggest the following plan. The carpet, made and laid, cost us $1.90 per yard.
>
> If you would consider it a favor to pay for one or more yards of carpet (or even less) in the house of the Lord, your own church, kindly fill out the following slip and mail or hand to our Treasurer, Miss Mary L. Taylor.
>
> A reply not later than Oct. 15 would be greatly appreciated, that our first payment may be a prompt one.

The slip accompanying the letter was as follows:

> I hereby signify my willingness to assist your Association in its effort to recarpet our church, and inclose $...... to pay for .... yards, at $1.90 per yard, ½ yard 95c.
>
> Signature ....

The Woman's Association hoped that $500 might be realized by this plan, and were made glad by the receipt of more than $1,100. The remainder of the sum required was quickly secured by entertainments of various kinds.

Students and graduates and other young people vied with each other in buying half a yard or one or more yards of carpeting and the great value of the achievement was the spirit of loyal, affectionate co-operation in beautifying and enriching the House of the Lord—Plymouth Church, in particular.

Worcester, Mass.

New Secretary for Rocky Mountain District

Rev. C. H. Harrison, a successful pastor for some years in the college town of Pullman, Wash., has accepted the call of the Church Building Society to the Secretaryship for the Rocky Mountain Region, with headquarters at Denver, and has taken up the work. Mr. Harrison is a Canadian and had his training at Bangor Seminary, Dartmouth College and Yale Divinity School. He had a pastorate at Portland, Me., was Professor of Philosophy in the New Hampshire State College, and then served nine years at Pullman. Here he led in the erection of a commodious church building and made the church in a very real sense the church home of many students. He served as a "Y" Secretary in France for about a year and on his return to this country helped in the solicitation on the Pacific Coast for the Pilgrim Fund. The District which he will serve extends from Washington to Texas.

Honors to a Woman Worker

When a Congregational woman has gone about the country in the interests of a great enterprise so constantly as has Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury of the American Missionary Association, it is a signal honor when one of the hundreds of churches which have been profited by her entertaining and forceful setting forth of the Negro problem makes a special recognition of what she has done. It happened that her first address as Field Secretary of the A. M. A. outside of New England was delivered at First Church, Elyria, O., 25 years ago. Since then she has been repeatedly in a large majority of all the states of the Union, but returned to Elyria, Oct. 22, at the invitation of pastor and people, who desired an anniversary visit and gave a reception and supper for her at which were present a considerable number of officials of the Ohio Women's Home Missionary Union, as well as personal friends from Oberlin and Sandusky. Rev. J. H. Grant presided. Songs in Negro dialect were sung. The minutes of the meeting held 25 years ago were read by Mrs. John G. Percy, Corresponding Secretary of the Home Missionary Union of Ohio, while Dr. F. Q. Blanchard represented officially the A. M. A. To all of these sincere and cordial words Mrs. Woodbury fittingly responded. A close personal friend, who is a member of First, Elyria, presented through Mr. Grant a check for $1,000, to be devoted to some distinctive mis-

A CHALLENGE

The present situation in Paris is a real challenge to the American people. Big business is sending over thousands of employees to assist in the rebuilding of France, and in the Latin Quarter of Paris is a great body of American students pursuing special courses at the University and at the art and music studios.

The need of meeting places for social and religious purposes was never greater, but the provision is very inadequate.

The American Church in Paris

is making a tremendous effort to meet these conditions and is challenging the people of America to stand back of its enlarged program.

An adequate Building and Endowment Fund must be raised immediately here in America, and this appeal to our Christian people is made that these young business men and students shall come under the most wholesome influences while in Paris. When they later return to America, they must come fitted to be constructive leaders in the finer life of our Nation.

Strong in Mind, Body and Spirit

Two million dollars will be needed for new sites and buildings and the carrying on of a broad and comprehensive social and religious program. Generous contributions and assurances already indicate that $500,000 will be given by the various denominational boards of America, $500,000 will be raised for Endowment by 500 churches. Many very generous contributions to the above have already been received. This one million dollars is payable over a period of three years, but $1,000,000 must immediately be pledged by individuals to provide for present urgent needs.

This Is Where You Can Help

We need large gifts but we also need small gifts. Complete information of the whole program gladly furnished on request. Send just as generous a check as you can to the Co-Pastor, REV. STANLEY ROSS FISHER, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

Make checks payable to SAMUEL W. THURBER, Treasurer.

The Enlarged Program of the American Church in Paris has the endorsement of the Federal Council of Churches of America and the support of the leading ministers and laymen of the various denominations.

sionary work carried on by the A. M. A. in Mrs. Woodbury's name.

Churches Organized

That Congregational work is growing is evident from the fact that new churches are being organized in various parts of the country. Among the youngest members of our group are the churches at Trail City, S. D., and at Groveland Park, St. Paul, Minn.

First, Trail City, S. D., was organized Oct. 10, with a charter membership of 10. Two years ago Assistant Supt. H. C. Juell started services at this place. Since that time this work has been ably cared for by Mrs. Esch of Mobridge, who has gone there once a month. A year ago Mr. F. L. Reetzke of Chicago rendered helpful service to the people during the summer months. It was finally felt that conditions were ripe for organizing the work, so Superintendent Juell went on the field and organized the church. Trail City, though still small, is growing. Indications are that this will be quite a town in the near future.

Groveland Park is a rapidly growing section of St. Paul, Minn. The St. Paul Congregational Union last February purchased choice lots for a church site, and during the summer a chapel was erected at a cost of $6,000. The dimensions of the building are 26 by 48 feet with full basement for social activities. It is so constructed that later it may become a part of a larger building. The chapel was opened Oct. 10 and a Sunday school was organized the following Sunday. The work so far has been under the auspices of the St. Paul Union, the Superintendent of the Twin Cities, Rev. J. P. Miller, directing the details of building and of canvassing the community. Mr. Paul B. Bresnicker, assistant to the pastor of Olivet, will be in charge. The name of the new daughter in the St. Paul fellowship is "Grace."

A Successful Midweek Meeting

A rather unusual midweek meeting has been held during the past year by Westchester, White Plains, N. Y., of which Rev. W. D. Street is pastor. It is called a "Community Church Night." The meeting opens at eight o'clock with half an hour of community singing; this is followed by an address or stereopticon lecture on some topic of general interest, lasting until 9.15, the volunteer choir practice taking place at the same time. At 9.15 the meeting resolves itself into a social gathering, at which all those present have an opportunity to become acquainted and light refreshments are served. Committees of the church are urged to hold their meetings at any time during the evening, the intention being to bring together all the executive forces of the church for conference on this one evening, giving an opportunity for both business and sociability. Dr. Street reports that the plan is meeting with encouraging success.

These Wednesday night "Community" meetings are being held in the new parish house, which was added to the equipment of the White Plains Church this fall at a cost of $40,000, practically all of which has already been subscribed. The purchase was made possible at this time through the generosity of the owner of the property, Mr. B. H. Fancher, who offered it to the church at much less than the market price, making at the same time a liberal subscription of his own toward the expense.

Pilgrim Sermon Topics

In response to our request in the issue of Oct. 7, these lists of topics of sermons on the Pilgrims have been received. Other lists were published Oct. 21 and Nov. 4.

(Rev. J. Burford Parry, Hope Church, Springfield, Mass.)

The Pilgrims of the Old World.
Great Characters in the Adventure of Democracy.
The Separatists and Civil Liberty.
The Separatists and the Open Bible.
Elizabeth's Challenge and the Answer.
The Adventure of Faith at Leyden.
John Robinson. The Pilgrim Pastor.
The Adventure of Faith in America.
Pilgrim Democracy and Social Liberty.
Pilgrim Virtue and Abhorrence of Impurity.
Pilgrim Morals in Home Preservation.
Pilgrim Reflectiveness in National and State Issues.
The Pilgrim's Unrestricted Path to God.

(Rev. L. B. Goodrich, Trinitarian Church, Taunton, Mass.)

The Pilgrim—A Voyager into the Unknown.
"The Women Who Dared the Perilous Sea."
The Pilgrim Founds a State.
The Pilgrim at Worship.
The Pilgrim's Thanksgiving.
The Pilgrim as a Friend and Neighbor.
The Pilgrim Church—Congregational World Work.
Carrying on the Pilgrim Idea.
The Pilgrimage of Life.

Have Lively Discussions

This fall Mt. Vernon, Boston, Mass., Rev. Sidney Lovett, pastor, is holding a helpful series of young people's meetings at which the topics discussed are live and thought-provoking. Some of them which are proving of exceptional interest are as follows:

The Open Road.

What are the marks of a "Seven-day-in-the-week Christian?" 1. Have you ever known one? 2. Can twentieth century Christianity involve anything less? 3. What most imperils one's Christian life?

Where do you and the Church part company? 1. Can you keep up with it, or is it too slow for you? 2. From what standpoint should all criticism of the Church arise? 3. Can a person be a Christian and not a church member?

Who is to blame for the present industrial unrest—the employer or the employee?

A "square deal" for the foreigner in America. 1. Who is "the foreigner"? 2. Will Americanization or assimilation cure race prejudice? 3. Your part in the "square deal."

The moral value of individual decision. 1. "Every man's life a plan of God." 2. Does this preclude the necessity of decision? 3. The power of example in individual decision.

From West to East

CALIFORNIA

The Church as a Social Agency

The charge that the church is wholly out of step with modern social and political movements cannot be substantiated at least as far as First, Stockton, is concerned. This church has a wide-awake Social Service Department, which is conducting a night school for Syrians in the foreign districts of the city. In four months' time, meeting only twice a week, women who were totally illiterate completed the first reader and could write legibly. Not only was the school managed by the Department, but the teacher selected was one of the church members.

It is, however, in other activities of the community that the church shows up as a social agency. Stockton is famed as the home of the Coffee Club. The originator of the movement and the present Social Service Director is a member of this church, as is also one of the Board of Directors. The Country Farm Adviser, the Director of the City Playground Commission, the City Director of the Camp Fire Girls, the Representative in the State Legislature, are all members of First and the new City Librarian is soon to become a member. This church furnishes the Executive Secretary, the Physical Director and three members of the Board of Directors of the City Y. M. C. A. When the Stockton Boy Scout Council made up its Executive Committee two members were selected from this church and the first Scout Executive became a member during his term of office. When Uncle Sam made up his Draft Board, which has recently been disbanded, he selected, as one of the three the President of the Board of Trustees of First.

To a member of this church the city owes its gratitude for the promotion of a successful day nursery and one of the physician members is physician to the City Clinic, while another has served recently as City Health Officer and is Secretary of the local Red Cross Chapter. Five public school teachers and two nurses find their church fellowship with this church, as does also the president of the City Women's Missionary Union and the Secretary of the County Sunday School Association, the vice-president of the Ministerial Union and the president of one of our prominent women's clubs. Six members of the church are members of the Rotary Club, one of whom is president at the present time.

D. J. S.

KANSAS

Wichita Church Sends Out Christian Workers

Fairmount, Wichita, is cherishing an ideal born of a desire to meet the crying need of Christian workers at home and abroad. It has several already in their respective fields, among them Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Jones who are working on a man-sized job at Rosedale, Kan. A service was held on Sunday evening, Oct. 3, for the consecration of four other of its young people to the work of the Kingdom, two at home and two abroad. Rev. and Mrs. M. N. Isely are now on their way to Constantinople for the work of the American Board. Mr. Isely was graduated from the Yale School of Religion last spring and his wife is a trained nurse. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cronin have taken up the duties of the General Secretaryship of the Y. M. C. A. in McPherson. These six young people were members of the Fairmount Church and all are graduates of Fairmount College.

Both the church and the college see the vision of a constant stream of well-equipped young people going out to swell the ranks of the workers both at home and abroad and count it a privilege to send out such workers. C. B. W.

MISSOURI

St. Louis Ministers Have "Painting Bee"

A little Congregational mission church in St. Louis county sprang into the limelight recently in a way that surprised all the participants. The Congregational Ministers' Union of St. Louis abandoned the regular Monday morning program of reports and addresses in favor of a "lark" in the country. Fourteen of the ministers, equipped with paint brushes, wearing overalls and provided with dollar contributions from their churches to pay for paint, assembled at the village church of Sappington and proceeded to paint the meeting-house. Seven hours later

CHRISTMAS MUSIC HALL-MACK CO'S FREE
FREE SAMPLES TO SUPT., PASTOR or COM.
of our new Christmas Services
Christmas Helper, No. 8, 15c.
Songs, Exercises, Recitations.
Christmas Story, 25c.
Cantata (easy) for school or chorus.
His Star, 25c. A song story.
In the Garden — By C. Austin Miles.
On Victor No. 18020; Columbia, 78026.
Edison, 80520. Sheet music, 25c at all dealers.
Hall-Mack Co.
Adam Geibel Co. } 1018-20 Arch Street, Phila., Pa.

the building was marvelously transformed in appearance, the thirsty shingle walls not having tasted paint for the past 16 years.

Meanwhile the ladies of the Sappington church had served a chicken dinner on tables under the trees and staff photographers from two metropolitan dailies had appeared to give local immortality to the scene. Their pictures and stories were prominently displayed in four editions of these papers, the St. Louis Star and Globe-Democrat, with six large cuts aggregating more than one page of space, giving an altogether surprising degree of advertising to a simple act of Christian fraternity. For a Monday holiday, the "Painting Bee" is commended to all ministerial bodies.

MINNESOTA

No Longer Federated with Methodists

GRANADA, after three years of federation with the M. E. Church, now goes alone, the Methodist Conference having broken the federation. This action was so much against the wishes of the Methodist people that 15 of them have withdrawn from their own church to unite with the Congregational Church. The pastor was recently given a $300 increase in salary.

INDIANA

Whiting Takes Rapid Strides Forward

During the past five years WHITING has weathered the storm of industrial unrest and strikes. The membership today is four times larger than in 1915, and all the members are factory people. A religious day school was opened Oct. 1, with more pupils than can be accommodated. The pastor, Rev. C. E. Trueblood, was given a purse, a raise in salary, and an assistant pastor on his fifth anniversary as pastor of this church. Miss Lily Best of Black River Falls, Wis., has been called to be Director of Religious Education.

ILLINOIS

First, Waukegan, Redecorates Church

FIRST, WAUKEGAN, whose building was dedicated before the Civil War and whose congregation was organized many years before that, has during the past few weeks been redecorated and cleaned throughout at a cost of about $1,500. A reconsecration service was held on Oct. 10, when Rev. C. S. Laidman, pastor-at-large of the Chicago Congregational Missionary and Extension Society, preached in the morning and assisted in the communion service which followed. In the evening a splendid musical service was rendered by the choir. Practically the whole amount necessary to cover the expense of the repairs had been pledged by the close of the services on Sunday. The church is now entirely self-supporting and is looking forward eagerly to a most successful church year. Rev. J. H. Barnett is pastor.

Dr. Burhans Pastor of Trinity, Chicago

TRINITY, CHICAGO, is prospering under the leadership of Rev. F. D. Burhans, who came to the pastorate the latter part of the summer. Dr. Burhans is not new to this part of Chicago and so began his work at once with efficiency. He was for several years pastor of Washington Park, Chicago, and then, after a pastorate at Dallas, Tex., served Park Manor on the South Side. During the 12 years' service at Washington Park he received 900 members and in the four years at Park Manor 400. Since his pastorate at Park Manor he has aided in the raising of the money for the Graham Taylor Hall at Chicago Seminary. Trinity is the only English-speaking church in a community of 20,000 people and thus offers an unusual opportunity. Twenty-six members were received at the last communion service and the audiences have more than doubled since Dr. Burhans came. The organization has a good building, but it is not large enough adequately to care for a community of the size to which it must minister. Dr. Burhans will, therefore, find himself facing almost immediately a building proposition.

Waveland Ave., Chicago, Reports Progress

A new program for use in the young people's department of the Church school has been adopted by WAVELAND AVE., CHICAGO. It has in mind a more concrete plan of education in worship; worship in song, Scripture reading and prayer. Waveland Ave. has for the past six years been conducting a Juvenile Chautauqua, and the number of children being instructed through this hour of story-telling increases from year to year. This has been the best year in the history of the church in the way of benevolences, the total amount contributed by all organizations being $1,500. Sixty-six new members were received during the year.

A Daily Vacation Bible School was conducted during the month of August. Three new organizations have been organized the past year: the Hoxie Club, a young ladies' club to promote an interest in missions; Waveland Ave. Church Athletic Association for young men; and Girl Scouts.

Rev. E. L. Reiner has just begun the ninth year of his pastorate with Waveland Ave. On a recent Sunday morning Mrs. Reiner was asked to come to the platform and she and Mr. Reiner were presented with beautiful bouquets as an expression of the love and esteem in which they are held by the parish.

OHIO

Congregationalism in Cleveland

Cleveland and Ohio Congregationalists have cheerfully undertaken to meet the challenge of the Congregational World Movement, and raise $275,000 for 1921, which is three times the amount of Ohio's apportionment in 1919. The canvass will be made in November and December, and each church has been assigned its appropriate share of the amount. In recent Record Books for Church and Church School For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Superintendent, the Secretary. Roll Books, Class Books, Collection Envelopes.

ASK FOR CATALOGUES

14 Beacon Street
Boston
THE PILGRIM PRESS
19 W. Jackson St.
Chicago

HENRY CHURCHILL KING
President of Oberlin College
A New Mind for the New Age
Have we any right to speak of a new age? Read this work of great weight in these times of conflicting opinions and puzzling uncertainties. Net $1.50

HUGH BLACK
"Lest We Forget"
The author of "Friendship" gives a sane, common-sense view of Democracy, Patriotism, State Rights, Pacifism, the League of Nations, much needed today. Net $1.50

JUST OUT
INTIMATE!
REVEALING!
PACKED WITH INCIDENTS NOT DUPLICATED ELSEWHERE!

Personal Recollections of Andrew Carnegie
By FREDERICK LYNCH, D.D., Educ. Secy. Church Peace Union
A fascinating, intimate view of the great iron-master and philanthropist, showing many phases of his life not generally known. A book written from an unusual association of many years that sparkles with interest and freshness. Illustrated. $1.50 net

A People's Life of Christ
By J. PATERSON-SMYTH, Author of "The Gospel of the Hereafter"
A life of Christ which the average person will read for the sheer pleasure of reading it. It leaves in every reader's mind a clean, consecutive, unbroken view of the life of Jesus, with all the main incidents and teachings in the right places. A book for which we've long waited. $3.50 net

Troop "One" of the Labrador
By DILLON WALLACE, Author of "Ungava Bob," etc.
A great feast is here spread for all those who admire courage, hardihood and square dealing—and what healthy boy does not? Dillon Wallace's name as author is sufficient guarantee. Illustrated. Net $1.75

The Story of the Pilgrim Fathers
For Young Folks By H. G. TUNNICLIFF
"Written especially for young folks. The whole story is told with such peculiar charm that once you begin reading you are loth to put it down until you have finished it."—Lookout. Illustrated. Net $1.25

CLARICE E. RICHARDS
A Tenderfoot Bride
"A romance of real experiences. A brightly written story of a girl-bride suddenly plunged into the varied experiences of the 'wild and woolly West.'"—Nashville Banner. Illustrated. Net $1.50

Fleming H. Revell Company
REVELL'S AT ALL BOOKSELLERS BOOKS
New York, 158 Fifth Ave.
Chicago, 17 N. Wabash Ave.

By F. A. McKENZIE
"Pussyfoot" Johnson
"It is impossible to understand the Eighteenth Amendment without a knowledge of Mr. Johnson's career—a sportsman in the best sense of the word."—The Outlook. Net $1.50 years the Ohio churches have gradually adjusted their machinery to the calendar year, gathering all their funds for benevolent work and current expense in the same canvass in the weeks before Jan. 1. The plan has worked so happily that they were reluctant to give it up for the spring date. Moreover our churches have devoted the period between Jan. 1 and May 1 to recruiting the church, by various forms of evangelism, and have not favored financial campaigns that would take the edge off from that supreme effort culminating at Easter.

WANTED — CHAUTAUQUA REPRESENTATIVES

Professional men and women or those who have had experience in club or organization work are wanted as field organizers of Chautauquas, booking our programs of Americanization lectures and high-class concerts in a nation-wide campaign. Good compensation. Short term or continuous. Opportunity for those with talent, who make success booking during the autumn to prepare for lectureships and directorships for 1921.

A career in the Chautauqua field awaits you if you can qualify for service with this national institution of recognized merit.

Write for information

The Radcliffe Chautauqua System

W. L. Radcliffe, Prop. & Mgr.
Washington, D. C.

Chicago Theological Seminary

Is affiliated with the University of Chicago. Seminary instruction is supplemented by the varied and limitless opportunities of the University and the Divinity School. Tuition free.

Trains for
- Pulpit and Pastorate
- Missionary Work
- Community Service
- Religious Education

Opportunity is offered to secure the M. A. degree during preparation for the B. D.; also an annual two-year honor fellowship for post-graduate work.

5757 University Ave.,
Chicago, Illinois.
OZORA S. DAVIS,
President.

ANDOVER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

Cambridge, Massachusetts

Affiliated with Harvard University

A professional training school for Christian Ministers, with a three years' course of study leading to the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. Courses in all departments of Theology, with liberal privileges of election.

For catalogue and information apply to the Dean.

HARTFORD THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

A Training School for the Christian Ministry

Associated with it are:

HARTFORD SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS PEDAGOGY
Training leaders in religious education
KENNEDY SCHOOL OF MISSIONS
Training for foreign service

Address M. W. JACOBUS, Dean of Seminary, Hartford, Conn.

BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

105th year opens Sept. 29, 1920. For College or non-College men. Courses, regular and elective; leading to diploma or degree; modern, thorough, practical. Expenses low. For Catalogue or information address

Prof. Warren J. Moulton, Cor. Sec'y.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.

Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M. A., B. D. and Ph. D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

A man may miss a sermon in January, and go wrong in June, yet there may be a causal connection between the two facts.

The Cleveland churches are preparing for an active winter. East View and United, our most recent organizations, only two miles apart, and located in a rapidly growing section to the southeast of the city are to have the single pastorate of Rev. John Kuyper, formerly of Denison Ave. Church, where he accomplished a wonderful pioneer work.

Archwood Ave., in its new prosperity as it begins its second century, has called Rev. T. D. Preston to be associate pastor and Director of Religious Education with Dr. R. B. Blyth. Archwood, in one of the most populous districts of the city, is taking a leading place in our denominational life.

Rev. F. E. Gravener of West Park has just resigned to go into business. He is the fourth of our young pastors to leave the ministry to engage in work that will adequately care for the needs of their family. The other men are Rev. R. E. Whitney, Rev. Chester Bucher and Rev. W. W. Tuttle. All of these men were successful pastors, and had attained distinction in the work of the church. They are achieving great success in welfare and other work. The churches need to examine themselves carefully as to whether it is worth while to recruit able men for the ministry if they cannot be held after they have been carefully trained.

Pilgrim surrenders its associate pastor, Rev. F. L. Brownlee to the Educational Secretaryship of the A. M. A. Mr. Brownlee has earned this promotion by hard work and leaves a distinct contribution to Pilgrim Church in its organization and equipment for the difficult years just ahead. The new Community House, costing nearly $100,000 all provided for, equipped with bowling alleys, a gymnasium and other facilities, is largely due to his persistent effort.

Steps are being taken to gather a new Sunday school and congregation on Madison Ave. in Lakewood. The Federated Churches under the plan of Comity have assigned this rapidly growing district to our people and the Congregational Union has purchased a lot for the new enterprise.

The Congregational Club opened its season's work with an address by Rev. Rhondda Williams of London, on Oct. 18. A great gathering of Congregationalists is planned for the evening of Dec. 21, to celebrate the landing of the Pilgrims—all of our Congregational organizations uniting in the festival.

Euclid Ave., our cathedral church, has enriched its service to the people by the addition of a great organ worth nearly $40,000, built by the Austin Company of Hartford. The organ, with its 3,505 pipes and five keyboards, is erected to commemorate the patriotism of the young men and women who served their country in the World War, and was duly dedicated in a notable recital. Euclid Ave. has just installed the central panel to complete the Bradley Memorial window, designed and executed by the J. & R. Lamb Co. of New York. The three panels represent three scenes in the life of Jesus, and the window is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Bradley, in memory of Mr. Bradley's father, mother and sister, members of the church. Euclid Ave., under its busy pastor, Dr. F. Q. Blanchard, never faced a year of service more unitedly or resolutely. The mid-week Forum draws a large audience.

The Old Stone Church which has refused to be budged away from its incomparable location on the Public Square has just celebrated its 100th anniversary. Standing facing the greatest market-place in the West, it has stood all these years for the best things of the spirit. Though Presbyterian under the old Plan of Union, of its five pastors, four were Congregationalists, and its laymen were also largely of New England extraction. The notable achievements of the church have been gathered in a remarkable history prepared by Dr. A. C. Ludlow of Cleveland.

The Congregational Union of Cleveland held one of its best meetings in the Olmsted Falls Community Church which is a combination of the Methodist and Congregational churches of the village. The two feeble organizations have become a single happy unit with self-respect and self-support, under the tactful pastorate of Rev. Albert Secord. The main address of the meeting was made by Dr. Thomas Graham who has just succeeded Prof. W. J. Hutchins as Professor of Homiletics at Oberlin Seminary. Dr. Graham instantly commanded the attention and won the confidence of Cleveland Congregationalists.

D. F. B.

ALABAMA

Churches of State Aroused to Greater Work

A new denominational consciousness was awakened in the state by the Congregational World Movement and there is now a ready response to suggestions of progress in things touching our larger denominational program. The new apportionment is accepted and will be raised.

With exceptional wisdom and patience Supt. C. T. Rogers is bringing the churches into the larger life of the denomination. Eclectic, under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. J. I. Barker, is an illustration of this forward move-

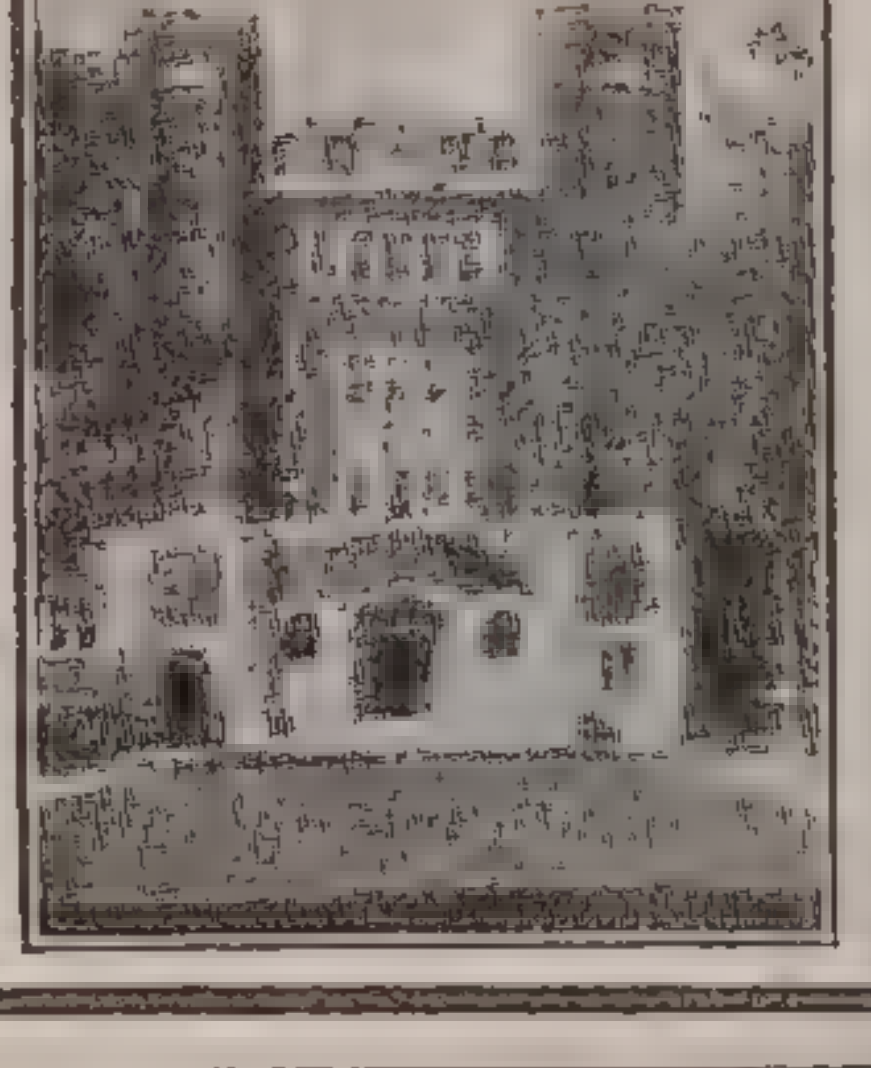
The Congregational Training School For Women

Trains for Christian leadership.

The work of Church Assistant, Director of Religious Education, and Instructor in Week-day Religious Education offers opportunity for the finest and highest type of social service.

One and two year courses. Expenses low.

MISS MARGARET TAYLOR, Dean,
5603 Dorchester Ave., Chicago, Ill.



CARLETON COLLEGE

Liberal Arts
Science Music

D. J. COWLING, President
Northfield, Minnesota

The Graduate School of Theology
OBERLIN COLLEGE

A strong, well balanced course, preparatory to the work of the ministry at home or abroad.

Second semester's work begins February 8 with all the regular faculty teaching.

Address G. W. FISKE, Jr., Dean, Oberlin, Ohio.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION

An undenominational training school for
The Ministry Religious Education
Foreign Missions Social Service

Curricula high grade and modern. Graduate degrees. University of California privileges. Opportunities for the study of Oriental peoples. Open to men and women of all Christian denominations. For catalogue address

WILLIAM FREDEF IC BADE, Dean, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

ment. The new sawmills in the county bring migrant workers who lowered the moral tone of the community and adversely affected the work of the church. To meet this condition a mock trial was held at the church on Saturday evenings, with subjects that involved prevalent manners and customs that were objectionable. The church was filled, indifferent people interested and the tone of the community decidedly improved.

Under the leadership of Rev. J. N. Graham, representing the Extension Boards, a Rural Life Center has been established at Thorsby. The Extension Boards, Education Society, Alabama Conference, Thorsby Academy and the local church are co-operating in the work of making the larger parish plan an illustration of the forward-looking work of our denomination. L. H. K.

NEW JERSEY

Becomes Pastor of Waverly, Jersey City

WAVERLY, JERSEY CITY, has recently welcomed to its pastorate Rev. F. S. Ritter, who began work the first of September after a successful pastorate of two eventful years at Ventnor, N. J., a suburb of Atlantic City. During his service at Ventnor, in the face of great difficulties, he founded a Congregational Church, where there were no Congregationalists; gathered a membership of between 60 and 70; secured and thus far has met payments on the most valuable church site in the city, costing $30,000, but now worth considerably more; and erected fine parsonage apartments above the auditorium, thus increasing the value of the property. He is thus fitted to handle the difficult problems of Waverly, in the face of the changing conditions of that congested part of Jersey City. An ecclesiastical council met Oct. 1 and installed Mr. Ritter. There was a general feeling that with his active ministry, strong preaching and ability to enlist the business men, he is the man for a critical hour in the history of Waverly. H. E. C.

NEW YORK

Among the Brooklyn Churches

At TOMPKINS AVE., BROOKLYN, Dr. J. P. Huget reports a most encouraging opening of the fall work. Dr. Huget himself will be absent from his pulpit during November, taking part in the program of the Mayflower Council for the Pilgrim Tercentenary.

Dr. Cadman of CENTRAL and Dr. Boynton of CLINTON AVE., recently returned to their pulpits, after extended vacations in England and on the continent. Dr. Boynton was a prominent member of the various religious conferences held during the summer, and Dr. Cadman made a number of addresses in celebration of the Tercentenary.

At FLATBUSH, Dr. L. T. Reed, pastor, considerable new work is being planned under the direction of the supervisor of religious education, Rev. J. B. Hanna. On Thursday evenings a twelve weeks' course in religious education is being given by Prof. E. P. St. John of Hartford and Rev. H. H. Field of the Flatbush Presbyterian Church. Prof. St. John's course is divided into two periods; one upon "Psychology of Conduct and Character," and the other on "Methods of Teaching." Collateral with this latter course, Mr. Field is conducting a series of studies in "The Life and Teachings of Jesus, as Recorded by Matthew." The courses are attracting many general students of the Bible, as well as those directly interested in teaching. Flatbush Church is also planning for an experiment along the line of week-day instruction, starting with the children of the Junior Department on Wednesday afternoons from 3.30 to 4.30. The instruction will differ materially from the Sunday morning program, reliance being placed upon stories, map-drawing and modeling, dramatization of Bible stories, and the generous use of the stereopticon and the moving picture machine.

PARKVILLE, Rev. C. J. Allen, pastor, is rejoicing in the possession of a fine new Austin pipe organ, which will add greatly to the pleasure and inspiration of the church worship. The organ was installed during the summer at a cost of $6,500. Formal dedication services will be held during November. B. A.

CONNECTICUT

Columbia Church Two Hundred Years Old

The two hundredth anniversary of the church at COLUMBIA was celebrated Oct. 23-24. On the preceding Sunday the pastor, Rev. T. N. Owen, preached a historical sermon, reviewing the advance in religious thought during the 200 years. Saturday evening the Ladies' Aid Society served a supper, where a feature was the seating at one table of all members of the church who were members 50 years ago when the 150th anniversary was celebrated. The church was organized 86 years before the town was incorporated. C. S. L.

MASSACHUSETTS

Eliot, Newton, Observes Anniversary

ELIOT, NEWTON, celebrated its 75th anniversary, Oct. 22-25. The exercises began on Friday evening with the celebration of the Lord's Supper and a sermon by Dr. Wolcott Calkins, the only living former pastor of the church, whose presence in the 90th year of his age, added much to the anniversary services. Memorials were unveiled to the soldiers from Eliot who died in the Civil War and in the World War. Sunday morning Dr. H. Grant Person, pastor of Eliot, preached the historical sermon, and Sunday evening three sons of former pastors were the speakers: Mr. Edward A. Davis of New York, Hon. Arthur Holbrook Wellman, of Boston, and Dr. Raymond Calkins of Cambridge.

At the anniversary dinner Monday night the gift was announced of a new organ as a memorial to Mr. Frank A. Day, who died in 1914 and who had used his wealth and his position so largely in service through the church. Among the relics presented to the church were the mammoth key to the first building and the copper Maltese cross which was rescued when the second building burned 33 years ago. On the cross is this inscription, "Laus Deo Cruci." An organ recital and the address by Dean Brown on "The Place of the Church in Social Rebuilding," concluded the formal exercises. The following Sabbath the pastor, with the old Maltese copper cross beside him, preached from the text, "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross," in which he summarized the influences of the anniversary and expressed the hope that Eliot Church might always stand for the things the cross signifies.

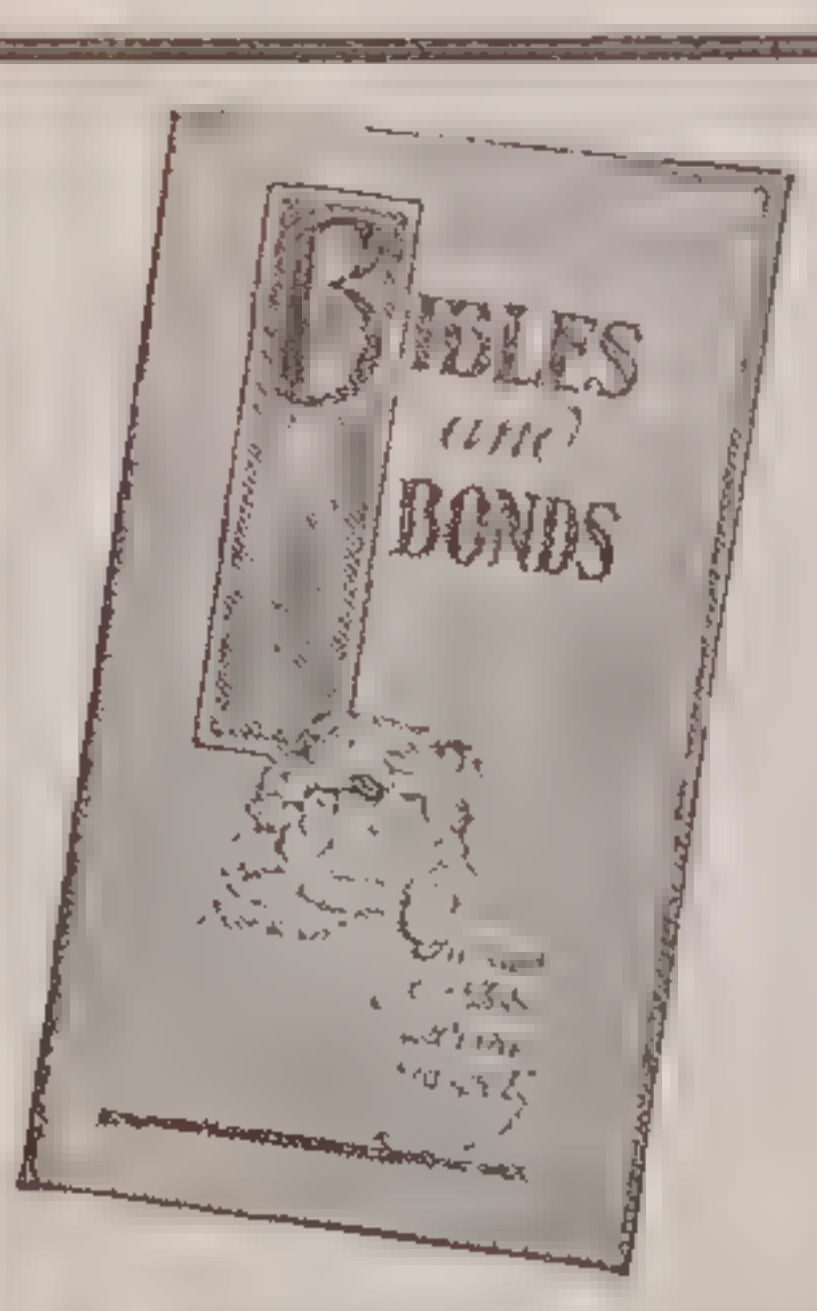
President Lowell Speaks on League

At the Boston Ministers' Meeting Nov. 1, a quartet from Northland College, Messrs. Smith, Fortier, Hornigold, and Giersbach, with Mr. Greene, accompanist, delighted the audience with several selections. These students, with

The Quality Investment

Guaranteed
Farm Mortgages
Forty Three Years
In Business---
Without Loss to
A Client

J·L·Pettyjohn & Co.
OLATHE, KANSAS



Write for this Booklet

"Bibles and Bonds" tells the interesting story of a world-wide work and a safe investment yielding as high as 8%.

Ask for Booklet J

American Bible Society
Bible House Astor Place New York

Margaret Slattery's Books
The Charm of the Impossible, 50c.
The Girl in Her Teens, 85c.
The American Girl and Her Community, $1.35
The Girls' Book of Prayer, 35c. cloth 60c.
The Girl and Her Religion, $1.25.
Just Over the Hill, $1.25.
The Costly Star, 60c.
Add 10% for postage
14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

The Pennsylvania-Ohio Power & Light Company
First and Refunding Mortgage
7½% Nov. 1, 1940
Price 96½% to yield 7.85%
Physical valuation of property nearly twice bonded indebtedness—long term —high yield—callable only at prices allowing for substantial profit.
EARNEST E. SMITH & CO.
Specialists in New England Securities
SALEM 52 Devonshire Street, BOSTON SPRINGFIELD
Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges

President Brownell, are making a tour in the interests of the college.

The program of the day was the address of Pres. A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard on "The League of Nations under the Existing Political Conditions." The large attendance showed the interest in the subject and the influence of the speaker. President Lowell said that it was his opinion that the majority of the American people desire the League of Nations. The League of Nations could not be carried if either of the great parties was solid against it or appeared to be solid against it. Neither party can pass the League alone. In regard to Article X President Lowell said that at first he thought it would be harmless, although theoretically wrong, but after seeing how Europe is carved up he believes it is practically injurious and it may be positively immoral. By it we are under obligation to carry out this pledge in some way.

Central, Worcester, a Century Old

Central, Worcester, Dr. Shepherd Knapp, pastor, fourth oldest church in Worcester, celebrated its 100th anniversary during the week beginning Oct. 17. The anniversary sermon was preached at the opening service by Rev. E. M. Chapman of New London, Ct., who was associate pastor from 1892 to 1900, at the time Dr. Daniel Merriman was pastor. At this time greetings were also brought from the three Worcester churches in existence at the time Central was organized—First Unitarian, Old South (First) Congregational, and First Baptist.

The centennial exercises also included a centennial program carried out by the Woman's Association on Tuesday afternoon, at which was presented an historical pageant, "Central Church Ladies' Meeting of Olden Time," written by Mrs. Mary Angell Lincoln. Many of the historical characters of the church, with settings of former days, were introduced. The scene was laid in the home of Daniel Waldo who built the first church. On Wednesday evening a reunion supper was held. An historical review was presented by U. Waldo Cutler who has written the history of one hundred years of Central Church and whose work has been published in book form. The concluding service was Sunday morning, Oct. 24, when the pastor preached a sermon on "What the Future Holds," and a communion service was held at which all the pieces of the silver service presented to the church by Stephen Salisbury and his wife in 1828 and 1848 were used.

Central, first called Calvinistic Church, was an offshoot of Old South (First). It attained definite recognized standing in a council Aug. 16-17, 1820. Its first house of worship was built by Daniel Waldo on his own land at a cost of $14,000 and was first occupied Oct. 15, 1823. On the same day the first pastor, Rev. Loammi Ives Hoadly, was ordained and installed, Dr. Lyman Beecher preaching the sermon. Three years later the property was made over to the trustees of the Calvinistic Society. A later gift of $5,000 from Mr. Waldo established what is now known as Central Church. The present beautiful and thoroughly equipped building near Armory Square was erected in 1885 during Dr. Merriman's pastorate. Seven pastors have served the parish. Dr. Knapp, the present pastor, has completed 12 years in the ministry of Central. F. D. T.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

Hacke, A. C., formerly in industrial welfare and service work in Ludlow, Mass., to become university pastor, Athens, O., in co-operative work representing Baptist, Christian, Methodist, Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches. Accepts and is at work.

Hale, M. W., Cabot, Vt., to Centerbrook, Ct. Accepts and is at work.

Martin, T. H., Searsport, Me., to Brooks. Accepts and is at work.

Randall, W. S., North Deering, Portland, Me., to position with Near East Relief. Declines.

Root, J. B., Cambridge, Mass., to South Braintree. Accepts to begin Dec. 1.

Turner, J. M., Copenhagen, N. Y., to North Evans. Accepts.

Resignations

Denney, O. H., St. Luke's, Elmira, N. Y.

Gravinor, F. E., West Park, O.

Prince, J. C., First, Bellows Falls, Vt. To be field secretary for Near East Relief.

Dismissal

Campbell, W. J., Williston, Portland, Me., Oct. 25.

Installation

Ritter, F. S., i., Waverly, Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 1. Sermon by Rev. C. H. Wilson; other parts by Rev. Messrs. J. H. MacMillan, J. H. Robinson, C. W. Carroll, T. A. Moffat, H. L. Everett and W. W. Coe.

Personals

Turner, J. M., who has been pastor of Copenhagen, N. Y., for the last four years, was given a reception by his many friends and the members of the church on Oct. 14. The occasion of the reception was his departure to his new field at North Evans near Buffalo. His wife shared with him in the honor of the evening and also in the purse of money that was given them.

Eaton, E. D., Secretary ad interim of the National Council, is established with headquarters in the National Council offices at 289 4th Ave., New York City, also with an office in Room 506, 14 Beacon St., Boston. From either of these offices he can be reached directly by all of the many interests which demand his attention. Assistant Secretary Truman J. Spencer will be in the New York office continuously.

Firgua, G. A., recently of the Evangelical Lutheran Church at Anselm, N. D., is supplying the Congregational churches at Max and Plaza, and has joined the Congregational Conference.

Events to Come

American Missionary Association, Annual Meeting, Springfield, Mass., Nov. 17-18.

Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, Quadrennial Meeting, Boston, Mass., Dec. 1-6.

National Council of Congregational Churches, Los Angeles, beginning July 8, 1921.

Railroad Young Men's Christian Associations of North America, International Conference, Richmond, Va., Nov. 18-21.

Red Cross Sunday, Nov. 14.

Woman's Board of Missions, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Dec. 3, 10.30 a. m.

State Conferences

Kentucky, Evarts, Nov. 27-28.

Tennessee, Soddy, Nov. 23-24.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Advertising Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

DWIGHT—In Philadelphia, Oct. 26, 1920, Mary Woolsey Dwight, daughter of the late William Theodore and Elizabeth Loockerman Bradford Dwight. Interment at Andover, Mass., Nov. 1.

The DUPLEX Envelope Company was the first organization in the world, secular or ecclesiastical, to give its entire energies to the spread of the Duplex method of giving—of weekly offerings to Missions as well as to Local Church Support.

UNLESS ITS Duplex RICHMOND, VA. PATENTED D E TRADEMARK IT'S AN IMITATION

THOMAS Individual Cups
Used by over 35,000 churches. Clean and Sanitary. Send for catalog and special offer. Trial free.
Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 5 Lima, Ohio

BRONZE
HONOR ROLLS
AND
HISTORICAL TABLETS
REED & BARTON, TAUNTON, MASS.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER is known all over the country. Four thousand churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars. THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Desks—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.
DeMoulinBros&Co.Dept. 14 Greenville, Ill.

MENEELY BELL CO
TROY, N.Y. AND
198 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY
BELLS

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
79 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

The Church Beautiful

Thousands of churches in America have been rendered more beautiful and inspiring by the workmanship of our master wood carvers.

All of their experience and training gained through these many years of devoted application to the finest traditions of their art is at your command and disposal.

We shall consider it an honor and a privilege if we can be of any assistance to you in the building or refurnishing of your church edifice.

American Seating Company
EXCLUSIVE MANUFACTURERS OF ECCLESIASTICAL FURNITURE
General Offices—1040 Lytton Bldg.,
CHICAGO, ILL.
SALES OFFICES IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES

Secretary Brownlee

Rev. Fred L. Brownlee of Cleveland, the new Secretary of Missions under the American Missionary Association, comes to the large work which he must administer with special fitness for it. When, following his graduation at Ohio State and his theological training at Union Seminary, he returned to Columbus to organize a new church in the suburbs of the city, he was challenged at once by a task calling for patient attention to details and clear understanding of the development of church life in a large city. A few years later when he resigned this work for further study, he had not only placed the church in an assured position of strength, but had carried it through a substantial building enterprise.

Rev. Fred L. Brownlee

His mind and heart, however, had been turning to the importance of the work of religious education and he gave up the active pastorate to return to Union and devote special study to this subject. At the Seminary and at Columbia he carried on his studies for two years; then he accepted the position of Director of Religious Education with Dr. Carl Patton in Columbus. A few years later he yielded to the earnest entreaty of Pilgrim Church in Cleveland, with its exceptionally large school and great foreign constituency, to become associate pastor. For the past few years he has been devoting himself in this church to the development of the work in religious education and at the same time has had charge of the administrative details of Pilgrim's large institutional enterprise. In a certain sense his work has been crowned by the building just completed at an expense of $75,000, which as an addition to the already fine equipment of Pilgrim Church, makes the equipment in plant second to none for a ministry to every phase and need in community life. His ability has been recognized outside the church by his appointment as special lecturer by Western Reserve University in the Department of Religious Education.

Trained both in the realm of difficult administration and in the field of religious education, Mr. Brownlee enters upon the greater enterprise of the A. M. A. with an experience which peculiarly prepares him for the task which he has to administer. He is just coming to middle life and combines much of the enthusiasm of youth with the judgment of full maturity. The same principles which he has studied for their application in the church school are at his hand for use in the directing of the schools and colleges of the Association. With keen and trained judgment he is able to face the questions of education, but he does so not simply as the trained educator but as one who believes profoundly and fundamentally in the importance of religion as the supreme factor in education. F. Q. B.

As a Missionary Sees Japan

Dear Mr. Editor:

I am passing on to you and your readers an extract from a letter from a missionary who from twenty years' close observation of the Japanese has formed a very definite opinion as to the trends of sentiment in Japan. The letter follows:

A. W. B.

Things are anything but quiet in this part of the world. Japan is the leader in material development and money and war power, far in advance of all other peoples of the Far East. But she has failed in some strange way to make friends anywhere. That to me is the most significant feature in the whole situation. The Japanese are in many ways a likeable people, The government, however, is little and petty, ruled and absolutely controlled by the military. It is not the Japanese, but the fatal mistake they have made in copying the Hun that makes them disliked by all their neighbors. As yet they are not in the game to help, but to get for themselves China and the leaders of China are even more bitter against them than Korea, and that is saying a good deal. Japan will either get out from under the military control or else go down as Germany has gone. Let us hope she will see in time, and cast out her own devils of war.

It Will Pay You to Read

Plymouth's Debt to the Indians, by Lincoln N. Kinnicutt (Harvard Theological Review, October). The author concludes with these words, "On a tablet at Plymouth should be written the names of Massasoit, Squanto and Hobomok, Indians only, but men worthy to be in company with Carver, Bradford, Miles Standish and Winslow." A statement amply justified by the preceding account of the faithful and vitally important services rendered by these Indians to the infant colony.

In the Land of the Magyars, by Dr. J. Poltera from the Swiss Liberal Republican Daily (The Living Age, Oct. 16). An account of a visit of investigation made by a Swiss student of history and social affairs to Hungary under the present régime. Dr. Poltera had introductions to high officials, traveled up and down the land, often on foot, interviewed all classes at his leisure and gives a well-grounded and well-considered estimate of the effects of recent events and contests and of the present situation.

Mesopotamia and Persia, by Robert Machray (The Fortnightly Review, October). A careful study of the situation in these two lands as it affects the British Government in the task it has undertaken of helping one and governing the other as mandator.

"THE OXFORD TEACHERS BIBLE IS THE BIBLE PAR EXCELLENCE OF THE WORLD"
OXFORD EDITION
The Gift Supreme
for Young and Old
An Oxford Bible makes a gift that is sure to be appreciated by everyone
Superior in Quality
Reasonable in Price
An Extensive Variety of Styles
At all booksellers or from the publishers
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
American Branch
35 West 32d Street New York

A Book for Parents and Teachers
Bringing Up John
EDWARD LEIGH PELL'S Latest BOOK
"Clear, vigorous, suggestive. Teaches John (and Mary, too,) the truth about God, prayer, religion, the Bible, the Sabbath, sacrifice, etc., so that their faith may stand the test of years."
---Richmond Chr. Advocate.
At All Booksellers. Cloth, $1.25
FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY
158 Fifth Av., N.Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

BIBLES of every description, size and price. We are always pleased to quote prices, send catalogues, or to fill orders promptly.
14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

Peloubet's Graded Quarterlies
Adapted to the Needs of Each Grade
Edited by Leading S. S. Workers
The advantages in the study of a uniform text are found in uniform family Bible study; a common subject in teachers'-meetings; substitute teaching made possible; fresh texts and treatments each year; additional material found in PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES and denominational and secular papers.
Teachers' Quarterlies
Very popular with progressive teachers, because exceedingly helpful in fitting the mind to present the lesson to the scholar with vividness and clearness that holds the pupil's interest.
Send for Sample Copies
W. A. WILDE COMPANY 120 BOYLSTON STREET BOSTON, MASS.
Western Office: Rand-McNally Building, Chicago, Ill.
Based on the New Uniform Lessons

Old South, Boston, Forum

The Old South Meeting House in Boston, which rang with the booming eloquence of Samuel Adams 150 years ago, and which, during the Revolution did all that it could to fight the issue to a successful finish, will this year concern itself in its Forum meetings with the pressing problem of putting the Great War behind us. Perhaps a new social order, based on economic justice to all classes and an intelligent cosmopolitanism which carries with it a sympathetic understanding of the needs and problems of all races and of all nations, is what Americans must attain before they can successfully put the war behind them. At any rate, it is with something of this idea that the meetings for the current season have been planned.

These meetings come on Sunday afternoons for the distinct purpose of reaching the conservative, church-going constituency who prefer to be in their homes on Sunday evenings. They begin in every case with a half hour of classical music rendered by good artists, and this year, as for many years previous Grant Drake will be in charge of the musical programs.

The meetings are entirely free and are financed by the Old South Association of Boston, Richard W. Hale, Courtenay Crocker, George W. Coleman and Miss Katherine P. Loring, being the Committee directly responsible for the meetings.

The Old South Meetings began their fifth season Nov. 7, with a talk by S. K. Ratcliffe of London on "America's Mission to Mankind." Other speakers in the Old South series will include Otto H. Kahn, the well-known New York banker; Norman Angell, on "The Menace of a New Order in Europe and America"; Mrs. Florence Kelly, on "The Place of the Agitator in the World of Today"; Senora Agresti, the niece of Dante Gabriel and Christina Rossetti, on "Recent Developments in Italy"; Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, on "Helping the Dollar to Come Back"; Dr. John Lovejoy Elliott of New York, who has just returned from three months in Central Europe, on "America and the People of Central Europe"; Bishop Edwin H. Hughes on "What Prohibition has Done"; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York; Pres. Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University, on "Educational Reforms and the New Perils of Democracy"; and Alvin T. Simonds, President of the Simonds Steel Mills, Fitchburg, Mass., on "What Is Labor's Share?"

J. S. WATERMAN & SONS INC.
ESTABLISHED 1859
UNDERTAKERS
City and Out-of-Town Service
Offices, Chapels and Warerooms
BOSTON—BROOKLINE

Cuticura Soap
AND OINTMENT
Clear the Skin
Soap, Ointment, Talcum, 25c. everywhere. For samples address: Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. V, Malden, Mass.

Favorite Poems

Our "Favorite Poem" this week is sent in by R. Gibbons, of Strongsville, O. The author is Edwin Markham, the California poet, whose best known poem is perhaps "The Man with the Hoe."

When, in the dim beginning of the years,
God mixed in man the raptures and the tears
And scattered through his brain the starry stuff,
He said: "Behold!" yet this is not enough,
For I must test his spirit to make sure
That he can dare the vision and endure.

"I will withdraw my face—
Veil me in shadow for a certain space,
And leave behind only a broken clew;
A crevice where the glory glimmers through;
Some whisper from the sky,
Some footprint in the road to track me by.

"I will leave man to make the fateful guess;
Will leave him torn between the 'No' and 'Yes;'
Leave him unresting till he rests in me—
Drawn upward by the choice that makes him free;
Leave him tragic in lonesomeness to choose
With all in life—to win or all to lose."

—Edwin Markham.

Brooklyn Congregational Club

The Brooklyn Congregational Club held its first fall meeting on Oct. 25 at the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, the speaker of the evening being Hon. R. B. Fosdick on "The League of Nations." The attendance was large, forty new members being added to the roll.

The December meeting of the club will be held in Manhattan with the Congregational Club of New York and will be in celebration of the Pilgrim Tercentenary. Dr. R. C. Gillie, President-elect of the National Free Church Council and minister of the Marylebone Presbyterian Church, London, will speak from the English point of view, and Dr. C. E. Jefferson of Broadway Tabernacle, from the American.

League of the New Day

Next Week's Readings and Prayers

Week of Nov. 15–21

Monday. The Joyful Message. Isa. 61:1-11.

Tuesday. The Married Land. Isa. 62:1-12.

Wednesday. The New Heavens and Earth. Isa. 65:17-25; 66:18-24.

Thursday. Paul to Titus. Titus 1:1-16.

Friday. Christ's People. Titus 2:1-15.

Saturday. Maintaining Good Works. Titus 3:1-15.

Sunday. The Children's Friend. Mark 10:1-16.

Object for Intercession

For the President-elect and His Counselors:

O God, in whom we trust, even as our father trusted, grant to thy servant who has now been chosen to be the leader of our people wisdom and grace for the great office to which he has been called and strength of soul and body for its difficult requirements. And may he find the help he needs in the wise counsel of those whom he shall call to his aid and before all things in the presence and guidance of thy Holy Spirit. —R.

A Busy Man's Bible

Dear Mr. Editor:

I wonder whether Mr. Gallagher, who writes the letter in your issue of Sept. 30, knows of "The Shorter Bible: The New Testament Part," translated and arranged by Professor Kent and four collaborators, published by the Scribners. It answers his need to a great extent, I am sure, if not entirely. It is just the book to put into the hands of people who want just what they need for practical living today. I find it a great treasure.

A. M. Wilcox.

Lawrence, Kan.

CLASSIFIED WANTS

Each week this paper goes into over twenty thousand Congregational homes. It is read by those earnest people who form the very backbone of our denomination. Our classified columns offer exceptional opportunities for those who have something to sell or are looking for something to buy, for positions wanted or to be filled, together with many other wants. Classified rates are four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

CASH IN ADVANCE ONLY

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

HELP WANTED

Bank Clerk. Young man with some banking experience. A good opportunity for young man of character. Tobacco users need not apply. Address "H. P.," Congregationalist, Boston.

By Nov. 15 or earlier, woman for plain cooking and general housework (no laundry), in family of three adults (occasionally four) and child. A comfortable home is offered and moderate wages with people in moderate circumstances. Box 319, West Medway, Mass.

Good reliable woman, who can cook and take entire charge of house for small family, adults. Someone who will take interest, and who wants comfortable home in country town. Address Box 123, Laurel, Del.

POSITION WANTED

Position as working housekeeper for elderly woman or good Christian man with small family, by capable reliable woman, 45. Home privileges, permanent. References and wages in first letter. Address "G. H.," care Congregationalist, Boston.

MISCELLANEOUS

Wanted—Permanent free home for splendid, healthy boy of ten. Country location preferred, but not necessary. Home desired within 100 miles of Boston. N. E. Home for Little Wanderers, 161 South Huntington Ave., Boston.

For Sale—Benefit Smith College Fund. The Ready Reference Cooking Guide, an ideal gift for the busy housekeeper or bride-to-be—artistic, wonderfully convenient—75c. postpaid. Ward, 146 Massachusetts Ave., Boston.

Have number of films especially adapted for church showings on Sunday or week day. New prints. Gospel messages. Would like to share with other churches. Bertram Willoughby, Osage, Io.

Why not earn money making Doll Furniture for Christmas? Easy to make by my improved method. E. B. Lincoln, Hyde Park, Mass.

Boarders wanted in a parsonage, steam-heated. Beautiful village. Excellent climate. Home life. Box 154, Warner, N. H.

Japanese goods consigned for church bazaars. Japanese Art & Novelty Company, 100 Prescott Ave., New York.

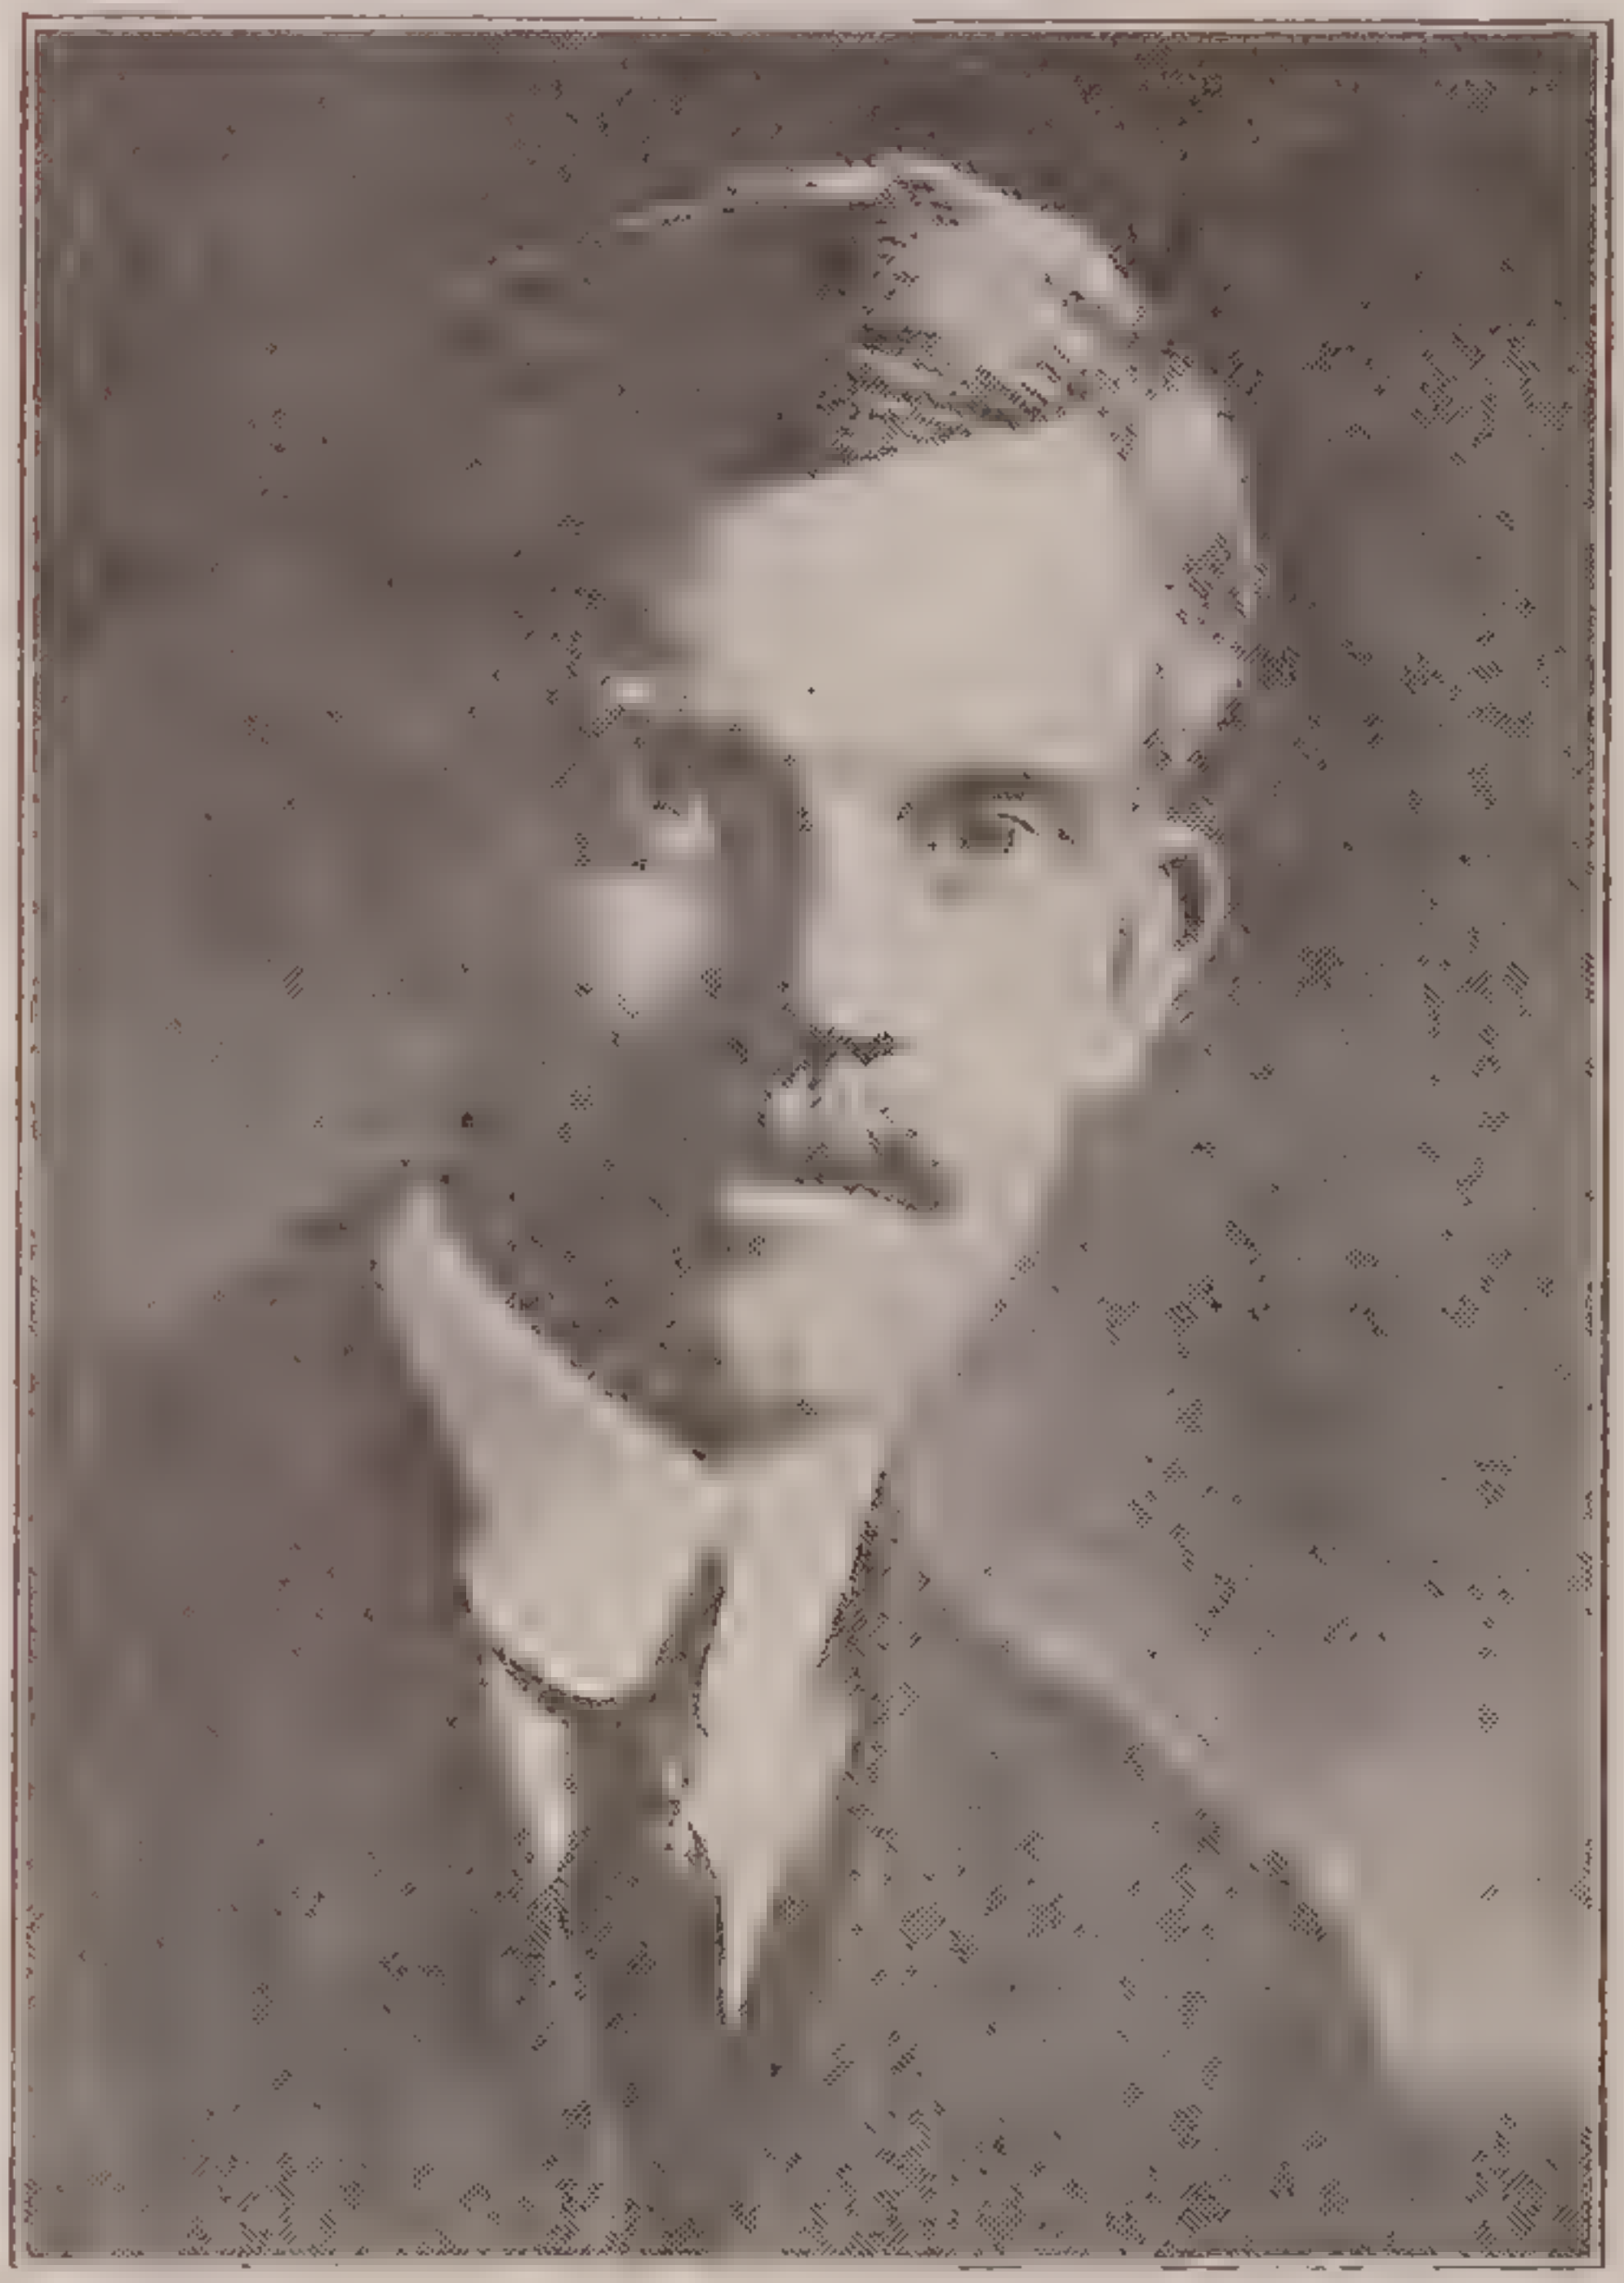
With the Schools and Colleges

Inauguration of President Hutchins

The gorgeous autumnal glory of the mountains formed an appropriate setting for the inauguration of William James Hutchins as President of Berea College Oct. 21-23, in the presence of a throng of educators from all over the country. President Emeritus William Goodell Frost, whose administration of 28 years closed last June, had the joy of welcoming a former pupil, the successor of his own choice, to the largest educational institution in Kentucky, where no one is turned away because of ignorance or poverty. More than 2,100 of the 2,560 students enrolled last year came from the mountains of Kentucky, Tennessee, the Carolinas, the Virginias, Georgia and Alabama. The program was filled with allusions to the special problems of Appalachian America. On Thursday and Friday a Pageant of the Mountains was staged in the Tabernacle, portraying the historical significance of the mountain people in the struggle for freedom. Saturday morning was devoted to a conference on mountain problems.

The inauguration ceremonies were replete with expressions of hope and dedication. The representatives of other institutions were received by Dr. W. E. Barton of the Board of Trustees. The address of welcome to them was given by Prof. James W. Raine, and an inspiriting response to this welcome was made by Pres. H. C. King of Oberlin. Pres. F. L. McVey of the University of Kentucky, welcomed President Hutchins to the state. The mayor voiced the welcome of the community. The inaugural prayer was offered by Rev. R. G. Hutchins, father of the new president and pastor of the Union Church in Berea. The retiring president thrilled the great audience as he welcomed his successor in the name of the founders and donors, declaring with prophetic fervor that "Berea College was founded to breed reformers."

The ringing note of courage which pervaded President Hutchins' inaugural address gave assurance that the ideals which have made Berea distinctive will find an adequate champion in her new President. After a vivid portrayal of the challenge of the hour, he said: "Grant all that has been said regarding the changing time, Berea's essential task is changeless. It is this: Within the bounds of our enlarging equipment to put within the reach of each of these mountain boys and girls who need it most the opportunity of finding and forming friendships with the best that is in the world; the opportunity of finding oneself in one's work; the opportunity of binding oneself in friendship and in toil to the friendly Power behind the world. We shall continue to keep the path from the cabin and cottage to the college wide and easy. No boy or girl shall be excluded because of poverty. The student who flaunts his prosperity shall be taught simplicity and democracy, or, if unteachable, shall leave the school. . . . To the religious education of the hearts of our students, we must commit ourselves. Does our school tear from the hearts of our students the idols of self-love and wayward lusts, the idols of lawlessness which labels itself liberty? Does our school help to erect within the hearts of each student an altar to a trustworthy God? Then may our school claim to fulfill the aim of the founders, 'To promote the cause of Christ.'"



Rev. William James Hutchins, D. D.
New President of Berea College

The presence of Mrs. J. A. R. Rogers, widow of the first principal, and mother of Mr. John R. Rogers, a trustee of the college, was a vivid reminder that one lifetime spans the entire record of Berea's achievements. President Hutchins begins the new page in Berea's history sustained by the enthusiastic belief of all his associates that Berea's future will be worthy of her noble past. His record of achievement as a student at Oberlin, Yale University, and Union Seminary, as a successful pastor for 11 years in a great church in Brooklyn, and as a teacher for 13 years in Oberlin is an adequate prophecy of his success in his new field.

In the Name of God, Amen!

1620
The Pilgrim Tercentenary
1920

This valuable handbook (which takes its title from the opening words of the Mayflower Compact) is offered to pastors, together with a Dramatic Service for church and community exercises, and booklets for congregational distribution in preparation for

Mayflower Universal Bible Sunday
NOVEMBER 28, 1920

Send request for descriptive circular
AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY
Bible House, Astor Place, New York

A Sermon By Mail

At the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, New York City, printed copies of the Dr. David James Burrell's sermons are gratuitously distributed at the evening service every Sunday (usually about 35 issues per annum) from October to June, inclusive.

For the convenience of persons wishing to receive the sermons weekly, a mailing list has been established, to which names may be added at any time by the payment of one dollar to cover postage and mailing for one year from date of receipt.

Subscriptions and requests for specimen copies should be sent to

MISS MERCE E. BOYER
1 West Twenty-ninth Street, Room 8, New York City

SELL CANDY

This is a good way to raise funds for church purposes. Liberal profits. Many churches and societies have used this plan successfully.

SEND TODAY FOR ILLUSTRATED CIRCULAR

Mailed free. It tells how to organize to sell candy—gives prices and all particulars.

FRED D. LESURE COMPANY
1 A Broad St., Fitchburg, Mass.
WHOLESALE CONFECTIONERS

BROOKE HOUSE
79 Chandler Street, Boston
(Founded in 1892 by the Rev. Stopford W. Brooke.)

A comfortable home for young working women, near Copley Sq. and the Common. Transients accommodated in summer. Apply to Supt.

Walker's the Best Concordance

Over 50,000 more references than any other low priced concordance to the Bible. 980 pages. Cloth $3.00. ½ leather $3.75. Postage 20 cents.

14 Beacon Street, Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St, Chicago

A YEAR OF RECREATION

By ETHEL OWEN

IF YOU ARE

- A Director of Social and Recreational Life
- Chairman of a Social Committee
- Instructor in Sunday School or Weekday School
- Interested in social life of home, school or church

you will find in this little book a complete recreational program for a year.

There are twelve suggestive socials in the book, each one worked out in detail, including games, suggestions for place cards, invitations, menus, etc. Sketches of suggestive cards, etc., are included, which may be copied in working out plans for social evenings. This little book will make it easy to plan attractive parties and socials throughout the year.

Net, 35 cents, postpaid

THE ABINGDON PRESS
(Founded 1789)
NEW YORK CINCINNATI CHICAGO PITTSBURGH
BOSTON DETROIT KANSAS CITY SAN FRANCISCO
PORTLAND, ORE., SALESROOM
ORDER FROM THE NEAREST ADDRESS

CHRISTMAS HALL-MACK CO'S CANTATAS
FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG PEOPLE &c

FREE Returnable samples to interested persons.

Tell us, on a postal, your needs for Christmas Entertainment and let us send you examination copies. Do it now.

Hall-Mack Co. } 1018-1020 Arch St., Phila., Pa.
Adam Geibel Co. }

"Come Ye Apart"
By DR. JOHN H. JOWETT

Dr. Jowett's new Year Book, contains a Scripture passage, a thought and a prayer for a year.

"Dr. Jowett has left America but he is still blessedly with us in these nugget messages."---S. S. Times.

ATTRACTIVE BINDING. Net $1.50
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

Massachusetts General Hospital

Training School for Nurses. Established 1873. 1,350 Graduates. Prepares its students for advanced positions. For particulars consult Circular of Information. Address Sally M. Johnson, R. N., Supt. of Nurses. Boston, Massachusetts.

Benevolent Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D. D., Secretary; Rev. John J. Walker, Associate Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 609 Congregational House, Boston.

CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, maintained by the Congregational Conferences of the six New England States, offers aid to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies in New England and elsewhere. Congregational House, Boston, Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Secretary, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D. D., Chairman.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Zeigler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BOSTON and vicinity (Incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel C. Bushnell, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Fred L. Norton, Sec., 919 Tremont Building, Boston.

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 503 Congregational House, Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIOR, 19 S. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas., Friday Meeting, 10 A. M.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIFIC, 760 Market St., Room 421, San Francisco. Mrs. Ernest A. Evans, President; Mrs. W. W. Ferrier, Treasurer; Miss E. S. Benton, Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Mrs. P. S. Suffern, Treas.; Miss Miriam F. Choate, Sec.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION (of Massachusetts and Rhode Island), Mrs. Amos L. Hatheway, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec., 607 Congregational House, Boston.

Boston Seaman's Friend Society

Incorporated 1829

306 Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

President, Samuel Usher; Cor. Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton. A Congregational Society devoted to the material, social and moral welfare of seamen of all nations and supported mainly by the New England churches. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Room at Tarpaulin Cove. Bequests should be made payable to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society. Contributions from churches and individuals solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis.

American Seamen's Friend Society

76 Wall St., New York, Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational National and International Seamen's Society.

Maintains a Sailor's Home and Institute, 507 West Street, New York.

Loan Libraries ($25 each) placed on vessels sailing from New York.

Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.

Publishes the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).

Officers: John B. Calvert, D. D., President; George Sidney Webster, D. D., Secretary. Send contributions to Clarence C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 76 Wall Street, New York.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa, Founded 1817.

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps all churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.
8 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, a Constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trusts for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS can reach every principal city and town in the United States through the advertising columns of The Congregationalist and Advance.

For rates and other information write
KENNETH S. BALLOU,
Advertising Manager.

National Agencies

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Moderator, Rev. Henry Churchill King, Oberlin, O.
Secretary ad interim, Rev. Edward D. Eaton,
289 Fourth Ave., New York
Assistant Secretary, Truman J. Spencer,
289 Fourth Ave., New York
Treasurer, Frank F. Moore,
287 Fourth Ave., New York

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)
14 Beacon Street, Boston
19 West Jackson Street, Chicago

ALBERT W. FELL, Business Manager
HARRY M. NELSON, Treasurer
VERNON M. SCHENCK, General Sales Manager
A. A. HAGSTROM, Western Manager
KENNETH S. BALLOU, Advertising Manager

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Established by the National Council at Grand Rapids, in 1919

DR. LUCIEN C. WARNER, Chairman
REV. HERMAN F. SWARTZ, General Secretary
REV. JAMES E. MCCONNELL, Ass't Secretary
WALTER E. BELL, Treasurer
REV. JOHN LUTHER KILBON, Financial Sec'y

Program for the coming year to include Missionary Education, Stewardship, and a Financial Campaign in behalf of our denominational work.

Regional Directors for 1920-21

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont: Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Massachusetts, Rhode Island: Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D. D., 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Connecticut, New York: Rev. Charles E. Burton, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Porto Rico: Rev. George L. Cady, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee: Rev. L. H. Keller, D. D., Central Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Colored Churches of South: Rev. Alfred Lawless, Jr., D. D., 45½ Auburn Ave., Atlanta, Ga.
Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia: Rev. John Luther Kilbon, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska: Rev. Robert W. Gammon, D. D., 19 West Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.
Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota: Rev. William F. English, Jr., Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., and 19 So. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana: Rev. W. W. Scudder, D. D., Fountain and Aubert Sts., St. Louis, Mo.
Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico: Rev. W. J. Minchin, D. D., Guardian Trust Bldg., Denver, Col.
Southern California, Arizona: Rev. George L. Kenngott, Ph.D., 831 So. Hope St., Los Angeles, Cal.
Northern California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Alaska: Rev. H. H. Kelsey, D. D., Phelan Bldg., San Francisco, Cal., and Plymouth Church, Seattle, Wash.

All correspondence relative to the local work of promotion should be addressed to the Director of your Region.

RISIBLES

Husband: "That new maid is certainly quiet. One would never know that she was about the place." Wife: "She isn't. She left this morning."—London Tit-Bits.

A pessimist and an optimist were discussing life from their different viewpoints. "I really believe," said the former, "that I could make a better world myself."

"Sure!" returned the optimist; "that's what we are here for. Now let us get to work and do it."—Boston Transcript.

Once an old darkey visited a doctor and was given definite instructions as to what he should do. Shaking his head he was about to leave the office, when the doctor said, "Here Rastus, you forgot to pay me."

"Pay you for what, Boss?"

"For my advice," replied the doctor.

"Naw, suh; Naw suh. I ain't gwine take it," and Rastus shuffled out.

National Societies

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Edward Lincoln Smith	Editorial Secretary
(287 Fourth Ave., New York)	Rev. Wm. E. Strong

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Rev. William S. Beard, Secretary of Promotion
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry,
Secretary of Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Nineteen self-supporting state organizations are in Federated relations with the National Society. The state Superintendent or Secretary is the official representative of all home mission interests.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. George L. Cady, Secretary
Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis, Associate Secretary
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Eskimos, Chinese, Japanese and Hindus; in Island Territories of Porto Rico and Hawaii. New work in Southwest taken under instruction of National Council.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

289 Fourth Avenue, New York City
Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
(Church Extension Boards)
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Rev. Charles H. Richards, Editorial Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. In sixty-six years it has helped to build 4,982 churches and 1,334 parsonages.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Rev. A. E. Holt, Social Service Sec.
Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Missionary Education Sec.
Samuel F. Wilkins, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service and Missionary Education; aids Colleges, Academies, Training Schools, Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities and among immigrants.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

To conserve the welfare of aged ministers or their wives

The Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers

The opportunities of this Fund should anpeal to all our ministers under fifty-five years of age.

375 Lexington Ave., New York City
Rev. William A. Rice, Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

COMMISSION OF ONE HUNDRED OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL
Established at Columbus, Ohio, 1917
375 Lexington Ave., New York City
Charles S. Mills, Chairman
Lewis T. Reed, Executive Secretary

A Permanent Tercentenary Memorial Fund of Five Million Dollars, to provide annuities for the old age and disability of Congregational Ministers. The income to supplement payments made by the ministers. Actuarially Sound. Socially Just.

Make checks payable to the
Pilgrim Memorial Fund Commission

In Every Congregational Home

The Congregationalist
and Advance

This splendid result has been achieved in several churches

Make It The Goal For Your Church

One method is to pay for the subscription from the Church Treasury, making it a part of the Annual Budget.

The more readers you have in your church of our own and only National Church Paper, the more your people will understand about the Congregational Missions and the Educational Institutions, the progress of the Christian World, what the other churches are doing, and how. They will be helped and inspired in personal and home life, in good citizenship and in church work. The old and the young are delighted each week with the brilliant articles, the good stories, helpful short sermons, book reviews and editorials.

Subscribe now and receive free the five Holiday Numbers and all of 1921 for only $3.00 ($2.75 in church clubs and to ministers).

THE CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

The Congregationalist and Advance

14 Beacon Street, Boston

19 W. Jackson Street, Chicago

MAKE THIS A BOOK CHRISTMAS

During the next few weeks every commodity under the sun is going to be suggested to you as an "appropriate Christmas Gift." After you have examined all of these "suggestions" ask yourself this question, "Is there anything so acceptable to every one, so enduring, or so worthwhile as a good book?"

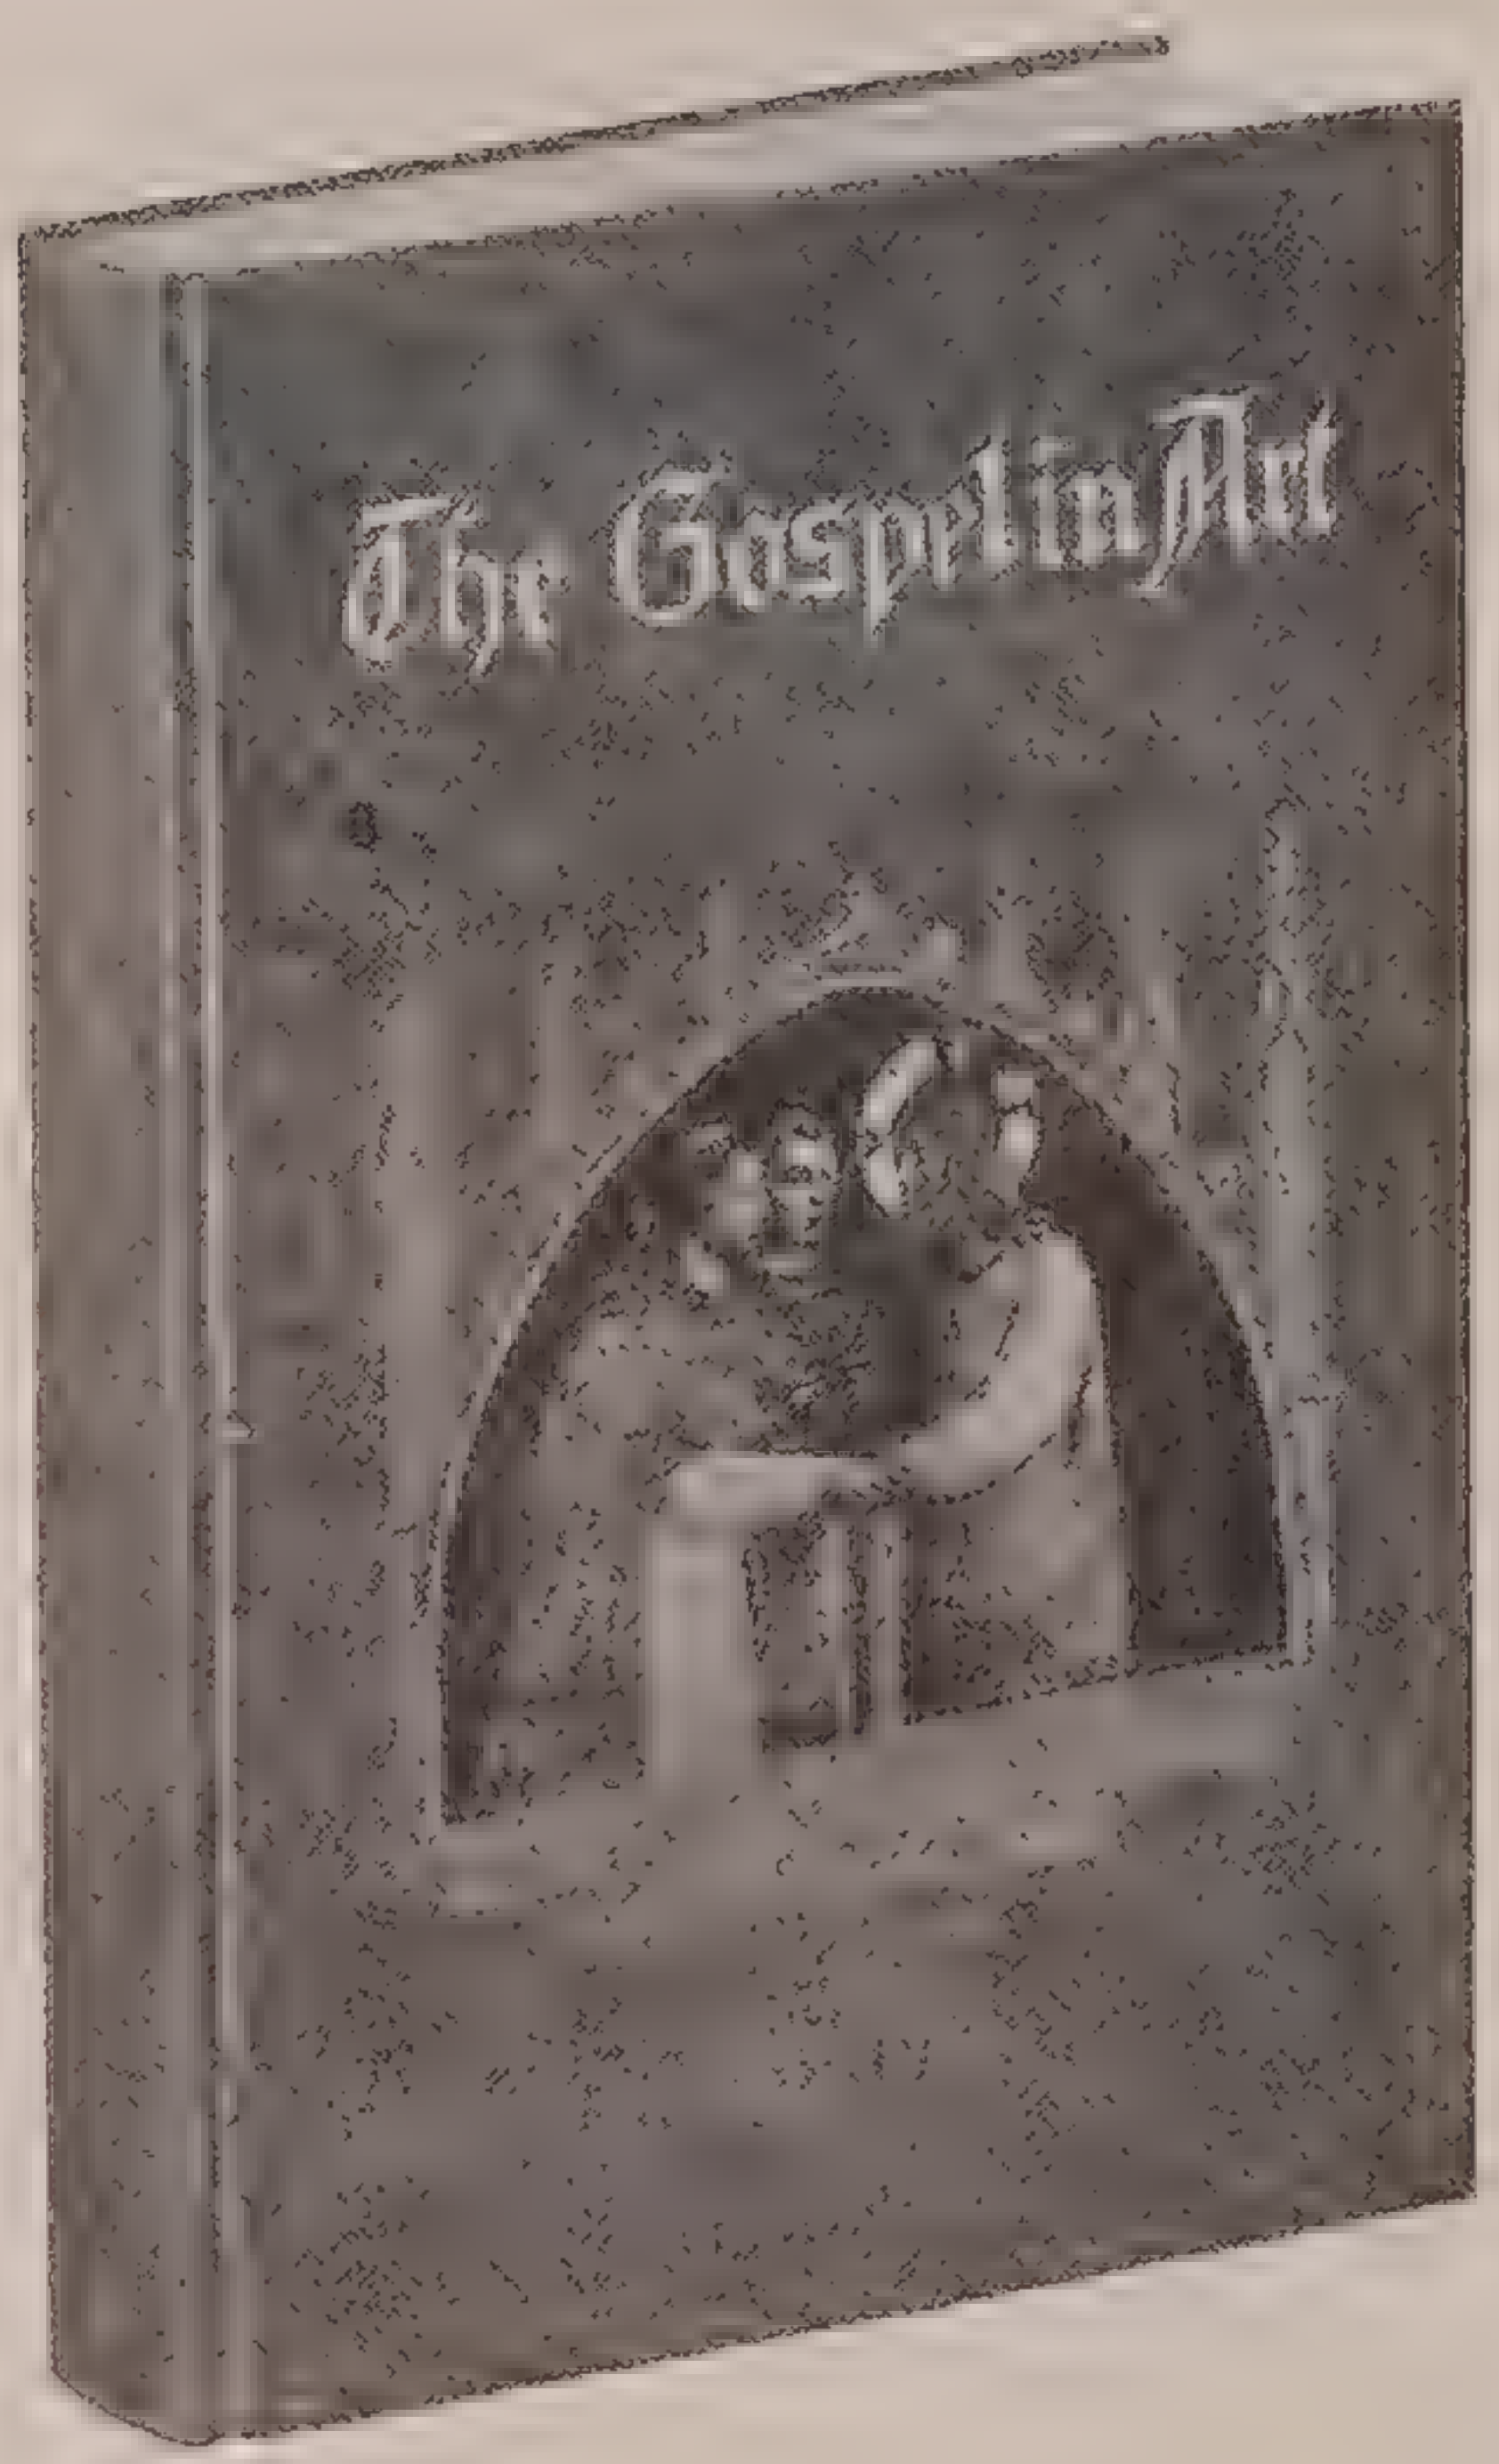
The Gospel in Art

ALBERT E. BAILEY

Is without question one of the most appropriate and permanently valuable Christmas gifts imaginable.

120 beautiful half-tone reproductions of paintings of the Great Masters on the Life of Christ, arranged in biographical sequence, and two pictures in their original colors.

Each theme is presented in a group of several contrasting pictures and the work of each artist is interpreted. Four pictures on the Annunciation, four on the Nativity, etc.



The Eminent Authority,
ESTELLE M. HURLL, SAYS

"I have been examining it with the peculiar enjoyment which one has in handling a new treatment of a dear familiar theme. What new note is struck here, we ask? What method is used, the historical, the critical or the interpretive? In my own 'Life of Our Lord in Art' I followed Mrs. Jameson's historical method, tracing the origin and development of the art treatment of every incident in Chirst's life. The critical and interpretive method from the standpoint of a devout spirit and an accomplished technician, was developed to the highest degree by the late John La Farge in his monumental work. It remained for Mr. Bailey to evolve another method all his own. His is a practical working handbook which brings together four different features never before united."

$4.50; postage, 15 cents.

THOUSANDS OF HOMES WILL BE DELIGHTED

in the perusal of that unusual book by Dr. Howard A. Bridgman entitled "New England in the Life of the World." Hardly an American family in all the great West but what is proud to find itself in some way related to the hardy pioneers who were big enough and brave enough to break the ties of New England hamlets and launch forth toward the great unknown West, there to make an ineffaceable impress.

Never before have these many expeditions been chronicled in a single volume—a narrative which reveals not only practically every state west of New England, but many corners of the World, heavy debtors to New England. A fascinating narrative. $3.00; postage, 15 cents.

You Will Make No Mistake if You Purchase Books by These Authors

WILLIAM ALLEN KNIGHT
MARGARET SLATTERY
WILFRED T. GRENFELL
WASHINGTON GLADDEN
CHARLES R. BROWN
GEORGE A. GORDON
RAYMOND CALKINS
JAMES L. BARTON
JAMES STALKER
JOHN EDGAR McFADYEN
WALTER RAUSCHENBUSCH

All listed in Pilgrim Press catalogue to be had for the asking

14 BEACON STREET
BOSTON

THE PILGRIM PRESS

19 W. JACKSON STREET
CHICAGO

The Congregationalist and Advance

Thanksgiving Number

November 18, 1920

Every Congregational Church Will Receive A Chart

Of Which This Is A Specimen

Note 1. The amount of this church's apportionment for 1921.
2. The gift per member per week necessary to meet this apportionment.
3. How small the income is, a tenth of which was given in 1919 for local church support and benevolence combined.

Benevolence Record of this Church

Gifts to Congregational Mission Boards

A Generation Ago 1890	Pre-War 1914	Last Year 1919	New Goal 1920	Apportionment 1921
$	$ 538	$ 485	$2837	$3000.

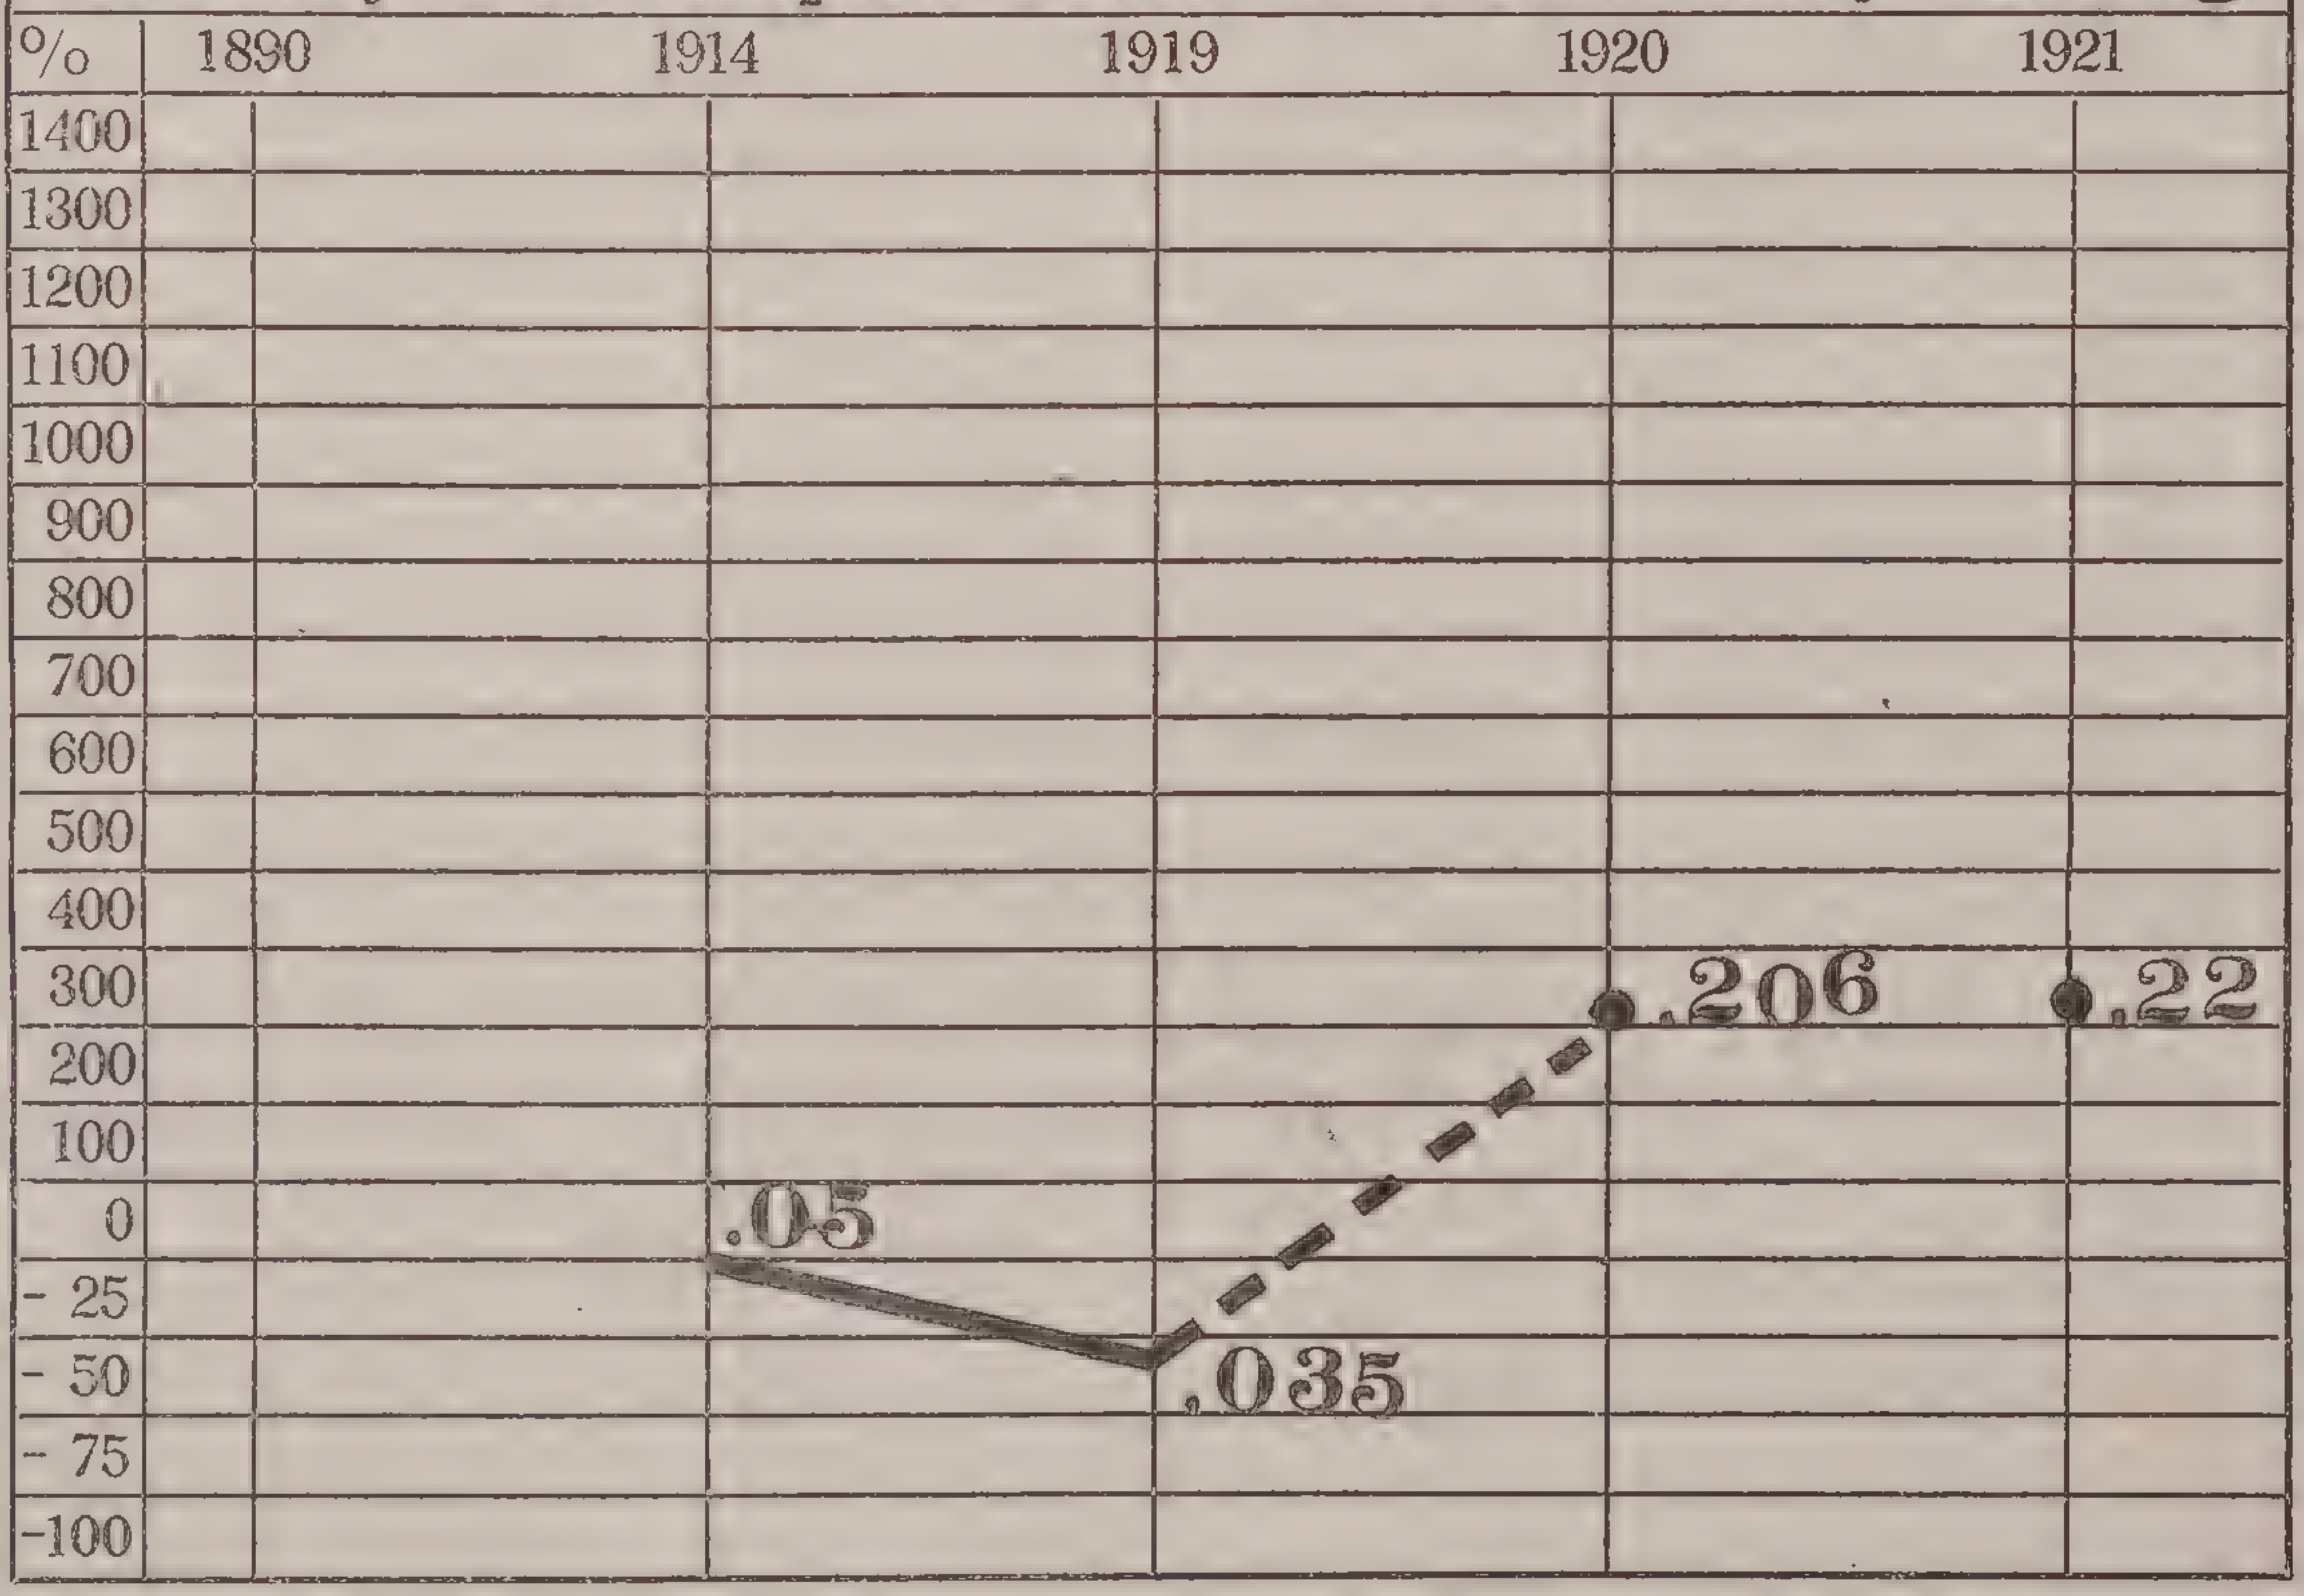
An Average Gift of ONLY 22 CENTS Per Week Per Member on the Apportionment would put this Church OVER THE TOP

3,000 Churches have already assured their 1920 goals

2,000 More could do so before the year closes

The Red Star shows how far this church has gone on the way to its 1920 goal

Weekly Per Capita Rate of Missionary Giving



FOR LOCAL CHURCH SUPPORT AND BENEVOLENCE COMBINED
THIS CHURCH IN 1919 GAVE PER MEMBER 63 CENTS PER WEEK.
THIS IS ONE-TENTH OF AN INCOME OF 328 DOLLARS PER YEAR.

CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP
The Experience of Godly People Throughout the Centuries
Has Confirmed the Soundness of the Biblical Teaching of PROPORTIONATE GIVING and Generally of ONE-TENTH of the Income.

WILL THIS CHURCH UNDERTAKE ITS SHARE OF THE COMMON TASK?
WILL ITS MEMBERS ENROLL AS SYSTEMATIC PROPORTIONATE GIVERS?

Furnished by The CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT 287 4th Ave., New York

The church indicated on this chart was organized subsequent to 1890

The Congregationalist and Advance

November 18, 1920

Volume CV. Copyright, 1920 All rights reserved Number 47

By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

CONTENTS

Pilgrim Virtues in Modern Life.—3. The Thankful Heart—An Editorial Message 621
Editorial—Can the Bible Stand Criticism? 622
What the Election Showed
A Challenge from Paris
The Parable of the Man Who Saw New York
What the Christian World is Doing 624
The Capital of International Confidence, by Isaac Ogden Rankin 625
For What Shall the Middle West be Thankful? by James Austin Richards 626
Why the Pacific Coast is Thankful, by Henry H. Kelsey 626
What the South has to be Thankful for, by Frank R. Shipman 627
Why Our Colored People are Thankful, by William N. DeBerry 627
Our Pilgrim Pulpit—Thanksgiving in Troubled Times, by Irving Maurer 628
From Day to Day, by Allen Chesterfield 628
League of the New Day 628
The Burial of Dr. Herring 629
The Herring Memorial Fund 629
The Congregational World Movement 629
Among the New Books 630
In the Church School—Dr. Davis' Bible Class. The Authority of the Bible 636
The Hour of Prayer—Comment on Midweek and Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topics 637
With the Children—Penelope's Basket, by Blanche Elizabeth Wade. The Comrades' Corner 638
In the Congregational Circle—Church News 640

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. Howard A. Bridgman, D. D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
Associate Editor, Rev. Isaac Ogden Rankin
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D. D. (Chicago)
Literary Editor, Rev. Parris T. Farwell
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Editorial Assistants { Miss Florence A. Moore
Miss Janet L. Savage
Miss Sallie A. McDermott (Chicago)
Contributing Editor, Rev. William E. Barton, D. D.
Business Manager, Albert W. Fell
Advertising Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou
Circulation Manager, Miss Ethel M. Wentworth

The Congregationalist and Advance succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Congregationalist, 1849; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday, by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

Rates: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions are discontinued on date of expiration, appearing on the address label of the paper. Remittances: Should be made payable to The Congregationalist and Advance, and will be acknowledged by a change of date on the label. Receipt will be sent if two-cent stamp is enclosed with remittance. In renewing do not fail to send exact address as on label. Change of Address: Both old and new addresses must be sent in and be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies may be obtained at the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Subscription correspondence may be directed to The Congregationalist and Advance, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Talk of the Sanctum

Who's Who In This Week's Paper

Rev. James Austin Richards, formerly pastor of Mt. Vernon Church in Boston, has recently gone to Winnetka, Ill., and become a Middle Westerner.

Rev. H. H. Kelsey is one of the District Secretaries of the American Board, with headquarters at San Francisco.

Rev. Frank R. Shipman, who tells what the South has to be thankful for, is president of Atlanta Theological Seminary.

Rev. William N. DeBerry is a leading Colored pastor of the North. As assistant moderator of the National Council and a well known minister in Springfield, Mass., he is well qualified to know what the Colored people have to be thankful for.

This Issue

This is the first of our series of annual Holiday Numbers. We give special prominence to Thanksgiving messages—editorial and from several sections of our country—and to the Book Review section. We hope the suggestions within these pages will help us all to have the true Thanksgiving spirit and pass it on to others.

The attractive discriminating survey of new books beginning this week will be continued through the next few issues. The very next one will be devoted to juveniles—the Young Folk's Book Number.

Speaking of books—one of the publishers has made a happy suggestion in proposing that we give our ministers books for Christmas.

Our Pilgrim Pulpit

Our preacher this week is Rev. Irving Maurer, the brilliant pastor of one of our strong influential churches, First Church, Columbus the church of Washington Gladden for many years, and of Dr. Carl S. Patton, now of First Church, Los Angeles. Mr. Maurer is a brother of Dr. Oscar Maurer of New Haven and was formerly pastor of Edwards Church, Northhampton, Mass. His Thanksgiving sermon is timely and inspiring.

In the Circulation Department—

We are grateful for the hearty co-operation of a host of friends. "Push The Congregationalist and Advance" is a slogan that is being taken up far and wide.

It means thereby to push every good cause in which we, as Congregationalists, are interested. It means push our own church and all that it stands for. It means push the religious education of our young people. It means push the best modern methods in our Woman's Societies and Men's Brotherhoods. It means push Christian citizenship. It means push the higher life and happiness in the home. It means push the Christian interpretation and attitude toward public affairs.

It means push missions, social service and education at home and abroad. It means push effective co-operation in all good things for the common good.

Help us to put The Congregationalist and Advance in every home in your church. Several churches have done just that. At all events try to double the list of subscribers in your church. If your neighbor doesn't take the paper, keep telling him what he is missing until he does take it. That is doing him a good turn and helping your church.

From Our Mail Bag

What a good paper you are making these days, and what a find you made of those Pilgrim migrations. G.

The Christmas Fund for Nineteen Hundred and Twenty

The Christmas Fund comes to the nineteenth year of its gathering and distribution.

The beautiful ministry of this Fund is such a blessing to retired, aged and infirm pastors of our Congregational Churches, and to the widows of such pastors, that all the agencies of our denomination agree that nothing should interfere with its promotion.

The National and State organizations, and most of all The Congregational World Movement, whose supreme task is to make a united appeal to our churches for all the denomination's missionary and benevolent organizations, all say, "Go ahead with the Christmas Fund."

This year, and hereafter, the beneficiaries of the fourteen State Ministerial Relief Societies, as well as those on the roll of the National Society, will share in the allotments of the Christmas Fund. This means that there will be more than six hundred families, or one-third more than formerly, who are to be remembered in 1920.

We asked last year for $25,000 and received $21,500. This year we must ask for $35,000.

Surely this is not an impossible task, when we remember

(a) The need of those who participate;

(b) The number of those who have the privilege of contributing, for our Congregational Church membership and constituency largely exceeds a million people;

(c) That all the Christmas checks are in addition to the regular annual grants which are painfully inadequate;

(d) That those who will be comforted and blessed with these Christmas Gifts are the men and women who have honored our churches with their faithful service through many years, who have adorned the Christian life in the display of the spirit of their Master and who just now in feebleness of body, often associated with great suffering and sacrifice, are waiting on the shore for the call—"Come ye blessed of my Father."

Thanksgiving, less than a month from Christmas, is a fitting time for our first message, and suggests many gifts, to be used at Christmas, of gratitude and thanksgiving to God for the many mercies we have all enjoyed during this wonderful year.

Kindly address all communications to 375 Lexington Avenue, New York.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief

REV. HENRY A. STIMSON, D. D., President B. H. FANCHER, Treasurer REV. WILLIAM A. RICE, Secretary

The Congregationalist and Advance

Pilgrim Virtues in Modern Life

III. The Thankful Heart

A GENERATION ago Christian people used to sing more frequently than they do today a hymn beginning,

> Father, whate'er of earthly bliss
> Thy sovereign hand denies,
> Accepted at thy throne of grace,
> Let this petition rise—
>
> Give me a calm, a thankful heart,
> From every murmur free,
> The blessings of thy grace impart,
> And let me live to thee.

A noble instinct it was that led Anne Steele, the author of this hymn, to make her request for a "thankful heart" a preferred claim with God. For the man who possesses a thankful heart has great riches. Without it the celebration of prescribed seasons is mockery.

THE Pilgrims had it. They took it with them from England to Holland and from Holland to America. It gives warmth and color to many a page in Bradford's story. Falling on their knees in an ecstasy of gratitude when their feet first pressed the new land was not a performance staged for the benefit of future generations. They had acquired the habit.

As the year rolled around bringing in its course ample harvests and the assurance of peace with the Indians, they were moved to a more formal and elaborate celebration. But when on this first official occasion their table was liberally supplied with wild turkeys, ducks and venison, some of them at least were glad that they had not forgotten to thank God for the cornmeal and the few fish from the sea which God provided in earlier days.

WE have inherited from the Pilgrims the institution of Thanksgiving. It is one of the sweetest and most sacred of our national festivals, but the spirit which prompted the assemblages in church and homes must be acquired by each successive generation for itself. We are disposed to begin and often to end with a recital of our material benefits. A bumper wheat crop when there is one; the prospect of a change in government, general business prosperity, peace after a terrible war, comfort and plenty seated at our fireside—are mentioned.

But the table may be so well spread and the man who sits at it so over-nourished and the congregation that listens to the Thanksgiving sermon so well dressed, that the injunction, "Oh, that men would praise the Lord for his goodness and his wonderful works to the children of men," falls on listless ears. The great ascriptions of praise to God which ring forth from the lips of Paul, "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift"; "I thank my God upon all my remembrance of your faith"; "Thanks be unto God who always leadeth us in triumph in Christ"; evoke little response from hearts wedded to the things of sense.

The really thankful heart begins its chant on a higher note. To the Pilgrims God himself, the God they had come to know and trust and love through Jesus Christ was the mainspring of gratitude. God's work for them and in them whereby their rough natures were being slowly shaped and polished into true reflections of his holiness was the one outstanding reason for profound Thanksgiving. Behind every material evidence of his care was the unfailing love, the measureless power which had given them existence, redeemed them from their sins and made these plain English adventurers kings and priests of God, able to rule themselves and others, able to penetrate into the divine mysteries and to mediate these mysteries to their fellow men.

A NEVER failing fountain of gratitude begins to well up in the heart when one starts his catalog of benefits with God himself, with what he is actually doing today in this our world, ennobling standards of public service, bringing the ends of the earth together in closer sympathy, distributing with the aid of men who enter into his compassionate thought the material blessings of life more widely and equitably, chastening, disciplining, purifying, utilizing every one who will take God at his word.

One man who has reached this high plane of spiritual life looks from his place at the head of the Thanksgiving table upon an unbroken family circle, thinks of his snug bank account, and while thanking God for immunity from ill health and poverty, rejoices even more that God's gifts to him are being used aright and are bringing him nearer to God. Another man sees at his table a vacant chair. He reviews a year in which his way has been hard and shadowed. But he knows that the best which any year can bring has been his all through the twelve months, that God has not yet finished with him and his, that though he may see no immediate door of escape from difficulties, there is a door somewhere.

MODERN life would be infinitely more serene; the fierce struggle to keep up with a more prosperous neighbor would be abated; the sweet amenities of daily intercourse in the home, in the shop and society would be more evident; many of the murmurings and antagonisms between class and class and race and race would be stilled, if we would transplant and cultivate in our own souls the modest flower of gratitude which beautified the sterile soil of Plymouth.

H. A. B.

EDITORIAL

Can the Bible Stand Criticism?

We have received several letters protesting against the little series of articles by Rev. Frank M. Sheldon entitled "The Study of the Bible" which have been running in our columns. Our correspondents feel that this effort to set forth what the author considers the proper method of studying the Old Testament tends to undermine faith in the Bible itself. Mr. Sheldon has been emphasizing the fact that the Bible is a progressive revelation of God, culminating in Jesus Christ, by whose words and spirit everything else in the Scriptures should be tested. His has been a minute study of the actual text of Scripture and he has urged his readers to face for themselves what seemed to be contradictions in the text and commands accredited to God which from the Christian standpoint seem to represent him as vindictive and cruel.

The Congregationalist has allowed Mr. Sheldon the latitude of personal opinion which is the right of every contributor to its columns. This does not mean that every assertion or every particular conclusion has the paper's indorsement. On the other hand, it sympathizes with the general tenor of the articles.

We have no desire to undermine or change the belief of those who regard every part of the Bible as of equal value and authority with that of every other part. Many noble and useful Christian lives have been built on this belief. But for the last fifty years at least, the idea that the Bible is a progressive revelation of God's character and of God's will has been displacing, in a large section of the Christian church, the theory that equal inspiration and infallibility attaches to every utterance of the Bible. This broader and we believe truer conception has established itself in many of our churches and in most of our colleges. Mr. Sheldon has said in these articles practically what our sons and daughters in school and college are being told by their Biblical instructors. Indeed the material in this special series was first given last summer at that stronghold of conservatism, Northfield, and was welcomed by many of the young people gathered there.

Satisfied as some of us may be with the older view of the Bible, it is a mistake to expect or desire that the young people of today will adopt it. Something better and more enduring must be put in its place. Pastors and public teachers at this point tread on perilous ground. To dwell exclusively on the contradictions of Scripture and the passages which represent a lower ethical standard is foolish and wrong; but only good will ultimately result if the idea is kept prominent that God's education of man has been going on through a long stretch of time and that "at sundry times and in divers manners" God spoke to his children, as they were able to hear and understand him, and that the fact that they sometimes misunderstood him, as when Paul verily thought he ought to persecute the Christians, does not invalidate the sweep of the Scriptural teaching concerning God, man and redemption.

The main thing is to get the people old and young to study the Bible. Some who shout from the housetops their belief in the Bible from "cover to cover" are densely ignorant concerning the contents of many a book. We have no fear that the young people of today, if they really study their Bibles and keep on studying them, will lose their Christian faith. In the case of many the modern approach may be the only method of acquiring that vital faith that shall be their very own and not an inherited form. Mr. Sheldon is thinking of the church of the future and of the great army of boys and girls, young men and young women who should be in it and in it soon, and who should learn to value their Bible and to live upon its sustaining and enduring truths.

We say again that we have no sympathy with any kind of modern criticism that delights in undertaking to tear the Bible to pieces. That is an impossible achievement even for critics who start with a presumption against religion and revealed truth. But reverent criticism, which after all is only another term for honest, patient study of the Bible, has its place in the life of the church today. Hundreds of people who accept in the main the modern critical views of the Bible look upon it still as the altogether matchless revelation of a loving and redeeming God. They feed upon the Old Testament as well as upon the New. Their trust in the Christ foreshadowed by the law and the prophets, depicted by the Gospels and interpreted by the Epistles and the Revelation, and confirmed in personal experience, is absolute and final. Day by day the Bible is a lamp unto their feet and a light in their path, and they have no deeper desire for their children than that they should avail themselves of every means and opportunity whereby from their childhood they may truly know the Scriptures which alone can make them wise unto salvation.

* *

Speed on the Congregational World Movement in your church. The movement moves most encouragingly, but its ultimate success depends upon the local church. When one looks out upon the chaotic and war-wrecked world, one must feel as never before the need of Christian missions, and the need and opportunities in the home missions and Christian education fields of America are urgent and our responsibility imperative. It is for these things that the Congregational World Movement unites our forces and calls us to go forward to larger undertakings.

"We can if we will," and of course we will!

What the Election Showed

The returns from the election are not even yet complete as regards the minority parties. But the verdict of the people as to the conduct of the Government past and to come is entirely complete and unmistakable. A glance at the map will show that the Republican ticket for presidential electors leads in every state except in a portion of the "Solid South" and usually by great majorities. One of the encouraging results is that the sectionalism of the Democratic party shows some signs of disintegration. Tennessee is a notable convert to Republicanism and so are Oklahoma and New Mexico.

We haven't the exact figures at hand, but the actual pluralities given for Harding run up well over the six million mark. The state of New York gave Harding over a million plurality. Ohio, which had been considered a doubtful, or at least a bitterly contested state, gave the Marion editor a plurality of more than 350,000. He will be chosen by an electoral vote of 404, to 127 for Cox.

In the legislative branch of the Government the result is similar. The Republican majority in the Senate will be 22, and in the House about 179. From Texas a Republican was elected to Congress. The delegations from whole states are unanimously Republican, like Minnesota, Connecticut, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Washington, Nebraska, North and South Dakota and Ohio. Kentucky, which gave its vote to Cox, sends a Republican senator. In New Jersey only three Democrats were elected. In the lower house of its legislature there is only one Democrat. The Republican senators, like Wadsworth of New York, Watson of Indiana, Lenroot of Wisconsin, Smoot of Utah and Brandegee of Connecticut, who were opposed because of their attitude on suffrage for women or had bitter factional fights to hinder were all returned. The veteran, Former-Speaker Champ Clark of Missouri, lost his seat.

The story of the minority parties is not even yet wholly clear. The Socialists claim some 2,000,000 votes and profess themselves satisfied. They elected one representative in Congress. The Farmer-Labor Party holds North Dakota on state issues, but did not prove so large a factor in that group of states as had been expected. But its leader claims 1,000,000 votes in nine states. The Prohibition Party lost its one representative, but as a partial offset an Independent Prohibitionist, Milton W. Shreeve, was chosen from one of the Pennsylvania districts. The leaders of the party state that the Volstead law is safe, as more than 225 of those who voted for the law are re-elected, including Mr. Volstead, who will retain his position as chairman of the Judiciary Committee. The California referendum on a law forbidding the owning or leasing of farm lands by persons ineligible to citizenship received an overwhelming vote.

A great majority means a great responsibility. The Congressional majority in the next Congress is too large to be managed easily. The way of the President-elect is difficult. He should be able to feel, as Governor Cox suggests, that the good will of the whole country is behind him in his work.

* *

We shall all breathe more freely because the English coal strike was avoided at the last moment. We are brothers one of another and civil war anywhere means a reduction of the resources of the world which every one, everywhere comes to feel. We can only hope that the long-delayed agreement will be something more than a truce.

A Challenge from Paris

The Paris Letter on page 641 deserves careful and sympathetic reading. It is a letter from the American Church in the Rue de Berri, whose pastors, Chauncey Goodrich and Stanley Fisher, are known not only to our Congregational constituency, but who have become the pastors of multitudes of all communions who journey to Paris, engaged in welfare work, studies in the French universities and studios, or active in the commercial life of the country.

The Bulletins of the International Chamber of Commerce present a challenge to the faith and resources of the American Church when they report 40,000 Americans living in Paris; and now in this "Thanksgiving Letter from a Paris Padre" that challenge is handed on to the American Christians over here.

Over one million dollars for the Enlarged Program of the American Church in Paris has been pledged by churches, denominational boards and individuals, as Mr. Fisher has presented the challenge in this country during the past eight months. But there are immediate needs which cannot await the pledges for the new buildings and larger program: "Practically all the American Welfare organizations which did such splendid work during the War and Armistice period have been withdrawn from Paris. Today there is imperative need for an adequate meeting place for young men and women, under wholesome influences." The Church has an opportunity to purchase and equip a building which shall house a growing Sunday school, men's and women's clubs and other social activities. Building and equipment will cost $150,000.

The letter properly suggests that a fitting celebration of this Armistice-Thanksgiving period would be a pledge to this enterprise for a Finer American Life in Paris "in grateful memory of the 70,000 American patriots whose bodies lie buried in French soil."

* *

We may all thank God that in a world which has so much to teach us we are spared for a little time to go to school to the Great Teacher.

The Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Man Who Saw New York

A certain man went to New York, and he bought him an Excess Fare Ticket, and he boarded the Twentieth Century Limited, and he felt very important because he was getting off one portion of the surface of the earth and upon another somewhat more swiftly than did his grandfather when he traversed the same road in the other direction three score years and ten before. For his grandfather drave an ox-cart westward and saved money, and he drave the Twentieth Century eastward and flung money out of the car window. And in that fashion do men of this generation rise to a position of superiority above their grandfathers.

And he came into the city of Little Old New York. And he entered a great Inn hard by the station, so that he entered it by the Subway, and he went not upon the street.

And when the morning came he entered the Subway again, and ran down to Wall Street. And the building where he did business had its own Subway Entrance, so that his feet pressed not the soil of New York.

And he descended again into the Subway and returned unto Forty-second Street, for he had an errand in Times Square, and he followed the Green Line to the Shuttle Train, and did his business in Times Square, and he followed the Black Line back to the Shuttle Train and he returned unto Forty-second Street. And a friend invited him to lunch at the Yale Club, and he entered that from the Subway. And he took an Uptown Express and went many miles, and he poked his head out of the Subway long enough to see Grant's Tomb. Then he looked at his watch and hastened back into the Subway and returned to the Inn, and paid his bill, which was Some Bill, and he grabbed his bag and hustled into the Subway and followed the Green Line to the Shuttle Train, and got off at Times Square and took the Downtown Express to the Pennsylvania Station and entered it from the Subway, and returned unto his home.

And he said unto his friends, I have seen Little Old New York; and behold, it is an Hole in the Ground.

But New York hath an Elevated as well as a Subway, and he knew it not. And it hath cars that travel on the surface as well as those that go above and below it; and busses that go up Fifth Avenue, and Rubberneck wagons with a man with a megaphone. And it hath Churches and Libraries and Art Galleries, and he had seen only the Subway.

And many a man goeth into a strange city and hunteth out its underground life, and saith, It is a wicked, wicked city. But the city was not wicked save only that wicked men acted wickedly in it.

And, beloved, there be those who travel through life in the Subway; neither do they even suspect how large is God's world above ground, nor how nobly a man may live who keepeth himself upon an higher level.

And I considered these things, and I said in mine heart that I will live the life of one who useth this world at its best, and who discovereth in it more than that which may be discovered by the life of the Subway.

In Brief

A thankful heart makes as good a celebration with a little as with much.

* *

If you have not taken out your membership in the American Red Cross, do so with at least a dollar at once. There is work enough in rebuilding the world and keeping the stricken nations alive to use as many dollars as you can spare.

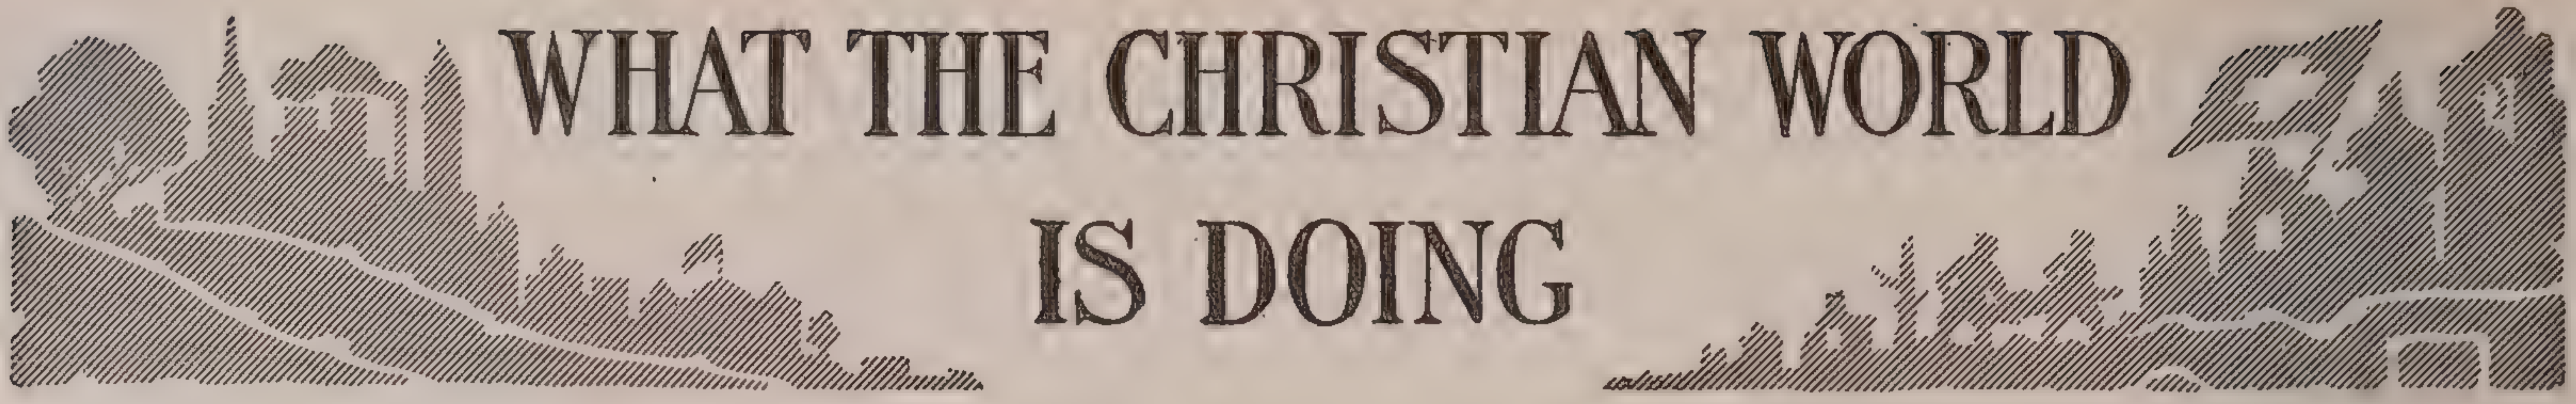
* *

A striking presentation of educational need and heroic efforts to meet that need appears in the advertisement of Northland College in this issue. Here is a real missionary college serving a large area in which the population is rapidly increasing and in which there is no other college. Money invested in such an institution yields returns manyfold in the lives of ambitious young people, thus enabled to get a Christian education for service. And money is urgently needed just now if this worthy work is to be continued.

* *

We cannot put among our grounds of thanksgiving the fact that the United States is a world leader in freedom from crimes of violence. Mr. Raymond Fosdick has given out statistics compiled for the Bureau of Social Hygiene which show such facts as these: London, with a population of 7,250,000 in 1916 had nine premeditated murders; Chicago in the same year had 105. In fact Chicago, with 2,500,000 people, had twenty more murders that year than England and Wales together, and four more than England, Scotland and Wales. In the three years, 1916–1918, Glasgow had 38 homicides and Philadelphia, only a little larger, had 281. In 1917 New York had more than four times the number of burglaries as London. In 1915 New York City reported 838 robberies and assaults with intent to rob, where London had 20 and England, Scotland and Wales 102. In the next column of the newspaper in which this report of the Bureau of Social Hygiene is printed is reported this thought-provoking statement of President Fisher of the Boston Boot and Shoe Club:

> From my own business experience there is nothing on earth that business needs so much today as religion. By that I mean responsibility to God, to man and to the obligations that go with it, in order that our relations with each other shall be the relations of one brother to another. Obligations must be kept and the covenants we make must be considered sacred and binding; therefore, I have come to feel after a long business life that some form of Christianity—I believe Unitarian Christianity—is the heart of the covenant of all business life.



WHAT THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IS DOING

An Ambassador of Peace

ONE of the best known Japanese Christian leaders, Ex-President T. Harada of the Doshisha University, during the last six months has been representing in this country the American Japan Relations Committee, with a view to promoting a better understanding between the two nations. This is an organization made up of prominent Japanese of liberal tendencies who are eager to preserve the historic friendship with America, and is headed by Baron Shibushawa. It has brought to Japan such influential Americans as Frank Vanderlip and Lyman Gage. Its work grows more important as relations between Japan and our Pacific Coast tend to become more strained. That is the reason why Dr. Harada has been consulting with both Japanese and American groups and individuals in California and has also been visiting Boston, New York and Washington on the same irenic errand. He will be all the better prepared to carry back to his native land a month hence a report of American sentiment that will help to allay hostile feeling. After that he goes to Honolulu to fill for the next two years the recently created chair of Japanese history in the University of Hawaii.

Reshaping Co-operative Movements

A GOOD deal of time and of gray matter is being devoted by various committees and sub-committees in Boston, New York, Chicago and other religious centers to the problems relating to effective co-operation between the denominations. Bishop Nicholson's committee appointed to consider the future of the Interchurch organization has held several hearings, at which secretaries, prominent pastors and laymen have had their say. Opinion leans on the one hand to entrusting the preservation of the best features of the Interchurch Movement to the Federal Council, which has hitherto done little in the way of pure administration. A group, though not a large one, believes that the Interchurch itself should continue to function as a kind of overhead organization, but organically related to the organizations as it has not been heretofore. Still others feel that the already existing bodies known as the Foreign Missions Conference and the Home Missions Councils are the agencies to conserve and express the co-operative idea. The situation is considerably muddled, but one thing is sure—the co-operative idea has come to stay in some form or other. What is needed at the moment is two or three master minds who will show the way.

The Unitarian Forward Movement

OF all the denominational campaigns for 1920–1921, that of the Unitarians for three million dollars is noticeably in evidence, especially in the East. The campaign comes to a climax next week. It has an exceptionally efficient publicity bureau, whose managers are putting up some taking advertisements in many local newspapers. Perhaps its best outstanding asset is the active participation in the movement of Ex-President Taft, Honorary Chairman of the working committee of one hundred representative Unitarian men and women the country over. Its executive head is a forceful layman, Ernest C. Adams. Mr. Taft seems to be turning gladly from the strenuous political contest to the advocacy of religion of the Unitarian type as the great need of a restless and materialistically minded world today. His first speech in Boston was a gem of a sermon from that point of view. The Campaign is described as Religious-Educational-Financial. The funds will be applied to these major uses: increased salaries for ministers, an addition to the investment at the disposal of the Unitarian Pension Society, added resources for the Laymen's League, the Woman's Alliance, the Young People's Religious Union, the Department of Religious Extension, the Department of Church Extension and the Western Conference. In addition, apportionments will be granted a number of other Unitarian agencies.

Dr. Grenfell Too

THE intrepid Labrador missionary, Dr. W. T. Grenfell, thinks this is an opportune time to raise in the United States, Canada, and Newfoundland and England a million and a half dollars to endow his hospitals, children's homes and other institutions. He has been campaigning in Canada and secured there the pledge of $150,000. Until the first of January he and his financial manager, Mr. E. Perry Burgess of New York, will be holding meetings in thirty cities in New England.

A Great Protestant Assembly

THE Fourth Quadrennial Meeting of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, to be held in Boston Dec. 1–6, promises to be a fitting culmination of the religious observance of the Tercentenary year. The Local Committee, representing the Massachusetts and Boston Federations of Churches, the National Congregational Council, and eight Denominational Social Clubs, is admirably organized. The business sessions will be held in Ford Building. The formal welcome of State and Churches and the address of the Moderator will be given, Wednesday evening in the Old South Meeting House. Thursday evening, St. Paul's Cathedral is offered for the addresses on "American Ideals; a Heritage from the Pilgrims," by President Faunce of Brown University, and Robert Speer, D. D., of New York. On Friday evening, in Trinity Church, "Christian Internationalism" will be discussed by Frank A. Vanderlip, Dr. R. C. Gillie, President of the English Free Church Council, General Nivelle of France, and other official representatives of European Governments. The Sunday evening session will be devoted to Missions, with John R. Mott as the main speaker, in Ford Building. Sunday afternoon, in Faneuil Hall, "Christian Industrialism" will be emphasized by Bishop Francis J. McConnell. A banquet will be given on Monday evening, at the City Club, by the denominational social clubs. The business sessions will be open to the public, who are admitted to the gallery, and, with the reports of the various Commissions, will be of great interest. A letter of welcome has already been sent to 1600 Members and Corresponding Members of the Council.

The Proposed Brooklyn Merger

THE proposal to unite Clinton Avenue and Central Avenue Congregational Churches in Brooklyn has gone so far as to attract the editorial notice of Brooklyn papers. The Standard Union of Nov. 7 devotes a column and a half to a discussion of the subject pro and con. On Nov. 7 at a joint meeting of the boards of the two churches, a recommendation was passed that the pastors of the two churches and the presidents of the boards of trustees formulate a concrete plan for the merger, this to be presented to the official boards of the churches and through them to the church members.

Original Plates of Finney's Famous Book Found

BURIED under several inches of dust in the basement of the old Goodrich book store in Oberlin, O., the original plates of Charles Grandison Finney's famous "Lectures on Systematic Theology" have just been unearthed after being lost for a quarter of a century. Printed for the first time in England, in 1851, the book, like its author, made a profound impression on both sides of the Atlantic. General Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, had a copy placed in each of his London Community Houses. In spite of the changing opinions in modern theology, Finney's work still holds its high and authoritative position. The book deals with questions of moral government, and other significant moral issues. For many years the plates have been sought. Now that they have been discovered a new edition will soon be forthcoming.

Pacific University Exceeds Record

PACIFIC University has a registratio this year considerably beyond any previous record. The enrollment to date in the college is 135 and in the conservatory 80 The faculty, the best of any in recent years is well equipped and thoroughly enthusiastic

The Capital of International Confidence

Geneva, the Place Where the League of Nations Meets

By Isaac Ogden Rankin

Mid-November brings to Geneva, the first city of French-speaking Switzerland, the honor of playing host to the first formal public session of the confederation of the world in the League of Nations. The founders of the League passed over the sentiment which would have given this honor to Brussels as a perpetual memorial to its sufferings, its courage and its patience, the precedents of The Hague, with its courts and Palace of Peace, as well as the claim of that far-seeing imagination which would have included Asia in its vision and re-established Constantinople as the center to which the world would look for guidance, as it did for centuries of the later Roman sway. They chose instead for a center of deliberation and appeal a Western European capital, a place which was the seat of government for no already established political state, this quiet and busy city, of nearly the size of Worcester or New Haven, which sits astride the River Rhone at its outlet from one of the beautiful lakes of the world.

The first claim which Geneva might have urged upon this preference is that it is in neutral Switzerland. For two centuries Switzerland has stood outside the wars and ambitions of Europe. Its people are trained and armed, but solely for the defense of its permanent neutrality. In this respect it is a refuge as nearly inviolable as any refuge on earth can be by the common consent of the nations. Even Germany did not venture to pass the borders of Switzerland. The choice of one of the Swiss cities both makes the central organization of the League secure and confirms the long-recognized sacredness of the Swiss aloofness from war. So, to take an ancient parallel, the Greek city-states made the seat of the oracle at Delphi immune from attack in their recurring wars.

Geneva, from the Outlet of the River Rhone

The Hotel Nacional, seat of the League of Nations, is at the left but does not show in the picture

Yet the name of Geneva has not always been associated with peace. As far back as there were inhabitants in Europe there must have been a settlement on this spot where the river leaves the lake. Besides these ways of water or valley travel, afforded by Lake Leman and the Rhone, there was a hill for a fort and an island for a refuge. It was the natural place of crossing from north to south and from south to north, around the corner of the high Alps. Cæsar took and fortified it. It has belonged in turn to Dukes of Savoy, ancestors of the present Italian king; to its own armed and warring bishops, to the Kingdom of Burgundy, to the Holy Roman Empire, to the Swiss Confederation, and to France. Its freedom and final association with the other Swiss cantons only came in the time of Napoleon. And the whole territory of the canton, which more and more became a suburban extension of the city of Geneva, is only a little more than a third of the territory included within the municipal limits of Chicago.

The Charm of Geneva

The first great charm of Geneva lies in its outlook to the south over the blue waters of the lake. The hotel which has been purchased for the use of the League from its front windows commands this famous view, a photograph of which accompanies this article. The highest peak in the range is the snow-covered Mt. Blanc, the "White Mountain" in French Savoy which is the highest point of the Alps. Other snow-covered peaks are seen and the whole range takes on special charm of color at early morn and sunset and by the light of the moon. All travelers will remember also the wonderful blue water from the lake as it moves under the bridges to make the Rhone. All the other lakes of Switzerland are green, but Lake Leman water at Geneva is a deeper blue than the sky. But the river does not keep this wonderful color long, for almost within the city limits the Arve flows in from the glaciers of Mt. Blanc, a gray, discolored stream, which for some distance flows unmingled beside the blue water from the lake.

The city is built on both sides of the harbor, which is nothing but the narrowing of the lake toward the river, V shaped and protected by breakwaters. The old town is on the left bank of the river, with its hill crowned by the cathedral. But the hotel of the League is on the right bank, a little out, so that its view of the lake and the distant mountains is not obstructed. Most of the south side of the lake is French, and French is spoken nearly all around its shores. And the whole canton of Geneva is like an arrowhead thrust into the side of France.

The great names connected with Geneva are Farel, Calvin, Beza, Rousseau, Voltaire, Saussure, the botanist and student of the Alps, the father of mountain climbing for pleasure; Necker, the French banker, financier, and father of Madame de Staël, Amiel, whose Journal holds its place among thoughtful readers, and Calame, the greatest of Swiss artists since the days of Holbein. And it has given birth or opportunity to many other leaders in scientific thought and research. Of these great men whom Geneva honors, Rousseau spent his boyhood in or near the city, but his whole later life belongs to France. Farel was a Frenchman who came to Geneva in the days of the first fight for liberty of the Reformed worship, won his footing and helped to bring the city over to the Reformed faith. His greatest service was that he secured the aid of Calvin, another Frenchman, who visited the city casually, and stayed to be its master most of the rest of his life. Voltaire took refuge there from the storms which he had raised about his head at the French court and built himself a residence at Ferney, four miles outside the city.

Famous Names of the City

Of these famous names associated with Geneva Calvin is by far the greatest. He reformed and ruled Geneva as Savonarola did Florence, but for his whole long lifetime. And Beza carried on his work. He set up a theocracy, with himself as God's administrator in civil as well as religious affairs. With his keen intellect and masterful will he made Geneva the inspiration of the Reformed faith in France, in the Low Countries and in Great Britain. It is impossible to think of these countries, or of our own United States, without remembering Calvin. He was the father of Presbyterianism as we know it. He gave a fighting philosophy and so provided an intellectual backbone for the enthusiasm of the Reformation. In spite of his own intolerance, both civil and religious liberty owe him a debt which can never be disregarded. Drawing his divinity from Augustine, he made it a weapon with which to fight for the supremacy of God and duty. We find him the master over whose philosophy of faith Pastor Robinson held controversy at the University of Leyden, while his thought lay at the back of the steady faith and courage of the Pilgrims in their venture across the Atlantic and of the Puritans in their founding of Massachusetts. And Calvinism held the thought of New England in its grip for more than two hundred years.

Geneva is already a cosmopolitan city, it will be more so after the permanent organization of the League of Nations is set up. The addition of bits of French territory in 1815 to round out the canton had already given it a small Roman Catholic majority and this is now true even of the city, which has continued a stronghold of Protestantism ever since Calvin's day. More and more Geneva has become a pleasure resort and a place of residence. It is an entrance gate not only for the pleasant towns on Lake Leman, but also for the mountain villages and passes of Western Switzerland. Its university, succeeding the ancient academy in 1873, has always attracted scholars. People of leisure from all over Europe have found it an agreeable residence. The coming of the League will make it one of the intellectual and moral capitals of the world.

For What Shall the Middle West Be Thankful?

By Rev. James Austin Richards

For its youth, too often hasty and prodigal, but hopeful always.

For being old enough to have a past and young enough to have a future and to care more for the latter than for the former.

For faint, early signs that the moral and spiritual backwash of the war is passing.

For days that have no precedent and therefore demand fresh explorations of the bases, forms and sanctions of individual and social morality.

For life in a land largely settled by men seeking for liberty and for God more than for gold.

For being a part of America, allowed to bear a share in her present bewilderments and gropings and hoping to have a part in bringing her again to clear convictions and unselfish purposes.

For a world no longer sick without knowing it, where thoughtful men have lost all pride and most men have a sobering sense of need.

For the sciences of body and mind that are beginning to teach the personal ethics of Jesus.

For economics and industrialism that by the way of suffering are learning the social wisdom of the Nazarene.

For adventures toward freedom still to be made.

For dreams of days when classes no more strive but help, and nations no more war but serve.

For sectarianism that is learning to blush with shame.

For churches that look at facts and say, "We can if we will."

For the Spirit of God, better welcomed in some lives than in others but working in the hearts of all men and women and children.

For the historical Jesus now seen towering above church and creed more vividly than at any time since the second century, and the contemporary Jesus still calling men to rise and follow him into the way of the life.

For our Father.

Winnetka, Ill.

Why the Pacific Coast is Thankful

By Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, D.D.

Why is the coast thankful? No reason to be otherwise. We have had a prosperous year.

Western Oregon and Washington always have abundant rainfall. The Middle and Eastern parts of these states have such resources for irrigation that all irrigated tracts produce prodigious harvests of fruit. The treeless sections of volcanic soil are unsurpassed for wheat.

California has been short of storage water in the hills for three years. There were fearsome forebodings a plenty early in the summer of dry ditches and failing electric power. But it didn't happen. We got by without loss, and now it has rained, there are three feet of snow in the Sierras, streams are rising, the cattle have forage and everybody is smiling and happy.

It has been a good year, all crops excellent, rice the largest ever, raisins, oranges, lemons, apples, cotton, sugar beets, grain, all good. Growers are not getting war prices but they didn't expect to. Wool has no buyers just now but they are expected. So why worry? In all physical, material aspects, all the coast has abundant reason for gratitude.

The labor situation has just announced its presence among us by an occasional strike but they have all been smoothed out with no rupture. We have yet very little unemployment.

What of the churches? It's the same story. The writer has traveled up and down this coast five years. He affirms that the Congregational churches of California, Oregon, Washington and Idaho are in better case now than when he made his first trip. Financially they prosper. They raise their quotas whether it is for the apportionment, the Pilgrim Memorial Fund or the Congregational World Movement, and facing the $5,000,000 askings for 1920 they unanimously have said: "We will do our share." Salaries of preachers have been raised, not all, but a goodly proportion of them. Southern California is pushing for a minimum of $1,500 and parsonage. Several new churches have been erected this year, notably Pico Heights and Hollywood, Los Angeles. A number are planned for, to be built as soon as prices go down. There has been no increase in vacant pulpits. There are now only two or three in Southern California. On the whole we have gained in a stable pastorate. There has been a moderate but real gain in church membership. Better, the Sunday schools have grown and there is a decided increase of interest and membership in young people's societies.

Why not be happy and grateful? We have climate for everybody, hot, cold, wet or dry to suit, and it's all good; resources in the soil that never fail; then we have resources over the mountains eastward in people who

A THANKSGIVING

By Margaret Cable Brewster

The year has brought me many shining days,
For which my heart would offer perfect praise.
(The shadow of my days of stormy pain
Has seemed to render my Thanksgiving vain.)

And yet—I thank Thee for the stress of life,
For cataclysmic days of inner strife.
The rending conflict in my soul's profound,
Which brought my spirit to its glad rebound.

These bow my head in thanks, great God of all
For out of these as from a secret pall
My spirit has climbed up unto these days
Of tranquil joy for which I now give praise.

want our climate, our fruits and our good fellowship and are willing to pay for it.

For a great place on the map of the world and a future that awakens the imagination; for a year filled with demonstrations of the goodness and grace of God; for a share of responsibility in the solution of the acute problems of the world and a gospel in which there is power to solve them, we are radiantly thankful in this year of grace, 1920.

San Francisco.

What the South Has to Be Thankful For

By President Frank R. Shipman

Atlanta Theological Seminary

"What has the South to be thankful for this November?" At the moment of writing, the farmers of Uncle Sam's great cotton plantation feel like saying, "Not much." The cotton that cost—say—35 cents a pound to make is now selling at 20 cents a pound. No wonder that many men are grim and resentful, ready to strike at somebody. I would be understood as truly sympathizing with the depression which the farmers are feeling, even if I go on to speak of some things for which—looking back to Jan. 1 and forward beyond the present crisis—the South may be thankful.

1. The South may give thanks for thriving business during most of 1920. This prosperity was due to the large crops and high prices of 1919, but it is properly mentioned here. For the eighteen months ending July 1, 1920, $225,000,000 were spent on new or enlarged industrial enterprises along the line of the Southern Railway, while on the same date new work had been undertaken to cost $153,000,000. Relating the two figures together, one sees the increased speed at which business was going.

2. The South may take pleasure in the growth of its cities. On a wide view, the nation should be alarmed at the relative decrease of its rural population as shown by the last census. But the South, generally speaking, has needed larger towns and better cities than it has had. At any time in the past cities better fitted to satisfy varied wants would have benefited the rural sections of the South, and at any time the rural sections could have supported larger cities. This interchange of enlarged benefits is now coming to pass.

3. The South may count among its mercies that on the whole its higher officials have been men of good character and progressive minds. Georgia has just elected a senator who has nurtured and now represents a crop of ancient grudges and prejudices; but even here the election was one that will do good, introducing a little needful democracy into the Georgia Democratic machine.

4. We are thankful that during the war the Red Cross grew up in the South to stay. While the year has not registered many social gains through state legislatures, the Red Cross has redeemed the year in social progress. Largely through its agency, an average of 13 public health nurses has been placed in each Southern state. That, for only one item.

5. In the sphere of education, the theory of individual rights is yielding to the rights of social duties. Compulsory school attendance is being attained, and the right to lay local school taxes is being pressed on sometimes reluctant communities. The old arrangement—a small grant by the state, increased variably by the interested, near-by parents—is passing. A great victory was won three weeks ago when Georgia amended its constitution, voting to allow the counties to lay a tax for their own schools. Having the right, they will assume the duty.

6. The Southern churches have much to be thankful for. During their last calendar years, the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian churches gave more for home and foreign missions than ever before; but it would be easy to make too much of this. Nowadays missionary treasuries must run as hard as they can merely to stay where they were. A surer cause for gratitude is that the Southern churches have escaped that after-the-war self-distrust in which the Northeastern churches appear to be groping. They have a message, and consequently their world is still listening to them.

Why Our Colored People are Thankful

By Rev. William N. DeBerry, D.D.

Assistant Moderator of National Council

What have our Colored people to be thankful for this year?

1. As American citizens the Colored people are thankful for the peace and prosperity of the nation as a whole. Today no other nation has so many and so great reasons for gratitude to God as the American people whose material fortunes and political prestige have been greatly promoted by the very crisis which wrought such calamity and ruin among other nations of the world.

The triumphs of national prohibition and woman's suffrage are the great reforms in our social and political life for which the people as a whole will this year rejoice and give thanks. As a part of the great nation whose lot is one of such signal blessing and favor the Colored people are deeply grateful.

2. But there are numerous blessings for which the Colored people are specially thankful as a group. Among these are those by-products of the World War of which they themselves are the chief beneficiaries. The war occasioned an unprecedented exodus of Negroes from the South to the North and this movement was productive of the social betterment of the race on both sides of the Mason and Dixon's Line. In the South it alleviated the congestion of the Negro population at many centers and resulted in better treatment of Negroes and a serious effort to reduce the wrongs and the handicaps of which for years they have been the special victims.

In the North the migrants found an open door to industrial opportunity and the chance to work under conditions such as here the Negro had never before known. Here also they found deliverance from lynch law, Jim Crowism and disfranchisement with the freedom to enjoy their rights as American citizens. The success with which the Negro has thus far maintained his new industrial status in the North and the ease with which he has here become adjusted to his new social environment are signs of great promise.

3. Again, the Negro race is thankful for the friendship of its friends and the growing spirit of racial co-operation in the effort to effect an amicable adjustment of race relations throughout the land. This hopeful spirit finds effective expression in such bodies as the American Missionary Association, the Southern Sociological Conference, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the National Urban League for Social Service among Negroes. The importance of the work which these and allied organizations are doing in racial development and uplift and for the promotion of inter-racial justice and good will can hardly be overestimated. While differing decidedly in viewpoint and method, the ultimate aim of all these agencies is one and the same and the task of each is indispensable to the complete emancipation of the race.

4. Finally the Colored people are thankful for the recent return of the Republican party to political power. The Negro people have a warm and abiding affection for this party for it was the party of the abolitionists and of Lincoln. They have manifested this affection in unwavering allegiance and loyalty through all the vicissitudes of the party's history and life. The whole-souled political faith of the race found happy expression in the words of Frederick Douglass, the greatest of Negro orators, who once said, "The Republican party is the ship, all else is the sea." The conduct of the party and its attitude of indifference to the Negro's welfare have not always justified the latter's loyalty and faith for the Republican ship has often appeared to be an unsafe boat for its Negro passengers.

But in spite of stormy sea and tossing craft, the Negro has stood pat and never deserted. The Negro of today is a Republican in politics both from sentiment, tradition and training. He rejoices therefore most heartily with the great majority of his fellow Americans to see the reinstatement of Republican rule after an unfortunate era of Democratic maladministration during which the evils from which the Negro has long suffered have been intensified and increased. For the hope and confident expectation of better things under the new régime, we as a people are profoundly grateful.

St. John's Church, Springfield, Mass.

OUR PILGRIM PULPIT

Thanksgiving in Troubled Times

By Rev. Irving Maurer

First Church, Columbus, O.

Hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him. —Ps. 43: 5.

This cry has been called "the great adversitive of Praise"! When the heart is homesick and lonely, when life is full of the oppression of foes, when idealism is mocked, then real character is tested by its ability to be thankful and buoyant. In three splendid stanzas of human pain recur this climatic refrain, "Hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him who is the help of my countenance and my God." Thanksgiving Day comes to us out of this setting. It shines out of the shadows of suffering, and death on a well-nigh unsettled coast.

Let us then look at Thanksgiving Day from the background of America's difficulties. Better than the recital of our material plenty is the approach to the thankful heart through the difficulties and hardships of the times.

May I mention first the unsettled and uncertain state of mind with regard to an international policy?

There is no doubt that as a people we are very uncomfortable at the thought of the drifting tendency which characterizes our relations with the rest of the world. Much of the haze and dimness which marked the recent presidential campaign was due to the fact that we are a young nation. When we look across the Atlantic or across the Pacific we feel that we are facing worlds far removed from our own. We have not yet made up our minds as to what is our place in the family of older peoples.

When this fact of uncertainty is approached in the right way it is cause for thankfulness. Let us thank God that America is a young nation, with her life before her. She may be the heritage left us by the fathers, but apart from us they shall not be made perfect. Let us thank God that we can go into this relationship in a new world order blessed by newness, free from the quarrels of many pasts, fitted by our youth to say a new word to older peoples.

Let us not be ashamed of our inexperience—let us be thankful that there is still with us something of the clearer light which glorifies the eyes of youth. And let us thank God that our work is something more than the defense of institutions, that we shall have a part in the building of a future internationalism. Today we can enter into the thankfulness of the poetic spirit. In these uncertainties we see the stuff with which we can create.

Another difficulty with which we travail today is the spirit of unrest in our social relations. We may be a young people but we are none the less witnessing the passing of an older order. The unwillingness of men and women to work hard, the growing bitterness toward the employing forces, the feeling that life is played out, has taken from many a heart today the secret of happiness, of restfulness, of peace.

Look at this unrest for a moment. There is in it cause for praise and thankfulness. The Christian learns that without God no material achievement is worth the trouble. Much of the quarrel with this order arises in the discovery that men are losing out in the worth-while aspects of life. Richard Bulmer, in W. L. George's "Caliban," discovers, after a seething material success, that "one just messes about in the middle of life—and life sails away."

The world is discovering that it can spend money for that which is not bread, that it often labors for that which satisfieth not. What is the matter with our world? Why is there so much complaining? Why is nobody satisfied? The answer is very simple. The unrest of today shows us how badly we miss God when we try to get along without him. As I face the drive and mutter of the social storm I see the light of Christian love flickering here and there, and I thank God that in times like these we have so great and so adequate a gospel.

I close with the picture of scars which war has inflicted upon the clean social body of our republic—scars of untruthfulness, of intolerance, of sensuality, of selfishness. I suppose we had something of every one of these evils with us before, but today they are so strong that I scarcely recognize the American life beneath them. It is as if some alien brute had stalked into our land defiling fair things with the smear of his dirty hand.

And yet even here, after looking over the soiled pages of these past two years, as I recall the un-American things that were said, and the un-American spirit which at times prevailed, I say, "Hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him." For when one sees the penalty which the world pays for war he is helped to a new understanding of the spiritual nature of man. If we could fight wars without thus suffering in soul what heartless monsters we would be! Therefore in this pathetic spectacle of the havoc of war in the realm of America's spirit I see fresh evidence of the spiritual quality of humanity.

Mankind cannot suffer its better self to be outraged without knowing the penalty for sin. If we can only see existing evils as penalties for sin, see indicated again the changeless law which the men in the Bible discovered, we can look up with hope, we can feel the lift of the spirit at thought of the future.

Thank God for America, for her youth and her idealism. Thank God for the promise of Christianized social order. Thank God for her hatred of war, for her love of peace. Thank God for the burning light of his love which burns above our dark horizon.

From Day to Day

When the Ballots Fell

By Allen Chesterfield

As I sat that Tuesday morning in one of the polling places, studied the election machinery and watched the voters come and go, a fresh sense of the worth and meaning of popular government possessed and cheered my soul. To think that on that morning from thirty to forty million men and women, in all sorts of surroundings, rose from slumber cherishing one common intention, made one realize what a mass movement is capable of accomplishing and what a unifying force the ballot box is.

It was a dull gray morning, in these parts at least. As the winds of yesterday had given place to a calmer atmosphere, so the hot passions of the campaign seemed to have died down. The last rally had been held and the last thundering, forecast and appeal had been fulminated. Friend had ceased to argue with friend and husband with wife, over the issues and the candidacies. Individuals, some of whom were undecided up to Monday night, must now make their final and their solemn choices.

Thus the higher mood seemed to me dominant in the little hall where I sat. It might be that some of the ballots which I saw sliding into the box represented spite or prejudice or ignorance or selfishness or the narrow vision, but I felt like giving each voter the benefit of the doubt. He or she might not be putting down a cross at exactly the same place where I had registered mine, but I could not bring myself to accuse any particular one of possessing a brand of patriotism inferior to mine. Some from my point of view might need to be educated or illuminated, but possibly if they knew how I had voted, they might be thinking the same thing about me.

At any rate, I gave myself up to the finer emotions prompted by the thought that this little country voting place was but a replica of tens of thousands of similar halls and booths over the land where free men were availing themselves of their birthright and discharging their duty as God gave them to see it. Democracy has come to stay, when mill owner and engine stoker, the native American proud of his Pilgrim ancestry and the most recently naturalized Slovak, the octogenarian who has voted every presidential election since Lincoln ran for his second term and the slip of a salesgirl avail themselves of the same electoral opportunity.

Speaking of the girls and women, you must have noticed—all the rest of you—how changed the atmosphere of the voting places was. Gone were cigars and cuspidors. It was quieter where I voted than at many a young folks' prayer meeting. Not only were there women voters in great numbers, but they were checking up the lists, sending for their sisters, and "hustling" all day just like the men.

It was gratifying to see what pride the warden at this particular polling place took in maintaining the dignity of the occasion. He had assembled his inspectors and other helpers the night before and went through with them what amounted to a rehearsal. "If any woman comes tomorrow," he said to them, "who seems confused, show her every courtesy. Above all, don't laugh at her should she make a mistake. Women will have a share in conducting the next election. Let's get ready to work with them." He took unusual pains to see that every minute provision of the law touching the sanctity of the ballot box and the method of voting should be scrupulously observed. He is an Irish Democrat, but no son of the Puritans could have been more vigilant in his effort to secure an honest election.

Wasn't it pleasant, too, throughout the hours of that memorable Tuesday to notice how family life has been broadened by woman suffrage! The children as well as the women took an immense interest in the election. From district school up through the high and in all the colleges, straw votes were taken. Youngsters in their earlier teens registered themselves as enthusiastic followers of Harding, Cox or even Debs. We are getting a big dose of democracy these days, and let us hope that De Tocqueville's often-quoted statement that the cure of democracy is more democracy will be fulfilled in our time. A country whose women and children are interested in politics cannot go to the bad.

League of the New Day

Next Week's Readings and Prayers

Week of Nov. 22–28

Monday. Haggai to the People. Hag. 1: 1-15.
Tuesday. The Promise of Peace. Hag. 2: 1-23.
Wednesday. Zechariah. Zech. 1: 1-17.
Thursday. Thanksgiving Day. Ps. 65.
Friday. The Candlestick. Zech. 4: 1-14.
Saturday. Truth and Peace. Zech. 8: 1-23.
Sunday. Security in God. Ps. 37: 1-19.

Object for Intercession

Thanksgiving and Remembrance of Those in Need:

Help us, O God, to remember thy fatherly kindness toward us continually and to take into daily account thy mercies toward us. Hear our prayers for those who have suffered and those who have failed and give to them some conscious reasons why even in the midst of trouble they should turn to thee with thankful hearts. In the name of Christ. Amen.

The Burial of Dr. Herring

On Nov. 9, the body of Dr. Hubert C. Herring was removed from the receiving vault in Mount Auburn, Cambridge, and given burial in Edgell Grove Cemetery, Framingham, a few miles out of Boston. The beauty of this region and the fact that Mrs. Herring's sister and her husband, Mr. Franklin W. Ganse, formerly of Brookline, recently transferred their home to Framingham, doubtless determined this choice of a burial place, Dr. Herring's immediate family now being widely scattered in their fields of service.

No publicity was given to the occasion, and the utmost simplicity characterized it. Autumn leaves were banked over the bared ground, twigs bearing leaves of ruddier hue being clustered at the grave's head. Dr. Ashley D. Leavitt, of Harvard Church, Brookline, as the pastor of Mr. and Mrs. Ganse, conducted the burial service. Dr. William A. Knight, pastor of the nearby Plymouth Church, Framingham, has written briefly of the scene, in lines published below, for the many who honor Dr. Herring's memory. On the following Sunday afternoon the officers of Plymouth Church and Grace Church, Framingham, went to the grave in a body and placed flowers upon it as representatives of their brethren in the Congregational churches of the country.

His Resting Place

By William Allen Knight

(Commemorating the burial of Rev. Hubert C. Herring, D. D., on Nov. 9, 1920, in Edgell Grove Cemetery, Framingham, Mass., near Plymouth Church.)

Not far, the city's long-familiar roar;
  Anear, the peaceful chant of reverent trees.
The dulcet antiphone of nature's aisles:
  We made his resting place mid charms like these.

The thronging city should not be too far;
  Field marshal he of hosts for Christ arrayed!
Yet quiet, sky-embosomed life he loved —
  Mid hills and lakes his forespent form we laid.

The strategy of campaigns seamed his brow;
  Yet common soldiers loved his power to fire
Their hearts afresh. 'Tis meet that near his grave
  A village church uplifts a guarding spire.

The Herring Memorial Fund

(Designed to be serviceable to Mrs. Hubert C. Herring while she lives, and then to be passed over to the Annuity Fund for special uses. Checks should be made payable to the Herring Memorial Fund, and sent to 375 Lexington Ave., New York City.)

(Subscribers up to Nov. 5)

Somers, Dr. A. B., Omaha, Neb.
Sutherland, John W., Lansing, Mich.
Wood, Lester L., Chagrin Falls, O.
Watson, W. H., Northbridge, Mass.
Thorp, Charles N., Holyoke, Mass.
Bigelow, E. Victor, Andover, Mass.
Nichols, W. H., LL.D., New York City.
Walker, Williston, New Haven, Ct.
Adadourian, Haig, Plymouth, Mass.
Bassett, E. M., New York City.
Burling, James P., Des Moines, Io.
Burrill, G. H., East Orange, N. J.
Cady, George R., Chicago, Ill.
Cushman, C. E., Iowa Falls, Io.
Davis, Frank, Charlotte, Mich.
Denny, Walter B., Owosso, Mich.
Emerson, Mabel E., Boston, Mass.
Fisk, P. H., Strafford, Vt.
Grupe, Charles W., Willsboro, N. Y.
Guptill, Orville J., Meredith, N. H.
Holbrook, Chalmers, Cheshire, Ct.
Hutchins, Wm. J., Berea College, Berea, Ky.
Hutchinson, J. J., Barton, Vt.
Lamprey, Mary E., Providence, R. I.
MacKenzie, H. Lincoln, Lynnfield, Mass.
Moulton, Warren J., Bangor, Me.
Norris, Kingsley F., Little Valley, N. Y.
Pearson, Milo E., Auburn, Me.
Puddefoot, W. G., Boston, Mass.
Rosevear, Charles R., Montclair, N. J.
Bradley, Dan F., Cleveland, O.
Hamlin, W. R., North Bennington, Vt.
Scotford, J. R., Cleveland, O.
Thomas, Percy E., Rockville, Ct.
Turner, L. A., Amity, Mo.
Wheeler, E. F., New Ulm, Minn.
Best, John, St. Louis, Mo.
Bissell, Wm. T., West Townshend, Vt.
Bosworth, Richard H., Townshend, Vt.
Buckner, Wallace, New York City.
Drew, W. P., Galesburg, Ill.
Guthrie, Ernest Graham, Boston, Mass.
Moore, C. D., Marshall, Minn.
Moore, J. H., Chicago, Ill.
Reeves, C. E., Topsfield, Mass.
Root, A. I., Medina, O.
Rouse, F. T., Worcester, Mass.
Sampson, C. C., Tilton, N. H.
Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Grant, Cleveland, O.
Thayer, Lucius H., Portsmouth, N. H.
Anonymous, New York City.
Beach, Harlan P., New Haven, Ct.
Dent, Thomas J., Aberdeen, S. D.
Dunbar, R. W., Greenville, N. H.
Fitch, Frank F., Augusta, Ark.
Gause, Noah C., Grantwood, N. J.
Luideman, H. H., Ames, Io.
Merrill, George R., Hackensack, N. J.
Mills, George S., Bennington, Vt.
Rollason, Herbert D., Hanover, Ct.
Stockdale, Allen A., Toledo, O.
Stocking, Jay T., Upper Montclair, N. J.
Thrall, W. H., Huron, S. D.
Trickey, Benjamin J., Albion, Neb.
Watson, Albert P., Hatfield, Mass.
Young, E. Vernon, New Haven, Vt.
Youngs, Mrs. Anna L., New York City.
Farnam, Prof. Henry W., New Haven, Ct.
Davis, W. B., Cleveland, O.
Beardsley, Henry M., Kansas City, Mo.
Brooks, R. C., Berkeley, Cal.
Fraser, J. G., Cleveland, O.
Hitchcock, A. N., Oak Park, Ill.
Heelzer, John, Denver, Col.
Kelly, J. J., Lockeford, Cal.
Kingman, Henry, Claremont, Cal.
McIntosh, James H., New York City.
McKinley, Charles E., Galesburg, Ill.
Mason, C. E., Mt. Home, Ida.
Maile, John L., Los Angeles, Cal.
Patton, Cornelius H., Boston, Mass.
Smith, Edward Lincoln, New York City.
Spencer, Truman J., New York City.
Stevens, C. H., Redwood City, Cal.
Veazie, Walter C., Ione, Wash.
Warner, Edwin G., Brooklyn, N. Y.

(181 subscriptions to date, totaling $7,366)

Extracts from Letters Accompanying Subscriptions

From an honored layman:

"I enclose my subscription of $500 toward the Herring Memorial Fund. The many demands keep me constantly on the tenter-hooks, but this appeals to me so strongly that I simply cannot be a slacker."

From the President of a Theological Seminary:

"I congratulate you on the proposal of the Herring Memorial Fund. I enclose my check and with it every confident expectation of the success of the Fund. It ought to call for some gift from practically all our men. Mrs. Herring deserves the recognition of her own devotion to our work through all these years, and it is but a slight expression of our love and gratitude to Dr. Herring himself."

From the pastor of a country church in Connecticut:

"I am enclosing a small check toward the cause in which I heartily believe. I trust that later on I shall be able to enlarge the sum. Dr. Herring was surely an ideal Christian leader whose tragic death has touched us all."

Congregational World Movement

Encouraging News of Progress

News of a very encouraging nature continues to come to the New York office regarding the attitude of the churches to the 1921 program. Dr. W. W. Scudder, whose region includes Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana, writes most enthusiastically of the reception accorded him as the representative of the Congregational World Movement in Texas and Louisiana. Our churches in these states are not numerous or strong, but their attitude is significant. At the recent meeting of the Texas Association a hopeful, aggressive spirit ruled the gathering, and the response to the Congregational World Movement was excellent. Every feature of the program was welcomed and the whole state will be in line. The vigorous and wide-awake pastor of the Port Arthur Church, Rev. W. T. Coughran, is the field worker for the central group of churches, which is a guarantee that the field work of that locality will be well done. Dr. T. H. Harper of Dallas (Central Church) has consented to look after the churches of the central section of the state, which insures a splendid success. In the Pan Handle, Rev. Hugh L. McKenzie, of Spring Lake, will be the field worker.

Some fear has been expressed with reference to the readiness of the Louisiana (white) churches to co-operate in the Congregational World Movement, but in their state meeting, just held, they manifested a cordial, enthusiastic attitude of approval and a determination to co-operate in the 1921 program of Missionary Education and Stewardship. As far as their representatives could do so, they have accepted their apportionments. If the response of the denomination is as hearty and enthusiastic as that of the white churches of Louisiana, the Congregational World Movement will experience a landslide success.

The Colored churches of Texas and Louisiana, under the leadership of Superintendent Lawless, have eagerly accepted the plans suggested whereby their most helpful co-operation could be secured for the Congregational World Movement program. The splendid spirit and achievement of these Colored churches, which was manifested in their Atlanta Convention where they practically doubled their apportionment, was again reflected in their recent gatherings in Houston, Tex., and New Orleans, La.

Southern California, through Superintendent Kenngott, has put on a vigorous program of promotion preliminary to the canvass which this year will be made on Dec. 5. Among the sources from which valuable and complete information concerning the Congregational World Movement might be secured, Dr. Kenngott specified The Congregationalist and Advance for Oct. 7.

Large Enrollment at Whitman

The college and conservatory of Whitman College, Walla Walla, Wash., have the largest registration in the history of the institution. It has nearly reached the 600 mark and expects to reach 700 before the close of the year. This is a gain of 30 per cent. over last year. There are 200 enrolled in the conservatory, giving it the distinction of being the leading conservatory of the Northwest. President Penrose is in the East in the interest of the college.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Old New England

Old New England Houses, by Albert G. Robinson (Scribners). Like the author's "Old New England Doorways" this volume, similar in size and in attractive illustrations, will delight all lovers of the best in old architecture. Many of the houses illustrated here are also of historic interest, as The Home of the Alcotts in Concord, The Fairbanks House in Dedham, dating from 1636, The Birthplace of Count Rumford in North Woburn, The Rebecca Nourse House in Danvers, 1636, The Caldwell House in Ipswich and the old Whipple House, both said to date from 1633, The "Dorothy Q" house in Quincy, The Munroe Tavern in Lexington. An interesting introductory essay by the photographer describes the architectural changes and varying style of these old seventeenth and eighteenth century buildings. But the main interest of the volume is in the large collection of photographs, which speak for themselves.

Recent Fiction

Laughing House, by Meade Minnigerode (Putnam). A first novel of unusual promise. It is a charming old Connecticut homestead which owns the affectionate name and whose individuality and traditions affect the course of the story like a real character. The children of the family, together with a group of playmates, grow up in the shelter of its hospitality. "We are anchored to our Hill," they say. But when the pairing off stage is reached this sheltered haven is entered by a certain maiden who shatters its peace. A shaking up was needed, declared the son. The result proved to be beyond his expectations. However, in the end, the experience helped to settle family affairs in the best way. It is an odd story and exceptionally well written.

The Ninth Man, by Mary Heaton Vorse (Harpers). In certain mediæval times the conqueror of an Italian city instead of slaying the inhabitants caused them to pass before him and had placed in the hand of each ninth person, man, woman or child, a black ballot. This ballot at some future date should be cast to indicate one whom the voter wished put to death. The psychological effect of this possession of the power of death, how it cursed the hearts of men and how it was overcome by the spirit of love in one man, who offered himself for all, is the theme of a remarkable story.

Erskine Dale, Pioneer, by John Fox, Jr. (Scribners). A picturesque tale of contrasting social conditions in Revolutionary times. Erskine Dale, heir to a great Virginia estate, was carried off by Indians when he was a child. After he grew up he fled to the protection of a pioneer fort and was finally restored to his home. He felt the restrictions of civilization, was far happier serving with Clark's Expedition and after the war he and his bride cheerfully took up the task of home building on the edge of the wilderness.

Scribners From Erskine Dale, Pioneer

The Enemies of Women, by Blasco Ibanez (Dutton). Signor Ibanez likes to be at those centers of excitement which bring out extreme expressions of human nature. Here he has given us a study of gambling at Monte Carlo in war time. The central characters are a Russian Prince and a Spanish-American lady, both unbelievably rich and utterly self-indulgent and profligate. We wish that author, publisher and translator could have agreed upon the excision of a number of passages which it would be quite impossible to read aloud in any decent company of American men and women. At the end the leading characters are in a certain sense redeemed by suffering and self-giving.

Scribners From Old New England Houses

The Romantic, by May Sinclair (Macmillan). This story might be considered as a thorough-going realist's showing-up of romanticism. It is more than that, it is a study of congenital cowardice such as Scott undertook in "The Fair Maid of Perth," but wholly modern in its approach and its psycho-analytic explanation of the breakdown of the romantic actor under the strain of personal danger in the ambulance service close up to the battle line. The effective contrast of the woman's courage and practical strength makes the—if the author will excuse us—romantic and appealing element in a brilliant study of human character.

Caliban, by W. L. George (Harpers). Richard Bulmer had an uncanny way of knowing ahead of time what the British public wanted to know. Because of this knowledge, coupled with a gigantic will, he was able to build up a chain of newspapers which brought him wealth, rank and the power to make and break men according to his whim. Only when love brought him up against a situation which did not yield to his usual business methods did he meet with failure that seemed to turn his other success to ashes. Bulmer is not a pleasant person, but, so skillfully does Mr. George portray him, that the reader pities rather than hates him. He and the other characters in the book are remarkably real people. Therein lies Mr. George's art.

Old Reliable in Africa, by Harris Dickson (Stokes). A humorous story of a quaint colored character from the south who goes to Africa on a business trip with his employer and is surrounded by thrilling experiences.

Rose o' the Sea, by the Countess Barcynska (Houghton Mifflin). "She's one of those people you read about in books, beautiful and sweet and charming and all that." This unworldly heroine was cast up by the sea on the Cornish coast and adopted by a mysterious recluse who taught her to abhor money. After his death she ran away to London, worked in a flower shop, lived in a slum and married a nobleman. In England it seems easy to achieve such marriages. She loves every one, every one loves her and she moves unscathed in the midst of evil. It is a fairy princess kind of story which takes its readers away out of stodgy everyday living into a world where nothing really goes wrong.

Trails to Two Moons, by Robert Welles Ritchie (Little, Brown). A Western ranch story of the days when cattlemen and sheep-herders fought each other. The principal character is a golden-haired maiden who endures strenuous experiences. There are several tempestuous events in the story, of the real Wild West type.

Midnight of the Ranges, by George Gilbert (Little, Brown). Wild life in Texas makes the sum and substance of this adventure story. "Bad Men," both white and Mexican, carry on their plots against the decent settlers. But the strong hero does not fail nor the plucky maiden. A new feature is the part taken by the handsome horse, Midnight, who has a distinct individuality of his own.

Hidden Creek, by Katharine Newlin Burt (Houghton Mifflin). A stirring story of the adventures of a young girl transferred by circumstances from a sheltered home in the East to a perilous situation in the West. There are many striking characters and thrilling experiences, perhaps too many to make a convincing story. But it is rapid in action, unusual in plot, holds the interest and ends well.

The Widening Circle, by Marchioness Townshend (Appleton). A sentimental story of English life. The author, in the phrase of her heroine is suffering from an acute attack of "romancitis." She sentimentalizes love and friendship and the life of the convent until they seem as unreal as sweet custards in a dream.

Cape Curry, by Rene Juta (Holt). A story of Cape Colony in the early part of the last century. Its setting is picturesque and unusual. Dr. James Barry, with his secret garden, is a mysterious character whose personality is unexplained till the closing pages. It is indeed "one of the strangest stories that has appeared" in a long time.

The Trap, by Maximilian Foster (Appleton). A wealthy New York young man is led to believe that a girl with whom he is in love has plotted to marry him for his money and in revenge sets a trap to pay her back. He finds it dangerous business. An unusual story.

Ditte: Girl Alive, by Martin Anderson Nexo (Holt). A Danish story admirably translated. We forget that slums are not all in cities. In cold, bleak villages such children as Ditte grow up almost like savages. She is an illegitimate child left to the mercy of an aged grandmother. With a hut for shelter but no food resources they are driven to be wandering beggars. How a witch may evolve is a curious process to watch. But grandmother gives up her uncanny calling and Ditte lives with her mother and a kindly step-father. He is a "rag and bone" man, the lowest caste, but his character varies the expanse of sordidness and crime. Ditte's own soul reacts in different ways to the environment. There is something cold, clear and steady about this fine piece of writing, so unfamiliar to English readers.

The Vanity Girl, by Compton Mackenzie (Harpers). Another of those queer tales of English theater life where the chorus girl graduates into the peerage. The title has a double meaning, for the girl in question is compounded of ambition and vanity and nothing else. Therefore the surprise of the story comes when she exhibits a passionate love for Clare Court, the ancestral home of her degenerate husband. No sacrifice, no act of self-effacement, is to be shirked when the time comes to save the estate. It is a strange fact that this author has a magnetic power over his readers in spite of his characters whom no one wishes to know and his tangled sentences which irritate. The elusive Sylvia Scarlett appears again. Horse-racing, the Earl's last pitfall, provides a long episode doubly exciting in these days of baseball exposures.

Short Stories

Flappers and Philosophers, by F. Scott Fitzgerald (Scribners). Eight short stories, all out of the ordinary run in plot. They are all entertaining though not always convincing.

Under the Rose, by Arthur Johnson (Harpers). A book of queer, rather fantastic, sometimes gruesome tales, haunted rooms, nightmare dreams and other weird happenings.

The Golden Barque, by Seumas O'Kelly (Putnam). Six short stories and one longer one, all with the flavor of Irish humor and of distinctive literary merit.

The Cruise of the "Scandal," by Victor Bridges (Doran). Fifteen short stories, charming in style, unusual in plot, combining romance and humor, each one a gem. Will rank with the best volumes of the kind.

Samuel Lyle, Criminologist, by Arthur Crabb (Century). Eleven short mystery stories. Lyle is a famous criminal lawyer who proves also to have remarkable skill in reading character and working out the steps of criminal events, solving mysteries rather by psychology than by ordinary clues. An unusually satisfactory series of stories of its kind.

Dodd, Mead In the Tracks of the Trades

Come Seven, by Octavus Roy Cohen (Dodd, Mead). Another book of short stories by this author whose attempts at humor keep colored characters under constant ridicule.

Out-of-Doors Books

Seeing the Far West, by John T. Faris (Lippincott). "More Americans," says the author, "need to wake up to the fact that in their own West is scenery that is beyond comparison." His entertaining volume proves the moderation of his words. Beginning with the Pikes Peak country he leads the reader northward, pointing out the centers of interest to Washington. He seeks especially to call attention to those scenes less well known, while not passing over Colorado Canyons and the Yellowstone Park. And as he goes he talks delightfully of the old tales and interesting events connected with various localities. It is an entertaining book to the stay-at-home, and for the prospective traveler it has special value. The book is well illustrated with pictures more eloquent than words.

Revell With Grenfell on the Labrador

In Morocco, by Edith Wharton (Scribners). "There is no guide-book to Morocco," says the author, but she more than supplies the deficiency by providing not only a guide to many unfamiliar places beyond Tangier and Fez but also on account of personal travel and observation charming in its literary values. Much of the country traversed by Mrs. Wharton has, indeed, hitherto been closed to travel on account of the hostility of the natives. Now "it is as safe and open as the opposite shore in Spain." Salé, "the fierce old pirate town, where Robinson Crusoe was so long a slave," now for the first time open to the traveler, is an untouched Moroccan city. "Everything that the reader of the Arabian Nights expects to find is here." The reviewer is tempted to quote endlessly from this delightful narrative, but must be content with commending it to the reader as a choice travel book on an unfamiliar and interesting country. Over thirty fine illustrations add to the charm of the volume.

A Spring Walk in Provence, by Archibald Marshall (Dodd, Mead). Back in the peaceful springtime of 1914, just before the Great War, Mr. Marshall journeyed through picturesque, historic, fascinating Provence in Southern France. He took pictures as he went, and in this attractive book he gives us a delightful description of the region, its legends and its history. Many of those pictures are scattered through the book, showing quite vividly the most interesting sights that he saw. The easy conversational style of the narrative makes it pleasant reading and adds to its charm. Noteworthy among the places described are the locality of the great battle of 102 B. C., won by the Roman, Caius Marius, over the Ambrones and Teutons; Aix, with its beautiful cathedral church of St. Saviour and its paintings; LeBaux of Troubadour fame; Saint-Remy, linked to the triumphant Cæsars; Avignon, with its Palace of the Popes; and the storied fortress Church of Saintes-Maries.

In the Tracks of the Trades, by Lewis R. Freeman (Dodd, Mead). A vivid account of a fourteen-thousand-mile yachting cruise to the Hawaiis, Marquesas, Societies, Samoas and Fijis. The Pacific Ocean was anything but pacific at times and the graphic accounts of various storms are nearly as fascinating as the equally graphic descriptions of the customs, especially the dances, of the natives on the various islands. The volume is well written, full of interest and abundantly illustrated.

A Garden of Peace, by F. Frankfort Moore (Doran). A delightful volume, full of entertaining anecdote, literary, artistic, dramatic, although the main theme of the author is his development of a wonderfully beautiful garden. He had discovered and purchased an old house and garden, with walls that were the ruins of an ancient castle. This he used and made over with consummate taste and skill as the numerous illustrations indicate. Lovers of gardens will especially enjoy the work but the lover of good literature who knows little about gardening will also find it most interesting.

Adventures in Southern Seas, by George Forbes (Dodd, Mead). Said to be based on the records of the early explorers, Dutch, French, English and Spanish, these stories of strange lands and strange creatures are as interesting as the Arabian Nights Tales, and indeed some are quite similar.

With Grenfell in Labrador, by Fullerton L. Waldo (Revell). The author is associate editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger. This trained journalist in his close-up study of

Dr. Grenfell in Labrador and on the Strathcona has not only found good "copy," but the real man. He has sketched him true to life as "doctor," fisher of men, captain of industry, sportsman, man of science and above all as a man of God. He has pictured for us some of the doctor's helpers, human and animal, his wide, wide parish and some of his parishioners. It not only increases our knowledge of, but our respect for, the great, whole-souled, big-hearted human who is following in the footsteps of the Master in Labrador.

Dodd, Mead From A Walk in Provence

By-Paths in Sicily, by Eliza Putnam Heaton (Dutton). An intimate account of the folk-lore, superstitions, use of charms, magic spells, etc., of the Sicilians, their fairies and festivals and finally of the eruption of Ætna and the relief work at Messina. An unusual book full of interest and information. It is well illustrated with photographs made by the author.

The Happy Hunting Grounds, by Kermit Roosevelt (Scribners). The first chapter, which gives the title to the book, is a beautiful tribute by Kermit to his father, with recollections of the training he gave to his boys and their experiences together. Other chapters describe the author's own adventures, in Africa hunting the antelope, or in the Mexican desert after a series of mountain sheep for the National Museum, or after moose in New Brunswick. One chapter, of a different nature, describes his quest in South America for rare books! It is an interesting and lively volume such as might be expected from a true son of his father. The book is well illustrated.

Glimpses of South America, by F. A. Sherwood (Century). The American business man who writes this unconventional book does it in an interesting way with many pictures taken by the author along the journey. He follows the so-called "beaten track" around the Southern continent. With keen insight and an eye for the significant he gives us a remarkable amount of information about the principal South American countries as he saw them and there are plenty of wit, color and human interest all along the way.

Casting Tackle and Methods, by O. W. Smith (Stewart and Kidd). A fascinating volume by the Fishing Editor of Outdoor Life and author of "Trout Lore." Nearly half the volume deals with the rod, the reel, and tackle, the second half explains the secret of "casting," use of landing tools and various methods of fishing. It is well illustrated.

The Handbook for Practical Farmers, by Hugh Findlay (Appleton). An invaluable handbook for wide-awake farmers who wish to take advantage of the new farming methods. Over a score of well-known experts have contributed chapters. It deals with every conceivable farm topic, soil management, drainage, orchards, vegetable garden, chickens, the horse, sheep, swine, bees, farm buildings, kerosene and gasoline engines, roads, records, etc. The volume is richly illustrated.

American Boys' Handy Book of Camp-Lore and Woodcraft, by Dan Beard (Lippincott). Here is a book to delight every Boy Scout and indeed every one, young or old, who is interested in outdoor life and especially camping out. It is a regular "how-to-do" book by a far-famed expert on this subject, and it tells how to do and make scores of things in the line of woodcraft and camp lore. Some of the chapter headings are, Fire-Making by Friction, Fire-Making by Percussion, Camp Food, Preparing for a Camping Trip, Choosing a Camp Site—and there are nine other chapters with an amazing lot of ingenious devices and clever ways of doing things in the woods. Mr. Beard shows the details of things to be made by drawings thickly scattered all through the book.

Biography and History

The Making of Herbert Hoover, by Rose Wilder Lane (Century). Here is the biography of one of the most remarkable personalities of our time. His career is a dramatic one, from humble boyhood days to world-wide fame and tremendous human service in the Great War, and the story is well told here.

A Short Life of Mark Twain, by Albert Bigelow Paine (Harpers). This is an abridgment of the author's more extended Mark Twain: A Biography. One of the best written and most pleasing life-stories, it presents a notable literary figure with all the brilliant kindly wit, courageous moral power, and natural humanity of America's greatest philosopher-humorist. Many photographic pictures illustrate the book.

History of Belpre, by Rev. C. E. Dickinson, D. D. (325 Fourth St., Marietta, O). This history begins in Colonial days when Belpré was a French possession, but that is only by way of introduction. As an American community Belpré dates from 1790 and its record is full of interest. The volume should find a place in every collection of Americana. It is brought up to date and includes the Roll of Honor for the Great War.

Intimate Pages of Mexican History, by Edith O'Shaughnessy (Doran). The author lived in Mexico for years as wife of the American chargé d'affaires, and from close acquaintanceship sketches the personalities and careers of the later Mexican executives beginning with Diaz, for whom she expresses much admiration. She believes that Mexico in time can solve its own problems and that the United States should avoid meddling and cease to sell arms to belligerents.

Scribners In Morocco

Lippincott From Seeing the Far West

SPOKANE RIVER

London Days, by Arthur Warren (Little, Brown). A delightful volume of reminiscences, which will especially interest those whose memory goes back as far as the eighties. Mr. Warren, a Boston boy, went to London first in 1878, "on the staff of an American Engineering concern." But he began writing at once and making interesting friends. By 1883 he had become a journalist and was the first to write an article for America on Rodin—which article was rejected with the statement, "We don't want articles about unknown sculptors, especially French ones!" Presently we are reading about George Augustus Sala; and Monsignor Capel, Browning, Moschelles and Patti in 1893; John Stuart Blackie, Lord Kelvin, Tennyson, Gladstone, Whistler, are among the notable men to whom chapters are devoted with abundance of interesting anecdote.

The Writing of History, by Fred Morrow Fling (Yale University Press). A clear and helpful course of instruction on the historical method. It discusses the choice of subject, collection and classification of sources, criticism of sources, establishment of facts, grouping of facts, and exposition. Both writers of history and readers of history may gain much of profit from these chapters.

Recent Poetry

The White Comrade, by Robert Haven Schauffler (Houghton Mifflin). A fine collection of poems, ballads, odes, sonnets—by the author of Fiddler's Luck, and "Scum o' the Earth."

Shadow Verses, by Gamaliel Bradford (Yale University Press). A choice volume of short poems, rarely more than two or three stanzas, but each voicing a bit of human experience, often some perplexity of the mind. A delicious vein of humor runs through most of them. The friends of Mr. Bradford who have enjoyed his fine and serious essays will welcome also these writings in a different vein.

Flame and Shadow, by Sara Teasdale (Macmillan). The author's name has been made familiar by some of the best poems that have appeared in the magazines and by her earlier volume "Love Songs," which won the poetry prize in 1917. This new collection covers the range of human feeling in brief and musical verses.

Chips of Jade, by Arthur Guiterman (Dutton). The proverbs of China and Hindustan put into English verse. "Thou wilt find in them reason as well as rhyme." Many of them have appeared in Life.

Heart of New England, by Abbie Farwell Brown (Houghton Mifflin). This volume is dedicated "To the memory of my ancestor, Mary Allerton Cushman, last of the Mayflower Pilgrims," and a number of the poems have been inspired by Pilgrim happenings. A few find their incentive in war-time experiences. But most of the poems breathe the atmosphere of life in New England, in open fields or crowded streets of the country or the city.

Today and Tomorrow, by Edward N. Pomeroy (Small, Maynard). Residents of Wellesley and many of its college graduates will remember affectionately the kindly writer of these cheerful poems. Some of them are on Wellesley themes, like The Hunnewell Gardens, Waban Mere, The Wellesley Float, etc. Some are reminiscent of Portland, Me.; of Yarmouth, or of Taunton, Mass., or of Marion on the Cape. Some of the best express the writer's joyful religious faith. It is a "homesy" and welcome volume.

Hide and Seek, by Christopher Morley (Doran). A humorous sonnet seems a contradiction in terms. But here is "A Sonnet on Oysters"! and "Thoughts while Packing a Trunk." Not all these poems are sonnets, but whimsical, perhaps, is the word for most of them, and Translations from the Chinese can only be called "Morleyish," for their delightful humor is inimitable.

The Works of Henry van Dyke. Poems, 2 vols. (Scribners). Two more volumes in the attractive Avalon Edition contain the complete poetical works of Dr. van Dyke. Among these are many that will long linger in the memory of men, "The Toiling of Felix," "America for Me," "America's Welcome Home," "The Name of France," etc.

Songs of Horses: Songs of Dogs, Anthologies, by Robert Frothingham (Houghton Mifflin). The close relations of companionship and affection between man and the horse and dog are reflected in these collections, and the variety of mood and association, from adventure to sheer fun is surprising. There are familiar and unfamiliar names and poems but the average of quality is high. The form and decoration of the volumes are original and in good taste.

Selections from Swinburne, Edited by Edmund Gosse and Thomas James Wise (Doran). A carefully made selection from the poet's voluminous works.

Aurelia and Other Poems, by Robert Nichols (Dutton). Nichols is one of the English soldier poets and one of the greatest of them and there is much effect of the war experience in this volume. Many of the poems are directly associated with the name of a friend but not the long series of sonnets addressed to one whom the author calls "my angel-devil," from which the collection takes its name. Perhaps he thought no friend would care to be associated with so reckless an expression of an admittedly illicit and lowering experience. This book, we hope, is promise and portent of a greater, because more broad-minded and deeper-going an experience of life.

War Poems, by R. E. Vernede (Doran). The author was an Englishman who rather late in life became one of the first group of volunteer soldiers at the outbreak of the conflict. Hating war, and yet an enthusiastic and devoted soldier and officer, his thoughts and observations finding expression in verse bring us close to the man as well as to the life of the trenches.

Houghton Mifflin

ABBIE FARWELL BROWN

Bluestone, Lyrics, by Marguerite Wilkinson (Macmillan). Many of these lyrics were written to the accompaniment of a parallel discovery of music and some of the airs are given in an interesting introduction. The author has felt and sought to give expression to the joys as well as the griefs of our human experience and to the inspiration of the wild life of the earth.

More About Plymouth

Plymouth and the Pilgrims, by Arthur Lord (Houghton Mifflin). Three lectures, Plymouth before the Pilgrims, the Pilgrims before Plymouth, and Plymouth and the Pilgrims. The first of these describes all that was known about the Cape Cod region by explorers who preceded the Pilgrims; the record is an admirably condensed discussion of the Separatist Movement in England and the life in Holland, the third emphasizes certain important facts concerning the life of the Pilgrims in Plymouth. It is not a complete history but a valuable presentation of outstanding facts, written by the President of the Pilgrim Society and the Chairman of the Tercentenary Commission.

Old Cape Cod, by Mary Rogers Bangs (Houghton Mifflin). Comparatively brief space is given to the early Pilgrim history. The book is rather a review of the gradual development of the towns and the record made by the sturdy Cape Codders in the French Wars, the Indian Wars and as voyagers on the deep seas. The whole volume is entertaining, but especially so are the chapters on Storms and Pirates, Old Sea Ways, and the Captains. No other book we have seen is so full of amusing stories of the Parsons and the Captains and other notable men of the old Cape towns.

Miscellaneous

Readings in Rural Sociology, by John Phelan (Macmillan). A large and varied collection of readings on such topics as Country Life in New England, The Development of Country Life in the West, The Old South and the New Mental and Moral Aspects of Rural Life, The Rural Home, The Country School, The Country Church, The Organization of Rural Interests, etc. Each reading is adapted from some essay, paper, report, or standard volume, from a great variety of authors. The collection seems to be the cream of all that is best on rural sociology.

Heart Troubles, by Louis Faugeres Bishop, M.D. (Funk and Wagnalls). A book for laymen, written in a popular style and giving abundant and authoritative practical advice for persons suffering from heart disease, hardening of the arteries and other consequences of heart troubles.

Motor Car Starting and Lighting, by A. Frederick Collins (Appleton). A description of "everything one needs to know about starting, lighting and ignition systems"—the electrical equipment of the motor car. The text is accompanied with a large number of explanatory diagrams.

How to Reduce, by Antoinette Donelly (Appleton). The author is "beauty editor of the Chicago Tribune," an acknowledged authority on her subject. Too much food and too little exercise is the cause of obesity, she declares, and this volume describes corrective means and simple systematic daily home exercise.

The Social Problem, by Charles A. Ellwood (Macmillan). This is a revised edition of the author's original work written in Oxford during 1914. It takes up the historical, physical, biological, economic, educational, spiritual and ideal elements in our social problem of today. It aims to furnish a scientific basis for progressive, instead of revolutionary or reactionary, reconstruction.

The Secret Springs, by Harvey O'Higgins (Harpers). A philosophy of health and happiness and the wise conduct of life. The author gives the general reader the scientific conclusions of a certain Dr. X who has practiced psycho-analysis for many years. While using the Freudian teaching he does not confine his practice to suppressions of the sex-instinct but to similar results from other suppressions. The book is a record of a wide variety of treatments to which there is not space to refer. A chapter devoted to analyzing the personality of Theodore Roosevelt hardly seems convincing, though it is interesting and in many points suggestive, especially as it emphasizes the great value of having a father worthy to be admired and imitated.

Wounded Words, by Cora Berry Whitin (Four Seas). This little book of bright charades will be heartily appreciated in every household fortunate enough to receive it and use it for the amusement of young and old. It is a good companion for an invalid.

Houghton Mifflin From Old Cape Cod

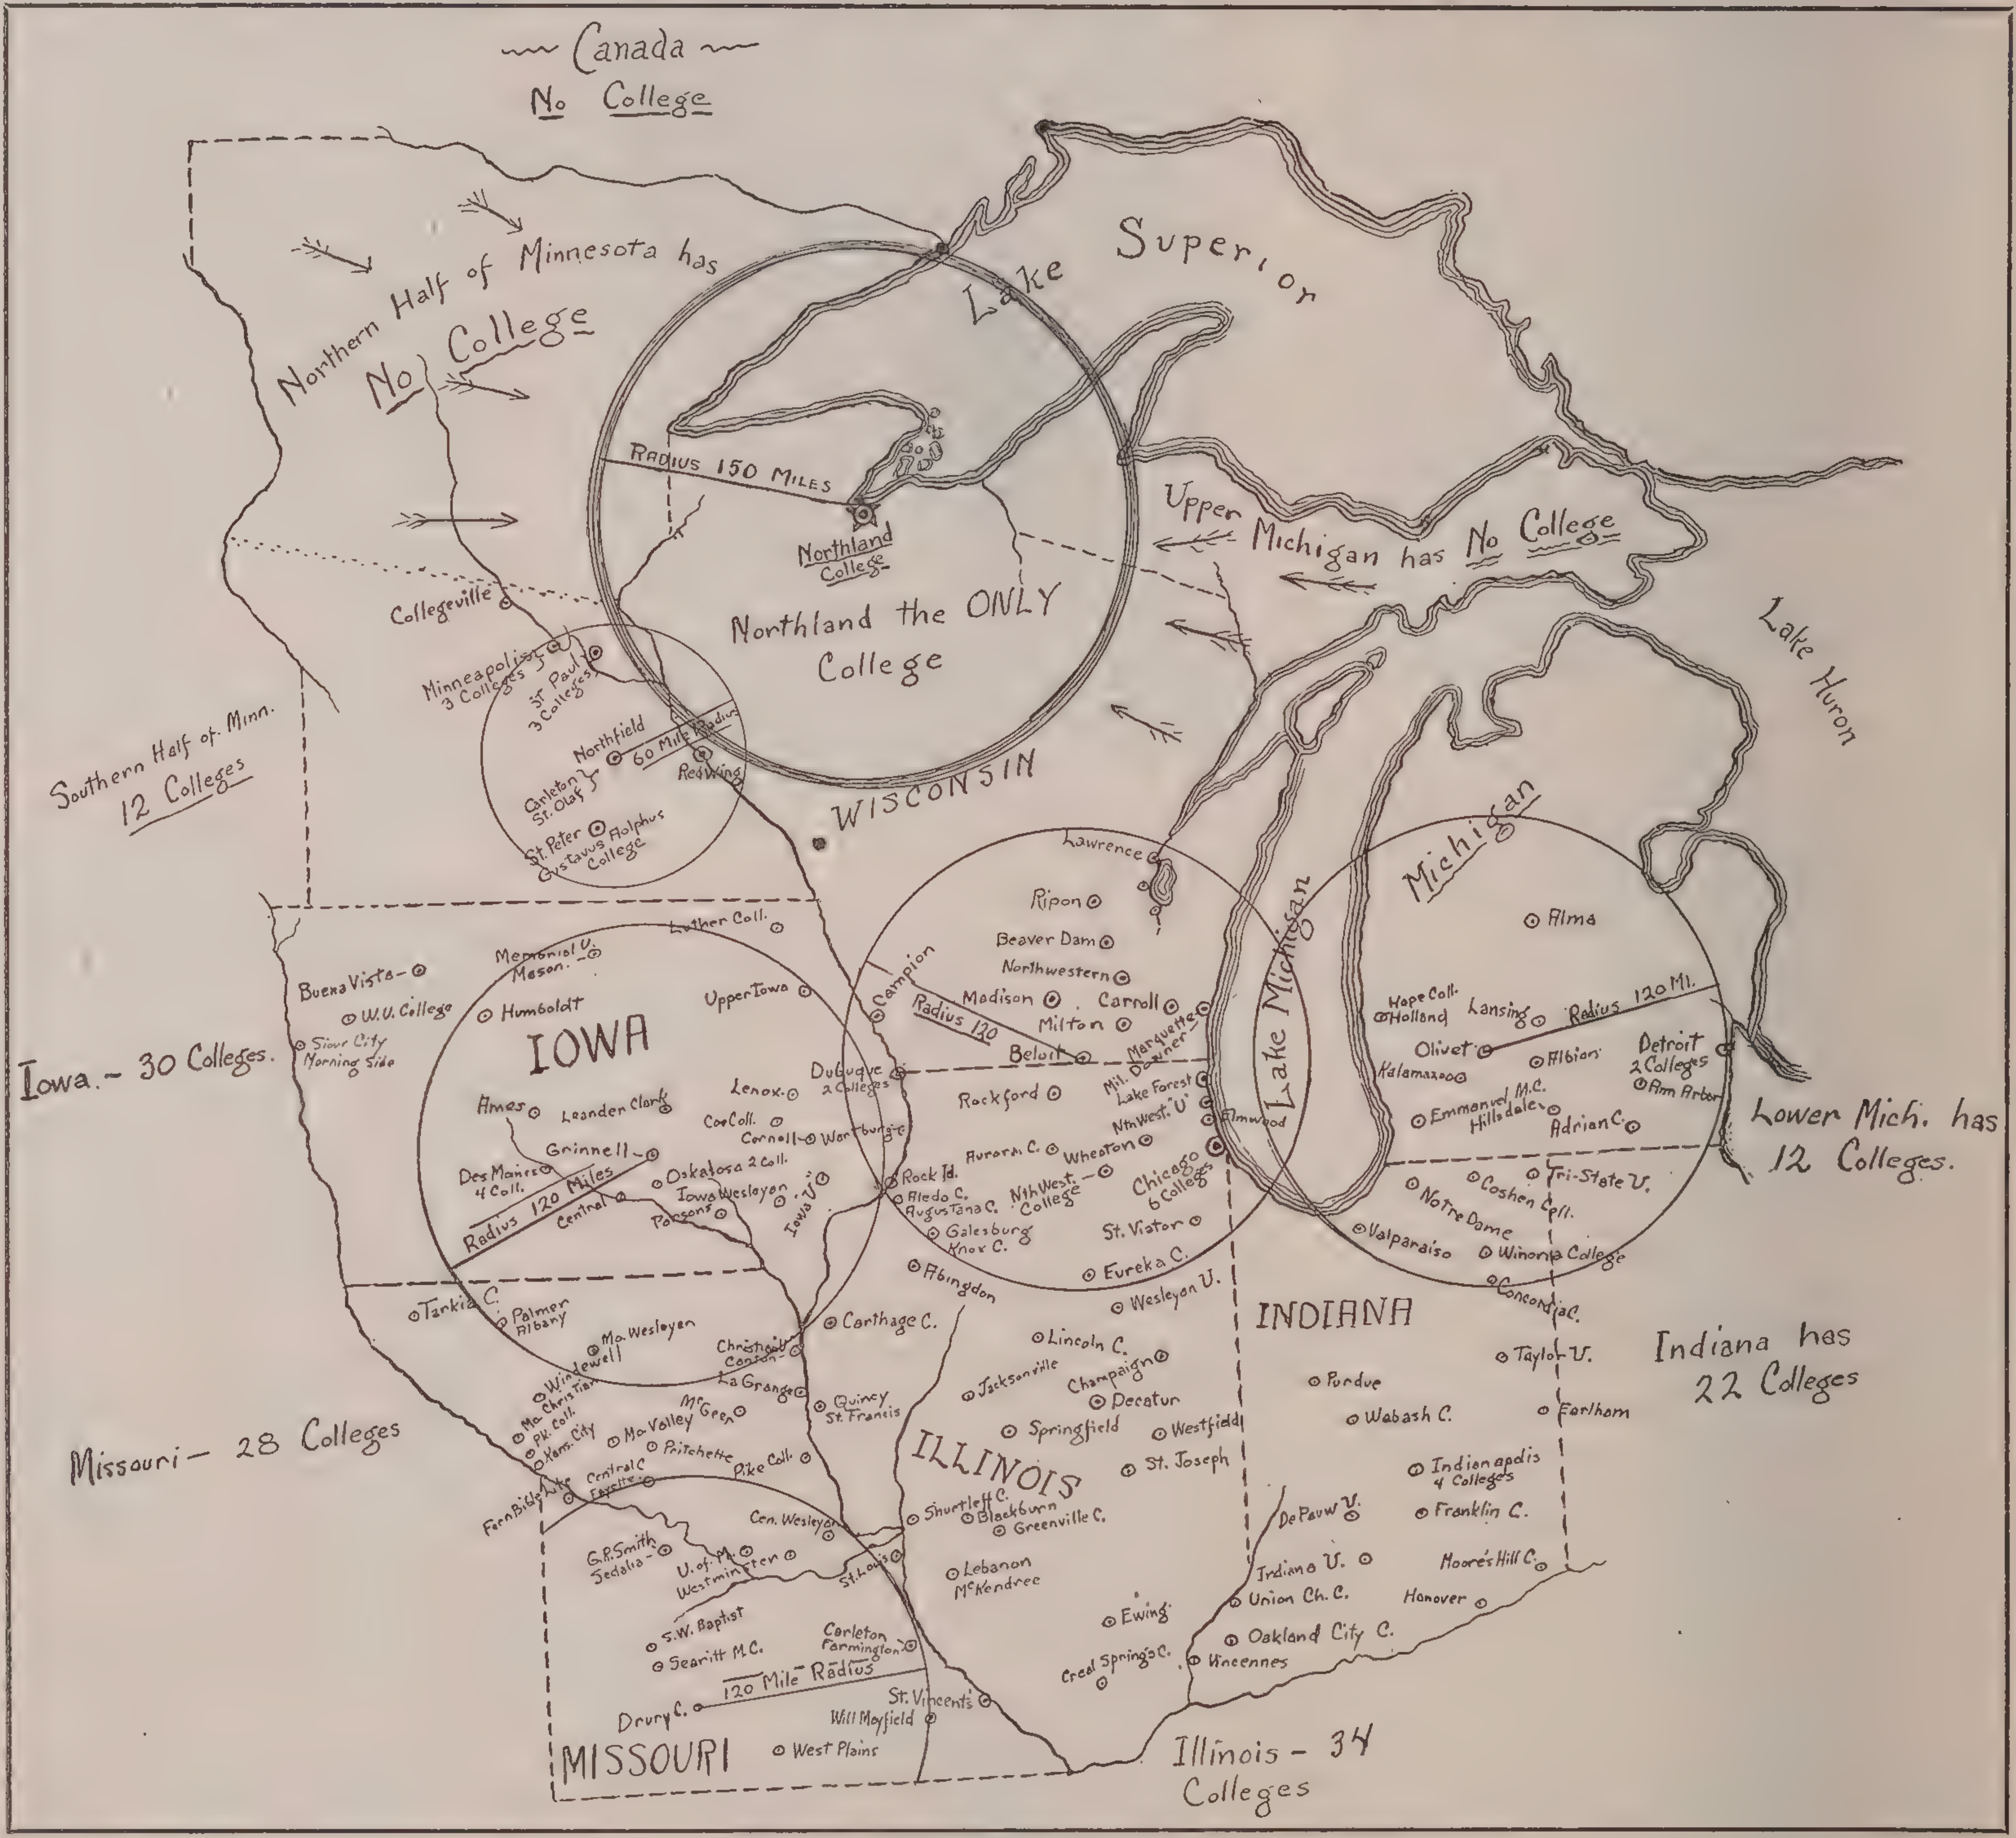
NORTHLAND COLLEGE

A Bit of College Geography



The Mighty Field of

NORTHLAND COLLEGE

Compared with all other Mid-Western Colleges

In the great field of North Wisconsin, Northern Michigan and Northern Minnesota, Northland College Stands Alone

Every College in the States of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and Missouri is shown in the map above. Just compare the field of Northland College with that of any other mid-Western College.

A recent questionnaire brought out the fact that ninety per cent. of the students of these colleges came from less than 120 miles. Using 120 miles as a radius, centering at a Congregational College in each case, we get some surprising facts.

In the circle centering at Grinnell College there are twenty-six Colleges.

The College of the North

IN the circle centering at Beloit, there are thirty-two colleges.
In the circle centering at Olivet, there are sixteen colleges.

The average distance traveled by students is from 50 to 75 miles. With 60 miles as a radius, centering at Carleton College, there are, in the circle, ten colleges.

CENTERING at Northland College, with a radius of 150 miles, there is No Other College of any kind in the circle. Add to that the adjacent territory of Northern Minnesota and Northern Michigan, in either of which there is No College, and you have Northland's field.

Northland Stands Alone

The most rapidly developing agricultural area in the United States is Northern Wisconsin. The average size of the farms is 42 acres as compared with 112 acres in Southern Wisconsin, and 122 acres in Iowa and Illinois. This means nearly treble the rural population of these states for the Northland field.

The Congregational World Movement has underwritten the necessary funds to reopen and aid some of these other colleges. Northland will get, perhaps, fifty per cent of the amount promised last year. If it is wisdom to underwrite Olivet in her field, is it not greater wisdom to SAVE NORTHLAND in hers?

Northland is a Congregational Missionary College, and the Congregational Missionary spirit must

SAVE NORTHLAND!

We must have, now,

$10,000 to make up the amount of shrinkage in the promised help from the World Movement, for the year 1919-20.
$15,000 to meet current bills, and to enable us to "carry on" for the present year.
$1,500 for necessary equipment for the increased work and numbers this year.

Send Checks to Northland College, Ashland, Wisconsin

I will help save NORTHLAND for her great task in the North.

I pledge for this year
Enclosed is my check for } $5,000; $1,000; $500; $100; $50; $..............................

Signed...

....

Date of payment...........................

IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL

DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS

How Jesus was Received

International Sunday School Lesson for Nov. 28. Matt. 11:1-6, 16-19, 25-30; 12:14.

The Honest Questioner. It was hard for John to lie in prison and not know what effect his life and message were producing. He had been so utterly unselfish and brave in all that he had done! How could he be sure that Jesus was what he had claimed to be? He must know if he were to endure his imprisonment with courage. So he sent his honest question to Jesus.

John stands for those earnest and fair inquirers who have the right to know and who are honestly anxious to find out the truth. Almost every Christian disciple passes through some such time of eager questioning. The certainties in one's experience tend to fade at times and there arises inevitably the doubt and the honest question. It is right to bring these problems forward. There is no reason why we should "fear a doubt as wrong." When we bring our honest questions to Jesus and are willing to wait patiently for the answer we shall not fail to receive it. And it will probably finally come as it came to John. Jesus told his disciples to go back and tell their master what they had seen with their own eyes concerning his work and influence. The full proof as to what Jesus is will finally be furnished by what Jesus does. The proofs are different in kind now but they are identical in their significance. Look at what the influence and message of Jesus are now doing practically in the world. He is simply changing the lives of men and women. If his spirit and will could be given full sway in the life of individuals and communities now the whole character of the world would be revolutionized. In so far as Jesus is being given this place he is still doing what he did in Palestine when he lived with his friends there. This fact is the best answer that can be given to the honest question, Who is Jesus Christ?

The Unfair Critic. He does not come honestly with his question, and he would not deal fairly with the answer whatever it might be. Jesus showed his love for children in his statement concerning the way in which he was received. They loved to play at processions and to "dress up." Jesus said that there were some children who never would play the game. If it was a wedding they would not sing and if it was a funeral they would not wail. So the Pharisees twisted the facts to suit their theories. John was a recluse and they said he was possessed by demons; Jesus mingled with men in all their healthy joys and they called him a drunkard. No argument would satisfy men who perverted facts like this to match their prejudices. It is as well to give up the purpose of convincing them of the character or claims of Jesus.

Discerning Souls. Jesus says that these are like little children who accept in faith and trust in simplicity the truths that are given to them. There are certain respects in which childhood is cruel and unreasoning; but in its simple confidence it is the symbol of the character that understands and yields to the claims of Christ with the most perfect spirit. This is still the way in which the mind and heart ought to react to the call and claim of Christ. He comes to us with such a loving and winsome appeal! It is love at its highest and best. There is only one true answer to Jesus. It is the childlike attitude of acceptance and obedience. All the wisdom of all the world cannot take the place of this simple spirit of true confidence in the claim of Christ upon our allegiance now.

Open Enemies. The first point that impresses us is the fact that these enemies who used every means in their power to destroy Jesus were the very men who ought to have been most eager to respond to him, for they were the accredited leaders of the religious life of the day. They held the offices and possessed the power in the church of the time. Yet they were the very men who set about to destroy the one leader whose message and influence were the most kind and useful of all those that ever had been given to the people.

Why did they do this? It is apparent that the mission of Jesus did not fit into their schemes for religious tyranny; his message cut the ground from under their pretense and fraud. They could not succeed with their selfish program if his principles were to prevail. So there was nothing else to do but to give over their positions or to destroy Jesus. They decided to kill the man who opposed them.

What are the modern representatives of the Pharisees? How do they follow the example of their predecessors? What can we do to befriend Christ in his contact with his modern enemies?

Ozora S Davis

Chicago Theological Seminary.

The Study of the Bible

VII. The Authority of the Bible

"If you don't accept everything in the Bible, where are you going to stop?" is the question of those who are trying to make the Bible an infallible external authority. Accept what harmonizes with Jesus' central teaching and all that appeals to us as true and right.

Do we really accept everything in the Bible? We don't believe people should be stoned to death for picking up sticks on the Sabbath, that we should accept polygamy because it is sanctioned in the Old Testament, that women should keep silence in the churches, that Jehovah both did and did not command the Israelites to offer sacrifices. There are many things that we do not accept because they flatly contradict other things and we cannot accept both.

Now we want more certainty, more authority, not less. The accent of certainty and the note of authority are necessary to an aggressive Christianity. But this authority must be inner, not outer, of the spirit, not of the letter, the authority of truth and life not the authority of a dogma, a church or a book. It is just because we want utmost certainty that we insist on going with Jesus in rejecting lower biblical teachings.

Moral authority must be self-imposed. What we are forced to accept or do has no moral character, since we have no choice in the matter. Outer conformity might be forced, but inner consent cannot be forced, since we may conform outwardly while rebelling inwardly.

Each adult person must determine for himself what shall control his life. Responsibility to do that is what makes us moral beings. If anything wishes a place in our lives it must make its appeal to us, not to somebody else. If we went into a country and urged people who had never heard of Christianity to accept it, they would ask, why? and would not accept it unless reasons which appeal to them as valid were presented.

If we fall back upon our Book and say, "Because it is in this inspired volume," the Moslem would reply, "Yes, but here is my inspired book, why accept yours instead of mine?" Here is our Bible, nowhere claiming infallible inspiration, and here is the Koran which does claim such inspiration. How are we to tell? It is clear that the truth, the spiritual height and depth and power of the contents must be the final test. Because portions of our Bible give us eternal truth and have life-giving power, because some of its teachings reach us in our deepest depths and inspire us to holy living, they grip and control our lives and because other portions shock that highest moral sense which Jesus gives us and contradict this eternal ideal of Jesus, we cannot accept them. The leadership of Jesus is supreme because he gives us eternal truth. But if his essential supreme teaching is to control us, then we must refuse to let anything in our Bible which is below or contrary to his teaching control us.

The Bible, then, should have the authority of the truth it contains. If it reveals a higher way of life than we can find in any other place —and it does—that way of life has a right to claim us as disciples. The highest in our Bible stands upon its own self-evidencing supremacy, provided we set it free from other biblical conceptions which are indefensible. Essential Christianity has such a great work to do in the world that it should be freed from the incumbrance of lower biblical teaching.

Do not fear for your Bible. It is the greatest religious and moral Book of the ages. It has in it that which is transient, inadequate and not ideal, but it also has that which is eternal, adequate and ultimate. Jesus' idea of God as Father, Friend and Saviour, his individual ideal of perfect love to God and man, his social ideal of a Kingdom of God, which contemplates a universal brotherhood cemented in the common fatherhood of God, have nothing beyond them; they cannot be surpassed. He is our highest authority in religion. Supreme certainty comes from walking in his way of life and thus know in experience its sufficiency.

F. M. Sheldon.

THE HOUR OF PRAYER

What Would the Christian Make of the World?

Comment on the Midweek Prayer Meeting Topic for Nov. 21-27

BY ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN

Scripture Passage. 1 Cor. 13:1-13.

An Ideal to Work for. What the familiar version calls "charity" and the Revisers call "love," we may perhaps in thinking of our world as a place of social relations call good will. Put in a few and simple words the Christian ideal of this world of ours is that of a community in which all the members think and speak of one another with good will. Charity, for all its beautiful associations, is rather too much of a foreign word—a word transferred and not translated—while love has so many intimate associations and is called upon for so wide a range of meanings that it often confuses the mind of children and childlike persons. It is hard to tell a boy that he must "love" the bigger boy who has cheated and abused him. But he will understand and respond to the demand that he shall learn to think forgivingly of him and with good will. In Christian ethics, as in Christian doctrine, we must learn not to impose too heavy burdens upon those we ask to join the kingdom of good will.

Avoiding Unreality. This aim and purpose and desire for a world of real good will has the advantage that it commends itself to every man at his own conscious best. Not many, even of the malicious people, are unkind or malicious all the time. It sets up their own best moods as a ladder toward the higher levels where Christ walks in a mood of continual good will. Hardly any one would be inclined to deny that a world of this sort of active good will would be a real world and worth living in. And practically every one knows that in little bits at least such a world is attained. It is to be the growth of a seed which God has planted in every heart, and not a hot-house fruit of saintliness.

The Possibilities of Good Will. One might make a lively picture of the kind of a world this principle of good will would shape if carried out in any sphere of life. Think what family life might be, and often is, thank God! with this principle of love at work! Think how delightful to travel if you found people of good will everywhere! How much easier it would be to settle trade disputes if the principle of the kingdom, "Look not every man only on his own things, but every man also on the things of others," were fully carried out. Good will is the perfect solvent of disputes, the lubricant of living.

How Far Can Man Be Trusted? It is just here that the car of progress bursts a tire. We in sad experience know that we cannot always trust the good will of others. We know a more dreadful thing—that we cannot always trust our own good will. And this is important and revealing. No indignation at the absence of good will in others can excuse the least taint of malice in ourselves. Our steady, unfaltering and unfailing good will toward all men is at once our opportunity of witness and the index of our soul's health.

Closet and Altar

OUR SONG OF PRAISE

Unto Thee, oh my strength, will I sing praises.—Ps. 59:17.

The prayer that begins with thankfulness and passes on into waiting, even while in sorrow and sore need, will always end in thankfulness and triumph and praise.—Alexander Maclaren.

Soul's vow, not airy voice;
Sound heart, not sounding string;
Pure love, not piercing noise.
In God's ear sweetly sing.
—Francis Roberts.

Let candidates for heaven bless the Lord. There is no place there for such as have not learned this art. Praise him so far as you know him; and he will make known to you more of his glory.—George Bowen.

Some men have wonderful absorbing powers. They take any number of favors and never remember one of them. If this be so as between man and man, what wonder that the charge should heighten in solemnity and gravity in its religious application. It is the miracle which astounds the Omniscient.—Joseph Parker.

Let not his praises grow
On prosperous heights alone;
But in the vales below
Let his great love be known.
Let no distress
Curb and control
My wingéd soul
And praise suppress.
—Richard Baxter.

You do not know how much good you may do, and how greatly you may glorify God, if you praise him in your dark times.—C. H. Spurgeon.

How great, oh God, is thy loving-kindness toward us, that even in the discipline of our deprivings leavest us the best! How wonderful thy goodness that provides! We thank thee for the human love that follows us, for friendship that makes earth homelike for our souls, for work and rest, for life's adventures and the courage, born of thy companionship, in which we go on to meet what the new day shall bring, for the beauty of the earth and that revealing beauty of art which shows us what another's eyes have seen and his hands wrought, for life that trains us and for death that brings us expectation, for love has gone before us to provide inns of rest and comfort all along the unknown road. We praise thee, Lord, that thou art thou! first known in the face of Christ our Brother and growing clearer in experience as we follow on the pilgrim way. Open our eyes that we may see more of thy mercy and learn the song of praise. In the name of Christ. Amen.

—Isaac Ogden Rankin.

Home Missionary Pioneering

Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic for Nov. 28-Dec. 4

BY MIRIAM L. WOODBERRY

Topic: Inspiring Stories from Home Mission Fields. Acts 10:1-6, 34-48.

The New Pioneer. The earlier stages of America's development marked the blazing of new trails and the opening up of new country. Today the pioneer is blazing his trail, not through trackless forests and over rolling prairies but through the mazes of industrial development. He is a pioneer in fields of scientific discovery and new inventions, changing the trees of the forest into ships of the sea and the air, converting desert wastes into fertile fields, and dragging coal, metals, and jewels from the depths of the earth into the open air.

The Modern City. In the modern city people live crowded together in apartments where every inch of space is mathematically adapted to human needs. Fifty-seven families live under one roof. Water, food, heat, light, and many other necessities are brought from afar to their touch. The news of the world is available within three hours after the events have transpired. Amusement and work fill every hour of the day and night. Rush, speed and excitement produce conditions that challenge religion and render new adjustments necessary.

The Quiet Places. The quiet country village is still to be found where in large houses healthy children are growing, farms are sending food to the cities and also the young men and women who are soon to be parts of the busy life of the nation. Here is our strength and the safeguard of our best idealism. Yet here stands the church, too often pastorless and more often handicapped through lack of equipment and leadership.

Pioneers from Afar. The pioneer of today is no longer the descendant of the early settler alone, but immigrants from every land. Millions of them have come and are on the way. Many a public school teacher has fifty children of foreign birth to three of the native born. America is no longer just pioneering and discovering her resources, she is being "pioneered upon." Her ideals and institutions are being tested by witnesses who do not understand the language and who are judging, not by leaders, but by the crowd.

Which is the Pioneer Field? Where would a minister meet more pioneer conditions: (a) In a settlement forty miles from the railroad out West? (b) In the center of a large city where foreigners have displaced the native Americans? (c) In a village where the church no longer attracts the people? Do we see the challenge of our day? Is the Church leading and leavening? What kind of men are needed?

REFERENCES: Frontier Missionary Problems, Bruce Kinney, Chap. VI. and VII. Home Missions Council Report of Survey of Montana; The Romance of a Mission Field; Pastorate 110 Miles Long; The Challenge of the City, Josiah Strong; Chap. IV. and V. The Waterbury Way; Pittsburgh's Challenge to the Young People of America; The Church of the Open Country, Warren H. Wilson; Chap. I. and VII.

WITH OUR YOUNGER READERS

Penelope's Basket

By Blanche Elizabeth Wade

Penelope's Basket hung upon the wall, and as it was a picture and not a real basket it has to be spelled with capital letters, because Penelope's Basket was the title of the picture, as any one could see by reading the letters.

This picture showed a little girl of the olden days standing outside of a poor laborer's little house. She had a basket almost as large as herself, and you could tell at a glance that she was carrying a dinner to the poor family who lived inside the little house. You could see a turkey's leg sticking out at one side of the basket, and you could catch a glimpse of golden oranges, celery, vegetables, and bumpy packages of goodies. It was a fine dinner, indeed!

Penelope was a rich little girl, you could tell; for she had a fine green velvet coat trimmed with fur, a rose-colored satin bonnet with an ostrich-plume, and silver-buckled shoes. Besides, you saw the driver of her pretty coach waiting for her at the bottom of the lane.

Little Isabel Hamilton always had liked that picture. She never tired of looking at it. She made up many stories about little Penelope, who she was sure lived in a fine mansion in a great park, and had many servants to wait upon her.

Now for the first time Isabel looked at the picture without liking it the least bit. To see Penelope's pretty clothes, and the happy smile upon her face, and all those good things to eat popping out at every corner of the well-filled basket, made Isabel almost want to turn Penelope's Basket to the wall.

The reason for this change was because of a dear old absent-minded grandfather who had died seven years before, when Isabel was seven. Until this year she had not known what his absent-mindedness had meant to the fortunes of the family. She knew there never was any money to spare for things she would have liked to have; but there always had been enough to eat, and always a large Thanksgiving-dinner with the cousins from out of town as guests, with all the good things to eat, from the huge turkey from their own farmyard, to the dessert of homemade pies of mince-meat, pumpkin, apple, and berry, with nuts, raisins, candies, fruits, and the great family plum-pudding made as only mother knew how to make it.

This was the first year the cousins were not coming. They with their father and mother had gone to California for the season, and Isabel's mother said things had gone so badly with investments this year—Isabel knew nothing about investments except that they were things to do with the money you might have—that all the turkeys must be sold, there would be no guests, and their own dinner must be a simple one. Instead of a turkey they would have a chicken, and not so large a variety of vegetables and extras.

Now this is where the absent-mindedness of that dear Grandfather Hamilton comes in. He had made a will and lost it. The will would have given Isabel's mother so much money that she never would have had to stop to wonder whether or not a thing was too expensive to buy. Grandfather himself had told her what was to be hers, and he had made also a generous provision for the education and bringing-up of little Isabel. Isabel's mother had even seen the will, and then dear grandfather one day told her with much distress that he had lost it, or rather put it away so carefully that he could not find it. They looked everywhere, in all sorts of odd out-of-the-way places where grandfather sometimes stowed away things but no will could be found. He said if he could not find it by the end of the week he would make a new one like the first, but by the end of the week he had left them because of a sudden cold which turned into pneumonia, and no new will had been made.

Isabel looked long at the picture. That basket of goodies made her fairly hungry. It was not merely the dinner that the lost will was making them lose, but good schooling, music, and all the things girls like to have. Penelope's smile seemed almost to mock poor Isabel.

Just then a sudden gust of high wind blew. Their great front door closed with a bang that jarred the house. Crash!—went something in front of Isabel, and behold, Penelope and her basket lay upon the floor. The glass was broken and the backing of wood was split. Isabel picked up the still-smiling Penelope, who had not had even one thing jolted out of that overflowing basket, and what do you think! Why, something fell out from between the back of the picture and the split wood, and that something was Grandfather Hamilton's lost will!

How mother and Isabel danced for joy at the sight! Mother now remembered that grandfather had put a new backing on the old English print which was a favorite picture. Often he had said it should be Isabel's and he hoped her basket would be always as full as Penelope's, and now his wish had come true. With his fondness for tucking things into safe places, he had thought probably no place could be safer for the will than that demure little Penelope's basket, and it was from the very part of the picture which showed the basket that the will fell out. Penelope had been hiding in her basket far more than ever they dreamed, and far more than Isabel ever had imagined when she had tried to think what might be under the things which showed at the top.

"To celebrate," said mother, "we must keep one turkey, and we must have the things we like to have at Thanksgiving time, but we shall not be selfish, so suppose you run down our own little lane and ask old Mrs. Jepson and her lame daughter to take dinner with us. They never are invited anywhere, and never had a turkey since I can remember. You can pretend you are Penelope yourself."

So Penelope's basket was passed on, you see, and on the day of the dinner the old picture in a new frame hung in its old place, but upon a

The Problems of Your Church

THE Duplex Envelope System, originated by Duplex—Richmond, Va., is used by more churches in America than all other systems combined.

Out of years of study and contact with thousands of churches has come to us a fund of experience about church finances which we cheerfully tender to pastors, church officers, and all other interested persons.

If there are any problems in the financial system of your Church or Sunday School, why not ask us for the experience of others? A letter of inquiry will receive the serious, personal attention of an officer of this organization.

The Duplex Envelope Company
ORIGINATORS OF THE DUPLEX ENVELOPE SYSTEM
Richmond, Virginia

stout picture-cord and sturdy nail, and Penelope's smile was so bright, that old Mrs. Jepson said,

"Dear me, what a cheerful picture, to be sure!"

Comrades' Corner

Dear Comrades:

We have a Comrade in Japan on the 'phone and must not keep her waiting.

"Otaro, Hokkaido, Japan,
"Oct. 10, 1920.

"I wonder if any of the Comrades have ever visited this out of the way corner of the Japanese Empire? Some months ago a young Comrade—I think she was from Turkey—(Yes, Esther Ward from Beirut, Syria.—Mr. A.), described very well a sight of Mt. Fuji, the "Peerless Mountain," as she saw it on her way through Japan. Fortunately for world travelers, it is not necessary to go out of their way on the beaten path (or rather, the beaten railroad route) between Tokyo and Kyoto, to see that matchless sight. Just now there are many such in Japan, nearly all of whom will doubtless see it. Perhaps among them may even be some Comrades, for in Tokyo the World's Sunday School Convention is meeting, and there are a good many Congregationalists there, not only from America, but also from other countries. There are Congregationalists, and a Congregational church, clear up here in Otaru. Sometimes people call Hokkaido (that is the name of one of the four large islands of Japan —look at your atlas, please!) the New England of Japan. That is chiefly because of the climate and vegetation. In winter we have a good deal of snow. Otaru is a busy port city, from which a good deal of the lumber that is cut 'up country' is shipped abroad. It is 'beautiful for situation,' for from our house on the hill we look down upon the landlocked bay beyond the harbor, and upon hills on all sides, which have begun to put on their gay autumn clothes.

"I enjoy reading the Comrades' Corner, and should like to be considered as one of you. We are working and trying to bring God's kingdom within reach of his children here, and I trust that is what all the Comrades are, or will soon be doing, wherever they are. I wish that some of them would find their way out here to do it, for we need workers, more of them, very much.

"Comradely yours,
"Rosamond B. Cary."

I wish you now to read this letter sent from the Seaside Hospital in Long Beach, Cal. I am sure every one of you who reads this would like to send through me our hopes that this Comrade has made a big gain since her letter was written. It is easy to be good-natured when everything is all right. The real test is when everything is all wrong. Mrs. G. S. Pope, this Comrade, writes: "Flat on my back in a plaster cast for a bad leg I have been content to be able to keep the mosquito on the move even if he, or I should say she, only moves to the next cot. This is not benevolent but in a cast forty-eight days from arm to heel is not conducive to this virtue." She then gives us the correct answer to the proper time to kill a mosquito about which we talked a little while ago.

Out on the R. F. D. 2, Southbridge, Mass., is a Comrade, Mary A. Hurd, who "would like to correspond with some child living in the Western or Southwestern states."

Next week I plan to give you a picture of some of the "lunchers" down in Georgia, for whom we are raising our little Fund.

Comradely yours,

Mr Alden

EVERY BIBLE STUDENT NEEDS THE
Cross-Reference Digest of the Bible

You will be amazed at the wealth of material which the Cross-Reference Digest of the Bible contains and how much it will help you in readily securing all the information on any Bible subject. You will appreciate that this Digest renders you a service found in no other book.

What The Digest of the Bible Is

The Cross-Reference Digest of the Bible brings the topical analysis found in the Cross-Reference Bible within the reach of the masses. It contains all the foot-notes of the Cross-Reference Bible. These have been carefully revised by at least seven associate editors of the Cross-Reference Bible and by Drs. Jacobs and Weidner of the Lutheran Church and are therefore strictly undenominational in character. It has an alphabetical index of the verbs of the Bible and a complete list of persons and places.

What the Digest of the Bible Contains

The Digest of the Bible contains a classical, critical introduction to each book of the Bible, a scholarly digest of the teachings of all the Bible upon any one subject; a scholarly and classified division of all subjects so that any one can not only find at once the subject he wants but he can also find all the Bible says on any phase of it. It gives a concise index of all the Bible subjects as well as a topical analysis of them. It is really a Bible of the Bible and both a dictionary and an encyclopedia of the Bible and it is the Most Complete Topical Index of the Bible Ever Published.

If You Have only two books in your home, the Bible and one other, that other should be the Cross-Reference Digest of the Bible. It is a Scriptural library for the Sunday School Teacher, the College Teacher, the Student, the Preacher, and for every Christian.

It Helps You to connect incidents of the Old Testament with those of the new. Take for example, "The Walls of Jericho"—The Old Testament reference is Josh. 6:12-20; the New Testament reference is Heb. 11:30. There are 161 Old Testament incidents referred to in the New Testament.

Again, it gives all the New Testament passages that are quoted or paraphrased from the Old Testament. Take for example "Tribulations." The Old Testament reference is —Dan. 12:1; the New Testament reference is Matt. 24:21. There are 432 passages quoted or paraphrased in the New Testament from the Old.

This shows you the character of the Cross-Reference Digest of the Bible. It tells you all that the Bible says on any phase of that subject in a moment. It is perhaps—

The Only Work of Its Kind in the World

No matter what books you now have, you will find the Digest of the Bible one of the biggest helps that you can possibly find anywhere. It is a practical assistant, complete in research and within the reach of all.

If you are a Sunday School Teacher, or a teacher of a Bible Class, or a Bible Student, what would it be worth to you to be able to refer instantly to every phase of a certain life under investigation in your class study? If you are a preacher, what is the worth of a sermon which can be prepared a thousand per cent. better and with less work and worry than it costs at present? If you are a business man, can you measure the worth of a reference book which is to the Bible what the Century Dictionary is to literature? Dr. G. Campbell Morgan says of the Digest of the Bible: "I have found nothing better"; and Francis E. Clark of the United Society of Christian Endeavor says: "It will be of untold benefit to all."

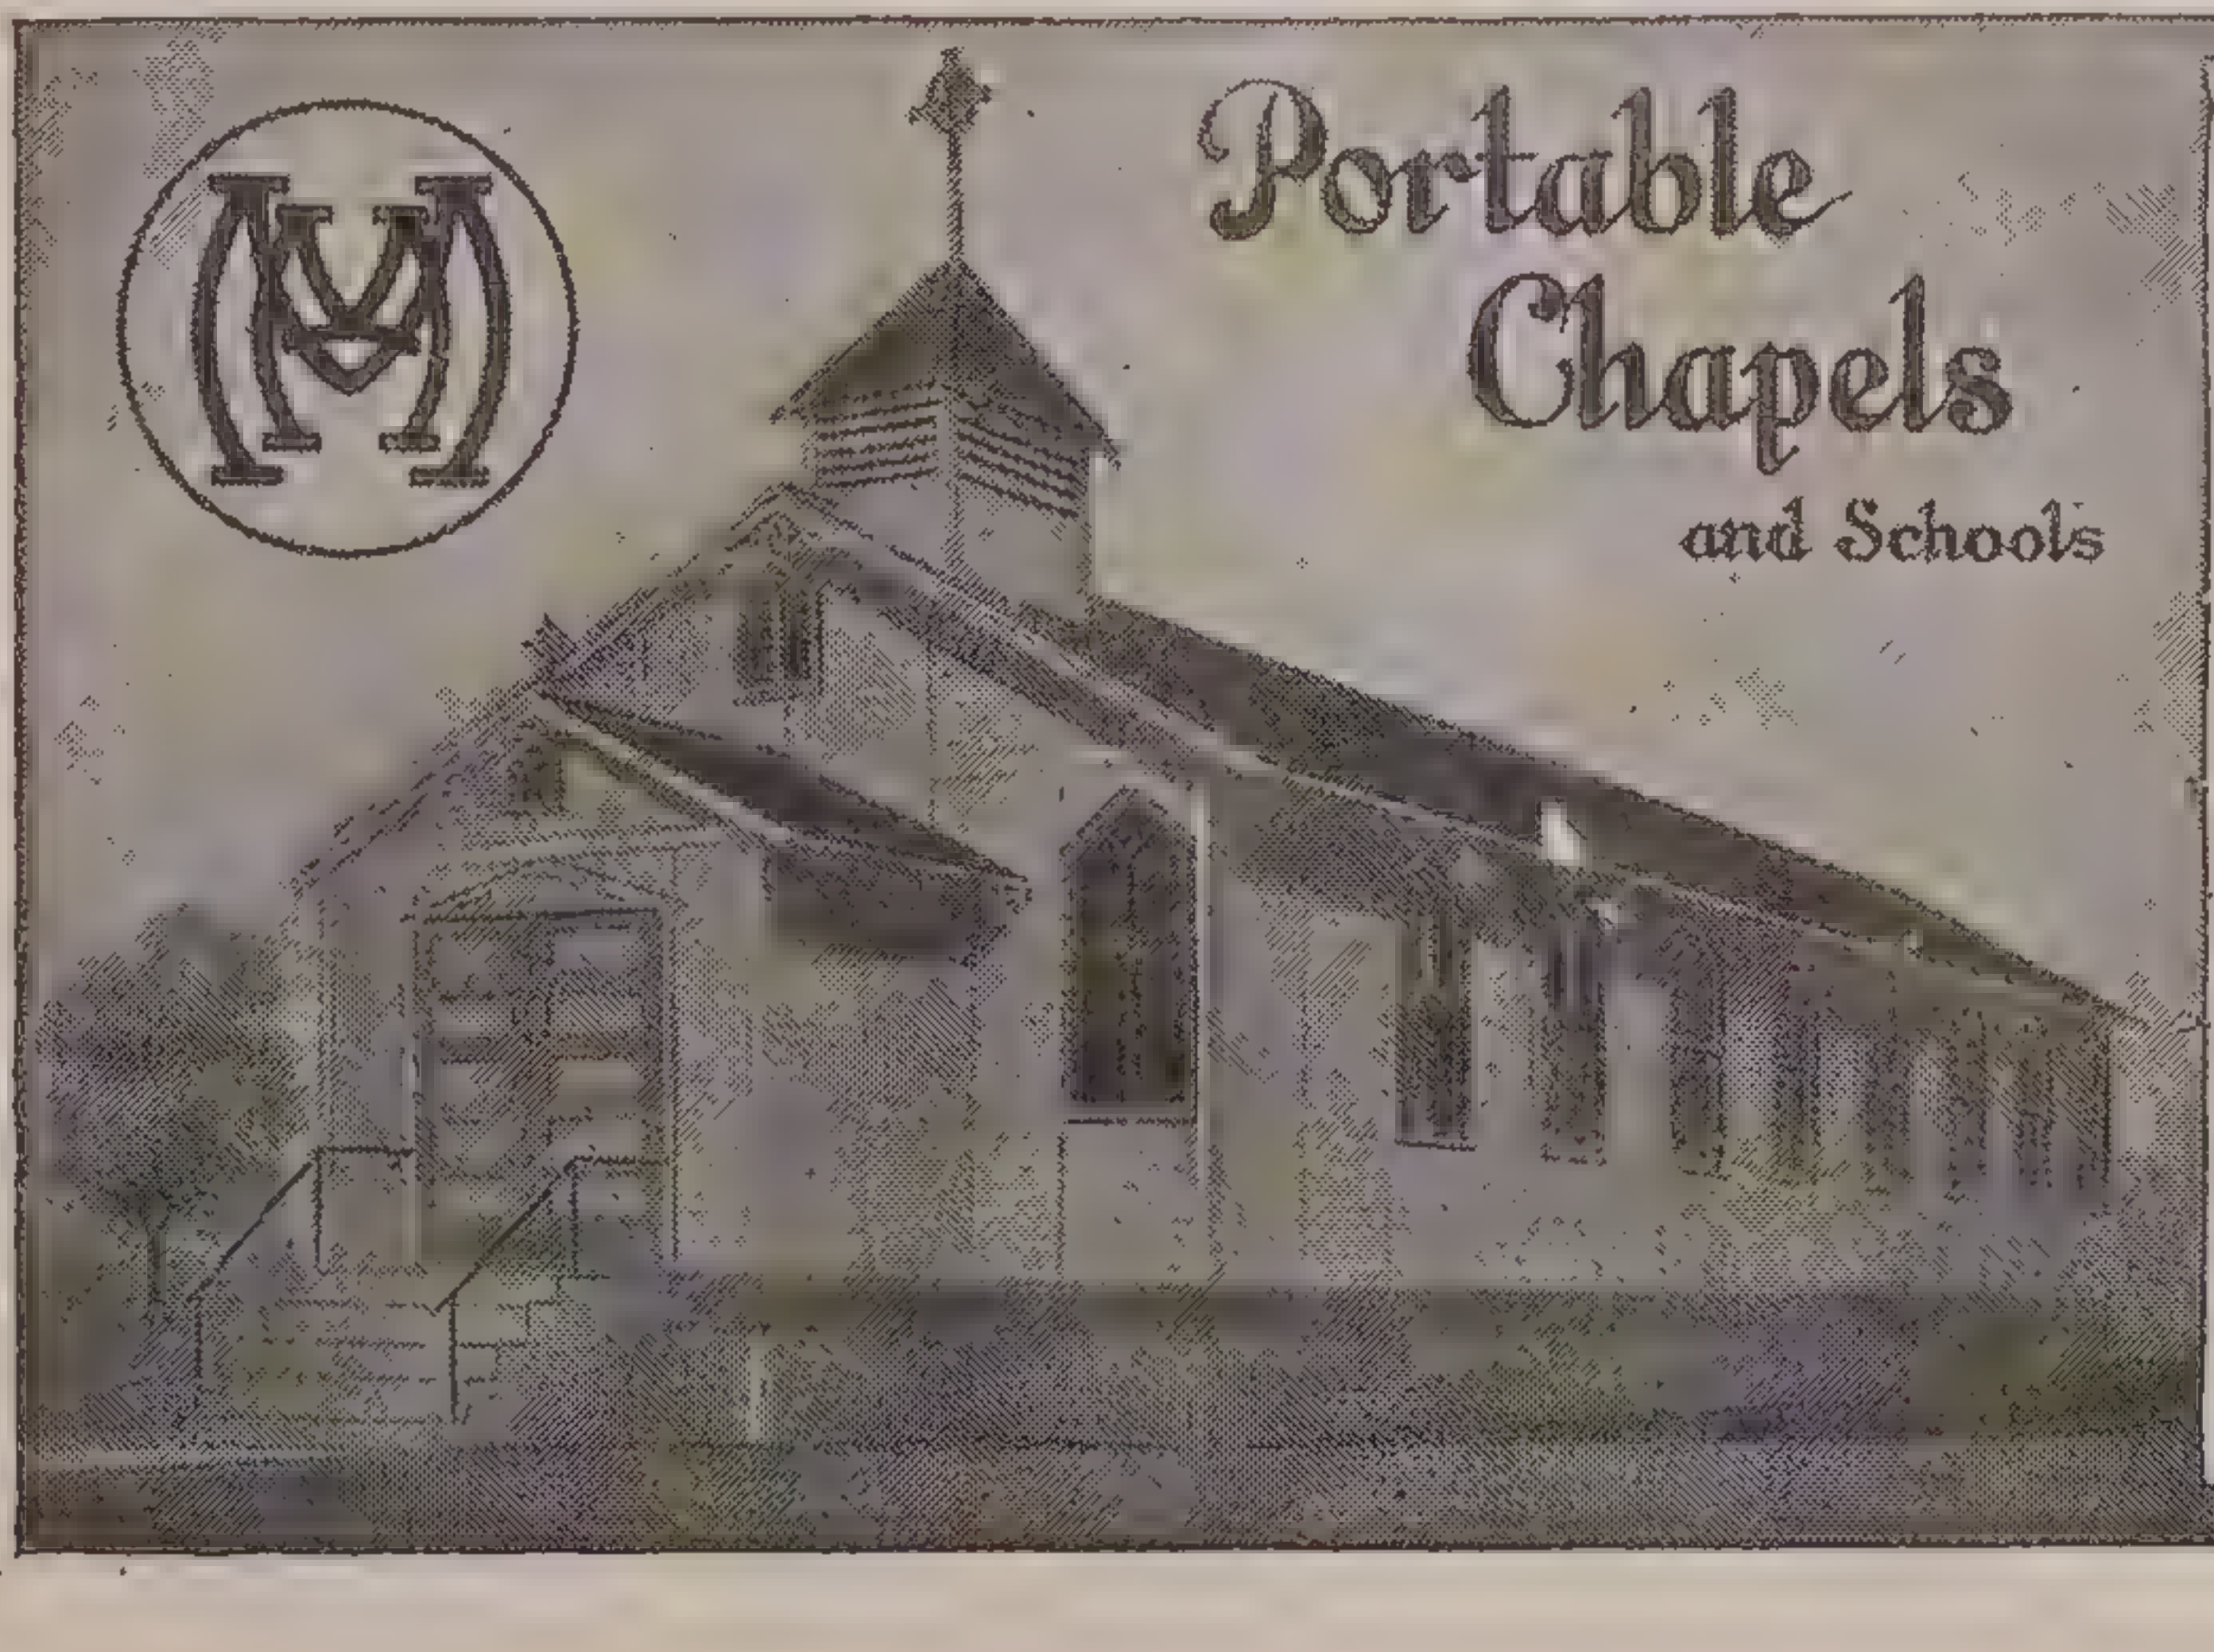
Agents interested in greatly increasing their present income will find this book a winner. Unrestricted territory. No competition. There is only one Digest of the Bible. Write for full particulars.

A $7.50 Book for $5.00

We were very fortunate to procure the stock for this valuable book before it became almost exhorbitant, and can therefore give you the benefit of the low price of $5.00 for this large and splendidly cloth-bound book. It is beautifully printed in 8 point or brevier type and contains 821 pages. Size 6" x 9" x 1-½". Send cash with order or if you prefer you may send only $2.00 as the first payment and the remainder in thirty days. Descriptive literature sent free upon request.

You need this book. Send your order for it today.

CROSS-REFERENCE BIBLE CO., 2209 W. Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.



For Twenty Years

M. & M. Portable Chapels have been giving excellent satisfaction to many denominations. They are scattered over the United States and in mission fields in foreign lands. They are ready-built in sections, with locks, glass, window fasteners, etc. in place. Can be erected in a very short time by unskilled labor with no tools but wrench and screw driver. Building Committees, Pastors, Church Extension and Missionary Boards should have our free catalog on file. Send for a copy today.

MERSHON & MORLEY CO.
92 Main St., Saginaw Mich.

IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE

The Wisconsin Conference

The gathering of the Wisconsin Congregational Conference at Madison, Oct. 12-14, was notable because it was the first joint session of this Conference with the Wisconsin Presbyterian Synod. Separate business sessions were held, but the two bodies united for the Communion service and the two evening sessions. The first of these was held at First Church and was addressed by Pres. H. C. King of Oberlin upon "America's Present Task." The second joint session was held in Christ Presbyterian Church and was addressed by Prof. C. B. McAfee of McCormick Seminary, Chicago, upon "Christianity, a Faith and a Force." Fine music was furnished the first evening by the large vested choir of First Church, led by Prof. E. B. Gordon of the university, and the second evening by the exceptionally fine quartet of Christ Church. The devotional services were conducted throughout the sessions by Rev. H. E. Peabody, and were impressive and helpful.

A Book for Business Men and Women

Roger W. Babson's

FORWARD-LOOKING WORK

Fundamentals of Prosperity

WHAT THEY ARE---WHENCE THEY COME

A book much needed to-day, by the President of Babson's Statistical Organization, on "Strengthening the Foundation." WORTH MANY TIMES ITS COST!

BOARDS, NET $1.00

F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

Among the speakers from outside the state who added to the interest and profit of the meeting were Secretaries F. L. Moore and R. W. Gammon on the Congregational World Movement, Sec. F. L. Hayes on the Pilgrim Fund, Mrs. C. H. Taintor on the C. C. B. S., and Mrs. Timothy Harrison, Vice-President of the Woman's Home Missionary Federation, on its work.

After much discussion it was decided to continue the annual apportionment of the Conference to Endeavor Academy. Rev. H. W. Carter was re-elected pastor-at-large for one year and the Superintendent was advised to secure additional missionary pastors to be in charge of such regions as call for special care.

The constitution was amended so as to make one member of each of the two Women's State Missionary Societies members of the Board from the state-at-large. Mrs. H. E. Peabody was elected for the W. B. M. I. and Mrs. John Faville for the W. H. M. U.

The Conference voted to accept the $185,000 quota as recommended by the National Council for 1921.

Have You Problems In Your Sunday School?

When in Boston you can have a personal consultation with our national experts on religious education in the

Exhibit of Church School Equipment

MONDAYS, FROM 1 TO 5 P.M.

Room 500, Congregational House

14 Beacon Street

On the afternoon of November 22nd

Mary Alice Emerson, Ph.D.

OF BOSTON UNIVERSITY

Editor of the Department of Religious Drama in the Congregationalist

Will give consultation with pastors and Sunday School workers regarding the growing use of Religious Drama in our Churches. There will be a full exhibit of equipment and literature which will enable any Church and Sunday School to supplement the great teachings of Christianity in the most vivid form of all—The Pageant.

Pastors, Superintendents, Sunday School Workers it will pay you to plan to be present

Nebraska State Conference

The 64th Annual Nebraska Conference was held in York, Oct. 18-21. This was by far the largest Conference in the history of the state. There were 183 registered delegates and in addition nearly an equal number of young people who attended some part of the meeting.

York is a convenient Congregational center, and has a good reputation for entertaining religious gatherings. It is known as the city that never had a saloon. The old adage, "Be good and you will be lonesome," is not so true now as it once was. However, York has this advantage, it has been good long enough to have formed an appetite for the better things. Her people take delight in Christian hospitality. The Conference was graciously cared for although there were double the number of delegates expected. The church was temporarily without a pastor, but they arranged for their pastor-elect, Rev. George J. Weber of Ravenna, to act during the Conference.

In commemoration of the tercentenary, the program was built around the general theme, "Our Pilgrim Inheritance." The theme gave tone to the whole program and produced a pleasing and inspiring unity. The speakers on this subject were Rev. J. H. Andress, Pres. J. N. Bennett, Mrs. A. E. Sheldon, W. C. Rundin, Rev. B. J. Trickey, Prof. A. G. Heyhoe, Rev. Louis Hieb and Rev. Frank G. Smith. The sermon, which was preached by Rev. J. J. Klopp of Stanton, used Abraham as the Pilgrim and "the first Congregationalist." These addresses by these speakers and others are to be printed in a special souvenir edition of the State Year Book.

The historical theme inevitably gave the meeting a backward look, but it was just as pronounced in its forward look. The Congregational World Movement for 1921 was fully and heartily indorsed. The state voted to accept its $120,000 share of the $5,000,000 for benevolence, and added $70,000 to this amount for Doane College and Franklin Academy. This with other obligations will make a budget for benevolences for 1921 of $200,000, which is about $13 per resident member. The State Board

Walker's the Best Concordance

Over 50,000 more references than any other low priced concordance to the Bible. 980 pages. Cloth $3.00. ½ leather $3.75. Postage 20 cents.

14 Beacon Street
Boston

THE PILGRIM PRESS

19 W. Jackson St.
Chicago

A Thanksgiving Letter from a Paris Padre

The Americans in Paris to the Americans in the United States send greetings.

Dear Friends in America:

During the past few months some of us have been trying to tell you of the rapidly increasing American life in Paris which calls for a greatly Enlarged Program on the part of the American Church in the Rue de Berri.

And now that we are approaching the Thanksgiving Season (which for Americans has become thrice hallowed since we link with it our Armistice Day Celebration in memory of 70,000 young American Patriots whose bodies lie buried in French soil) we wish to remind you afresh of the situation in Paris which we are trying, with your sympathetic help, to meet.

American construction firms and other business enterprises are sending over thousands of engineers, architects, commercial salesmen, and whole office forces. Their life centers in Paris.

Here, also, we must face the challenge of meeting the social and religious needs of a great body of American Students in the Latin Quarter. Before the war there were 2,500 of them. In the near future there will be many times that number, for indications are that the 18,000 American students who went yearly to Germany will be coming to France.

The ultimate realization of our Enlarged Program will require two million dollars (one million for a central site and new Church Edifice and Parish Hall, a half million for a Student Club Building in the Latin Quarter, and a half million endowment). From present contributions and assurances we are encouraged to believe that the denominational boards, various churches and individuals in America will provide that sum within three years. But there are immediate needs which cannot wait our three-year pledges.

Practically all of the American welfare organizations which did such splendid work during the War and Armistice period have been withdrawn from Paris. Today there is imperative need for an adequate meeting place for American young men and women, under wholesome influences, offering an atmosphere which the theaters and restaurants cannot provide.

Therefore we must have $150,000 at once to purchase and equip a building which shall house a growing Sunday School, men's and women's clubs, and other social activities—"the most attractive spot in Paris for young Americans away from home."

The readers of this letter are earnestly urged to contribute generously that this most fitting and serviceable memorial fund may be raised at once. Checks should be made out to Samuel W. Thurber, Treasurer, and mailed to American Church in Paris Headquarters, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Room 805.

We assure you that the American Church in Paris is not primarily concerned with a select group of privileged tourists. Our main concern is the clean, efficient, purposeful lives of those young Americans who are studying and engaging in business. For their sakes, and in grateful memory of 70,000 compatriots who gave their lives, will you not make a pledge to this work?

Rev. Stanley Ross Fisher.

Co-Pastor with Dr. Chauncey Goodrich.

The American Church in Paris.

—Adv.

had previously secured the services of Rev. W. A. Tyler as Associate Superintendent, who will head up the campaign in the state.

There was one comparatively new feature in the Conference—a young people's session covering a full afternoon and evening. This was in the heart of the program and an integral part of it. The purpose was to interest the churches more definitely in the young people and to enlist more of the young people in the work of the churches. Messages were given by a few carefully selected young people and by some of our younger ministers, who are doing successful work with young people. The climax of this session was the presentation of the pageant, The Pilgrims, written by Miss Bates.

One of the established features of the program is a Home Missionary half-day, closing with a fellowship banquet. A much-looked-for event of the afternoon is the unfurling of an Honor Roll bearing the names of the churches which paid their apportionment in full to Home Missions. This year the roll reached from the high ceiling to the floor and included 115 names.

One of the most interesting features was the introduction of the new pastors who came to the state the past year. This is an annual event and Superintendent Hanford is especially felicitous in his introductions. This year there were 14 new names but not all were present. Some of the new men present were Rev. D. E. Thomas, student pastor of the State University, Rev. C. J. Christianson of Grand Island, Rev. J. W. Foster of Comstock, and Rev. W. A. Cave of Crete.

The devotions were led by Rev. J. A. Jenkins, President of Union College, Chicago.

The Conference was favored by the helpful service of a large number of representatives from the denomination at large. From Chicago there were Dr. R. W. Gammon, representing the Congregational World Movement; Rev. W. F. English, Jr., the American Board; Rev. F. L. Hayes, the Pilgrim and Annuity Funds, and Rev. F. N. White, the A. M. A. New York City sent two: Rev. F. L. Moore of the Home Missionary Society, and Rev. Malcolm Dana, Secretary of Rural Work. Mrs. Lydia Lord Davis, Oberlin, spoke for women's work in foreign missions.

The moderators were Rev. F. G. Smith, Omaha, and Rev. O. O. Smith, Fremont. Pres. J. N. Bennett of Crete presided over two sessions. Rev. S. I. Hanford was re-elected Superintendent of Congregational work for a term of three years. The next Conference will be held in Crete in connection with the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Doane College and the organization of the Crete church.

C. G. M.

A Successful Church Institute

Continuing a plan inaugurated with great success last year, Center, New Haven, Ct., Rev. O. E. Maurer, pastor, is holding a second Church Institute from Oct. 6 to Dec. 7. The Institute is held on successive Tuesday afternoons and evenings. At 4.30 o'clock the children and young people of the parish meet for talks and stories under the direction of the pastor and the associate pastor, Rev. J. D. Prigmore. A stereopticon and moving picture films are used in connection with the programs. At 6 o'clock a cafeteria supper is served, after which the people go to one of the four following courses as they may elect:

Course A—The Near East and Christianity, conducted by John C. Archer, Professor of Missions in Yale Divinity School.

Course B—Christianizing America, conducted by Edgar L. Heermance, formerly Congregational Home Missionary in Minnesota.

Course C—The Moral and Religious Education of Children, conducted by Luther A. Weigle, professor of Religious Education in the Yale Divinity School.

Fleming H. Revell Company
NEW BOOKS

A New Mind for the New Age
HENRY CHURCHILL KING
President of Oberlin College

Have we any right to speak of a new age? This new volume of "The Cole Lectures" is a work of great weight in these times of conflicting opinions and puzzling uncertainties.
Net, $1.50

"Lest We Forget"
HUGH BLACK

The author of "Friendship," gives a sane, common-sense view of Democracy, Patriotism, State Rights, Pacifism, "The League" and other matters in a book much needed today.
Net, $1.50

Fundamentals of Prosperity
ROGER W. BABSON
What They Are and Where They Come From

The "statistician of Wellesley Hills" is probably the first economist to come forward with the claim that human souls constitute America's greatest undeveloped resources.
Net, $1.00

A People's Life of Christ
J. PATERSON-SMYTH

A clean, constructive, unbroken view of the life of Jesus, by the author of "THE GOSPEL OF THE HEREAFTER." A book for which we've long waited.
Net, $3.50

Quiet Talks About Life After Death
S. D. GORDON

A new volume of "Quiet Talks" on a subject of more than today. "One cannot describe these 'quiet talks,' they must be read to be thoroughly appreciated."—Christian Observer.
Net, $1.25

Evangelism
WILLIAM E. BIEDERWOLF, D. D.

Its Justification, Its Operation and Its Value.

The "Lectures delivered at Princeton Theological Seminary" are the basis for Dr. Biederwolf's valued treatise on the evangelistic methods best calculated to secure permanent results.
Net, $2.00

Spiritism and the Fallen Angels
JAMES M. GRAY, D. D.
From a Biblical Viewpoint.

Beginning the present-day revival of Spiritism and how to meet it, Dr. Gray harks back to the earliest recorded history of the human race.
Net, $1.25

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS

NEW YORK:
158 Fifth Ave.
CHICAGO:
17 N. Wabash Ave.

REVELL'S AT ALL BOOKSELLERS BOOKS

The mark of a book written to meet a need

BOOKS WITH PURPOSE
AP

The Religious Outlook Series

Publications making available the research work of "The Committee on the War and the Religious Outlook."

The War and Religion, a Bibliography. Cloth, $1.50.

Religion among American Men. Cloth, $1.50.

The Missionary Outlook in the Light of the War. Cloth, $2.00.

The Church and Industrial Reconstruction. Cloth, $2.00.

And a list of timely pamphlets.

Write for a folder of details.

The Christian Adventure

A. HERBERT GRAY

Shows that Christianity "embodies the one summons to men and women that is adequate to their humanity, and offers the one hope of solving the problems of civilization." Paper boards, $1.25.

My Three Keys, and Other Talks to Boys and Girls

WILLIAM D. MURRAY

A collection of forty-five talks which Mr. Murray has given successfully during his years of Sunday school experience. They provide a variety of topics for all the special occasions of the Sunday school year. Vellum, $1.50.

Boy Behavior

W. H. BURGER

A "Boy Life" Series book.

A non-technical presentation of some of the results of modern psychological thought and research as applied to work with boys. Cloth, $1.25.

The Religious Experience of Israel

WILLIAM J. HUTCHINS

A survey of the Old Testament literature showing the moral and religious development of the ancient Hebrews. The book is notable for its blending of thorough scholarship and warm human sympathy. Arranged for daily study for half a year. Cloth, $1.90.

At your Bookstore, or from us

ASSOCIATION PRESS
347 Madison Ave., New York

Publication Dept., International Comm., Y. M. C. A.

Course D—The Theory and Practice of Group Play, conducted by Miss Carin H. Degermark and Fred Weber, directors of Recreation and Community Service in New Haven.

At 8.50 all assemble in the chapel for Bible study. Prof. Charles A. Dinsmore of Yale Divinity School is presenting a study of "The Six Greatest Chapters in the Old Testament." The sessions end with family prayers.

Dr. Hadden Closes Long Pastorate

Rev. Archibald Hadden has resigned the pastorate of FIRST, MUSKEGON, MICH., after 28 years' service. It would be difficult to estimate the great influence that Dr. Hadden has had in Muskegon, not only in his own church, but in the city at large. He has also been a tower of strength in the State Conference and in all the doings of the denomination in the state during his long pastorate. The reasons assigned for his resignation are the ill health of Mrs. Hadden and the growing duties of the parish. Dr. Hadden expects to close the work the first of January and he and Mrs. Hadden will spend some time in California. In leaving the field at this time he feels that he is leaving the work at high tide and in good condition for a successor.

Dr. Hadden came to Muskegon in the slack times that followed the World's Fair and did his first work under the conditions of the great business depression following 1892. The church membership has grown from less than 300 to more than 600. During his pastorate the Julia E. Hackley Memorial Hall, which is a part of the church plant, has been erected and a trust fund of $20,000 has been received from Mrs. Hackley. When Charles H. Hackley left a large sum of money for the Hackley Hospital, Dr. Hadden was named as one of the two men who should handle the funds and from the dedication of the building in 1904 until the present time he has been President of the Board. He was a member of the commission that drew up the new city charter and was elected a city commissioner at the first election. He has served the denomination as a trustee of the State Conference, and as Moderator, and in other offices.

Special Sermon Topics

Rev. J. H. Batten, FIRST, SANTA BARBARA, CAL., has been preaching a series of sermons on "The Challenges of God," the sub-topics being: "God's Challenge to Man in Nature," "God's Challenge to Man in Himself," "God's Challenge to Man in His Social Relations," and "God's Challenge to Man in His Divine Possibilities."

Rev. H. N. Dascomb, of PLYMOUTH, DENVER, COL., is preaching Sunday mornings on "Pilgrim Personalities and Principles." Among the characters studied are: "Hooper, the Martyr to a Puritan Conscience," "Robinson, the Advocate of a Liberated Religion," "Bradford, the Paternal Governor," "Brewster, the Man of Affairs," "Winslow, the Publicist and Diplomat," "Standish, the Exponent of Enforced Justice," and "Eliot, the Apostle to the Disinherited."

From East to West

MAINE

Miss Crowell Ordained at Monmouth

Miss Bessie F. Crowell, pastor of FIRST, MONMOUTH, received ordination at Monmouth on Oct. 20. The service was held in the evening and was largely attended. The ordination sermon was a masterly one, preached by Dr. J. H. Ecob of Augusta. Rev. W. H. Palmer of Hallowell, Assistant Superintendent of State Work, made the ordaining prayer. The charge to the candidate was given by Rev. H. S. Capron of Bangor. Rev. O. E. Barnard of Winslow gave the right hand of fellowship and in well-chosen words gave a cordial welcome to Miss Crowell to the fellowship of the Kennebec Association and the church at large.

Miss Crowell became pastor of the church at Monmouth, Dec. 1, 1919. She has had wide experience in Christian work, having been a missionary in India for seven years, and so brings with her into the ministry a broad knowledge and experience gained by work with other races and in other lands.

MASSACHUSETTS

Atlantic, Quincy, Builds House for Pastor

When the pastor of ATLANTIC, QUINCY, had been forced to move four times, the church decided that despite present building conditions, it was time to build a parsonage. It is the third building erected during the pastorate of Rev. Thomas W. Davison. In 1910, the Atlantic Church was erected; in 1914 the church at Squantum, and now the parsonage at Atlantic. The parsonage is of stucco. The living room is 24 feet by 16 feet, and nine other rooms are in proportion. The cost was $8,300 besides the land and a large amount of labor given by pastor and people and donations by many men along their own lines of business. The interior finishing and appointments, the heating and lighting are the best and worthily represent the loyalty of the people to their church and their pastor.

Plans for New Church Building

UNION CHURCH OF WATERTOWN, located in West Watertown and incorporated in August, 1917, is seeking to raise money to enable the church to erect an edifice to house its various activities. Since the date of incorporation the church has purchased two lots of land valued at about $1,000 and plans have been drawn for a church building. The basement has already been dug and the walls built at a cost of nearly

Peloubet's Graded Quarterlies

Adapted to the Needs of Each Grade

Edited by Leading S. S. Workers

The advantages in the study of a uniform text are found in uniform family Bible study; a common subject in teachers'-meetings; substitute teaching made possible; fresh texts and treatments each year; additional material found in PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES and denominational and secular papers.

Teachers' Quarterlies

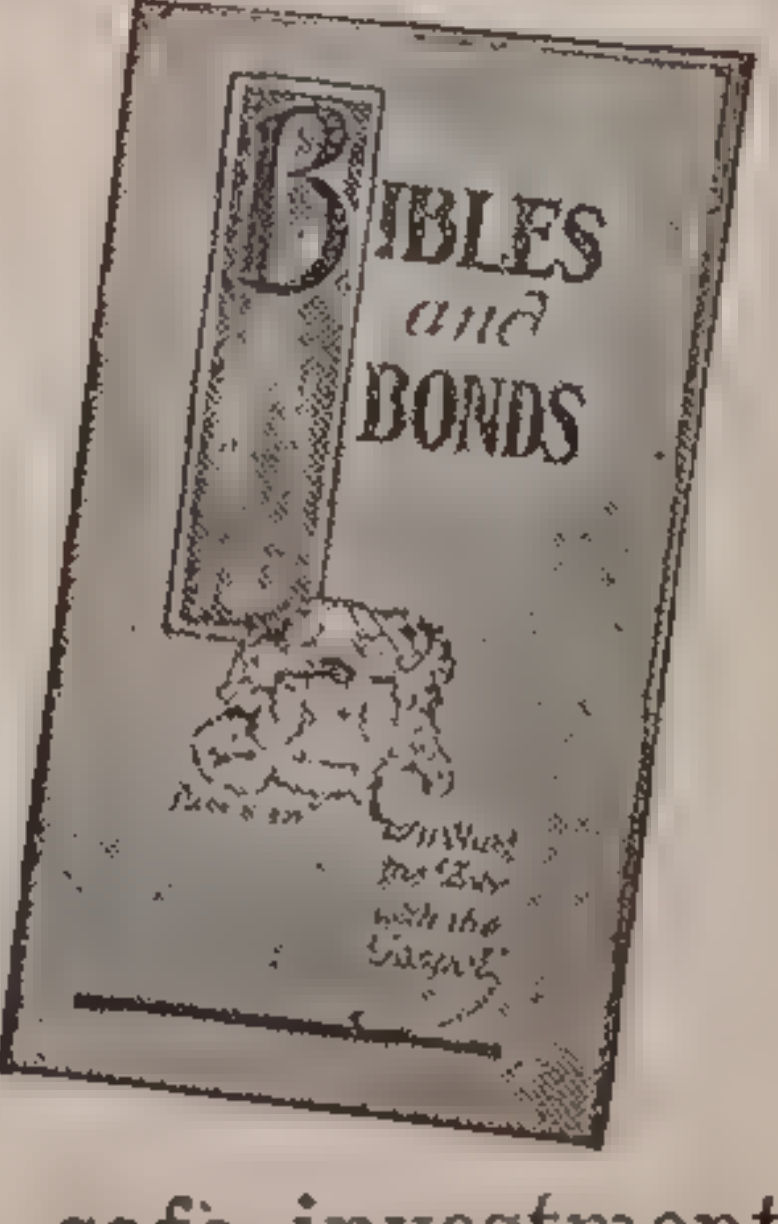
Very popular with progressive teachers, because exceedingly helpful in fitting the mind to present the lesson to the scholar with vividness and clearness that holds the pupil's interest.

Send for Sample Copies

W. A. WILDE COMPANY 120 BOYLSTON STREET BOSTON, MASS.

Western Office: Rand-McNally Building, Chicago, Ill.

Based on the New Uniform Lessons



Write for this Booklet

"Bibles and Bonds" tells the interesting story of a world-wide work and a safe investment yielding as high as 8%.

Ask for Booklet J

American Bible Society
Bible House Astor Place New York

$3,000 more but on account of the high cost of materials and labor the members of Union Church have been unable to complete the building. They are sending out urgent requests for gifts to enable the building operations to go on, for it is felt that the need for a church in this section of Watertown is keen and one which should be met as soon as possible.

Dr. Holt Speaks Before Boston Ministers

Rev. A. E. Holt of the National Congregational Social Service Commission was the speaker at the Boston Ministers' Meeting Nov. 8 on the question, "Was the Steel Strike Report of the Interchurch a Mistake?"

Mr. Holt said if there is one place where the Interchurch report fails to do justice to the situation, it is in depicting it as a spontaneous movement instead of one link in a long chain of struggles for industrial freedom. The two parties in the conflict are the Steel Trust, autocratic in its overhead organization, and the American Federation of Labor, which is on the whole rather organized against production. The church is under obligation to gather the facts in regard to its program for brotherhood.

The findings of the report belong to the realm of fact and not of theory and are not invalidated even if some who helped in the investigation have radical tendencies. It seems to be established that the employees averaged over 68 hours a week, working longer hours in 1914 than in 1910 and that the earnings of most were below the minimum of comfort set by government experts, while the Steel Trust increased their undivided earnings three hundred million dollars during the war. There was an absence of radicalism in the strike. It was a contest for control. The church cannot afford to put itself in the helpless position of indorsing either party. Public opinion did not back up the strike because Labor showed no disposition of assuming responsibility for production. Democracy is dependent upon intelligent, conscientious public opinion. It is conceivable that if the church of America had spoken 75 years ago, there might have come freedom for the Negro in an ordered way which would have been best for the Negro. It is conceivable that if at this time the church should take its stand for an ordered progress toward democracy, the democracy that is willing to accept responsibility because the church has an insight into the nature of American men, something may be achieved in the spirit of good will by the slow process of experimentation instead of its being brought about by revolution.

NEW YORK

Mr. Merriam Enters New Field of Labor

On Nov. 1, Rev. G. E. Merriam assumed the pastorate of First, Buffalo, after nearly four years of service with Calvinistic, Fitchburg, Mass. He has felt at home in Fitchburg, for he spent his boyhood in the not distant beautiful town of Greenville, N. H., where his father was the honored pastor for 35 years and where for several generations the family has dwelt, their residence and ownership being commemorated in "Merriam Hill."

Formerly associated with the late Dr. N. M. Waters who saw in him great possibilities, Mr. Merriam has in the important field offered by the Calvinistic Church worked out his plans according to his high ideals of thought and service. Nurtured from childhood for the Christian ministry his mother's prayers and his father's culture have shown their fruition in his spirituality. Most congenial seems his coming to Buffalo, for the call has been extended in a "united and devoted spirit" by a church that has an enviable record for loyalty to its pastor, for spirituality in worship and for generosity in benevolence.

Calvinistic, during Mr. Merriam's pastorate, has received 183 members, a net gain of 107. In a single year (not calendar) 132 were received. During the influenza epidemic a suspension in the church services was utilized by Mr. Merriam in making 400 calls. Benevolences have increased. The number of givers has doubled and an endowemnt has been established.

R. W. D.

South, Brooklyn, Plans a Full Program

South, Brooklyn, Rev. R. A. McConnell, pastor, has a large clientele of Scandinavian families, normally Protestant, who are gradually being brought into the fellowship of the church. In years gone by the chapel of the church on Fourth St. ministered entirely to this part of the congregation. Now, with the spreading out of the population, the whole work is centering more and more in the home church building; and this winter a special effort will be made to focus all the church life at this point. To this end a series of mothers' meetings are being arranged to be held in the refinished lecture room of the church, and the Sunday evening services are planned with a view to the special needs of the young people of the church and neighborhood. These services, while being evangelical, will be somewhat popularized and will be followed by a social hour, with refreshments, in the parish house. The work for the young people at South Church Chapel centers in the Boy Scouts under the direction of Dr. E. G. Warner and the Girl Scouts under the supervision of Miss Willetts. With these organizations a campaign of education is carried on in sanitation, ventilation, and various other lines of health and hygiene, as well as in the deeper truths of Christian citizenship.

In the midweek meeting of the church, Mr. McConnell is taking up "A Study of Jesus Christ, as Mark Knew Him." Mr. McConnell describes this as an attempt to approach the life of Christ from as fresh a standpoint as possible, trying to get a picture of him that is not credal or theological in its outlines, but fixing the attention upon the outstanding points

Recent Publications of

T. & T. Clark of Edinburgh

The Bible Doctrine of Society in Its Historical Evolution
By the Rev. C. Ryder Smith, D.D., Wesleyan College, Richmond, Surrey
8vo. $4.50 net

Sociology is at present a subject of pressing importance. This book is the first modern attempt to give a systematic account of Biblical teaching thereon. The Author traces the Evolution of Hebrew Society from Patriarchal times, and outlines its development and progress toward the Final Ideal as contained in the New Testament. He then shows how far Christian Society has advanced, and suggests rules for future guidance.

The Resurrection of Christ
An Examination of the Apostolic Belief and Its Significance for the Christian Faith
By the Rev. John Mackintosh Shaw
12mo. $3.25 net

"We have been particularly attracted by the singularly full and strong discussion of the Resurrection of Christ by Professor J. M. Shaw of the Presbyterian College, Halifax, Nova Scotia. It is, we think, the best and most comprehensive handling of the august theme which is accessible to the English reader. . . . Professor Shaw takes up every point so far as we know; and does so with frankness, honesty, and cogency.—Sir William Robertson Nicoll, LL.D., in The British Weekly.

Divine Overruling
By William Sanday, D.D.
112 pages. 8vo. $2.75 net

Essays on the Place of Comparative Religion in Theological Study, Natural and Revealed Religion, the Nature of Miracle, and the Meaning of the Atonement. The underlying thought is that not only the field of what we call special revelation but the whole process of religious evolution must be included in one great divine scheme, with its human side of progressive experiment.

New Volumes in the Bible Class Primers Series

The Gospel and the Epistles of St. John
By James Alex. Robertson, M. A.
129 pages. Paper. 40 cents net

The author discusses the general character of the documents, the home and spiritual environment of the writings, the author, his testimony and symbolical method. Theologically, he presents John's unique portrait of Christ, the purpose of Jesus' mission, the place of the cross in John's thought, the work of the Holy Spirit, and the tests by which the Christian may know he has eternal life.

The Prophetic Literature of the Old Testament
By Prof. Alexander R. Gordon
121 pages. Paper. 40 cents net

The author presents the best results of recent scholarship which has done so much for the proper understanding of prophecy. He believes that the words of the prophets have a profound bearing on our own spiritual and social needs and that an understanding of them will help in the solution of the many perplexing problems which confront us.

A List of the Bible Class Primers Sent on Application

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS
597-599 Fifth Ave., New York

GIVE YOUR PASTOR A NEW BOOK

THE AMBASSADORS OF GOD
By S. PARKES CADMAN

Dr. Cadman shows his younger colleagues how to take the same few, great, experimental truths used by their eminent predecessors and shape them to the acceptance and aid of this generation. Present to your minister and provide him a feast. $3.50

THE POWER OF PRAYER
By VARIOUS WRITERS

A comparative study "of the most instinctive and compelling power in our twentieth century world" according to the twenty odd living contributors from all over the globe. "The whole scope of prayer is covered beyond anything undertaken in recent times." —The United Presbyterian. Read one or two chapters yourself and pass on to the dominie. $4.00

THE RELIGION OF A LAYMAN
By CHARLES R. BROWN

Sets forth the sort of religion which Dr. Brown finds makes a steady and telling appeal to the right-minded layman. How this preacher does it will be worth your pastor's study. $1.25 (Probably)

RELIGION AND BUSINESS
By ROGER W. BABSON
(Babson's Statistical Organization)

"Isn't the fact that the Church survives and prospers under conditions that would kill any other industry," says Mr. Babson, "proof of itself that the Church has something worth while?" Buy one copy for yourself and give the dominie another. $2.50 (Probably)

THE RELIGIOUS CONSCIOUSNESS
By PROF. J. B. PRATT

"We are not likely to get a nearer approach to a popular psychology of religion," says Prof. George A. Coe. "In particular," he continues, "this work is unique for range and variety of data within its chosen field." Your preacher will be at his best in the pulpit during the weeks that he is digesting this volume. $4.00

CHURCH FINANCE AND SOCIAL ETHICS
By BISHOP F. J. McCONNELL

Discusses the Church in its own dealings with wealth as a solicitor of funds, as an employer of labor, as an investor in securities, as an owner of property, as a philanthropist dispenser of relief, etc. A book for the man who pays the bills (The Layman) and the man who collects them (The Minister). $1.50 (Probably)

ITEMS FOR YOUR NEXT ORDER
Snowden: Personality of God.......... $1.75
Slattery: How to Pray......(Probably) 1.50
Wood: The Heroes of Early Israel...... 2.00
Dummelow: One Volume Bible Commentary.... 3.75
Moulton: New Testament (Abridged).... 2.25
Enelow: A Jewish View of Jesus...... 1.50

THE MACMILLAN CO., Publishers,
64-66 Fifth Ave., New York City, N. Y.

in the spirit of Jesus, the spirit with which he met the great problems of life rather than any concrete application of his words.

Some Aspects of International Christianity

The Mendenhall Lectures, Fifth Series, Delivered at DePauw University

By JOHN KELMAN

Six lectures on the relation of Christianity to international subjects. Dr. Kelman is a keen student of Christianity, and speaks out of wide experience.

The author's effort is a fine piece of work—in the reviewer's opinion, the best so far from his pen.

It shows a finished scholarship, a trained mind and a sure touch, a glowing spirituality, a clear vision, robust common sense, all in a style that makes reading a luxury as well as satisfying. —Christian Intelligencer.

Price, Net, $1.00, postpaid.

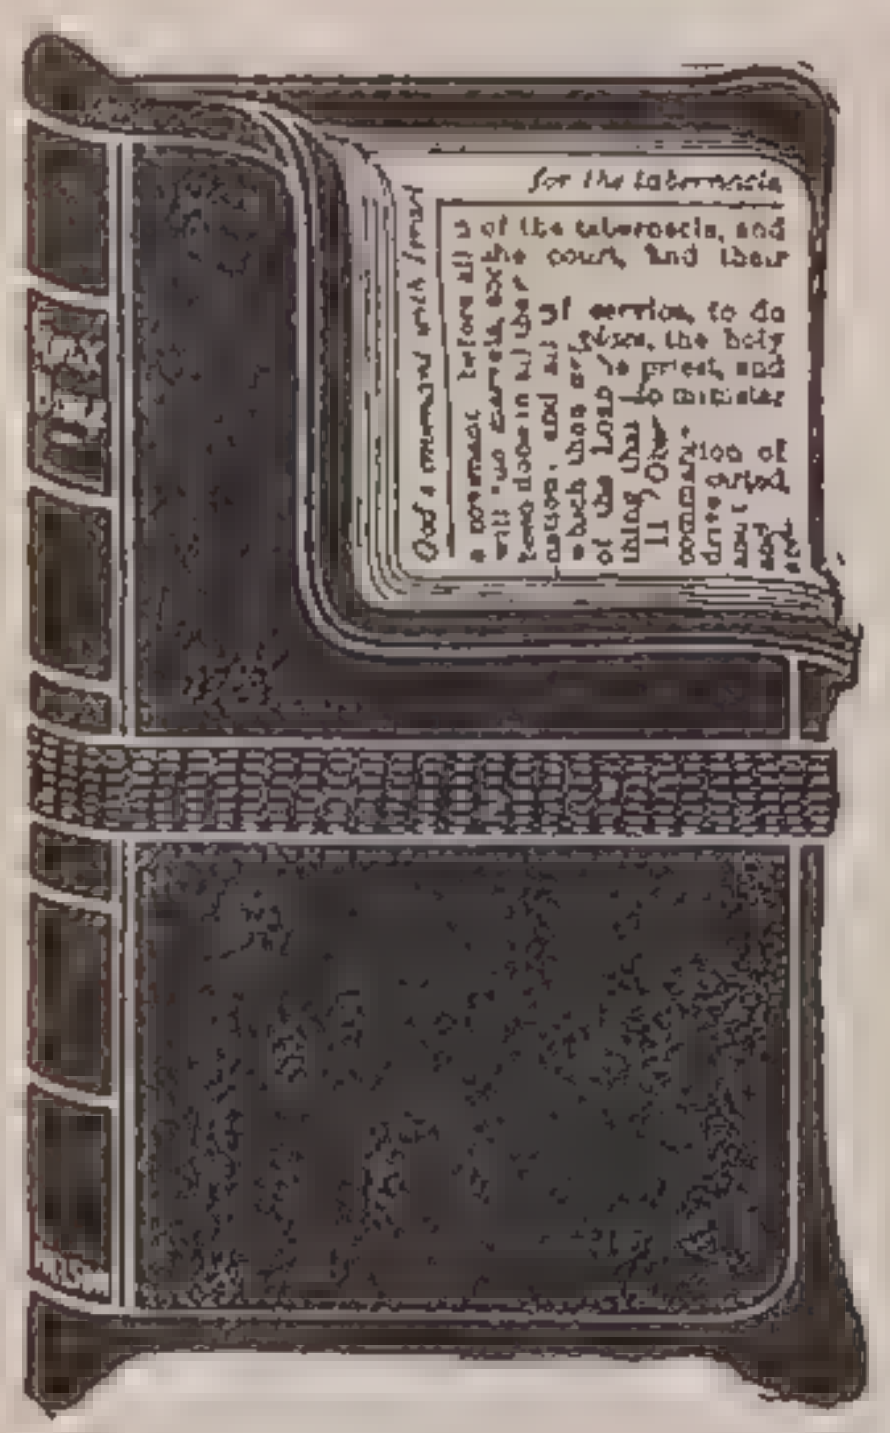
AT THE BETTER BOOK SHOPS

THE ABINGDON PRESS

New York Cincinnati

WHERE DID WE GET THE BIBLE?

Talks on the Bible—No. 3



How many books are in the Bible?

Who wrote the books of the Bible?

In what form was the Bible first produced?

In what language was the Old Testament first written?

In what language was the New Testament first written?

All these questions and dozens more of interest to you are answered in the Story of Our Bible. Write today for it to

THOMAS NELSON & SONS

Authorized Publishers

American Standard Bible

383 K Fourth Ave., New York City

The American Standard Bible text has been adopted by all the leading Colleges, Theological Seminaries, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and Bible Schools in the United States.

The American Standard Bible text is used by over 13,000,000 Sabbath School scholars to study their lessons from.

They realize that they cannot procure a more reliable version of the scriptures.

Record Books for Church and Church School

For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Superintendent, the Secretary. Roll Books, Class Books, Collection Envelopes.

ASK FOR CATALOGUES

14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

WISCONSIN

Varied Church Night Programs at Menasha

Menasha has printed a neat card giving the topics and leaders for the Church Night Meetings from Sept. 1 until the last of July. On the first Thursday of the month the pastor, Rev. S. G. Ruegg, leads the group in Bible study. The second Thursday evening of the month is devoted to a discussion of the "World Outlook" and will take up such topics as "Pilgrimages with the Pilgrims," "The Pilgrims' World Wide Influence," "New England's Influence in the Middle West," "A Labrador Doctor," "Wealth and Poverty," "The Mandate for Armenia," "Religious Education in Public Schools," and "The Present Status of Prohibition;" the third Thursday is given to the discussion of "Practical Christianity," and will deal with "Recreation-Play," "Social Movements of Our Time," "The New International Order," "Spiritual Commerce," "Crime and Criminals," "Food as a Moral Factor," "Work as a Vitalizer," and "Health and History." The last Thursday of each month will be given over to a social evening. With the exception of the Bible Study all these discussions will be led by the men and women of the church.

Sheboygan Has New House of Worship

On Sept. 26 Sheboygan, Rev. M. R. Brandt, pastor, celebrated the completion of its new house of worship by a beautiful service of dedication. The sermon was preached by Rev. J. T. Chynoweth. The present structure was erected largely on the foundations of the old building, which was burned in 1919, but changes which add greatly to its size, beauty and usefulness have been made.

IOWA

Rev. G. R. Cady Goes to Chicago

The popular pastor of Clinton closed a successful seven years' pastorate Oct. 15, to take up his new work with Pilgrim, Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Cady came to Clinton from the Methodist Church but from the first found himself in perfect accord with the Congregational way. He quickly took his place in the Iowa fellowship, being at the time of his departure from the state a member of the Board of Directors of the State Conference. He also served on important state committees.

This Iowa pastorate has been exceedingly fruitful. The membership of the church grew from 150 to 240. Mr. Cady received 202 people into the church; baptized 94; officiated at 208 funerals and 257 weddings. The congregations have steadily grown, and without resorting to any unusual method for attracting people the evening audiences have been well sustained. A Clinton citizen pays him this tribute: "He preached the religion of Jesus Christ as applied to problems of the present day." A Men's Club, with an average attendance of 90 per cent. at the monthly meetings, has grown to be the foremost organization of its kind in the city.

Cromwell Celebrates Fiftieth Anniversary

Cromwell celebrated its 50th anniversary on Oct. 16–17. Pres. N. W. Wehrhen of Tabor College gave an address Saturday evening on "The Church and Its Relationship to the Community," and spoke on Religious Education at the Sunday morning service. Supt. P. A. Johnson was also present and gave an address on "Looking Forward." During the afternoon a reminiscence meeting was held. The Methodist pastor and congregation participated in the services of the day. A letter was read from Rev. W. C. Hicks of Minneapolis, who at one time served the church for six years and who was celebrating his 85th birthday anniversary on that day. Reports were given from the church, the Ladies' Missionary Society and the Ladies' Aid Society.

NEW MEXICO

Celebrate Beginning of Congregationalism

It is 40 years since Congregationalism had its beginnings in New Mexico. This event was appropriately celebrated in Albuquerque on Oct. 17-18. Supt. J. H. Heald preached an appropriate sermon, telling many interesting things regarding the history of the church. Exactly 40 years ago that day it had its beginning. "Father" Ashley, as he was called, came to Albuquerque before the railroad. There was then practically no Albuquerque. Only a few houses were standing where the present thriving city stands. It was his honor to preach the first sermon by a Congregational minister in what was then the territory of New Mexico. The church began with four members. Within

OXFORD CHILDREN'S BIBLES

MOTHERS, teach your children to love the Bible. The good thoughts you sow in their minds now will yield a rich harvest of noble acts when they grow older

Oxford Bibles for Children have black and colored illustrations that interest as well as instruct. Some have Special Helps for children.

At All Booksellers
Catalog upon request

Oxford University Press
American Branch
35 West 32d Street
New York

RODEHEAVER'S

VICTORY SONGS

A New Gospel Song Book, Prepared by—

HOMER RODEHEAVER

A great advance in the world of church music. Contains 70 new songs and 259 of the old favorites. The selection meets with hearty approval from song leaders who have seen the new book.

Contains 288 pages of music. Single copies: Manila, 35c; Limp, 40c; Cloth, 50c; Postpaid. In quantities, not prepaid: Manila, 30c; Limp 35c; Cloth, 45c. ☞ Same prices for: AWAKENING SONGS; SONGS OF SERVICE.

ASK FOR OUR COMPLETE CATALOG.

THE RODEHEAVER COMPANY
1090 Monon Bldg., Dpt. C Chicago
814 Walnut St. Philadelphia

CHRISTMAS MUSIC HALL-MACK CO'S FREE

FREE SAMPLES TO SUPT., PASTOR or COM.

of our new Christmas Services

Christmas Helper, No. 8, 15c.
Songs, Exercises, Recitations.

Christmas Story, 25c.
Cantata (easy) for school or chorus.

His Star, 25c. A song story.

In the Garden — By C. Austin Miles.
On Victor No. 18020; Columbia, 78026.
Edison, 80520. Sheet music, 25c at all dealers.

Hall-Mack Co.
Adam Geibel Co.
1018-20 Arch Street, Phila., Pa.

six months that little group had constructed an edifice of their own. This was the first church to be built in the place and in it nearly all the Protestant churches of the city had their beginnings.

At the anniversary supper on Oct. 18 the church was thronged. An interesting feature of this meeting was the reading of letters from former members, one of whom was one of the four first members of the church—Charles S. Howe, President of the Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, O. Professor Hodgin, of the State University, to whom the state owes more, perhaps, for its educational life than to any other, and one of the oldest members of the church, fittingly presided. The principal address of the evening was by Mrs. Collings, who came to the place shortly after the arrival of "Father" Ashley. Her talk was exceedingly illuminating, full of interesting reminiscences of the old days.

During these 40 years Albuquerque has had many difficulties. The outlook at present is more encouraging than it has been for years. The church reported during 1919 the largest accession of members in its history. A parsonage has recently been purchased and is nearly paid for. The interior of the church edifice has been renovated, and steps are being taken to renovate also the exterior. The large increase in the budget for the year, made necessary by the increase in the pastor's salary and other expenditures, has been fully met. The present pastor is Dr. H. S. Davidson, formerly of the teaching staff of Columbia University, who came to Albuquerque from Lisbon, N. H.

WYOMING

Green River Has New Organizations

Rev. G. M. Peacock has been pastor of GREEN RIVER since July 18 and already the Church school has been reorganized and a Christian Endeavor Society formed. Both are making excellent progress. Nine names have been added to the membership roll. A Pack of Wolf Cubs and a Camp Fire have been organized and Blue Birds will soon make their appearance. The apportionment for benevolences has been exceeded and the Emergency Fund is receiving support. Plans are being formulated for the erection of a new plant, consisting of church and parsonage.

CALIFORNIA

Mr. Thorp Goes to Palo Alto

Rev. W. B. Thorp began his pastorate at PALO ALTO on Oct. 24. As the seat of Leland Stanford Junior University, with its registration of nearly 3,000 young men and women, Palo Alto offers large opportunity for constructive Christian service, and the church is rejoicing in its good fortune in securing Mr. Thorp for this work. His 12 years of experience in San Diego have made his name well known in the state and he is a welcome addition to the forces of Northern California.

With the pastorate of the church Mr. Thorp will combine service as university pastor and will have oversight along religious lines of the Congregational students, something over 200 in number. The church is planning its program with the definite aim of assisting in this work and Mr. Thorp will also have the active coöperation of the Congregational members of the university faculty, a number of whom are also members of Palo Alto. D. J. S.

HAWAII

Campaigning for New Church in Honolulu

About 1,244 people pledged $233,765 for the building of the new CENTRAL UNION, HONOLULU, in a five-day campaign which began on Oct. 10. This amount is expected to go over $250,000 when all the absent members have been heard from.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

The church service opens up the meaning and the beauty of life, affording us insight into life's depths, causing the commonplace to overflow with miracle, enabling us to behold rainbows and auroras where others see but common day.

A beautiful park-like site of eight and one-third acres has already been secured central to the Caucasian population and local to the car lines of the city. Here it is proposed to build "a church in a garden." The church auditorium will be surrounded by a group of airy one-story buildings for the various Sunday school departments. The mild climate of Honolulu, where artificial heat is never required, will make possible an open-air type of building which, with the beautiful foliage and outdoor setting, ought to make this one of the handsomest churches in the world.

Provision will be made for community service through playground, swimming pool, tennis and basket ball courts to be supervised by the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A.

A memorial organ which was given to the church last Christmas will be so installed as to be available both for the church itself and for the outdoor auditorium which will immediately adjoin it. This arrangement contemplates open-air concerts and outdoor vesper services as well as an outdoor general assembly for the Sunday school.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

ALLEN, W. C., Buford, N. D., to be Sunday school missionary of Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho. Accepts and is at work. Resides at Chattaroy, Wash.

ALLEYNE, W. A., New Lisbon, Wis., to Vanderbilt, Mich.

DABNEY, VAUGHN, Durham, N. H., to Second, Dorchester, Mass. Accepts.

DOLE, C. J., formerly pastor of Grace, Cleveland, O., now with Near East Commission, to associate pastorate, Hough, Cleveland. Accepts to begin Jan. 1.

FITCH, F. F., Third, Oak Park, Ill., to Rock Falls. Declines.

FREDMEYER, D. K., Sun Prairie, Wis., to Summit Park United Brethren Church, Des Moines, Io.

FRYER, J. F., Kalamazoo, Mich., to Lincoln Heights, Spokane, Wash. Accepts.

GIFFORD, ADDISON, Peru, Mass., to Warren, Vt. Accepts and is at work.

HARBUTT, R. G., Kenwood, Cal., to Gaston, Ore., and to Stevenson, Wash. Accepts the latter and is at work.

HIGGINBOTHAM, T. M., Lake View, Io., to Sioux Rapids. Accepts.

JAEGER, JULIUS, Spokane, Wash., to Federated, Rosalia. Accepts and is at work.

JOHNSON, A. K., Springfield, Ill., to Dupo. Accepts and is at work.

KING, J. D., Rupert, Vt., to Cabot and South Woodbury.

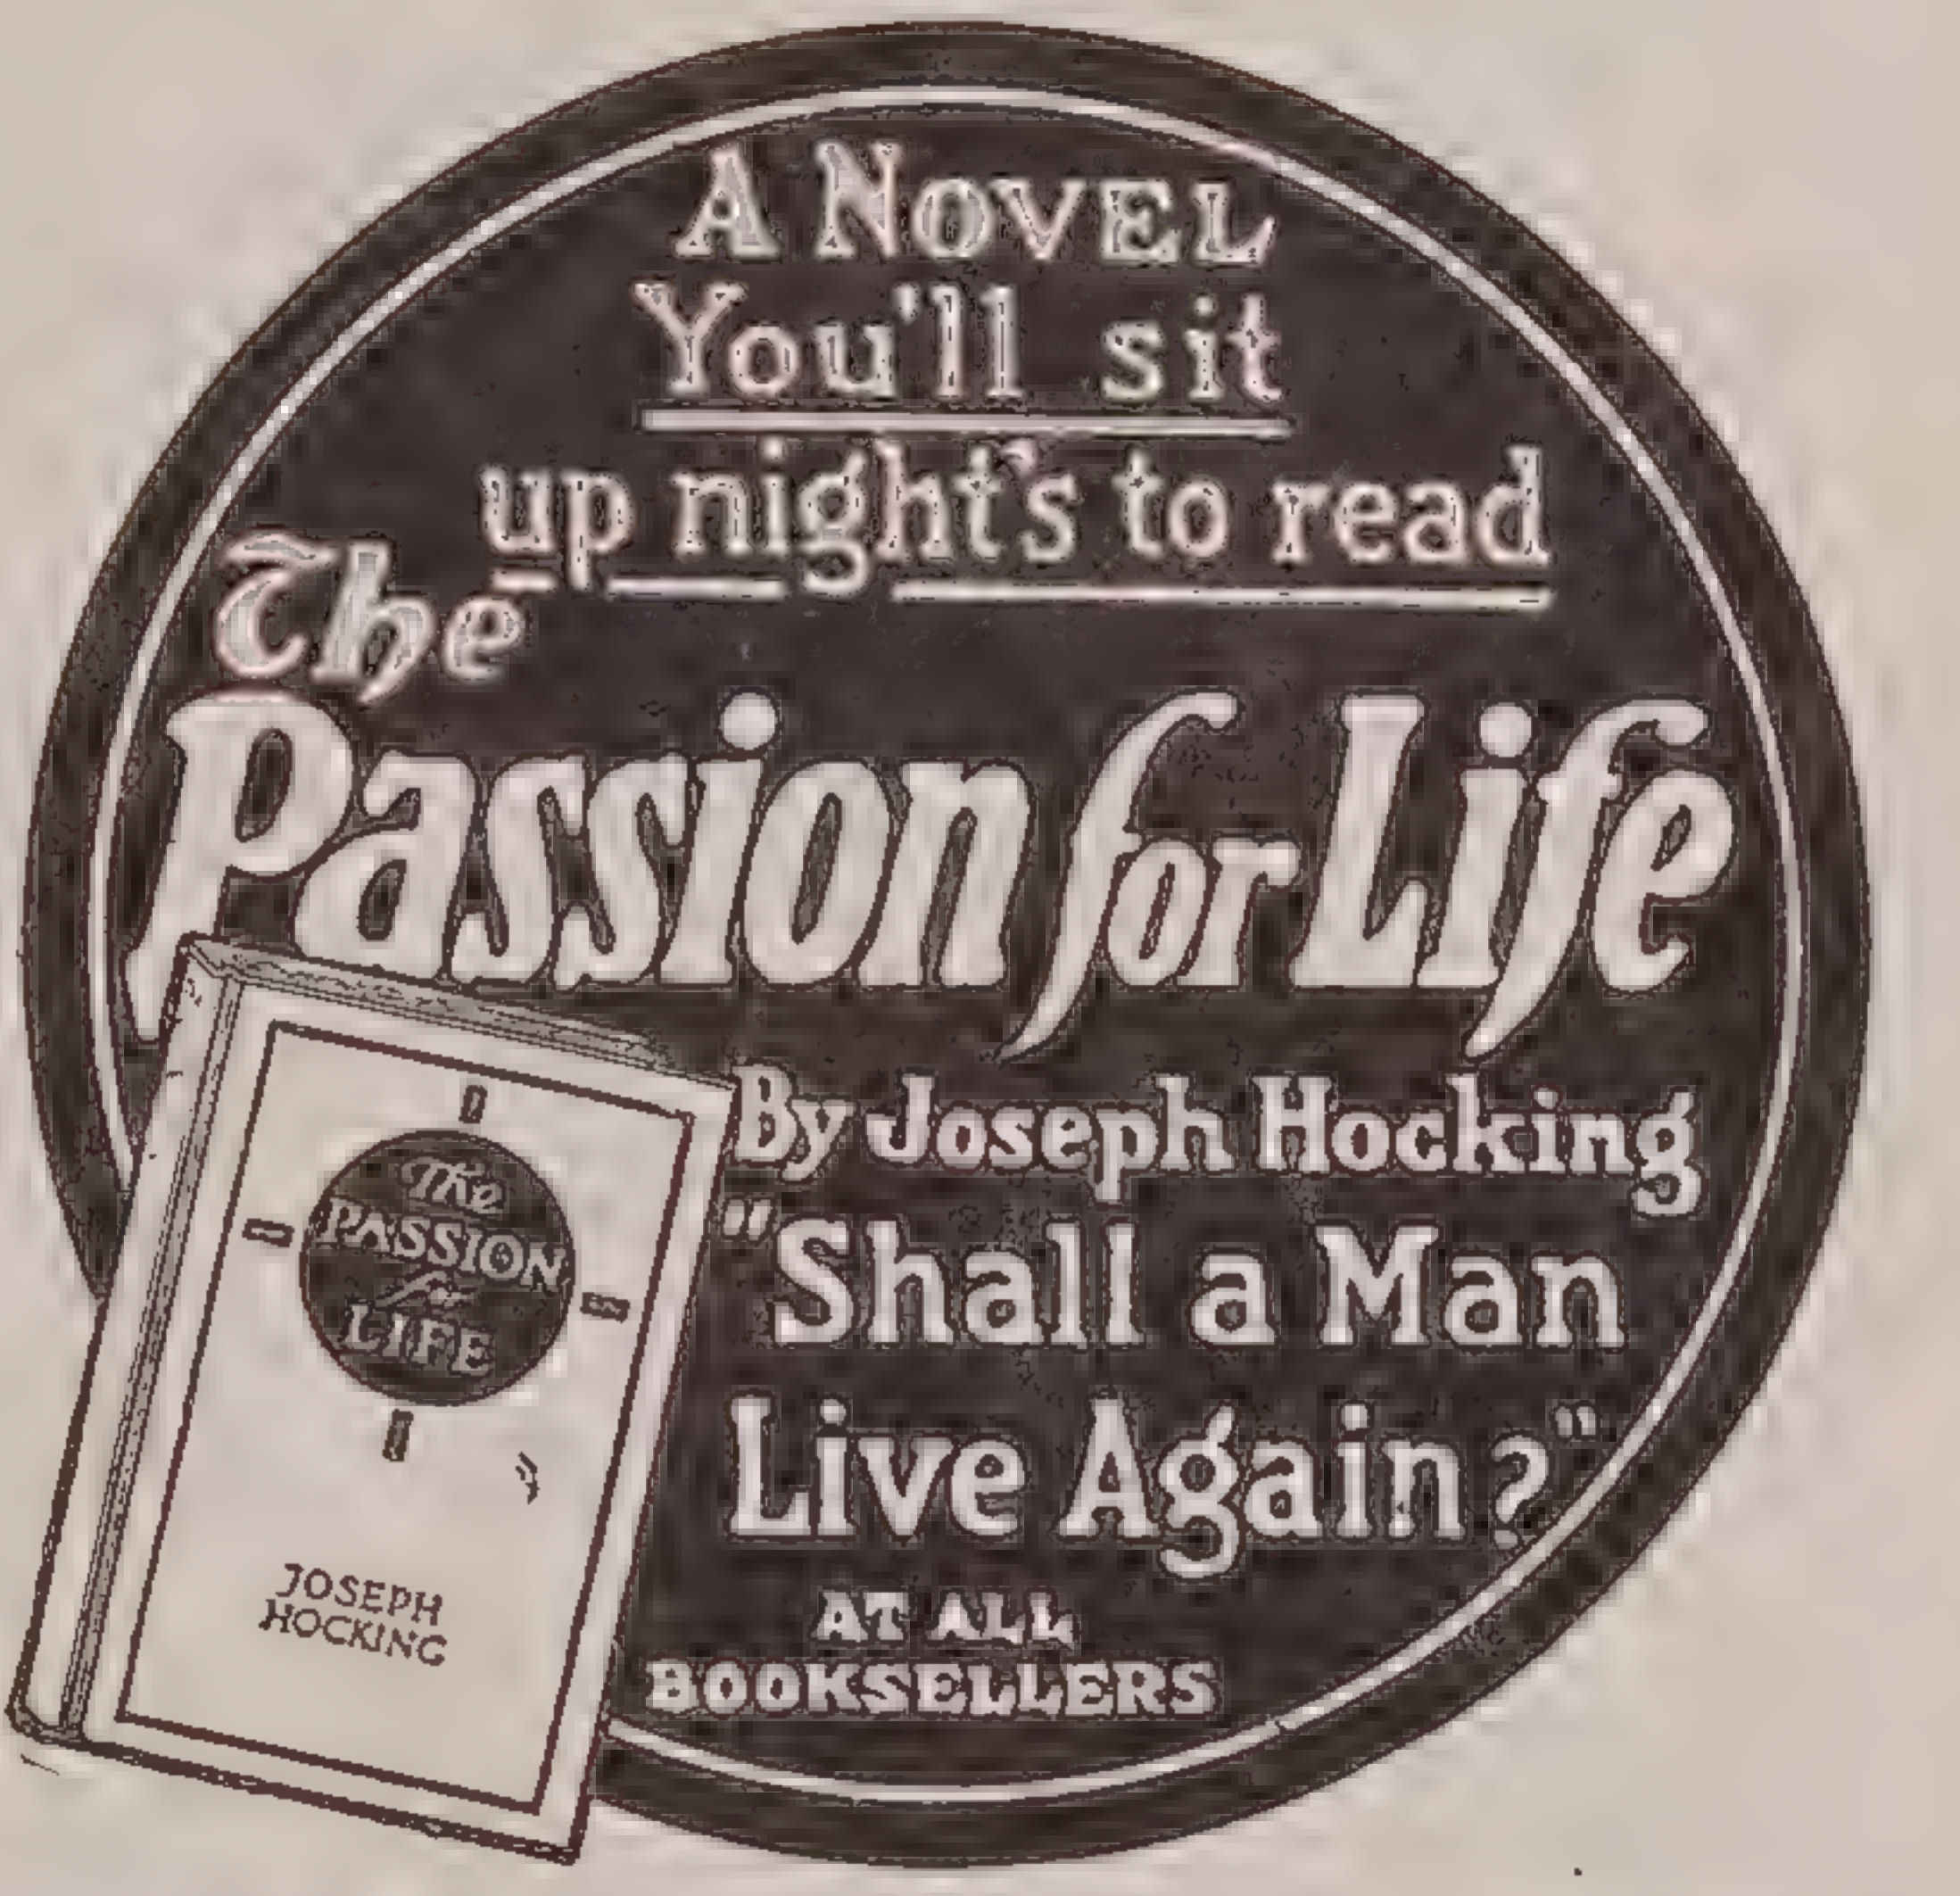
LADD, G. E., West Woodstock, Vt., to Andover and East Andover, N. H. Accepts.

MCLAREN, J. M., Sutton, Mass., to Hadwen Park, Worcester. Declines.

MACLEOD, A. B., Leicester, Mass., to Union, Providence, R. I.

MORSON, R. R., formerly of Yarmouth, Me., more recently in Southern California, to Second, Palmer, Mass. Accepts.

PALMER, CLAY, Richmond, Ill., to Community, Sprague, Wash. Accepts and is at work.



BOOK of 750 BIBLE STUDIES

750 BIBLE & GOSPEL STUDIES
Brief Complete Outlines of Sermons, Talks, Studies; for Christians, Students, Teachers, Preachers. Covering Old and New Testaments. Ready Help for Leading Meetings. Many Important Questions Answered. Apt References and Short Spiritual Explanations. All Subjects Fully Covered. Vest Pocket Size, 128 pages. Cloth, 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. AGENTS Wanted.
GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

Your Opportunity

In 1902 City of Philadelphia Bonds sold to yield 3%
In 1902 Pennsylvania R. R. 4s sold to yield 4%
BONDS NOW YIELD 7% TO 8%
List on request
EARNEST E. SMITH & CO.
Specialists in New England Securities
52 Devonshire Street, Boston
Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges

THE INTERCHURCH REPORT ON THE STEEL STRIKE OF 1919

"The report of men whose good faith is not to be questioned."—N. Y. Tribune. "Carries the impress of factual truth and correct judgment." —N. Y. Evening Post.

Third large printing. Cloth, $2.50 net. Paper, $1.50 net.
ORDER FROM YOUR BOOKSELLER OR THE PUBLISHER
HARCOURT, BRACE AND HOWE 1 WEST 47th St. NEW YORK

Chicago Theological Seminary

Is affiliated with the University of Chicago. Seminary instruction is supplemented by the varied and limitless opportunities of the University and the Divinity School. Tuition free.

Trains for
- Pulpit and Pastorate
- Missionary Work
- Community Service
- Religious Education

Opportunity is offered to secure the M. A. degree during preparation for the B. D.; also an annual two-year honor fellowship for post-graduate work.

5757 University Ave.,
Chicago, Illinois.

OZORA S. DAVIS,
President.

The Congregational Training School For Women

Trains for Christian leadership.

The work of Church Assistant, Director of Religious Education, and Instructor in Week-day Religious Education offers opportunity for the finest and highest type of social service.

One and two year courses. Expenses low.

MISS MARGARET TAYLOR, Dean,
5603 Dorchester Ave., Chicago, Ill.

HARTFORD THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

A Training School for the Christian Ministry

Associated with it are:

HARTFORD SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS PEDAGOGY
Training leaders in religious education

KENNEDY SCHOOL OF MISSIONS
Training for foreign service

Address M. W. JACOBUS, Dean of Seminary, Hartford, Conn,

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION

An undenominational training school for

The Ministry Religious Education
Foreign Missions Social Service

Curricula high grade and modern. Graduate degrees. University of California privileges. Opportunities for the study of Oriental peoples. Open to men and women of all Christian denominations. For catalogue address

WILLIAM FREDERIC BADE, Dean, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

The Graduate School of Theology
OBERLIN COLLEGE

A strong, well balanced course, preparatory to the work of the ministry at home or abroad.

Second semester's work begins February 8 with all the regular faculty teaching.

Address G. W. FISKE, Jr., Dean, Oberlin, Ohio.

BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

105th year opens Sept. 29, 1920. For College or non-College men. Courses, regular and elective; leading to diploma or degree; modern, thorough, practical. Expenses low. For Catalogue or information address

Prof. WARREN J. MOULTON, Cor. Sec'y.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Research and Training in Five Departments:
- (1) Pastoral Service.
- (2) Service in the Foreign Field.
- (3) Religious Education.
- (4) Practical Philanthropy.
- (5) History and Philosophy of Religion.

Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.

Degrees of M. A., B. D. and Ph. D., may be obtained by students.

For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

The Pratt Teachers' Agency
70 Fifth Avenue, New York

Recommends teachers to colleges, public and private schools in all parts of the country.

Advises parents about schools. WM. O. PRATT, Mgr.

Offering Envelopes

For all purposes. Prompt Service

Ask For Prices

14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

PRITCHARD, W. S., Plymouth, Spokane, Wash., to associate superintendency of Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho. Accepts.

QUAYLE, T. R., to Federated, Oswego, Ill.

ROSS, A. B., East Fairfield, Vt., to Johnson.

STONE, I. D., Carpentersville, Ill., to Woodstock. Accepts.

THOMPSON, E. A., Quincy, Ill., to First, Billings, Mont.

TROWBRIDGE, R. A., Boston University, to South Hanson, Mass. Declines.

WALKLEY, FRANCES S., Plantsville, Ct., to Gaysville, Vt.

WEEDEN, C. F., Newton Centre, Mass., to acting pastorate, Piedmont, Worcester.

Resignations

HADDEN, ARCHIBALD, First, Muskegon, Mich.

STAMBAUGH, B. Z., Marlboro, Mass. To accept call to St. Paul's (Episcopal), Detroit, Mich. To take effect Dec. 13.

WILLIAMS, D. T., Charlton, Mass. To become associated with his son, Rev. D. R. Williams, North, Cleveland, O. Has taken effect.

Ordinations and Installations

CROWELL, BESSIE F., o., Monmouth, Me., Oct. 20. Sermon by Dr. J. H. Ecob; other parts by Rev. Messrs. W. H. Palmer, O. E. Barnard and H. S. Capron.

GRAHAM, JOHN, i., Kittery Point, Me., Oct. 8. Sermon by Rev. J. W. Flagg; other parts by Rev. Messrs. Harry Trust, H. G. Booth, Andrew Gibson, Charles Harbutt and P. E. Miller, and Chaplain Hayes of the U. S. N.

HINES, H. H., o., Woodstock, Vt., Oct. 28. Sermon by Pres. B. T. Marshall; other parts by Rev. Messrs. G. A. Buttrick, B. A. Lucas, C. C. Claris and Benjamin Swift.

MACDONALD, J. C., i., First, Wilton, Me., Oct. 21. Sermon by Dr. C. A. Moore; other parts by Rev. Messrs. Frederick Newport, J. F. Jenner, M. S. Hutchins, Charles Harbutt, D. E. Adams and W. H. Palmer.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
CALIFORNIA
Los Angeles, First	6	25
HAWAII
Honolulu, Central Union		18
ILLINOIS
Chicago, Green St.		16
MAINE
Farmington, First	4	14
MASSACHUSETTS
Ashfield	10	10
Attleboro, Second	12	14
Boston, Park St.		35
Union	4	13
Hopkinton		6
Newton Highlands		3
Northampton, Edwards	12	21
Sutton	4	4
Westfield, Second	1	7
OHIO
Toledo, First	6	13

Events to Come

FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA, Quadrennial Meeting, Boston, Mass., Dec. 1-6.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, Los Angeles, beginning July 8, 1921.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Dec. 3, 10.30 A.M.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, Boston, Nov. 22, 11 A. M. Speaker, Rev. E. Victor Bigelow of Andover, Mass., who will address the meeting on some phases of the Interchurch Report on the Steel Strike. Mr. Bigelow does not approve the report and he will present an adverse opinion, the second in a symposium on this subject.

State Conferences

KENTUCKY, Evarts, Nov. 27-28.

TENNESSEE, Soddy, Nov. 23-24.

Deaths

TRACY—The news of the death of Miss Ruth Carter Tracy, on Aug. 8, in Beverly, Mass., at the age of ninety-six, will interest many, particularly clergymen, who remember her and her sister, Miss Sarah. The hospitality of their home was well known. Miss Ruth was the last of the family of Rev. Joseph Tracy, D. D., long a resident of Beverly. His publication, "The Great Awakening," is still recommended as the best authority on that historic period.

A Sermon By Mail

At the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, New York City, printed copies of the Dr. David James Burrell's sermons are gratuitously distributed at the evening service every Sunday (usually about 35 issues per annum) from October to June, inclusive.

For the convenience of persons wishing to receive the sermons weekly, a mailing list has been established, to which names may be added at any time by the payment of one dollar to cover postage and mailing for one year from date of receipt.

Subscriptions and requests for specimen copies should be sent to

MISS MERCE E. BOYER
1 West Twenty-ninth Street, Room 8, New York City

PELOUBET'S
Select Notes

The World's Greatest Commentary on the International Sunday School Lessons

By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.

Let us send you a pamphlet containing the first lesson taken from the volume of 1921

Price, $2.00 Net; $2.10 Delivered

W. A. WILDE COMPANY
120 BOYLSTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.
Rand-McNally Building, Chicago

CHRISTMAS CANTATAS
HALL-MACK CO'S

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG PEOPLE

FREE Returnable samples to interested persons.

Tell us, on a postal, your needs for Christmas Entertainment and let us send you examination copies. Do it now.

Hall-Mack Co.
Adam Geibel Co. 1018-1020 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

CHURCH FURNISHINGS

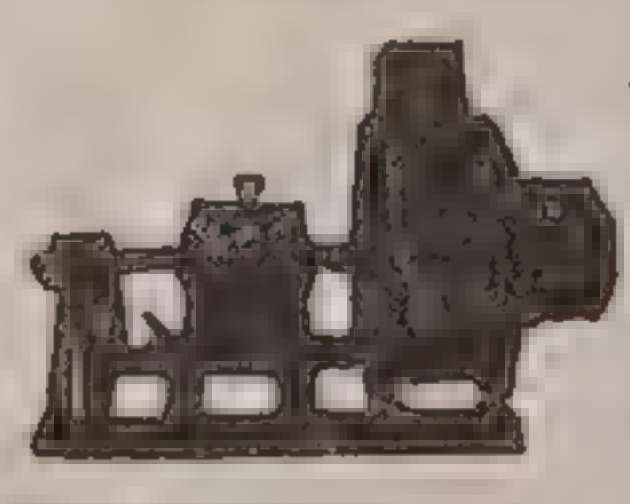
PIPE & REED
CHURCH
ESTEY ORGANS
120 BOYLSTON ST.
BOSTON ~ MASS.

PIPE ORGANS
of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.

Electric Organ blowing outfits for organs of any make.

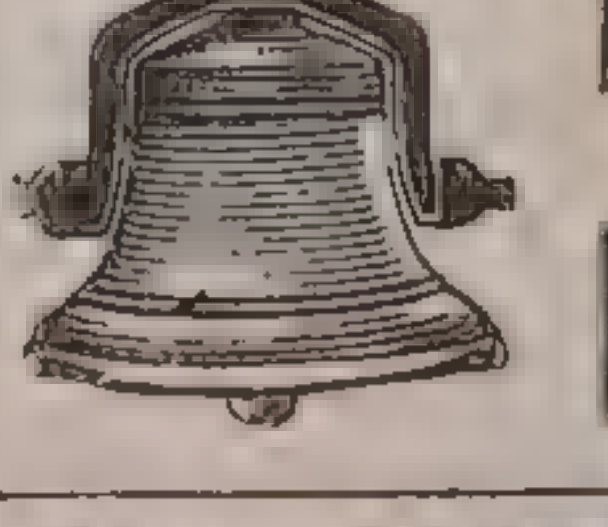
Write, stating which catalog is desired.

Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.



ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
is known all over the country. Four thousand churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars. THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio.

BILHORN THE BEST
FOLDING ORGANS
TELL THE TALE
BEGINNING with STYLE X. We Guarantee
Send for Catalog. Makers of the famous 3 and 5-ply OAK CASES
BILHORN BROTHERS, 136 West Lake St., Chicago



MENEELY BELL CO
TROY, N.Y. AND
198 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY
BELLS

Church
Chime
Peal
BELLS
Memorial Bells a Specialty
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY CO., BALTIMORE, MD., U. S. A.

As Our Readers Interpret the Vote

The League Is Dead

Dear Mr. Editor:

The League of Nations is dead, slain by the very people who offered it to the world, destroyed by the nation which sent four millions of its sons to the conflict that out of their struggle, their wounds, their deaths, might come at last the unending concord of peace. All hail, then, to Mars, the true god of earth! He still reigns. He holds fast to his throne. His envoys still whisper their words of venom into the ears of men. Let wars come, let hates abound, let destruction rule, let anguish be multiplied, let the sorrowing and desolate increase. America turns away from the beatific vision of peace and strikes hands with grim death stalking o'er the earth. Mars is lord.

I went once. I would go again. But O, My Country, what a dreadful price to pay for partisan feuds!

Ex-Chaplain, A. E. F.

Minneapolis, Minn.

The League Is Not Dead

Dear Mr. Editor:

The outstanding fact of this election is that the public has not been allowed to express its opinion. President Wilson called for a "solemn referendum" on the League of Nations, but in spite of the fact that Governor Cox vigorously campaigned for the League, thousands who believed in it did not vote for him because they believed him to be the candidate of the organized wet element; thousands more voted against him because they believed him to have been tainted with pro-Germanism before the war; and many more opposed him because they believed he was an unscrupulous money-getter for himself while condemning the financial methods of the Republican National Committee. Back of all this was the nation-wide dissatisfaction with a Democratic administration which demanded a change and was ready to vote any kind of a ticket so long as it was Republican.

Neither party was permitted by its national convention to run the candidate the people wanted. The selection of Harding was made in flagrant defiance of the voice of the primaries, and the selection of Cox was made in defiance of the dry element in the Democratic party. There was no whole-hearted nor universal rallying to the latter of the advocates of the League. Personal leadership is required for every great movement and it cannot be manufactured over night.

The leaders of public thought listed in The Congregationalist of Oct. 28 who supported the Republican ticket and who also believe in the League of Nations is an earnest that the League is not dead in the hands of the Republicans. We cannot say that the American nation has declared against it. It is the great international fact we still have to face, it is a great moral idea for which we must fight until our country has placed itself right before the world.

George N. Edwards.

Billings, Mont.

The Non-Infallibility of This Paper

Dear Mr. Editor:

For many months I presume that numbers of your readers have been in the same frame of mind as I, as we have read the cock-sure declarations that the majority of the citizens of the United States wanted the League of Nations. We felt that if you were to sense public opinion instead of yielding to the propaganda of hysterical mandates for this, that, and the other world regeneration à la military, you might not be so certain that the opponents of the League were in an insignificant minority.

However, what about the solemn referendum of last Tuesday?

Another quite similar attitude which you assumed was that the Interchurch World Movement was the infallible word and last word in church activity. It too went the way that all limousine church activity should go.

The air is clearing these last months—let's hope that the Lord does not have to use his fist any longer on a generation socialized ad nauseam. Individualism again to the front!

Elmer Willis Serl.

Southern Pines, N. C.

Massachusetts General Hospital
Training School for Nurses. Established 1873. 1,350 Graduates. Prepares its students for advanced positions. For particulars consult Circular of Information. Address Sally M. Johnson, R. N., Supt. of Nurses. Boston, Massachusetts.

Praises

By Mary Earle Hardy

"Praises sing!" said Psalmist Brook,
And his silver timbrels shook.
"Praise to Him who gives such dower
Unto stream, and tree, and flower."

Thrilled the forest at his word,
Swinging leaf and singing bird.
Smote the Wind his pine-tree lyre,
Wind—the Asaph of the choir.

Never voice too small to swell
Anthem or antiphonal,
Glad my soul its love confessed
Singing praises with the rest.

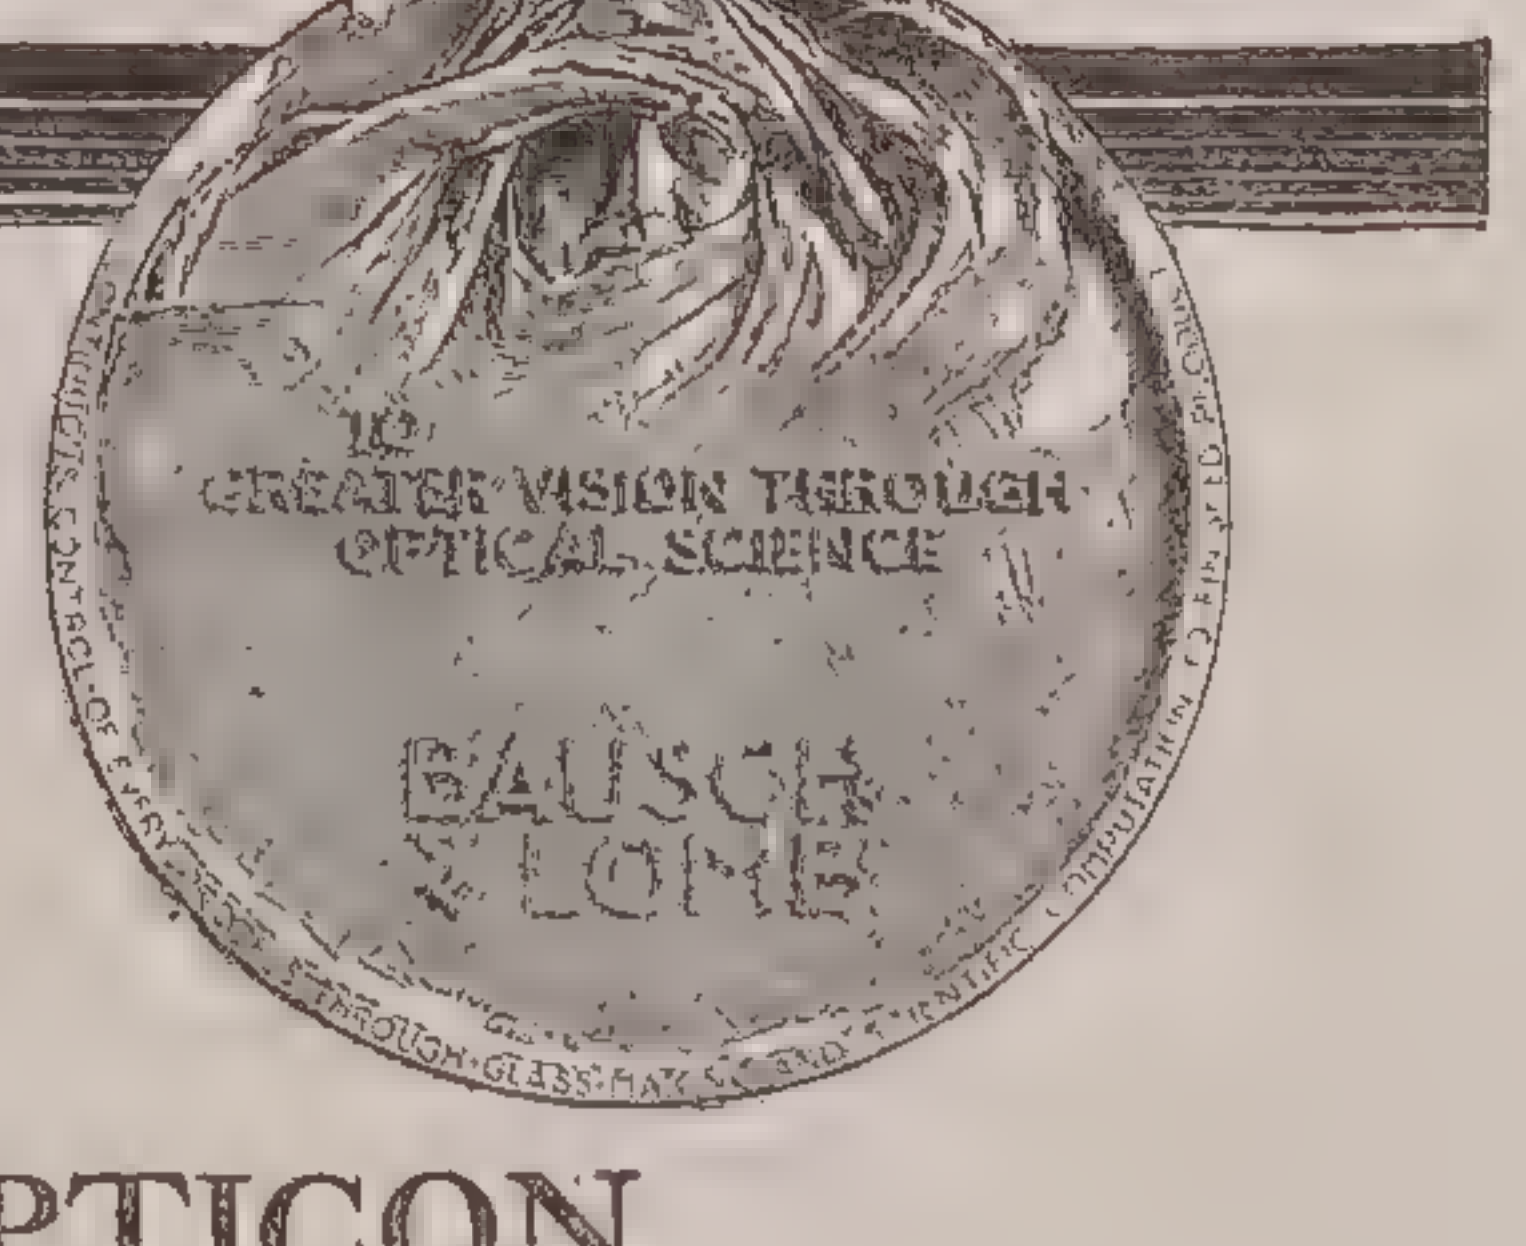
Thanksgiving and Christmas with domestic problems left out and plenty of enjoyment put in, are possible to those who come to

The Northfield

to spend the holidays. This homelike hotel, with a beautiful country environment, provides every reasonable convenience, has an excellent cuisine, unique service, and pleasant steam-heated rooms. Other features are the large sun parlor, open fires, library, and winter sports of all kinds, when the weather man permits. Patronized by select company. Open all the year.

Write for details.

EAST NORTHFIELD, MASS.
Ambert G. Moody, Mgr. Frank W. Kellogg, Asst. Mgr.



TO GREATER VISION THROUGH OPTICAL SCIENCE
BAUSCH & LOMB

You'd Be Astonished

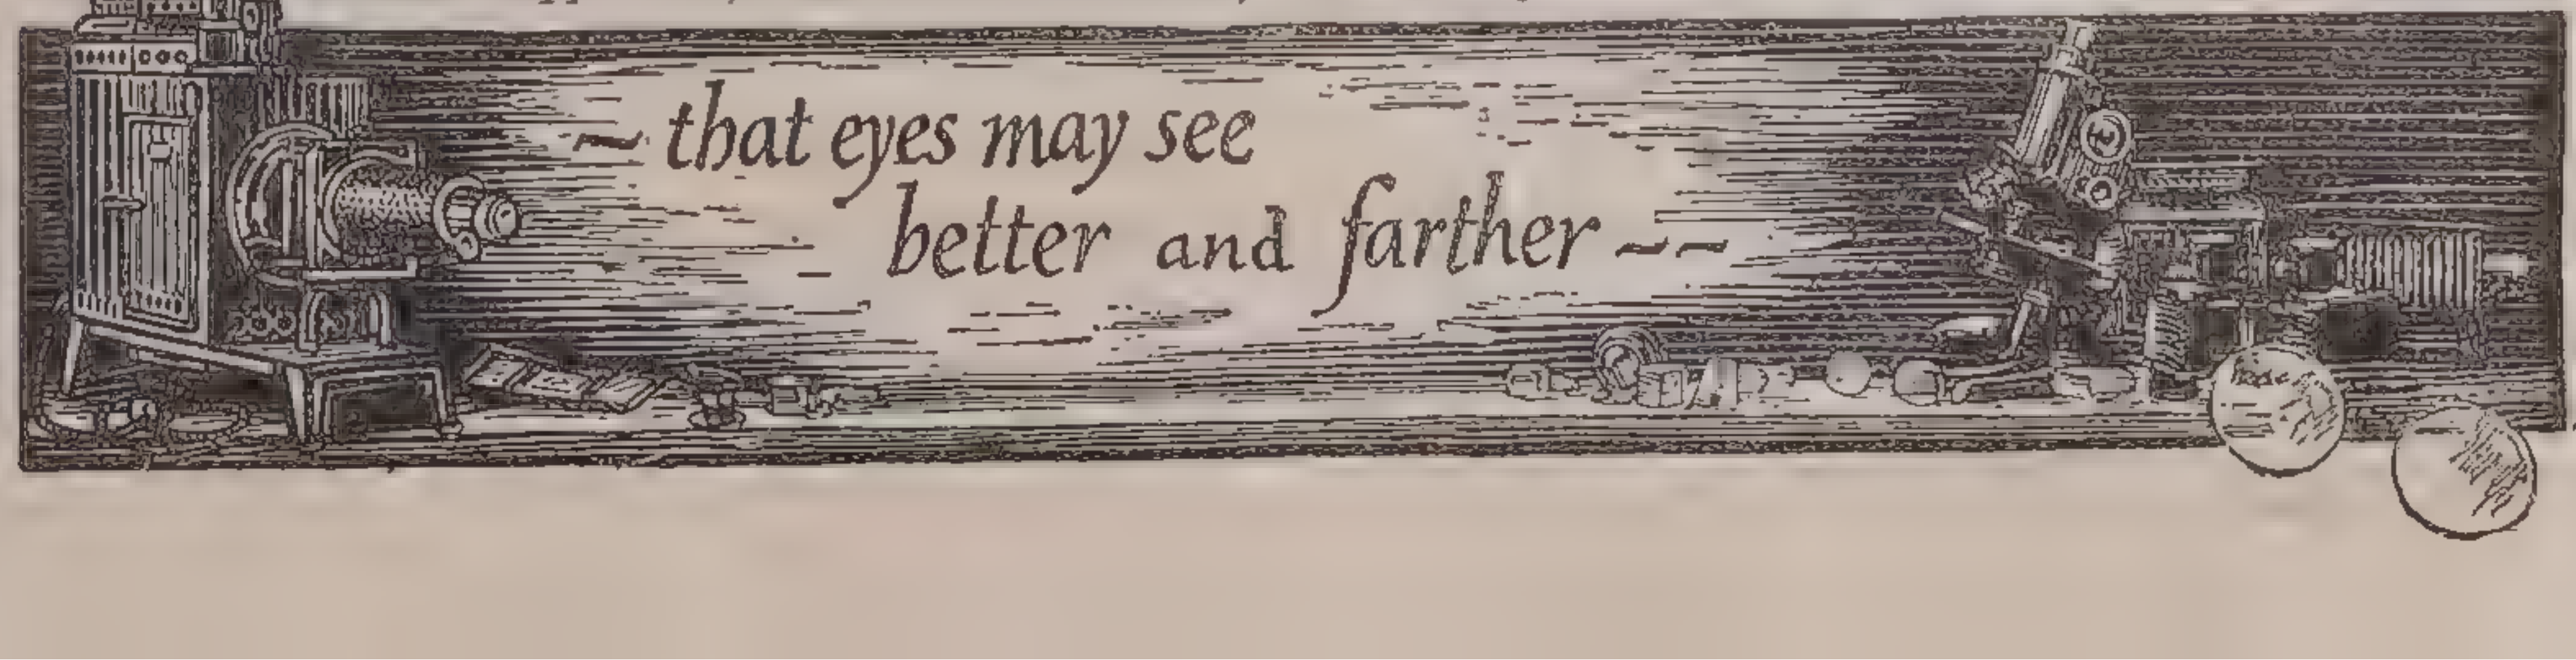
—as you deliver your lecture from church platform, Sunday School room or Y. M. C. A. auditorium—could you see the widely divergent pictures arising from your descriptive passages, in the minds of your audiences or congregations. You can give each the same picture, actual and authentic, photographed on your travels and projected on a screen by a

Bausch & Lomb BALOPTICON
The Perfect Stereopticon

Views can be shown without slides—direct from photographs, post cards, prints, etc. Couldn't you make the lecture more truly impressive of actualities with a BALOPTICON? Of course, make sure it's a Bausch & Lomb Balopticon. Ask for literature describing various models.

Price—$50.00 up.

BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL CO.
539 St. Paul St., Rochester, N. Y.
NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO
Leading American Makers of Photographic and Ophthalmic Lenses, Microscopes, Projection Apparatus, Stereo-Prism Binoculars, and other High-Grade Optical Products.



~ that eyes may see better and farther ~~

Favorite Poems

Our "favorite poem" this week is by Lucy Larcom, and has been submitted to us by a member of the staff of our Circulation Department.

A Thanksgiving

For the wealth of pathless forests,
  Whereon no axe may fall;
For the winds that haunt the branches;
  The young bird's timid call;
For the red leaves dropped like rubies
  Upon the dark green sod;
For the waving of the forests,
  I thank thee, O my God!

For the suond of waters gushing
  In bubbling beads of light;
For the fleets of snow-white lilies
  Firm-anchored out of sight;
For the reeds among the eddies;
  The crystal on the clod;
For the flowing of the rivers,
  I thank thee, O my God!

For the rosebud's break of beauty
  Along the toiler's way;
For the violet's eye that opens
  To bless the new-born day;
For the bare twigs that in summer
  Bloom like the prophet's rod;
For the blossoming of flowers,
  I thank thee, O my God!

For the lifting up of mountains,
  In brightness and in dread;
For the peaks where snow and sunshine
  Alone have dared to tread;
For the dark of silent gorges,
  Whence mighty cedars nod;
For the majesty of mountains,
  I thank thee, O my God!

For the splendor of the sunsets,
  Vast mirrored on the sea;
For the gold-fringed clouds, that curtain
  Heaven's inner mystery;
For the molten bars of twilight,
  Where thought leans, glad, yet awed;
For the glory of the sunsets,
  I thank thee, O my God!

For the earth, and all its beauty;
  The sky and all its light;
For the dim and soothing shadows,
  That rest the dazzled sight;
For unfading fields and prairies,
  Where sense in vain has trod;
For the world's exhaustless beauty,
  I thank thee, O my God!

For an eye of inward seeing;
  A soul to know and love;
For these common aspirations,
  That our high heirship prove;
For the hearts that bless each other
  Beneath thy smile, thy rod;
For the amaranth saved from Eden,
  I thank thee, O my God!

For the hidden scroll, o'erwritten
  With one dear Name adored;
For the heavenly in the human;
  The Spirit in the Word;
For the tokens of thy presence
  Within, above, abroad;
For thine own great gift of Being,
  I thank thee, O my God!

—Lucy Larcom.

Vapo Cresolene
Used for more than forty years. The benefit derived from it is unquestionable.
(Established 1879)
FOR more than a generation we have been receiving grateful testimony to the virtues of this thoroughly tested and proven treatment. It stops violent coughing, and difficult breathing, assuring restful sleep because the antiseptic vapor carries healing with every breath. Booklet 60 tells why the diseases for which Cresolene is recommended yield to this simple and dependable treatment.
Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists
VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt Street, New York

Don't Wear a Truss
Brooks' Appliance, the modern scientific invention, the wonderful new discovery that relieves rupture, will be sent on trial. No obnoxious springs or pads.

MR. C. E. BROOKS

Brooks' Rupture Appliance
Has automatic Air Cushions. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No lies. Durable, cheap. Sent on trial to prove it. Protected by U. S. patents. Catalog and measure blanks mailed free. Send name and address today.
Brooks Appliance Co., 473 G State St., Marshall, Mich.

CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH
PROMPTLY AND SAFELY RELIEVED BY
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION
ALSO IN
BRONCHITIS, LUMBAGO, RHEUMATISM
W. EDWARDS & SON
LONDON, ENGLAND.
ALL DRUGGISTS OR
E. FOUGERA & CO.
90-92 BEEKMAN ST. N.Y.C.

Comfort Your Skin With Cuticura Soap and Fragrant Talcum
Soap, Ointment, Talcum, 25c. everywhere. Samples free of Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. V, Malden, Mass.

OUR READERS' FORUM

Peaceful Penetration

Dear Mr. Editor:

While heartily appreciating and seconding the luminous article on "The Japanese Question in Southern California," in your Oct. 14 number, one who has known the Japanese for fifty-four years cannot let this statement of the writer pass—whether it help or hurt his argument: "We sent missionaries to Japan and then blew open the hermit nation with our guns—at least we turned them on her."

As biographer of Commodore M. C. Perry and of President Millard Fillmore, the one who initiated and put into executive action the whole machinery of the naval expedition to Japan in 1852, let me state that no Protestant or Roman Catholic missionaries were sent to Japan before Commodore Perry's peaceful armada. We neither "blew open" nor "turned our guns" on Japan. I secured the papers of Hon. William Graham, Secretary of the Navy, which were virtually a Cabinet journal, and I can assure you that Perry had peremptory orders not to begin hostilities, or to fire a gun unless attacked. The reason why a large squadron was sent was that the Japanese had fired on single private vessels, or, in one case, two warships—their commander rigidly bound by orders not to begin hostilities. Only a few weeks before his death, ex-President Fillmore reiterated with emphasis the peaceful nature of the expedition. Not until the Christian gentleman and shining American diplomatist, Townsend Harris, by patience and enlightenment had won a treaty of residence and commerce in 1858, did any missionary enter the country. Nor have any historians and public men excelled the Japanese in their praise of the peaceful nature of our diplomacy—which, despite all limitations, stands at the top of humanity's achievements.

William Elliot Griffis.

New York City.

A Mooted Question Solved

Dear Mr. Editor:

Apropos of the pronunciation of Los Angeles, a friend of mine wintering there recently sent me the following rime:

Our Lady would remind you, please!
Her name is not "Lost Anjie Lees?"
Not Anjie anything whatever,
She trusts her friends will be so clever
To share her fit historic pride
The "g" shall not be jellified!
"O" long—"g" hard, and rime with "yes"
And then you have Loce-Ang-el-ess!

Perhaps this will be of interest to the delegates to the National Council which is to convene in that city next fall.

E. L. M. Hayward.

Roxbury, Mass.

It Will Pay You to Read

Our Three Centuries of Expansion, by William B. Shaw (Review of Reviews, November). A succinct and graphic summing up of the spirit of the English type of civilization from its first domestication in New England to its spread all over this country. The author says that the population of the continental United States is still more than half of British descent. "It is therefore fitting that the whole nation should join in celebrating the tercentenary."

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cos four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

Big demand for teachers for emergency vacancies. Ernest Olp, Steger Bldg., Chicago.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

HELP WANTED

Woman for general housework including plain cooking. Pleasant home in minister's family nea Cambridge, Mass. "Oedipus," care Congregationalist.

Good reliable woman, who can cook and take entire charge of house for small family, adults Someone who will take interest, and who want comfortable home in country town. Address Box 123, Laurel, Del.

MISCELLANEOUS

Wanted—Boys and Girls to take orders and sell our line of Famous Canterbury Gifts for Christmas New Year's, etc. A series of dainty booklets and folders that are Artistic, Literary and Exclusive An assortment of samples at wholesale price together with catalogs sent on receipt of $2. Don' delay. This is your chance to make Christma money and every moment counts. The CANTERBURY CO., 64 East Van Buren, Chicago, Ill.

Ready-to-make material and directions for Dol Furniture, Flying Tops, etc. Gives boys and girl Manual Training at home. Offers opportunity fo money-earning. Trial package with return privilege, $1. E. B. Lincoln, Hyde Park, Mass.

Japanese goods consigned for church bazaar Japanese Art & Novelty Company, 100 Prescot Ave., New York.

The Congregationalist
and Advance

In Every Family in the Church

This splendid result has been achieved in several churches

Make it the Goal for Your Church

One method is to pay for the subscription from the Church Treasury, making it a part of the Annual Budget.

The more readers you have in your church of our own and only National Church Paper, the more your people will understand about the Congregational Missions and the Educational Institutions, the progress of the Christian World, what the other churches are doing, and how. They will be helped and inspired in personal and home life, in good citizenship and in church work. The old and the young are delighted each week with the brilliant articles, the good stories, helpful short sermons, book reviews and editorials.

Subscribe now and receive free the remaining Holiday Numbers and all of 1921 for only $3.00 ($2.75 in church clubs and to ministers). This offer is to New Subscribers Only.

THE CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

The Congregationalist and Advance

14 Beacon Street, Boston
19 W. Jackson Street, Chicago

Benevolent Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D. D., Secretary; Rev. John J. Walker, Associate Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 609 Congregational House, Boston.

CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, maintained by the Congregational Conferences of the six New England States, offers aid to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies in New England and elsewhere. Congregational House, Boston, Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Secretary, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D. D., Chairman.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Zeigler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BOSTON and vicinity (Incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel C. Bushnell, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Fred L. Norton, Sec., 919 Tremont Building, Boston.

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 503 Congregational House, Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIOR, 19 S. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas., Friday Meeting, 10 A. M.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIFIC, 760 Market St., Room 421, San Francisco. Mrs. Ernest A. Evans, President; Mrs. W. W. Ferrier, Treasurer; Miss E. S. Benton, Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Mrs. P. S. Suffern, Treas.; Miss Miriam F. Choate, Sec.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION (of Massachusetts and Rhode Island), Mrs. Amos L. Hatheway, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec., 607 Congregational House, Boston.

Boston Seaman's Friend Society

Incorporated 1829

306 Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

President, Samuel Usher; Cor. Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton. A Congregational Society devoted to the material, social and moral welfare of seamen of all nations and supported mainly by the New England churches. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Room at Tarpaulin Cove. Bequests should be made payable to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society. Contributions from churches and individuals solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis.

American Seamen's Friend Society

76 Wall St., New York, Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational National and International Seamen's Society.

Maintains a Sailor's Home and Institute, 507 West Street, New York.

Loan Libraries ($25 each) placed on vessels sailing from New York.

Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.

Publishes the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).

Officers: John B. Calvert, D. D., President; George Sidney Webster, D. D., Secretary. Send contributions to Clarence C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 76 Wall Street, New York.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa, Founded 1817.

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps al churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.
8 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, a Constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trusts for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS can reach every principal city and town in the United States through the advertising columns of The Congregationalist and Advance.

For rates and other information write

KENNETH S. BALLOU.
Advertising Manager.

National Agencies

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Moderator, Rev. Henry Churchill King, Oberlin, O.
Secretary ad interim, Rev. Edwin D. Eaton,
289 Fourth Ave., New York
Assistant Secretary, Truman J. Spencer,
289 Fourth Ave., New York
Treasurer, Frank F. Moore,
287 Fourth Ave., New York

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)
14 Beacon Street, Boston
19 West Jackson Street, Chicago

ALBERT W. FELL, Business Manager
HARRY M. NELSON, Treasurer
VERNON M. SCHENCK, General Sales Manager
A. A. HAGSTROM, Western Manager
KENNETH S. BALLOU, Advertising Manager

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Established by the National Council at Grand Rapids, in 1919

DR. LUCIEN C. WARNER, Chairman
REV. HERMAN F. SWARTZ, General Secretary
REV. JAMES E. MCCONNELL, Ass't Secretary
WALTER E. BELL, Treasurer
REV. JOHN LUTHER KILBON, Financial Sec'y

Program for the coming year to include Missionary Education, Stewardship, and a Financial Campaign in behalf of our denominational work.

Regional Directors for 1920-21

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont: Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

Massachusetts, Rhode Island: Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D. D., 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

Connecticut, New York: Rev. Charles E. Burton, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.

New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Porto Rico: Rev. George L. Cady, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.

North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee: Rev. L. H. Keller, D. D., Central Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga.

Colored Churches of South: Rev. Alfred Lawless, Jr., D. D., 45½ Auburn Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia: Rev. John Luther Kilbon, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.

Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska: Rev. Robert W. Gammon, D. D., 19 West Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.

Minnesota; North Dakota, South Dakota: Rev. William F. English, Jr., Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., and 19 So. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana: Rev. W. W. Scudder, D. D., Fountain and Aubert Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico: Rev. W. J. Minchin, D. D., Guardian Trust Bldg., Denver, Col.

Southern California, Arizona: Rev. George L. Kenngott, Ph.D., 831 So. Hope St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Northern California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Alaska: Rev. H. H. Kelsey, D. D., Phelan Bldg., San Francisco, Cal., and Plymouth Church, Seattle, Wash.

All correspondence relative to the local work of promotion should be addressed to the Director of your Region.

Neighbor—"So your son got his B. A. and his M. A."

Father—"Yes, but it is his P. A. that still supports him."

She—"I appreciate the compliment, but I'm afraid I could never make you happy."

He—"Oh, yes, you could. You don't know how easily pleased I am."

Two Cockney mothers were talking about the jam ration. "Wot's four ounces of jam a week to my biby?" said one of them. "Why, I used to wash an ounce off his face after tea hevery day!"

During sermon time the other day a baby began to cry, and its mother carried it toward the door.

"Stop!" said the minister, "the baby is not disturbing me."

The mother turned toward the pulpit and made the audible remark, "Oh, 'e ain't, ain't 'e? Well, you're a disturbin' of 'im."

National Societies

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Edward Lincoln Smith	Editorial Secretary
(287 Fourth Ave., New York)	Rev. Wm. E. Strong

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Rev. William S. Beard, Secretary of Promotion
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry,
Secretary of Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Nineteen self-supporting state organizations are in Federated relations with the National Society. The state Superintendent or Secretary is the official representative of all home mission interests.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. George L. Cady, Secretary
Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis, Associate Secretary
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Eskimos, Chinese, Japanese and Hindus; in Island Territories of Porto Rico and Hawaii. New work in Southwest taken under instruction of National Council.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

289 Fourth Avenue, New York City
Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
(Church Extension Boards)
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Rev. Charles H. Richards, Editorial Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. In sixty-six years it has helped to build 4,982 churches and 1,334 parsonages.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Rev. A. E. Holt, Social Service Sec.
Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Missionary Education Sec.
Samuel F. Wilkins, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service and Missionary Education; aids Colleges, Academies, Training Schools, Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities and among immigrants.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

To conserve the welfare of aged ministers or their wives

The Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers

The opportunities of this Fund should appeal to all our ministers under fifty-five years of age.

375 Lexington Ave., New York City
Rev. William A. Rice, Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

COMMISSION OF ONE HUNDRED OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL
Established at Columbus, Ohio, 1917
375 Lexington Ave., New York City
Charles S. Mills, Chairman
Lewis T. Reed, Executive Secretary

A Permanent Tercentenary Memorial Fund of Five Million Dollars, to provide annuities for the old age and disability of Congregational Ministers. The income to supplement payments made by the ministers. Actuarially Sound. Socially Just.

Make checks payable to the
Pilgrim Memorial Fund Commission

CHRISTMAS NEXT!

New England in the Life of the World

HOWARD A. BRIDGMAN

A suitable gift for any one, anywhere. Glimpses of history unusual and fascinating. $4.00. Postage 15 cents.

Give Books

Order Early

The Women Who Came in the Mayflower

Annie Russell Marble

The story of those splendid women told in graphic manner by an authority. Attractive binding.
$1.50. Postage 10 cents.

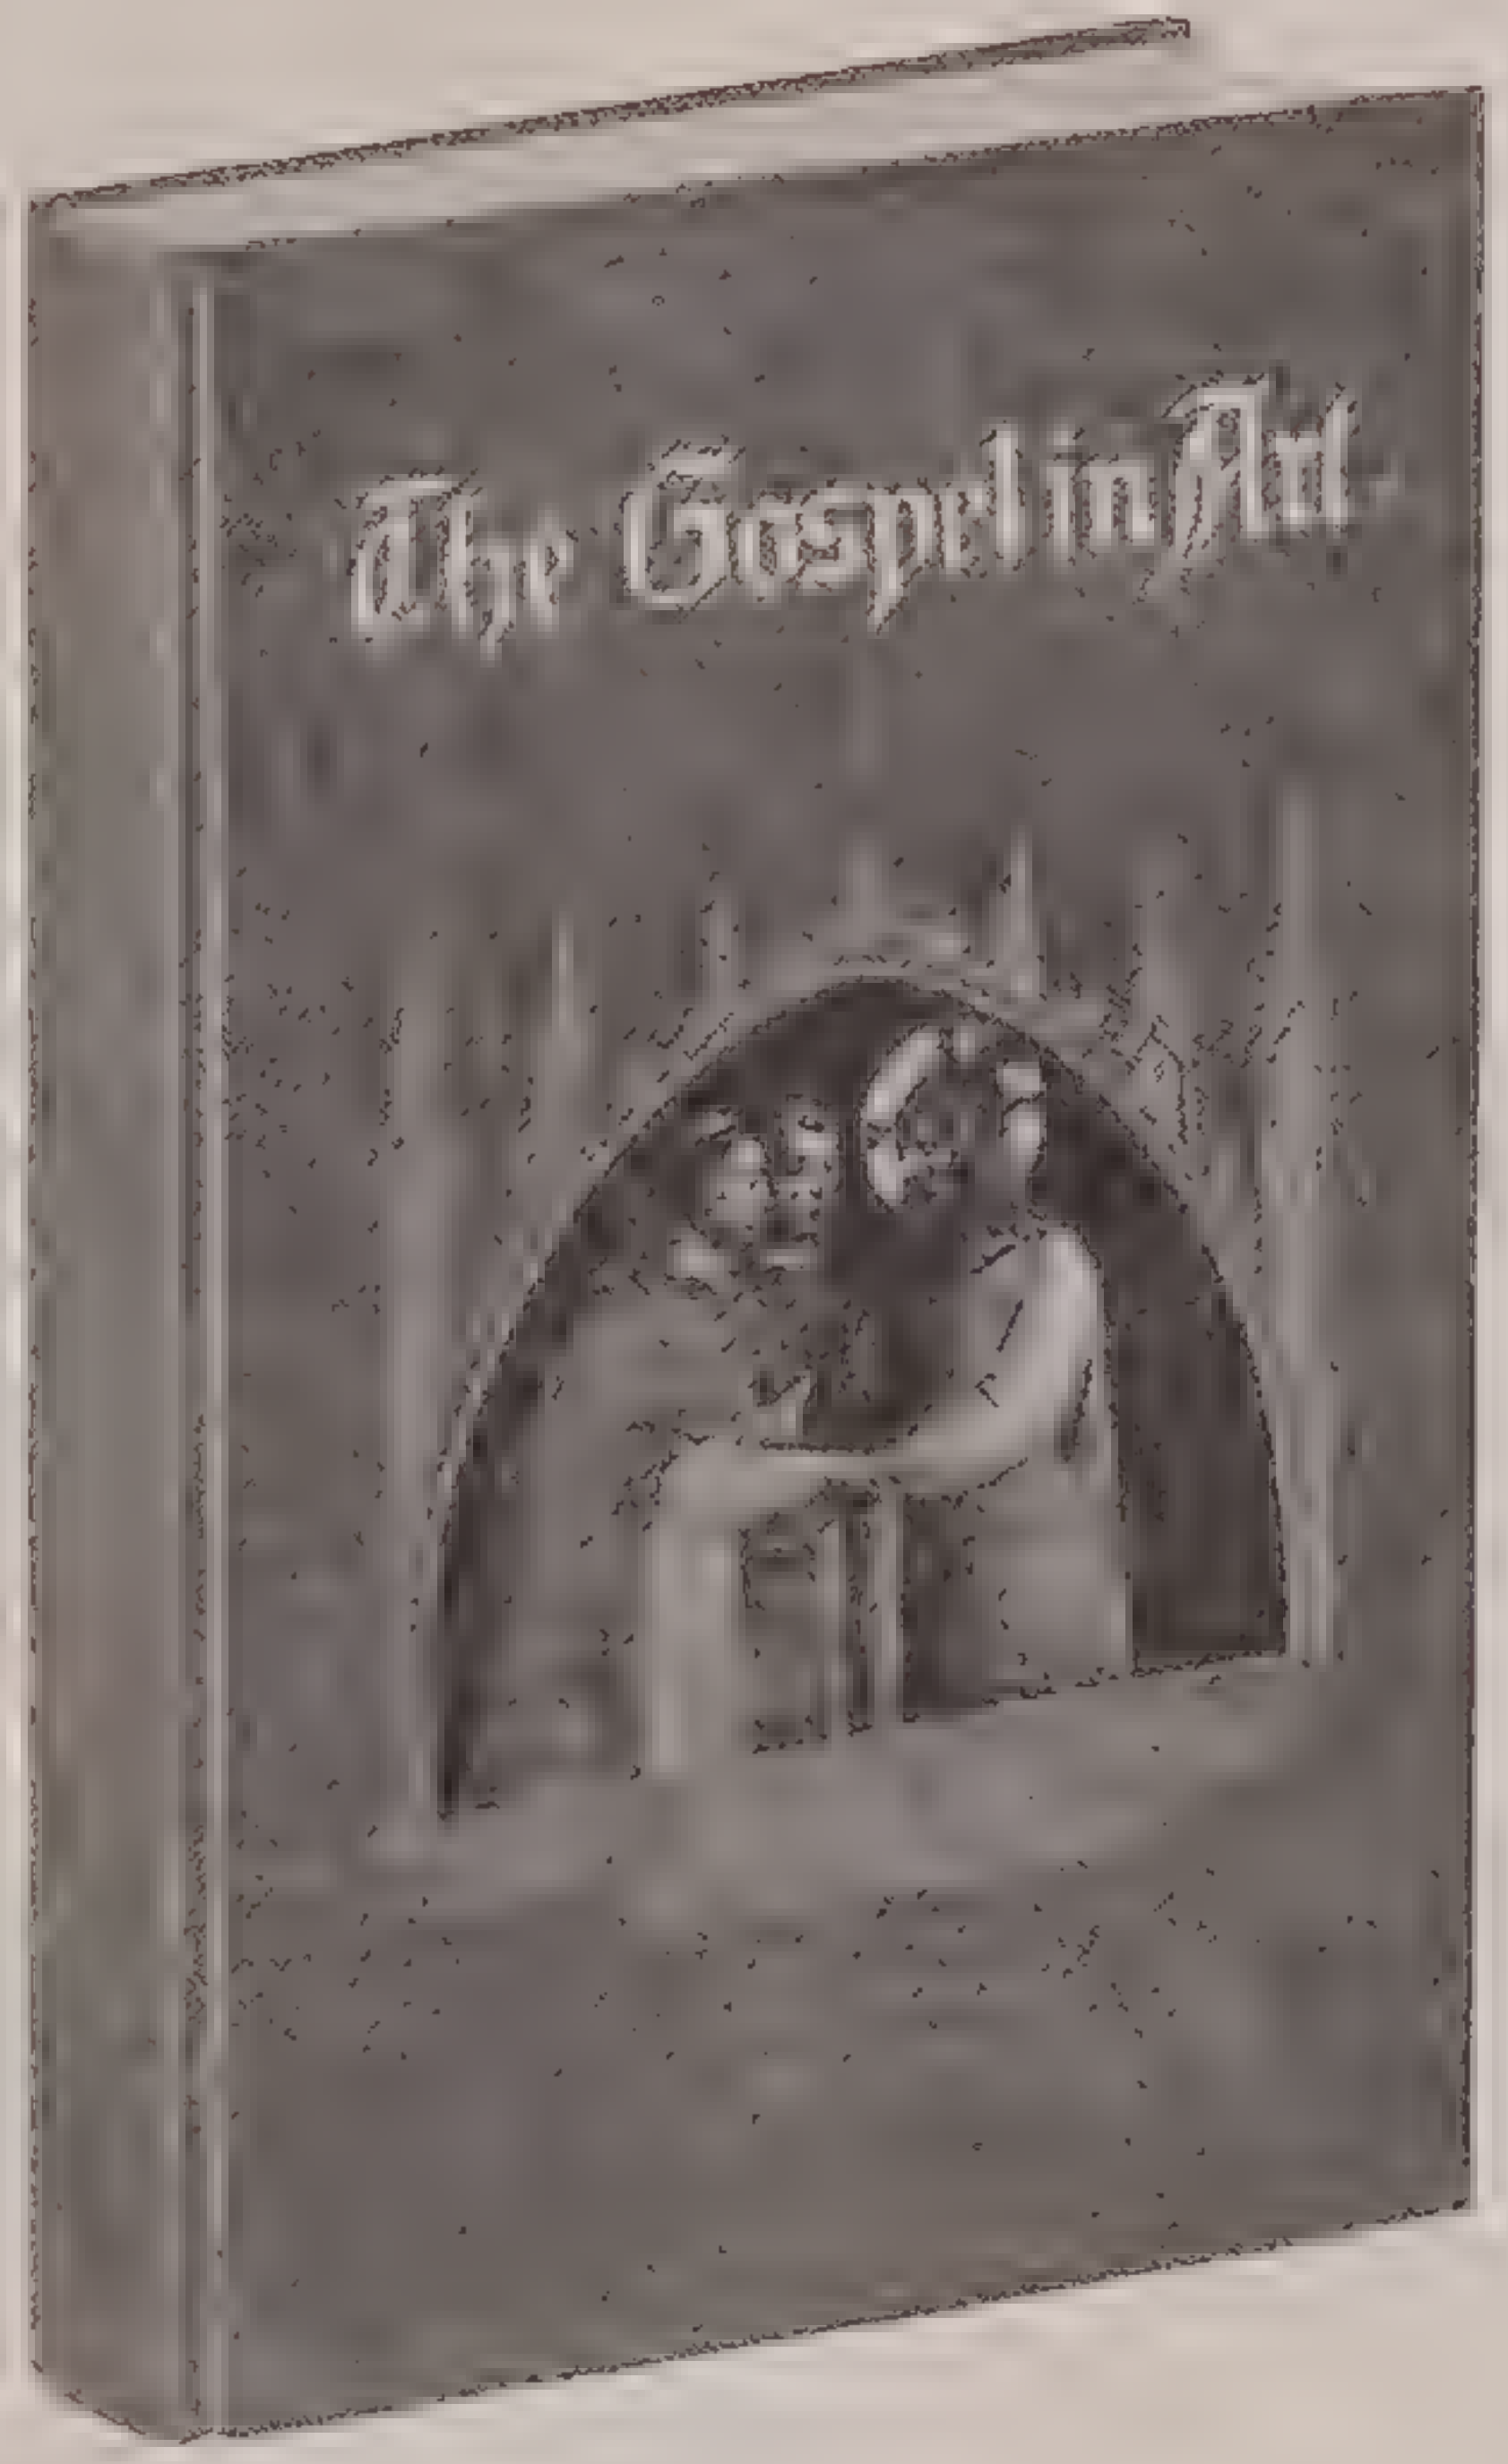
The Gospel in Art

ALBERT E. BAILEY

Is without question one of the most appropriate and permanently valuable Christmas gifts imaginable.

120 beautiful half-tone reproductions of paintings of the Great Masters on the Life of Christ, arranged in biographical sequence, and two pictures in their original colors.

Each theme is presented in a group of several contrasting pictures and the work of each artist is interpreted. Four pictures on the Annunciation, four on the Nativity, etc. $4.50. Postage 15 cents.



The Pictureland of the Heart

WILLIAM ALLEN KNIGHT

After the strenuous and nerve-straining period of the past few years it is delightful to turn to such a delightfully quiet essay narrative as this which has been likened to some of J. M. Barrie's writings. Lovers of Dr. Knight's "Song of Our Syrian Guest" need no assurance of the quality of this beautiful book. $1.00. Postage 10 cents.

Another Large Edition of The Song of Our Syrian Guest has just come from the press in anticipation of the usual large Christmas demand. Th 2,000,000 copies have been sold, the demand seems unabated. Enveloped. 35 cents. Illustrated Boards. 75 cents. Postage 3 cents.

Margaret Slattery's Three New Books

The Highway to Leadership

is fully up to her previous work in its inspirational quality and will make a most satisfactory gift. $1.50. Postage 10 cents.

Never Mind Me

is a paper-covered booklet made up of four essays which are a challenge to a new patriotism and a higher citizenship. 35 cents. Postage 3 cents.

Jesus Christ Is Born Today

Three essays which offer a message particularly appropriate to the Christmas and New Year season. 35 cents. Postage 3 cents.

Walker's Comprehensive Concordance

W. L. Walker

One of the most sensible gifts imaginable for a church worker. The S. S. Times says it is "the only modern" concordance. Over 50,000 more references than any low-priced concordance. Cloth. $3.00. ½ lea. $3.75. Postage 15 cents.

The Master's Way

Charles R. Brown

As an aid to the study of the S. S. Lesson this splendid interpretation of the Gospels is unsurpassed. As a book to read it is charming in its originality. $2.25. Postage 15 cents.

Forefathers' Day Sermons

Charles E. Jefferson

is a particularly appropriate gift at the tercentenary period. Made up of sermons on the history and spirit of the Pilgrims and Puritans by a master preacher and writer it will prove a valuable addition to any library. $1.60. Postage 12 cents.

Star Stories for Little People

One of the finest little books for little folks ever published. Simple charts of the constellations with a story that instructs and delights. 60 cents. Postage 5 cents.

We supply any book on any subject published anywhere

14 BEACON STREET
BOSTON

THE PILGRIM PRESS

19 W. JACKSON STREET
CHICAGO

Ask for catalogue of publications and Christmas Book List

J. L. PETTYJOHN & CO.

OLATHE, KANSAS

High Grade Farm Mortgages

The Quality Investment

Over forty-six years record without a loss to a client. Investors' interests always first.

Correspondence Invited

The Congregationalist and Advance

Vol. CV. No. 48 November 25, 1920

YOUNG FOLK'S BOOK NUMBER

SIGNING THE COMPACT IN THE CABIN OF THE MAYFLOWER
From one of the sculptured groups on the front of the Congregational House in Boston. The 300th anniversary of this memorable event was November 21

Congregational World Movement

Massachusetts Leads Off

Massachusetts is on the move. It is awake to the situation of the Congregational World Movement and is cordial to it. There is a new spirit in the air that is quite different from that of last spring.

This is shown by the fact that twenty-four, out of the twenty-five fall associations, gave most generous space to teams made up of speakers presenting the plans of the Movement for 1921. Thirteen different secretaries formed these teams. Both the Foreign and the Home sides of the Movement were presented. The response was excellent. Nowhere was opposition met. In some cases leading ministers who were strongly opposed to the Interchurch Movement and its program last spring have come out equally strong for the present plans. Churches that did not do anything then, for one reason or another, now plan to get into the game.

Under the regional leadership of Secretary Patton, plans for Massachusetts are well in hand. Each association of churches is being covered by a local committee. This committee is made up of a chairman who is the associational director, together with a representative of the association's Apportionment Committee, a woman of commanding missionary leadership, a layman of experience in Every Member Canvasses, a minister to specialize on the Missionary Education part of the program, and one to emphasize the stewardship ideals. The committees made up of people inside the association have found a ready response as they have moved out among the churches.

Some embarrassment has been met because of the varying dates selected by churches for the canvass. It is to be hoped that many will be able to defer this until some spring date, when more educational and promotional work can be done. Many churches are welcoming this suggestion of postponing, rather than have another canvass for missionary purposes this calendar year. These churches will carry their general apportionment pledges until May first, along with their Congregational World Movement pledges made last May.

One of the most gratifying evidences of the new spirit in the churches is their willingness to get under the larger apportionment. The particular attitude runs from whole-hearted acceptance of the new figures and expectation of reaching them to a sense of absolute inability. Those resting on the lower stage are few. There are almost no cases reported of absolute refusal. The average church faces the goal as a big challenge requiring a big effort, and yet one by no means impossible. Massachusetts plans to make a most creditable showing in the campaign for 1921.

In connection with the Massachusetts plans, as last year, a strong committee of women is to co-operate. The chairman this year is Mrs. Henry Francis Smith, and the executive secretary, Miss Alice M. Kyle. C. E. W.

Appreciation of the Secretaries

Dear Mr. Editor:

The Northwest has just had a memorable visit from two of our national secretaries, Dr. Frank M. Sheldon and Dr. George L. Cady.

They both spoke here from five to ten times on the pressing problems of thought and action now before the world. Their messages were in every way worthy of the great fellowship which, in their secretarial capacity, they represent. At this far distant point from Boston and New York, they made us hungry for more of that enlightened leadership which the leaders of the Pilgrim order are able to furnish in this hour, big with human destiny.

I am moved to send this word of appreciation of these two inspiring Pilgrims because I know something of the burdens of secretarial travel, and that we often take too much for granted the heroic sacrifices that our representative leaders bear.

Tacoma, Wash. Frank Dyer.

League of the New Day

Next Week's Readings and Prayers

Week of Nov. 29–Dec. 5

Monday. The Refiner. Zech. 13:1-9; 14:1-8.

Tuesday. God's Universal Kingdom. Zech. 14:9-21.

Wednesday. Faith's Heroes. Heb. 11:1-16.

Thursday. Conquering Trust. Heb. 11:17-40.

Friday. Running the Race. Heb. 12:1-17.

Saturday. Malachi. Mal. 1:1-14.

Sunday. The Gospel and Wealth. Mark 10:17-45.

Object for Intercession

For the Little Children of Our Neighborhood:

O Thou who didst love and bless the little children, to whom they came in confidence, thou who didst choose them as an example for thy disciples, remember in thy mercy our own children and the children of our own neighborhood. Keep us, by the help of the Holy Spirit, from in any wise putting a stumbling block in the way of any of them. And grant that they may early be led to follow thee.

THE CHRISTMAS FUND

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief

The Progress of Nineteen Years

Christmas Fund 1902—$250 Christmas Fund 1919—$21,500

Proposed Christmas Fund for 1920—$35,000

The Christmas checks are a free will gift besides the annual grant. The maximum grant is $400. How much has it cost you to live this year?

Those to whom these Christmas gifts go are living in the limitations of old age.

The Christmas gifts of other years have brought good cheer where homes were well nigh in despair.

Prepare to celebrate your own Christmas joyfully by bringing joy to some veteran of the Cross.

Send contributions for the Christmas Fund to

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief
375 Lexington Avenue, New York

B. H. FANCHER, Treasurer. WILLIAM A. RICE, Secretary. CHARLES F. MILLS, Associate Secretary.

The Congregationalist and Advance

November 25, 1920

Volume CV. Number 48

By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

Copyright, 1920
All rights reserved

CONTENTS

- CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT 654
- LEAGUE OF THE NEW DAY 654
- THE ADVENTURING SPIRIT—AN EDITORIAL MESSAGE 657
- EDITORIAL—THE FUTURE OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL 658
  - THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS AT WORK
  - NEW PERILS FOR CHRISTIANS IN THE NEAR EAST
  - THE HAYTIAN SITUATION
  - HINDRANCES TO GOOD
  - THE PARABLE OF FAILURE AND SUCCESS
- FROM OUR WESTERN WINDOW 661
- OUR PILGRIM PULPIT—THE PEACE OF CHRIST, by Hugh Gordon Ross 661
- WHAT THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IS DOING 662
- THREATENING DISASTER IN THE NEAR EAST, by James L. Barton 664
- ONE LESSON FROM THE ELECTION, by William E. Barton 665
- WHAT SHALL OUR CHILDREN READ? by Helen Wilhelm Schafer 666
- AMONG THE NEW BOOKS 668
- IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL—DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS. THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE. 8. SOME BACKGROUNDS OF JESUS' TEACHING 676
- THE HOUR OF PRAYER—COMMENT ON MIDWEEK AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR PRAYER MEETING TOPICS—CLOSET AND ALTAR 677
- WITH THE CHILDREN—HUMILITY'S PRIDE, by Pauline Carrington Bouvé. THE COMRADES' CORNER 678
- IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE—CHURCH NEWS 678

Editor-in-Chief, REV. HOWARD A. BRIDGMAN, D. D.
Managing Editor, ROLFE COBLEIGH
Associate Editor, REV. ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN
Western Editor, REV. R. W. GAMMON, D. D. (Chicago)
Literary Editor, REV. PARRIS T. FARWELL
News Editor, MISS ELIZABETH G. WHITE
Editorial Assistants: MISS FLORENCE A. MOORE; MISS JANET L. SAVAGE; MISS SALLIE A. MCDERMOTT (Chicago)
Contributing Editor, REV. WILLIAM E. BARTON, D. D.
Business Manager, ALBERT W. FELL
Advertising Manager, KENNETH S. BALLOU
Circulation Manager, MISS ETHEL M. WENTWORTH

The Congregationalist and Advance succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Congregationalist, 1849; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday, by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions are discontinued on date of expiration, appearing on the address label of the paper. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to The Congregationalist and Advance, and will be acknowledged by a change of date on the label. Receipt will be sent if two-cent stamp is enclosed with remittance. In renewing do not fail to send exact address as on label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses must be sent in and be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies may be obtained at the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Subscription correspondence may be directed to The Congregationalist and Advance, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Talk of the Sanctum

Our Pilgrim Pulpit

Our preacher this week is Rev. Hugh G. Ross of First Church, Pittsfield, Mass. He is a Scotchman, who came to the pastorate of Plymouth Church, Seattle, a few years ago, by way of South Africa. The strong spiritual quality of his preaching is inspiring.

The preacher next week will be Rev. Henry K. Booth of Long Beach, California.

You will be interested to know that we plan to make Our Pilgrim Pulpit an every-week feature of The Congregationalist, the coming year, and every sermon will contain a helpful spiritual message.

Books for Our Young People

The readers, who review our juveniles, report this year a general high standard of excellence and at the outset two groups of carefully selected books are presented, one for girls and one for boys. These are stories. Another group presents "informing books for young people." Then there are animal stories, fairy tales and folk-lore, a group of notices of books for the younger boys and girls, a brief list of books of poetry, and a list of new editions of old favorites, like Tom Sawyer, Little Women, etc., most of them specially illustrated. It should not be difficult to choose books from this list to suit individual taste. We are glad to emphasize in this way the wisdom of providing good books for young readers and cultivating early the taste for the best in literature.

Reprints

We are interested in seeing the type of article or editorial which our readers consider worth reprinting in one form or another. We should be glad of more intimation from our big family as to what material in the paper they are interested enough in to pass on to some one else. For example, the calendar dated Sept. 26, of the First Presbyterian Church in Newark, of which Dr. William J. Dawson is pastor, carries on the cover a reprint of the editorial in our issue of Sept. 16, "What They Are Bringing Back."

In Our Circulation Department—

We are thinking about Christmas. And we are getting ready to send our paper, as a "Gift that Lasts Through the Year," to a goodly number of new friends, as suggested on one of the later pages of this issue. This suggestion will appeal to many of our subscribers—combining their own renewal with the gift of this paper for a year to a friend or relative who does not now take it.

If you really enjoy The Congregationalist and Advance, what a satisfaction it will be, all through the coming year, to know that the good things you are enjoying are bringing pleasure and inspiration to a friend, or loved one, through your gift.

It's great to share our blessings, and to pass on to others the things that do us good, isn't it?

From Our Mail Bag

I want to thank Mr. Sheldon for the series of articles on the Old Testament which he is writing for The Congregationalist. I am especially interested in them because of their helpfulness to my classes of Sunday-school teachers. They embody the ideas which I am trying to impress upon them. The larger part of all that is written by way of comment on the Sunday-school lessons is sadly out of date and not in line with modern ideas concerning the Bible. L. A. K.

CONGREGATIONALISTS MUST

Save The College of the North!

NORTHLAND COLLEGE, Ashland, Wisconsin

BECAUSE:

If you studied the Northland Map in last week's issue of The Congregationalist you can have no question as to the Field for the College.

Northland College is one of the very few Colleges that remain, not merely nominally Congregational, but Congregational IN FACT; which FACT debars Northland from sharing in the support by the great undenominational Foundations.

Northland stands entirely ALONE in a field that has been pre-empted by Congregationalists. If the denomination does not intend to support its institution already in the field, it should turn that field over to some other denomination. That will mean the loss of an investment already made of more than a Quarter of a Million Dollars. That alone is surely worth saving to the Denomination.

Northland is the only College in the very heart of the most rapidly developing Agricultural Area in America. In one North Wisconsin Town there were unloaded 22 Immigrant Cars during the month of September. That is indicative of what is happening in scores of North Wisconsin towns in the Northland territory. The average size of farms in Iowa and Illinois is 122 acres; in NORTH WISCONSIN it is 42 acres. This means that the rural population in the Northland Field will be THREE TIMES as great as that of Iowa and Illinois. AND NORTHLAND COLLEGE IS THE ONLY COLLEGE THERE!

Northland is doing a GREAT WORK OF AMERICANIZATION. SEVENTEEN nationalities make up the student body this year.

NORTHLAND is distinctively A MISSIONARY INSTITUTION

Practically every student is earning ALL of the expenses. Their parents are MAKING HOMES IN THE WILDERNESS; they are NOT Making Money.

Northland students serve as Home Missionaries in the isolated communities.

Expenses to students are kept down to from $225 to $250 a year, including board, room, and tuition.

NORTHLAND MUST HAVE AT ONCE

$10,000, to make up the shortage in the promised help of the Congregational World Movement for last year.

$10,000, to clear up debt caused by WAR CONDITIONS.

$15,000, to carry on work of the present year.

I WILL HELP SAVE NORTHLAND COLLEGE.

I pledge for this year
Enclosed is my check for } $5,000; $1,000; $500; $100; $......

Signed:..

Address:..

Clip and mail to PRES. J. D. BROWNELL, D. D., Northland College, Ashland, Wisconsin

The Congregationalist
and Advance

Pilgrim Virtues in Modern Life

IV. The Adventuring Spirit

APART from the high motives prompting it, and the astonishing results, the transfer of the Pilgrims from the Old world to the New was one of the mightiest demonstrations of the adventuring spirit which the world has ever seen. It takes rank with the migration of Abraham and his caravan from Ur of the Chaldees to Canaan, and with the exodus, from Egypt, of the Israelites. It was the response of courageous, forward-looking souls to the Master's command, "Launch out into the deep."

Only men and women in whom the adventurous spirit, we may almost say the sporting instinct, was strong would have been willing to uproot the interests and affections which had grown to such dimensions in the hospitable soil of Holland. The risks and extreme discomforts of a voyage in a vessel which was but a shallop, compared with the modern transatlantic liner, might well have deterred even ordinarily courageous folk.

THE moral venture on the part of the Pilgrims was the magnificent thing. Theirs was not the temerity and recklessness which has characterized in every age irresponsible, excitement-seeking, or avaricious rovers over the face of the earth. The Pilgrim experiment was only just begun when Brewster, Bradford, and the others landed at Plymouth. They had to create, develop, and administer a new type of government in Church and State. As the years went on, the task of relating properly the sometimes discordant members of the colony to one another and to their neighbors, required bold, inventive, and forcible minds.

The Pilgrims were the liberals, the radicals of their day. Every subsequent movement which involved a break with precedent, and whose ostensible object was a larger freedom and a better life for the individual and the race, can properly hark back to the Pilgrims for its justification, as its ultimate value must be judged by its conformity to their fundamental convictions.

Not that the Pilgrims were a set of cranks or professional reformers, or that they maintained, decade after decade, a uniformly, friendly attitude toward new departures in Church and State, and in theology. Not that they were bitten with the itch for novelty, but when they once did make the break with the past, that tremendous wrench left its permanent marks upon their thought, their plans, and their deeds. "The Puritan temper," says Dr. Richard S. Storrs, "is essentially an innovating and a pioneer temper, aggressive and resolute for whatever may lift society forward, toward superior levels."

THAT is why New England for three hundred years has been at once the stronghold of conservatism, and the seed-bed of reforms. When you link profound convictions concerning God and righteousness and with the spirit of high adventure, you have a force that can remove mountains.

We are being told today that in view of the restlessness of the age, the unsettling of foundations once deemed impregnable, it is time to get back to the commonplace, to supposedly safe retreats, to the homely, old-fashioned virtues. Good advice, provided it does not mean that we shall take counsel only of prudence, that we are to be satisfied with Things as They Are. The world simply cannot go backward. The only safety lies in going forward and still forward, deliberately, boldly.

IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONSHIP let us dare to help forge those links which shall survive and put to silence every threat of war and keep civilization together in the bonds of a real brotherhood.

IN NATIONAL LIFE let us seek and find those new adjustments, new deterrents, new common undertakings and motives, that better mutual understanding, which shall melt all barriers of race and color, of class and section.

IN DENOMINATIONAL RELATIONSHIPS let us dare to conceive of and work toward a co-operation that shall be on such a high plane as to eliminate waste and rivalry, jealousy and pettiness.

IN THE CONGREGATIONAL ARMY let us stand shoulder to shoulder, confident that we can do what others in the ranks have already done, and what the exigencies of the hour demand we shall do.

IN THE LOCAL CHURCH let us dare to do something different from what we have done, never falling back upon that poorest of all excuses, "We never have." Let us test the worth of the apportionment plan, the new methods in religious education, the Every Member Canvass, not for money only, but in the interests of fellowship and of all measures that look toward larger service.

IN THE PERSONAL CHRISTIAN LIFE let us not be satisfied with Things as They Are, with our present knowledge of God, our present likeness to Christ, and present zeal for his kingdom. Let us remember the lesson of Mary's offering, that real love for Christ and for men often cuts new channels for its expression.

"Launch out into the deep." Prove that we be Bradford's children by doing the works of Bradford, and by exhibiting his daring spirit. H. A. B.

EDITORIAL

A Word for Our Times

"The world is tottering on the edge of a precipice. The outlook is golden with hope only for those who have girded themselves with the harness and sword of the Christian mind. Away with self-indulgence. Away with luxury. Away with your indifference. A great solemn decision has been rendered by the country this past week. Most of you helped make it. Are you aware of your opportunity and your responsibilities? God give us all grace to drop every atom of our indifference, our self-indulgence, our love of luxury, and become heart and soul workers for the well-being of the nation and the salvation of mankind."

REV. GEORGE A. GORDON, at the Old South Church, Boston, the Sunday after the election.

The Future of the Federal Council

Among numerous agencies looking toward the unifying of Protestantism, none is more promising than the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. It officially represents thirty of the leading religious bodies of the country, with more than nineteen million church members. This is the time, on the eve of its quadrennial meeting in Boston, to concentrate attention upon its work, and to create fresh enthusiasm for its ideals.

Schemes for organic unity proceed slowly. The two in which Congregationalists are most interested are the World Conference on Faith and Order, instituted by American Episcopalians, and the Interchurch Council on Organic Union, started by American Presbyterians. We have cordially supported tentative endeavors in both directions. The first seeks to bring ultimately into one body all branches of the Christian church. The second cherishes the more modest ambition of unifying American Protestantism. It will take years to consummate the latter plan and decades to consummate the former.

But in the Federal Council we have an agency, started in 1908 by a group of men including such well-known Congregationalists as Dr. William Hayes Ward and Dr. E. B. Sanford, that has already brought Protestants together in valuable endeavors. It accepts the present divisions of Protestantism, not as final, but as not inconsistent with immediate co-operative action in the field of evangelism, Christian education, social service, and international relationships.

The Council was started on the right basis, and is the one national body made up of members chosen by the highest ecclesiastical authorities of its individual constituents. Its publications, like The Annual Yearbook of the Churches, "6,000 Country Churches," and the series of volumes by the Committee on the War and the Religious Outlook are invaluable contributions to that store of information which all churches should possess in order to do their work well. It has been a means of co-ordinating many agencies already in the field and of creating committees and commissions to study fields and tasks that have yet to be thoroughly mastered.

The point to emphasize is that the Federal Council is here and "going." If it has not done all that was expected of it by its most sanguine projectors, it must be remembered that the Interchurch Movement was more severely criticized because it undertook to do too much in the name of common Protestantism. The Council has never sought to do much in the way of administration, but at the Boston meeting the question ought to be raised and will be raised as to whether it may not be best to extend somewhat its functions in that direction. If it is to undertake what was hoped for in the Interchurch Movement, a constitutional enlargement of its province will be necessary.

The weakness in the Council is not at the center but at the extremities. It has an imposing list of committees and of commissions embracing names of men in all parts of the country, but the major part of the work is done in and around the New York office. This must necessarily be the case. But on the other hand, when the Council was started, we hoped it would do more toward promoting the federation of local bodies in thousands of cities and towns the country over. Of late years, largely through the initiative of Dr. Roy B. Guild and Mr. Fred B. Smith, both well-known Congregationalists, the Council has done a splendid work in helping to federate churches and Christian agencies in our leading cities. Of the forty-four city federations now in existence and having efficient executive officers who give all their time to the work, most of them were started by representatives of the Federal Council, and the few that were earlier in the field have received valuable aid from the New York office.

This work ought to go much further. It is important to give proper shape and balance to the overhead organizations of Protestantism, to keep them from competition with one another, to disseminate information widely, to send out a reasonable number of circular letters. But along with this work of initiation from headquarters should go the effort to bring about in every part of the land working co-operation. In many a city and town is a lamentable lack of comradeship, common strategy, patient and continuous common action.

No overhead or outside organization can compel Methodist and Baptist and Congregational and Presbyterian churches to love one another and to work together, but all plans for organic unity and for effective federation depend upon the sentiment in this direction that can be developed locally. In its program for the next quadrennium, the Council should give not less attention to co-operative undertakings at the top, but more toward developing state, city and town federations.

We bespeak on the part of Congregational churches a deep and prayerful interest in the coming Boston meeting. It will have important questions to face. One is whether it should meet oftener than once in four years; another, how it can become more fully representative of the churches. But back of them all is the problem of how it can generate enough spiritual life, and kindle enough Christian zeal to keep the already complex overhead organization from becoming a mere machine; how it can make the average church realize that its growth in grace, its power as a builder of the kingdom, depend on incorporating into its very fiber of life the conviction that we serve one Master and that we all must work together as brethren.

The Larger Apportionment

The real test of the Congregational World Movement this season is not whether our churches will support the causes represented in the Movement. Of course they will. They are the regular Congregational causes that our churches are in the habit of supporting. We do not need to argue that they are good causes, that they are our responsibility, and that we ought to contribute to them.

The question now is, are we willing to accept a larger apportionment? Congregational churches do not take orders from anyone "higher up." Whatever they do they do because they believe it should be done, and they wish to carry their part of the load.

The Apportionment Plan has come to be accepted generally as the best and fairest method of joining in the support of our benevolences. It is a logical method of distributing the load. But now the load has grown heavier than it has been. And we have to choose between giving up part of the missionary and Christian educational work which we are doing, or give more money to maintain it.

It is encouraging to learn that the larger Apportionment is being accepted cheerfully by representatives of our churches throughout the country. Whether or not the churches will meet their quotas, is the question that the individual church members must answer.

Many churches will wait until next spring before making their canvasses. But many are preparing for theirs the first Sunday in December. A special reminder to these is suggested by the announcement in the middle of this paper. Our missionary and educational boards are all in need of more money, and the need is so urgent that it calls for generous and sacrificial giving.

The larger Apportionment requires larger effort to raise it, and a new standard of responsibility for Congregational benevolences. We blazed the way for this larger Apportionment by the special efforts of last year. This season we are to have a single canvass in place of several last season, which will be a comfort to givers who have wearied of being canvassed and driven and appealed to for money every few weeks. Now we can do our duty with added zest, as we are assured that no more appeals of this kind will be made until a year has passed. Another point to remember is that the sooner cash is paid in, the sooner the present serious need for funds will be relieved.

In all this giving, shall we not make it a part of the expression of our Christian faith and stewardship; shall we not regard it as a real privilege to have a larger share in this world-wide work by meeting the larger Apportionment?

* *

Among the signs of hope and the reasons for thanksgiving is the agreement of the Italian and Jugo-Slav governments on the much disputed question of the frontiers along the upper Adriatic. The question of Fiume was settled by the constitution of an independent state mostly surrounded by Jugo-Slav territory, but coterminous with Italy on the north. That will be good news for the Hungarian people also, who even more than the Jugo-Slavs are dependent on Fiume for access to the open sea. This settlement is a sign of hope because a peace by agreement is always better than a peace imposed from without. It means, we hope, a permanent feeling of cordial good will between neighboring peoples.

The League of Nations at Work

The first formal assembly of the League of Nations, in its new home by the lakeside in Geneva, is a landmark, we hope and believe, in the history of civilization. The necessity for such a representative gathering of the nations had grown plainer year by year. It was emphasized by the war of aggression, which German ambitions forced upon the world. It has been proven by the course of events since the armistice, and by the wars which still go on in many quarters of the earth. The attempt to mobilize public opinion to make wars difficult and more and more unprofitable and impossible, has reached the stage of consent and co-operation by forty-two nations. It is a great triumph of good will and carries promise of greater things to come.

We regret with all our heart, that mismanagement and misunderstanding have prevented, or at least postponed, the presence of an American delegate and representative among the charter members of the League. For we regard our ultimate participation as inevitable. The constitution of the League may be modified to meet the objections already raised by members and non-members, including our own nation. But the need of this meeting ground of consultation and of counsel to steady and restrain the self-interest of the nations is just now the first administrative need of the distracted world.

The first full test of the spirit and purpose of the League will come when it takes up the practical problem of the admission of now excluded nations like Austria, for example, which has just made application for membership. Austria has shrunk from a wide-ruling empire to a small republic. It has signed the peace treaties and shown considerable good will in trying to fulfill them. It is in great distress and needs the help and counsel of its neighbors. The question which its application raises is whether the League from the beginning is to be an alliance of preference, or ultimately a genuine consultation ground for the whole world.

The other nations still outside the League, besides ourselves, are Germany, which has not yet satisfied the world of its good faith in treaty fulfillment and stable good will toward peace; Russia, which under its present form of organization will not apply; Turkey, which is rent by civil war and resentful of the treaty obligations which its nominal government has assumed; and Hungary, which has signed the treaty in resentful silence under the black flag of grief for its lost provinces.

We believe in the ideals of the League as a world-compact with an equal seat and authority in decisions for every nation that can give proof of a stable government and good will toward its neighbors. What the tests for admittance shall be is for the League itself to decide, subject to at least a majority confirmation by the associated nations. But the ideal of a world-including league must steadily be kept before the peoples of the world, both at Geneva and in their various homes.

New Perils for Christians in the Near East

The situation of the Armenian people in Asia Minor, we are sorry to say, seems to be increasingly precarious. The definite treaty which has just been published, to which France, Italy and Great Britain are signatories, defines the limits of authority and responsibility for France, which is left to work out the problem of Syria and Cilicia, and for Italy, which gets the southern region and coal mines. But France seems to be ready to make peace with the Turks of Cilicia at the cost of throwing over the Armenians altogether. The Armenians have been ordered out of cities and towns where they were defending themselves against Turkish brigands, leaving all their property behind them, and the efforts to relieve besieged cities have been stopped. The result is shown in the capture of Hadjin and the massacre of some 10,000 Armenians who either lived or had taken refuge there. It looks like a French betrayal of the Christians in Cilicia as a means of avoiding further strain on their own military resources.

What is to become of the Armenian Christians of Cilicia under this refusal of aid in their self-defense is a question which is greatly disturbing their friends in America. It means that a place of refuge must be found for the ejected and that American money is their last hope against disease and starvation.

In the Republic of Armenia, in the region of the Caucasus, there are serious troubles of invasion. The American relief funds have kept them from starvation for a year and they are beginning to make their own independent way. But the Russian government is trying to make Armenia a corridor for its propaganda in the East and the Turkish Nationalist forces are threatening them. It is a time of anxiety, of prayer and of renewed giving. And the winter is just at hand!

We are printing in this number an article by Secretary Barton of the A. B. C. F. M. which brings out many of the details of this sorrowful and threatening story. For information and for incitement to action it should be read with care.

The Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of Failure and Success

Keturah made a Cake. And the manner of making it was this. She baked it in Three Sections, and when they came from the Oven, she laid them one upon another so that the Cake was Three Stories in Hight. And between the layers she placed Frosting, yea, and more Frosting upon the top thereof. And into the Frosting did she put handfuls of meat out of the Cocoanut. For there be many kinds of cake that I like, even every kind that Keturah doth make, but the best of all is the kind that is made with Cocoanut.

And when she served the Cake, she said, Alas, my lord, it is a Failure.

And I said, Wherefore should it be a Failure?

And she answered, The Telephone did ring just when the Frosting should have been attended to, and it hath not sufficiently hardened. Yea, it is Sticky, and a Failure.

And when I beheld it, lo, very much of the Frosting had run down the sides of the Cake. Nevertheless, there was much of it still upon the top, and between the layers, and the Cocoanut was all to the Good.

And I said, Since it is a Failure, it were well to eat more of it, and put the Poor Thing out of Sight.

And Keturah said, Thou hast well said. Eat thou another slice, and yet another.

And I did as I was bidden. And albeit the Cake was a trifle

Sticky, there was nothing else that was not one hundred per cent. to the good.

Therefore, when she maketh something that is Unusually Good, I say unto her, Is not this a Failure? For I desire another piece.

And I would that we might somehow readjust life that all life's Failures might somehow make for success. Yea, I remember that my God hath promised that in some way that I know not the wrath of man shall praise him.

For if this world, which is a cake not turned, can scrape some of the char from its overdone side, and bake the side that is dough so that it can be eaten, then shall I rejoice. For I would believe that this world is a success, and by faith I so accept it.

In Brief

The young men who fought in the world war are coming to the front. The Congress that meets in March will have thirteen members who belong to the American Legion.

* *

A difficult winter is before the world. We must remember that in our thanksgiving, but rather as an opportunity of helping others than as a source of apprehension for our own souls.

* *

A good example of how one state is responding to the Congregational World Movement appears in the report of what Massachusetts is doing, on another page. Others seem to be just as determined to do their part.

* *

The Boy Scouts and the Girl Scouts have had their innings in the effort to raise funds. They are helping to shape the future of our people and need our help both as leaders and as supporters in their necessary expenses.

* *

Was it a mere coincidence or was the minister banking on a big reserve fund of good will toward him in the congregation when after presenting his resignation the other Sunday morning he gave out the hymn, "O Love that Will Not Let Me Go?"

* *

We have a great deal of admiration for the patient, persistent church workers who in one department or another of church activity, local, state or national, go forward steadily with their tasks in days when so many public and political matters divert attention and energy from the work of the kingdom.

* *

English, Arabic and Hebrew (not Yiddish but the ancient tongue in which Isaiah spoke) are to be the official tongues in Palestine. It looks like another step in the progress of English toward becoming that long-asked-for world tongue of which we have been hearing so much. And how would it do to send some of our theological students for a year's work in the Jerusalem University where Old Hebrew will be the sole medium of instruction?

* *

Talk about worth in little things! That woman patient who threw away the little bit of radium which annoyed her—only a milligram or one-sixty-fifth of a grain—threw away about $13,000 worth and set the hospital to digging up the sewers in the hope of recovering it, knew as little of proportional values as a man who snubs or despises or employs, to the peril of his health, a little child. The result of the sewer hunt, fortunately, was that the bit of radium was found.

* *

A striking contrast and comparison on the housing question was made by Secretary F. Roger Miller of the Macon Chamber of Commerce at the recent meeting of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries. One million weddings, he said, were celebrated in the United States in 1919, but only 70,000 new homes were built. Are the new married couples waiting for the houses to be vacated by death? Or are they crowding into narrow quarters which leave no room for growth of families?

* *

The burial of an unknown soldier, in England in Westminster Abby, in France at the Arch of Triumph in Paris, makes a strong appeal to the imagination. And the effect of this appeal was broadened by the two minutes of silence everywhere at an agreed-on time in recognition of this unusual burying. It is a recognition of what the rank and file, in the army and at home, did for the deliverance of the world. It is a declaration of our common brotherhood. That grave among those of named and famous men, and great memories will remain as long as these great cities stand as a symbol of advancing and triumphant democracy.

* *

The retrogression of British Columbia toward free intoxicants seems to have been in large part what the boys call a case of "cold feet" on the part of the supporters of prohibition. It is confessed that the law has not in the past been enforced, and just before the election Premier Oliver, himself a believer in prohibition, said in public that it could not be enforced. There are special difficulties in a big territory only in a small degree settled, like British Columbia, but we hope and believe that the majority of 30,000 can and will be overcome when the women voters in the territory get their bearings and get to work in the temperance cause. The other Canadian provinces which voted were for prohibition.

* *

An overture from Oxford professors to teachers in the German universities suggesting that the time has come to resume relations in the field of teaching and pure knowledge has been met by a response which accepts the overture but rather goes out of its way to suggest that errors on both sides shall be overlooked and forgotten. The English professors had no historical judgment in mind and raised no question of blame for what was done in the war, but the German professors seem to have used the occasion to insist that the blame was mutual. We are glad to have the spirit of recrimination swept away from the world of scholarship, but the German reply will hardly tend toward unclouded personal relations between teachers on both sides of the North Sea. It may have been a little premature to make this overture, but it was certainly Christian and wise. If civilization goes on, we shall have the springing up of a new spirit of cordiality before many years go by.

* *

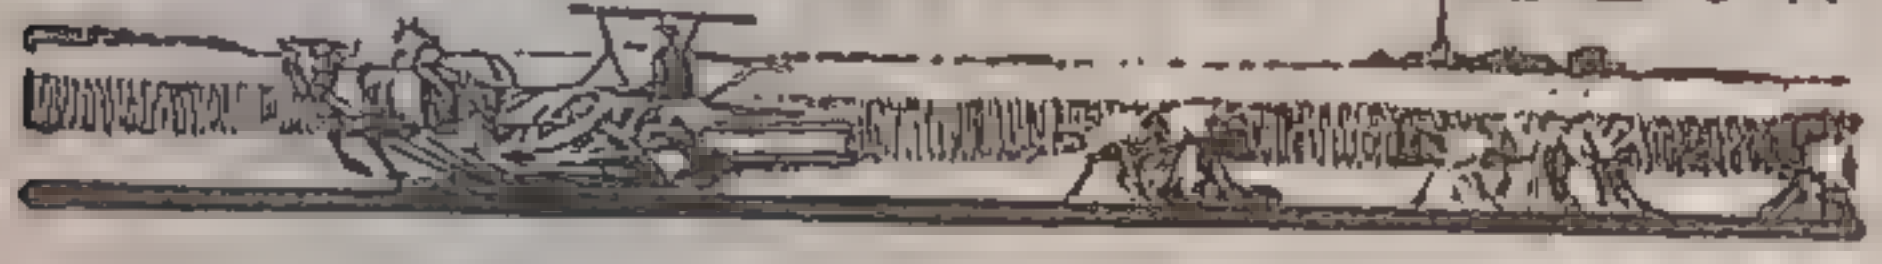
Possibly the Pilgrim Tercentenary celebrations would be evoking a more general popular interest if they had not come just at this particular time in the world's history. Regarding the celebrations on the other side of the ocean an English correspondent writes: "Our people are still war-jaded, profiteer-ridden and strike-terrorized; and an appeal to idealism (such as is implied in the Pilgrim commemoration) does not meet with such a response as one might wish." Of course the Pilgrims when they landed did not know that the deadening effects of a world war might militate against enthusiastic commemoration of their sterling virtues. However, the war is receding. We shall in due time emerge from our present absorption in things material, and as the official celebration does not begin until Dec. 21 of this year and extends throughout 1921, there is yet plenty of time to wake up and be joyful in John Robinson, William Bradford and all the other members of the Mayflower group.

* *

The result of the vote for positions in the New York University Hall of Fame has added seven names. The first of these in its claim on notice is that of Alice Freeman Palmer, great New England educator and pioneer in the cause of women's rights of access to knowledge and life. The others are Roger Williams, one of the founders of Rhode Island, Patrick Henry, whose speech on liberty every school boy used to declaim, Dr. William Thomas Green Morton, pioneer in the discovery of anæsthetics, Augustus St. Gaudens, the greatest of our sculptors, James Buchanan Eades, who by his jetties made the Mississippi scour its own way in open channels to the gulf, and Samuel Langhorne Clemens, better known to the world as Mark Twain, the creator of Huckleberry Finn.

Of St. Gaudens, whose name has just been written in the Hall of Fame, the late Mr. Maitland Armstrong tells a story in his just published recollections, "The Day Before Yesterday." St. Gaudens had at first little education. He once asked Armstrong where he could find an accurate story of Moses. Armstrong gave him a Bible to read. St. Gaudens came back late that night to return the Bible exclaiming: "I've never read this before. It's the most remarkable thing I have ever seen." The story is a hint of what those lose who have no background of Bible story and promise for their thought.

FROM·OUR·WESTERN·WINDOW



Election Results

The political campaign this year brought us a strange mixture; perhaps never before in the history of the West have there been so many complicated situations. In Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana, and Colorado, the Nonpartisan League added to the general confusion. In Wisconsin the League was befriended by La Follette and he practically dictated the Republican state ticket. A fight developed between him and Senator Lenroot who was standing for re-election and the latter was successful as was also the Nonpartisan Republican candidate for Governor. In North Dakota the League re-elected Governor Frazier by a very small majority and elected President Ladd of the North Dakota Agricultural College to the Senate. Dr. Ladd is reported to have voted the Republican ticket in the election and has expressed the intention to co-operate wholeheartedly with the new administration in dealing with the problems with which it will be confronted. Dr. Ladd is one of the great men of the Northwest and can be confidently expected to make a good record in any situation.

The League has been defeated twice in Minnesota in the last six months and made a very poor showing last week in South Dakota, Montana, and Colorado. Apparently it is losing much of its radicalism; it is getting its rough corners rubbed off, and is tending to become more and more like the political bodies through which it works. If it can succeed in shedding its demagogues and handing itself over to such leadership as that of Dr. Ladd it can wield a great influence for progressive legislation. One article from the League platform in Wisconsin, the most radical perhaps of the whole number, is here given: "We oppose a guarantee of profit to any industry privately owned. We favor a repeal of the Esch-Cummins railroad law and the ultimate public ownership of railroads, stockyards, and terminals, grain elevators, packing plants, terminal warehouses, cold storage and all other public utilities and all natural resources."

* *

In Illinois, as before related in the Western Window, Len Small, who had formerly been State Treasurer, won at the primaries the Republican nomination for the governorship. He was charged with having withheld for a year or two after his term expired a large sum of money belonging to the State Treasury and with making no accounting of the interest upon it during this time; it was also charged that he was the candidate of Mayor Thompson and that his election would turn the state over to the Mayor for exploitation. The Democratic opponent of Mr. Small was ex-Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, the man of the pink whiskers and the sky-scraper oratory. Certain strong daily papers thoroughly opposed to Mayor Thompson, supported Lewis and advised Republicans and Independents to vote for him. In spite of this Mr. Small was elected by an overwhelming majority.

* *

I have traveled this fall all over the Middle West and have talked with hundreds of men representing all phases of our political life and I take it that the great plurality of Mr. Harding and the unprecedented victory of the Republicans throughout the country is not to be taken to mean that America has suddenly become reactionary and that it does not want a League of Nations. The issue seems to have been "Wilsonism." Republicans and Democrats alike who formerly supported the President and believed warmly in his policies have in large numbers deserted him. They believe that he should have accepted the advice and consent of the Senate in making a League of Nations and that so long as Britain and France would have been pleased to have had us in the League with any reservations, it was a great mistake for the President to stand for his own particular type of a League. The Middle West, I think, is pretty largely committed to the views expressed by Mr. Bryan on this subject the day after election. They also hold against Mr. Wilson the waste, extravagance and inefficiency of the war period and the two years since the armistice. It is held that government at Washington has about ceased to function.

The Mayflower Compact

"IN YE NAME OF GOD, AMEN. We whose names are under-written, the loyall subjects of our dread sovereigne Lord King James, by ye grace of God of Great Britaine, Franc & Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, &c.

"Haveing under-taken for ye glorie of God, and advancement of ye Christian faith, and honour of our King & Countrie, a voyage to plant ye first colonie in ye northerene parts of Virgina, doe by these presents solemnly & mutualy, in ye presence of God and one of another, covenant & combine our selves together into a civill body politick for our better ordering & preservation, & furtherance of ye ends aforesaid; and by vertue hearof to enacte, constitute and frame such just & equall lawes, ordinances, acts, constitutions, & offices, from time to time, as shall be thought most mette & convenient for ye generall good of ye Colonie; unto which we promise all due submission and obedience.

"In witness whereof we have hereunder subscribed our names at Cap Codd ye 11 of November, in ye year of ye raigne of our sovereigne Lord King James of England, France & Ireland ye eighteenth, and of Scotland ye fiftie-fourth, Ano Dom. 1620."

Signed by the Pilgrims in the cabin of the Mayflower on Nov. 21 (new style) 1620, just a month before the landing at Plymouth.

It is also true that a large number of our very conservative people, among them men who represent strong business interests, think that the administration has been entirely too severe with Mr. Debs and the multitude of others who are in prison for long terms simply because they were opposed to our entrance into the war. It is conceded that it would have been perfectly proper to intern these objectors while we were at war, but that it is nothing less than tyranny to keep them in prison now. There were a good many of our best people who voted for Mr. Debs on this very ground. The people of the West, so far as I have been able to get their reaction, with the exception of the small group of irreconcilables of the Johnson and Borah type, want a League of Nations and believe that we shall get it. As one business man put it, "Let us quit talking about the Senate oligarchy and about any mistakes that we think the President has made and let us quit our bitter partisanship and get together on the outlines of a League upon which the majority of fair-minded people can agree, for the only way that we can hope to have a real League of Nations is to have it in mutual understanding and sympathy in each nation and among the nations, and this sort of thing does not come by laying down hard and fast rules, but by working together." Dr. Frank Crane is undoubtedly right when he pleads with the administration that is to come into power next March to form a coalition government that shall represent all the people. All of us except the hide-bound politicians would agree to this.

* *

The settlement of the question of allowing Sunday movies in Oak Park, a suburb of Chicago, with about 50,000 people, indicates the great power of the church. Certain mercenary interests have tried several times during the last few years to have an ordinance passed permitting Sunday shows. By the most desperate efforts these interests had the question placed on the ballot at the election last Tuesday and the opposition to the Sunday shows won by more than 1,400 votes. The church people "agitated" so well that there were 2,000 more votes cast on the movie question than there were cast for presidential candidates. The church element in Oak Park is very strong and was lined up solidly against the measure. We may congratulate ourselves on the success of this movement because we have six Congregational churches in the village.

* *

The 18th Amendment has not been well enforced in the City of Chicago for a long time. The police have done little or nothing to make the law effective, while the Federal force has not been great enough to really take care of the situation. As a result bootlegging has been open and above board and it has been possible to buy liquors at almost any saloon. It has come about that even policemen were helping to dispose of liquor and railway men had been so corrupted that they were aiding in stealing booze. The liquor forces had gotten exceedingly bold and apparently thought they were immune.

Federal Judge Landis of Standard Oil fame took a hand the other day and immediately things began to happen. He sentenced Charles W. Sommers, owner of the Birchmont Hotel and the St. James Grill, to 30 months in the Leavenworth penitentiary and fined him $10,500. His cousin, William Sommers, who was implicated with him was sentenced to 90 days in the county jail and fined $10,000. The liquor problem would soon be cleaned up if we had a few more judges with the kind of nerve exhibited by Kenesaw Mountain Landis. His pronouncement when he sentenced Sommers was as follows:

> Now, as to Charles Sommers. He just won't go dry. He is determined he won't obey the law. He was arrested, pleaded guilty, and fined $250 by Federal Judge Carpenter. He evidently thought that was a cheap license. It didn't stop him. He kept right on. The question is whether I am going to sit here and acquiesce to his breaking the law; whether I am going to obey the law, which requires me to send this man to the federal penitentiary. I'll say right here that I'm going to obey the law. The vice of this thing is the wholesale violation of this law in this city. Officers of the law appear before me time after time and tell me a majority of Chicago saloons are violating prohibition. The viciousness of the situation is that the mass of the people see Sommers walk around without being punished and lose respect for the law.

Chicago, Nov. 16. R. W. G.

When you and I are weak, Christ in a true sense owns the claim of our weakness and comes to serve us with his love. Behold, how this transfigures life! The times that make us weakest, and that force our weakness most upon us, and make us most to know how weak we are, those are our coronation times. The days of sickness, days of temptation, days of doubt, days of discouragement, days of bereavement and of the aching loneliness which comes when the strong voice is silent and the dear face is gone, these are the days when Christ sees most clear the crown of our need upon our foreheads.—Phillips Brooks.

WHAT THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IS DOING

Stirring News from Sherwood Eddy

THRILLING indeed are the tidings that come from Sherwood Eddy, who has campaigned for Christ among students in almost every country of the world. He has lately been in Egypt, at the very citadel of Mohammedanism. To his meetings have flocked thousands of Mohammedan students connected with the great university known as the El Azhar, which is one of the main nurseries of the Moslem propaganda throughout Africa and Asia. They gave respectful and ever sympathetic hearing to his straightforward setting forth of Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the World. After the more formal addresses, he met scores of them for personal interviews with relation to Christian life. Mohammedanism has hitherto seemed an almost unyielding rock before the Christian advance, but this attitude of the younger generation may serve as the augury of a new era. Samuel W. Zwemer, who has been a missionary to the Mohammedans for many years, and whose books are an authority on the Moslem religion, co-operated with Mr. Eddy in this Egyptian campaign.

The Older Churches Being Influenced

ANOTHER surprising and most hopeful sign in connection with Sherwood Eddy's present work in universities of the Near East is the fact that the older branches of the Christian church are showing a more friendly attitude toward the presentation of evangelical Christianity. In Egypt, Mr. Eddy spoke to several audiences of Copts. In the course of one of his addresses he paused for fifteen minutes during which time every person present connected with any form of Christianity was asked to tell his right-hand neighbor the best thing he knew about Jesus Christ. The hum of conversation all over the hall indicated a compliance with his request, and the scene was a most remarkable one. At the request of the Metropolitan of Athens, Mr. Eddy is to hold meetings in that great center of historic culture.

The Mayflower Council Teams in the Field

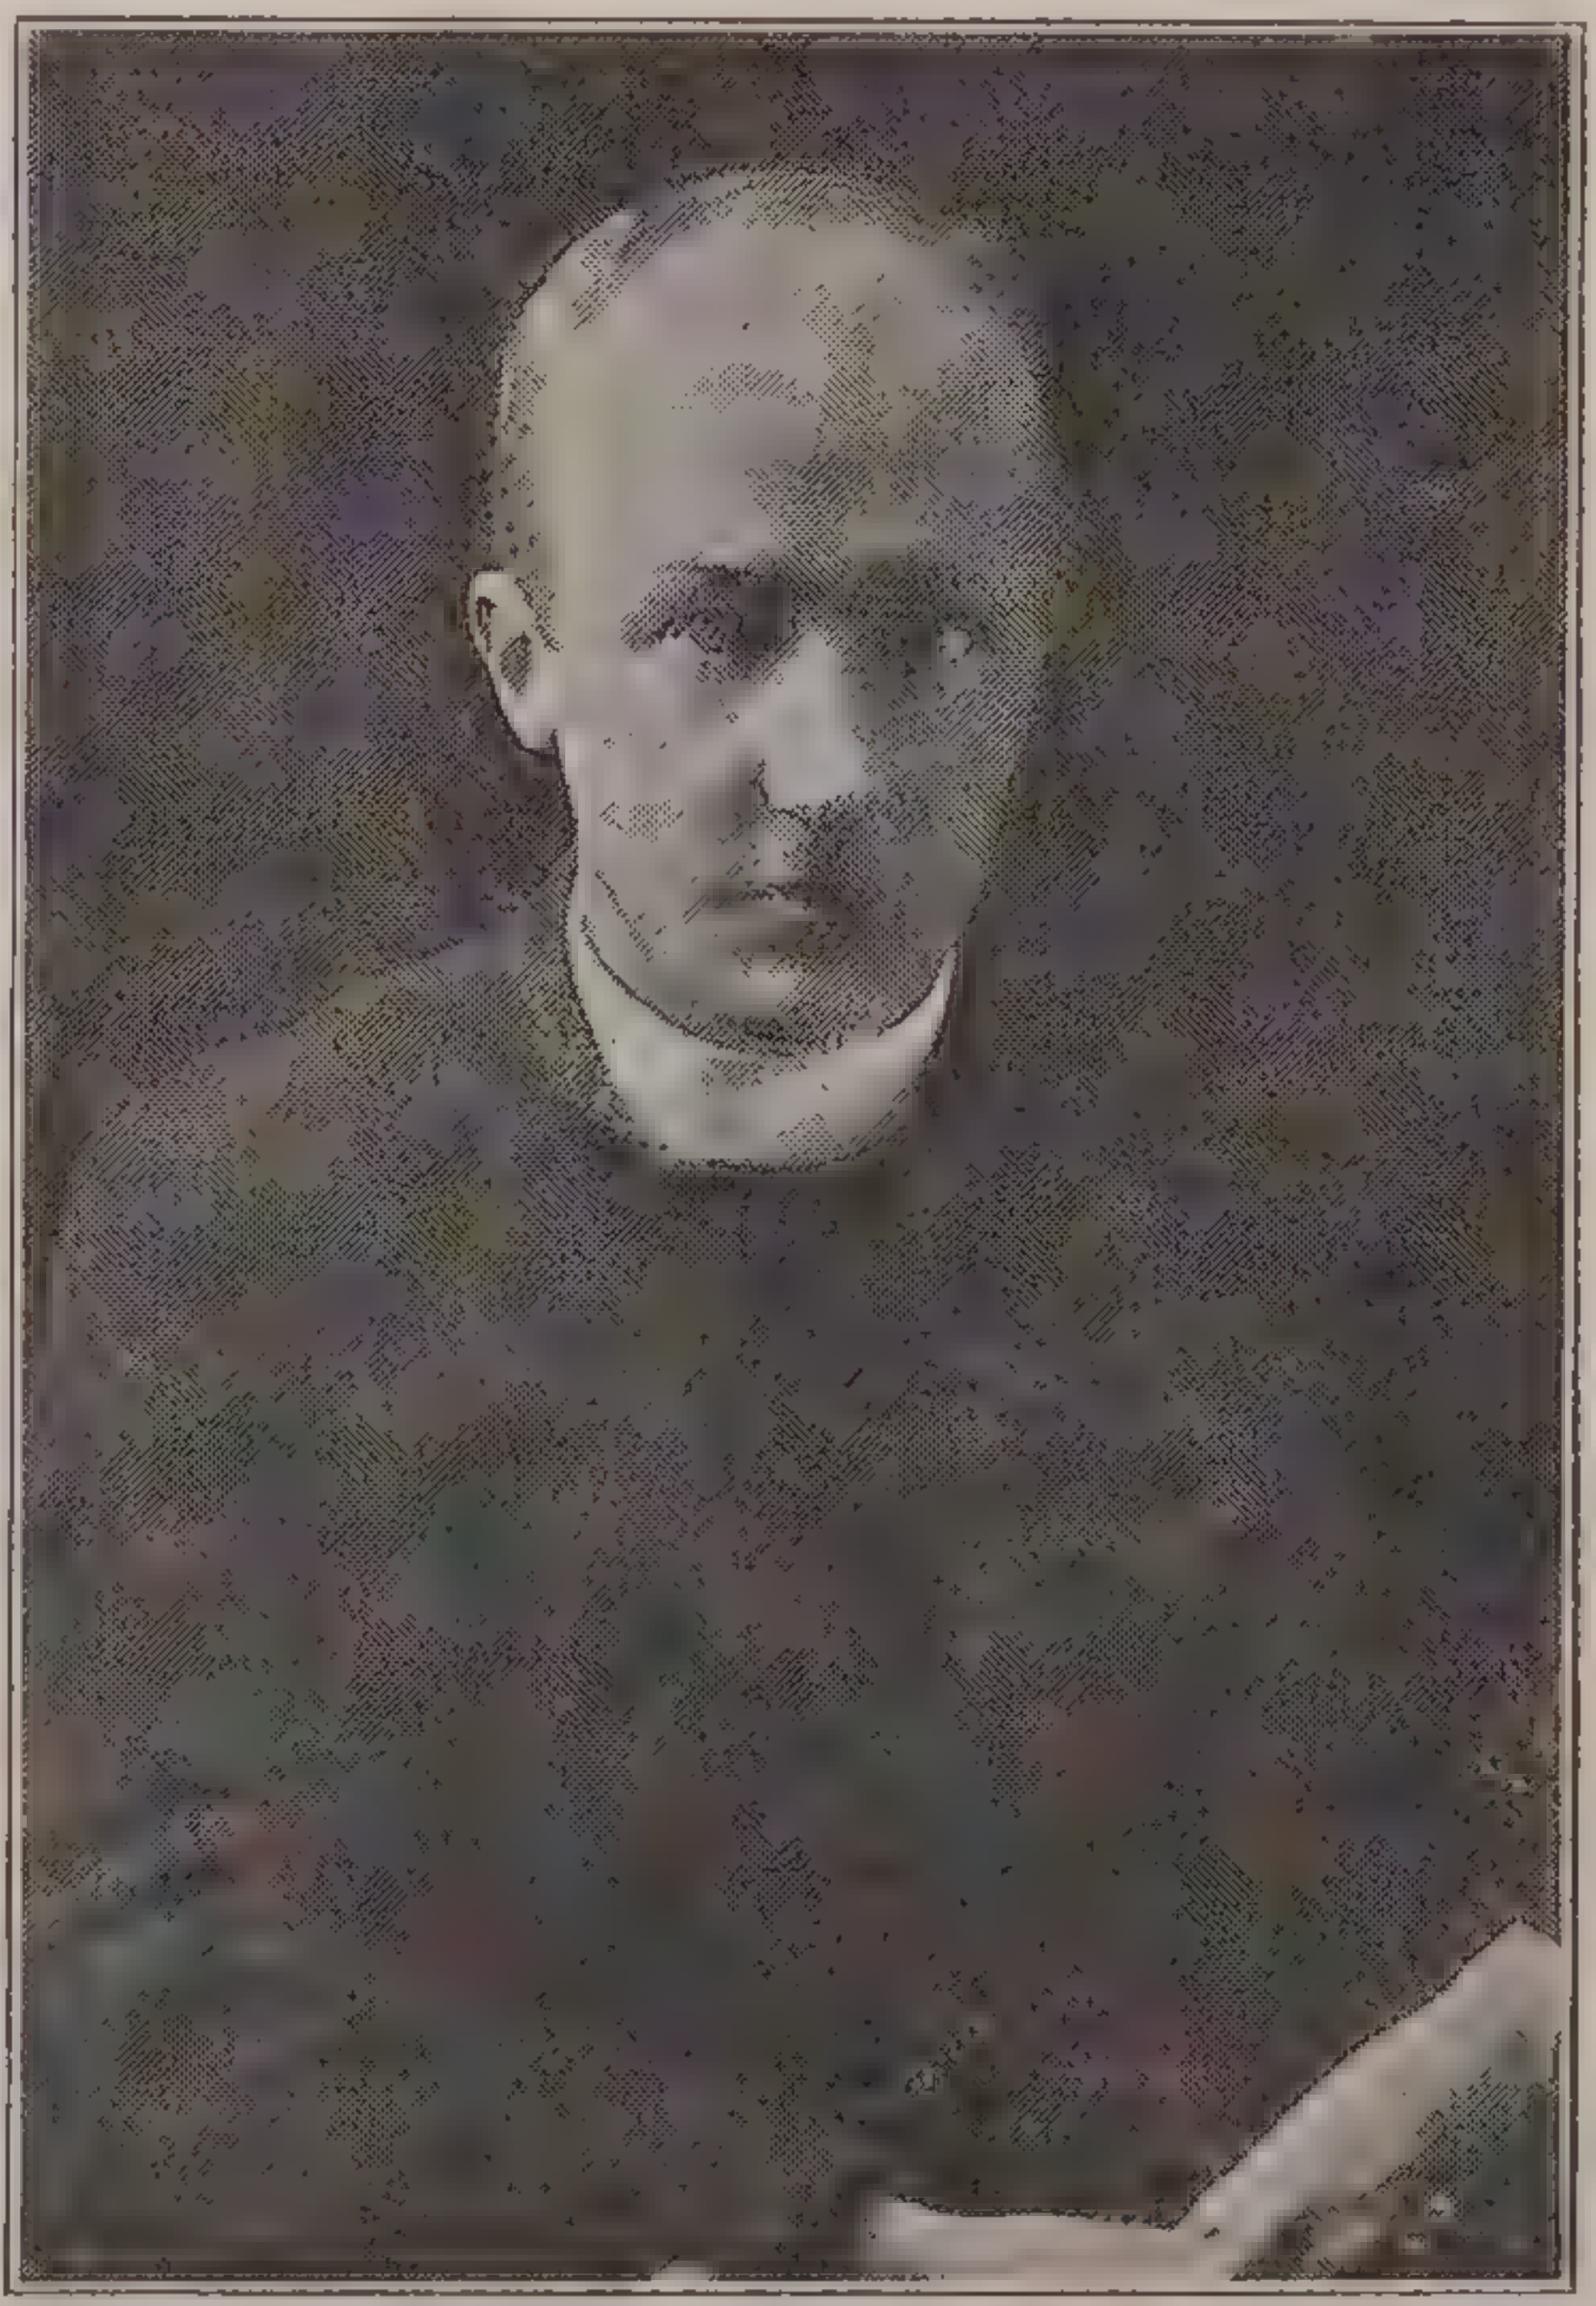
NEW ENGLAND cities were visited last week by one of the several teams being sent throughout the country by the American Mayflower Council, in the interests of a proper celebration of the Tercentenary. Dr. J. P. Huget of Brooklyn was accompanied by Mr. P. Whitwell Wilson, New York correspondent of the London Daily News. The two started at Portland, went thence to Providence, and from there to Worcester and Springfield. Dr. Huget is to be one of the speakers at a great demonstration in the Academy of Music in Brooklyn next Sunday. Several cities in northern New York were visited last week by Dr. Jefferson and Dr. Alexander Ramsay of London, and in other parts of the country other teams, several of them made up jointly of Americans and Englishmen, were sounding the same reminiscent and prophetic note.

The New Era Movement

THE New Era Movement in the Presbyterian Church having undergone a substantial reorganization by the last General Assembly is carrying forward a vigorous nation wide program for this year, which includes the setting of goals and objectives for the entire Church and the adjustment of individual and Presbyterian Church organization, the development of stewardship and mission study, the undergirding of the normal spiritual activities of the Church, and the carrying on of the annual Every Member Canvass, early in March, 1921, for the benevolent and congregational expenditures of the Church. While the Movement has suffered, in common with kindred Forward Movements, during the last twelve months, it is being accompanied with an increasing tide of favor. The toboggan slide and the decline in the number of those received upon profession of faith and in the membership of the Sunday school has been completely checked and there is a rapid and inspiring upward trend. The number of mission study classes last year was nearly double that of the previous year, and progess is still being made. The slogan originally sounded by the New Era Movement is still in vogue. "The whole Church marshaled at its whole task and a task for every member." It is suggested that this year another phrase should be added—"and every member at his task." This is only a goal, an ideal, but the Church is working toward it more diligently and more definitely than at any other period in its history.

Not a "Drive" But a Program

THE Presbyterian Church distinctly disavows the label of "drive" for its New Era Movement. In reality this Forward Movement is a five year outline of co-ordinated Church activity, involving all the Agencies of the General Assembly and the individual congregations, as well, in a program touching on stewardship, missionary education, social service, organization, spiritual activity, and also the securing of adequate funds to carry on this enterprise. Coincident with its birth and growth, the



English Tercentenary Delegates Now Touring the Country

MR. P. WHITWELL WILSON
Former Member of Parliament and New York representative of the London Daily News.

CANON E. A. BURROUGHS
Canon of Peterborough Cathedral, prominent during the war for his work among soldiers.

REV. R. C. GILLIE
Pastor of a large Presbyterian church in London and President-designate of the National Free Church Council of England.

Presbyterian Church has witnessed the greatest period of prosperity in its history. Last year, over $43,000,000 was reported through the Minutes of the General Assembly, as total contributions of the Church for all causes, compared with $32,000,000 the previous year. Of this total gain of over $10,000,000 nearly $5,000,000 was spent in increased ministers' salaries, better equipment, larger staff and enlarged individual Church programs. The income of the missionary and benevolent Boards had a $3,000,000 share of the total gain, the remainder went to miscellaneous benevolences.

A Denomination at the Cross Roads

THE Disciples, who number in this country a million and a quarter people, have just held their general convention at St. Louis, with 3,500 delegates registered. Disciples are a people of many varieties of opinion. A witty professor once said that where there were two Germans there were almost sure to be three opinions—it is almost true of the Disciples. In comparison with Congregationalism their differences of opinion and their independency would make the organization of the former seem like a hierarchy.

The conservatives among the Disciples hold to the old "plea" which includes "Congregational government, the weekly observance of the Lord's supper, the practice of baptism by immersion, the eschewing of humanly devised creeds and denominational names, the preaching of a particular formula of conversion stated in terms of faith, repentance, confession, and baptism (immersion). The emphasis of the reactionaries who hold to this plea is upon immersion and this is the barrier that separates Disciples from other denominations. The progressive school of opinion that has grown up in late years among the Disciples would probably use the same terms as the reactionaries in describing their position, but they manifest an entirely different spirit. The Christian Century, edited by Disciples ministers, says of the progressives. "They find the genuis of their distinctive position in the passion for Christian unity and the conviction that the practice of it should begin at once by the actual inclusion in an unqualified fellowship of all whom Christ has received into his fellowship. . . . The one group hopes to find unity through correct organization. The other hopes to find correctness, if at all, through the practice of unity." Baptism by immersion is the specter that appears at every Disciples convention.

"Open Membership" in China

THE crisis which the Disciples now face has been brought about by their missionary work in China. The great union movement there, especially the project to form the United Christian Church of China, has brought all the denominations to a heart searching as to their sincerity in their profession of a desire for comity and a mission field free from the curse of sectarianism. The concrete question presented to Disciples missionaries in China is that of receiving members from other denominations without requiring them to submit to immersion. To receive members from other bodies without re-baptism is designated by Disciples as the practice of "open membership." The missionaries apparently are committed to and have been practicing this in some measure. They believe that to do otherwise will bring sectarianism into China and that they would deprecate very much. On the other hand if they practice "open membership" they find themselves out of harmony with the customs and the traditions of the churches for which they labor. The conservatives succeeded in getting a vote of the convention against "open membership" and the resolution provided that missionaries should resign if they found themselves out of accord with the resolution.

Photo from International

GEN. ROBERT GEORGE NIVELLE

Now in this country as the official representative of the people and Government of France at the Pilgrim celebrations. While in command at Verdun he retook the fortresses of Vaux and Douaumont, and all the ground which the German Army had conquered during the disastrous campaign of 1916. He later succeeded Marshal Joffre as Commander-in-Chief of the French Army.

Many church people throughout the country believed that the war would put an end to sectarianism. This controversy among the Disciples is evidence that there is still a great deal of the sectarian spirit abroad in the land. We need not expect to do away with denominations for a long time to come, but we ought to get rid of the devil of sectarianism and this pronouncement of the Disciples convention is nothing more or less than a victory for the spirit of division and strife.

Church Federation in Chicago

AT the Annual Meeting of the Chicago Church Federation on Oct. 26, a brief history of the organization was placed in the hands of those present. The Federation is young in years, having been organized in 1907, but its development has been remarkable especially when viewed in the light of the solid and substantial nature of its growth and work. Advance has at times seemed slow but it has always been permanent. Dr. Herbert L. Willett, President of the Federation, put this succinctly in his Annual Statement when he said, "No features of the Federation have been planned merely for ornamental purposes. The program has grown because there was increasing work to do."

Prof. Benjamin L. Hobson of McCormick Seminary was the first Secretary and is better known as the "Father of the Federation." Other secretaries of the early days were Dr. Charles E. Bacon and Rev. J. H. Chandler. Hon. Thomas C. MacMillan was the first President of the Federation and he was succeeded by Thomas E. D. Bradley. Dr. William B. Millard later served as Executive Secretary and Rev. Melbourne P. Boynton served during this time as President. In 1916 the Federation was reorganized and a much broader program of work was undertaken. Dr. Herbert L. Willett was elected President and under his able leadership and with the faithful and efficient work of Secretary Walter R. Mee, the Federation has been growing steadily and increasing the value of its service in every direction.

What the Chicago Federation is Doing

THE work of the Chicago Federation of Churches is carried on under the following commissions and departments: Church and Industry; Comity; Evangelism; International Fellowship and Good Will; Organization; Political Action; Public Institutions; Religious Education; Social and Civic Relations; the Woman's Department; and the Young People's Department. The scope and substantial progress of the Federation's work is shown by the summary of the activities of the past year. Such items as these are especially worthy of note:

Present working staff, 14 members.

Definite work by paid workers in fifteen out of the twenty-two penal institutions in the Chicago area.

Christmas cheer brought to over 1,500 delinquent and dependent Protestant children.

The number of Daily Vacation Bible Schools in the city greatly augmented.

Statistics gathered by the Commission on Evangelism indicate over 18,000 Easter season accessions to the churches last year.

A monthly bulletin issued.

A constantly increasing number of religious and philanthropic organizations using the Federation as a clearing house for exchange of information, plans for meetings, etc.

The significance of the work in the various public institutions of the Chicago area cannot be overestimated. For the first time our Protestant churches are officially represented by visitors and workers and a definite effort is made to help all those coming out from these institutions to get into direct contact with the church in their neighborhood. We are taking care of our Protestant needs in this field as never before.

One Lesson from the Election

The Powers of the President

By William E. Barton

Several issues were at stake in the recent election, and it is not my purpose to mention all of them. They will be in process of appearance for some years to come, and no one, probably, realizes today just how much has been involved or just what is settled. But one lesson we may as well learn, which is that the people have settled a clear-cut issue on the relations of the executive and the legislative branches of the American government. The Constitution, as we are often reminded, provides a system of checks and balances to prevent any one of the three departments of government from gaining such control of the machinery of government as to accomplish a usurpation of the power which resides in the people. One of the functions of the American government is to represent the people of America in their relations with foreign nations.

Long before the United States entered the World War, two students of American history and institutions expressed two radically different opinions with regard to this important matter.

MR. WILSON'S THEORY OF THE PRESIDENCY

In 1908, Woodrow Wilson delivered a lecture at Columbia University in which he set forth his theory of the powers of the Executive. He was not then President of the United States, nor even Governor of New Jersey, but was President and Professor of Jurisprudence and Politics in Princeton. He was not then defending his own presidential action, but was stating honestly what he believed to be the constitutional power of the Executive in foreign affairs. He said:

> The initiative in foreign affairs, which the President possesses without any restriction whatever, is virtually the power to control them absolutely. The President cannot conclude a treaty with a foreign Power without the consent of the Senate, but he may guide every step of diplomacy, and to guide diplomacy is to determine what treaties must be made, if the faith and prestige of the Government are to be maintained. He need disclose no step of negotiation until it is complete, and when in any critical matter it is completed, the Government is virtually committed.

When Mr. Wilson delivered this address, he had not yet entered national politics. We have no reason to suppose that he was defining what he expected would be his own policy as President of the United States. He believed that the President possessed these powers. When he became President, he exercised to the full the powers which he believed to reside in his office.

SENATOR LODGE'S VIEW

Six years before the lecture above cited, another student of American history and politics issued a book whose title affords little clue to its contents. It is entitled, "A Fighting Frigate; and Other Essays and Addresses," by Henry Cabot Lodge. Hidden away in this volume of essays and speeches, mainly biographical, is an essay on "The Treaty-Making Powers of the Senate." I have not heard any one allude to this notable essay in the discussions of recent months. It is a very thoughtful document, free from any partisan or personal bias, and it sets forth not simply what Senator Lodge believed, but what, as we may be sure, the Senate believes, concerning its constitutional function. The essay grew out of discussions following the Hay-Pauncefoote Treaty, in December, 1900. It has no animus in any way relating to recent discussions and controversies.

The essay is too long for consecutive quotation. He shows that the treaty-making power of the United States was at first exercised by the Continental Congress; and, under the Articles of Confederation, by the Congress, voting by states, each state having one vote, and nine of the thirteen states being necessary to the ratification of any treaty. The sovereign right of making treaties, was, therefore, in the beginning, a right of the states, and exercised through the Congress. In the discussions preceding the adoption of the Constitution, this power was given to the Senate, without any concurrent action of the Executive, until near the end, when the provision was modified to include the President. Mr. Lodge says:

> The obvious fact that the President must be the representative of the country in all dealings with foreign nations, and that the Senate in its very nature could not, like the Chief Executive, initiate and conduct negotiations, compelled the convention to confer on him an equal share in the power to make treaties. This was an immense concession by the States, and they had no idea of giving up their ultimate control to a President elected by the people generally. Here, therefore, is the reason for the provision of the Constitution which makes the consent of the Senate by a two-thirds majority necessary to the ratification of any treaty projected or prepared by the President. The required assent of the Senate is the reservation to the States of an equal share in the sovereign power of making treaties which before the adoption of the Constitution was theirs without limit or restriction. (pp. 230-1).

It will be noted that in this clear issue it is a New England Yankee who stands for State Rights, and a Southern Democrat who goes far beyond anything that Alexander Hamilton in his contentions with Jefferson would have demanded for executive authority.

In the same book Senator Lodge showed—in 1902, as we must remember—that not only had the Senate repeatedly refused to accept treaties which a President had prepared, but that in more than one instance the Senate had taken the initiative, and had told the President what treaties the states desired him to sign and that in others the action had been concurrent throughout. He set forth that while the President in the nature of the case must ordinarily take the initiative, the Senate has as good constitutional right to initiate treaties as has the President, and that it has several times exercised that right.

Presumably Mr. Wilson had read Senator Lodge's essay before the Treaty of Versailles was under consideration: he may have read it before he delivered his Columbia lecture. Doubtless Senator Lodge had read the lecture of Professor Wilson delivered in 1908, before he clashed with President Wilson in 1918. Neither man can have been ignorant of the other man's opinion. Neither could honestly charge that opinion up to personal ambition or official obstinacy. Each man uttered his opinion calmly and when no policy of his own on which that issue depended was pending in the Government. Each must have admitted that the other's was an honest opinion. But neither could have accepted the other's view without complete surrender of his own. Nor was any compromise easy.

WHAT MR. WILSON MIGHT HAVE DONE

One thing, however, the President might have done. When America was invited to participate in the Versailles discussion, he might have considered that the issue was too important for him to insist upon what he regarded as his full constitutional prerogatives. If he had known as much about practical politics as would enable, let us say, an average minister to get on well with a Board of Deacons or Trustees, he might have gone before the Senate with a little speech like this:

> Gentlemen of the Senate, our country is facing a crisis so grave that I must have at every step your counsel in a matter whose decision is to rest jointly upon us both. I have a profound conviction that I ought personally to go to Paris, and I hope you will agree with me. If I am to go, you will, I assume, wish me to be Chairman of the American delegation. I ask you to assist me in choosing my associates, two of whom, one Republican and one Democrat, I desire to be appointed from the Senate, and preferably from the membership of its Committee on Foreign Relations. I should be very happy if the Republican member might be, by your choice, and if you wish by my nomination, the honored chairman of that Committee, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.
>
> I wish you, also, to assist me in securing outside the Senate, and thus in a manner as representing the States, in which as Mr. Lodge holds, the treaty-making power inherently resides, two of the ablest men in the nation, students of international law, and men whose standing will commend them to the judgment of Americans at home and the confidence of the nations abroad. I have in mind a number of able Democrats about whom I should be glad to confer with you, and I am hoping that as the Republican member you will join me in inviting either William Howard Taft or Elihu Root. It is only fair to say that in coming thus to you I am going beyond what I believe to be the constitutional requirements incumbent upon the President, but I do not care at this time to discuss those matters. America has gone into the war as one, and the American Government must go to Paris with the co-ordinate treaty-making powers working in unison."

That is the way a minister would have handled a Board of Deacons in a matter of this sort.

Mr. Wilson is a minister's son, and he ought to have learned how to meet a situation of that character. He did not do it in that way. He participated in the preparation of a treaty which he said the Senate should adopt just as it stood. Lord Grey became troubled and told the people that if they did not like the covenant just as it stood, they might make such reservations as they chose and Europe would accept them. But with Mr. Wilson it was not simply a question what Europe would accept; he had, in the exercise of what he believed to be his constitutional prerogatives, told the world that America would ratify this treaty, and he honestly believed that he had committed America. He believed and plainly said that the good faith of America was already plighted. When the Senate, after one futile conference which the President held with some of its representatives, refused to accept this interpretation of the action of the President, Mr. Wilson went over the head of the Senate in an appeal to the people. It was a fatuous proceeding. Neither in political or physical strength was Mr. Wilson equal to that strain. He broke down physically and his appeal fell flat.

A SERIOUS MISTAKE

I am of those who believe in the integrity of Mr. Wilson. I believe that he has acted from high motives, and I believe in the end which he sought to promote. I regard him as a great and good man, whom the future will accord a high place in the life of America and the world. But I believe he made a very serious mistake, if not in the interpretation of the functions of the Presidency, at least in his insistence upon the full exercise of those functions in a time when the wisdom of the whole nation, and of all departments of government that had any share in the responsibility, was sorely needed.

Two men went into the recent campaign demanding at the polls a vote of confidence. One was Woodrow Wilson, and the other was Henry Cabot Lodge. Senator Lodge came to the Chicago convention, sour and resentful. He was smarting under the lash of criticism. In my judgment he had some reason to resent many things that had been said of him. On the other hand, I believe that he no less than Woodrow Wilson had acted deliberately and from worthy motives, and that his essay already quoted is at least as cogent as Mr. Wilson's lecture.

Senator Lodge as I saw him in Chicago in June was not the man I have seen on that platform in previous years, and at different times in the Senate chamber. He had aged. He seemed a petulant old man. He trembled visibly as he delivered his address. The strain of the occasion, and the high tension of his feelings, and the flight of years, wrought mightily upon him. He was not at his best. His speech was generally conceded to have been unfortunate. It was bitter; it was not great or magnanimous or thrilling. It was resentful, vindictive and I think ineffective. Yet Mr. Lodge knew that he had behind him all the power that was necessary to prove in that convention and at the polls that Mr. Wilson had been mistaken in his interpretation of the Constitution. And he has proved it.

Since the days of John Marshall it has been the function of the Supreme Court of the United States to interpret the Constitution. Never before in the history of our government, except perhaps in 1860, has a constitutional question been an issue at the polls, and in 1860 the issue was not well defined, and it had to be settled on the battlefield. In 1920 the issue was well understood. Not in the party platforms: the League of Nations was an unreal issue to both candidates. Cox showed only perfunctory enthusiasm for it, and the administration showed only perfunctory enthusiasm for Cox; the President in his pathetic pre-election address never mentioned him, nor did Secretary Bainbridge Colby, the official representative of the administration, in the campaign address which I heard him deliver, name Cox or hint that he or Wilson had ever heard of him. What he pleaded for was a vindication of the Wilson policies; and the people understood that.

Some good people voted for Governor Cox under the impression that thus they were voting for a League of Nations, and suppose that now their hopes are at an end. I hope that it is not so bad as that. We might have had a League of Nations long ago if the President and Senate could have come together and they could not have hoped to do that with Cox in the chair. There is hope that now the President and Senate will at least be in agreement, and I am not without expectation that ultimately we shall have a place in the League. But only in a minor sense was the League the issue: indeed, as between the candidates I do not see how any one could suppose that it was an issue at all. The real issue was otherwise, and it has been settled.

The people have decided that Mr. Wilson was not correct in his Columbia lecture in the affirmation that it is in the power of the President, without consulting the co-ordinate treaty-making power, to commit on his sole word and judgment the Government and people of the United States in international relations. Nothing could have been more bald than Mr. Wilson's own statement of the autocratic power which he believed the President to possess in committing this nation to international obligations. The people have decided that they do not understand the Constitution as giving to the President so much power as that, and that they do not want the President to assume that he has it.

There are several lessons to be learned from the campaign. One is that by the emphatic vote of the people, the treaty-making power of the United States has been made safe for democracy.

Threatening Disaster in the Near East

The Revival of Turkish Nationalism

By Rev. James L. Barton, D.D.

The situation in Turkey and the Near East is leaping into prominence in the political and religious world. The conditions there cannot be ignored even by the people of the United States, as they affect not only the work of American Missions and the operation of the Near East Relief, but mark the movement of the Bolshevist forces into Anatolia upon their way toward Constantinople. The safety of over five hundred American missionaries, educators and relief workers and millions of dollars' worth of American property are involved.

In addition to all this, it is no exaggeration to say that the relations between France and England are becoming strained to the point of actual danger of disruption over these questions, with no alleviating features. The armistice terms under which Turkey surrendered to the Allies did not include the temporary military occupation of the country except in case of internal disturbances. Nevertheless, fearing disorders might occur, Syria and Cilicia were occupied by French and British forces, the British later withdrawing in favor of the French who became, about a year ago, the only foreign military body of occupation. Adalia, upon the southwestern shores of Asia Minor, was occupied by the Italians, and the Greeks were permitted to take control of Smyrna and Adrianople.

In the meantime, Gen. Mustapha Kemal Pasha was gathering about himself, first at Sivas and later at Angora, an army of demobilized Turkish and Koordish troops, professional brigands and malcontents of every kind. There were large supplies of small arms, including rifles and machine guns, with ammunition, in various depots in the interior, all of which Mustapha requisitioned. A government was set up at Angora with a parliament which began to function claiming to be the only de facto Turkish Government, since the Sultan and ministry at Constantinople under the military occupation of England, France, Italy and Greece, was merely a Turkish Government in name, as it was powerless to act except under foreign control.

Mustapha Kemal's proclaimed purpose was to maintain the integrity of the Turkish Empire. He repudiated the Treaty of Peace, declared against any dismemberment of Turkey and the occupation of any part of the country by Greeks, Italians, French or English. He also protested against the setting apart of the so-called Armenian vilayets to a New Armenia. "Turkey for the Turks" was his war cry and most of the Turks in Constantinople itself were in sympathy with this idea.

Mustapha got control of nearly all of Asiatic Turkey north and west of the areas occupied by the Greeks, Italians and French and at one time his forces came to the shores of the Bosphorus within ten miles of Constantinople and cut the Bagdad Railway within twenty miles of the city. At present the so-called Turkish Government at Constantinople controls only that city and a narrow fringe of territory on both sides of the Straits. Nationalist forces have presented formidable resistance to the advance of the Greek army from Smyrna and from the southern shore of the Marmora and have driven the French out of Marash and Oorfa, made their tenure at Aintab precarious and inflicted heavy losses upon them. The Nationalists have gained courage as they have seen the French retire. Tarsus, Adana and Mersine in Cilicia have been the objects of repeated attacks by Mustapha's bands who have raided and devastated the open country, massacring Christians and burning their crops and villiages.

The Situation in Armenia

The Republic of Armenia in the Caucasus, which has been provisionally recognized by the United States and some other powers, is surrounded by hereditary enemies, the Tartars, Koords and Turks, and now is confronted by the Bolsheviki who are demanding recognition, with free passage through Armenia in order to form a junction with Mustapha in Eastern Turkey. The situation in Russian Armenia was never more critical than at this present hour. The Bolshevist and Tartar forces along the Caspian have already invaded the Republic from the east and, according to press dispatches, have connected with Mustapha's forces from the west in Alexandropol, and together were moving against Erivan, the Armenian capital. And the Armenian forces were proving themselves quite insufficient to resist.

French Withdrawals

In Cilicia, the French military commander, Colonel Bremmond, has been superseded by Lieutenant-Colonel Kepetrel whose first general order was to the effect that Armenian refugees who had been driven from their burning villages and desecrated homes by bands of Nationalists must at once leave Adana, the French Cilician headquarters, to which place they had fled for safety. From eighty to ninety thousand men, women and children are involved. At the same time, the Armenian men are being disarmed after having fought with great bravery under the French in resisting attacks upon Adana, Tarsus and other places.

The Turks hated and feared the Armenians before, but now that spirit is intensified by the fact that they have taken up arms against them and in defense of the French. The adoption of this policy of deportation will hardly stand second in atrocious cruelty to that practiced by the Turks five years ago. Colonel Kepetrel is manifestly preparing the country for French retirement and for the return of the Turks. Mustapha demanded that all Armenians in Cilicia not inhabitants of that country before the war should be deported. In other words, the French in Cilicia are coming to terms with Mustapha Pasha and are using their military forces there to put the Turks in full control of the country to the sacrifice of Armenian interest and safety.

In Constantinople the Allies are also negotiating with Mustapha. There is no reason to believe that he will make terms with them that are more merciful to the Christian races than have already been made with the French in Cilicia. Under these conditions only one outcome is possible, namely, the restoration of the Turk to power from Northern Syria and Constantinople to the borders of Persia and Russia, with the Bolshevist elements dominating in the eastern areas.

(Continued on next page)

COMMUNION HYMN

By Allen Eastman Cross, 1920

TUNE: "Hamburg"

(Inscribed to "The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ")

"That they all may be one."—John 17: 21

Once more among his friends he stands,
Shows them the wound prints in his hands,
Breaks the white bread of brotherhood,
And pours for all his common blood.

"All may be one," the Spirit saith—
One love, one faith, one life, one death!
The Pentecost of high accord,
The flaming Power, the living Lord!

Since death is dead, and life is king,
To each the immortal crown I bring—
The will that self and softness scorns,
The martyr soul, the crown of thorns.

Comrade of slaves, our suffering Lord,
Thy love shall lead us like a sword!
By the red path thy feet have trod
We come to do thy will, O God!

(Continued from preceding page)

President Wilson has accepted from the Powers responsibility for delimiting the boundary of a New Armenia in the northeastern section of Turkey and comprised within three Armenian vilayets. Mustapha has looked upon the acceptance of this task by the President of the United States as an indication that America is an enemy of the Nationalist Government. This has made the work of American relief workers much more difficult and probably accounts for the reported forcible detention at Samsoun by the Kemalist forces of Colonel Coombs, the Managing Director.

During the year there has been a rising sentiment among Turks as a whole, and the Nationalists in particular, against allowing the Armenians to hold any part of Armenia in Turkey. If announcement should now be made that a considerable section of Eastern Turkey has been delimited by President Wilson as Armenia, destined to have a separate and independent existence from Turkey, and if at the same time ample provision has not been made to protect the Armenians in that general area, as well as all over Turkey, we may expect a concerted and widespread attack upon the unarmed and helpless Armenians all over the country. This would include over 100,000 orphan children now under the care of the Near East Relief.

America for half a century has been the friend and supporter of the Armenians. American missionaries introduced the Armenian nation to the western world, introduced modern education among them, and have stood by and suffered with them when they have faced annihilation at the hands of their Turkish masters. It was an American relief organization that sprang into existence five years ago at the call of distress that came up from that massacre-swept country. American missionaries, educators and relief workers to the number of more than six hundred are there today doing all in their power to save life and aid in rehabilitating the country. More than fifty million dollars in money and supplies have gone into the country for relief purposes, considerable quantities of supplies yet remaining in American storehouses there awaiting distribution. American interest and American sympathy center in the critical state of the Armenians throughout that land of prejudice, turmoil and disaster. There is no doubt that the rank and file of America would approve of any steps the Washington administration would take to divert the threatening peril and save the Christians of Turkey from annihilation. No one could question the right and even the duty of the State Department to afford protection for American life and property now in the country.

The League of Nations is now assembling. Can the United States do less than to offer her services to the League for the purpose of changing threatening disaster into a condition of good order? America has poured out its millions that these people do not miserably perish. Have we not the right to insist that they shall be permitted to continue to live in peace? Conditions call, not for sympathy, but for action.

It Will Pay You to Read

ISLAM, by ALBERT KINROSS, (Atlantic, November). The author is an English essayist and novelist who saw a variety of service in the East during the war. He writes out of experiences with Moslems in Macedonia, Palestine, Egypt and India and his estimates of character and tendency are well worth weighing.

The CZECHO-SLOVAK NATIONAL CHURCH, by REV. ROBERT KEATING SMITH (Living Church, Nov. 13). A further account of the religious movement in Czecho-Slovakia which is rapidly building up a national church free from Rome, in some instances whole villages passing over with church and priest.

OUR PILGRIM PULPIT

The Peace of Christ

By Rev. Hugh Gordon Ross

First Church, Pittsfield, Mass.

My peace I give unto you.—John 14: 27.

What an incomparably precious legacy! Let us try to discover what it is and what it means.

In the first place, this peace is not incompatible with conflict. For Jesus, as he speaks, is on the eve of the grimmest conflict of his career.

Moreover, those, to whom this peace of his is offered, are going forth to conflict too, the conflict that was to be theirs to the end, and that is ours still. We are struck, also, by the fact that the peace of Christ is not incompatible with apparent defeat. Was there ever, according to the world's poor standards, such a complete and final overthrow, as the overthrow of Jesus on the cross? And many times since then, the holy banners have seemed to go down in the dark battle, and not one of us would claim that the victory is utterly ours even yet. This peace of Christ, then, is not the peace of the cloister or of the sequestered paths.

What is the secret of such a peace as this? In the experience of Jesus himself, the first element of that secret was, beyond all doubt, his knowledge of God as Holy Father. Jesus claimed, as we all know, to enjoy a unique consciousness of God. "No man knoweth the Father, but the Son." Here we have not an inference of the logicians, or a speculation of the theologians, but a claim made by Jesus, and it is impossible to get rid of it without sacrificing the reliability of the New Testament altogether. And in this claim, we have the twofold truth that, first, Jesus knows God completely, and that, secondly, complete knowledge of God consists in knowing him as Father.

Wherever he went, along the changing ways of life, in sorrow and in triumph, in regret and in exaltation, in bitter pain and costly toil, the Lord was conscious of the Father's presence. As for us, this peace becomes ours as we more and more completely share Christ's sureness of the Holy Father's love. It is not always easy for us to be sure, but, if there is any method that offers, above all others, high success in our quest of this assurance, it is, I believe, the method of patient contemplation of the Cross. Here, above the noisy controversial voices, there comes the unchallengeable message of love divine.

O love of God! O peerless, changeless, deathless love! Let me find thee, let me hold thee, let me never, never doubt thee! So shall I also know the very peace of Christ.

But if his consciousness of God as Holy Father was the first element in Christ's experience of peace, the second was his consciousness of himself as the obedient Son. This, no doubt, is another mystery of the life of Jesus, but it is none the less a cardinal element of our Christian faith. In all his endeavors, in all his trials, our Lord was conscious of offering to God a holy and complete obedience.

In this response to the love that he knew to be ever under and around him, in this equilibrium between the Father's will and the Son's answering service, there is the complete secret of the perfect peace of Jesus. For us, to be sure, this is still an ideal and a goal. For in all of us there are still elements of disobedience, and where there is disobedience there cannot be peace. But through Christ we may do valiantly, deriving from him new strength and insight with the passing days, until we also shall offer to our Father a response of holy obedience, and enter forever upon the ineffable inheritance of a peace that cannot be taken away.

What a legacy! What a destiny!

What Shall Our Children Read?

Fostering a Taste for Good Books

By Helen Wilhelm Schafer

The love for reading seems to be born in most people. Even the very small child will pick up a book and read a most amazing story from some picture there. I suspect that most of us would not be able to stand the constant strain of life today if it were not for an occasional journey outside of ourselves into the thought and experiences of another, as we find them in the pages of a book.

Diversity of Tastes

However, some people will find themselves carried away by one form of reading, and some by another. The thinker will want one kind of books, the uneducated man another. What appeals to the mother in the home, who has passed through many life experiences, will probably not be that which will appeal to her daughter who is standing only upon life's threshold, with no actual experience in the problems and anxieties as well as the joys which combine to make real living. But after all the taste for one or another kind of reading is largely a cultivated one. That person who reads only the lightest form of fiction, no matter what may have been the original quality of his brain power, will soon find himself with a positive distaste for the higher and deeper things in literature. The taste for good books is largely a trained one, and its cultivation begins, or should begin in childhood. For this reason it becomes a matter of great importance to us as parents what kind of books are to be placed in our children's hands.

Most fiction can be classified under one or two very general heads—the realistic and the idealistic classes. The first class, portraying life as it actually is, is not so prevalent as the other, perhaps because most of us feel that real life is more or less prosaic wherever found, and our chief desire in reading is to escape from it for a while.

Idealistic fiction, on the other hand, always holds up some great ideal for life. Sometimes it is found fully grown in the hero or heroine; sometimes it is only a quality of soul which he or she is bending every energy to possess. But always the ideal is there, and every page of the book, directly or indirectly, holds it up to our attention.

Portrays Self-Sacrifice of Love

Take, for example, a very familiar character, Little Nell, the child heroine of Dickens' Old Curiosity Shop. Who of us can call her to mind without thinking of her as the very picture of the self-sacrifice of love? Every step her childish feet take, as she guides her old grandfather out of the unwholesomeness of their old environment, is filled with her self-forgetful love. And when accidentally she discovers his one great weakness—a weakness having its own mainspring in the love he bore Little Nell—how uncomplainingly she receives this additional burden on her small shoulders. Small wonder that when Little Nell was gone, the poor old grandfather wandered about as one distraught, and became a broken-hearted man who finally grieved his life away on the grave of her who had for him been ever the very height and depth and breadth and length of the self-sacrifice of love.

None of us can read such a book without feeling a sense of uplift and the desire to reproduce in our own lives the characteristic which is thus held up to our view. Almost always, when we are weary with our own lives and surroundings, we turn to some piece of idealistic literature in the hope of losing for a time our own identity in a world where the air seems a little purer and rarer than it does in our own work-a-day life.

However, there is a class of fiction which holds up an ideal which is absolutely unattainable, and this may have a positively harmful effect upon our children. As an example, there are the Elsie Books. Most women have probably read them and know that in some ways they hold up a wonderful ideal, but it is one impossible of attainment. Or if it should be reached, it would tend to make the possessor pharisaical, a trait of character utterly despicable wherever met.

I knew a little nine-year-old girl who, having read the first book of this series, had an earnest talk with her mother in which she pleaded with tears in her eyes, that her mother treat her as Mr. Dinsmore had treated Elsie. And when her mother, out of her love, refused what would have been an impossibility, the child felt that she had been cheated out of one of the greatest contributing factors to the development of a character like Elsie's. Her reasoning was wrong, of course, but we must remember that that is apt to be the case with a child, and whatever makes the profoundest impression is the trait which immediately he desires for himself.

On the other side stand the novels which most girls devour with such avidity today, those in which love conquers through seemingly insurmountable obstacles, and life flows on without a ripple; where the poor girl always marries a man who gives her every luxury; where loose ideals of the sacredness of marriage are taught; where a woman's life consists of music, dancing, fine clothes, and idleness. What sort of a preparation is here for life as the girl will actually find it? Real life is not a "flowery bed of ease." We would undoubtedly be most miserable if it were. But naturally this idea appeals to the young girl and it is a great shock to her when she finds that the facts are mostly the other way round.

I am wondering if much of our modern divorce evil may not be directly traceable to the false notions of life which our girls have received from promiscuous novel reading. They blame their husbands, whether consciously or not, for the fact that life is not all smooth sailing as they expected, and, before its experiences have ripened their judgments and readjusted their thinking, a breach has been made which cannot be mended. For this, if for no other reason, we should be extremely cautious as to what our children read.

The Pepper Books

The books which after all are of inestimable value in the forming of character are those holding a great ideal which, by sufficient effort, may at least be approximated. To use another old child classic as an example, there are the Pepper books. What perfectly delightful children they all are—and yet how very human. You remember, in the very first glimpse we have of Polly, she snaps a basting thread in her impatience. How very natural they are, with their mischief and fun, and now and then little spurts of temper just like real flesh and blood children. But on every page of the series runs the ideal of a rich and beautiful home life, filled with the spirit of mutual love and helpfulness. The child who takes Polly Pepper for an example cannot fail to be all the better for it. And there are so many other books which will prove fascinating to the child and at the same time will cause him, without consciousness on his part, to assimilate some of the strength of the character he has learned to love.

That is the secret of the power of Gene Stratton Porter. She makes great ideals to live in thoroughly human people. Elnora, the girl of the Limberlost, is a noble character, not overdrawn or angelic in the least, but with all the strength of her strong nature bent upon one thing—the development of a wholesome and natural life lived out in the way God intended.

These character forming ideals we want for our own children. We want them to love the beautiful and despise the ugly in character as in everything else. Therefore it behooves us to do all in our power to cultivate in them a taste for the best in literature.

Time for Real Thought Necessary

But if they read books built on the race horse plan"—something exciting on every page—they will naturally desire to have their lives ordered on the same "race horse" basis. Anything less will seem tame by contrast. The curse of our country today is the speed with which we live—no time for real thought or introspection. Let's not foster this tendency in our children, but rather let us strive to cultivate the nobler character which comes through a deep love for the highest in literature.

We must, however, bear in mind that it is far better to teach the child to judge for himself what is really worth while rather than merely to forbid the reading of what we consider degrading in tone. In all of us there is more or less a tendency to do the thing we are forbidden to do—to taste the prohibited fruit, as it were. There is one novel written by one of the great modern authors which, so I am told, is forbidden circulation through the United States mail. I have always had a great curiosity to know something about it, and I suppose, should the opportunity present itself, it would be a temptation to read it. Why? Merely because to all practical purposes, our government forbids that very thing. I should like to know the reason, and the only way to know to my own satisfaction would be to read it for myself.

So to forbid a child to read a certain book is to make it almost sure that sooner or later he will read it, just to find out the reason for our prohibition if nothing else. How much better to place books with clean, pure ideals in the hands of our children, and keep them in such a wholesome state of mind that, when the time comes in which we must trust to their own judgment in these things, they will turn in disgust from those books which are murky in their portrayal of life while they revel in that which is uplifting and pure.

A child's life work may be determined by the influence of some book. His outlook on life most certainly will be. What a narrow and uninteresting sort of existence must be that of the man or woman who never looks inside the covers of a book, but whose life must be measured only in the terms of his own limited vision. The whole world belongs to the man who reads. He can refresh and inspire himself again and again with the greatness of great souls until the strength of their characters becomes in part his own, and he is made fine and strong in the reflected light of their ideals, as the moon gathers light from the sun.

Such a vista a love for good books opens before us. Aside from the teaching of the eternal verities, what greater good can we as parents do for our children than to implant in them from their very earliest childhood a great heart love for the best in books!

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Good Books for Girls

Choice is difficult this year, for the general level is high. There is much variety of scene and action with many excellent character studies. All these girls are alive and eager. Ideals shine out without much effort at preaching them. Except for some errors, which must be due to poor proof reading, the stories are written in excellent English. The following list is intended to suit the taste of girls from ten to sixteen.

A family story which will appeal to various ages is Little Folks Tramping and Camping, by Anna Blunt Morgan (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard). It is really a bird book put into the shape of an excellent story about the doings of a family living in a woodsy part of Wisconsin for the sake of the oldest boy's health. The number of birds to be found in that latitude in winter is amazing. In summer the family all go camping and make more discoveries and plunge into more adventures.

A different kind of nature study is bound up with entertaining fiction in Treasure Mountain, by Edna Turpin (Century). The heroine, camping with friends in the Southern mountains, is a small whirlwind of activity and prejudice. We may disapprove of her but cannot help liking her. When she climbs a precipice to pick a beautiful orchid she narrowly escapes death. Just then she begins to learn some lessons about the selfishness of tearing flowers away to wilt when they might be giving joy to others. Her snobbishness is cured in another way and thereby hangs the tale of treasure and the hard adventures which led to its discovery.

Something seems queer about Janet, a Twin, by Dorothy Whitehill (Barse, Hopkins). Twins are not usually single, yet Janet lives all alone with a strict and forbidding grandmother. Life is so tame that she rejoices to find, in her wanderings, a closed house which she contrives to enter and explore. Later she comes upon a rival housebreaker and then the owner, an eccentric lady who seems to have some power over the grandmother. Quite a plot is developed and it is all told with winning simplicity.

Beautifully translated, comes another book by the author of "Heidi," Cornelli, by Johanna Spyri (Lippincott). It is curiously interesting to compare these foreign stories with our own. Cornelli is a fascinating study. At first she leads a wild, free life at her father's country home in Switzerland. Perhaps she is a bit lawless but she does not deserve the severe rule which descends upon her. She falls into a strange morbid state pitiful to behold. Yet she "enjoys poor health" and displays a trace of malice. New, wholesome influences restore her. The story is distinctive and unique.

Century A Mayflower Maid

Century Treasure Mountain

There is an attractive English school story which is quite unhackneyed. The Head Girl at the Gables, by Angela Brazil (Stokes). Apparently girls' schools in England build up traditions as do those for boys. At the "Gables" there is a custom of choosing one senior to act as a kind of autocrat. Pinnacles are seldom comfortable and Lorraine Forrester finds hers no exception. The thread of school life runs along with that of the Cornish village in which it is situated. The result is a lively story of varied interests. One touching suggestion is that English girls are learning to "live with their hearts," like their French sisters.

A chance to contrast an American school story is presented in Highacres, by Jane D. Abbott (Lippincott). To begin with, the heroine is discovered on Kettle Mountain, far away from civilization, except as it surrounds her inside her own home. Through interested friends she enters a sophisticated city home in order to gain the advantages of "Highacres" with its fine standards and wholesome athletics. Shy and poorly dressed, at first she is not well treated. But she is of such good fiber, so staunch and kindly that she conquers all obstacles. The mystery with which her career began is solved in time to make her school days happier.

How three children whose mother is dead and whose father is in prison, struggle through their heavy trouble is described in Rainbow Gold, by Millicent Evison (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard). The blow is sudden and they have to go to a town near Portland and live with the grandfather who had never forgiven their mother for her marriage and who visits his wrath on them. The plucky seventeen-year-old daughter, "Toni," is the leading spirit. By her courage and poise she melts the old man's heart and he exerts himself for the father's release. Meantime there have been many other happenings in the family. The book is rich in impressive episodes. The younger sister, though rather silly, has won the support of a grim, silent aunt and the cat wins an invalid aunt.

The last four books are historical in their setting. Already the Great War has passed into the realm of history. That ingenious author, Augusta Hinell Seaman, in The Crimson Patch (Century), provides an absorbing mystery story. Patricia Meade's father is in the secret service. When she goes to stay with him at a city hotel she is told that she must know nothing of his work. But she is plunged right into the midst of a plot and she cannot help herself. It proves to be a very serious tangle which she helps to straighten and the situation is the more interesting in that it does not turn out exactly as she expects.

Wavering traditions about the Pilgrim women give opportunity for such fabrics of fiction as A Mayflower Maid, by E. B. Knipe and A. A. Knipe (Century). A certain Barbara Gorges is the heroine, afterwards becoming the second Mrs. Miles Standish. Her uncle, Sir Fernando Gorges, is the villain of the piece. A part of his plotting resulted in leading the Pilgrims to the bleak shores of Cape Cod. The frame of the romance is probably not true. But the events, the surroundings and the spirit of the colonists are described with truth and fervor. Perhaps Priscilla did not flout John Alden because he was only a cooper and she was called "Mistress." But the story shows how the barriers of caste melted away in the new world.

An ideal historical story, accurate and unfailingly interesting, is A Prairie Schooner Princess, by Mary K. Maule (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard). In 1856 a Quaker of Ohio decided to take his family over the long prairie route to Nebraska in order to escape the inevitable war. One of his nine children soon dies but they find a fugitive girl who has lost both parents by the way, through treachery. They

Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Rainbow Gold

"We did not drop our father's name because we were ashamed of him"

battle with bad Indians and make friends with good ones. On arriving they build a "soddy" house, fight a prairie fire and, in due time, a blizzard. And these are but samples of their adventures. Of course the war does come to them with its shock and its stimulus. The children are growing up and pairing off when the last page of the book is turned.

Macmillan Jimmie Quigg

Gettysburg stories by Elsie Singmaster, are eagerly welcomed. John Baring's House (Houghton Mifflin) deals with a young girl who comes with an invalid brother to live in her grandfather's old home. She is not thinking of history at all, only of shelter, food and health. But there is an ancestral curse which isolates the sister and brother among their new neighbors and even endangers their lives. That is why Elizabeth delves into the records of the great battle. This is a fine piece of work in every respect.

Selected Boys' Books

Mitch Miller, by Edgar Lee Masters (Macmillan). Nothing better as a description of boy life has been written since Tom Sawyer. Indeed, Mitch Miller and his chum were great admirers of that famous youth, imitated him to a certain extent, and even ran away from home in an endeavor to find him. And yet the story is not an imitation but an admirable account of another boy of the same wide-awake and adventurous type. It is all so human, so true to boy life that it seems almost biographical. It is quite as full of fun and as entertaining as Mark Twain's classic.

Jimmie Quigg, Office Boy, by Harold S. Latham (Macmillan). Mr. Latham evidently understands boys and there is an atmosphere of reality about this admirable and interesting story which is notable. Jimmie, after the death of his father, gives up his school and finds a job in a publishing house in New York City. He joins an Office Boys' League, which proposes to go on a strike! But Jimmy is sensible and soon becomes a member of a more desirable organization in which he takes part in a pageant. There is also a dramatic experience connected with anarchists, the theft of a large sum of money, and a bomb plot, which Jimmie helps to thwart. It is a very human and exciting story; the kind one does not like to put aside until it is read through. Without undue emphasis it enforces some important lessons for working boys.

The Golden West Boys, Injun and Whitey, by William S. Hart (Houghton Mifflin). One of the best Western Life stories for boys, written by the famous movie actor, who was himself a boy in the West during frontier days. Whitey is a boy from New York and "Injun," an Indian boy on the ranch which Whitey's father owns. They are great chums and together uncover a gang of cow thieves—not without risk to themselves. There is plenty of action and adventure to suit the most exacting demands.

The Young Wireless Operator—Afloat, by Lewis E. Theiss (W. A. Wilde). Roy Mercer, the wireless hero of two war-time stories, now that peace has come gets the position of wireless man on the fine steamship Lycoming. He is engaged for three months but that brief period gave him opportunity to employ his utmost skill, and he passes through stirring experiences. Boys will like the book quite as well as the two earlier volumes of the series. It is one of the very best of its kind.

Scott Burton on the Range, by Edward G. Cheyney (Appleton). Describes the lively experiences of a "tenderfoot" forester, who is plunged at once into conflict with a gang of sheep-herders and foils their schemes. There is a beautiful horse who shares honors with the hero. Incidentally boys will gather some information about Western forestry.

The Dreadful River-Cave, by James Willard Schultz (Houghton Mifflin). An Indian story by an adopted member of the Blackfeet tribe. There is a mystery about the river-cave, which is not solved till the story ends. Indian customs, hunting and fighting, are vividly described. It is as interesting as anything Mr. Schultz has written. That is praise enough, as his readers will understand.

The Adventures of Dal Hamilton—Prospector, by Joseph T. Kescel (Wilde). Two young fellows, one a Western boy, the other an American-born Chinese, form a partnership as prospectors. Their experiences in a mining camp are exciting and the story also gives a good idea of the methods of gold mining. A lively and entertaining story.

Diamond Rock, by Captain Clifton Lisle, Jr. (Harcourt, Brace & Howe). How men fought in revolutionary days is vividly described in this fine story of the campaign in 1777 in Pennsylvania. It is Quaker country and the boy heroes were of Quaker stock, but they bore a brave part in defending their country. Washington's army was in great peril and the massacre at Paoli by Hessian troops is one of the events described. General Wayne is one of the characters. The details are historically accurate.

Macmillan Mitch Miller

MITCH, SKEETERS, AND DINAH

Curley and the Aztec Gold, by Joseph B. Ames (Century). The best story of the discovery of hidden treasure we have seen in a long time. Curley and his sister in the Colorado Canyon country are the center of a series of thrilling experiences which stir the blood of the reader. Event follows event in rapid succession. We will not tell the story but commend it to boys and girls who like a well-written, exciting tale of adventure.

Little, Brown

THE BOY SCOUTS OF LAKEVILLE HIGH

It Happened at Andover, by James C. Graham (Houghton Mifflin). The author is a Phillips Andover teacher, and it is easy to understand why he is a favorite with the boys. These true stories of typical schoolboy experiences and escapades are delightful. Every man who has enjoyed prep. school or college life will appreciate them as much as the boy readers, perhaps even more.

Scouts of the Desert, by John Fleming Wilson (Macmillan). Five stories about the experiences of two Boy Scouts on the borders of the Mojave Desert. Each one describes a successful attempt to be of real assistance to persons in trouble. A fine type of Scout stories, out of the ordinary, but not impossible.

The Boy Scouts of Lakeville High, by Leslie W. Quirk (Little, Brown). The Black Eagle Patrol is again in the center of a lively and interesting story. It is true to the best Scout principles and full of schoolboy activities. There is a rousing account of a baseball game which is the climax of the story.

At the Sign of the Two Heroes, by Adair Alden (Century). Up in the Ethan Allen country on the shores of Lake Champlain, three lively, courageous and patriotic boys discover a band of smugglers. The story is a stirring account of the adventures which led to the discovery and the final capture of the smugglers. It is a fine book for boys.

The Black Buccaneer, by Stephen A. Meader (Harcourt, Brace & Howe). As stirring a tale of piracy as a boy could desire. And it is true to history in its central details. Captain Bonnet was a famous pirate of Colonial days and he did kidnap a boy from the Maine coast, who afterward escaped, and the pirates did such things as are described in this book. There was also treasure hidden and found. What more could one ask for a story?

Martin Crusoe, by T. C. Bridges (Harcourt, Brace & Howe). Martin was not only a skilled aviator but he also experimented with wireless and when one day he received a call for help coming from the midst of the Sargasso Sea, he instantly set out on what proved to be an amazing adventure. He landed on a wonderful island which could be reached only by seaplane or submarine. The man who had called for help was a scientist who arrived years before by submarine. We will not tell more of the story but advise boys who like an exciting tale to read it. They will find it a hard story to put aside until it is finished.

The Mark of the Knife, by Clayton H. Ernst (Little, Brown). This is a story with a mystery and also a first-class football story. The hero, a likable youngster, is marked between his shoulder blades with a knife-shaped figure. He thinks it's "just a birthmark," but when by scaring two Chinese at the sight of it he is released from a trap, he wonders what it means. An unusual story of school life.

Old Favorites

The Adventures of Tom Sawyer, by Mark Twain (Harpers). Every man and boy has heard this story. Here is a fine edition for a Christmas present. It is well illustrated by Worth Brehm. The author, in his preface, says: "Most of the adventures recorded in this book really occurred; one or two were experiences of my own, the rest those of boys who were schoolmates of mine."

Little Women, by Louisa M. Alcott (Little, Brown). A beautiful new edition of the famous classic for young people. Its special feature is the eight delightful illustrations in color from drawings by Jessie Wilcox Smith.

The Story of the Other Wise Man, by Henry van Dyke (Harpers). A large page edition with eight full-page colored illustrations and other line drawings by J. R. Flanagan.

Pinocchio, by C. Collodi (Lippincott). The children of every generation read this story with delight. This gift edition contains a number of handsome, full-page colored illustrations.

Toby Tyler, by James Otis (Harpers). A delightful story about a small boy's experiences with a circus. Written forty years ago, this is one of those stories which is always fresh and interesting for boy and girls. It is abundantly illustrated.

Georgina of the Rainbows, by Annie Fellows Johnston (Appleton). A new edition of a favorite story for boys and girls, "one of the classics of childhood."

The Poor Little Rich Girl, by Eleanor Gates (Appleton). A choice story of a little daughter of rich parents "too busy to bother with her." It has been dramatized and shown in the "movies," and doubtless will be welcomed by a new host of readers.

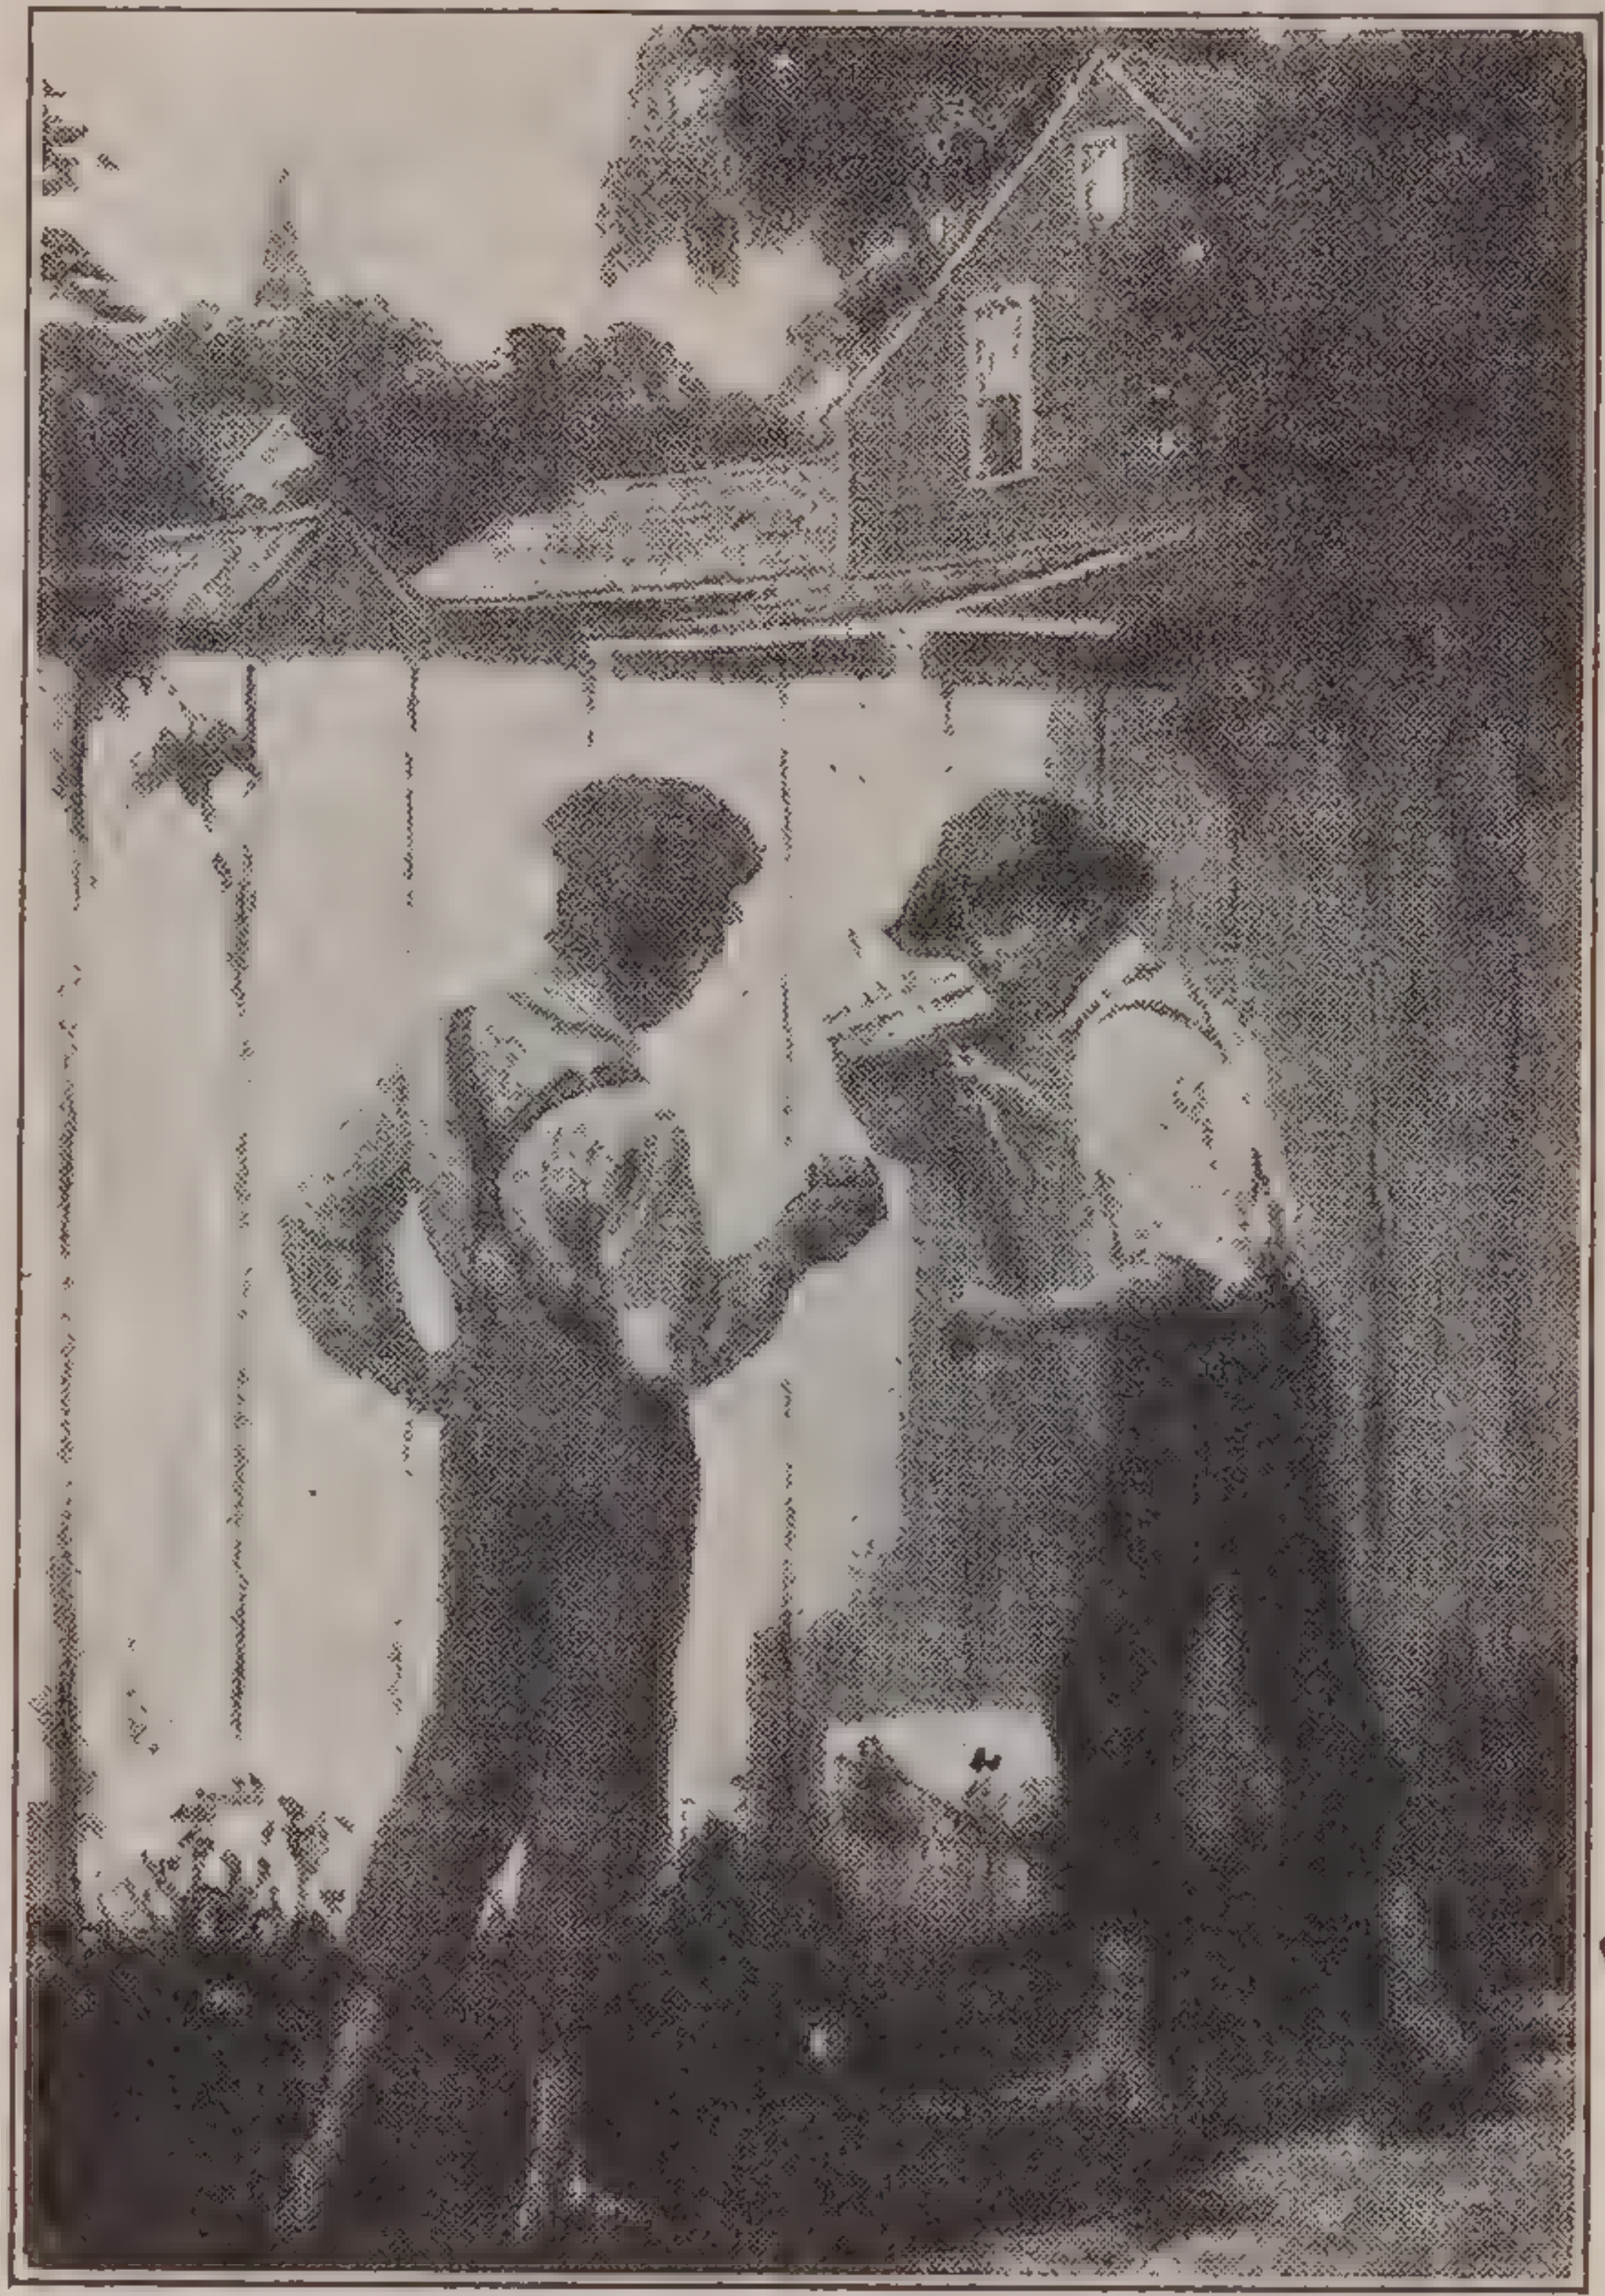
Grimm's Fairy Tales (Scribners). This handsome edition contains a goodly selection of famous tales of fairies, giants, enchantments and adventures. A dozen colored illustrations by Elenore Abbott are of superior artistic merit.

Uncle Remus, by Joel Chandler Harris (Appleton). A large, handsome gift edition of this old favorite with many funny pictures by A. B. Frost and E. W. Kemble and an introduction by Thomas Nelson Page.

Two Annuals

John Martin's Big Book, No. 4 (Houghton Mifflin). No more fascinating annual for little folks is published than John Martin's Big Book. This possesses all the excellencies in variety of story, fairy tale, poetry, information and fascinating illustration of the three previous volumes. Happy will be the child who finds this in its Christmas stocking.

The Boy Scouts Year Book. Edited by Franklin K. Mathiews (Appleton). The sixth in the series of books published each year now with stories, articles, poems and pictures taken largely from the Boy Scout magazine, Boys' Life. It is a large, handsome book that will delight and inspire any live boy. The writers include public officials, educational leaders, naturalists, explorers and Scout leaders. The stories are thrilling, the information regarding outdoor life is of practical value, and the inspiration to manly virtues should make every boy who reads this book a better boy.



Harpers

TOM SAWYER

Informing Books for Young People

A Book of Boyhoods, by Eugenie M. Fryer (Dutton). Twenty-eight biographical sketches of the boyhood of famous men, from Chaucer to MacDowell. "In all of these one finds that the well-spring of vision has the same source—imagination." Chaucer, Balboa, Drake, Washington, Blake, Nelson, Burns, Keats, Pater, Rodin, Foch—are some of the names.

A Treasury of Hero Tales, edited by Alice C. Bryant (Crowell). These stories—there are nine of them—are taken from books by famous authors, and each story introduces a famous hero of old, each from a different country. They include Perseus, Siegfried, Sir Galahad, Rinaldo, Beowulf and Robin Hood. They are classics that all children enjoy and should know.

Harpers

THE OTHER WISE MAN

Little People Who Became Great, by Laura A. Large (Wilde). This writer has discovered that the best way to interest boys and girls in such eminent persons as Michelangelo, Andrew Carnegie, Jenny Lind, Longfellow, Edison and a dozen other "notables" is to go back to their childhood, pick out some incident or characteristic and find in it the prophecy of future greatness. The material is fresh, the workmanship excellent and the illustrations in several cases quite out of the ordinary.

The Third Book of Stories for the Story Teller, by Fanny E. Coe (Houghton Mifflin). A combination of stories, old and new, some imaginative, some chosen from real life, but all choice in moral and literary values. A beautiful gift book.

Saints and Their Stories, by Peggy Webling (Stokes). A beautiful volume containing twenty of the legends of the saints of the Christian Church. Eight full-page colored pictures add to the value and attractiveness of the volume.

The Book of Bravery, by Henry Wysham Lanier (Scribners). The third series of true stories, "in an ascending scale of courage." They are stories old and new. One is as recent as the sinking of the ocean steamer Republic. Another is of the days of the Crusades, another goes back two centuries before Christ, to the struggle between Rome and Carthage. It is a fine collection and a good book for boys or girls.

Girl Heroines in Fiction, by Inez N. McFee (Crowell). It is a great group that is assembled here—"dear, motherly Little Dorrit, loyal, impulsive Maggie Tulliver, faithful little Ellen of 'The Wide, Wide World,' Eppie, who brought sunshine to Silas Marner, Cosette, the abused girl of the French Tavern, and pathetic Little Nell." The author has given them a good introduction to, and made them alive for the young people of today. It will interest the girls and serve as a stepping stone in the best fiction.

Boy Heroes in Fiction, by Inez N. McFee (Crowell). Seven favorite boy heroes are brought together—Gavroche, the street gamin from "Les Misérables," David Balfour and Jim Hawkins from "Treasure Island," sketched by Stevenson, two of Dickens' immortals, Oliver Twist and David Copperfield, etc. The work of condensation has been well done and the stories are told largely in the original writer's language.

Pilgrim Stories, by Margaret Pumphrey (Rand, McNally). Published a few years ago, this little collection of stories for children about the Pilgrims is fittingly revived. Much of the material is imaginative but it is all based on history and as a whole gives an account of events which the children will remember.

Travel Stories (Century). Sixteen stories, told first in St. Nicholas. The Grand Canyon of Arizona, Victoria Falls in Zambesi land, India, China, Rheims, Holland, are some of the places visited. It is both instructive and entertaining reading which boys and girls will enjoy.

Boy's Book of Model Boats, by Raymond F. Yates (Century). All boys like to make things. This book gives minute directions for the building of model boats, not only little sailboats, yachts, etc., but steam and electric launches, etc. The author even tells how to build a small electric submarine chaser that will race across the pond at good speed.

High School Farces, by Frederick Trevor Hill (Stokes). Three one-act farces written for a Boy's Club and a Boy Scout Troop. They have been given successfully several times.

Requiring the simplest of stage arrangements they seem admirably adapted for their purpose.

The Boys' Book of Magic, by Hereward Carrington (Dodd, Mead). No topic is more fascinating to most boys than that of slight-of-hand performances. This volume explains hundreds of tricks and gives minute directions for performing them. Many illustrations add materially to the value of the book.

Animal Books for Young Readers

The Burgess Animal Book for Children, by Thornton W. Burgess (Little, Brown). This is the animal book for children. The text describes in the author's own way, which is now well known, the habits and characteristics of a great variety of animals. It is in story form, but with "utmost care to be accurate in the smallest details." The special feature of the work is its abundance of illustrations in color and black and white, by Louis Agassiz Fuertes, who illustrated the Burgess Bird Book. There is no better art work of the kind to be found in any animal book. The volume is sure of a hearty welcome.

Old Granny Fox, by Thornton W. Burgess (Little, Brown). This is another of the larger Burgess animal story books. It is delightfully lifelike, interesting, instructive and wholesome in its influence. The spirit and purpose of the book are well stated in the dedication, "to the increase of the spirit of mercy and to the gentle charity which before passing judgment on another will seek to get the other's viewpoint, even though that other be but a fox." Capital pictures by Harrison Cady enliven the attractive volume. For children four to twelve.

Nuova, by Vernon Kellogg (Houghton Mifflin). A tale of a beautiful new bee and her love story. Most of it is true to the life of the hive, with its drones, its nurses, its cleaners, its enemies, the bee moth and the black bees and its queen. But Nuova is not content with the old ways and doing what always has been done. She wishes to live her own life in her own way. In fact her romance was quite out of the usual order. And here are certain suggestions that the children will not perceive but their elders may. So the book is intended—"for children from five to fifty." The full-page, colored illustrations are very attractive.

The W. Chuck Family, by Pauline Stoddard Howard (Houghton Mifflin). A John Martin story with the characteristic black and white illustrations. It is a lively tale of the Wood Chuck family of three generations. A variety of other creatures, Mr. B. Wow Dog, Mr. and Mrs. Goose, Chip Munk, etc., come into the story. Country children especially will enjoy it.

Blueberry Bear, by J. L. Sherard (Crowell). Here is a real good story about a rollicking young bear who got into scrapes and out of them as fast as any bear could possibly do. The story is told in a breezy way that will please small children, and their amusement will be increased by the pictures by George Carson.

Houghton Mifflin Little Friend Lydia

Peter's Adventures in Meadowland, by Florence Smith Vincent (Stokes). Peter was a small boy who learned two magical words, "Watch—Listen," which spoken just the right way made him grow small as a bee. And so he spent quite a time living with the bees, and beetles and butterflies and moths. And this book tells what he learned about the wonderful ways of these wise little creatures and what fine adventures he had. Many pictures will help the children to understand the story.

Little, Brown
LITTLE WOMEN

Wild Creatures of Garden and Hedgerow, by Frances Pitt (Dodd, Mead). A very entertaining book intended mainly for children, but certain to interest their elders. It is English birds, bats, mice, hedge-hogs, etc. that are described and English gardens, but the descriptions are attractive and doubtless true for this side of the water as well.

Baby Buffalo and the Jolly Jack Rabbit, by C. E. Kilbourne (Penn Pub. Co.). A bright little animal book with colored pictures and the story of a young buffalo and his Jack Rabbit friend with whom he has some very lively times.

Jimmy Bunn Stories, by Henry C. Walker (Century). A bed-time story-book about the adventures of a rabbit. He plays a joke on Mr. Wolf, and has queer experiences with Peter Porcupine, Greeny the Frog, Teddy Turtle, Connie Coon and other interesting creatures. The stories have all been told to children with great success and other children will equally enjoy them.

Uncle Squeaky's Country Store, by Nellie M. Leonard (Crowell). Another story in the popular series about the Graymouse Family, that have so delighted small children the last few years and it is just as interesting as the others were.

Fairy Tales and Folk Lore

Swiss Fairy Tales, by William Elliot Griffis (Crowell). This is one of the most delightful books of fairy tales that can be found, and it is so much more than just stories; it tells a great deal about Switzerland and its wonderful Alps and the life of the brave, industrious mountain people who live there. The stories, too, are thrilling but wholesome.

A Chinese Wonder Book, by Norman Hinsdale Pitman (Dutton). Fifteen Chinese stories with eleven full-page illustrations in color by a Chinese artist. These Oriental fairy stories are quite different in type from Western folk-lore, with an interest and humor of their own which is fascinating. Not only children but all lovers of folk-lore will thoroughly enjoy the volume.

Indian Old-Man Stories, by Frank B. Linderman (Harpers). These stories, collected from the Crees and Chippewas will not only entertain children but also such of their elders as care for Indian folk-lore. An introductory foreword gives some information about the Indians and their religion. The dozen tales tell "Why the Weasel is White," "Why the Dogs Howl at Night," "How the Skunk Helped the Coyote," and many other matters as Old-Man has explained them.

The Shoe-maker's Apron, by Parker Fillmore (Harcourt, Brace & Howe). Twenty folk and fairy tales of Czecho-Slovak origin, most of them never before presented in English.

Wonder Tales of the World, retold by Constance Armfield (Harcourt, Brace & Howe). A collection of seventeen short stories chosen from the folk-lore of as many different lands. The volume is well illustrated and makes an attractive gift book for children.

Tales of Enchantment from Spain, retold by Elsie Spicer Eells (Harcourt, Brace & Howe). "Tales of young adventurers who surmounted the difficulties of magic enchantments." Spanish folk-lore still kept alive in South American countries. The stories are very entertaining and will be quite new to the children. The volume is well illustrated.

The Green Forest Fairy Book, by Loretta Ellen Brady (Little, Brown). Eleven stories by a trained story-teller. From beginning to end they are fascinating, having about them freshness and originality as well as the indispensable elements of good fairy tales—enchanted princes and princesses, trees and animals with strange powers, spells and magic, both black and white.

The Blue Fairy Book, by Andrew Lang (Longmans). A new issue of one of the best of the series of Lang's Fairy Books, of various colors. This contains good versions of many of the classic tales, Little Red Riding Hood, Cinderella, Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp, The Forty Thieves, Bluebeard, etc. as well as a score of others not so well known.

Tales of Wonder and Magic, by Katharine Pyle (Little, Brown). Fourteen wonderful stories about fairies and giants and enchantments, beautiful princesses and brave princes, and fierce demons. These stories are gathered from the folk-lore of many lands and are very entertaining, well told and beautifully illustrated. Just the book for boys and girls from 10 to 15 years.

The Whirling King, by Harriett Mead Olcott (Holt). The imaginative child will delight both in the comical silhouettes and the wonderful and instantaneous transformations that hold attention from page to page. Miss Olcott draws her material from French sources and has sought to adapt it to American readers

(Continued on page 674)

Holt The Whirling King

The American Board is paying interest on a debt of $240,000

The Women's Boards are paying interest on debts of $50,000

The Home Missionary Society has been compelled to spend more than it has received by $100,000

The Education Society has reached its borrowing limit* at the bank

The Other Boards are under a like pressure

The Emergency Is a Fact

LAST SPRING WE SAW IT COMING AND MADE THE EMERGENCY CANVASS

3000 CHURCHES HELPED

3000 CHURCHES DID NOT HELP

Of those which did not help in April:

1. Many will make the canvass for 1921 in December. The full apportionment is necessary for 1921

2. Others will make their 1921 canvass in the late winter. Will they not AT ONCE provide their proportionate share in the current emergency fund?

CHURCH TREASURERS

Please remit amounts collected as promptly as possible. Thus save thousands of dollars interest charges.

Subscriptions to the CONGREGATIONAL World Movement are not cancelled by the misfortunes of the Interchurch Movement.

They go WHOLLY to our Congregational work.

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 FOURTH AVENUE, NEW YORK, N. Y.

(Continued from page 671)

The Magic Whistle, by E. Gordon Browne (Dodd, Mead). An interesting collection of stories for children in an attractive large type volume with beautiful illustrations by Florence Anderson. The first rather long story is quite like an Arabian Nights Tale and introduces the famous Haroun-El-Raschid among its characters. In all the tales fairies and witches and enchantments will delight the little folks.

Little, Brown The Burgess Animal Book

Eastern Stories and Legends, by Marie L. Shedlock (Dutton). Stories of the Buddha-Rebirths, "given to the world more than 2,000 years ago," arranged to be told to children. Prof. Rhys Davids calls them the originals of the familiar Æsop's Fables.

Trails to Wonderland, by Ira L. Wright (Houghton, Mifflin). Very charming are these twelve short stories, beginning with the account of the wonderful little treasure box that walked and talked, and ending with the poem about The Circus in the Sky in which Castor and Pollux and the six little Pleiades and old Pegasus all appear. Then there is the story of the Little Tin Rooster, and the Three-Cornered Table that traveled, and the old Whale who thought he had a toothache, and the Magical Whistle which caused happy wishes to come true—all are good stories which children will greatly enjoy.

The Story of Doctor Dolittle, by Hugh Lofting (Stokes). This queer doctor was very fond of animals, indeed he said he "liked them better than the 'best people'!" He began to learn animal language and became an animal doctor and was very successful. Now there was a great sickness among the monkeys in Africa and having heard of the doctor they sent for him—and he went. It was a wonderful voyage and there were strange things happened in Africa. All of which are described in this book. There never was another like it. And the pictures are as strange and as funny as the story. The children will like it.

Perewinkle's Island, by Edith L. Elias (Lippincott). A book for children from eight to twelve. Meg, Peg and Topkins, with their mother, the Queen of Whatem, tired of court life, go off with Perewinkle the Sailor, to his island. There they meet many queer people, Top Twins, How Nowkins, Barley Sugar, Potypan and others and have many strange adventures. The book is well illustrated.

Stories for Good Children, by Lora B. Peck (Little, Brown). Here is a collection of folk tales from many lands all the way from Mexico to China, to India, to Persia and to Britain. They are lively and well told, also attractively illustrated. The title is true, they really are good stories and just right for children between seven and ten years old.

In Story Land, by Ruth Irma Low (Small, Maynard). A book of charming new fairy stories of the wholesome kind and they all end happily as fairy stories ought to end.

Jane and the Owl, by Gene Stone (Crowell). A children's story of the sage-bush country away out West. Jane is a little girl and the Owl's name is Oskar, and they have some marvelous adventures together—the enchantment and fairy kind, you know.

For the Younger Boys and Girls

Peggy in Toyland, by Archibald Marshall (Dodd, Mead). "All little girls," says Mr. Marshall, "sometimes wish they could live in their own dolls' houses." So that happens to Peggy one night after she drops to sleep. She is whirled away to a mysterious island where she meets all her own dolls and many others. Also she is mixed up in a plot and helps rescue a queen. The book is the best that has appeared since "Alice in Wonderland." The author must have had an eye on the parents who read aloud to their children for some of the political allusions are satirical.

A Treasury of Heroes and Heroines, by Clayton Edwards (Stokes). Some of the heroes in this volume are the creatures of legend or fiction, like King Arthur, Don Quixote and Robinson Crusoe, but over thirty are historic, Mohammed, Julius Cæsar, Dante, Queen Elizabeth, Peter the Great, Molly Pitcher, etc. Fortunate, indeed, is the boy or girl whose Christmas tree bears such a gift.

Sunny Boy in the Country, by Ramy Allison White (Barse & Hopkins). An adorable yet thoroughly human youngster, his fond parents and grandparents and the background of barns and hayfields, horses, cows, apple pies and meandering brooks will make this book a source of entertainment to boys and girls who in all essentials are much akin to "Sunny."

Dorothy Dainty at Gem Island, by Amy Brooks (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard). Fortunately Dorothy and her friends grow up slowly so that this pleasant series can run a good while longer. In the summer of this particular record, Dorothy and Nancy are living on an island but the rest of the group are near by on the mainland. Antony, their fisherman friend, makes a fine contrast.

There came slowly forth – the new Princess –

Houghton Mifflin

NUOVA

The Italian Twins, by Lucy Fitch Perkins (Houghton Mifflin). It is a clever idea to introduce children of each foreign land in the shape of twin brother and sister, aged twelve. Beppo and Beppina are Florentine children belonging to an upper-class home. One day they lose themselves and are kidnapped. Their wanderings lead them into the mountains and over the water to beautiful Venice, before they are rescued. The author's illustrations are very pleasing.

Stokes From Treasury of Heroes and Heroines

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Puss-in-Boots, Jr. and Old Mother Goose, and Puss-in-Boots, Jr. in New Mother Goose Land, by David Cory (Harpers). Companion volumes in a series of similar little books by this author, expanding the familiar incidents of Mother Goose lore into some interesting new adventures, and appropriate pictures add to their charm.

Four Girls of Forty Years Ago, by Nina Rhoades (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard). Four little sisters under twelve years of age are left in charge of a severe step-grandmother. They spend almost all the time in one room on the third floor of a city house and life is very dreary. But they are a lively flock and manage to find adventures. After a while a happy surprise comes to them. A well-written and interesting story.

Little Friend Lydia, by Ethel Calvert Phillips (Houghton Mifflin). A beautiful story which begins in an orphan asylum and ends, for Lydia, in a real home with the nicest kind of a father and mother. The best of it is that she does not forget to share her pleasures with the friends she left behind.

The Strange Year, by Eliza Orne White (Houghton Mifflin). A welcome sequel to a story of rare merit. Last year the "Blue Aunt" appeared and now more is told about the young friends and relatives who mourned her departure for France. It was a war year which was so strange and hard even for those who stayed at home. But with courage and good cheer they all won through the waiting time and Christmas brought the dear aunt back again.

Twin Travelers in India, by Mary H. Wade (Stokes). A twelve-year-old brother and sister are invited to travel in India with their uncle and aunt. The journey is long and varied and proves to be a pleasant way to gain much unusual information.

The Land of the Great Out of Doors, by Robert Livingston (Houghton Mifflin). Under a rather formidable and not particularly suggestive title, the everyday and the unusual rural experiences of a little boy and girl are pleasantly told. The brother takes turns with the sister in telling about farm life, barnyard animals and the round of seasonal joys of the country, culminating in a glorious Christmas.

Houghton Mifflin
THE ITALIAN TWINS

The book will interest children not over eight.

TYLTYL, by MAURICE MAETERLINCK (Dodd, Mead). This is the story of Maeterlinck's play, "The Betrothal," told for children by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos. It contains eight full-page color illustrations by Herbert Paus and is a beautiful gift book. This is a sequel to "The Blue Bird." Tyltyl is now eighteen and this new story describes his adventures in search of a sweetheart, under the guidance of Fairy Berylune.

SANDMAN'S STORIES OF DRUSILLA DOLL, by ABBIE PHILLIPS WALKER (Harpers). Drusilla was an unbreakable doll, and she lived in a playroom with a jack-in-the-box named Bobby Jones, who was her particular friend. Drusilla had a great many adventures and told about them all to Bobby, and then, somehow, they got into this book just as she told them.

A BROWNIE ROBINSON CRUSOE, by CHARLOTTE B. HERR (Dodd, Mead). A brownie who enlisted for war service as a little boy's soldier doll is the hero of this narrative. He soon decided that the uncertainty of life on a desert island was preferable to the tortures of dollhood and escaped in a toy boat at the foot of the garden. His adventures are calculated to delight the hearts of little folk.

ADVENTURES IN MOTHER GOOSE LAND, by EDWARD GOWAR (Little, Brown). A beautifully illustrated and very entertaining gift book for children from six to ten. Just about the time when Sandman is due a small boy took a ride on a fairy broom, which carried him to the land where all the Mother Goose people live, the Queen of Hearts, Prince Charming, Humpty Dumpty and all the rest. He had a delightful time which the children will enjoy hearing about.

Harpers
PUSS IN BOOTS, JR.

GYPSY AND GINGER, by ELEANOR FARGION (Dutton). A nonsense story as ridiculous as Alice in Wonderland. Gypsy and Ginger are married first off—then they build a house one night in Trafalgar Square. They are visited by a host of queer friends, among whom are the Balloon Woman, the Professor of Neglected Accomplishments, the Penny Piper. It is a queer fantasy, with much fun-making of things as they are.

THE CRYSTAL BALL, by MARY D. GORDON (Little, Brown). A highly imaginative and entertaining story for children from eight to twelve. It tells of the adventures of two children, Joan and Jock, who travel from their home in Moondon to the Garden of the Sun, where they find a wonderful Crystal Ball and take it home for a gift to their father.

TRUDY AND TIMOTHY AND THE TREES, by BERTHA CURRIER PORTER (Penn Pub. Co.). A story of children who have a delightful trip from their farm home to Washington and there learn some interesting and important things, including forest conservation, which leads to important action on their return. For boys and girls between seven and twelve years old.

THE SECRET OF EVERYDAY THINGS, by JEAN HENRI FABRE (Century). A master among great naturalists, M. Fabre is also wonderfully successful in writing for children. This volume contains sixty-eight "informal talks with children" on such common things as thread, pins, needles, silk, moths, soap, fire, matches, glass, iron, rust, coffee, tea, sugar, flies, etc. Adults as well as children will find the book wonderfully interesting.

JUNIOR TRAVELS IN THE HOLY LAND, by MARY H. WADE (Stokes) pictures vividly the impressions made upon a religiously reared boy and girl, as they travel from Jaffa to Jerusalem and thence to Bethlehem and Nazareth.

THE YOUNG CITIZEN'S OWN BOOK, by CHELSEA CURTIS FRASER (Crowell). A study of American civil government in simple conversational style, well written for younger readers.

US AND THE BOTTLEMAN, by EDITH BALLINGER PRICE (Century). Two boys and a girl, aged eight, eleven and thirteen, at a seaside picnic, one day, write a note, pretending to be shipwrecked mariners, and putting it in a bottle, throw it into the sea. It was found by a wise young man who knew how to play the game, and that makes the story. It is very funny and interesting. Children eight to twelve will enjoy it greatly.

ON THE EDGE OF THE WILDERNESS, by WALTER PRICHARD EATON (Wilde). The "Wilderness" is in the neighborhood of Berkshire County, in Massachusetts and the ten stories here told describe the wild creatures to be found there, a gray timber wolf, a crafty fox, a big bull moose, a wildcat, an otter, a weasel, etc. These are the best animal stories we have read for some years.

MASTERS OF THE GUILD, by L. LAMPREY (Stokes). A companion volume to "In the Days of the Guild," containing sixteen stories of the days of the troubadour, of puppet players, of tapestried chambers, of galley slaves, of fairies and Black Magic. All of these and more of the life and customs of the Middle Ages are described in these interesting tales.

SOOLOOK WILD BOY, by ROY J. SNELL (Little, Brown). In the cold and half-light of the far North, Soolook lived with his friends the dog pack, encountering strange adventures, struggling with wild animals in his search for food, always with the fear of the great Kabluna—the white giant who kills at a distance with magic of great noises—in his heart. He should find many friends among boy readers.

Dodd, Mead
TYLTYL

Poetry for Children

THE MOGFOOTS, by MARVIN M. TAYLOR (Four Seas). It seems that "Mogfoots" is just another name for everybody's feet. This little book tells in a lively way about the adventures of some little boys and girls, and all in verse, and pictures of them by Marjorie Very are scattered thickly through it.

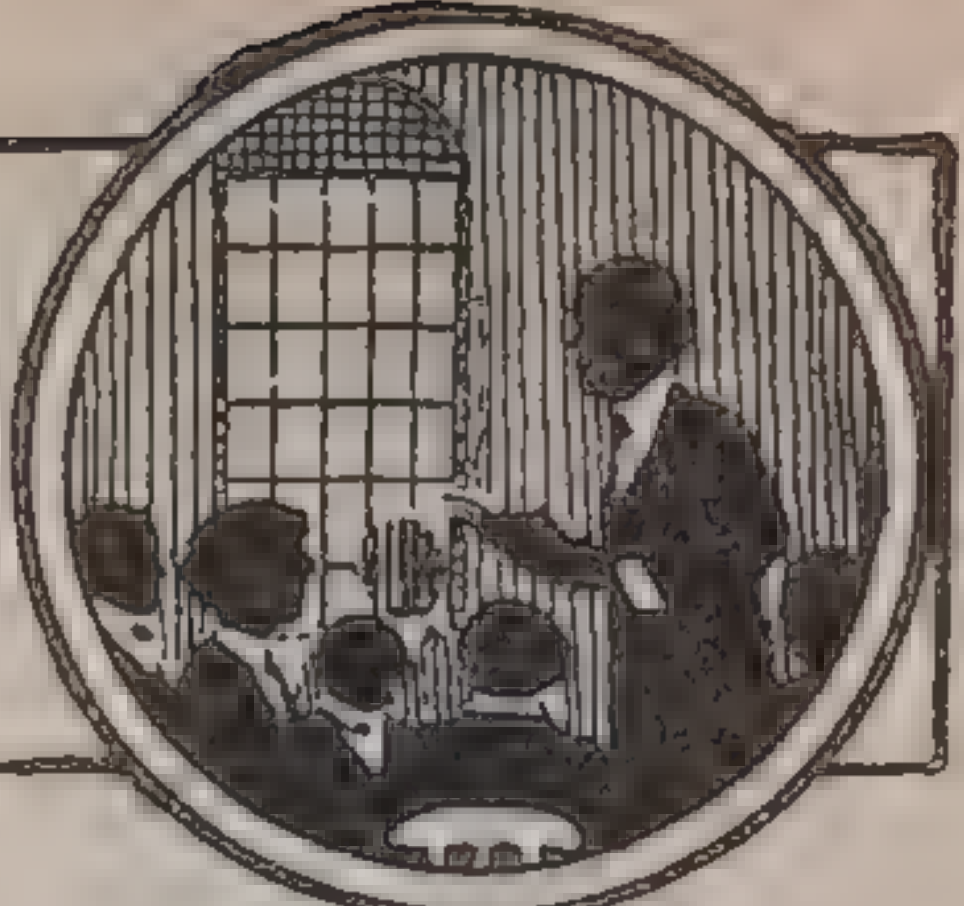
THE CHRISTMAS CHILD, by NORA ARCHIBALD SMITH (Houghton Mifflin). A delightful collection of poems to read to children. They are all written by Miss Smith. Many are based on folk-lore and interesting historic incidents. The first score or more are Christmas poems.

LITTLE HOMESPUN SONGS, words and music by BEATRICE HUBBELL-PLUMMER (Stokes). An interesting feature of this attractive collection of poems, many of them set to music, is that they are largely based on the thoughts and imaginings of the author's own children. Ten full-page illustrations in color are of exceptional excellence.

RHYMES OF A CHILD'S WORLD, by MIRIAM CLARK POTTER (Four Seas). A book of verse for children which mothers will welcome. There are rhymes for the child playing indoors, for the outdoor life and a group of good twilight or lullaby songs. Some of the verses have been printed before in the Youth's Companion and Saint Nicholas. The book is well illustrated by Ruth Fuller Stevens.

Dodd, Mead
PEGGY IN TOYLAND

IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL



DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS

The Growth of the Kingdom

International Sunday School Lesson for Dec. 5. Matt. 13:24-33.

Set out the underlying principle first, namely, that the Kingdom of God is not something that is furnished at once complete to the world, but that it must develop according to the laws that govern all living things. This makes it far more interesting and credible than it could be otherwise.

The Tares and the Wheat. This is the first of the three stories by which Jesus attempts to make clear the truth that the Kingdom is a developing experience and fact. In each of the three parables that we study we must try to find the particular truth that Jesus means to set forth. In this it is the principle that the fruits of the Kingdom reveal its unlikeness to all other forms of organized life and therefore that in the end it will furnish its own vindication. It is evident that there will be spurious institutions that will look so much like the Kingdom of God that they will deceive even the most careful observer. Can you mention any of these in the world now? And what are the various schemes that have been devised to detect and destroy them?

Every farmer knows that there are sometimes such intimate associations between weeds and useful plants that one cannot be disturbed without the other is injured. Under such circumstances Jesus says that it is best to let the noxious thing grow along with the other until in the end it will be apparent which is which and the proper end will come to the evil thing.

It would be a mistake, however, to interpret this as meaning that no effort is to be made to rid society of those false organizations and tendencies which are contrary to the Kingdom. But when they are so closely knit up with the true manifestations of the Kingdom that they cannot be destroyed without damaging the Kingdom itself, we may let them go on in the comforting certainty that in the end their true nature will appear and their inevitable destruction will come to pass.

The Mustard Seed. The purpose of this story is evidently to set forth the principle of the large results that flow from small causes in the Kingdom. It is a matter of potencies. It simply shows that size is not necessarily an indication of value or significance. The truth may be summed up in the words, The Value of Little Things.

Trace the working out of the principle. Think of the way in which the great issues of individual life often turn on small events. Time and again the supreme decisions of life are established by events or influences that seem at the moment to be trivial. It is often the word that was lightly spoken or the act that was thoughtlessly done that changes the whole course of one's life and work. So we must set great value on the worth of those actions which seem to us of small meaning. They will go on and on in the lives of others for good or ill.

Note the practical issues of this principle. How it makes it imperative that we watch for the apparently trifling actions and words and never overlook tehir importance.

The Yeast. By this story Jesus evidently means to set forth the universal scope of the Kingdom. The seed is small and the tree is large: the yeast is silent in its activity but it finally changes the character of the whole mass by its vitalizing power. It is quite unnecessary to study here the claim that Jesus generally uses yeast to illustrate evil rather than good forces. That is to miss the whole point of the story, which is to unfold the universal character of the Kingdom. It is meant for the whole of life. The world is the subject of redemption. We are not to be satisfied with anything less than the whole universe for Christ.

Whatever we may think about Leagues of Nations and unity of races, the ideal of Jesus is perfectly definite as he represents it here. Good bread demands that the yeast shall have worked through all the dough. And the only good world that ever can be had is one in which the yeast of the Gospel has penetrated and changed the whole of life from center to circumference. Do we catch the full meaning of this truth? We Christians are working at the one supreme program which has in view the whole world. We are not satisfied with fragments of the world and parts of life. We are doing the greatest work in all the world. The men who represented the nations in preparing the Treaty after the Great War were doing a retail business in comparison with the statesmen of the Kingdom of God who are planning for the final conquest of the world by Jesus Christ. Are we Kingdom statesmen?

Ozora S. Davis

Chicago Theological Seminary.

The Study of the Bible

VIII. Some Backgrounds of Jesus' Teaching

Jesus lived among the Jews at a particular time in history. Yet he spoke to all people of all time. His message contains eternal truth of utmost significance. But the subjects considered and the form of his message were determined largely by the needs and religious convictions of his people. So far as we know Jesus wrote nothing. His words come to us through his followers and clearly often bear the color of their own views and aims.

The dominant idea in Jesus' day was that the Messiah was coming. The prophets in their fight for justice, from the beginning to the end of the kingdoms, had hoped for a king upon the throne of David who would reign in righteousness and finally, in exile, hoped for a suffering servant who would redeem Israel.

During the suffering of the Jews in the two hundred years before Christ and for one hundred years after, pious Jews wrote the apocalypses of Ezra, Enoch, the Secrets of Enoch, the Assumption of Moses, Baruch, Fourth Esdras and others. These writings are of the same general character as the books of Daniel, Revelation and apocalyptic portions of other New Testament books.

It is almost impossible for us to realize the extent to which the Jewish mind was possessed of the Messianic idea in Jesus' time, and how completely the program and character of this Messiah were determined. He was to come in judgment, break the abhorrent Roman yoke, and set up a political kingdom on the throne of David at Jerusalem.

Evidence of this crystallized Messianic conception appears often in the Gospels. Zacharias in his prophecy looked for "salvation from our enemies and the hand of them that hate us." Luke 1:17, see also verse 74. Anna was "looking for the redemption of Jerusalem." Luke 2:38. John the Baptist thought him coming in judgment, "Whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly cleanse his threshing floor; and he will gather the wheat (the good) into his garner, but the chaff (the bad) he will burn up with unquenchable fire." Matt. 3:12.

John the Baptist so misconceived the character of the coming kingdom and of the coming One that his confidence was shaken when he saw what Jesus was doing, and he sent disciples to ask, "Art thou he that cometh, or look we for another?" Matt. 11:2-4. It was because John so completely misunderstood the character of the Kingdom of Heaven, thinking it a kingdom of judgment rather than of good will, that Jesus said, "There hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist: yet he that is but little in the Kingdom of Heaven is greater than he." Matt. 11:11. The parable of the sower, the parable of the tares (let both grow together until the harvest) and the parables of the permeating, growing kingdom are Jesus' answer to the idea that the kingdom was to be one of immediate judgment.

The disciples were so saturated with the political kingdom idea that they also misunderstood. Their quarrels about who should be greatest in the kingdom, Peter's rebuke of Jesus at Cæsaria Philippi, "Be it far from the Lord: this shall never be unto thee," Matt. 16:22, his readiness to smite with the sword, James and John's readiness to bid fire come down from heaven and consume the Samaritans (Luke 9:54), the betrayal by Judas, the denial by all the rest, and the absolute despair of the disciples when he was crucified, all indicate how completely their idea of the Messiah and the kingdom differed from that of Jesus.

The disciples were simply dumbfounded by his crucifixion. All that they hoped for and the great reason for their following him perished on the cross. The statement of the disciples on the way to Emmaus, "We hoped that it was he that should redeem Israel," Luke 24:21, indicates both their despair and their false idea of Jesus' work. Only with the complete shattering of their hope for a political kingdom through the crucifixion and their conviction of his resurrection did the spiritual nature of the kingdom really get a chance at them. Until that time their minds were so completely filled with the other idea, that for them, like the people generally, it was necessary to speak of the kingdom in parables.

(Continued on page 690)

THE HOUR OF PRAYER

What Sort of a Heaven Does the Christian Expect?

Comment on the Midweek Prayer Meeting Topic for Nov. 28–Dec. 4

BY ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN

Scripture Passage. Rev. 21:1-27.

The Heavenly City as a Type of Community Life. We are always tempted to think on one extreme or the other of the wide Christian thought of life. Now we are individualists, and think of our religion too exclusively as a personal relation to God. So it is; but not exclusively. Our individual relation is in order to a social responsibility. It is choked and seared if it works no miracles of good will. Then we are tempted to think of it as a community responsibility solely. And then it tends to dry up like a plant in a drought. In the time of persecution in which this book of Revelation was written, writing as a Jew who found the fulfillment of the hopes of his fathers in Christ, the author took up the thought of Jerusalem—the city of the nation's glory, the seat of the king, as a symbol of the heaven that was to be. Augustine recurred to it, in his City of God, when the Roman power was the prey of the barbarians. The English poet, Blake, used the same image, but of every true man's purpose on the earth:

> I will not cease from mental fight,
> Nor shall my sword sleep in my hand,
> Till we have built Jerusalem
> In England's green and pleasant land.

The Presence of God as Light and Joy. Heaven and earth are God's. Our idea of heaven is of necessity shaped by what we dream of the best earth has to offer. Out of this imagery one thought is clear. And that is the thought of God's presence and the triumph of what he desires. Other elements are excluded, in order that those who love him and his ways may find a home. We shall not get far if we try to image heaven in material terms of earth. The reality is in this idea of a community where every citizen is a child of the Lord of all and so a brother of all.

The Spirit of Welcome. There is a necessary thought of exclusion here, but it is only for those who are incapable of enjoying heaven's life of confidence and good will. Heaven and hell are not places of residence, but states of soul. There are people who would be happiest out of heaven. They could not breathe its atmosphere. It was a profound truth which Milton put into the mouth of Satan when he made him say, "Myself am hell." The spirit of welcome cannot put enjoyment of good into a heart that is in love with evil. But in this picture are also the significant words, "And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day."

How Far Are the Heavenly Qualities Attainable on Earth? They are not only attainable; they are attained. We all know, probably, people who would from the first moment feel themselves at home where God is and where good will is the atmosphere of social relations. The life with God for men is at once the anticipation of heaven and the very business of the church on earth.

Closet and Altar

LOVE IN LIFE'S EXPERIENCE

God, our Father, which hath loved us.—2 Thess. 2:16.

We all know how love develops character. That was the first power that Jesus used. He said to a repressed and fearful world, "God loves you." And if human life has been developing in Christendom into amazing and undreamed-of amplitude, it is primarily a response to that appeal.—G. H. Morrison.

It came to him, as it comes to most of us, if we live long enough, that when we ask for a stone, he sometimes gives us bread—if we will but open our eyes to see it.—Margaret Deland.

Who would have youth renewed?
Not I. It is too shrewd.
Too dazzling are the stars it sights;
Give me half-lights!

Who would re-live past years?
Not I. Wild hopes and fears
That once the soul in travail rent
Their force have spent.

Who doubts as in his prime?
Not I. Schoolmaster Time
Hath taught me; taught of life and death,
And planted faith.

Who longs for paths once trod?
Not I. The worst—thank God!—
The stoniest roads, the mire and clay,
Lie far away.

Who would recall his friend?
Not I. Mine be his end!
Here tumult reigns, here crowds increase;
With him is peace.

Who counts his loss as gain?
I!—Strength fordone, and pain,
Have opened Heaven, around, above,
And shown me love.

P. A. BARNETT.

The Lord never concludes simply within the letter. At the last he invariably says something that opens up a distant and ever-receding, because ever-enlarging horizon. He says in this instance, "I will do better unto you than at your beginnings." He is able, let us say again with rising thankfulness, to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think.—Joseph Parker.

O God, we thank thee that the school where thou hast sent us for our learning is the school of our experience with thine own love. Give us desire of knowledge and may every day bring its own revelation of thy care and interest, so that even the darkness may shine with the light of thy presence and the difficult affairs of life result in new assurance of faith. As thou hast kept us hitherto, still let thy love attend us, lest we mistake the path and go astray. And give us joy of thy companionship and rest in work, that we may be true and useful followers of him who gave his life for ours. In his name. Amen.

—Isaac Ogden Rankin.

The Business of Growing

Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic for Dec. 5-11

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: Progressive Living. 2 Peter 1:1-8. (Consecration meeting.)

Light from the Bible Passage

What a bigness of thought one feels as he starts reading this letter by Peter! Greatness of gifts and of privileges is reflected in nearly every verse, continually suggesting the need of growing up to them. Note his prayer that his readers may be multiplied in their grasp on, and knowledge of, God and Jesus. At verse 5 we meet definite counsels. Life is to be arithmetic. Beginning with faith, seven distinct steps are indicated for us to ascend in our progressive living. The first two lead to active qualities; the next two to passive; the fifth toward God; the sixth toward Christ; the last toward all men in love. Each added step gives greater promise of usefulness (fruitfulness) in our lives. To go up these steps means continual effort; it also means many a sacrifice along the way.

Leads for the Leader

This is a time when a look backward is natural. Make it also most profitable. Let us put ourselves back at the beginning of this year and see if we can place our fingers anywhere where we have made appreciable progress. Are we any further along in Christian thought and practice than last January?

What progress have we made

1. In motives to Christian living? Do we pray more and more effectively? Have we made any real gains in the knowledge of our Bibles? Do we have a deeper sense of companionship with Jesus?

2. In using these motives? Are we further up the stairway noted above? Are we any easier people to live with? Do we find ourselves putting more of our Christian principles into our daily activities? Are we more Christlike and are others aware of it?

Thoughts for Members

Steadfastness is a doubtful virtue if it means that we are "fixed to one place."

Christlikeness must grow within before it can show without.

To live strenuously means to nourish our best impulses continually.

Live thou within us, Lord,
  Thy mind and will be ours;
Be thou beloved, adored,
  And served with all our powers;
That so our lives may teach
  Thy children what thou art,
And plead, by more than speech,
  For thee with every heart.

—John Ellerton.

A Moment of Prayer

O Master, keep us from stagnating in our Christian lives. Show us the glory of the unattained heights, that we may be enthused with the passion to reach them. Bid us forget our past failures and now press on to the prize of thy high calling for us. Amen.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Tales of the Mayflower Children

III. Humility's Pride

By Pauline Carrington Bouve

PART I.

"Now how is it," said Mistress Winslow, turning to her husband, "that those who are most dependent upon us for support and care are least willing to render aid when called upon? Here is Humility Cooper left alone by the death of her kinsfolk, Edward and Ann Tillie, who considers herself above doing small services asked of her such as looking after little Peregrine of an afternoon, and helping with the polishing of the pewter pots after the noon meal. Verily she is a froward child and needs discipline."

Master Winslow smiled as he turned the signet ring upon his finger.

"Nay, wife, the child thinketh but as she was brought up, before becoming an orphan and under the charge of Edward Tillie and his wife. On her mother's side she was of gentle birth and from folk unused to labor with their hands, so we should be patient with her."

"That may be all well enough," replied Mistress Winslow, "but she is like to put foolish notions into the heads of our Resolved and Patience and Fear Brewster and the other children. Mistress Brewster—and I am sure the Brewster blood is of as pure strain and of better quality than any Cooper's—hath spoken to me more than once upon this matter, and she says Humility bears her name but poorly and unworthily."

Edward Winslow, a courtier both in feeling and manner, and moreover a man of tact, thought a moment before he spoke. "No doubt Mistress Brewster is right, yet methinks there be something to be said for Humility. It is not altogether unreasonable that she should not want to rock Peregrine's cradle after she hath finished the stints of labor apportioned to her. We be Pilgrims of justice as well as of faith and have come far to see fair play done on all sides."

"If you would bolster Humility up in her folly, I have no more to say," answered Mistress Winslow, stiffly, as she turned away.

At this moment there was a knock at the door and when Master Winslow drew the bolt he was surprised to see the child about whom they had been talking.

"I hope nothing is amiss, Humility, that you come so early in the forenoon?" he said kindly. "Come in."

"Good-morrow to ye, Master and Mistress Winslow," said the child, making a courtesy to each, "I pray your pardon for this early neighboring, but"—

"Why are you not at the flax-wheel or winding yarn, as was appointed for the maidens?" questioned Mistress Winslow, with some sharpness.

"I have finished my stint, rising earlier and being quicker than the others, and now Mistress Hopkins hath ordered me to go with Richard Moore to shell turkey-wheat (Indian maize or corn), and it is not fair. Besides, Richard Moore is a serving-boy, and I should not be asked to do tasks with him, and when I said this to Mistress Hopkins she spoke with a sharp and bitter tongue to me, and—and—I wish I were back in England and had never seen this Plymouth Towne!" and Humility's voice trailed off in a sob.

"Yea and the sooner the better for every one here," sniffed Mistress Winslow. "Why you needs must set yourself above Richard Moore, who is in the very same condition with you, depending upon strangers for his care and keep, is a wonder and a scandal! There be no difference betwixt ye, that any one with an eye can see, save that he performs his set tasks willingly while you be ever prating about the unfitness of the same for one of your birth and station! And, forsooth, who knows or cares what your forebears did or were? 'Tis enough that you are here among us with neither kith, kin nor money withal to buy bread or shoe leather."

Mistress Winslow, waxing more and more angry, would have said much more, but Master Winslow cut her short. "Twit not the maid with her misfortune and affliction, good wife, lest you bring discredit upon your own head," he said a little sternly. Then turning to Humility: "Methinks you have not the right notion, child, of our coming hither and its whys and wherefores. Age and experience will teach you much. I bear a crest and shield," and he touched his signet ring and pointed to a piece of table plate

(Continued on next page)

The Comrades' Corner

Dear Comrades:

I am most anxious to have you share with me this letter from Miss Mary E. Harper, one of the teachers in Dorchester Academy, where our Corner Lunch Fund is being sent. I wish I could give you the whole of her letter but we haven't room. You would rather read her letter than mine, so here it is:

"First, through you I wish to thank the children and young people, belonging to the Comrades' Corner of The Congregationalist for their kind gift to be used for hot lunches for our far-aways, as we term them.

"Perhaps they would like to know why these lunches are served so I will tell you: last term, as early as December, we had enrolled between thirty-five and forty children in our school who walked seven, eight, nine and ten miles night and morning, leaving home by candlelight and returning after night, often soaked by rain, barefooted and ragged. They often left parents in bed and made the trip on a cold crust of bread and very often nothing at all. Hungry and exhausted, they reach us and I hope you can imagine their delight when served hot cocoa, crackers, biscuits, baked beans, croquettes, rice, soup, green peas, cookies and tomatoes. Not more than three of the above named dishes were served at one time and they varied according to the weather; for instance, beans and vegetable soup on very cold days. The lunches cost them two cents per day, and when they have not this amount they bring an egg which of course is used in making cornmeal muffins or bread for them.

"These lunches are prepared by girls from our boarding department under the supervision of our domestic science teacher. They are also served by these girls who use tin cups and plates for dishing the food. The lunches are served in one of our classrooms. The lunches are taken there on large trays.

"Again for our dear and faithful far-aways, who are so anxious for 'the light' they brave rain and even storms, I thank the donors of the amount sent us and I shall often whisper a prayer for their success and happiness."

Comradely yours,

Mr Alden

"FAR-AWAYS" WHO WILL GET LUNCHES THROUGH OUR FUND

The two girls in checkered dresses are twenty-milers

(Continued from preceding page)

in the cupboard, "yet I learned the trade of fustian-maker so that when I came to help form a brave company in this new world I might honestly make a livelihood by toil if need be, and I have no shame in the fact that I have made many a yard of good fustian in old Leyden, but am proud that it was strong stuff and durable, befitting the handwork of a gentleman."

"Did you truly, Master Winslow?" said Humility, with round eyes, somewhat abashed. "Then I be willing to shell the turkey-wheat with Richard Moore with better grace, but Mistress Hopkins should not give me extra stints just because I be alone here with none to stand by me."

"No more should she, and I will speak with Elder Brewster upon the matter," promised Edward Winslow.

"Then I will go to find Richard, to please you, but not Mistress Hopkins," said Humility, still bridling at the thought as she bade the Winslows farewell and left their cottage.

(To be concluded next week)

Copyright, 1920, by
Congregational Publishing Society

Services at Omaha for Dr. Herring

It being the vacation season when the news came of Dr. Herring's death the holding of the memorial services for him on account of his long and fruitful pastorate at the old First Church, Omaha, Neb., was delayed until fall. The church of which he was pastor has been merged with another church under the title of the First Central of Omaha, with Dr. F. G. Smith as pastor. When Dr. Smith returned from his vacation plans were made to hold two services, an informal one in the middle of the week, and a more stately one on Sunday morning.

The midweek service was held in the parlors of the New First Central Church and was one long to be remembered. Dr. Smith read for the Scripture lesson the 91st Psalm and made appropriate comments and some of the grand old hymns of the church were sung, and then, under the leadership of the pastor, a large number spoke giving reminiscences of their relationship to Dr. Herring and testimony to his greatness as a pastor and a Christian leader.

Among those speaking were Dr. Somers, President of the Board of Trustees during most of Dr. Herring's pastorate in Omaha; Attorney McGilton, a member of Dr. Herring's class when he first went away to school; Deacon Russell, a veteran of the church, who testified to the richness of Dr. Herring's ministry as preacher and pastor; and Attorney Harley Moorhead, Election Commissioner of the City, who spoke of his ability as an executive. The service was enriched by the presence and testimony of Mr. Carl E. Herring, brother of Dr. Herring, an attorney of Omaha. He gave a most beautiful and tender witness to the noble qualities which his brother has manifested from youth up.

The next Sunday morning the great public service in memory of Dr. Herring was held. Dr. Smith preached on the far-reaching influence of a great life. After giving an interpretation of the Scripture passage, which was Isaiah 32:2, he gave a sketch of Dr. Herring's life. He said in part his life was so simple, so sincere, so strong and so brotherly that to all who came in contact with him he had been a mighty tower of strength, a wall of defense.

It was a helpful communion that was observed at the close of this message and after the pastor had extended the right hand of fellowship to 18 new members, the congregation passed out with reverent hearts, feeling that their lives had been greatly enriched in spiritual experience even while they sat in the shadow of a great sorrow.

The Wonders

Of a grain of wheat

Each wheat kernel contains over 125,000,000 food cells. It embodies 16 elements—practically everything the body needs. It is rich in needed minerals—the leading food of the world.

But in whole-wheat bread the elements pass largely undigested. Experiments show that 25% of the protein is lost, and 51% of the minerals.

Food cells must be broken

The food cells must be broken to digest. Cooking breaks only part of them. So Prof. A. P. Anderson invented a process which now blasts them all.

He seals the wheat in guns, then applies for an hour 550 degrees of heat. About 10% of the kernel is water. The trifle of moisture in each food cell is by this process changed to steam.

Then the guns are shot and over 100 million steam explosions occur inside each kernel. Every food cell is blasted. The wheat kernels are puffed to bubbles—airy, flimsy, flaky globules—eight times normal size.

Scientific food delights

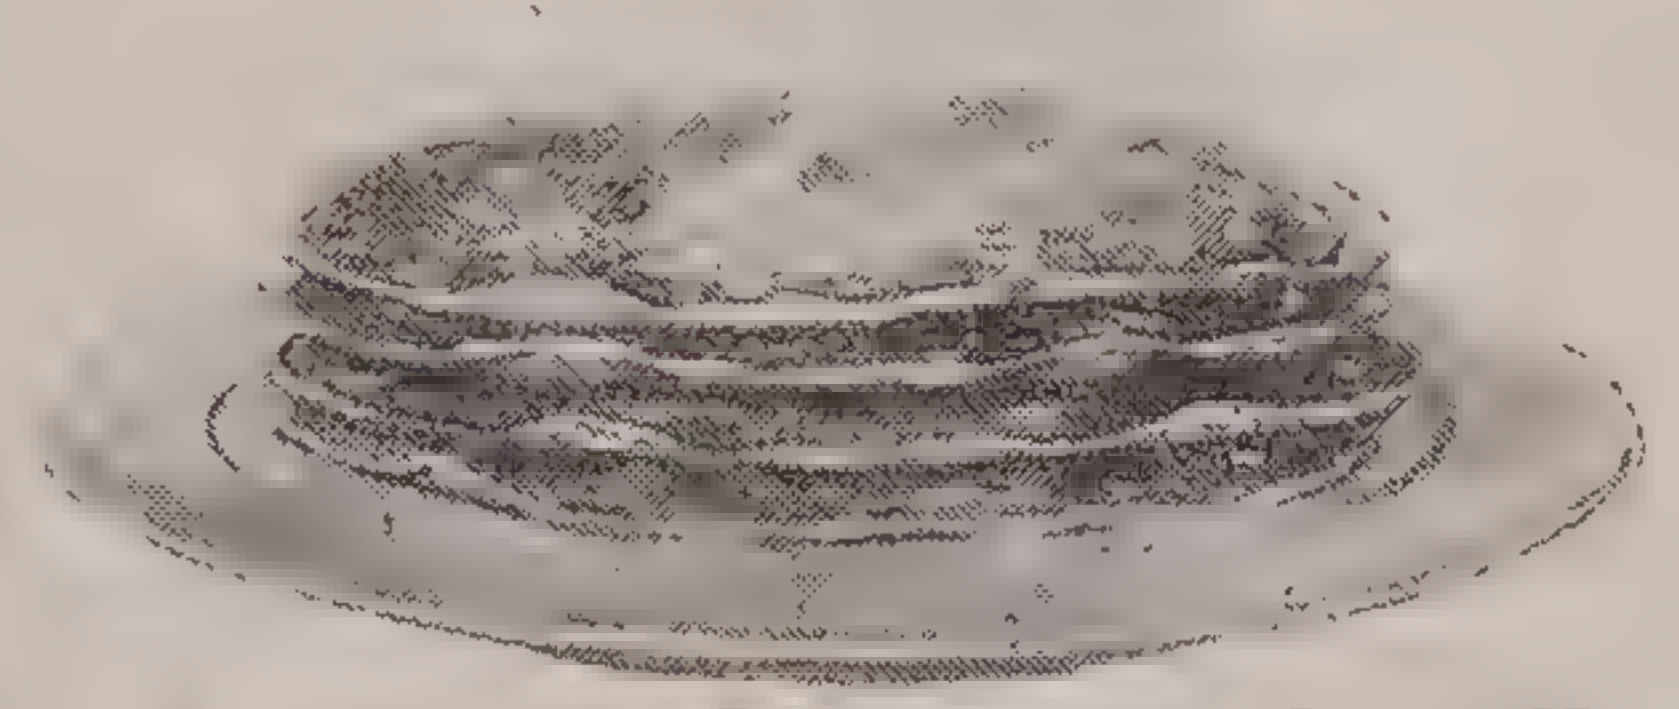
That is Puffed Wheat. Puffed Rice is whole rice puffed in like way. Puffed Corn is broken corn hearts puffed.

The grains are thin, crisp, toasted tidbits, fascinating in texture and in flavor. Millions of children find in them the finest foods they know.

They do not tax digestion. Every atom feeds. They are all-hour foods to be served in many ways.

If you don't serve Puffed Grains—all three kinds in all inviting ways—you are missing the world's greatest food delights.

Puffed Wheat
Puffed Rice
Puffed Corn
Also Puffed Rice Pancake Flour



Like nut-made pancake flour

Now we mix ground Puffed Rice in an ideal pancake blend. The Puffed Rice Flour makes the pancakes fluffy and gives a nut-like taste. Ask for Puffed Rice Pancake Flour and you will serve the finest pancakes ever tasted. The flour is self-raising—simply add milk or water.

The Quaker Oats Company

Sole Makers

3456

IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE

With the States in Conference

Connecticut General Conference

The 53d annual meeting of the General Conference of the Congregational Churches of Connecticut was held at Park St. Church, Bridgeport, Nov. 9-10. It was a largely attended but quiet Conference. No heated debates upon social or civic questions enlivened its sessions. No marked theological differences were expressed. Only routine business was transacted. Thoughtfulness and a deep spirit of devotion prevailed. The gathering had more the character of a retreat than of an ecclesiastical parliament.

To this end the program, carefully prepared by Dr. G. H. Beard, pastor of the entertaining church, and chairman of the standing committee of the Conference, was conducive. The general theme was "Reality in Our Church Life." Beginning with an address upon "Realizing the Presence and Power of God," the program led the delegates through a consideration of "The Real Place and Function of a Church Creed," "Reality in Church Worship," "Reality in Church Teachings Regarding Great Doctrines," "Real Democracy in Church Government," to the final paper on "A Real Basis for Christian Service."

Three things in connection with the Conference were especially noteworthy: First, the place given to women on the program. In the half century of its history, perhaps the Conference has never had one of its devotional services conducted by a woman, an ordained pastor of a Connecticut church. Certainly it has never had one conducted by a woman who was an ordained pastor and representative-elect to the State Legislature, as is Rev. Grace I. Edwards. Mrs. Mary J. Prudden of New Haven gave a keen and well-delivered paper upon "Reality in Church Worship," following Dr. Oliver Huckel of Greenwich, who spoke on the same subject. Mrs. B. S. Winchester gave a thoughtful and most interesting paper upon "Real Democracy in Church Government," and at the session of the Missionary Society of Connecticut, which was held in connection with the Conference, Miss Alice M. Johnson, ministering to the Colored people of Hartford, gave to those present "Some Snap Shots by a Social Worker."

The sermon of Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, recently of the City Temple, London, now of the Church of the Divine Paternity, New York, was also one of the outstanding features of the Conference. The dramatic delivery of the speaker, the suggestive and beautifully phrased truths that he pictured, and above all the preacher's earnestness and spirituality, made a deep impression upon the large congregation which heard him.

No less impressed were the delegates by the address of Dr. F. E. Emrich, secretary of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society. Making frequent reference to his own long and rich experience, he spoke upon "Our New England Opportunity and Obligation" with a humor, wisdom, sweetness and charm, which drew all hearts unto him.

Reminded that all the meditation of the two days should issue in action, the delegates returned to their homes and churches under the inspiration of Dean Charles R. Brown's address, "The Church in a Day of Rebuilding."

Louisiana State Meeting

Among the pines and oaks, in the truck-garden region of Louisiana, in Roseland, 70 miles north of New Orleans, occurred the state meeting of the Congregational churches. Rev. Samuel Holden, general missionary, is acting pastor of Roseland. Entertainment was featured by dinners served out-of-doors, in the ample grounds with more than comfortably warm sunshine, early November though it was, under the auspices of the government Parish Demonstration Station. Rev. R. M. Pratt of Jennings preached the sermon, the World Movement was presented by Superintendent Ricker and Dr. W. W. Scudder and religious education by Sec. Fred Grey, to whose wide field Louisiana has recently been added. Dr. H. B. Harrison spoke on "The Cargo of the Mayflower."

Theodore Roosevelt and His Time

Shown in his own letters

By JOSEPH BUCKLIN BISHOP

The career of no historic personage approaching Roosevelt in eminence and interest has ever been set forth so fully, so authoritatively, so humanly. Without reading it no man can hope to understand the history of his own time. With portraits, 2 vols., $10.00

Jesus' Principles of Living

By PROF. C. F. KENT and PROF. J. W. JENKS

The aim in this volume has been to interpret the teachings of Jesus frankly, simply, and constructively in the light of modern conditions, and to make clear the trail that Jesus blazed by which each man may find the larger life in union and co-operation with him. Throughout it formulates the vital questions that now confront the citizens of every country, and helps them in the light of Jesus' principles of living to think them through and reach a true and vital solution. $1.25

English Ways and By-Ways

By DR. LEIGHTON PARKS

Rector of St. Bartholomew's, New York

A merry book of travel is this composite of fact and fiction from Dr. Parks' pen. It records the voyaging of an American clergyman in the land of Shakespeare. An ideal holiday gift. $1.75

Luke the Historian in the Light of Research

By PROF. A. T. ROBERTSON, D. D.

With this book any one will have at his command information about the early church which every Christian eagerly desires, and he will be able to answer most of the questions which perplex the thoughtful reader of the New Testament and which critics bring against it. $2.50

The Shorter Bible—The New Testament

"An amazingly short, clear, and consecutive reproduction of the essential contents of the Bible."—The Continent.

"It is remarkable what freshness is added by this new presentation of the choicest New Testament teaching in short, crisp sentences and the plain speech of our own day. Even the story of the Gospels takes on new interest. The little volume is admirably adapted for use in the family or as a travel companion."—The Congregationalist and Advance.

326 pages. $1.25

Charles Scribner's Sons Fifth Avenue, New York

Nearly, all the churches of the state were represented, one pastor only being absent, and the choir of Hammond Church made the 40-mile trip to give the musical program on Wednesday evening. Cordial approval of the World Movement was voted, following the presentation of the quotas, and Louisiana's full share of the $5,000,000 objective bids fair to be pledged soon. Rev. R. M. Pratt was chosen moderator, Rev. Eben Herbert, assistant, Rev. Paul Leeds, scribe-registrar, Rev. Samuel Holden, C. W. M. field man, with Rev. T. A. Edwards, helper. The 1921 meeting is to be in Jennings the first week in November. A. E. R.

MICHIGAN

Big Rapids Has Course in Life of Christ

BIG RAPIDS recently increased the pastor's salary $300. A class of high school students meets in the church regularly each week for instruction in the Life of Christ. The pastor, Rev. R. J. McColl, is teacher and the students get credit in the high school for the work done. The course is planned to cover one year.

OHIO

Preparation Sunday at Twinsburg

Rev. W. C. H. Moe began his pastorate of TWINSBURG, Nov. 7. The pastor emeritus, Rev. R. T. Cross, who has supplied the past year, made the preceding Sunday a Preparation Sunday for the coming pastor—a new kind of special Sunday, which is commended to other churches. The sermon was on the value of the minister to the community.

Oct. 20, Mr. Cross was in a railroad collision, suffering a broken nose, other face bruises, and the loss of much blood, but suffers no permanent injury.

NEW YORK

Tercentenary Plans in Brooklyn

Many plans are on foot for the suitable celebration of the Tercentenary year in

From West to East

CALIFORNIA

Alameda Has "Question Box" Evening

ALAMEDA, across the bay from San Francisco, is making strong progress under the leadership of Rev. C. C. Wilson. Attention has been largely concentrated on the Sunday evening service and on weekly gatherings on Thursday evenings. At the midweek service every other week a question box is conducted, the questions generally being suggested by the Sunday evening sermons, which cover a wide variety of subjects. On alternate Thursdays the church opens it doors for a "Community Night," preceded by a simple supper and an hour of fellowship around the tables. The Community Night programs for the fall have already included a stereopticon talk by Rev. R. B. Dodge on "Picturesque Hawaii," an address by Pres. A. H. Reinhardt of Mills College, and a visit from Rev. F. M. Sheldon of the Education Society. Display advertising in the local papers has been found to be helpful in bringing the expanding program of the church to the attention of the community. D. J. S.

Organ Dedicated at San Bernardino

FIRST, SAN BERNARDINO, planned an appropriate service for the dedication of its beautiful new organ recently. Given as a memorial to one of the beloved younger members of the church by her father and mother, the significance of this gift deeply touched the hearts of the people.

Since the dedication of the building four years ago the pastor, Rev. H. B. Mowbray, and his loyal people have longed for the day when a suitable organ should provide the needed addition to the auditorium. With this generous memorial gift has come the answer to these hopes. The service participated in by a congregation that overcrowded the auditorium was reverent and uplifting and in every way suitable for the occasion. S. E. B.

TEXAS

Installation at Houston

Following the State Conference at Port Arthur a council met at HOUSTON Oct. 29, and in the afternoon examined Rev. E. H. Willisford, Ph.D., who began work on this field Oct 1. Besides neighboring churches, several visiting brethren were members of the council. The examination was not only satisfactory but highly gratifying, and the vote to approve both the call of the church and the installation of Dr. Willisford was most hearty. A delightful supper was served in the beautiful parsonage, and at the evening service the parts were: charge to the church, Superintendent Ricker; charge to the pastor, Dr. H. B. Harrison; hand of fellowship, Sec. F. J. Estabrook; prayer, Rev. W. L. Caughran; while a more formal address, one of exceptional power, was given by Dr. W. W. Scudder. A. E. R.

LIPPINCOTT BOOKS
FOR GIFTS

"The Book has Dash, Fire and Romance."—THE OUTLOOK

NO DEFENCE GILBERT PARKER'S Great Romance

"Has dramatic situations and incidents; vivid pictures of West Indian forest and plantation life, and an appealing love tale."—THE OUTLOOK. The Irish and English temperaments are contrasted in many dramatic scenes. In "NO DEFENCE" Gilbert Parker has gone one step higher in his literary career. 4 illustrations. $2.00.

SEEING THE FAR WEST By JOHN T. FARIS

A remarkable panorama of the Wonderland of America, revealing the scenic glories of the states from the Rockies to the Pacific in the text and with the 113 illustrations and two maps. The most complete and comprehensive volume on the territory covered. Handsome octavo. $6.00.

THE BOOK OF JOB By MORRIS JASTROW, JR., Ph.D., LL.D.

"A noble book,—all men's book," wrote Carlyle, yet the soul, the beauty and the living fire of it hidden beyond a veil of conflicting interpretations. It has been for Dr. Jastrow with his rare insight and charm to give us this grandly conceived new interpretation of the original masterpiece. Frontispiece. Ornamental cloth. $4.00.

THE ORIENT IN BIBLE TIMES By ELIHU GRANT

The biblical gift book of the year for Bible readers of every denomination. It makes the Bible more intensely human and interesting. 30 illustrations. $2.50.

IN OLD PENNSYLVANIA TOWNS

By ANNE HOLLINGSWORTH WHARTON.

The Picturesque, the historic, the social, and human have been gathered and woven into this entertaining chronicle. A valuable addition to the literature of earlier days, replete with entertaining information for the traveler as well. 32 illustrations, handsome octavo. $5.00.

CLOUDY JEWEL

By GRACE LIVINGSTON HILL (Mrs. Lutz)

The story of Julia Cloud, family drudge, and her rejuvenation, results in an exquisite romance and a cheerful story as heart-satisfying as a fresh-blown rose. Frontispiece. $1.90.

HAPPY HOUSE By JANE ABBOTT

goes steadily on its way to greater and greater success. It is proving one of the most popular stories of the season. Frontispiece. $1.75.

NEW BOOKS ENTERTAINING AND USEFUL

A BOOK ON ANGLING, by FRANCIS FRANCIS, will quicken the pulse of every fisherman, angling from every angle, with many illustrations. $4.50. THE RABBIT BOOK, by PROFESSOR WASHBURN; a complete, practical manual on the care and breeding of all kinds of meat-and-fur-producing rabbits. 61 illustrations. $2.00. "MRS. WILSON'S COOK BOOK," suits every purse. Menus of the simplest to the most elaborate can be prepared from hundreds of new recipes. Women will appreciate the author's new method of presenting them. $2.50. "THE CHARM OF FINE MANNERS," by MRS. STARRETT, will be a great boon to fathers and mothers. In a charming way the author writes about behavior, self-culture, habits, conversation, etc. $1.00. For the Little Tots—THE KIDDIE-KAR BOOK, colored pictures and fanciful verses with the true nursery swing and ring, $1.50. THE CHILDREN'S STORY GARDEN, a collection of stories about animals, children, flowers, elves, etc., each one illustrating a Christian ideal of life, 10 pictures. $1.50. YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS SHOULD HAVE THE BEST. In addition to the books on this page we have a splendid selection of new LIPPINCOTT'S MERIT BOOKS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS. Write for circulars.

AT ALL BOOKSTORES

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY
PUBLISHERS PHILADELPHIA

BOYS AND GIRLS

Will find delight in these

ARTHUR RACKHAM'S
New Illustrated Gift Book
THE SLEEPING BEAUTY

A book of alluring beauty that will delight every child. Numerous delightful silhouettes, frontispiece in color, handsome binding, uniform with Rackham's "Cinderella." Octavo. $2.

PINOCCHIO

Collodi's delightful Italian classic can now be secured in two beautiful holiday editions uniform with Spyri's "Heidi," of last season. GIFT EDITION, 14 pictures in color, handsome binding. $2.50. SPECIAL EDITION, 14 pictures in color, mounted on mats, exquisite binding, stamped in gold, in a box. $6.00

STORIES ALL CHILDREN LOVE SERIES

18 famous stories for children. The new title is "CORNELLI," by the author of "Heidi." It is equally as entertaining. Ask to see the other volumes in this series. They are beautifully illustrated in color and make the best sort of Christmas gifts for young people. Incomparable at the price per volume. $1.50

CHILDREN'S CLASSICS SERIES

15 favorite fairy and story books, carefully edited and simplified for little folks. Beautifully illustrated. Each $0.75

JANE ABBOTT'S New Sunshine Story is HIGHACRES

It will delight her host of youthful readers who enjoyed "Keineth" and "Larkspur." Illustrated. $1.75.

DAN BEARD'S New One is
THE AMERICAN BOYS' HANDY BOOK OF WOODCRAFT AND CAMP-LORE

With 377 snappy illustrations showing just how to do things in the woods. Every boy wants this book. $3.00

THE AMERICAN TRAIL BLAZERS SERIES

12 thrilling stories of great pioneers. INTO MEXICO WITH GENERAL SCOTT, by Sabin, is the new one this year. It is a stirring tale of the Mexican War. These are splendid volumes for boys. Write for descriptive circular. Each volume illustrated. $1.75

¶ENDORSED BY ALL DENOMINATIONS. ¶THE ACCEPTED MODERN ENGLISH VERSION
The Twentieth Century New Testament
NEW POCKET EDITION, $1.25---READY F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

BOOKS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE BOYS' BOOK OF THE WORLD WAR
By DR. FRANCIS ROLT-WHEELER
Illustrated from Photographs, and with Many Text-Maps and Diagrams.
Large 12mo. 550 Pages. Jacket in Colors, $2.50.

It is an honor to the boys of the United States that such a book should be written for them, but it will be read eagerly by every person who desires to find a brief but very comprehensive history of the World War.

RAINBOW GOLD
By MILLICENT EVISON
Illustrated. All-around picture jacket in colors, $1.75

No brighter, wittier, or more readable book has been written in years than this story of Antoinette Hamilton, a whimsical little heroine whose heart is brimming over with humor, pathos, loyalty and courage. Will be liked by all of high school age.

BOBBY AND THE BIG ROAD
A Book for Little Readers
By MAUD LINDSAY
Sixteen Full-Page Illustrations in Colors. All-around picture jacket in colors, $1.50

The wonderful genius of Maud Lindsay as a writer for the young is apparent in every line of "Bobby and the Big Road," a book for children from five to seven.

A PRAIRIE-SCHOONER PRINCESS
By MARY KATHERINE MAULE
Author of "The Little Knight of the X Bar B"
Illustrated. Jacket in colors, $1.75

The princess is a beautiful young girl found under dramatic circumstances by a family crossing the plains in a "prairie schooner." Aside from the power of its human appeal, its lovable characters, its humor and pathos, it is of real value, as it deals accurately with a phase of American life now past.

LITTLE FOLKS TRAMPING AND CAMPING
By ANNA BLUNT MORGAN
Illustrated in colors. All-around picture jacket in colors, $1.75

The well told story of a family of real children and their experiences in learning to know their native birds. Some of the incidents are funny, some pathetic, some tragic, in a child's eyes at least.

For sale everywhere.
Send for free complete catalogue.

LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO., Boston

IN THE WEEKLY
FREE EXHIBIT OF CHURCH SCHOOL EQUIPMENT
ROOM 500, 14 BEACON ST., BOSTON

MONDAY AFTERNOON, NOV. 29TH, 2 TO 5 P.M.

Pastors, Superintendents, Teachers and Leaders of Church Men's Organizations will have the unusual opportunity of consulting personally with the National Social Service Secretary,

REV. ARTHUR HOLT, Ph.D.

upon the social service opportunities of their individual churches, through Forums and Forum Classes, Social Education Through Boy and Girl Scout Troops, Influencing Community Action Through Social Education, Adaptation of the Church to Its Community, Readaptation of Sunday Evening Services, and a Splendid Line of the Best

BOOKS AND LITERATURE FOR THE WORK

Brooklyn and New York. On Nov. 28, at 4 o'clock, a mass meeting of the Protestant churches of Brooklyn and Queens will be held at the Academy of Music in Brooklyn. The addresses will be by Rev. Canon A. E. Burroughs, member of the British Delegation to the Pilgrim Tercentenary Celebration, Dr. S. M. Crothers of Cambridge, and Dr. J. P. Huget of Tompkins Ave., Brooklyn. On Nov. 26, the young people of Tompkins Ave. Church will give an elaborate pageant in commemoration of the event; and Broadway Tabernacle has also underway plans for a dramatic presentation of the Pilgrim undertaking to be given in their own assembly hall sometime in December. B. A.

Dedication of Italian Mission, Brooklyn

A noteworthy occasion in the annals of Brooklyn Congregationalism was the dedication, on Nov. 14, of the new Italian Mission and Community House at the corner of Clinton and Carroll Sts. The service included Scripture reading and prayer by Rev. A. C. Church and addresses by Revs. R. A. McConnell, L. T. Reed, and W. K. Bloom in English, Scripture reading and prayer in Italian by Rev. Gaetano Lisi, pastor of the church, and an address in Italian by Rev. Stefano Tasta. Music in both Italian and English was furnished by the Y. P. S. C. E. of the church.

New Italian Mission in Brooklyn

The pastor in charge of the work at the Italian Mission is Rev. Gaetano Lisi, born in Italy, but educated largely in this country. Mr. Lisi ministered to a church in Massachusetts before the war, served in the Italian Army during its early years and afterwards with the Y. M. C. A. in Italy. Mrs. Lisi is an American of Italian parentage, and both are well fitted to carry on this community work among the large Italian population on the Heights, thousands of whom, while nominally Roman Catholic, have no intimate connection with that church. The house is of the large square type, with a wide hall running through the center and large rooms on either side. On the first floor is a library on the right, with an office behind and a large kindergarten room at the back opening on to a covered porch. At the left is a well-equipped chapel seating about 100, where services in Italian are held for the older people and services in English for the younger generation. On the second floor are commodious club rooms which can be thrown together for social purposes, and on the third floor are living quarters for the

Plans for Sunday School Evangelism
By FRANK L. BROWN
"Here is a record of a successful superintendent's experience, and how others won their scholars to Christ. If you buy only one book this year---let it be this one."---S. S. TIMES. $1.50.
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

pastor and his family. The basement floor has a well-equipped kitchen and provides space for a good gymnasium.

B. A.

Pilgrim, Syracuse, Moves

Through the co-operation of the New York State Home Missionary Society, PILGRIM, SYRACUSE, has exchanged its church building for the building formerly occupied by South Ave. Congregational Church. The Pilgrim Church will be sold.

The new church home was opened on Nov. 7, with a service of rejoicing. At the evening service greetings of congratulation on its new undertaking were brought to Pilgrim Church by representatives of the other Congregational churches of the city. The program of the day was in charge of Rev. A. P. Van Dusen, pastor, George Brooks, superintendent of the Bible School, Mrs. D. K. Landon and Mrs. Christina Blinn.

E. A. B.

CONNECTICUT

New Britain Church Has New Organ

STANLEY MEMORIAL, NEW BRITAIN, Rev. G. M. Missirian, minister, has recently installed a new pipe organ, with electro-pneumatic action, built by the Hall Organ Co. of West Haven, Ct. The church was renovated and put through minor repairs. The cleaning, calcimining and painting were carried on by the faithful members of the Brotherhood.

The dedication service for the organ was held on Sept. 26, Organist T. W. Frederickson, a talented senior in the School of Music at Yale, giving the recital and Rev. G. W. C. Hill of the South Church and its pastor officiating in the service.

The Ladies' Aid Society has bought a new carpet for the pulpit and a new velvet curtain for the pulpit railing. This society has been active during the last month, having raised by various activities over $160.

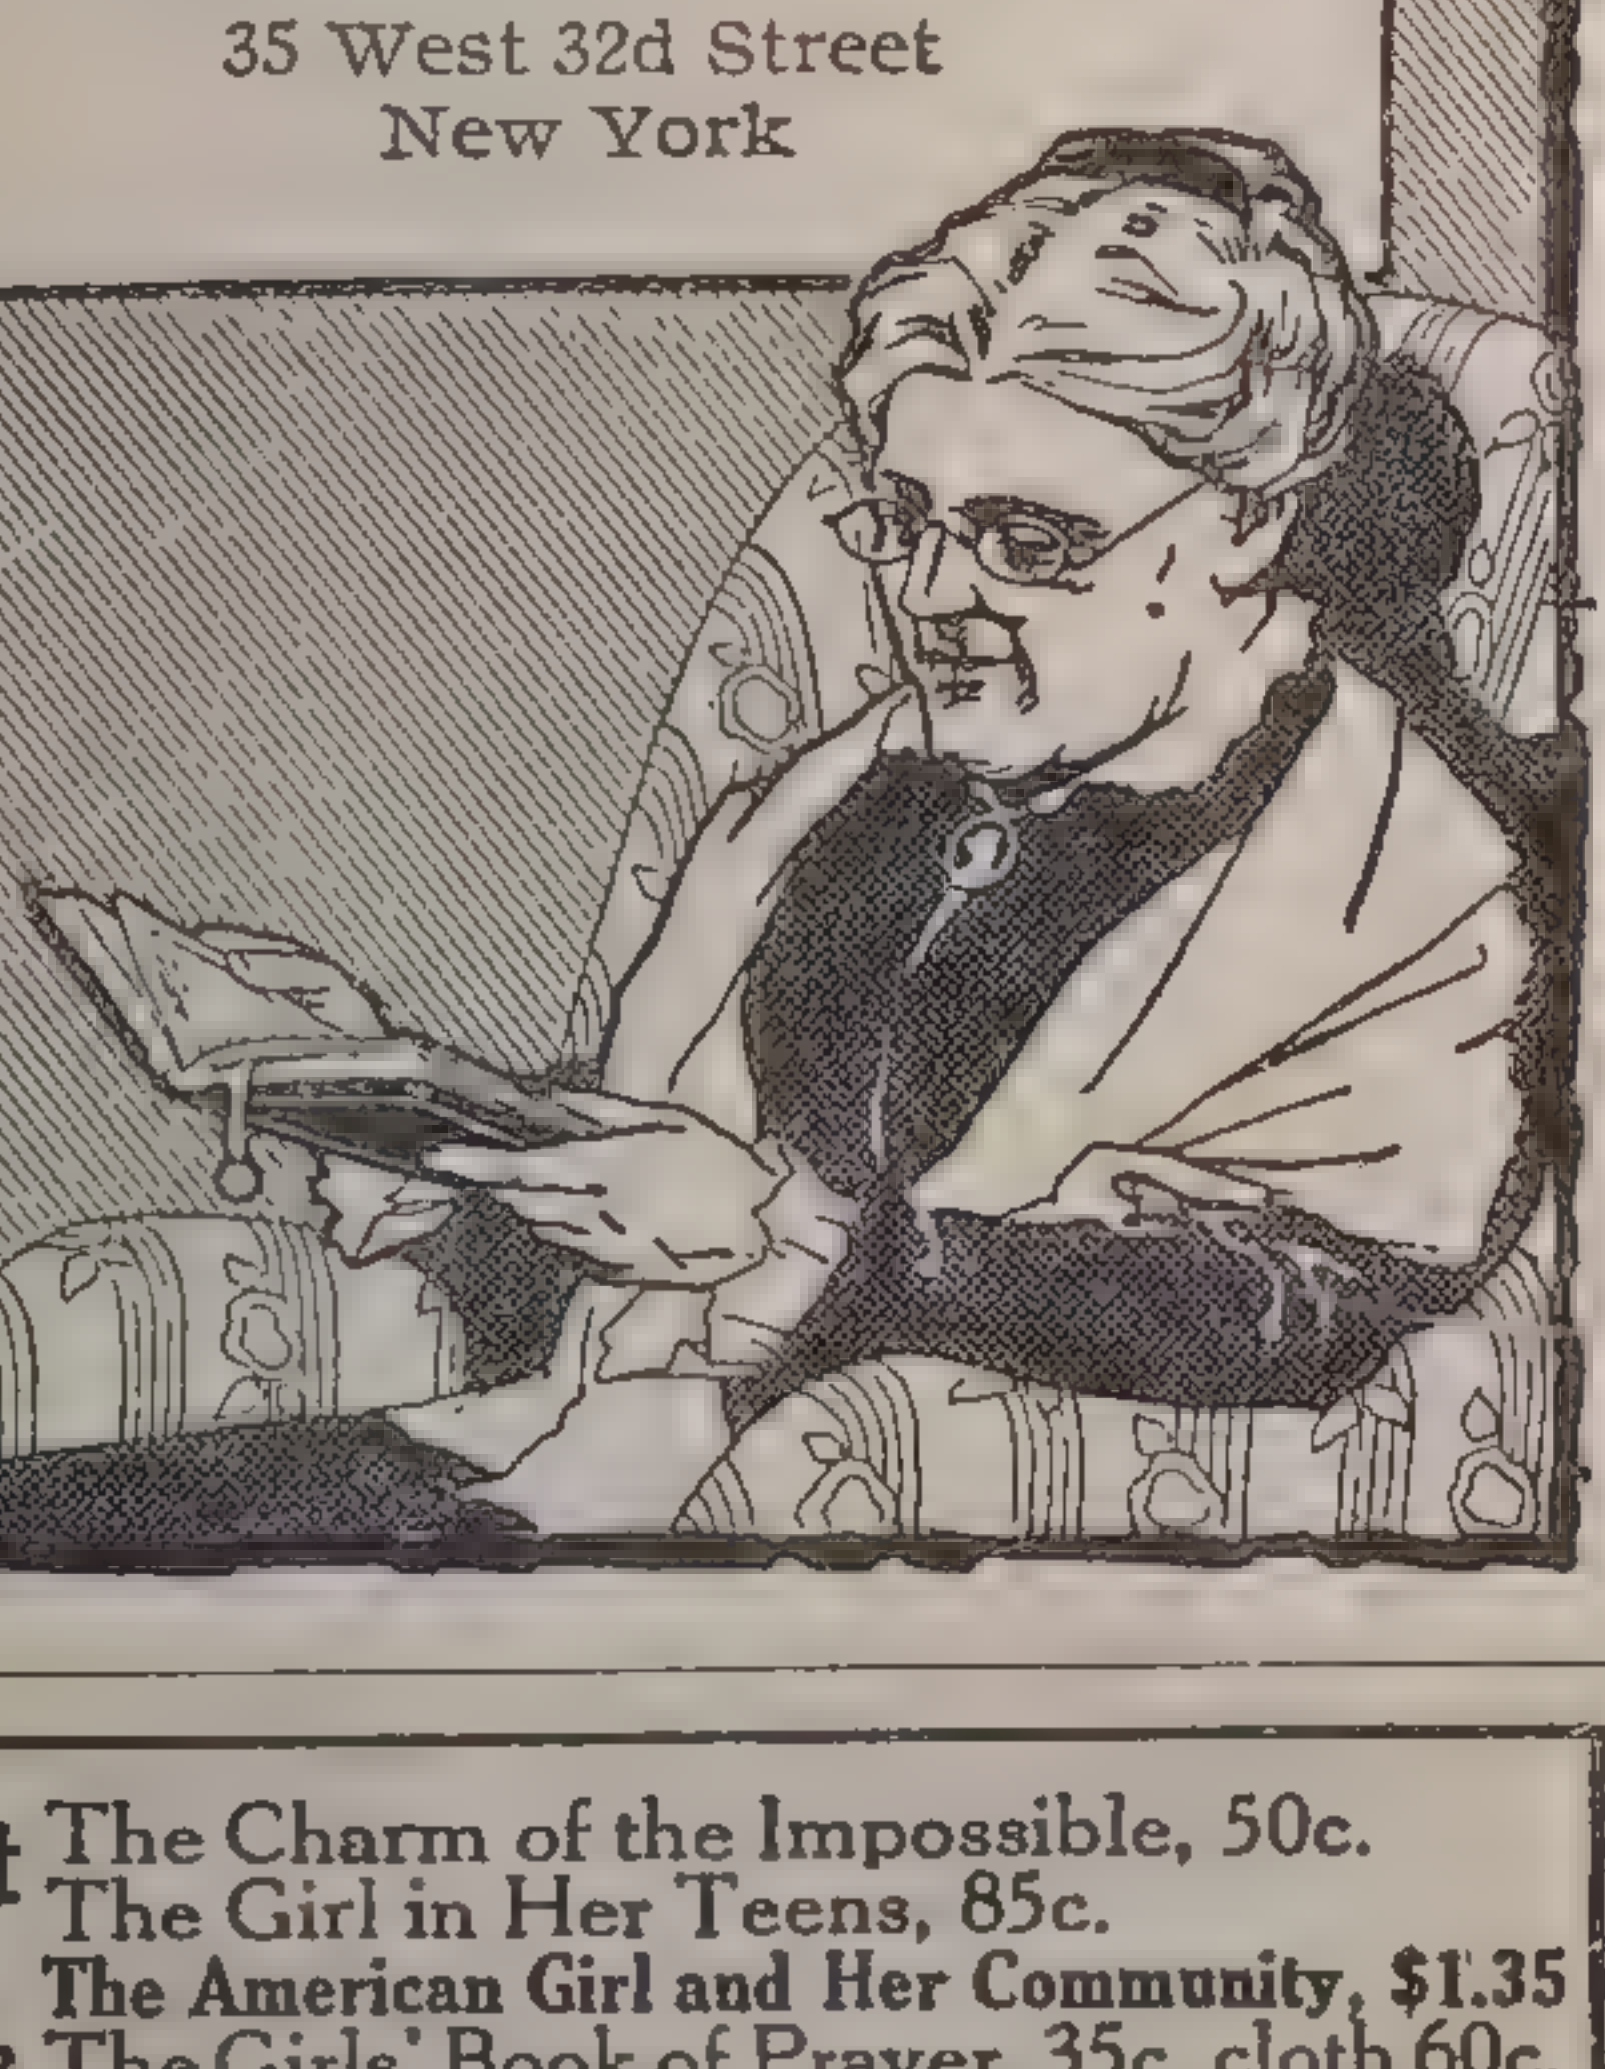
OXFORD
LARGE TYPE
BIBLES

Older folks, and those with imperfect eyesight, appreciate the ease with which they can read an Oxford Large Type Bible.

The styles on Oxford India Paper are especially desirable, being so easy to read and easy to hold. Many styles to choose from.

At All Booksellers
Catalog upon request

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
AMERICAN BRANCH
35 West 32d Street
New York



Margaret Slattery's Books
The Charm of the Impossible, 50c.
The Girl in Her Teens, 85c.
The American Girl and Her Community, $1.35
The Girls' Book of Prayer, 35c. cloth 60c.
The Girl and Her Religion, $1.25.
Just Over the Hill, $1.25.
The Costly Star, 60c.
Add 10% for postage
14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

There is nothing important enough to come into a man's life and tell him that the place is now become so crowded that he must throw God out.

MASSACHUSETTS

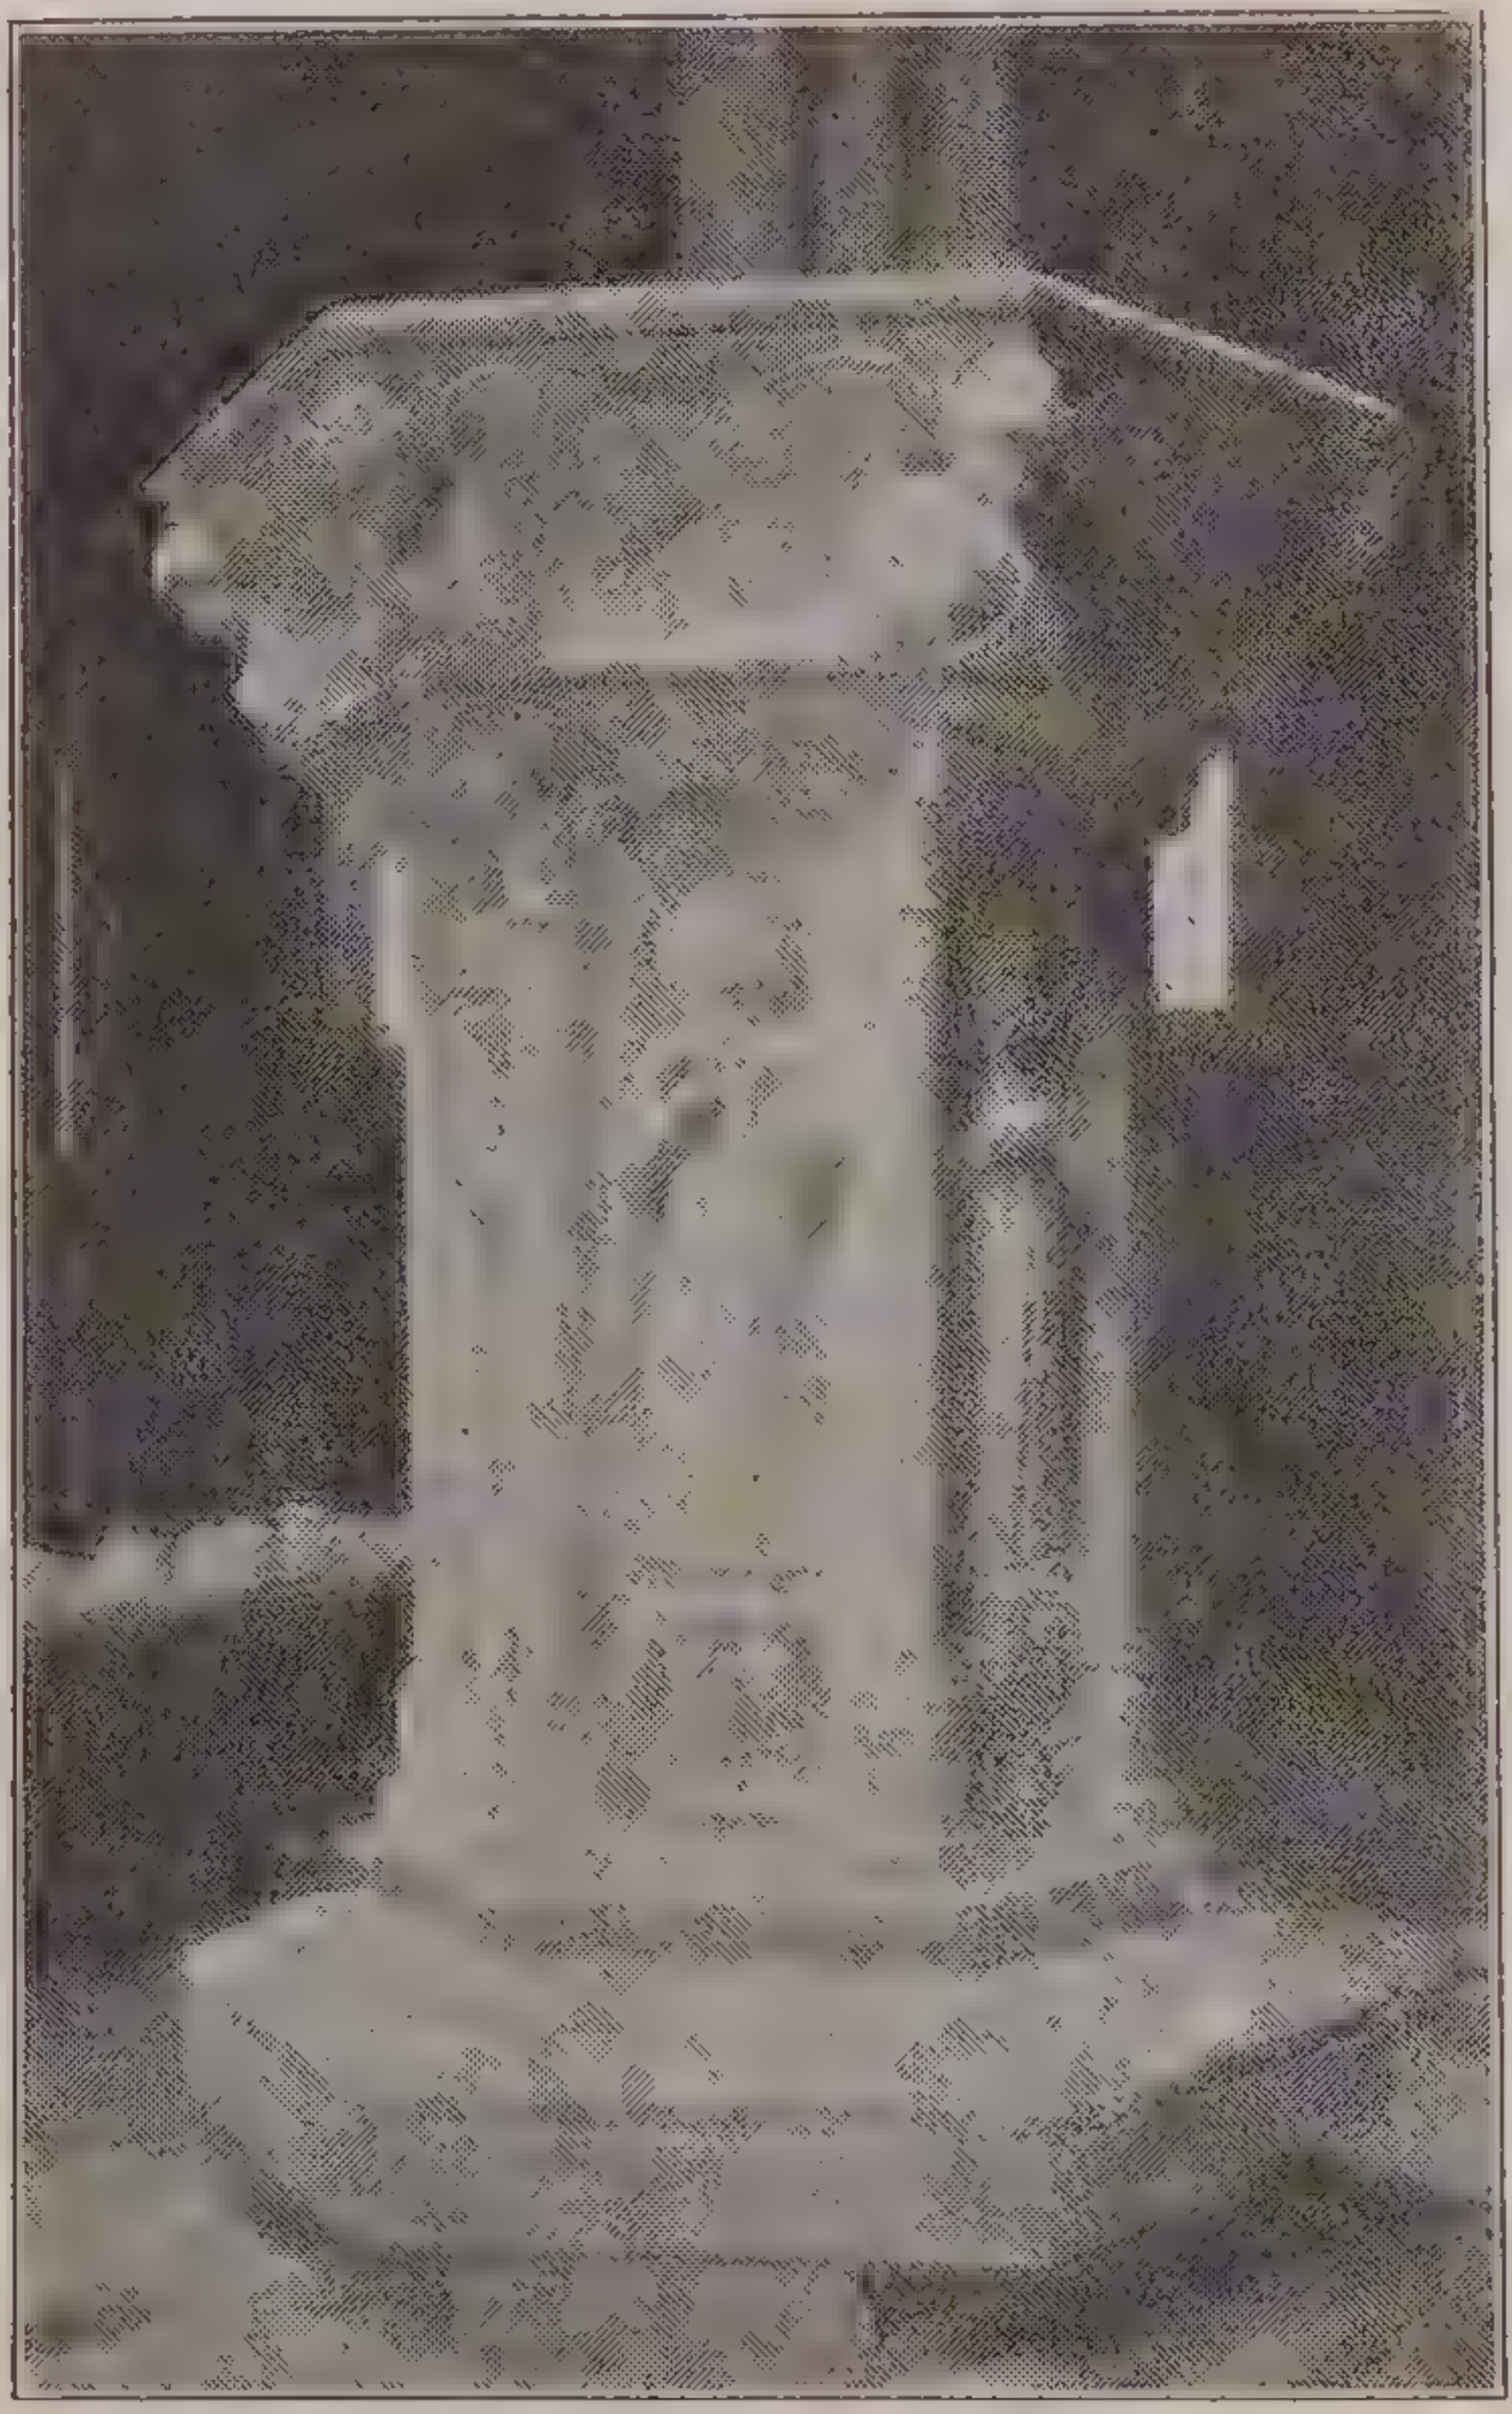
Rev. C. A. McKay Installed at Gardner

An unusually varied and worth-while program was carried out in connection with the installation of Rev. C. A. McKay over FIRST, GARDNER, Nov. 10. The supper hour was utilized for a series of brief greetings in which the chairman of the Board of Selectmen and representatives of other religious bodies, as well as old-time friends, participated. Dr. Willmott's sermon emphasized the Cross as the central message of the preacher and other speakers put emphasis on the spiritual aspects of the Christian ministry and the spiritual responsibility of the Christian congregation. The church has purchased an attractive house for a parsonage, where Mr. and Mrs. McKay and their five "olive branches" are already happily established.

The church has shown in a substantial way its sympathy with the widow of its late pastor, Rev. B. S. Gilman. His death was found to be due not to an accident but to heart failure while steering his auto truck. As a result he was thrown to the ground.

New Baptismal Font at West Newton

SECOND, WEST NEWTON, Rev. J. E. Park, pastor, recently dedicated a memorial baptismal font to Miss S. Maria Clarke who was Superintendent of the Primary Department for 40 years. It is made of Champville marble from France, the sculptress being Miss B. Lillian Link of New York.



MEMORIAL FONT IN WEST NEWTON CHURCH

The figures on the font represent "A Child's Day:" first Morning, The Child Awakening, with the bird upon her hand; second Daily Bread, The Child at Breakfast; third Play, The Child with a Little Trumpet; fourth Work, The Child at School; fifth Prayer, The Child with Folded Hands; and sixth Night, The Child with the Candle. Above these figures are the guardian angels who represent the care of God following the child throughout the day. Below are the animal forms which the Bible takes as symbols—the dove for meekness; the lamb for gentleness; the lion, king of the earth; the eagle, king of the air; the dolphin, king of the sea; and the hen with the chickens under her wing which Jesus used as illustration of the protecting care and love of the Great Elder Brother.

A number of friends have united in subscribing toward a book which is to be kept near the font and in which the names of all children baptized in it are to be inscribed.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

BRIDGMAN, R. P., Harvard University, to assistant pastorate, Maverick, East Boston, Mass. Accepts.

CONANT, H. S., formerly Secretary of the Massachusetts Sunday School Association, to Montvale, Mass. Accepts.

GILLETTE, E. C., Plainville, Ct., to Jacksonville, Fla. Accepts.

HAMILTON, G. V., formerly pastor of Wapping, South Windsor, Ct., to North Stamford. Accepts.

Buy NOW for Christmas!

A NURSERY STORY OF THE BIBLE
By LOUISE M. PLEASANTON
Bible stories, carefully selected for little children and beautifully told in simple language. Illustrated. Net $2.50.

A TREASURY OF HEROES AND HEROINES
By CLAYTON EDWARDS
A notably large number of life stories of famous men and women included in a beautifully made volume, with 12 illustrations in color. Net $3.00.

EILEEN'S ADVENTURES IN WORDLAND
By ZILLAH K. MACDONALD
The "life stories" of words vividly told, equipping children with a vocabulary of good words, correctly understood. Illustrated. Net $2.25.

THE STORY OF DOCTOR DOLITTLE By HUGH LOFTING
A tale of the animal's own doctor and his amusing adventures, profusely and humorously illustrated by the author. Net $2.25.

MASTERS OF THE GUILD
By L. LAMPREY
Tales of the golden days of the Middle Ages in Europe—genuinely valuable as accurate pictures of Mediæval life. Fully illustrated. Net $2.25.

HIGH SCHOOL FARCES
By FREDERICK TREVOR HILL
Three simple plays for boys and girls, with simple costumes and scenery. Net $1.00.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN MEADOWLAND
By FLORENCE S. VINCENT
In simple story form, this book gives fascinating information about the lives and ways of insects. Illustrated. Net $2.00.

Cong. 11-25-20
For a free illustrated, 48-page pamphlet, with cover in full color, describing not only all our new holiday books for children, but also all our young people's books of permanent worth, send this coupon to

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY
443 Fourth Ave. New York

MOSES, A. C., Green Lake, Seattle, Wash., to assistant pastorate, First Presbyterian, Seattle. Accepts and is at work.

ORTON, R. D., Atlantic, St. Paul, Minn., to Hutchinson. Accepts.

STAFFORD, HERBERT, Montour, Io., to Winchester, Ct. Declines.

STEBBINS, C. E., First, Hamilton, O., to First, Carpentersville, Ill. Accepts to begin in December.

STRONG, SYDNEY, Queen Anne, Seattle, Wash., to Australian, Melbourne, Australia. Declines.

Resignations

ELLIS, J. R., Morrisville, N. Y.

GARDNER, JOHN, New England, Chicago, Ill.

HYSLOP, JAMES, Lebanon, Mo., to accept call to Talladega Theological Seminary, Talladega, Ala.

LOCKHART, B. W., Franklin St., Manchester, N. H.

Dismissal

BRADLEY, H. S., Piedmont, Worcester, Mass., Nov. 9.

GIVE YOUR PASTOR A NEW BOOK

THE AMBASSADORS OF GOD

By S. PARKES CADMAN

"I am greatly pleased with 'Ambassadors of God.' There is a sheer excess of all kinds of vitality about it which makes its spirit contagious and irresistible."—Bishop Francis J. McConnell. $3.50

Present to your minister and provide him a feast.

THE POWER OF PRAYER

By VARIOUS WRITERS

Many an hour of brooding can be well spent over the riches of material here provided. "The whole scope of prayer is covered beyond anything undertaken in recent times."—The United Presbyterian. Octavo 528 pages. $4.00

Show your pastor new depths of power in prayer.

HOW TO PRAY

By CHARLES LEWIS SLATTERY

Goes to the Lord's Prayer to learn how to pray. A companion in simplicity and reverence to his much used volume "Why Men Pray." $1.50

Share this good home-made loaf with your pastor.

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE LIFE OF TODAY

By JOHN A. RICE

The new Biblical knowledge has only made faith easier and our hold on vital Christian doctrine stronger.—Dr. Rice. $3.00

Skilled treatment for those troubled by scientific Biblical criticism.

THE CALL TO UNITY

By WILLIAM T. MANNING

(Rector of Trinity)

"Christian Unity is the new spirit which alone can impart permanence to the new order. It holds the key to all our other problems, social, political and economic."—Dr. Manning. $2.00 (Probably)

Add to your minister's zeal in this good cause.

THE RELIGIOUS CONSCIOUSNESS

By JAMES B. PRATT

"We are not likely to get a nearer approach to a popular psychology of religion."—Prof. George A. Coe.

"You have given us a weighty book that will be of much value to me."—Prof. James H. Leuba.

"Stands alone in its field."—Prof. Luther A. Weigle. $4.00

ITEMS FOR YOUR NEXT ORDER

SNOWDEN: Personality of God	$1.75
BROWN: The Religion of a Layman	1.25
BABSON: Religion and Business	2.75
MCAFEE: The Christian Faith and the New Day	.90
WARD: New Social Order	2.50
SWAIN: What and Where is God?	2.50

THE MACMILLAN CO., Publishers,
64-66 Fifth Ave., New York City, N. Y.

Ordinations and Installations

HOOVER, H. C., o., Berwyn, Ill., Oct. 29. Sermon by Rev. E. B. Allen; other parts by Rev. Messrs. R. L. Breed, G. T. McCollum, J. A. Jenkins, A. E. Leonard and Ervine Inglis.

MCKAY, C. A., i., First, Gardner, Mass., Nov. 10. Sermon by Dr. B. A. Willmott; other parts by Rev. Messrs. Alexander Muhonen, A. H. Bronsdon, H. A. Bridgman, D. D., A. R. Heaps, H. F. Holton, D. D., and F. E. Ramsdell.

WILLISFORD, E. H., i., Houston, Tex., Oct. 29. Sermon by Dr. W. W. Scudder; other parts by Rev. Messrs. W. I. Caughran, H. B. Harrison, A. E. Ricker and F. J. Estabrook.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
COLORADO
Denver	1	5
ILLINOIS
Oak Park, First		28
Winnetka	7	40
MASSACHUSETTS
Auburndale	3	8
NEW YORK
Brooklyn		9
Westchester, White Plains		26
SOUTH DAKOTA
Frankfort	6	9
TENNESSEE
Memphis, Second	9	9

Personals

CADMAN, S. P., Central, Brooklyn, N. Y., was the preacher at a notable service held at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City on Sunday, Oct. 24. The service was for the members of the Masonic Order of Greater New York given under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the State of New York, of which Dr. Cadman is the Grand Chaplain. Every seat was occupied and large numbers stood during the entire service, which was conducted by Dr. H. C. Robbins, dean of the Cathedral, assisted by Rev. R. E. Jones and Rev. E. B. Nash. Previous to Dr. Cadman's sermon, Bishop Burch of the Diocese of New York extended a welcome to the visiting Masons.

CAWTHORNE, NICHOLAS, has just celebrated his 50th anniversary as organist of First, Port Huron, Mich. Prof. Cawthorne came to Port Huron in 1870 from Chicago where he had been a teacher in Northwestern University. In appreciation of his faithful and talented services the members of First Church presented him upon this anniversary with a purse of $100 in gold.

PHILLIPS, JOSEPH, of Norwood, N. Y., and Mrs. Phillips, spent the summer months in England visiting their childhood home. Before Mr. and Mrs. Phillips' departure their people showed interest and appreciation by presenting them with a purse. They recently returned and are back at work again.

STRONG, SYDNEY, Queen Anne, Seattle, Wash., was recently called to the pastorate of the Australian Church in the city of Melbourne. He has declined. He may, however, arrange to spend several months next year in Australia, on a lecturing and preaching tour. The founder of the Australian Church is Rev. Charles Strong, who for over 40 years has been a pastor in Melbourne. He was at first a Presbyterian, but withdrew for service in an independent movement.

Events to Come

FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA, Quadrennial Meeting, Boston, Mass., Dec. 1-6.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, Los Angeles, July 8-16, 1921.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Nov. 29, 11 A. M. Speaker, Prof. Henry J. Cadbury of Andover Seminary. Subject, The Situation in Germany.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Dec. 3, 10.30 A. M. Speakers, Mrs. Alden Clarke and Miss Charlotte R. Willard, of Marsovan, Turkey.

KENTUCKY STATE CONFERENCE, Evarts, Nov. 27-28.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HAND BOOK
for 1921

Needed in every Congregational Church for Daily Use and Frequent Reference.

Contains

Daily Bible Readings
Fellowship of Prayer
Church Prayer Meeting Topics
Christian Endeavor Topics
Sunday School Lessons
Directory of National Council and Missionary Societies
Colleges and Seminaries
Congregational Statistics
Books on Congregationalism
Great Names
Confession of Faith

Prices

SINGLE COPY	$0.10
12 COPIES	1.00
25 "	2.00
50 "	3.50
75 "	4.50
100 "	5.00

ORDER NOW

EDITION LIMITED

Circulation Dept.

The Congregationalist and Advance

14 Beacon St.
BOSTON

19 W. Jackson St.
CHICAGO

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Advertising Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

CHARLES A. BLISS

The death of Charles A. Bliss on Oct. 10, removed from Newburyport, Mass., its foremost citizen. Mr. Bliss was a man of large business ability, of untiring effort for civic betterment and of life-long service in the Congregational Church. He was a man of strong, winsome Christian personality.

The funeral was held at his late home on Oct. 13 and was an intensely impressive occasion. The throng of friends, the floral tributes, the musical selections and the eulogy spoken by Rev. F. N. Merriam, pastor of the Belleville Church, who conducted the service owing to the vacancy of the Central Church pastorate, made a worthy expression of the deep and tender thoughts of the relatives, friends and fellow citizens assembled in their affection and sorrow.

A memorial service also was held on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 7, in Central Church, where Mr. Bliss was an active member, deacon and trustee. The house was filled with Newburyport citizens, all glad to give some expression of their affection for the man whose life had meant so much to them and whose death they deeply lamented. Mr. J. H. Balch, Jr., introduced the speakers with a fitting word of his own concerning the moral and religious leadership of Mr. Bliss as due to the distinct motive and purpose of his life. Mayor Page referred to his public spirit and described him as one of Nature's noblemen, loyal to his city, loyal to his friends and family, loyal to his God. Hon. R. E. Burke, speaking of his citizenship, said, "What a community this would be if made up of men of the spirit of Mr. Bliss!" His business career was treated by Mr. R. G. Dodge, who traced its unfolding from the age of 16 years, when the young Charles A. Bliss entered the employ of the Mechanics Bank of Newburyport. Soon after this he took a position in the N. D. Dodge Shoe Co. At the age of twenty-three, Mr. Bliss entered Harvard for a special course of two years and after this short interruption of his business career, he returned to the same shoe company and became a member of the firm on borrowed capital. For the rest of his life he remained in this establishment, the name of which has for many years been familiar not only to Newburyport, but throughout New England, the Bliss & Perry Co.

With large capacity for work, he was tactful in working with others and commanded the confidence and admiration of employees and all business acquaintances.

The religious aspect of this many-sided man was presented by Rev. D. Brewer Eddy of Boston. Joining the church when seventeen years of age, Charles Bliss dared to stand for his Christian ideals, entering with interest into the Christian Endeavor activities, and becoming Sunday school superintendent at an early age. Mr. Bliss was always a worker. In civic betterment, in the long anti-saloon campaign of years and in Y. M. C. A. work, he was always at the front. He was a member of the Prudential Committee of the American Board. He had the broad vision of the Church's missionary program, and among his many generous contributions, his brother's mission in China was well remembered.

"In the work for the church," said Mr. Eddy, "Mr. Bliss was the wheel-horse, and the back-log that burned with the fire of energy. Not satisfied with his own devotion, he gave beyond his strength. No momentary cloud can subtract from your satisfaction and mine in such a career as this, when we remember Charles A. Bliss, the man of God and the servant of his Master, Jesus Christ."

Mr. Bliss is survived by his wife, Mrs. Helen Stuart (Tuxbury) Bliss; by five sons, Charles Lydston, Stuart Tuxbury, Frederick Warren, Paul Washburn and Randall; by one daughter, Helen Elizabeth; by his mother, Mrs. Emily (Lydston) Bliss, widow of Mr. Charles Bliss; by three brothers and three sisters, Dr. Edward Bliss of China, Prof. Clara A. Bliss of Wells College, Dr. Maria W. Bliss of Beverly, Mr. Ernest W. Bliss of Newburyport, Mr. George H. Bliss of Newburyport, and Prof. Mary C. Bliss of Wellesley College.

F. N. M.

HOMER WESLEY HILDRETH

Rev. Homer Wesley Hildreth, pastor of First Congregational Church, Enfield, Ct., died Oct 28, at the Hartford Hospital in Hartford, Ct.

Mr. Hildreth was born in New York Aug. 24, 1871. He was educated in New York schools; Mt. Herman School; and was graduated from Union Seminary in the class of 1896, the youngest member of his class. Before graduation he was assistant pastor in Pilgrim Church, New York City.

His pastorates were at Albany and Rochester, Vt., and Prospect, Cromwell and Enfield, Ct.

He leaves his widow, Lillie (Orr) Hildreth; a daughter, Frances Orr Hildreth, a student at the MacDuffie School, Springfield, Mass., and a son, Earl Wesley Hildreth, a senior in Wesleyan University, Middletown.

Rev. C. F. Carter of Hartford and Rev. W. S. Thompson of Somers officiated at Mr. Hildreth's funeral, which was held at First Congregational Church, Enfield, on Friday evening Oct. 29, Dr. Carter making an address and a prayer, and Mr. Thompson reading the Scriptures and also offering prayer.

Many people would like to have freedom without obligation. That is the reason it is so often abused. But with freedom comes many obligations. The biggest of these is to use freedom to help and not to hurt others. A free man must act with strict justice and honor toward all others. Freedom does not mean that we can do as we please. It means that we are able to do as we ought. That keeps freedom from being unbridled license and saves it from turning to tyranny as it often does—Christian Evangelist.

Record Books for Church and Church School For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Superintendent, the Secretary. Roll Books, Class Books, Collection Envelopes.

ASK FOR CATALOGUES

14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

THE "BIBLE WE FORGET" SERIES

¶ The religious world has simply "opened its arms" in a cordial welcome to these enduring books of our times

The Christ We Forget
Eleventh Edition

¶ DR. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN, shortly before his death, said: "One of the greatest books I've ever read. It ought to be in every minister's hands. Is there not some way to arrange it?"

P. Whitwell Wilson's Two Stirring Books

EACH $2.00 NET

The Church We Forget
Third Edition

¶ An intimate revealing of the feelings and thoughts and personalities of the first Christians. As fresh and as life-like as "The Christ We Forget," also just as fascinating and epoch-making.

President Stryker, Hamilton College, says: A book always to remember. So compact, so just, so confident, so devout, that it would send every true man to his knees."

The Congregationalist: "How true it is that we do forget Christ. After reading it, one will study the Bible with a clearer understanding of its most spiritual teaching."

Homiletic Review: "For those looking for themes, for illustrations, for accumulations of suggestion, for talk or lecture — we have seen few books that promise more."

Michigan Christian Advocate: "We catch the ancient passion and long to apply it to modern life. Here are 350 pages of inspiring, delightful and instructive reading."

In Preparation THE VISION WE FORGET P. Whitwell Wilson

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY NEW YORK, 158 Fifth Ave. CHICAGO, 17 N. Wabash Ave.

Peloubet's Graded Quarterlies

Adapted to the Needs of Each Grade

Edited by Leading S. S. Workers

The advantages in the study of a uniform text are found in uniform family Bible study; a common subject in teachers'-meetings; substitute teaching made possible; fresh texts and treatments each year; additional material found in PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES and denominational and secular papers.

Teachers' Quarterlies

Very popular with progressive teachers, because exceedingly helpful in fitting the mind to present the lesson to the scholar with vividness and clearness that holds the pupil's interest.

Send for Sample Copies

W. A. WILDE COMPANY 120 BOYLSTON STREET BOSTON, MASS.

Western Office: Rand-McNally Building, Chicago, Ill.

Based on the New Uniform Lessons

She had the ability to forget herself in the only way that one ever does—by losing herself in a great cause.—John R. Mott.

The Congregational Training School For Women

Trains for Christian leadership.

The work of Church Assistant, Director of Religious Education, and Instructor in Week-day Religious Education offers opportunity for the finest and highest type of social service.

One and two year courses. Expenses low.

MISS MARGARET TAYLOR, Dean,
5603 Dorchester Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Chicago Theological Seminary

Is affiliated with the University of Chicago. Seminary instruction is supplemented by the varied and limitless opportunities of the University and the Divinity School. Tuition free.

Trains for
- Pulpit and Pastorate
- Missionary Work
- Community Service
- Religious Education

Opportunity is offered to secure the M. A. degree during preparation for the B. D.; also an annual two-year honor fellowship for post-graduate work.

5757 University Ave.,
Chicago, Illinois.

OZORA S. DAVIS,
President.

ANDOVER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

Cambridge, Massachusetts

Affiliated with Harvard University

A professional training school for Christian Ministers, with a three years' course of study leading to the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. Courses in all departments of Theology, with liberal privileges of election.

For catalogue and information apply to the Dean.

HARTFORD THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

A Training School for the Christian Ministry

Associated with it are:

HARTFORD SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS PEDAGOGY
Training leaders in religious education
KENNEDY SCHOOL OF MISSIONS
Training for foreign service

Address M. W. JACOBUS, Dean of Seminary, Hartford, Conn.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION

An undenominational training school for

The Ministry Religious Education
Foreign Missions Social Service

Curricula high grade and modern. Graduate degrees. University of California privileges. Opportunities for the study of Oriental peoples. Open to men and women of all Christian denominations. For catalogue address

WILLIAM FREDERIC BADE, Dean, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

The Graduate School of Theology

OBERLIN COLLEGE

A strong, well balanced course, preparatory to the work of the ministry at home or abroad.

Second semester's work begins February 8 with all the regular faculty teaching.

Address G. W. FISKE, Jr., Dean, Oberlin, Ohio.

BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

105th year opens Sept. 29, 1920. For College or non-College men. Courses, regular and elective; leading to diploma or degree; modern, thorough, practical. Expenses low. For Catalogue or information address

Prof. Warren J. Moulton, Cor. Sec'y.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Research and Training in Five Departments:

(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.

Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.

Degrees of M. A., B. D. and Ph. D., may be obtained by students.

For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

The Woman's Board at Montclair

Hears Notable Speakers and Elects New President

Memorable for beautiful setting, for bountiful hospitality, for perfection of arrangements, for the convenience and comfort of delegates, was the fifty-third annual meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions held in Montclair, N. J., Nov. 10-12. It was an anniversary for the entertaining Branch, now known as the New Jersey Branch, although organized half a century ago in Philadelphia as the Philadelphia Branch. The meetings were held in one of the most beautiful Congregational church edifices in the United States—that of First Church, of which Dr. C. S. Mills has recently been pastor. The stately auditorium ministered in its own way to the inspiration of the meeting and its perfect acoustics made it possible to hear women's voices despite the size of the room and the great height of the stone arches. The people of Montclair opened their hearts and their homes to an unprecedented extent for, since the town has no hotels, it was necessary to entertain all delegates, officers and missionaries in homes. Neighboring churches, Upper Montclair, Glen Ridge, Watchung Avenue, co-operated in every way, especially in labors behind the scenes, such as refreshing the inner woman.

The Pilgrim Faith Around the World

The program was a varied one affording a view of our missionary task as seen by missionaries, world travelers, ministers and Board secretaries. At the home base end strong emphasis was laid on Missionary Education. The stirring address on this subject given by Dr. Herbert W. Gates made the hearer feel that this is vital to the life of the church and more important than drives for money; while his conferences with leaders between sessions were appreciated by those seeking practical methods to use with young people. It was the first meeting since the return of the Home Secretary, Miss Calder, from her deputation work in the Orient and her "Tribute of an Eye Witness" was eagerly heard at an evening session. Another returned traveler was Mrs. Robert A. Woods of the South End House, Boston, who studied missions in Asia from the point of view of an expert in social service.

No missionary from Japan was present but other fields were well represented. Among those who spoke for India was Mrs. Theodore S. Lee, formerly of Satara, who was at this meeting elected as an Associate Secretary of the Board. One of the high peaks of interest and emotion was reached when Miss Charlotte R. Willard of the Western Turkey Mission told the story of recent years at Marsovan—the deportation, the almost miraculous turning back of the schoolgirls, the eviction of Americans, their return to find themselves in a Turkish military camp, the industrial and relief work in all of which Marsovan schoolgirls and teachers have taken a leading part. But Miss Willard's personality was greater than anything she said, for one had only to look into her face as she tried to show how the witness of Jesus Christ could not be taken from Turkey, to realize what a tower of strength she is.

Another notable session was when representatives of the union woman's colleges in China and India were heard. It was a piece of rare good fortune to have as a guest Miss Eleanor McDougall, that scholarly and charming English woman who is principal of Madras Christian College. Five years ago Miss McDougall passed through this country on her way out to India to take charge of this new college, staffed by twelve Woman's Boards in England, Scotland, Canada and the United States, and now she is just returning after her first furlough, having brought to British and American friends the news of phenomenal growth. "What Yenching College Girls Do and Dare" was told by Mrs. Alice Browne Frame of Peking, a member of the faculty who has had fifteen years' experience in China and who knows exactly how to enthrall an American audience.

In order that the work of the women might not seem isolated several men had a share in the program. Reference has already been made to Dr. Gates. The American Board was represented by Secretary Patton, its missionaries by Rev. Frank C. Laubach of the Philippine

A Christmas Gift Spells Christmas Joy

And you may make it, by your gifts, a joy that will deepen with every day of the year. Select some of the following books and send them speeding on their joy-giving mission: THE HOUSE OF CHIMHAM
By Edgar W. Work, D.D. (Boxed 78c. postpaid)
WHEN THE BLIND SAW
By David de F. Burrell (64c. postpaid)

Three Envelope Booklets
THE HERMIT'S CHRISTMAS
HOW THEY CAME TO BETHLEHEM
THE MAN WHO NEVER HEARD OF CHRISTMAS
(37c. each, postpaid)

Our Two Prize Books
THE FURNACE FOR GOLD
A thrilling story. ($1.68 postpaid)
THE VICTORY LIFE
Packed with spiritual uplift. ($1.58 postpaid)

For the Children
DEAR OLD STORIES TOLD ONCE MORE
($1.58 postpaid).
SONGS FOR THE LITTLE ONES AT HOME
($1.10 postpaid)

AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY
101 Park Ave., Cor. 40th St., New York, N. Y.

QUALITY REPRODUCTIONS OF

The Pilgrim Charter

Oldest Legal Document in America

Circular sent on request

DAVID W. BUTTERFIELD CO.

8 BEACON STREET, BOSTON

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

STORY OF THE PILGRIM FATHERS

By H. G. TUNNICLIFF

Especially for young folks, but you'll enjoy it yourself

"Told with a peculiar charm that you will be loath to put it down until you have read it through."—Lookout.

Copping's Famous Pictures. Net $1.25

F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

Offering Envelopes

For all purposes. Prompt Service

Ask For Prices

14 Beacon St.
Boston
THE PILGRIM PRESS
19 W. Jackson St.
Chicago

CARLETON COLLEGE

Liberal Arts
Science Music

D. J. COWLING, President

Northfield, Minnesota

The Fisk Teachers' Agencies

2A Park St., Boston 225 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Birmingham, Chicago, Denver, Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles. · Everett O. Fisk & Co.

Islands and at the evening session, to which the general public was especially invited, Rev. Hugh Gordon Ross, pastor of First Church, Pittsfield, Mass., gave an inspirational address developing the idea of obligation and gratitude as motives for missionary work. The devotional services, held each day at noon, were conducted by Rev. J. T. Stocking, D. D., of Upper Montclair, who gave a series of talks so refreshing, so uplifting, that when he gave opportunity for prayer from the floor, voices were heard from all parts of the church.

It is the custom of the Board to commission one or more outgoing workers at its annual meeting and this impressive service is usually included in the last session. This year a commission was given to Miss Grace Riddle, a Baltimore girl who is under appointment to Turkey and expects to go to the field in 1921 as an educational missionary. She is an alumna of Goucher College, has taken graduate work at Johns Hopkins and at the University of California, has been recently a member of the faculty of the North Carolina College for Women and is now receiving special preparation for her field at the Kennedy School of Missions. Coming at the very end of a three days' meeting, this service, with its dedication of a young life to foreign missions, is a fitting climax.

Of the business and social aspects I may speak only briefly. Considerable time was given to discussion of treasury matters, for although the Board's receipts, $313,104, were the largest in its history, the expenses, too, have been unexampled and serious difficulties have arisen because money counted on as a result of the Congregational World Movement Campaign for 1920 had not come in when the financial year closed. Important action in the way of closer co-operation between the three Woman's Boards was taken by the delegates who voted approval of an advisory Council of Woman's Foreign Missionary Boards with an executive secretary.

It was generally known that Mrs. Charles H. Daniels, the able and beloved president of the Board for fourteen years, had resigned and that a new leader was to be elected. This was in every one's mind as for the last time Mrs. Daniels presided in her inimitable way. Some of the love and admiration felt for her found expression on the evening of the reception when many voiced their regret as they clasped her hand in the receiving line, and when, with a happily worded speech, Miss Grace Perry, a Branch president, presented her with an envelope containing a gift of money which at that time was over a thousand dollars and is still growing. Mrs. Daniels is to make her home at Tolland, Ct., but she will remain on the Board as a Director. The newly elected president is Mrs. Franklin Warner, of White Plains, N. Y., a woman already well known because of her official connection with Congregational organizations both home and foreign. The next annual meeting will be held in New Haven, Ct., in November, 1921.

A. L. B.

Department of Religious Drama

Conducted by Mary Alice Emerson, Ph.D.

During this anniversary year the churches are commemorating the spirit of the Pilgrims in many ways besides reviewing their heroic history.

We often need to remind ourselves that the "eye of faith" is absolutely necessary. Though the arguments of doubt are very specious, "faith is the victory that overcomes the world." Last summer at the Missionary Education Conference at Ocean Park, Me., my class in Religious Pageantry presented a simple pageant called "The Eye of Faith." So many requests to read it have come to me that I give a short form of it below:

THE EYE OF FAITH

By Mary Alice Emerson, Ph.D.

Processional: "The Son of God goes forth to war."

Enter Church haunted by Doubt and encouraged by Faith.

Church—The Church of God has received a great commission. The challenge is, "The world for Christ in this generation." God give me wisdom and strength to meet this challenge.

Doubt—You can't meet it. You will fail as you have always failed. The World War has proved the uselessness of Christianity.

Faith (To D.)—Traitor, begone! Christianity did not fail in the World War. It was never given a fair trial.

Doubt—Well, then, the Church failed.

Church—Perhaps I did fail. Let me atone now.

Faith—

"Yes, for of what is to be and of what is done
Why queriest thou?
The Past and the Time-to-Be are one,
And both are now."

Church—Thou art right, Faith. The Present is my duty and my responsibility. I I only had thy vision and thy wisdom!

Faith—"If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not."

(All sing, "The Church's one foundation." One verse)

Doubt—Very pretty—but what are you going to do with your mistakes? Here comes one of them now. Africa, a "dark continent" indeed.

Africa—Save me, O Church of the Living God! See, I am bound by the shackles of superstition and ignorance.

Doubt—No use. What can you do for such people? If you unbind Africa's chains he will have new ones on again in no time. He has no power in himself.

Faith—Help him! He belongs to a race that once dominated the world. His present condition is due not so much to his own willfulness as to the temptations offered him by his civilized brethren of the white races.

Church—To my shame it is true. Comfort him, Faith. Henceforth I will be true to my responsibilities. He has some ideals.

Faith—Yes. Remember the Pan-African Conference!

Doubt—Here comes a pretty pair indeed. Turkey has almost killed Armenia. Better let him finish the job.

Church (To D.)—Be still. (To F.)—Is there hope still? Have I a chance?

Faith—God gives you another chance here too. Restrain Turkey by force if need be, and then educate him so that he will not want to repeat his atrocities.

Turkey (brandishing dagger)—Armenia is mine. I will kill her if she does not do as I say.

Armenia—I perish for lack of a friend. No one loves Armenia. (Shrieks and falls.)

Church (To D.)—Hands off! I will protect Armenia. I am ashamed that my efforts have been so feeble hitherto. (Fights with T. and throws him. F. takes A. away.)

Faith—"The Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings."

Doubt (To Church)—You are accumulating a fine lot of good-for-nothings. What kind of family do you think you can make out of them?

Church—By God's help, the family he intended. It would have been easier if I had started earlier, but—

(Continued on next page)

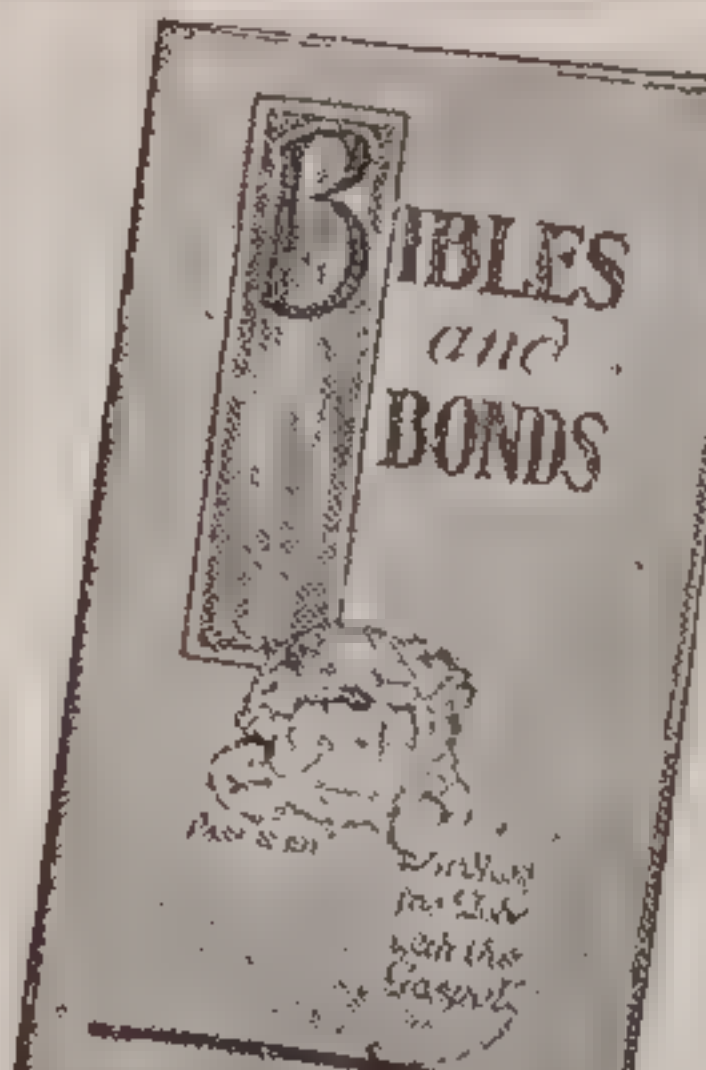
The Quality Investment

Guaranteed Farm Mortgages
Forty Three Years In Business—Without Loss to A Client

J. L. Pettyjohn & Co.
OLATHE, KANSAS



Write for this Booklet

"Bibles and Bonds" tells the interesting story of a world-wide work and a safe investment yielding as high as 8%.
Ask for Booklet J

American Bible Society
Bible House Astor Place New York

HIGH INTEREST RATES MEAN
BONDS YIELD 6% to 8½%

Your funds can now be invested to yield double the normal interest.

May we send you a list of high grade bonds?

EARNEST E. SMITH & CO.
52 Devonshire Street, BOSTON
Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges

THOMAS
Individual Cups
Used by over 35,000 churches. Clean and Sanitary. Send for catalog and special offer. Trial free.
Thomas Communion Service Co, Box 5 Lima, Ohio

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
79 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Desks—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.
DeMoulinBros&Co.Dept. 14 Greenville, Ill.

MENEELY BELL CO
TROY, N.Y. AND
198 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY
BELLS

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
is known all over the country. Four thousand churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars. THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio.

Walker's the Best Concordance
Over 50,000 more references than any other low priced concordance to the Bible. 980 pages. Cloth $3.00. ½ leather $3.75. Postage 20 cents.
14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St Chicago

(Continued from preceding page)

Doubt—Here's the sleepy country China. What is she doing here?

China—Help me, O Christian Church! I need doctors, ministers, teachers. I have waked from a long sleep, and would take my place in the world's life under thy guidance.

Faith—You shall, China. Unsuspected strength is yours, strength of numbers, wealth, achievements, power of hard and thorough work.

Church—I, too, will protect China.

Doubt—Here's Russia. She bodes you no good. Her Soviet tribe can't be far behind, with their bombs, firebrands and unholy teachings.

Faith—You always look for the worst. This is another Russia than the one you know. This Russia is down-trodden, betrayed by her leaders in church and state. But still she is hoping against hope for a better world.

Russia—I have been often wicked, and still more often foolish, but I have been wronged, terribly wronged. Give me something that I can trust and work for and I will be true to death.

Doubt—Hunt for her red flag. It is around her somewhere. She will tear down all our institutions.

Russia (To C.)—Believe me!

Church—I will!

Doubt—Well, of all the effrontery. Here comes Germany, hidden under a cloak of treachery.

Faith—Perhaps she is repentant.

Doubt—Perhaps nothing!

Germany (sullenly)—Give me a place with the other nations that you protect.

Church—Do you come in honesty, repenting your crimes and promising to atone?

Germany (growls—Hm!). Turkey comes creeping up. Church separates them.

Church—Russia, watch Turkey and Germany, till I can study their needs more carefully. My hands are full just now.

Interchurch—Let me help! I am strong. The Interchurch will unite in one purpose and one service, all Protestant faiths to work for God and his church.

Doubt—Don't believe her. Fine lot of help she'll be. All people are selfish, and will be treacherous whenever it suits their ends. Look what a mess she made of things this spring. She has about as much life as a mummy.

Faith (To D.)—I shame on you, Doubt. (To C.) Church, bid Doubt begone. She has disgraced you and the Christian world long enough.

Religious Education—The young people are the hope of the church and the world. Let me help you train them, and they will help you win the world for the world.

Church—Give us, O Lord, the eye of Faith, by which we may see thy will. Then shall we have the courage of our convictions.

Interchurch—Give us, O Lord, the eye of Faith, by which we shall see the unity which thou didst will for thy followers on earth. Forgive our petty jealousies and make us one even as thou art one!

Religious Education—Give us, O Lord, the eye of Faith, by which we may discern the special Christian nurture needed by every human being as he moves from cradle to grave.

Faith—"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

Church—We will "not be disobedient to the heavenly vision."

Interchurch (starts the hymn) "Faith is the victory," and all join except Doubt. Germany and Turkey make only a pretense of singing.

CLASSIFIED WANTS

Each week this paper goes into over twenty thousand Congregational homes. It is read by those earnest people who form the very backbone of our denomination. Our classified columns offer exceptional opportunities for those who have something to sell or are looking for something to buy, for positions wanted or to be filled, together with many other wants. Classified rates are four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

CASH IN ADVANCE ONLY

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

Emergency vacancies in colleges and universities. American College Bureau, Walter Agnew (Ex-President Hedding College), 419 West 119th St., New York.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

PASTORATE WANTED

Minister of 23 years' experience, college and seminary training, holds Ph.D., successful in Christian work, desires field near large city where there are good schools and large opportunity for a good worker. Present salary $1,200 and parsonage. Best of references. Address "J. G.," Congregationalist, Boston.

A young, well-educated and successful Congregational minister, now pastor of a leading church of the Northwest, desires change of pastorate on or before July 1. Holds Ph.D. from state institution. Expects $2,000 and parsonage. Address "S. R.," care Congregationalist.

HELP WANTED

Woman for general housework including plain cooking. Pleasant home in minister's family near Cambridge, Mass. "Oedipus," care Congregationalist.

MISCELLANEOUS

Rev. A. R. Stephenson, M. A., of Melbourne, Australia, who came to Boston as a delegate of the International Convention, proposes to stay over the winter, and will be pleased to book engagements for his lecture on Australia with Stereopticon views. The lecture is suited to Churches, Women's Organizations, Men's Clubs. Address "R. S.," Congregationalist, Boston.

Rev. Benjn. G. Barker, Ex-Troop Sergeant Major 64th British Mounted Infantry, has a few vacant dates for revival engagements. Wide experience of pastorate and revival work, has also traveled extensively. Fully ordained. Indorsed by all denominations. References given. Correspondence invited. Address 328 North West St., Indianapolis, Ind., U. S. A.

For Sale—Benefit Smith College Fund. The Ready Reference Cooking Guide, an ideal gift for the busy housekeeper or bride-to-be—artistic, wonderfully convenient—75c. postpaid. Ward, 146 Massachusetts Ave., Boston.

If you are a Congregationalist you can obtain a building lot in Florida for a Home Free by addressing W. Frank Clark, Orange City, Florida.

Wanted—Ministers to send titles of their three most valuable books and get titles of my five best. Rev. L. W. Hendrickson, Lakeport, Cal.

For Sale—Ten volumes Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics. Little used. Forty dollars. Rev. G. E. Beals, South Walpole, Mass.

For Sale—Stereopticon, full equipment, very fine objectors; suitable for small church. No reasonable offer refused. Address O. L. S., 415 Hillside Ave., Holyoke, Mass.

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS can reach every principal city and town in the United States through the advertising columns of The Congregationalist and Advance.

For rates and other information write

KENNETH S. BALLOU,
Advertising Manager.

Church Treasurers

Did you know that to gather complete data as to the business methods in use by wide-awake churches, Duplex—Richmond, Va. offered prizes for the best plans submitted? The offer went to 25,000 churches. As a result, many practical suggestions, to help us solve the problems of your church, are now on file in our office. Three of the prize-winning answers have been published in a pamphlet, which we shall be glad to send you on request.

The Duplex Envelope Company
Originators of the Duplex Envelope System
Richmond, Virginia

BRONZE
HONOR ROLLS
AND
HISTORICAL TABLETS
REED & BARTON, TAUNTON, MASS.

Favorite Poems

It is fitting just at this time when the name of Alice Freeman Palmer has been added to the Hall of Fame at New York University that one of our readers should send as her favorite poem one written by Mrs. Palmer. Mrs. S. Arthur Baldwin of Jamestown, N. Y., who submits the poem published this week, says that Mrs. Palmer wrote the verses after lightning had struck the room adjoining the one in which she lay ill in bed. Mrs. Baldwin also writes that "years ago I began memorizing bits of poetry while I was busy about my household duties. The result has been an enrichment of the whole of life. It was an article in The Congregationalist which encouraged me to begin memorizing some of the treasures in the world of poetry. I should not like to part with the little portion of that realm which I have made my own."

The Tempest

He shall give his angels charge
  Over thee in all thy ways.
Though the thunders roam at large,
  Though the lightning round me plays,
Like a child I lay my head
In sweet sleep upon my bed.

Though the terror come so close,
  It shall have no power to smite;
It shall deepen my repose,
  Turn the darkness into light.
Touch of angels' hands is sweet;
Not a stone shall hurt my feet.

All thy waves and billows go
  Over me to press me down
Into arms so strong I know
  They will never let me drown.
Ah, my God, how good thy will!
I will nestle and be still.

—Alice Freeman Palmer.

The Churches and Industrial Peace

An important conference on the Relation of the Churches to Industrial Peace was convened in New York on Saturday, Oct. 16, by the Commission on the Church and Social Service, at the suggestion of Mr. Earl Howard, Industrial Manager of Hart Schaffner & Marx. Experienced officials from the industries and economists who have devoted special study to industrial relations met representative clergymen and church officials. The following were present: Ministers—Rev. Messrs. Samuel Z. Batten, Samuel M. Cavert, Plato Durham, Rolvix Harlan, Arthur E. Holt, F. Ernest Johnson, Charles Lathrop, Charles S. Macfarland, James M. Mullan, and Worth M. Tippy. From the industries and the laity—Robert W. Bruere, Henry Dennison, John Fitch, Willard E. Hotchkiss, Earl Dean Howard, John Leitch, H. F. J. Porter, Willis Porter, Charles R. Towson, Mary Van Kleek and Mrs. M. W. Wood.

The conference developed unanimity of judgment on the main issues: first that the Church should exert its influence on industrial relations in the ways indicated; second, to approve the plan of the Commission on the Church and Social Service in principle; third, to recommend the creation of an Advisory Council of officials from industries in which co-operative relations are being worked out and representing employers and labor, and of economists, to advise with the accredited representatives of the churches.

It was considered important that ministers should discuss the ethical and human side of industrial problems, especially as they affect relations between employers and workers. To do this effectively ministers must become informed, and must be helped by abundant literature, local conferences in communities, study courses and the direct study of factories and living conditions in their communities. The minister must drop his theological phraseology and learn the terminology of industry.

One labor manager said that he had just come out of two days' conference in the garment industry. The two parties are sincere and want to get together, and they agree on 90 per cent. of the issues, but the ten per cent. involve details which raise almost insuperable difficulties. General and sweeping attacks on the present industrial system are not helpful.

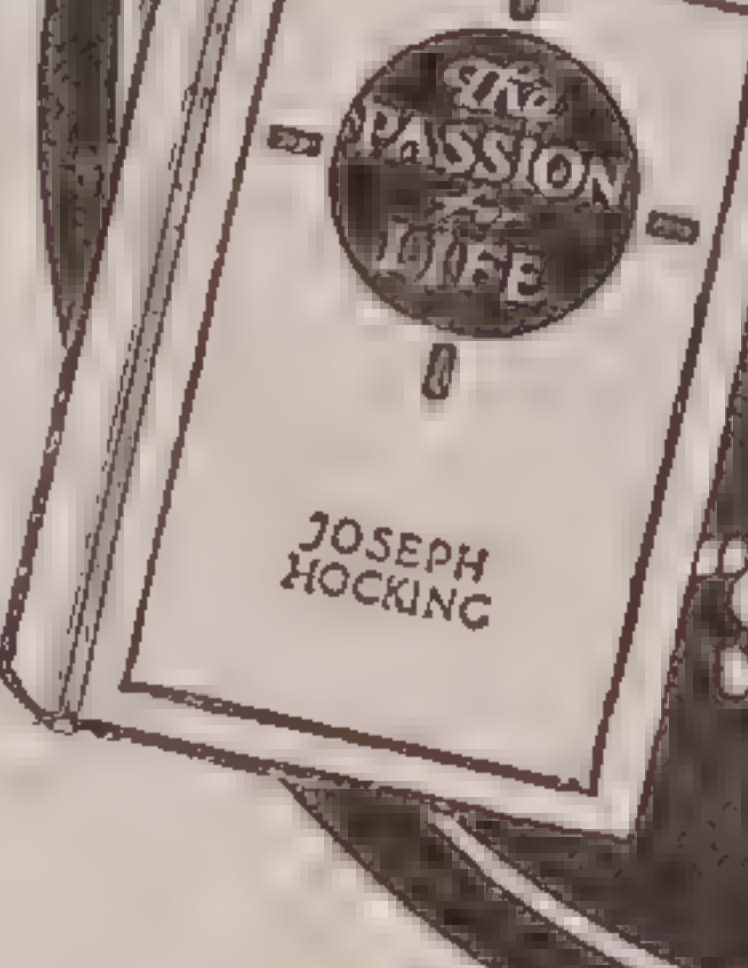
The president of a large corporation located near Boston said:

> It is necessary for the church to enter this field. Many employers will oppose the effort and will seek to bluff the ministers by telling them that they are entering a field in which they have no technical knowledge, but the liberal-minded employers need the support of the church. They encounter a daily pressure from other sources which tends to weaken their desire to adopt liberal policies. Such employers need the support of their ministers. While the problems are difficult, the human relationships involved in modern industry are within the reach of the ministers and they ought to do their best to comprehend them.

Prohibition Note

Peoria, Ill., was until the 18th Amendment went into effect, the greatest distillery center in the world. Many of the men owning stock in the business believed that the dry régime would bring great losses to them and not a few of Peoria's citizens looked forward to a long period of business stagnation in their section. Their fears have not at all been realized. So far as appears practically all the distilleries are making food products and are prosperous. They are employing more labor than they did when they were making whiskey and are paying better wages, it is said. The city finds it possible to get along with less jail space than formerly and it is claimed that the number of petty cases tried before the courts, such cases as come from drunkenness, have decreased greatly.

Cuticura Soap
—The Safety Razor—
Shaving Soap
Cuticura Soap shaves without mug. Everywhere 25c.



Everyone is Reading
HOCKING'S GREATEST NOVEL
The Passion for Life
"Shall a Man Live again?"
AT ALL BOOKSELLERS

PELOUBET'S
Select Notes
The World's Greatest Commentary on the International Sunday School Lessons
By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.
Let us send you a pamphlet containing the first lesson taken from the volume of 1921
Price, $2.00 Net; $2.10 Delivered
W. A. WILDE COMPANY
120 BOYLSTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.
Rand-McNally Building, Chicago

Massachusetts General Hospital
Training School for Nurses. Established 1873. 1,350 Graduates. Prepares its students for advanced positions. For particulars consult Circular of Information. Address SALLY M. JOHNSON, R. N., Supt. of Nurses. Boston, Massachusetts.

BROOKE HOUSE
79 Chandler Street, Boston
(Founded in 1892 by the Rev. Stopford W. Brooke.)
A comfortable home for young working women, near Copley Sq. and the Common. Transients accommodated in summer. Apply to Supt.

The QUEST of THREE WISE MEN

You know the story. Its spirit will go onward through the ages—just as the wisdom of those patriarchs foresaw—a reminder to each of us of the universal brotherhood, that binds us together and makes the suffering of the other fellow ours.

These seals are the stars of hope—of renewed strength and courage—to thousands of unhappy homes, stricken with the plague of tuberculosis. Each Christmas Seal you buy helps to stamp out this marauder who robs the lives of over 150,000 Americans every year.

Buy Use
Tuberculosis Christmas
Seals

NATIONAL TUBERCULOSIS ASSOCIATION
381 FOURTH AVENUE NEW YORK CITY

The Herring Memorial Fund

(Designed to be serviceable to Mrs. Hubert C. Herring while she lives, and then to be passed over to the Annuity Fund for special uses. Checks should be made payable to the Herring Memorial Fund, and sent to 375 Lexington Ave., New York City.)

(Subscribers up to Nov. 12)

Bixler, James W., Exeter, N. H.
Buckham, John Wright, Berkeley, Cal.
Buell, S. H., Springfield, Mo.
Carter, Homer W., Madison, Wis.
Chase, Charles F., Jersey City, N. J.
Earl, Henry H., Fall River, Mass.
Ewing, William, Claremont, Cal.
Fancher, Mr. and Mrs. B. H., New York City.
Hall, C. L., Elbowoods, N. D.
Hardy, W. P., Los Angeles, Cal.
Jones, J. L., Challis, Ida.
Macfarland, Charles S., Mountain Lakes, N. J.
Rice, B. W., Caldwell, Ida.
Walker, William H., Fargo, N. D.
Warner, Mrs. Franklin, White Plains, N. Y.
Dean, Edwin B., Northfield, Minn.
First Congregational Church, Manchester, N. H.
Grauer, O. C., Chicago, Ill.
Ireland, William F., Mobridge, S. D.
Reed, D. B., Covert, Mich.
Stickney, E. H., Fargo, N. D.
Wilder, C. S., North Wilbraham, Mass.
Aldrich, L. J., Kennewick, Wash.
Benedict, Arthur J., Cochise, Ariz.
Davidson, C. W., Boston, Mass.
Thorp, Willard B., Palo Alto, Cal.
Heald, J. H., El Paso, Tex.
Sweet, William E., Denver. Col.
Beal, Frank P., Hillsboro, N. H.
Black, Mrs. Frank B., Mansfield, O.
Breen, Frank L., Chebanse, Ill.
Elliott, Mrs. F. W., Chebanse, Ill.
Curtis, Rev. and Mrs. W. R., Westminster West, Vt.
Griffiths, J. T., Moscow, Pa.
King, Henry Churchill, Oberlin, O.
Martin, B. F., Marshalltown, Io.
Simmons, Abraham, New Orleans, La.
Warner, Lucien T., Bridgeport, Ct.
Woodrow, S. H., St. Louis, Mo.
Bast, C. William, Perry, Io.
Goldsmith, Willis L., Marietta, O.
Kimball, Frank, Chicago, Ill.
Leavitt, Burke F., East Boston, Mass.
Metcalf, Irving W., Oberlin, O.
Patton, Robert W., Chicago, Ill.
Spence, Walter, Peru, Ill.

(227 subscriptions to date, totaling $8,278)

Some Backgrounds of Jesus' Teaching

(Continued from page 676)

Another most important factor in the religious background of Jesus' day was the character of the official religion. It was cold, external, formal, legal, ceremonial, political, with an excessive conscience about the non-essential letter and remarkable facility for disregarding the essential spirit. Over against this background of literalistic formalism, Jesus' religion of the spirit, warm, inner, vital, spiritual, ethical, indifferent to the letter and tremendously in earnest about the spirit, stands out in bold relief. This religion of the spirit which sought above all other things to do the will of God, Jesus said made one a member of the kingdom, a son of God, a member of Jesus' brotherhood, and an inheritor of eternal life. See Matt. 5:44, 45, 7:21, Mark 3:31-35, and Luke 10:25-28.

It was inevitable that the champions of such divergent conceptions of religion should clash. Jesus is destroying religion as they conceive it, breaking down standards of righteousness for which they stand.

The Sermon on the Mount might well be called a discourse on standards of righteousness, his standards as against theirs and some earlier Old Testament standards. They had their teaching as to how men secured blessedness over against which Jesus placed his Beatitudes. The key to the Sermon on the Mount is in Matt. 5:20, and from there on the contrast is clearly stated. Never was literalism, legalism and externalism so completely discredited. Always he puts the inner motive and spirit against the external letter. His friendship with publicans and sinners so offended them that they called him a glutton. His idea that man was more sacred than the Sabbath, that clean thought and life were more important than ceremonial cleanness, stirred their wrath.

Next week we shall consider this background and the doctrine of Jesus' Second Coming.

Questions being received will be answered later. Send in yours.

F. M. Sheldon.

The Best Gift
Lasts Through The Year

Many Give a Year's Subscription to

The Congregationalist
and Advance

A Great Year is Coming For the Christian World — For Congregationalists — For Our Own and Only National Church Paper — We all Need the Paper More Than Ever Before, for Every Member of the Family. It will be Full of Human Interest, Important Facts, Spiritual Help, Church Methods, Good Stories, Inspiration from Leaders of Thought.

Special Christmas Offer

Your Own Subscription Renewed for a Year and a Gift New Subscription for a Friend for $5.00. $6.00 worth for $5.00.

But Must Be Sent to Us Direct and Before Christmas.

We will send an Attractive Announcement of your Gift to your Friend.

Department of Circulation
The Congregationalist and Advance
14 Beacon Street, Boston 9 — 19 W. Jackson Street, Chicago

GUIDING GIRLS
TO CHRISTIAN WOMANHOOD
By A. H. McKINNEY, Author of "Guiding Boys," etc.
A BOOK you need, teacher, parent, worker among girls. Methods best calculated to enrich and develop the nature as life becomes fraught with responsibilities. Excellent bibliography. Activities for growing girls, etc. Net $1.50.
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

Benevolent Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D. D., Secretary; Rev. John J. Walker, Associate Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 609 Congregational House, Boston.

CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, maintained by the Congregational Conferences of the six New England States, offers aid to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies in New England and elsewhere. Congregational House, Boston, Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Secretary, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D. D., Chairman.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Zeigler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BOSTON and vicinity (Incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel C. Bushnell, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Fred L. Norton, Sec., 919 Tremont Building, Boston.

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 503 Congregational House, Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIOR, 19 S. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas., Friday Meeting, 10 A. M.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIFIC, 760 Market St., Room 421, San Francisco. Mrs. Ernest A. Evans, President; Mrs. W. W. Ferrier, Treasurer; Miss E. S. Benton, Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Mrs. P. S. Suffern, Treas.; Miss Miriam F. Choate, Sec.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION (of Massachusetts and Rhode Island), Mrs. Amos L. Hatheway, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec., 607 Congregational House, Boston.

Boston Seaman's Friend Society

Incorporated 1829

306 Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

President, Samuel Usher; Cor. Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton. A Congregational Society devoted to the material, social and moral welfare of seamen of all nations and supported mainly by the New England churches. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Room at Tarpaulin Cove. Bequests should be made payable to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society. Contributions from churches and individuals solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis.

American Seamen's Friend Society

76 Wall St., New York, Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational National and International Seamen's Society.

Maintains a Sailor's Home and Institute, 507 West Street, New York.

Loan Libraries ($25 each) placed on vessels sailing from New York.

Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.

Publishes the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).

Officers: John B. Calvert, D. D., President; George Sidney Webster, D. D., Secretary. Send contributions to Clarence C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 76 Wall Street, New York.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817.

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps al churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.
8 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, a Constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trusts for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS can reach every principal city and town in the United States through the advertising columns of The Congregationalist and Advance.

For rates and other information write

KENNETH S. BALLOU,
Advertising Manager.

National Agencies

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Moderator, Rev. Henry Churchill King, Oberlin, O.
Secretary ad interim, Rev. Edwin D. Eaton, 289 Fourth Ave., New York
Assistant Secretary, Truman J. Spencer, 289 Fourth Ave., New York
Treasurer, Frank F. Moore, 287 Fourth Ave., New York

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)
14 Beacon Street, Boston
19 West Jackson Street, Chicago

ALBERT W. FELL, Business Manager
HARRY M. NELSON, Treasurer
VERNON M. SCHENCK, General Sales Manager
A. A. HAGSTROM, Western Manager
KENNETH S. BALLOU, Advertising Manager

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Established by the National Council at Grand Rapids, in 1919

DR. LUCIEN C. WARNER, Chairman
REV. HERMAN F. SWARTZ, General Secretary
REV. JAMES E. MCCONNELL, Ass't Secretary
WALTER E. BELL, Treasurer
REV. JOHN LUTHER KILBON, Financial Sec'y

Program for the coming year to include Missionary Education, Stewardship, and a Financial Campaign in behalf of our denominational work.

Regional Directors for 1920-21

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont: Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Massachusetts, Rhode Island: Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D. D., 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Connecticut, New York: Rev. Charles E. Burton, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Porto Rico: Rev. George L. Cady, D. D.; 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee: Rev. L. H. Keller, D. D., Central Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Colored Churches of South: Rev. Alfred Lawless, Jr., D. D., 45½ Auburn Ave., Atlanta, Ga.
Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia: Rev. John Luther Kilbon, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska: Rev. Robert W. Gammon, D. D., 19 West Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.
Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota: Rev. William F. English, Jr., Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., and 19 So. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana: Rev. W. W. Scudder, D. D., Fountain and Aubert Sts., St. Louis, Mo.
Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico: Rev. W. J. Minchin, D. D., Guardian Trust Bldg., Denver, Col.
Southern California, Arizona: Rev. George L. Kenngott, Ph.D., 831 So. Hope St., Los Angeles, Cal.
Northern California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Alaska: Rev. H. H. Kelsey, D. D., Phelan Bldg., San Francisco, Cal., and Plymouth Church, Seattle, Wash.

All correspondence relative to the local work of promotion should be addressed to the Director of your Region.

RISIBLES

"They call ours the garrulous sex," remarked Mrs. Bright, looking up from Candidate Cox's eight-column address: "yet from time immemorial we women have been making speeches of acceptance with a single word."—Boston Transcript.

A Philadelphia lawyer was showing up very poorly on the links and he remarked to Mrs. R. H. Barlow, the golf player, who was standing by, "Do you know, it seems to me the more I play the worse I play."

"You've played a good deal, then, haven't you?" said Mrs. Barlow.—Boston Transcript.

A judge presiding over a court in Washington, D. C., was administering the oath to a boy of tender years, and to him put the following question:

"Have you ever taken the oath? Do you know how to swear, my boy?"

Whereupon the lad responded: "Yes, sir. I am your caddie at the Chevy Chase Club."

National Societies

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Edward Lincoln Smith	Editorial Secretary
(287 Fourth Ave., New York)	Rev. Wm. E. Strong

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Rev. William S. Beard, Secretary of Promotion
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Secretary of Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Nineteen self-supporting state organizations are in Federated relations with the National Society. The state Superintendent or Secretary is the official representative of all home mission interests.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. George L. Cady, Secretary
Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis, Associate Secretary
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Eskimos, Chinese, Japanese and Hindus; in Island Territories of Porto Rico and Hawaii. New work in Southwest taken under instruction of National Council.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

289 Fourth Avenue, New York City
Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
(Church Extension Boards)
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Rev. Charles H. Richards, Editorial Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. In sixty-six years it has helped to build 4,982 churches and 1,334 parsonages.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Rev. A. E. Holt, Social Service Sec.
Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Missionary Education Sec.
Samuel F. Wilkins, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service and Missionary Education; aids Colleges, Academies, Training Schools, Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities and among immigrants.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

To conserve the welfare of aged ministers or their wives

The Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers

The opportunities of this Fund should appeal to all our ministers under fifty-five years of age.

375 Lexington Ave., New York City
Rev. William A. Rice, Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

COMMISSION OF ONE HUNDRED OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL
Established at Columbus, Ohio, 1917
375 Lexington Ave., New York City
Charles S. Mills, Chairman
Lewis T. Reed, Executive Secretary

A Permanent Tercentenary Memorial Fund of Five Million Dollars, to provide annuities for the old age and disability of Congregational Ministers. The income to supplement payments made by the ministers. Actuarially Sound. Socially Just.

Make checks payable to the
Pilgrim Memorial Fund Commission

Put These Books on Your Christmas List

New England in the Life of the World

By HOWARD A. BRIDGMAN

Herein for the first time is gathered the fascinating story of those courageous souls who, inspired by a splendid vision, left the hamlets of New England to spend themselves in the development of a new West. The early beginnings are graphically sketched, but quite as much emphasis is placed upon present evidences in customs, institutions and laws of the New England seed-sowing. A book every New Englander or New England descendant will be delighted to own.

Numerous charts and illustrations. $4.00. Postage, 15 cents.

The Highway to Leadership

By MARGARET SLATTERY

Thousands and thousands have been tremendously inspired by this remarkable woman's addresses and books. In this new book as a "leader of leaders" she reveals the pathway to leadership. This book is bound to take its place as one of Miss Slattery's best. Price, $1.50. Postage, 10 cents.

Prayers of the Social Awakening

(New edition)

By WALTER RAUSCHENBUSCH

There is always a demand for collections of prayers, and among those who have made their appeal to the public in this line none seem to have come nearer to the soul aspirations of their readers than Professor Rauschenbusch. The book is small enough for the pocket and is attractively bound. Price, $1.00. Postage, 5 cents.

The Mayflower Program Book

By JEANETTE ELOISE PERKINS and FRANCES WELD DANIELS

The first definite program outline for Mission Bands and similar organizations—as a week-day auxiliary to the church school.

A tremendously important book planned to develop in children of Primary age (6 to 9) appreciation of all people near and far who contribute to their happiness, and a spirit of comradeship and sympathetic helpfulness for any less favored; to provide practice in service.

A fascinating playlet entitled "Every-day Magic" as a climax to this charming course. Price, $2.00. Postage, 15 cents.

The Cradle Roll of the Church School

By LUCY STOCK CHAPIN

Here for the first time we have definite plans for the organization and development of the Cradle Roll, by a skilled expert.

Leaders everywhere will welcome this new book as a much-needed manual on this all-important feature of the Church School.

Chapter Headings: 1. The Baby and Its Mother. 2. The Cradle Roll Standard. 3. Organization. 4. Equipment. 5. Ways of Working. 6. Lessons for the Cradle Roll. 7. Special Days. 8. The Cradle Roll and Missions. 9. Helping the Mothers. 10. Children's Week. Price, $1.25. Postage, 8 cents.

The Christmas Program in Your Church School

Is Your Committee Appointed? Are Your Plans in Process?

We are prepared to meet your every need and will be glad to offer suggestions as to special features.

The Prophetic Child

is a Christmas Pageant written by Rev. Langley Sears, and is of a quality worthy of a place in any church program anywhere. It is a Christmas Pageant having as its characters those who were most intimately associated with the coming of the Master and depicting the outstanding incidents of the coming of Christ. The music is good, the arrangement excellent, the quality exceptional. 15 cents per copy; $1.50 per dozen; $12.00 per hundred.

Following the Star

is a new Christmas program less elaborate than "The Prophetic Child," but well arranged and bound to be widely used.

The price of this program is $3.00 per hundred. 10 copies of the supplement with each hundred. Extra supplements 5 cents each.

Christmas Offering Envelopes

These envelopes have, with many churches, long been a feature of the Christmas program. Attractive Christmas picture in color, printed on a white envelope, this to be used for the special Christmas offering. The fact that it is unusual and distinctive is a great aid to giving. Price, 40 cents per hundred.

Other Christmas Features of whatever nature:—

Souvenir Cards—Pastor's Letters—Gifts for Teacher and Pupil—all of these and many more can be supplied by us promptly.

14 BEACON STREET
BOSTON

THE PILGRIM PRESS

19 W. JACKSON STREET
CHICAGO

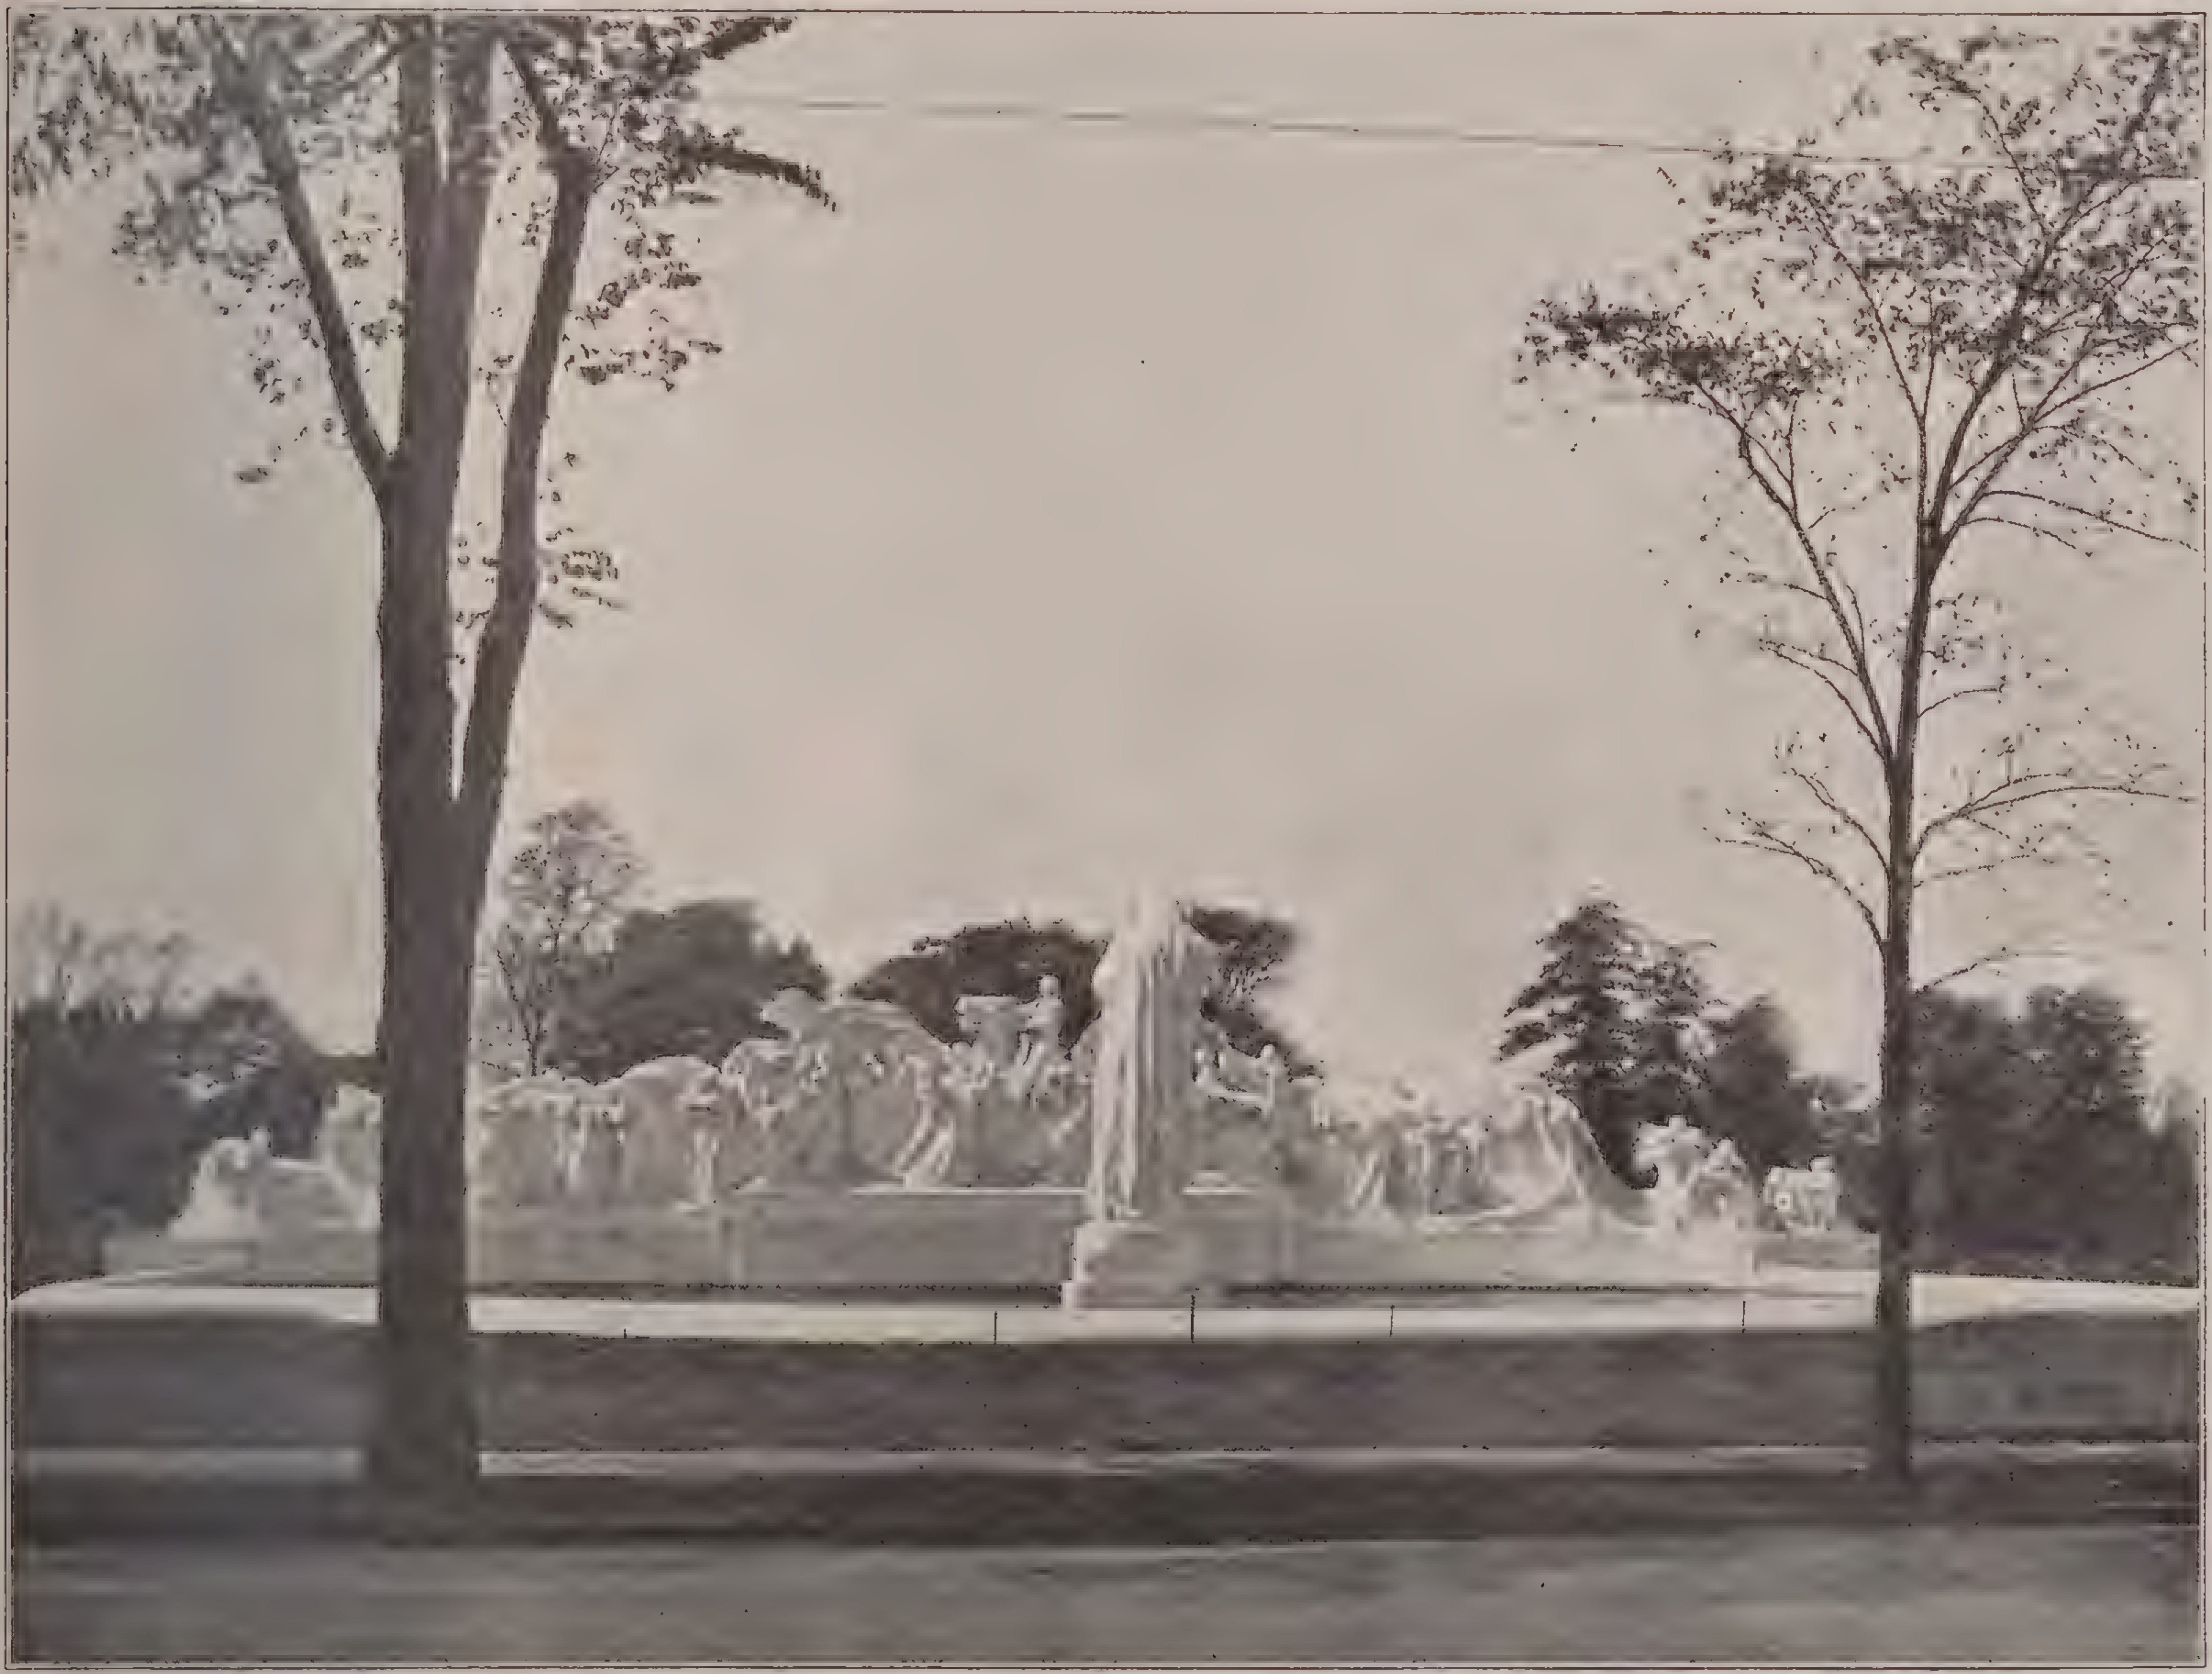
The Congregationalist and Advance

Vol. CV. No. 49

December 2, 1920

HOLIDAY BOOK NUMBER



THE FOUNTAIN OF TIME

This notable work by Lorado Taft is established at the west end of the World's Fair Midway in Chicago. The "Evening Post" of that city says, "It has made Chicago think."—See article by Dr. Kilbourn.

NEXT WEEK: THE CHRISTMAS NUMBER

The Fourth Century Forward Movement

For Increasing Church Attendance

By Rev. Edwin H. Byington

Of making many "drives" there is no end but they all run in the same line—money, money, money. Be they patriotic, philanthropic, or ecclesiastic, it is all the same. For the "Every Member Canvass" the symbol has become the dollar sign, "teams" are for the pursuit of pocketbooks and "over the top" is a victorious dash with bills instead of bombs.

Is there nothing else worthy of a "drive"? Is money the only thing for which "everybody" can be approached? Of course we emphasize other features of our church life, but not in the same way, not a bit of it. When it is educational, evangelistic, devotional, we select a man and bid him cover the country with his literature, suggesting that he might try a "questionnaire." What a difference, when we come to money! Then we have protracted conferences, we map out a great campaign, we select "regional directors," we assign to each a staff of paid workers, we ask churches "to loan their pastors," we press the matter on conferences and associations, we "apportion quotas," we urge each church to appeal to "every member" and we publish great charts, showing us how far neighboring churches have fallen below their "quotas." We make a man's job of this. Of other things we make child's play, so far as concerted and aggressive action is concerned.

More Than Money Drives

Brethren, it is time that we used that wonderfully effective instrument, "the Every Member Canvass," for something besides money. For one, I must do it to save my self-respect as a minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. During the last twelve months three calls for "drives" came to me from headquarters, the Regular, the Pilgrim Memorial, the Emergency. Three times I presented it to my people. Three times they sprang forward and went way over the top magnificently. But as I review it all a feeling of shame comes over me. Three times for money! Not once for men! What will the world think? What will the Lord say?

"We must be careful," said one of my business men who has backed up every financial drive, "lest we give the impression that we care much for their money and nothing for them." And so my church has decided to try the experiment of a "drive" for the people themselves, a drive for church attendance, a real drive, with an "Every Member Canvass" and "teams" and "quotas," and a chance "to go over the top." We are going to say directly and personally to every man, woman and child in our natural constituency, "The church wishes you and needs you," and we are going to make the appeal as universal and earnest as when we were after their money.

We must do it for our own soul's sake, for the spiritual life of the church. There is an insidious and perilous tendency creeping into our churches to make riches the main interest, to be more concerned about our financial quotas than about attendance at Sunday school or prayer meeting, additions on confession, religious education or the devotional spirit in our public worship.

We must do it for the community's sake. The indifferent man notices that the church comes after him, in a concerted and systematized effort, with a resolute determination to win, only when it wishes his money. He used to see the church launch great "evangelistic campaigns" to win his personal allegiance but now the big campaigns all seem to aim at his purse. It may irritate him but is more likely to calm his conscience. He makes his contribution, the church goes over the top and everybody is delighted. He feels that he has "done his bit" and settles down to a comfortable neglect of the church until the next financial campaign. He is coming to feel that both the desire of the church and his duty can be met with money.

A Card for the Canvass

In our "drive" we shall use a card, something like this:

It is my intention to attend the Sunday Church services during 1921 as indicated by my mark below
(MARK)
Regularly
(26–52)
Frequently
(12–25)
Occasionally
(6–12)
Name ....
Address ....

As the question will arise as to what constitutes regular, frequent and occasional attendance, under each is put the range of the number of Sundays that might be considered fairly within the designation. A variety of

(Continued on page 729)

THE CHRISTMAS FUND

For The Disabled Veterans

PROPOSED GOAL $35,000

How large a part do you intend to take?

Here are some of the thousand persons to whom the Christmas Gift will go.

A Soldier of the Cross, in a long period of convalescence following a surgical operation, who says, "It costs something to be sick."

A Minister's Widow, 89 years old, blind, and with failing mind.

An Invalid, who cannot walk, needing wood for the Winter's fire.

A Christian Optimist in his 70th year exulting in being able to lift himself out of his invalid chair and shuffle along the floor, crying out in his gratitude, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits."

A Veteran, fifty years in service, absolutely without means, who writes, "I am trusting the Heavenly Father, he always surprises me with his goodness."

Could you make any gift for Christmas in which you would have greater joy than in smoothing the way for such dear souls, who have poured out their lives for Christ and his church? The average grant last year was $215. The Christmas check is added to the grant as a gift of love.

Send contributions for the Christmas Fund to

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief
375 Lexington Avenue, New York

William A. Rice, Secretary. Charles S. Mills, Associate Secretary. B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

The Congregationalist and Advance

December 2, 1920

Volume CV. Copyright, 1920 All rights reserved Number 49

By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

CONTENTS

THE FOURTH CENTURY FORWARD MOVEMENT, by Edwin H. Byington 694
THE MASTERY OF DIFFICULTIES—AN EDITORIAL MESSAGE 697
WHAT THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IS DOING 698
EDITORIAL—THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS 699
  ENCOURAGING RESULTS AT GENEVA
  WHAT KIND OF AN EVENING SERVICE
  STOP THE COAL PROFITEERS
  THE HAYTIAN SITUATION
  CELEBRATING THE PILGRIM COMPACT
  THE TROUBLES OF BUSINESS
  WELCOME TO THE FEDERAL COUNCIL
  THE PARABLE OF THE PENS
FROM OUR CANADIAN WINDOW 702
OUR PILGRIM PULPIT—THE SANITY OF JESUS, by Henry Kendall Booth 702
LORADO TAFT, A PREACHER IN CHISELED MARBLE, by Henry J. Kilbourn 703
ENCOURAGING MEETING OF THE A. M. A., by Henry Lincoln Bailey 705
AMONG THE NEW BOOKS. 706
IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL—DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS—THE RETURN OF JESUS 714
THE HOUR OF PRAYER—COMMENT ON MIDWEEK AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR PRAYER MEETING TOPICS—CLOSET AND ALTAR 715
WITH THE CHILDREN—HUMILITY'S PRIDE, by Pauline Carrington Bouvé. THE COMRADES' CORNER 716
IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE—CHURCH NEWS 718
LEAGUE OF THE DAY 729
BEST THINGS ABOUT PIEDMONT 730
FAVORITE POEMS 730

Editor-in-Chief, REV. HOWARD A. BRIDGMAN, D. D.
Managing Editor, ROLFE COBLEIGH
Associate Editor, REV. ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN
Western Editor, REV. R. W. GAMMON, D. D. (Chicago)
Literary Editor, REV. PARRIS T. FARWELL
News Editor, MISS ELIZABETH G. WHITE
Editorial Assistants { MISS FLORENCE A. MOORE
MISS JANET L. SAVAGE
MISS SALLIE A. MCDERMOTT (Chicago)
Contributing Editor, REV. WILLIAM E. BARTON, D. D.
Business Manager, ALBERT W. FELL
Advertising Manager, KENNETH S. BALLOU
Circulation Manager, MISS ETHEL M. WENTWORTH

The Congregationalist and Advance succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Congregationalist, 1849; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday, by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions are discontinued on date of expiration, appearing on the address label of the paper. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to The Congregationalist and Advance, and will be acknowledged by a change of date on the label. Receipt will be sent if two-cent stamp is enclosed with remittance. In renewing do not fail to send exact address as on label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses must be sent in and be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies may be obtained at the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Subscription correspondence may be directed to The Congregationalist and Advance, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Talk of the Sanctum

A New Face at the Canadian Window

We are happy to introduce to our readers this week, some of whom already know him, Principal D. L. Ritchie, of our Montreal Theological College, who has consented to write in our columns at regular intervals on the movement of thought and life in Canada. Dr. Ritchie, before assuming a few months ago his present responsibilities, was principal of Nottingham Theological College in England, and prominent in Free Church circles. His "Window" from time to time will be a valuable addition to the other "Windows" through which our readers look into affairs in different sections of the country.

Coming Soon

FOREFATHERS' NUMBER.

REPORT OF THE QUADRENNIAL MEETING OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES IN BOSTON.

WHAT ENGLISH LABOR IS DOING, by Sherwood Eddy.

WHAT I THINK OF THE INTERCHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT NOW, by Dr. James I. Vance, Father of the Movement.

THE OPEN FORUM MARCHING, by George W. Coleman.

WHY I GAVE UP BUSINESS, by William E. Sweet.

THE PILGRIM PULPIT SERMONS, by DR. SAMUEL H. WOODROW, REV. EDWARD M. CHAPMAN, DR. CARL S. PATTON, REV. THOMPSON F. ASHBY, DR. HENRY H. PROCTOR, REV. J. EDGAR PARK, and others—every week.

In Our Circulation Department—

We enjoy bouquets, and while we occasionally catch a brickbat (often intended for the editors) we get so many bouquets (usually intended for them also, we suppose, but apparently including the whole staff in the good will and appreciation that go with them) that we are very much encouraged. As we approach the turn of the year when people subscribe for and renew their periodicals, we are reminded of some of the many bouquets that we cherish this year, and we venture to quote briefly and gratefully to let you know what they are like.

And, by the way, perhaps you may like the idea that some of our good friends have of sending The Congregationalist to some friend for a Christmas gift that will last all through the coming year. It's a pretty good idea, isn't it?

Now for a few of those bouquets:

"The paper has been both an education and an inspiration." (From Ohio.)

"It is certainly a masterpiece of the publisher's art." (New Brunswick.)

"How in the world you keep the rate so low, I do not know." (From Massachusetts.)

"Father fed upon the contents of each issue." (From Illinois.)

"Never before was conducted as helpfully as now." (From Connecticut.)

"I am assuredly thankful that there is such a paper." (From Tennessee.)

"I have been much helped by your editorials." (From Washington State.)

"It is a paper I value very highly." (From Wisconsin.)

"Your paper is the one thing we cannot do without." (From Vermont.)

Need, Opportunity, Efficiency, Economy

PIEDMONT COLLEGE, DEMOREST, GA.

Extracts from an Article by Rev. Dwight Mallory Pratt, D.D.

"MY IMPRESSIONS OF PIEDMONT COLLEGE"

"IT WOULD be difficult, not to say impossible, to find anywhere between the two oceans, and between Canada and the Gulf, an educational institution that is doing a greater, more constructive and more promising work than Piedmont College, with such limited resources, such inadequate equipment, and so masterful an economy. Its entire administration illustrates genius for organization, inventive skill, exceptional statesmanship and prophetic vision. It is planning for a large future under the compulsion of an unprecedented opportunity. Its vast field stretches from Virginia to Florida and includes a population of many millions, multitudes of whom are the most illiterate and at the same time among the most aspiring and intellectually hungry people in America.

"One's first impression, however, in visiting Demorest, Georgia, the home of the college, is disappointing. He sees no orderly campus, no sign of substantial buildings such as a college of Piedmont's status is expected to have. The principal business block, with its Bank and Postoffice, has no educational aspect, yet in the second and third stories are found the offices of President Jenkins and his secretarial force, and recitation rooms surprisingly adapted to their temporary use. The largest building in town looks like a summer hotel, and such it was until purchased by the college for dormitory and other purposes. Here are "The Commons" where all the students assemble daily for meals, where the President and his wife and other members of the Faculty dine; and where the students learn household economy in the kitchen and in administering all the affairs of the great dining hall.

"The capacious structure adjoining was a livery stable, purchased for a modest sum, and converted by the skill of the college carpentry department into a large recitation building, with rooms as choicely finished and equipped as recitation rooms at Williams and Amherst. The once repellant exterior was covered with firmly nailed kinked wire, adequate to the support of two inches of plastered cement. On-lookers smiled at this unique and apparently futile attempt, but the building today stands as a comely and substantial witness to the inventive wit of the President.

"The unpretentious house across the street commands no attention, but on entering one discovers to his amazement a library of over 10,000 volumes; courteous and cultured young ladies in attendance; and students, in their eager search for knowledge, wearing the big dictionaries to shreds. Here again one gains the impression of large opportunity and achievement in cramped quarters and with wholly inadequate equipment.

"The first floor of the quondam dwelling next door is a store house for building materials, but above are the attractive offices of the college Dean and Treasurer and their assistants, all finished in hard wood by college workmen. An addition to the adjoining building used as the home of the President and visitors makes an attractive dormitory for thirty college girls. All this work of buildings and equipment was done with great economy by the regular college force.

"We expect something more pretentious when we visit the college auditorium, but the one-story, plain board structure has the appearance of a temporary evangelistic auditorium, yet, like all the rest of the college buildings, the interior is surprisingly attractive, with perfect acoustic properties and capable of seating an audience of a thousand or more. Music rooms, each equipped with a piano or other musical instrument, occupy all available space at each end of the building, and give opportunity for as fine vocal and instrumental culture as may be had in many a metropolitan conservatory.

"The attractive cottage near at hand looks as though it might be one of the professors' homes, but with partitions removed, the interior is filled with sewing machines and sewing tables, where the girls are learning dressmaking and millinery and other domestic arts.

"In an unattractive house, in a poor location, the entire laboratory work of the college is done, under a skilled chemist whose genius for investigation and instruction has been recognized by the offer of a much larger salary by other colleges. His loyalty to Piedmont, like that of the other instructors, is due to the high standards and ideals of the college. This valuable stock of chemicals is safely housed in an adjoining shed.

"On another street a two-story shop, with an immense woodpile near by cut from the farm, proves to be a laundry jammed to the doors with machinery and workers, where the laundry work of the town as well as of the college is done, and from which a profit is turned into the college treasury each month. The shop on the opposite side of the street has as its presiding genius an expert and artistic printer. Here students gain a valuable technical training while paying their way through college. All the fine printing of the college is done here; giving additional evidence of the college's economy of administration.

"A finely equipped sawmill, planing-mill, etc., take logs from the woodlands of the college and convert them into all forms of lumber and building material. The building, fine carpentry and furniture work are done by the skilled foreman with the regular industrial force of the college.

"While Piedmont is in no technical sense an industrial college, its students are gaining scientific skill in many practical arts and industries as many of them earn their way through their four years' curriculum. Many work on the farm with its abounding acres of corn, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, and other vegetables; all for the annual supply of the college tables. Its dairy supplies its needed milk; its piggery, its bacon, pork and lard. The college has its own pumping station, which makes possible an abundant supply of hot and cold water for the various buildings already described; and it is hoped that it will soon possess its own electric plant."

* * * * * * *

"As one searches out all these avenues of enterprise and industry; rides over the expansive acres of the college farm; catches the spirit and purpose of the Faculty and students; sees the work done in the classroom and in the spiritual impress of the college, he comes away profoundly impressed with the fact that Piedmont has won its way to a new and commanding recognition, and merits an equipment and endowment that will provide opportunity for the thousand students that would at once eagerly flock to its doors.

"One who believes that money has no real value except as it contributes to the upbuilding of a nobler type of life in men and nations, that one's only worthy and permanent investment is in the lives of his fellowmen, will find in the rapidly expanding and constructive work of Piedmont College an opportunity for generous and consecrated benefactions unsurpassed in America or in any other portion of the globe."

A Cry of Distress in the Face of Danger

Yes, I am "crying wolf again;" for he is here

$20,000 IS DUE OUR TEACHERS; $5,000 MORE IS PRESSING FOR PAYMENT, WHILE DONATIONS ARE DECREASING, AND THE BANKS HAVE NO MONEY TO LEND

Who will help toward the $25,000 imperatively needed? Who will come to the rescue at once?

Yours in distress, yet hope,

FRANK E. JENKINS,
President of Piedmont College,
Demorest, Ga.

The Congregationalist and Advance

Pilgrim Virtues in Modern Life

V. The Mastery of Difficulties

> It was answered, that all great and honourable actions are accompanied with great difficulties, and must be both enterprised and overcome with answerable courages. It was granted the dangers were great, but not desperate; the difficulties were many, but not invincible. For though their were many of them likly, yet they were not cartaine; it might be sundrie of the things feared might never befale; others by providente care & the use of good means, might in a great measure be prevented; and all of them, through the help of God, by fortitude and patience, might either be borne, or overcome.

THIS was Bradford's characteristically, straightforward description of the cogent rejoinder which leaders of the Leyden group made to the minority who shrank from the perilous expedition overseas.

Anyone gifted with ordinary perception can see the lions crouching at the foot of the "Hill Difficulty." Only those dare face and throttle them who are nerved by the vision of what can be seen from the summit. Anyone could have given Luther a dozen sound reasons why he should not go to Worms, but they all had little weight compared with the burning conviction that his duty lay in that direction.

There must have been times in the months preceding Aug. 11, 1620, when even Bradford and Brewster were tempted to muffle with plausible argumentation the inward voice which bade them go. Obstacles—why there was nothing but obstacles! Trouble on the business side arising from the difficulty of making satisfactory terms with Thomas Weston, the London merchant, and his business associates, who were asked to finance the enterprise; troubles arising from the gloomy prognostications of men in their own ranks who dwelt upon the dangers; troubles on the practical side in the form of a leaky ship and a crew at times contumacious. Less robust and resolute souls might have interpreted the repeated delays, the vexatious handicaps, as indications of the disfavor of God, but they had learned that an obstacle does not necessarily mean that one should not keep on trying to reach the coveted goal.

BUT the endurance of physical hardships is not the main source of our admiration of the Pilgrims. Undoubtedly they suffered from crowded accommodations, scanty rations, and ill-ventilated cabins, but that is no reason why we, today, should cross the Atlantic on a sailing vessel, or use tallow candles in our homes. To be sure, with the multiplying of creature-comforts and modern conveniences, life today tends to become too soft. I wonder, as I see boys and girls rolling to school in luxurious limousines, or read of school buildings under whose walls scores of autos are daily parked, whether the pupils in those schools will be as robust, morally and spiritually, as their grandparents, who walked a mile or two daily, often through the slush and mud of country roads, to district schools.

But the thing that thrills us as we think of the Pilgrims, is not their endurance of physical hardships, but their surmounting of the immaterial difficulties presented by the character of their spiritual quest. They set before them the accomplishment of great things in the name of God. That involved patient, constructive thinking, the subordination of personal preferences to the general consensus of opinion, adjustment to temperamental peculiarities, and the constant exercise of undying hope and purpose.

IT is a difficult time in the history of the world to live, but it is not impossible to live worthily "in the midst of the crowd, to keep" as Emerson says, "with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude."

It is hard to forge a bond between the nations that shall leave each the proper measure of freedom and independence, but it can be done, as something of the same sort was done in 1777, when thirteen separate states formed the United States of America.

It is hard to take the fighting instinct out of men, or even to control it, so that it shall not sap the foundations of modern civilization. But it can be done.

It is hard to Christianize business, to be absolutely fair to competitor, co-worker and comsumer, to deal wisely and effectively with the selfish, the unscrupulous, the domineering, the shiftless, and the lazy human factors concerned with modern industry. But it can be done.

It is hard to bring about Christian co-operation and unity. But it can be done.

It is hard to develop the latent resources of the local church so that it shall become a moral and spiritual powerhouse. But it can be done.

It is hard, in the pressure of modern life, to find time to pray, to read the Bible, to deepen the personal religious life, to cultivate the graces that adorn the profession of religion. But it can be done.

"I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

"The things that are impossible with men are possible with God."

"He that overcometh shall inherit all things."

Thus only is the conquering Pilgrim spirit perpetuated from age to age. H. A. B.

WHAT THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IS DOING

Women Preachers' Association

THE first annual meeting of the International Women Preachers' Association was held Nov. 4 and 5 in Chicago. The object of the Association is to develop acquaintance and fellowship among women preachers, to secure ecclesiastical rights for women and to encourage young women to take up the work of the ministry. The Association was organized in St. Louis, Mo., a year ago. Already fifteen denominations are represented in its membership. At the annual meeting the following officers were re-elected: President, Miss M. Madeline Southard, Winfield, Kan.; Vice-President-at-large, Rev. Etta Saddler Shaw, 1706 Division Ave., So. Grand Rapids, Mich.; Recording Secretary, Miss Lida Herrick, University Place, Neb.; Treasurer, Mrs. Ella L. Kroft, 312 N. California St., Indianapolis, Ind.; Auditor, Rev. Mary H. Sibbitt, 1545 S. Waco Ave., Wichita, Kan.

The Big Methodist "Overhead" Body

THE new Council of Boards of Benevolence of the Methodist Episcopal Church, representing the various missionary, educational, and philanthropic enterprises of that denomination, has just met in the Church of All Nations in the city of Boston. One hundred and thirty-one representatives from the different boards and areas of the country, including fifteen bishops, comprise this council. Of these approximately one hundred were present at the Boston meeting. The new organization is an attempt to unify all the activities of Methodism and functions through an Executive Committee and a Committee on Conservation and Advance. One of its main duties is the conservation of the recent Centenary movement, as well as the inauguration of larger plans of development. Practically all the offerings made by churches and individuals are now received by the treasurer of the Committee on Conservation and Advance, who makes the proper disbursements to the various boards and societies. This treasurer reported at the recent meeting that "the total amount subscribed in the Centenary movement is $108,080,905. Of this amount $1,311,170 is in estate pledges, leaving a balance subscribed of $106,769,635, or $21,353,927 a year. On the basis of these reports there has been paid in an average of seventy-two per cent., not counting the amount paid in on annuity."

At this Boston meeting plans were adopted to supplement and increase the subscriptions already made by another appeal to the following classes: those who did not subscribe when the first canvass was made; those who subscribed inadequately; those who subscribed for one year only; those who have already paid their subscriptions in full, who should be solicited again; those who have had a new world vision; those who have had unusual prosperity; all members coming from other charges, who should be seen about transferring the unpaid portion of their subscription or canvassed for a new Centenary subscription; all who have recently united with the church, of which over 200,000 are reported. A campaign must also be planned to secure large gifts for the benevolent boards.

Methodist Numbers Increasing

STATISTICS of world-wide Methodism, as computed by Dr. H. H. Carroll, have been published recently by the Centenary Conservation Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The total number of Methodist Episcopal communicants in America is now 4,175,502. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now numbers 2,172,088. The total number of Methodists of all bodies in the United States is 7,950,809. There are 20,000 Methodist churches in Japan. In great Britain there are 1,269,482 communicants—a net gain in nine years of 61,592. Dr. Carroll computes the Methodist population of the world as 36,622,190, an increase of 3,935,341 in the last nine years. These figures are supplied offically to the Methodist Episcopal Church by Dr. Carroll, who was for some time in charge of the government census.

What the Episcopal Church is Doing

BY means of a campaign planned for a three year period, the Episcopal Church in the United States hopes to raise $46,000,000 to maintain and promote the missionary, the educational, and the social service work of the Church. This objective represents for the Episcopal Church a great advance over anything ever undertaken to take care of the growing needs in the three-fold field just mentioned. The task of raising $46,000,000 was begun in 1919-1920, and will be continued through 1920-1921 and 1921-1922. The method of raising the money is that of apportioning to each Diocese a certain percentage of the entire amount, regulated by the financial strength of each Diocese. The Dioceses in turn apportion the amount of money to the parishes, basing the apportionment upon current expenses, including salaries. If the amount asked for were equally distributed among all communicants of the Church, each one would give $14.39 per year, or an average of 28 cents per communicant per week.

The Spiritual Objective

THE aim in the raising of these forty-six millions of dollars is "to bring the whole spiritual power of the Church to bear upon the Church's whole task," and in addition to that, "to secure and train an increased number of persons, clerical and lay, for Christian leadership and work." More specifically the purpose is, "To care for the financial needs of the Presiding Bishop and Council with its several departments, together with such general agencies as the American Church Institute for Negroes, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the Seamen's Church Institute, the Church Periodical Club, the Girls' Friendly Society, the Daughters of the King, and in consultation with the proper authorities, to care for the financial needs of the nine Provinces into which the Church in the United States is divided, the Dioceses and Missionary Districts, Religious Education and Christian Social Service." Thus far the aim to raise the vast sum of money sought for has not been realized to the extent of the hope of the Church, but a great step in advance has been made and the whole Church seems to have experienced an awakening as a result of its financial enterprise.

Co-operative Research by the Denominations

THE plan whereby the Congregational, Episcopalian, Baptist, and probably the Presbyterian Social Service Departments are uniting to establish with the Federal Council of Churches a bureau of surveys and social research, commends itself to us as a promising venture. If half the facts which are stated in Upton St. Clair's recent book, "The Brass Check," are true, American public opinion is at the present time in a pretty helpless condition. The Church especially is in need of some means whereby the facts can be secured which are vital to her programs of brotherhood. During the recent industrial controversies, a great smoke screen of propaganda went up which effectively hindered Christian public opinion from any kind of effective control. They lied to us without stint and without conscience. Congregationalists, through the Education Society, are glad to have taken the lead in furnishing one member of the staff for this co-operative research bureau, in the person of Miss Agnes H. Campbell, a Wellesley graduate whose qualifications for this special task were set forth in our issue of Nov. 11. The Congregationalist is as anxious as any other paper to present to its constituency the facts which ought to be brought to the attention of a Christian conscience. It will welcome a co-operative relationship with this new bureau.

Dr. Jowett Forced to Rest

HIS many American friends will join with his own great congregation at Westminster Chapel in London, in regretting the necessity that has come to Dr. J. H. Jowett, of obtaining at once six months' complete rest. Dr. Jowett is so constantly busy with voice and pen that his never rugged constitution begins to show the effect of almost unremitting toil. The specialists say that there is no vital physical defect, but that after thirty years of public ministry, in the course of which he has had no breakdown, the time has arrived when he must go at a slower pace in order to put himself in shape for many years of usefulness in the future. He will soon be on the way to the south of France for the winter.

EDITORIAL

A Word for Our Times

"The malady from which the world suffers today is mainly international in its origin. Mankind is one. No one nation liveth to itself alone, nor dieth to itself. Europe offers a spectacle of human misery as bad as ever presented itself within the memory of man. Millions are in the throes of starvation. Little children are dying like flies. Industrial unrest and the dislocation of foreign exchange have the same source. The new principle upon which the new world now arising out of the ashes of war must be built, is good comradeship between men and nations."

Crawford Vaughan, former Premier of Australia, now lecturing in this country.

The Every Member Canvass

Next Sunday will be an important day in many of our churches. They will have their Every Member Canvass then, and the influence of that Canvass will last all through the coming year. A great deal depends on it, not only in money and the service that the money will secure for the local church and for the good causes represented in our Congregational World Movement, but in the toning up of Christian fellowship and personal interest in Christian work.

Whoever invented the Every Member Canvass gave our churches one of the best ideas we have ever adopted. It logically leads to such a Canvass as Mr. Byington advocates on the second page of this issue. But just now our interests unite in the complete program combining good fellowship with pledges for local church expenses and for the Congregational World Movement. The churches that put the Canvass through with enthusiasm and the will to do their full share in our common tasks will be the churches that will have the enthusiasm, the will and the support to do whatever needs to be done in spiritual as well as in material efforts in the months that are to come.

We bespeak hearty co-operation all around in the Every Member Canvass.

Encouraging Results at Geneva

Those Americans who have been loudly complaining that the League of Nations is dead must now begin to be rather skeptical of their own right to the prophetic office. Not only is the League alive, it is doing work which will be of the highest influence and importance in the story of the world. The forty-two nations which are represented in Geneva are considering the application of fourteen other states which have asked for membership. They have arranged to oversee and guarantee the election by which the disputed ownership of the city of Vilna is to be determined in favor of Poland or Lithuania, and have found no difficulty in getting from member states the necessary military force to serve as police. They are taking up seriously and even hopefully the case of Armenia, which has been the most hopeless case of all in the public discussion of the nations.

The election of M. Hyman as president was a happy one. In him Belgium has supplied a skillful pilot for the sessions. The financial support of the League is not yet settled, but the amount needed for administrative expenses is comparatively small—so small as to make a cheap insurance policy against the terrible expense, as well as the cruel exactions of war. The League has shown its elasticity in a practical agreement that Switzerland shall be accepted as a member under the reservations suggested by her in defense of her perpetual neutrality. Perhaps the most surprising and thought-provoking element of the sessions has been the drawing together of the Spanish-American republics of America. They form the largest single block of votes and hold the balance of power, and their self-consciousness is shown by their demand that Spanish shall be put on a level with French and English in the deliberations and the records of the League. The choice of Lord Robert Cecil as a delegate from South Africa gives the conscience of the world an effective advocate, and lessens the threatened overweening British influence through delegates representing the whole empire.

The League is evidently in no mood to wait helplessly upon the motions and proposals of the Republican leaders in the United States. It is evident that it is already so far in possession of the field and opportunity that it must be accepted as the basis of any such association of nations as our President-elect talks about. That should be clear to the council of Republican and Democratic leaders which Mr. Harding has called for consultation after his return from Panama. It looks like a choice between our membership in that League which is already functioning, with such reservations and pledges of independent responsibility and initiative as we may ask for, and which will probably not be disputed, and our complete isolation in the affairs of the world. The progress of the League in this initial session, which may continue until nearly Christmas, will, in our judgment, prove to most thinking Americans that the peace and disarmament of the world, if not secured at Geneva cannot in this generation be secured at all.

Stop the Coal Profiteers

If there is any business upon this broad continent that ought to be dealt with by the strong arm of our national government it is the anthracite coal business. The merciless profiteering of the coal men should be stopped by Congress as soon as it can act. Evidently considerations of public welfare, justice and honesty are all outweighed by greed.

No wonder the miners want more wages and demand a larger share of the proceeds of an industry that has been piling up enormous profits the last few years by gross extortion and by the sale of dirt and stone for coal. It is bad enough to double the price of coal, but what possible defense is there for those who so adulterate the coal that it is practically impossible to buy honest coal at any price? The workers have not had a square deal, and the public has been robbed by a system as defiant of the people's rights as any bandit who ever raided a town.

The report that Senators Edge and Calder, after investigating the coal industry, declare they will try to have Congress place it under drastic government control unless the coal men give the public a square deal and cut prices before Dec. 6 is encouraging. We hope they will do it.

What Kind of an Evening Service?

The men's Bible Class in a strong church was polled the other day to ascertain the views of its members concerning the type of Sunday evening service which could best serve the needs of that particular community. Seven voted for an evangelistic or "gospel" service, six for one which would be in the nature of a vesper service with music of a high class, obtained, if need be, from outside sources. Eleven favored the Forum type of service, at which the searching application of Christian principles to the various departments of life should be the chief attraction.

The poll is interesting because it reveals the strong trend of desire among the average men of our churches for bringing the gospel of Christ to bear on industrial and social conditions. People realize that things are not as they should be and they look either wistfully, expectantly or skeptically to the Church for guidance that shall help right matters. At the citadel of New England conservatism, Park Street Church, Boston, Dr. A. Z. Conrad every Sunday evening is devoting a part of the time to discussing briefly before large and deeply interested congregations two or three questions uppermost in the newspapers. In many churches East and West a group of men meet every week at the Sunday school hour to thrash out such questions as the freedom or the bondage of the press, the success or failure of prohibition, the merits and defects of labor unions, the question of internationalism versus nationalism, and so on. Earlier generations of church-goers, should they come back now in the flesh, might be a little surprised to note the character and range of discussions that go on under church roofs every Sunday.

We can well understand why half a dozen men in this particular Bible Class voted in favor of a straight gospel service. Possibly they thought that too extended discussion of the application of Christianity to life tended to become desultory and purposeless. Perhaps, too, they felt with Horace Bushnell that "the soul of reformation is the reformation of the soul" and that it is the main business of the church to generate the power that makes the selfish capitalist just and generous and the lazy laborer energetic.

There should be room on the program of every church for both the evangelistic and the practical elements in its preaching and its teaching. Variety is the spice of ecclesiastical life. The personnel of the particular congregation or the class of persons whom the evening service is designed to serve would be a determinative factor. Let each church study its community, note what particular element in the many-sided gospel of Christ is at the moment understressed and in due time supply it. During the cycle of the entire year the proper balance can be obtained.

Welcome to the Federal Council

Boston is glad to entertain for the best part of a week five hundred representatives of thirty denominations from all parts of the country who have come as delegates to the quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council. Popularly regarded as the city most representative of Pilgrim and Puritan traditions, the Boston of today has become sufficiently cosmopolitan to be a congenial place for representatives of many communions to hold a council of war. It surely ought to prove that rather than a talk feast. Congregationalists hereabouts are ready today and always have been to put the soft pedal on denominationalism and to exalt common faiths and common tasks. May the end of the sessions leave us nearer the goal than we are at the beginning!

Celebrating the Pilgrim Compact

Another stage in the progress of the Pilgrim celebrations has been reached and passed. A celebration was held, at Plymouth, of the signing of the compact in the cabin of the Mayflower on the day of the ship's arrival in Provincetown harbor. The descendants of the Mayflower passengers held their meeting, at the Rock, with a careful sifting of the Pilgrims whose fathers or mothers came in that first ship and those whose ancestors followed in the Anne or the other ships; the former only being permitted to set their feet upon the Rock. Prominent members of the National Society of the Sons and Daughters of the Pilgrims spoke and religious services were held in the Unitarian and Universalist churches.

On the day of the arrival of the Pilgrims in that sheltered anchorage. where the ship remained for many weeks of exploration, Yale University opened a notable exposition of books, manuscripts, pictures and other things associated with the days and the experiences of the Pilgrims. In New York on the anniversary of the signing (Nov. 21, New Style) a commemorative celebration was held in the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine, at which the sermon was preached by Bishop Brewster of Connecticut, a lineal descendant of Elder Brewster. He said in the course of the sermon:

> Now has come the period of transition and readjustment. Today, in celebrating the tercentennial of the Mayflower compact, it is well to look backward and see what should be kept of this compact and what should give way to the new order just dawning. One thing the Pilgrims held was a high idealism, a great consciousness of conviction in truth and God.

A commemorative service was also held in New York in All Souls Unitarian Church, as well as social gatherings in secular places, in which we suppose the religious heirs of the Pilgrims, who had thrown off the yoke of episcopacy and were not Unitarians, found a satisfactory expression of the commemorative spirit.

The Troubles of Business

Business depression has come suddenly upon the whole country. Various influences working together have produced a state of mind that has led the public to stop buying and demand lower prices. The period of inflation seems to be ending. It is unfortunate that business must halt and people must suffer from unemployment and from business losses in order to get a readjustment to normal conditions. But for human selfishness and "man's inhumanity to man" we all might continue busy, prosperous and happy.

Business has not halted because of over-production or any natural cause. Profiteering has run amuck, the public has balked, the banks have called their loans and at last prices must come down.

Labor that has loafed and profiteered is beginning to be idle and labor that has done its best and got no more than it deserved, as has been the case with most labor, is among the innocent victims.

Retail merchants who had to buy goods a few months ago at high prices must sell at a loss in order to release capital to continue business.

Farmers are caught with unsold crops and market conditions are so heavily against them that there seems to be no way to save them from serious losses. On the one side the farmer has a difficult labor problem and on the other he has the "middle-man" who refuses to pay as much as the farmer feels he should have to make a living profit. But by the time the consumer gets what the farmer has produced the profits between have raised prices so high that they hurt.

The farmer must receive more consideration or we shall all go hungry.

Good times must be near if we all treat each other fairly. The call for the "square deal" is needed now in all our business relationships. It would help in the present trying times if we could have more preaching and practice of the "Golden Rule."

The Haytian Situation

The first fact in the Haytian situation is that our Government is responsible for good government in Hayti and that the country is entirely policed by American marines. That is an arrangement accepted by the Haytians in 1915. The present constitution was dictated by representatives of our Government in 1918 and is said to have been written by Assistant-Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt. The reorganization of the forces charged with the task of keeping order, both in city and country, goes back to 1915, when our Government took up the task of reducing the social chaos into which the country had fallen to some sort of order. It is under officers drawn from the United States Marine Corps.

The second pertinent fact is that Hayti is predominantly a country of blacks. Out of a population of some two and a half million, an overwhelming majority are of pure African descent and most of the others are mulattoes, who are distrusted and disliked by the pure-blooded blacks. There were no white men in office and had not been since the country declared its independence of France in 1804. It is a tropical country of rich resources. Its government ran heavily in debt. Revolution was epidemic. There were continual troubles with other governments. The mountain districts became the haunt of brigands who terrorized the people of the cultivated lands. In short, civilization, order and financial stability had broken down and the country had to a considerable extent lapsed into savagery of that worst type of all, when a people have fallen out of the ranks of the self-mastered nations and have largely lost their sense of order and self-control.

Our Government was forced to face the problem of a probable outside interference which would have given some foreign power a new footing in America and to take up in Hayti the task which had been forced upon us in the other half of the island, Santo Domingo; which is also for police purposes now entirely under the control of United States naval forces. For we must remind our readers that this island of Hispaniola, the second in size of the West Indies, is divided into separate parts, the western half speaking a debased French, the eastern half a creole Spanish. Each has its own history and both alike are now wards of the United States on account of political and social helplessness which had become a menace to the peace of all America. In assuming this guardianship our Government was, we are convinced, simply doing what under all the circumstances was necessary and right. The question is whether we have carried out our responsibility as a Christian nation should.

Our purpose was to train the people of the two nations on the island to political self-control in order that they might be released, as Cuba was released, for independent life. In Santo Domingo, where the collection of the customs for the payment of the debt goes back to President Roosevelt's time, the ascendency of our authority has been received with a greater degree of acquiscence than in Hayti, with its traditions of heroic resistance to the French and its brigands in the mountains. Our naval control has had to do, therefore, with an indolent Negro people, many of them of a warlike type and fallen back to the cruelty of savages. The first problem of the occupation was that of clearing out these brigand fastnesses in the mountains as a preliminary to the training of the idle and largely irresponsible majority of the country people in the ways of industry and self-control. A recent paper, in the Century for June, by Harry A. Franck, will give an idea of the situation as it is today and the difficulties of the administrative control.

Charges have been brought, and were even made an issue in the presidential campaign, that our Marine forces used their authority cruelly and wantonly in this war against brigandage, the word "massacre" even being employed. Rev. Dr. L. T. Evans, who has been a missionary in Hayti for a quarter of a century, charges that discontent is growing and that peaceable folks have been driven to join the brigands by oppression. His words, as quoted editorially by the Boston Herald, are:

> In the meantime, however, conditions have been allowed to grow rapidly worse among these suffering, oppressed, enraged and terror-stricken people—as evidenced even by the riots between the marines and gendarmes, not to say the more frequent and daring raids by the so-called bandits or cacos, who are daily growing in strength and numbers, and who are at the same time gaining the real sympathy of more and more of the moderate, intelligent, educated and better class of Haytians, who have lost respect for our American occupation.

And he alleges that some at least of the discontent is founded on the preference shown by the constitution forced on the people, and in practical favoritism, to the unpopular white men of the country and to foreigners, as well as in many acts of administrative cruelty.

The Navy Department has done well in bringing these charges before a special naval court. We hope the investigation will be thorough going both for the sake of the Haytian people and for the good name of our naval administrators and our famous corps of marines.

The Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Pens

I have a friend who is a maker of Gold Pens. And he said unto me, What dost thou know about Pens?

And I said, I live hard by a Pen, though not in one; for I am a Writer.

And he said, Come with me, and I will show thee how a Pen is made.

So we entered the Factory, and came into a room where was a Crucible. And a man took Fine Gold and weighed it and cast it into the Crucible; and Copper took he also. And out of the Crucible came forth an Ingot.

And another man took the Ingot and weighed it, and rolled it into a Sheet. And another man took the Sheet and weighed it, and cut it into Strips. And another man took the Strips and weighed them, and out of every one of them cut he Pens an hundred and forty and four.

And another man took the Pens and curved the sides thereof. And another man cut out of every several Pen an Hole that was shaped like an heart. And another man cut in every Pen a Slit.

And every man counted the Pens that were given him, insomuch that if one Pen had been lost, or so much as a grain of gold missing, it would have been known who had taken it.

Then did certain damsels take the Pens, and they burnished them and polished them, so that every Pen received of the labor of an hundred men and two score maidens.

And the garments that they wore are burned once in the space of three months, and from the ashes they save more than enough gold to buy new garments. And when they wash their hands the water runneth into a great Vat and settleth, so that in every month they take from the bottom of the vat gold to the value of three hundred shekels.

Now I had watched them making of one Pen from the time it came forth in the Ingot till it was completed. And my friend took that Pen, and caused it to be set in an holder, and gave it to me. And he said, Keep it, for it is thine.

And I bowed low and thanked him.

And he filled the holder with ink.

And I spake unto him, and said, Behold, thou hast showed me a wonderful thing, and I have learned much. But I will show thee a thing yet more wonderful. For I am filling this Pen not with ink only, but with memory and creative power. I will cause this Pen to tell the story of its own creation, so that men who live a thousand miles away shall see what I have seen this day.

And he said, Thine is the more wonderful art: for the making of a Pen is not so wonderful as the use thereof.

So I took the Pen, and I wrote this parable therewith. And I remembered the gold that did not become Pens, but became dust of gold in the garments, and that flowed down the pipe into the Vat. And I prayed to my God, and said, O my God, who willeth not that any of the children of men should perish, if the washings of men's hands yield not filth only but gold to the value of three hundred shekels in a month, what canst thou do with the souls of men, in the day when hearts are tried as gold is tried in the furnace?

And I know not the answer to my prayer, but my hope is in God.

In Brief

Why not clear up your own thought of what is possible for the work of the church in your own community by starting in to do some one thing well?

* *

A little imaginative sympathy of the put-yourself-in-his-place variety will often add greatly to the worth of the Christmas gifts we are providing. Without that our gifts are like shots by a marksman who does not even take the trouble to look at the target.

* *

Afternoon teas and theater parties do not of themselves solve international problems, but we read with a good deal of satisfaction that cable despatch from Geneva the other day, saying that the head of the Japanese delegation to the League of Nations gave a theater party in honor of the wife of the leader of the Chinese delegation. Let us hope that Shantung was mentioned between the acts in such a way as to mollify rather than inflame national feeling.

* *

We like the battle-cry of Miss Robertson, the just elected Congresswoman from Oklahoma and if we were in Congress would gladly rally to her banner. She said to a reporter: "I am going to Washington to fight for four classes, women and children, Indians and soldiers. Yes, I shall fight for the enforcement of prohibition. I've been a total abstinence society of one all my life. My parents were missionaries, and missionaries to the Indians don't love liquor." But we hope she will not forget to fight for the rest of the people too.

* *

Since food is the first necessary and millions of people approach the winter in peril of hunger, it is enheartening to hear that Australia, in spite of unprecedented drought in New South Wales, will have a surplus from its just completed harvest of some 100,000,000 bushels of wheat for export. If America gives money and Australia, South America and the United States can supply wheat there will be a great saving of human life and distress in prospect in China, where families are selling their children, in Southern and Eastern Europe and in Armenia. But we must largely supply the money and machinery of distribution.

* *

The Boston Post has been passing on a bit of sunshine to its readers every morning for a number of months in the form of a good cheer quotation displayed at the top of its first page. The man who has been doing this clever bit of journalistic work certainly has shown familiarity with the best literature, ancient and modern, and a multitude of his readers have been cheered on their onward way by his selections. He was caught napping, however, the other day when he labeled the quotation "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forward unto those things which are before" "Anon." But one of his readers at least knew that the sentence, though somewhat modified, was originally penned by St. Paul, and when he informed the editor of the original source of the optimistic utterance, the latter was magnanimous enough to admit that it was an inexcusable editorial blunder.

From Our Canadian Window

Canada is still rubbing her eyes, as she looks across the line that unites us, wondering what it is all about, and how it has come about. Political landslides she herself has known, but this is a cataclysm not easy to explain from afar. A shifting of the seat of power she was prepared for, but the complete renunciation of the standard-bearer with a policy that was the radiant hope of a new world and a nobler time, as brave men struggled through the blackest night, never came within her dream. "Never again!" the gallant said, as in their thousands they heroically and well nigh gayly risked life, and gave it too, that it should never again be. And with simple faith they believed what they said, looking to the Anglo-Saxon peoples, in arms together seeking enduring peace, to make dream reality and the shining ideal something of enduring fact.

And has it all perished amid political strife and egotistic nationalisms and intriguing imperialisms and a cynical materialism? It cannot be. The truth is greater than the messenger and the vision than the seer; and beyond the dust of this troubled and confusing time one sees the gallant standing erect again on French and Flanders fields, with bugles at lips, summoning the jangled and nerve-frayed nations to finish the work for which they died. In spite of Democrat or Republican, Wilsonism or Lodgeism, the soul of the United States will hear that call and go marching on. A League of Nations ensuring peace, in place of coteries of diplomatists playing with hell, must rise from the appalling havoc of the Great War, or civilization will justly perish unhonored and unsung. And Wilson, his stubbornness forgiven, the mistakes of a lonely spirit grown autocratic forgotten, will stand out on the canvas of history, wart and all, as Cromwell said. the prophet of a new age and one of the glories of the United States. For the moment she stones her prophet with mob passion because of his mistakes, tomorrow she will build his tomb following his vision and finishing his work.

So Canada, bewildered, speculating about "drys and wets," Irish and German votes, big business and tariffs, war reaction and women's uncertainty, still believes. All that is best here holds fast its faith in the soul of her great neighbor, and waits to see its passion cleansed, demanding of its rulers the federation of the world for peace.

* *

Meanwhile our own politics are noisy, too. Our standard-bearer in the Great War, Sir R. Borden, broken in health, has gone into the shade like so many others who were leaders through Armageddon. His place has been taken by Premier Meighen—clearly "a lad o' pairts," alert, self-confident, ambitious, at least a party leader of abundant partisan rancor and with a rasping tongue. Statesmanship, it is hoped, he may yet show. Throughout the autumn, a wordy warfare has filled the air from coast to coast, but issues are far from clear, and as is the way of party politicians charges and arguments are somewhat unscrupulous. Will politicians ever learn that truth should be the aim of debate and justice the end of discussion?

The Premier when fact fails him, has an ugly habit of exploiting egoistic nationalism, a peril in all lands today, failing to see that great questions and social problems can be solved only in terms that are human and not merely national. The world has grown both small and big. The task before the world is how to get nations and parties and classes to live together humanly. The issue here, so far as any issue is clear, is present tariff, it may be higher tariff, or lower tariff. The big manufacturing interests are confederated, the masses bamboozled. Meanwhile the farmer driving his furrow and chewing his thought in all the back sections, is the uncertain quantity. In Ontario he has tasted power and is showing capacity for clean government. A great place waits for him if he holds on with straight thinking, restrained class consciousness and zeal for the common weal. The Farmers' Party for the present invades the strength of both the old parties. United with Labor in the cities, it would change all balances of power and shift all seats of authority.

As the result of the farmers' labor the land abounds in plenty. Canada has had a great harvest and has abundance to spare for the world. Her outlook on tomorrow is steady and hopeful. Prices have a slight tendency to fall, but money, except among the unskilled and the teaching and professional classes generally, is plentiful.

The nation has just had one more intimation that the price of liberty is eternal vigilance. The sugar refiners, bent on high ventures and great gain, boldly requested a Board of Commerce to maintain a high selling price by excluding imports of all cheaper sugar, and that in spite of a present protective tariff. To the amazed indignation of other interests and finally of the nation when it awoke to it, the Board made the order. The outcry was so swift and terrible that the government, arranging an inquiry, declared the Board's order illegal. Now the refiners, complaining that they "loaded up" at the request of the Board of Commerce, seek relief in some form from the government.

Fair play is a jewel even when high speculators venture far and lose; and the government driven to it by the action of its meddling and muddling Board may have to do something. But inquiry into the Board's relation to the refiners should clearly be carried farther. Certainly the public has again had evidence that "big business" can be impudently predatory. How hardly shall they that have riches, or are bent on riches, enter the Kingdom of Heaven—the kingdom of fair play and the square deal, of justice and brotherhood, of love and joy in right, and the service, not the plunder of others. Men upright and kindly in personal relations are sometimes without social conscience, and nowhere more often than in "big business." D. L. RITCHIE.

Montreal.

Editorial Sparks

AN UNFORTUNATE DIVISION OF LABOR

A family of our acquaintance is composed of a father, who is an irregular attendant upon church services; a mother, who is an excellent and devout Christian; and a daughter, who is the organist in the church which she attends. The man is accustomed to say: "We divide the work up in our family. My wife prays, my daughter plays, and I pay." There is a good deal of such division of labor in the church, a great deal too much for the prosperity of the cause or the good of the individual Christian.—The Watchman.

WOMEN AND MEN TOGETHER

The world, we have often heard, cannot be legislated into any course. But the world, we think, can be educated, can be enlightened, along any good way. Not the ballot, not even the ballot in the hands of women, but the ballot used aright by Christian men and Christian women and used co-jointly: this will change things for the better—more than that, for the best. The bringing in of this use: that is what we hope and believe women will do at the polls. As for the "purification of politics"—we think that it will be through such co-partnership at the polls that this will come to pass.—The Churchman.

OUR PILGRIM PULPIT

The Sanity of Jesus

By Rev. Henry Kendall Booth

Long Beach, Cal.

"And one said unto him, Lord, are there few that are saved? And he said unto them, Strive to enter in by the narrow door."—Luke 13:23.

We owe an incalculable debt to the modern study of our New Testament for its re-creation of Jesus Christ. Whatever fault may be found with the method or the spirit of modern Biblical criticism, one thing at least is sure—that out of the obscurity of the past Jesus Christ has come back to this generation with a freshness of approach, with a vigor of appeal that he has never had before. We are privileged to look at the real Jesus today, not the Jesus of tradition, or the Jesus of art, or the Jesus of mysticism, or the Jesus of theology, but the Jesus of the Gospels. The Jesus that is revealed in the Gospels is a man who walks with his feet on the ground, whose outlook is not future but present, whose teachings are simplicity itself, and who is characterized both in life and in doctrine by what we may properly call sanity.

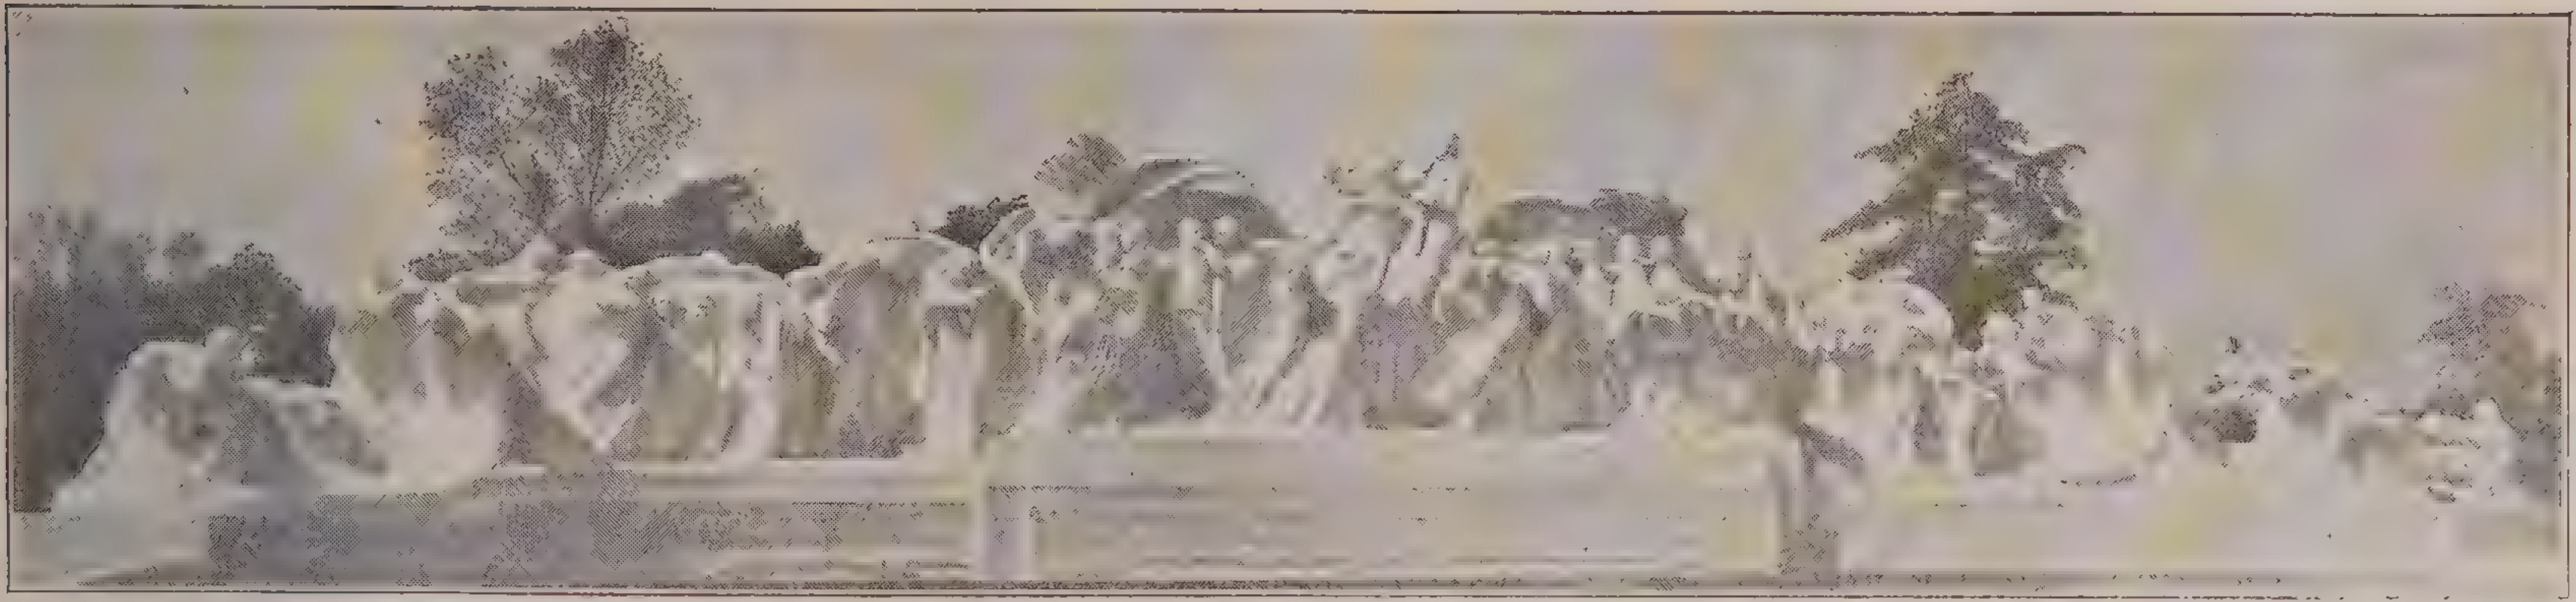
As we look at the life of Jesus Christ we are struck by the fact that with the supreme development of all the faculties of his nature and intellect, there is in and through all a perfect proportion. If I were asked to name the one great outstanding characteristic of Jesus Christ that has impressed me the most, I should say it was his balance, his poise, his evenness.

Nor was Jesus a fanatic. He saw life steadily and he saw it whole, he saw all problems and he faced them all.

Nor was Jesus in any respect a sensationalist. He depended for the growth of his Kingdom upon his contact with individual men and women. He did not seem to enjoy preaching to multitudes. He much preferred the quiet contact with the individual man or woman—to sit down with a woman by a wayside well, or to gather under the shadow of Lebanon with a little handful of disciples. This is the Jesus of the Gospels.

And now as we turn from the man to the teachings he has left behind him, we find that they are characterized by the same saneness. There is almost no abstract reasoning, scarcely an abstract term in all his teaching. It is common sense, practical, everyday, down-to-the-ground. He is talking to men as they live and he is concerned with the problems that are vital.

How simple, after all, he makes the religious life. It does not consist in the things that men often call religion at all, but just in simply going about doing good, living right lives, gentle, gracious, self-giving as was his own life. And as one turns from this same Jesus with his sane teachings to the modern world, and one sees certain groups of Christian people exalting ecstasy and emotion to the supreme place, when one hears certain teachers insisting that the only thing we are concerned with is the future coming of the Lord Jesus Christ, when one sees other groups of Christian men and women insisting that certain elaborate forms and liturgies and ceremonies are all that must be held to be a Christian, when one finds still others insisting that forms of words, creeds and confessions are the all in all of Christianity, one understands that the Christian world has wandered a long way from Jesus, and we need to be recalled many times to the fact that is so plainly set forth in the life and words of this Master—that the practical, everyday life is the place in which religion must find expression, and as Jesus taught us, live lives of goodness and of kindness, of purity, of service day by day, taking him for our example and our pattern.



Lorado Taft, a Preacher in Chiseled Marble

The Inspiring Work of a Chicago Sculptor

By Henry J. Kilbourn

Had he been a banker or a lawyer, a preacher or a soldier; or if, four decades ago, that shipment of Greek gods delivered at the University of Illinois had not arrived cracked and broken—or forty other ifs—yet, in any sphere, Lorado Taft would have given a notable service to his generation. He is first of all a Man—bigger than his work. He has been heard, however, to remark that his first urge toward sculpture came when he was set to aid an Italian workman in repairing the above-mentioned plaster casts. Young Taft laid good foundations by being born of an inspiring mother, and then taking time to get a college education. After graduation from the University of Illinois, where his father was Professor of Geology, he embarked upon a thorough and laborious training of five years, mainly in Paris, at the Ecole des Beaux Arts, under Dumont, Bonnassieux, and Thomas, including also a period at Rome.

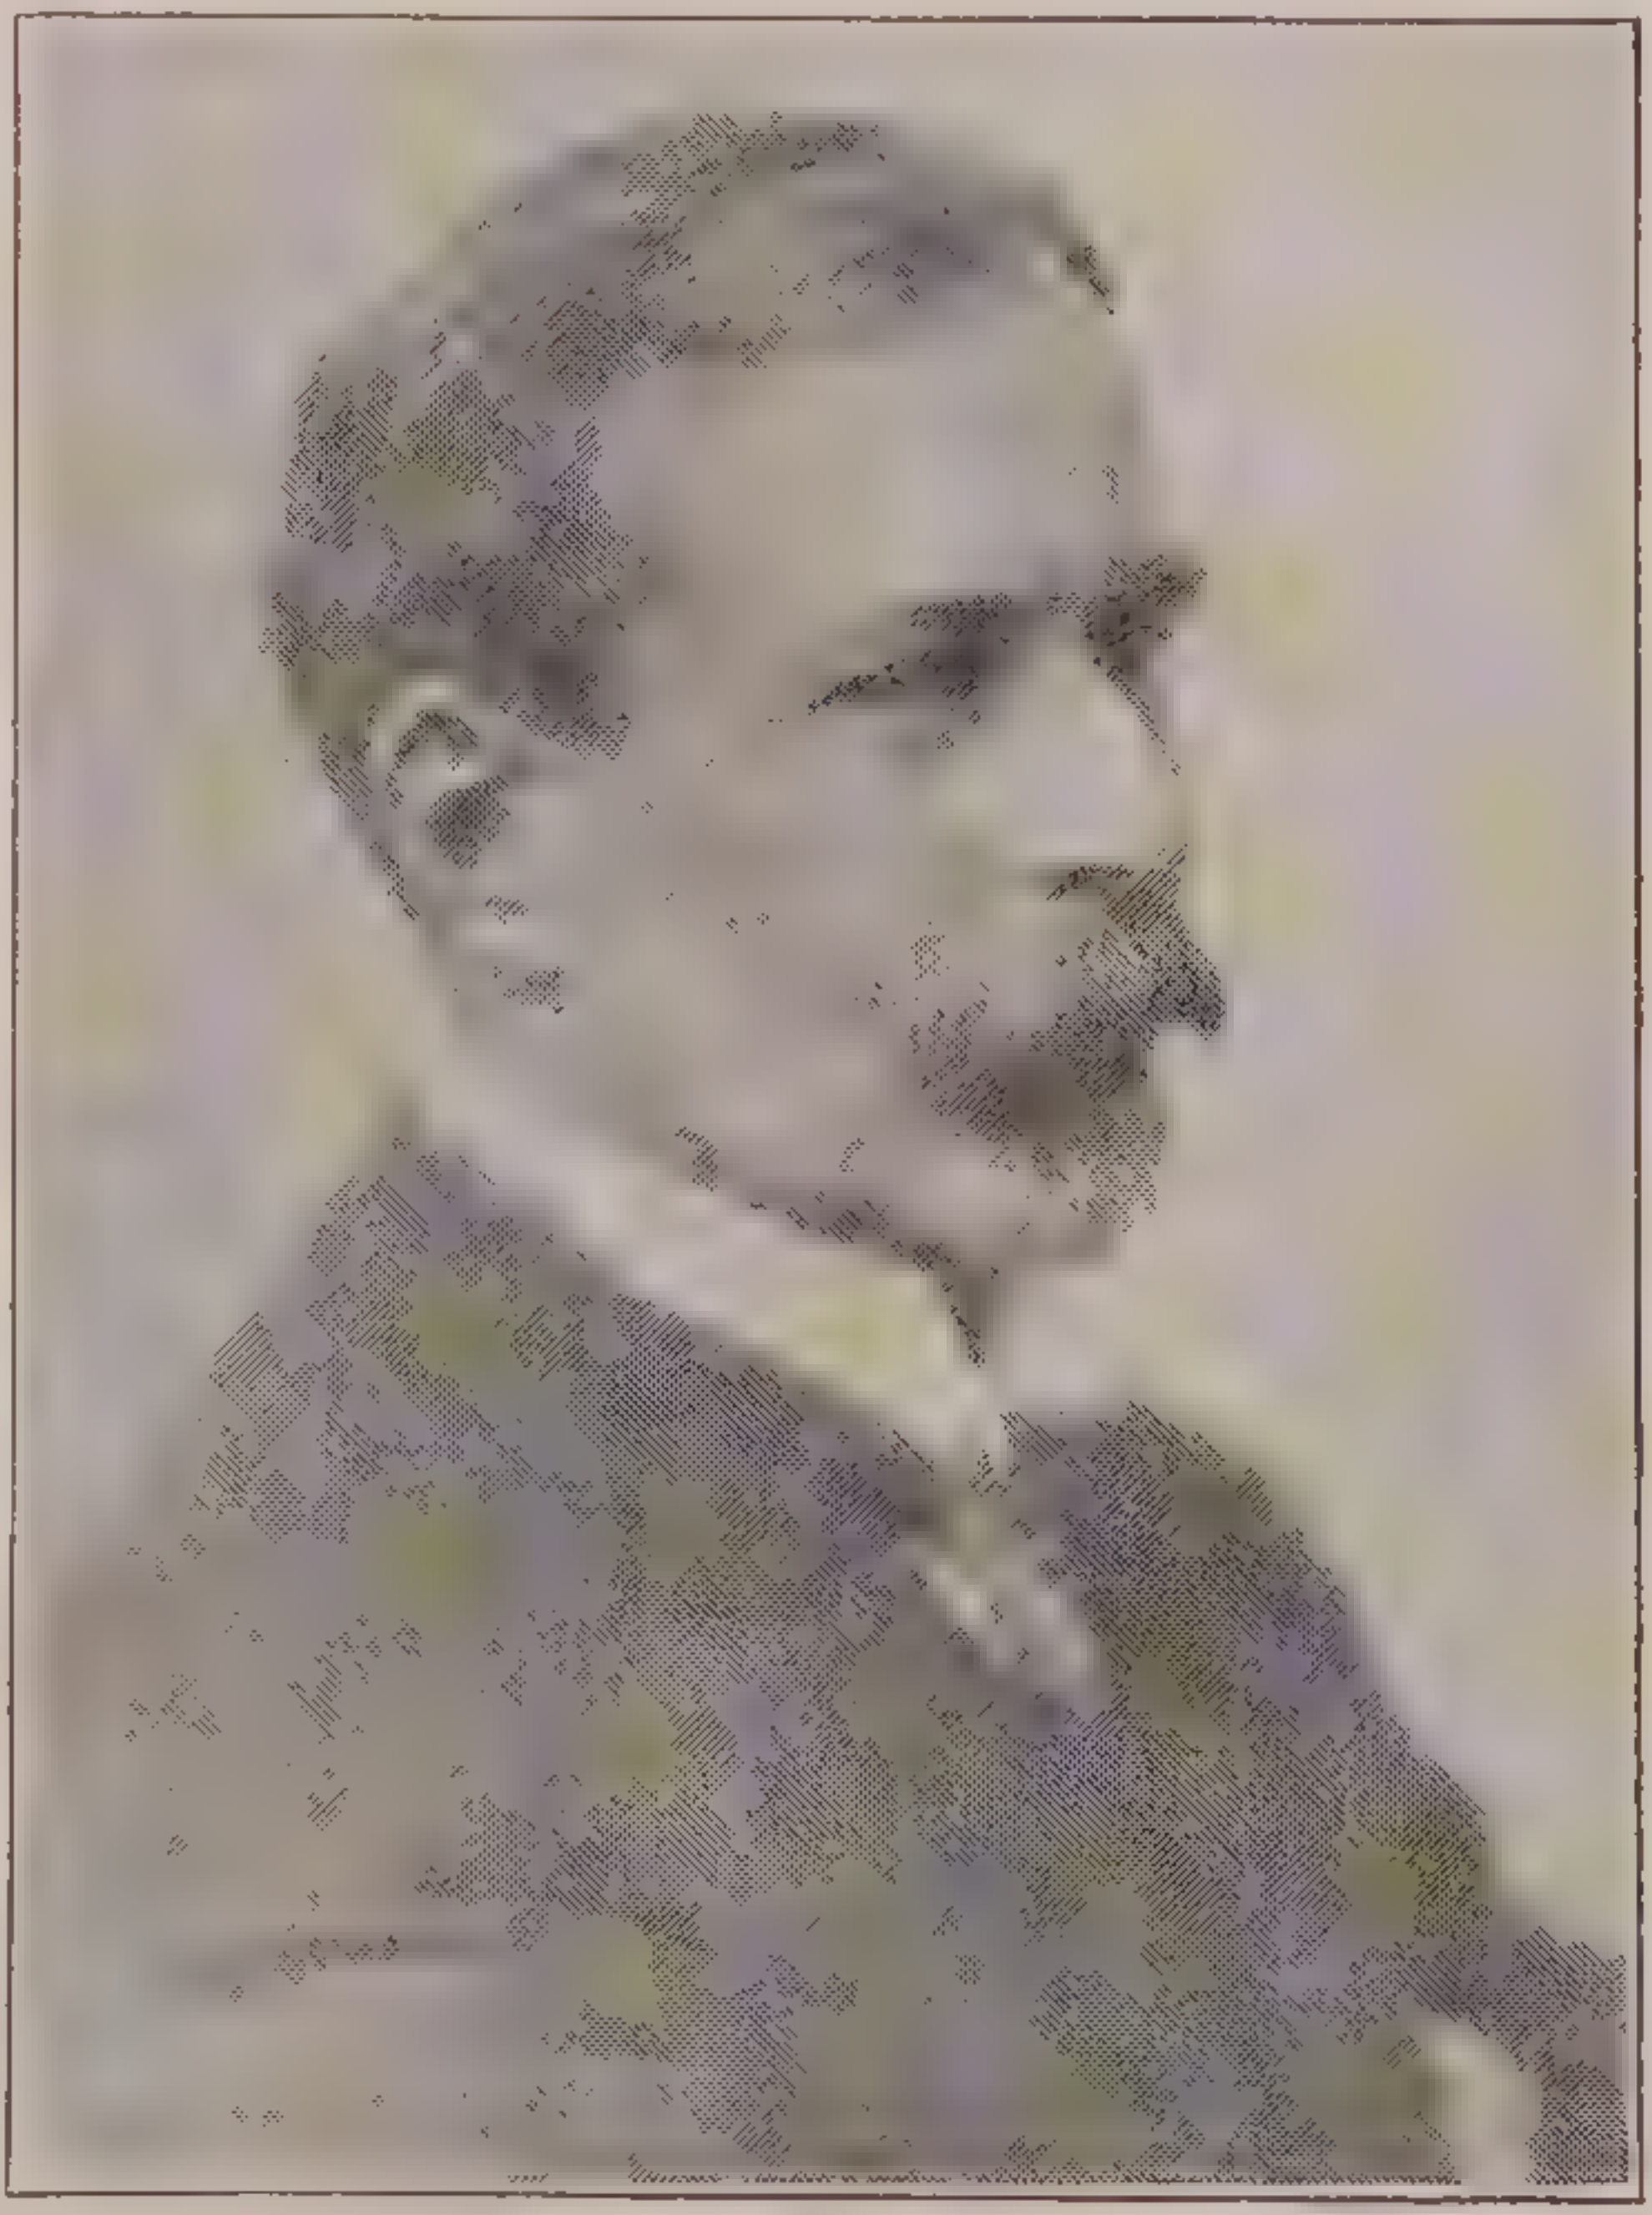
Returning to Chicago he began, where most young sculptors must, upon the portrayal of prominent men and women. Among the fruits of these years are his Henry W. Longfellow, Joaquin Miller, Frances E. Willard, Governor Oglesby, and others.

NOTABLE GROUPS

For thirty-four years he has wrought in Chicago, and now, from many public buildings and upon crowded thoroughfares, West and East, his works look out upon the passing throngs with a message that enters into the very fabric of their every day life. His vivid and powerful group, "The Blind," not only tells the pathos of Maeterlinck's play of that name, which inspired it, but, copied far and wide in the press, has proven a real trumpet call to a new public devotion in bearing the burden of the handicapped.

In 1913 came "The Spirit of the Great Lakes," now standing at the south façade of Chicago Art Institute. This group is an Allegory of Service, in which five fair female figures impersonate the inland seas. Superior, fullest and richest of all, pours from her bounty into the shell of Michigan, who in turn passes the flood on to Huron, who is intent that all she receives shall go to Erie, who, in the same passion of service, pours the wealth of the lakes over Niagara into the shell of Ontario, who, in her turn, with outstretched arm, sends the waters on down the St. Lawrence. Here is a sermon in bronze: It is the Voice of Ocean which calls to the Great Lakes. Should they disobey, become self-centered, they would become five Dead Seas. Hearing and obeying they are glorious. God made a few to be Superiors, thousands to be Hurons and Eries, all of us to be receivers from those who went before us of all that makes life good; all of us to pass on the gift of the past made richer by our own work and our own love.

Among Mr. Taft's major works, also, are the "George Washington" in Seattle, on the campus of the University of Washington; "The Columbus Fountain," adorning the façade of the great railway station at Washington, D. C.; and an exquisite meditation, "The Solitude of the Soul," for which he received the Exposition gold medal at St. Louis.



LORADO TAFT

THE MESSAGE OF MR. TAFT

Some years ago a recognizer of coming men introduced Mr. Taft to a lyceum committee. The venture was justified. Almost from the start the artist proved himself an instructive and inspiring lecturer. His industry is wholly beyond the ordinary. For more than twenty years he has been a professor, giving regular courses in the University of Chicago, the University of Illinois, and the Chicago Art Institute. In 1903 he published what is today the most complete and readable History of American Sculpture, and the aggregate of his popular lectures and addresses is nearing three thousand. He seldoms appears in a hurry. He is the "unhasting and unresting" kind. Those who know him need not be told that, notwithstanding his great activity, he has not forgotten the food of the soul. It in nowise dims the fineness of his work to say that he seems always the scholar and the lover of his fellow men a little more than the artist. During the trying days of the armistice it was no surprise to find him in a Y. M. C. A. uniform, standing in the Louvre, by the "Winged Victory," explaining the glory of its meaning to a multitude in khaki, who crowded about him. From city to city, and camp to camp he went, giving the boys his best, his utmost; making the cathedrals of France speak to them a tenfold message, and leaving them with a feeling that a Big Brother had passed by.

One hardly thinks of Mr. Taft apart from a devoted group of enthusiastic young artists who have grown up with him, and whose success is to him as his own. It is one thing to be a creative artist. A greater thing still to be a creator and inspirer of artists. Among these who look upon him as the "Fra Lorado," are now emerging a number of well known sculptors, including Bessie Potter Vonnoh, Nellie V. Walker, Leonard Crunelle, Frederick Hibbard, Julia Braken Wendt of California, Catherine Robinson, and the lamented Charles J. Mulligan, whose head of Lincoln especially had given promise of coming power.

FOR THE WORLD'S MOST BEAUTIFUL MILE

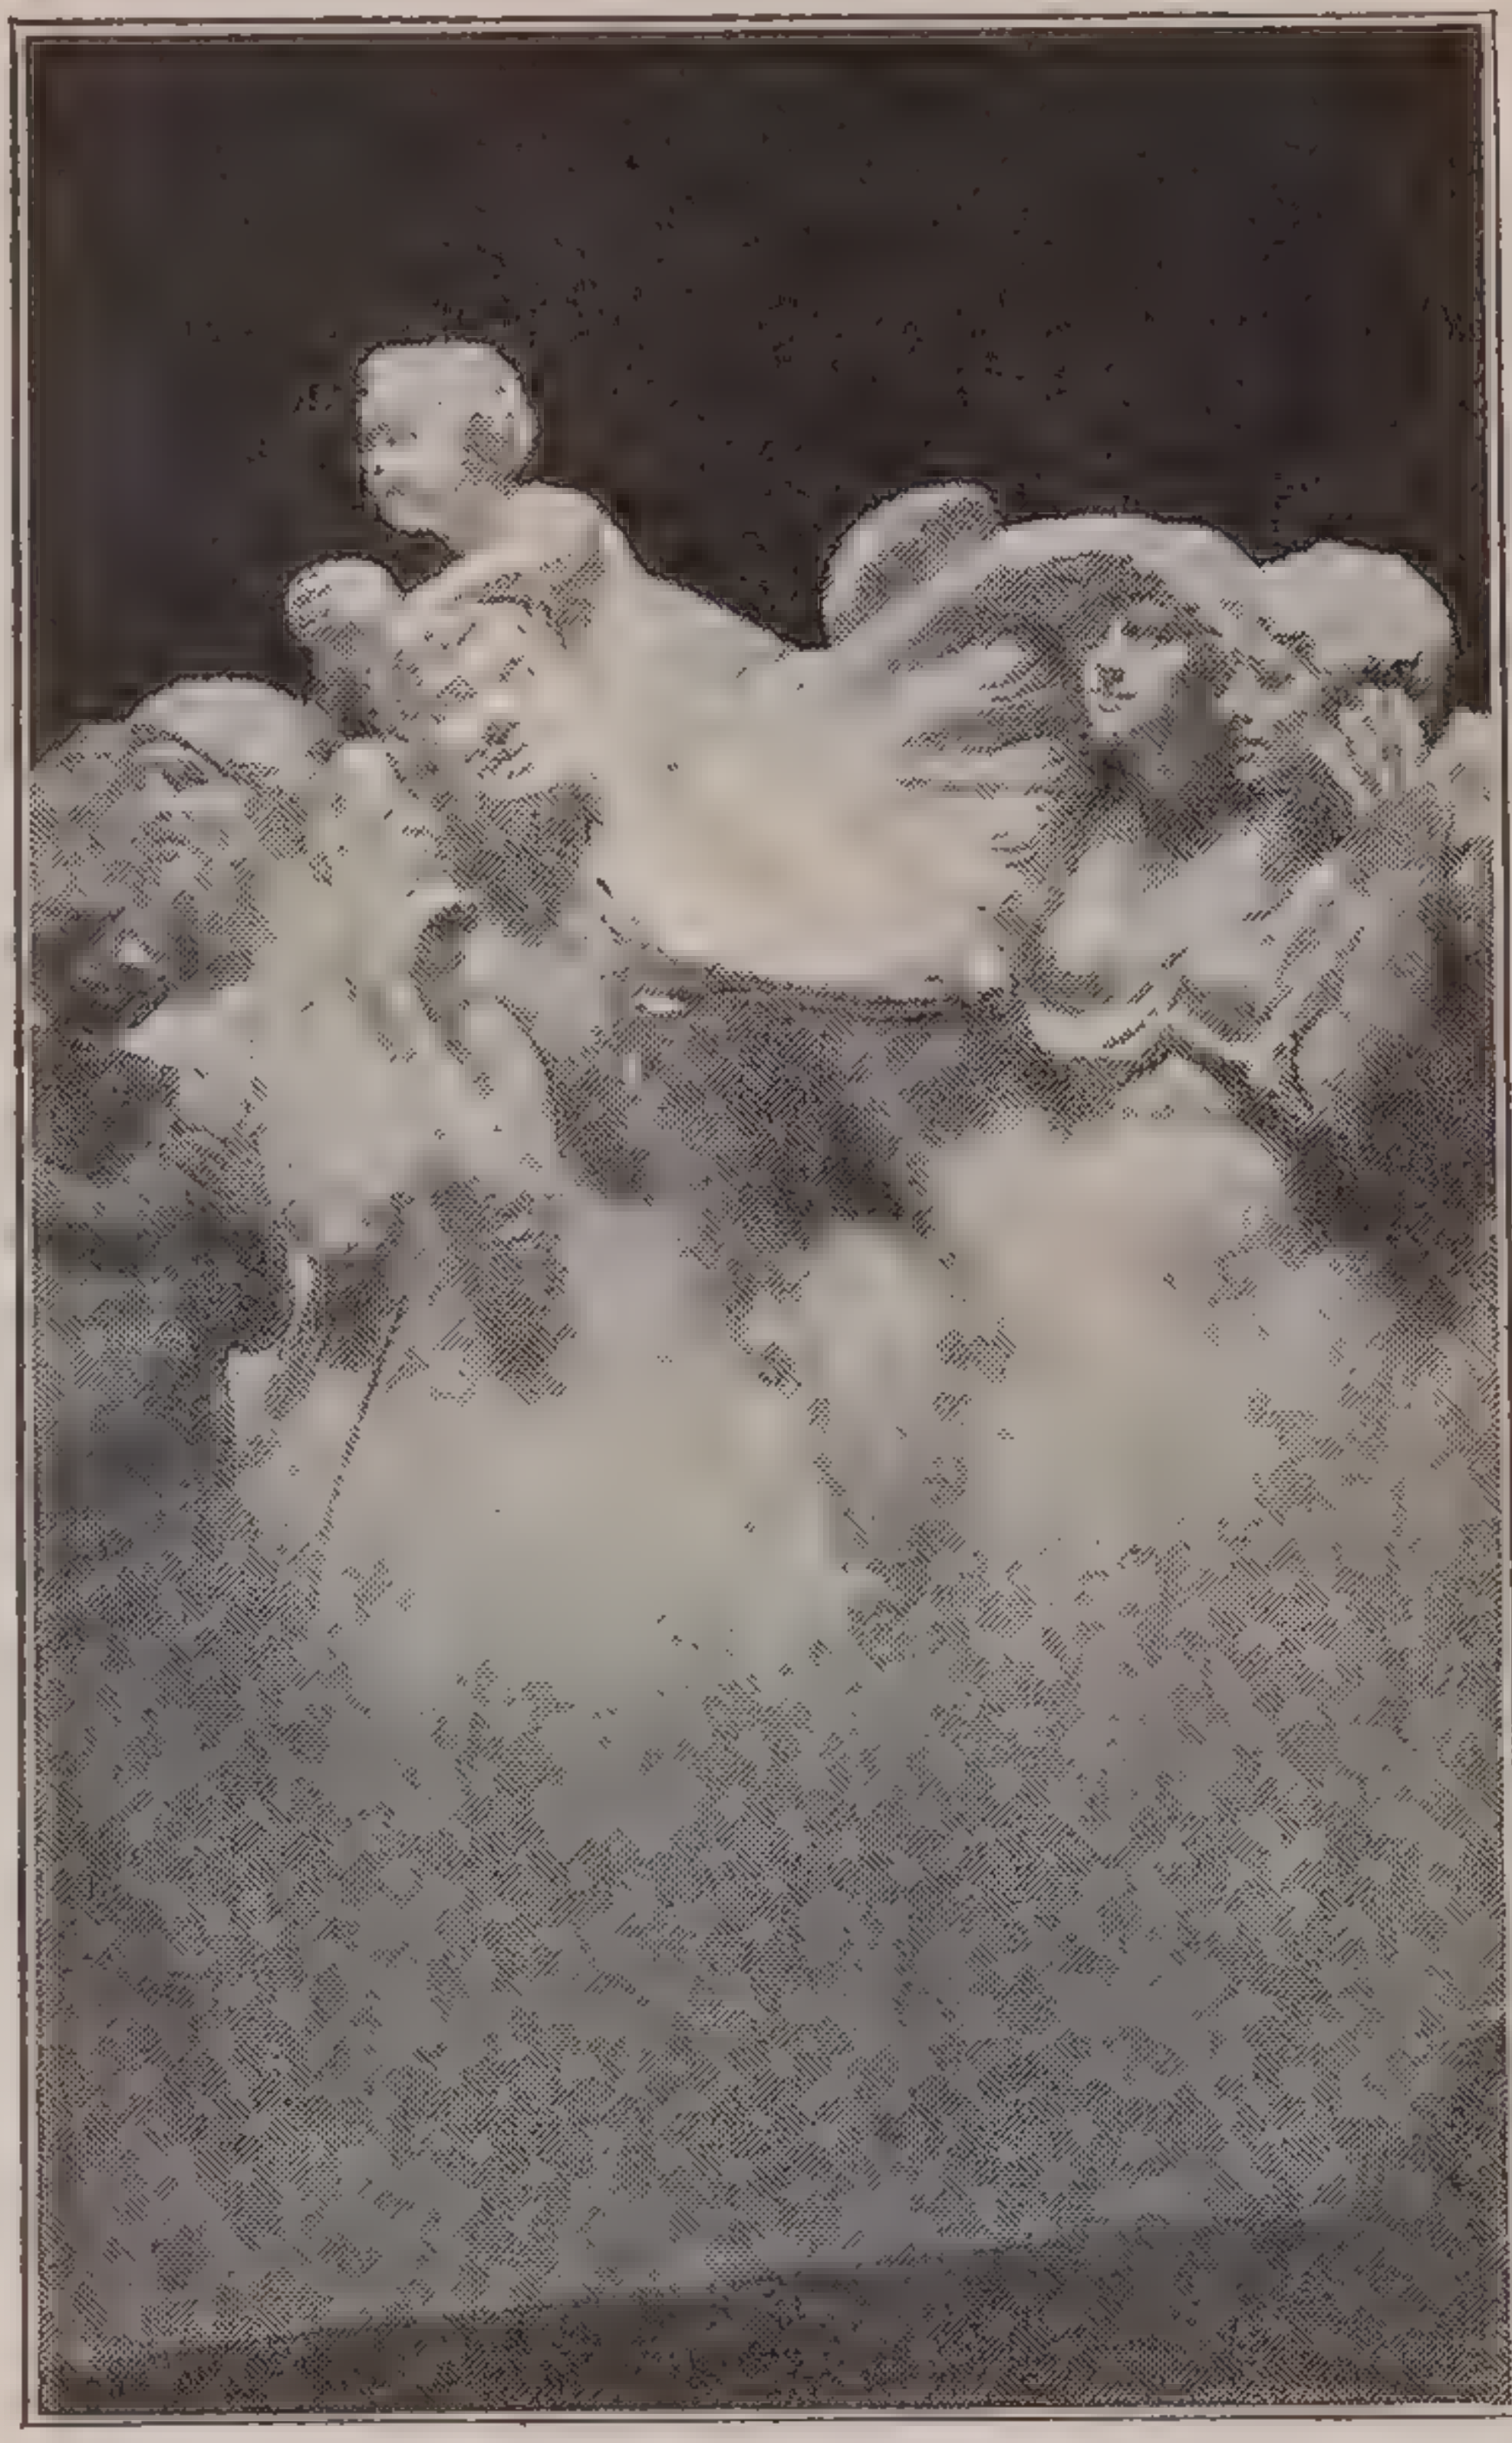
The far-sighted bequest of one million dollars by Mr. B. F. Ferguson of Chicago "for the erection and maintenance of enduring statuary and monuments in the parks along the boulevards, or in other public places in the city of Chicago," produced an income from which the trustees devoted ten thousand dollars a year for five years for the beginning of this ministry. Under their commission Mr. Taft has worked out a plan which, completed, will rank the western metropolis of America with the proudest cities of mediæval and ancient Europe.

The dream is this; to make the long, grassy Midway into the world's most beautiful and stately mile. Running east and west through the middle of this park will be hewn a water-way seven-eighths of a mile long and one hundred feet wide, to be spanned by three marble bridges. First, "The Bridge of the Faiths," with the statues of those prophets who have led the millions in their convictions of Duty, of God and of Life to Come. Then, eastward still, "The Bridge of the Sciences," to be adorned with the shapes of those inventors and scientists whose work, by common consent, is not to perish. Again, at proportionate distance eastward, "The Bridge of the Arts," dedicated to those whose names, in painting, architecture, and sculpture, are the household words of the ages. Lastly, facing the west, "The Fountain of Creation," showing the progress of humanity from its past selfishness and beastliness, upward toward the Divine.

THE FOUNTAIN OF TIME

At the western end, facing east, already stands, in plaster cast, the first great opus of the plan, "The Fountain of Time," a streaming throng of hurrying marble figures, rising, as out of the first eternity, increasing to the height heroic, passing again lower and lower until they reach the ground, while the great figure of "Father Time," himself, muffled and mysterious, towers from the center of the pool, watching the pageant.

From the first figures at the right showing the agony of birth and the struggle for existence, up through the gladsome rush of youth to the joys of parenthood, with babies, dancing children, and young girls; up still, to the irresistible forms of marching soldiers with the mounted conqueror, and the half-seen vision of fleeing refugees, all are mingled with the great billows of the Sea of Life, ending with a chord of the seventh in marble—the crouching strong man who fears and resists death, and lastly the kneeling form of the old man with serene, uplifted face shining with light from beyond as he welcomes the Great Change. Men will look long on that face. It speaks the all sufficient word from the "Green Hill far away," the word which found its echo in the parting breath of Columbus and of Martin Luther— ". . . into Thy hands I commend my spirit."



THE JOYS OF PARENTHOOD
A group in the Fountain of Time

"It has made Chicago think of eternal verities," says the Evening Post, "as no preacher or printed page could make it think."

GLIMPSES OF THE SCULPTOR

From early years Lorado Taft has been an earnest and continuous worshiper. Long a member of the First Congregational Church of Evanston, Ill., he now commonly attends the University Congregational Church near his studios, a little apart from the massive Gothic buildings of Chicago University.

As I write there comes back a pleasant vision of those days in Paris, when repeatedly, on Sunday, as many of us entered the American Church, often with President and Mrs. Wilson, always with Secretary of State Lansing—one of the most familiar figures, sitting not far from the preacher, was this other preacher of the Message in Marble. How he scorned one Sunday as I walked with him from Church, at the utter sawdust with which a supposedly eminent chaplain had fed us. But how, on the following Sunday morning, we rejoiced over the uplifting message of Dr. Chauncey Goodrich, upon the text, "Thou Renewest the Face of the Earth"—for it was nearly Easter.

Out of the reservoirs of the Eternal are inexhaustible things for him who with the Eternal communes. It was for such communing that Taft and his companion sculptor, Borglum, went together to see Rheims in the dignity of her ruin. The German trenches over against the City, the German fortress, four miles out, from which they had fired on the Cathedral, a fortress now ground to fine white powder; the two German tanks, battered and silent, still there; those scraps of faded greenish uniform half sunken in the ground, tangled with human bones which once caught my foot before I knew it—these were fascinating. But after all there was one chief thing to see, the Cathedral, with its gashed and giant towers lifted still to God; its worn stones of the chancel floor, the very ones on which Joan of Arc had knelt with tears of joy at the crowning of the Dauphin. Most of all it was this that the two sculptors had come to see. But not at all would they approach the holy spot in the broad light of day. Waiting until the blackest hour of night showed the first dim gray of dawn, they walked out in the great silence to the presence of those sacrificial walls—speaking little, looking up, reading the changing shadows, hearing voices, and seeing what men put not into words.

One wonders if all the visions of Sculptor Taft, for his city and for his country, can come true within the span of one lifetime. One covets for him a career like that of Michael Angelo, reaching the farthest possible decades. Be this as it may, he has already added permanently to the sum of noble human thinking, even to the sum of human faith in the great conviction of Paul, that, "as we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

Encouraging Meeting of the A. M. A.

Annual Gathering in Springfield, Mass.

By Rev. Henry Lincoln Bailey

Under dreary drizzling skies the American Missionary Association opened its 74th annual meeting in the First Church, Springfield, Mass., Nov. 17. But the weeping endured only for a night, and the joy of fair weather came Thursday morning. There was no lack of good cheer inside even on Wednesday. How could there be with Treasurer Gaylord reporting a balance of nearly $2,000 after a year of unparalleled expenditures? The attendance, from a local point of view, was disappointing, due in part at least to weather conditions; but the program was as strong as ever, well repaying the visitors however far they came.

THE PAGEANT

An especially happy impression was created by the pageant which was staged in the Auditorium Wednesday evening and witnessed by 3,000 spectators. Miss Anita B. Ferris adequately sensed the spirit and substance of A. M. A. work in her vision of "The Court of Brotherhood," partly allegorical, largely a reproduction of typical episodes of today on the mission fields. Springfield and vicinity furnished the cast of 160, and the Association provided equipment, which it is prepared to loan for pageant purposes in other cities. Moving steadily forward for 125 minutes, the living moving pictures of Indian, Negro, Porto Rican, Highland and other mission life created such a vivid impression as books and speeches could never give.

The young Knight, America, seeking the grail of Liberty, is armed with the gifts of Faith, Justice, Chastity, Steadfastness and Zeal. He is led astray by Glory, Riches and Power, and failing in justice to Indian and Negro is nearly overwhelmed by Dishonor, Oppression and Greed. Appealing for help to the Palmer, Holy Church, he is taught that brotherhood is the secret of his quest; and as he stands aside he is shown the working of brotherhood for the belated races of our land.

THE FIRST SESSION

Dr. Nehemiah Boynton being detained the first day, Dr. Oscar Maurer of New Haven presided, making happy response to the greetings of Mayor Adams, Moderator Stryker of the Hampden Association, and Pastor McPherson. This was Springfield's third chance to be host to the A. M. A., previous dates being 1868 and 1900, with 1923 hoped for in connection with the National Council. John R. Rogers broke loose from the printed report of the executive committee and gave an interesting story of his 63 years of A. M. A. experience beginning as a baby in the family of the founder of Berea College. The survey, to which he made frequent returns, discloses a year of expanding school work, yet of financial curtailment; and of local support aroused where schools were threatened with closing.

Dr. Alfred Lawless, Jr., Southern superintendent, dealt with church work among Negroes, whose emotionalism is somewhat hard to yoke up with the intellectualism of New England Congregationalism. We have not stressed church extension there as we ought, and the situation is a challenge for an adequate church program. A concert of prayer, led by the veteran secretary, Dr. A. F. Beard, closed the afternoon session.

Thursday Morning

A sinister situation in Southern school buildings was pictured by Arthur B. Holmes, supervising architect. Modern standards for schools are far ahead of those of a few years ago. Add to that the fact that most of our buildings are old and worn and lacking in what today are counted essentials, there are only three things possible—replacement, extensive rehabilitation, or abandonment. The first is best. Out of four years' knowledge of the fields by frequent visitation, Mr. Holmes described typical cases and showed how imperative is the need of $10,000 here and $25,000 there, all over the South, if our work is to go on.

Dr. Lewis B. Moore of Atlanta depicted "after-war race relations." The idealism of war-time has faded. The Negro soldier is hated because of his heroism. But the better class in each race is growing in numbers and in mutual respect. Dr. Moore enumerated several causes of Negro unrest, all of them kindred phases of race discrimination, and declared that to build a real civilization, justice, morality and love must be foundation stones.

The secretarial paper was by Dr. George L. Cady on "Race Values and Race Destinies." Electric, epigrammatic, trenchant, he was at his best in a characteristic speech, fearing no foe and pointing out what a billion colored people in the world are sometime going to do to half a billion whites if white Christianity doesn't first get in some genuine world-wide work in the spirit of Jesus.

Woman's Hour

By force of circumstances one woman filled the hour, but Ida Vose Woodbury was equal to it. This was her official swan song, but nobody wanted to believe her when she called it her last appearance on an A. M. A. program. Just closing 25 years of service, and with several books in her head ready to leap into print when she gets literary leisure, Mrs. Woodbury told "The Story of a Quarter Century." She did better, for she traced her family kinship with Lincoln and Sumner, and told of her girlhood before and during the war. It was an hour of reminiscence, of picturesque autobiography, of compelling interest. For the quarter century she has averaged 25,000 miles of travel each year, and she pictured some of it. Those forthcoming books will be in demand.

Voices from the Field

Rev. Rudolf Hertz, "Christian by choice and Congregationalist by chance," speaking on the future of our Indian missions, made a plea especially for a trained corps of medical workers to combat the ravages of tuberculosis among the red people. Rev. Otto J. Scheibe told of the need of community uplift among the Mexicans on this side of the border, who have no state support for schools as have the Indians. Principal Inborden of the Brick School in North Carolina detailed the progress and present needs of the Negro farmers of the South.

Business

Machinery was absolutely out of sight. Two resolutions, a single ballot, and the introduction and respnse of the new secretary, Rev. Fred Leslie Brownlee, were the only items and they were not introduced consecutively. The officers were all re-elected, save that R. A. Dorman of New York takes the place of G. W. Baily as one of the auditors. Mr. Brownlee, late of Pilgrim Church, Cleveland, was brought out by Chairman Rogers in a welcoming speech, and made fitting and modest reply. While in a sense field marshal of the A. M. A. workers, and while asserting that young men have a new outlook, he disclaimed any intention of being a dictator. The Association adopted a strong resolution of sympathy for the Japanese in California.

California Resolution

The American Missionary Association extends to our Japanese brothers in California sincerest sympathy in this trying hour. We deprecate the un-Christian propaganda incited by race prejudice. We believe that America can solve all race problems in our midst without violating our principles of democracy and Christian brotherhood. We pledge them our every effort to make secure their human rights, and we pledge them our fullest co-operation in their splendid endeavors for Americanization, and pray that they and we alike may bring all our hearts and actions into harmony with the spirit of our American institutions and the spirit of our common Master, Jesus Christ.

Resolutions on Mrs. Woodbury

Whereas, Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury, who with rare ability and devotion has for 25 years served the churches as Field Secretary of the American Missionary Association, has resigned her office and her resignation has been accepted by the Executive Committee of the Association; therefore,

Heard in Springfield

"A nation is not cultured till it is Christian."—Dr. Neil McPherson.

"No people who can sing like these Jubilee singers can be Bolshevists."—Dr. L. B. Moore.

"A Jim Crow car may be irritating, but a Jim Crow democracy is intolerable."—Dr. G. L. Cady.

"When white Stoddard and black DuBois emerge from a study of the color problem, they come with a sword in their hand."—Dr. G. L. Cady.

"There are no swear words in the Dakota language. The Indians have to learn English for that."—Rev. Rudolf Hertz.

Resolved, 1. That we, the members of the American Missionary Association in annual meeting, hereby express our profound regret that a connection and service so notable for their value to our churches should cease.

2. That we record our personal indebtedness and that of the churches for the unwearying pains and cheerful sacrifice with which by familiar association in the homes and with the work and joy and suffering of the backward peoples of our land, together with the patient study of their problems, she has become one of the ablest living authorities both as respects their claim upon the nation and the nation's sacred responsibility for them.

3. That we express to Mrs. Woodbury our hearty appreciation and gratitude for these many years during which her sagacious, graphic and illuminating portrayal of the needs of these people has deeply stirred many hearts and constrained them to increased endeavors for their relief; and

4. That we tender to the Executive Committee of the Association our deep sympathy in their prospective loss of Mrs. Woodbury's valuable service as Field Secretary, with the urgent hope that through some wise plan her long experience and thoughtful eloquence may still be available for the instruction and inspiration of our churches.

Resolved, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Association and that copies of the same be sent to Mrs. Woodbury and to The Congregationalist and Advance.

A large assembly greeted the speakers Thursday evening. Springfield was glad to welcome back to the scene of his novitiate Dr. A. H. Bradford of Providence who spoke on "The Pilgrim Heritage for All Americans." The A. M. A. serves as intermediary, he said, between Mayflower descendants, rich in all but brotherhood, and descendants of slave-ship immigrants, poor in all but the Pilgrim spirit. Maj. R. R. Moton, worthy successor of Dr. Washington at Tusgekee, followed with a strong address on fair treatment for the Negro. As Dr. Moore also said, he wants no social equality, but he wants no unfair discrimination or ostracism or segregation. Good pastors and teachers, good homes, brotherhood, these are the ideals of the race. Briefly and brilliantly President Boynton summed up and re-emphasized these points for all men in our land, and the meeting ended.

The Fisk Jubilee Singers were, as always, a popular part of the program at every session. An exhibit of industrial work from the schools of the Association attracted much attention in the chapel between sessions.

The Herring Memorial Fund

(Designed to be serviceable to Mrs. Hubert C. Herring while she lives. After her death the Trustees of the Annuity Fund, in perpetuation of Dr. Herring's devotion to his brethren of the ministry, distribute the income, as their judgment shall deem best, to ministers who, in order to secure the benefits of the Annuity Fund, need special assistance in meeting their requisite annual payments. In case any part of the income in any one year is not needed for such purpose it may be used to supplement the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund.)

Alden, George I., Worcester, Mass.
Cross, Mr. and Mrs. E. W., Grinnell, Io.
Marsh, George B., New Milford, Ct.
Strong, David H., Benson, Vt.
Arnold, Henry A., Toledo, O.
DeBerry, William N., Springfield, Mass.
Dornhoefer, J., De Pue, Ill.
Enlow, Charles E., Galesburg, Ill.
Wagner, Jacob, Lincoln, Neb.
Whitin, Arthur F., Whitinsville, Mass.
Bliss, Leon D., Sheffield, Mass.
Clyde, John P., Corvallis, Ore.
Dickey, J. G., Dickinson, N. D.
Hulbert, H. W., Groton, Ct.
Papazian, M. G., Fresno, Cal.
Rose, Samuel, Chicopee, Mass.
Uhler, H. H., Glen Ridge, N. J.
Peet, Major Edward W., New York City.
Bevin, Mrs. C. G., East Hampton, Ct.
Crane, William M., Richmond, Mass.
Eaton, Edward D., New York.
Graff, Franklin L., Columbus, O.
Harrison, Hiram B., Atlanta, Ga.
Lockwood, Arthur J., Glen Ridge, N. J.
Lucas, Burton A., Windsor, Vt.
Luther, C. F., Oxford, Mass.
Rogers, J. R., New York City.
Gregg, James E., Hampton, Va.
McElveen, W. T., Portland, Ore.
McQuarrie, Neil, Stearns, Ky.
Moore, Edwin F., Cambridge, Mass.
Taylor, Livingston L., Canandaigua, N. Y.
Benedict, Miss Amelia C., Waterbury, Ct.
Colman, George W., La Crosse, Wis.
Smith, Clifford H., Ludlow, Vt.
Cooledge, Mrs. Viola, Ludlow, Vt.
Wissler, H. L., Gilbert, Io.
Cowling, Donald J., Northfield, Minn.

(265 subscriptions aggregating $9,408.06)

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Recent Fiction

The Gester of Duke Jocelyn, by Jeffery Farnol (Little, Brown). Mr. Farnol tells us that this tale was written at the request of his daughter Gillian, "who longed for romance." And this is surely undiluted romance, written "as of old, in prose, blank verse and rhyme." Duke Jocelyn, in the guise of a court jester, goes forth to seek Yolande, the fair lady, and discover if she can love him for his own sake, in spite of a badly marred face and his fool's costume. Thereupon ensue many and perilous adventures. But of course all ends happily. It is a well-told tale with the real atmosphere of the days of knights in armor, damsels in distress, outlaws who robbed the rich and aided the poor, and tremendous tournaments. The volume is well illustrated by Eric Pape.

A World to Mend, by Margaret Sherwood (Little, Brown). A Boston "Brahmin," in the guise of a cobbler, settles in a New England village during the war. He is making a deliberate attempt to break his shell of aloofness and to understand democracy. His journal tells the story of his experiences day by day. In it are imbedded the characters of the neighborhood from the old families and the new-rich summer sojourners to the social climber and the loafer. A discouraging panorama it looks to be at first, until the double impetus of war and self-sacrifice reveals better things. All through there is a pretty love story developing. The world securely mended is the cobbler's vision. But now it has been long since the armistice and a changed mood makes the tone of the book seem strained. However, the fine theories of religion, education and brotherhood are impressive and are doubly needed in these plodding days.

An Old Chester Secret, by Margaret Deland (Harpers). Dr. Lavendar in his extreme old age is still able to put in the right word at exactly the right time. In respectable Old Chester a sin has been smothered in secrecy for twenty years. Not any catastrophe but the slow working of conscience and natural affection bring about the crisis of confession. The reader has known the truth all the time and watches the drama with growing wonder as to the outcome.

Century Silver Shoal Light

Scribners Man to Man

Man to Man, by Jackson Gregory (Scribners). A ranch story of the most strenuous kind. The great man of the district is called Hell-Roaring Packard and he has a grandson of the same type. There is a strange and fierce conflict between the two. There is also a beautiful heroine who is quite as strenuous as the man. Villains mix things up badly, but the story ends well. It is not quite convincing but it is quite exciting.

Silver Shoal Light, by Edith Ballinger Price (Century). Life in a lighthouse is an unusual background in fiction. So here is the charm of novelty added to several others. Unlucky Joan Hastings is stranded at a summer resort without "a reservation." On the ground that they must "assist persons in distress," the lightkeeper and his wife give her shelter. There is a lurking romance which culminates at the very end. Meantime the love of ships and the sea absorbs every one, from the wistful little crippled boy to Cap'n Bijah, one-time master of the ill-fated "Bella S." It is a book which will be keenly appreciated by the host of Americans who inherit the great sea-faring traditions of their race.

Glen of the High North, by H. A. Cody (Doran). A stirring adventure story of events in the Alaskan gold fields. A young newspaper man starting on the quest for a missing man is diverted from his immediate undertaking by the sight of a charming face. Then begins a pretty romance and a series of thrilling events. The story is fully up to the standard of the author's best work.

A Poor Wise Man, by Mary Roberts Rinehart (Doran). The Book of Ecclesiastes tells of a city powerfully besieged by a great king. But it was delivered by the wisdom of a poor wise man. This is the story of a struggle between Labor and Capital with subtle anarchist forces working for the ruin of a modern American city. And all the while the huge middle class, "nine-tenths of the community, were milling like sheep with a wolf around." It was a humble clerk, possessed of a great heart, a fine brain and a thin pocketbook, who taught the people how to help themselves. Aside from politics and philosophy the story is extremely interesting, full of life and of optimism.

The Big-Town Round-Up, by William MacLeod Raine (Houghton Mifflin). The Big-Town is New York. Clay Lindsay, of a great ranch in Arizona, comes in conflict with the gunmen of the great city. It began on the train coming East, where he first met Durand the prize fighter and ward boss, and for good reasons threw him off the train. That was the first of a series of events in which the two come into conflict. Lindsay beats the gunmen at their own game. He is trapped more than once, but he meets every emergency effectively, and there is a fine romance, too, in which he proves equally fortunate. It is a live story with very satisfactory hero and heroine.

Also Ran, by Mrs. Baillie Reynolds (Doran). An intensely interesting story of mingled mystery and romance. Nurse Pennant is an attractive, courageous, efficient and satisfactory heroine. Most of the action occurs in the wild and picturesque Dale country of England. The time is in the last months of the war. Jacynth Pennant returns home to become involved at once in a mystery which deepens as the story proceeds. There never was such a love story. But finally the mystery is solved and the conclusion will satisfy the most exacting reader.

High Life, by Harrison Rhodes (McBride). A long story and six short ones comprise this collection and the short ones are the weightier. "The Importance of being Mrs. Cooper" will be remembered as the curious account of an unexisting woman. "The Sad Case of Quag" relates the hopeless love affair between a British Museum Curator and a bustling widow from Wisconsin. "High Life" burlesques the royalties who foregathered in Switzerland during the war.

Anne, by Olga Hartley (Lippincott). A heroine who has the quality of "making more admirable people seem dull" is sure to blaze a tortuous path in life. Anne's story is full of breathless excitement from the age of fifteen when she becomes the ward of two young men to the rather mature period when she gives up

Houghton Mifflin The Big-Town Round-Up her pet amusement of being a runaway wife. She is honest and guileless and she has an exasperating husband. Yet no wonder her dearest friend expresses a desire to shake her. Never disturbing the story but reinforcing it, there runs the thread of a new, sterner social philosophy. Perhaps it will soon be unfashionable to "sneer at decency by calling the austerer virtues banal." And the woman who promptly flies to the divorce court may yet be called a poor sport. The struggle for a religious faith is another problem attached to this novel of varied interests.

THE TERRIBLE ISLAND, by BEATRICE GRIMSHAW (Macmillan). The action of this story begins in New Guinea, whence an expedition sets forth for a mysterious island which is said to be a source of some kind of exceedingly valuable treasure. But many men who have been there have come away blind. A beautiful heroine walks out of the sea but has lost her memory. Altogether the story abounds with mystery and adventure, is unusual and well written. In the end all is solved and everything is satisfactory.

THE AGE OF INNOCENCE, by EDITH WHARTON (Appleton). New York of the seventies was in the happy "age of innocence" or, at least, the women were. The social circle was so small that literally everybody knew everybody else. Outward respectability was its god. Certain fringes in the way of disreputable relatives were either ignored or endured with more or less fortitude. Into this society, "damnably dull, with no character, no color, no variety," comes the Countess Olenska, a returned native. Soon there occurs a duel between her and one of the "innocent" wives. It is a curious struggle. The whole story is woven perfectly without a loose thread or rough knot anywhere.

THE TRUMPETER SWAN, by TEMPLE BAILEY (Penn Pub. Co.). Of finer fiber than the author's former works and quite as pleasing and amusing as a story. The theme is parabolic, based on the fact that the trumpeter swan sounds its notes after it has disappeared from sight. So the hero, a returned soldier, holds to his philosophy that the men who dreamed dreams in the great conflict should keep on looking for their fulfillment in commonplace days. It is a satisfaction to see how well the story carries out the theme, reflecting both the disillusionment and the idealism of our own day. The scenes are set in Virginia, Boston and Nantucket.

LADY LILITH, by STEPHEN MCKENNA (Doran). The whims and caprices of Lady Barbara at once annoyed and fascinated the London smart set. In her search for novel experiences and emotions she rode rough-shod over other people's lives. Whether the situation in which she finds herself at the end of the book is one which will not yield to her usual methods is presumably to be answered in the next volume of the series of three which Mr. McKenna is planning. This series is to bear the general title of The Sensationalists. Finishing the last chapter of Lady Lilith, one reaches for the dictionary to determine whether sensationalist and neurotic are synonyms.

BLIND, by ERNEST POOLE (Macmillan). A man blinded in the war looks back over his varied career with the keen vision of mind and memory. His early days were divided between a dignified Connecticut homestead and a New York mansion. The call of the slums drew him to sympathetic investigation and to the vigorous use of his pen. It was the time when the frivolous went "slumming" and ardent souls worked under such reformers as Riis. His thoughts and deeds and those of his clan are traced to the time when blinded by their prosperity and ambitions, all are caught up into the Great War. The narrative is fictitious but many of the hopes and fears and sharp impressions must be Mr. Poole's own. Readers of "The Village" will certainly think so. The work is a rhapsody, high strung, even hysterical at times. In some episodes he rises to greater heights than in others. But to read it all is an experience worth having.

Houghton Mifflin The Hidden Treasure of Rasmola

NO DEFENCE, by GILBERT PARKER (Lippincott). Something over a hundred years ago Ireland was in upheaval as now. Dyck Calhoun is a typical hero of a fantastic time, brave, reckless, scrupulously honorable. His evil genius in "Dublin, the witch's kitchen," is a man much older, a traitor and faithless to all who ever trusted him. When he is murdered, suspicion falls on Dyck who from chivalrous motives, makes "no defense" and all his hopes in life are snuffed out. But his career is only just begun. The strongest part of a strong story shows him as a leader of the famous Mutiny at Nore when the impressed and abused British sailors rose against their oppressors. Later he appears as a Jamaican planter during the "Maroon" uprising. Finally the clogging mystery, understood all along by the reader, becomes clear to all concerned and the end is crowned with love and happiness.

HANNAH BYE, by HARRISON S. MORRIS (Penn Pub. Co.). A quiet story, in keeping with its Quaker background, yet suffused with the passions of tragedy and of loyalty.

THE WILDERNESS MINE, by HAROLD BINDLOSS (Stokes). A story in three parts with a title which belongs to the middle one. The chain of events begins in England and there the climax is reached. But it is in the Canadian wilderness that the hero finds an opportunity to break up an old family feud which parted him from his love. Though this novel lacks the author's usual spontaneity, it displays a certain practiced skill, especially in drawing contrasts between life in the old world and the new.

Little, Brown The Gester of Duke Jocelyn

THE SWORD OF THE SPIRIT, by ZEPHINE HUMPHREY (Dutton). This study of the complications which beset the path of the religious devotee is the author's finest piece of work. A young matron is the central figure. Educated in a French convent she has become an ardent mystic, absorbed in ritual. Returning to her home town she finds satisfaction in an Episcopal church which is evolving into the "highest" form. Simple Christians will experience an irksome sense of strain in the working out of the situation but the outcome is sane. The two priests and the "Sisters" are interesting characters and the problems on which they are working are eminently worth wide consideration.

MARY-GIRL, by HOPE MERRICK (Dutton). This posthumous story by Mrs. Leonard Merrick, tells of the tragic career of a young woman taken out of her humble environment and unsettled for her ordinary life by a period of service with a wealthy family. Chosen to be foster-mother for an infant in the castle, forbidden to see her own husband and child for a year, at the end of the period she returns to endure a series of experiences and temptations which are overwhelming. It is a pathetic and hardly probable tale in which scarcely a character is attractive, least of all the Quaker preacher. It certainly is not a fair presentation of that particular phase of the religious life.

JOHN SENESCHAL'S MARGARET, by AGNES AND EGERTON CASTLE (Appleton). An English soldier returning from the Syrian Campaign, badly wounded, is identified as John Seneschal, though he denies the statement and claims that he buried Seneschal. At the same time he cannot tell what his name really is. Margaret was engaged to Seneschal and accepts this man as her lover supposing that he was temporarily deluded. He is thus, quite innocently, thrust into the rôle of impostor and many queer situations follow. The story is well worked out.

LUCINDA, by ANTHONY HOPE (Appleton). A study in feminine psychology. Lucinda is a beautiful woman much admired by several men. On the brink of marriage with one of them, an Englishman, she disappears and appears later as the wife of an erratic Italian. It is a queer story and well written, as might be expected of this author.

Out-of-Doors Books

IN BERKSHIRE FIELDS, by WALTER PRICHARD EATON (Harpers). In the Berkshire hills "the foxes still bark and the deer browse" and even wildcats are plentiful. These delightful chapters, however, deal mainly with the more familiar creatures, Jim crow, the cheerful chickadee, hawks and owls, ducks, herons, swallows, sparrows and other birds. There is a charming chapter on Forgotten Roads and another on Little Folks that Grow, and another, "In Praise of Trees." So Mr. Eaton describes the great variety of natural life in a way that will delight all lovers of nature as well as those who are familiar with the beautiful Berkshire country.

THE HIDDEN TREASURE OF RASMOLA, by ABRAHAM MITRIE RIHBANY (Houghton Mifflin). This is a record of an actual experience in the boyhood of Mr. Rihbany in his Syrian home. The bit of adventure in the search for hidden treasure gives spice to the sketch but its chief interest to American readers will be the glimpse it gives into the habits customs and mental characteristics of the Syrian people. It is a very interesting little book delightful in its humor and its fine literary style.

The Spell of Brittany, by Ange M. Mosher (Duffield). An intimate description of the quaint people of Brittany and their customs, the picturesque corner of France in which they live and their unique folk-lore handed down from long ago. The author's love for Brittany and Breton folk is made contagious in her charming record of what she has seen and learned among them. The book is well illustrated with scenes and portraits.

Choice Essays

American Ideals, by Theodore Roosevelt (Putnam). In nothing written by Mr. Roosevelt is his philosophy of life better set forth than in this volume. It is fittingly chosen, then, as the book to present in fine form as a kind of memorial. Hermann Hagedorn writes an admirable introduction and nineteen excellent photographs of Mr. Roosevelt, taken at various periods of his remarkable career, adorn the volume. It is a handsome gift book, which will be very acceptable to any one of his devoted followers. It is a good book also to put into the hands of the younger men of the rising generation.

Adventures and Enthusiasms, by E. V. Lucas (Doran). Whatever Mr. Lucas writes is enjoyable to lovers of good English style and fine humor. This collection of delightful essays, selected from various volumes by the author which have appeared in England, should receive a warm welcome from appreciative Americans.

The View Vertical, by Winifred Kirkland (Houghton Mifflin). An essayist's chief requirement, individuality, is exhibited in this collection of brief discourses on many topics. The first essay, which gives title to the whole, typifies the author's sane philosophy of life. Some are whimsically familiar like the dissertation on adopted parents. Literary criticism takes a considerable share. A good book to be kept at hand for its variety, conciseness and gentle humor.

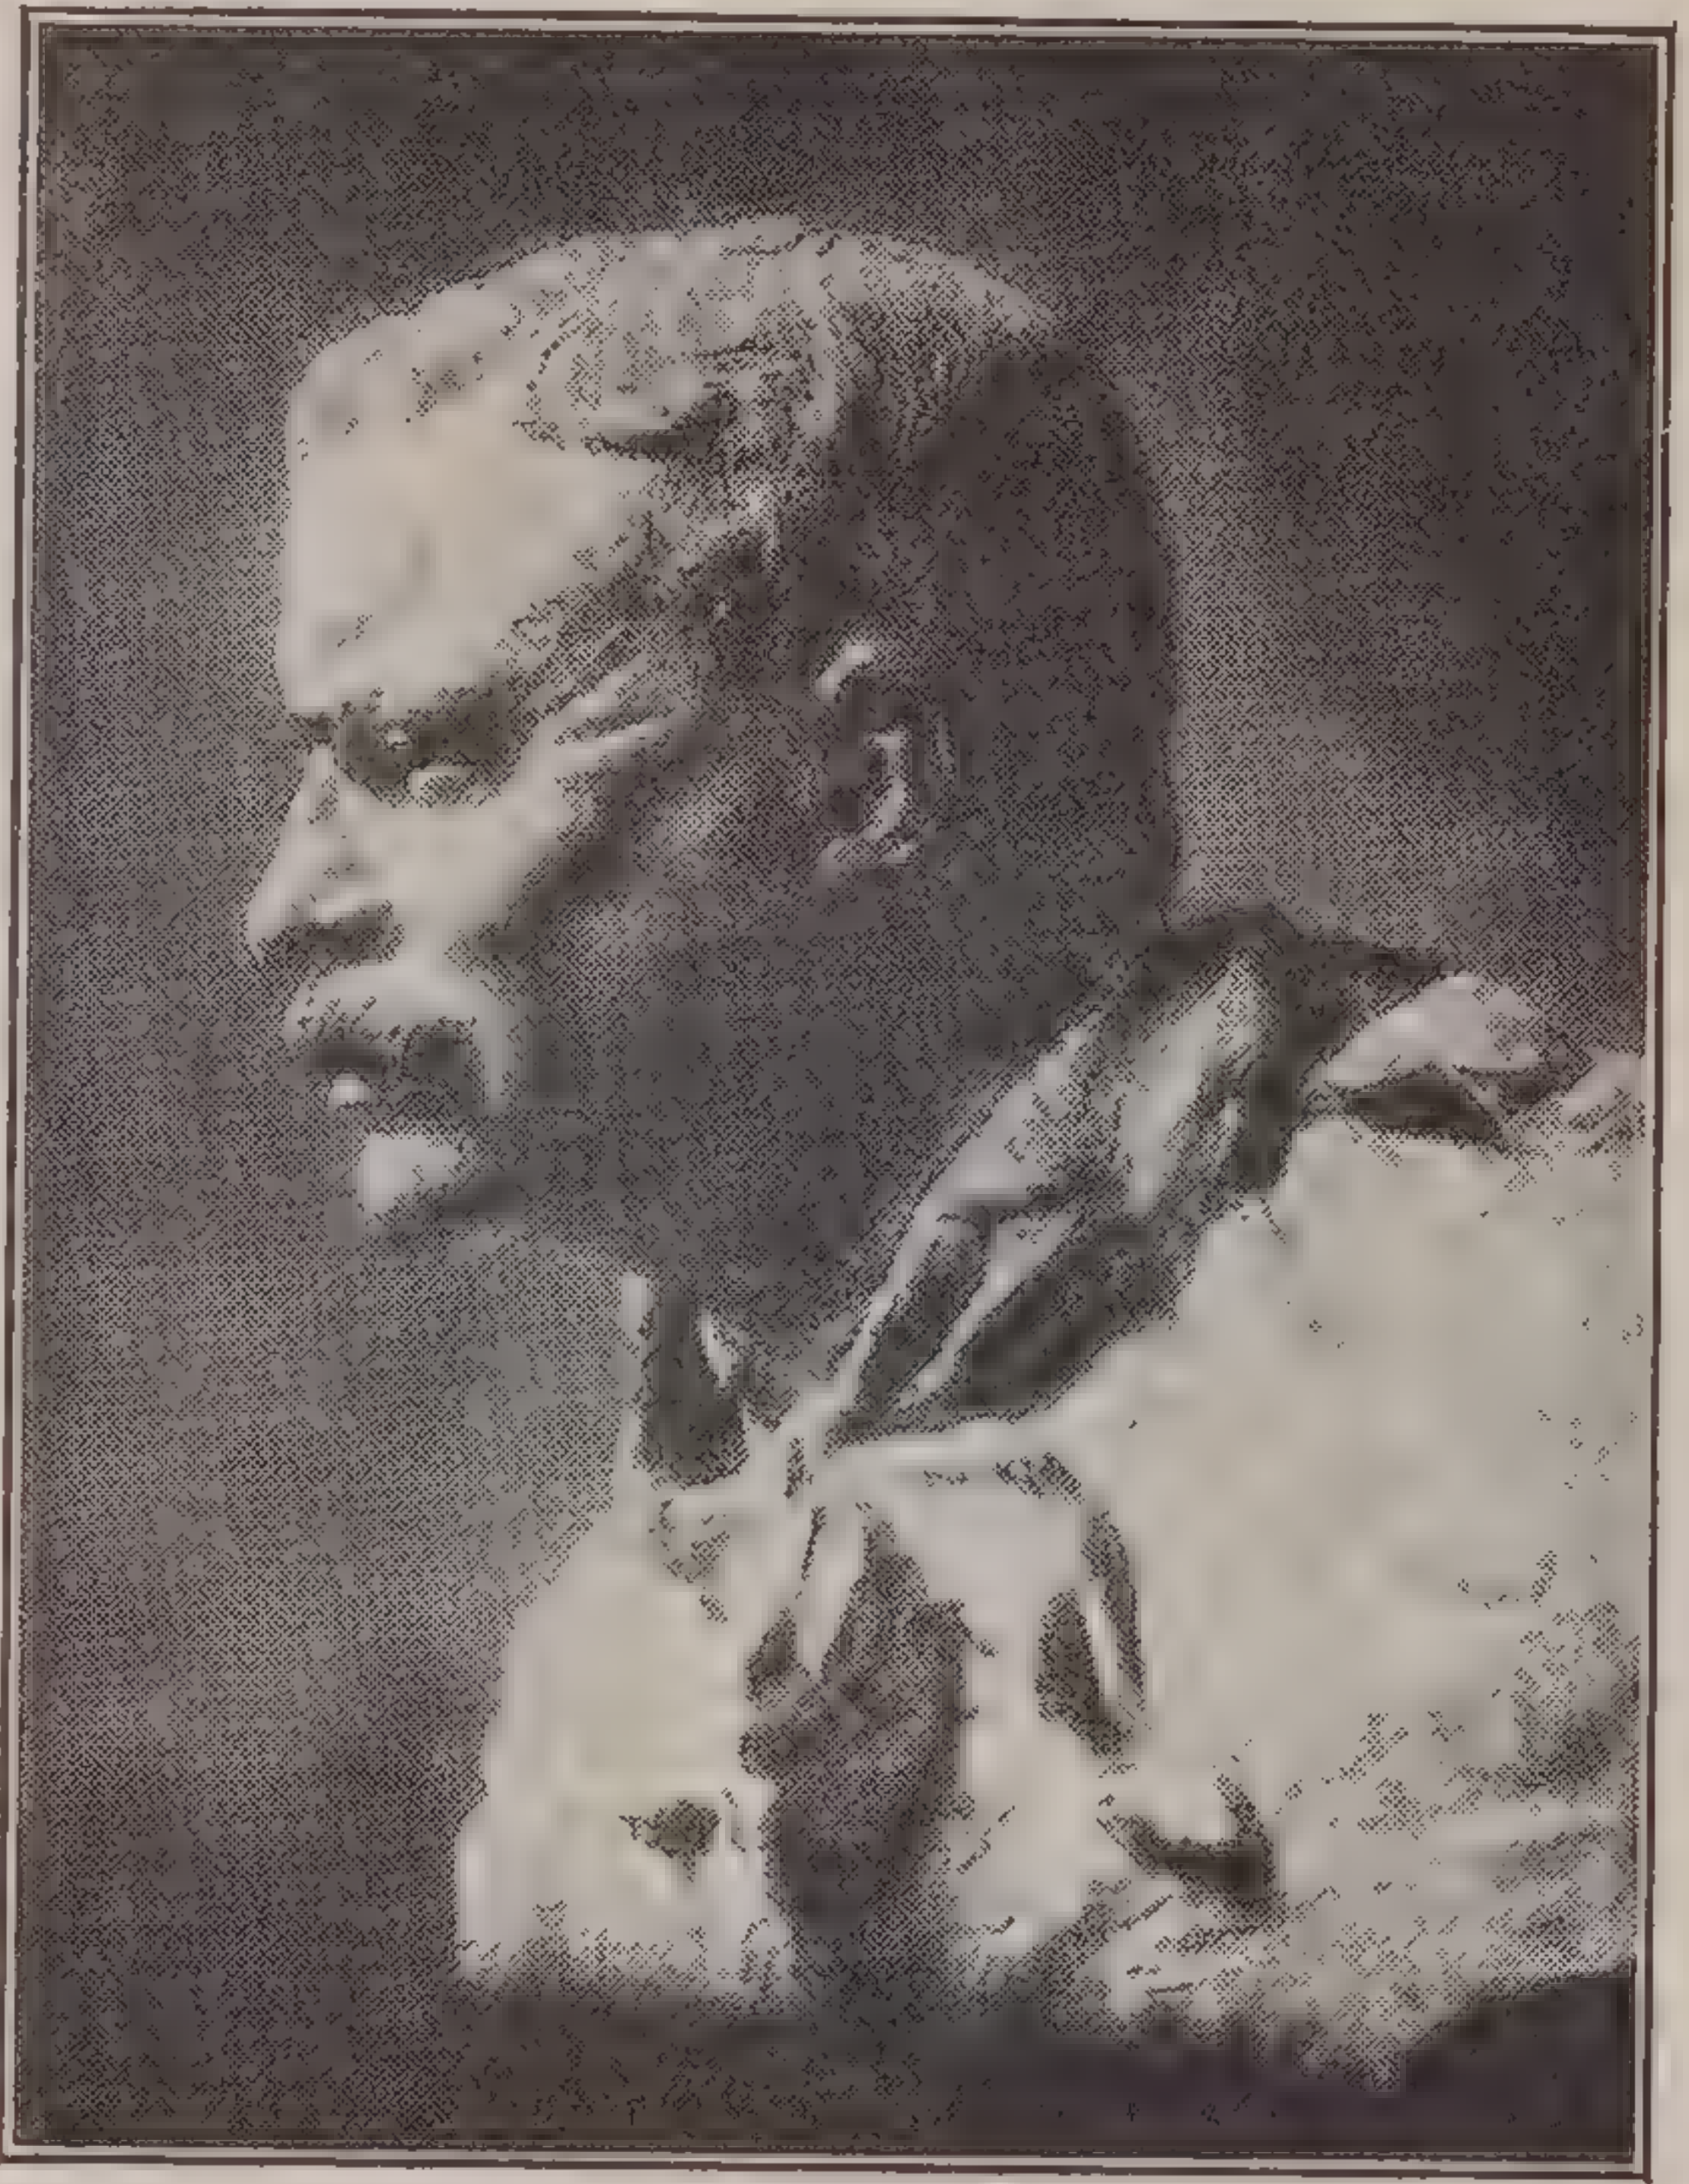
Men and Books and Cities, by Robert Cortes Holliday (Doran). Laughable descriptions of experiences on a recent trip from New York to San Francisco. Mr. Holliday meets or is entertained by Meredith Nicholson, Booth Tarkington, William Marion Reedy, Richard Burton, Fanny Butcher, Paul Elder and others, and makes more or less fun of them all in a genial way. Of course it is well written and entertaining and there is a little serious purpose here and there, perhaps, under the laughter.

Waste Paper Philosophy and Magpies in Picardy, by T. P. Cameron Wilson (Doran). The author, an Englishman of genius, writes scraps of life philosophy from the war front in France to his son, to which are added stirring verse all colored by the heroism and horror of war, of which he himself finally falls a victim.

Peter, by Arthur S. Hardy (Houghton Mifflin). A beautiful tribute in a single brief essay to man's faithful friend, an old dog.

The Dame School of Experience, by Samuel McChord Crothers (Houghton Mifflin). Another volume of delightful essays, marked by that genial humor, wit and wisdom which have characterized the author's previous works, "The Gentle Reader," "The Pleasures of an Absentee Landlord," etc. Specially enjoyable is "Education in Pursuit of Henry Adams," and "The Pilgrims and Their Contemporaries" contains some timely advice.

Points of Friction, by Agnes Repplier (Houghton Mifflin). A volume of essays by Miss Repplier is a welcome tonic, full of wise suggestion and keen analysis of human fads and foibles. The first is a defense of the value of history: "The book of the world is full of knowledge we need to acquire, of lessons we need to learn, of wisdom we need to assimilate." The second is a bold assault upon the sorry inadequacies of the new spiritism. Another, entitled "The Cheerful Clan," is a healthy tilt at the Polyanna type of literature. So the "Beloved Sinner" is a study in the morals of modern prison reform theories, and the "Virtuous Victorian" is a rebuke of the too common sneer at the so-called conventionalism, the proprieties of a past age. There are ten of these essays and each one is worth careful reading and consideration.



Putnam American Ideals

Personal Prejudice, by Mrs. R. Clipston Sturgis (Houghton Mifflin). Readers of that brilliant volume, "Random Reflections of a Grandmother," will know that something entertaining is in store. Such a title as "Husbands and Housekeeping," or this, "My Bolshevist," whets the appetite for reading. A chapter on "Old Friends," is a charming review of writers and books of a past generation.

New Editions

The Scarlet Letter, by Nathaniel Hawthorne, illustrated by Hugh Thomson (Doran). One of the most important gift books of the season is this quarto volume, illustrated edition of the famous classic tale of Puritan colonial days. It is a rather harsh presentation of Puritan morality, but it is a recognized masterpiece as a philosophical study of the problem of sin and remorse. For Introduction to this story, Hawthorne wrote a fascinating autobiographical sketch of his own life in the Custom House, and the artist illustrator has drawn some admirable pictures in which Hawthorne appears. The thirty-one illustrations in color give to this especial edition a pre-eminent position among its numerous competitors.

Harpers In Berkshire Fields

Lorna Doone, by R. D. Blackmore (Dodd, Mead). It would be interesting to know how many editions of this imperishable romance have been published. This new volume has sixteen admirable full-page colored illustrations and will be a fine gift book. The story does not grow less interesting with the change of times and customs.

Westward Ho! by Charles Kingsley (Scribners). This famous volume, which has been called "a prose-epic of muscular Christianity," deals with the heroic deeds of Drake and his companions, Raleigh, Hawkins and Grenville and reaches its climax in the battle with the great Armada. The volume is beautifully illustrated by Wyeth.

Robinson Crusoe, by Daniel DeFoe (Cosmopolitan Book Corporation). A quarto volume with a dozen handsome colored illustrations by N. C. Wyeth and the text in clear type on excellent paper. A good gift book.

The Three Musketeers, by Alexander Dumas (Dodd, Mead). The most famous of Dumas' historical romances. Political intrigue, court life, dueling and fighting provide a ceaseless flow of absorbing incident. A beautiful gift edition, with many colored illustrations by Rowland Wheelwright.

The Sleeping Beauty, told by C. S. Evans and illustrated by Arthur Rackham (Lippincott). It is a pleasure to see this beautiful old story with Arthur Rackham's charming silhouette illustrations. The story is told with some expansion of detail which adds to the interest for children and to the scope for the artist. The younger children will enjoy this.

History and Biography

A History of Sea Power, by William Oliver Stevens and Allan Westcott (Doran). A complete, authoritative and readable history of sea power from the days of triremes and the battle of Salamis in 480 B.C. to the times of the latest warships and the Great War. The authors are both on the academic staff of the United States Naval Academy, and their work is approved and adopted as a textbook in the Academy. Great battles of history are plainly described, and over 100 pages are devoted to the naval history of the Great War.

Nile to Aleppo, by Hector W. Dinning (Macmillan). The author is Captain of the Australian Light Horse, and in this attractive volume he describes, not the fighting but the Palestinian country in which the Australians fought. It is partly the record of his diary and in the very midst of it comes the news of the Turkish armistice. So it is a book of travel rather than of war and gives the author's experiences and impressions of the Jordan Valley, Damascus, Aleppo, Beyrouth, Nablus and other places. Six concluding chapters are reserved for Cairo, where the author was "on leave" when the brief Egyptian revolt occurred. It is a picturesque narrative with some interesting colored or etched illustrations.

Little History of the Great War, by H. Vast (Holt). A good translation of a French review of the war, which presents the complicated record with remarkable clarity. While it is a brief account it is readable and very interesting. The writer's attitude toward Americans is very friendly and appreciative, though he makes the amusing and suggestive statement that at the outbreak of the war we "had no army and no war fleet." Many maps supplement the narrative.

LIBERTY MAP OF NEW EUROPE (Funk & Wagnalls). A fine map, 4 1/3 feet wide by 3 1/2 feet high, printed in colors, indicating the new boundaries and the newly created states. It is provided on Bond paper, map cloth, or mounted with rods, each style with Index.

THE STORY OF OUR COUNTRY, by E. BOYD SMITH (Putnam). A short stirring narrative outlining the history of America from its discovery by the Norsemen to the end of the Great War, with striking colored pictures by the author. It will serve the important purpose of making American history more interesting for children and the important historical facts will stand out more clearly.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS AT WORK, by ARTHUR SWEETSER (Macmillan). The author was a member of the American Peace Commission and is now a member of the League of Nations Secretariat. He tells what the League has already accomplished, which reveals more practical progress toward effective international cooperation in world government than most of us have realized.

THE FRONTIER IN AMERICAN HISTORY, by FREDERICK J. TURNER (Holt). From the founding of Jamestown and Plymouth onward to 1890, the history of the United States has been that of an ever-advancing frontier. A group of modern historians, of whom Professor Turner has been called the leader, are seeking to interpret the past and forecast the future of our "peculiar people" by its pioneer experiences. This volume is made up of addresses and essays put forth at various times on such topics as "The Old West," "The Middle West," "Dominant Forces in Western Life," "Pioneer Ideals." The papers have been put together so as to make a connected whole and their varied dates are an advantage. Not the slavery question, Professor Turner thinks, dominated our history a century ago, but the seizing and developing of a great Empire. The discussion is comprehensive, fresh and stimulating.

SOME PROBLEMS OF THE PEACE CONFERENCE, by CHARLES HOMER HASKINS and ROBERT HOWARD LORD (Harvard University Press). Illuminating reports by two of the experts who accompanied President Wilson to Paris. They make very clear some of the perplexing questions which arose and conclusions reached in the Peace Conference concerning Belgium and Denmark, Alsace-Lorraine, the Rhine and the Saar, Poland, Austria, Hungary and the Adriatic, including the Fiume question, and the Balkans. The Shantung question is not referred to and Russian affairs only as they concerned Poland. But as far as the reports go they are very valuable.

THE RUSSIAN PEASANT AND THE REVOLUTION, by MAURICE G. HINDUS (Holt). Mr. Hindus has written a valuable book historically and as a study of Russian peasant life and character. He traces the long hard course of the peasant through serfdom, czar-rule and revolution, explaining without partisanship the causes underlying the present Bolshevist régime and the hope for the future as the Russian masses learn wisdom by experience in self-government. He has profound faith in the Russian people as they have freedom and education.

THE AMERICAN ENGINEERS IN FRANCE, by WILLIAM BARCLAY PARSONS (Appleton). The author was Colonel of the Eleventh U. S. Engineers. The Great War saw the birth of a new military engineering science, "enormously greater in extent and composition than the old that lay buried under the ruins of Namur and Maubeuge." Not only civil engineering but electricity, chemistry, physics, metallurgy, geology and bacteriology were included in the new science. This fascinating and readable volume explains for the lay reader the whole story of the remarkable undertakings of Americans, certainly not exceled by engineers of any other nation.

Dodd, Mead Three Musketeers

COAL, IRON AND WAR, by EDWIN C. ECKEL (Holt). First the author outlines the history of the industrial development of the leading nations down to the Great War, then discusses the material basis of this development, then considers the human factors, invention, etc., and finally what is the outlook. Among other conclusions are these, that industrial competition with the East is more to be dreaded than war, and the great industrial factor is likely to be China. For the promotion of peace there must be freedom of emigration, freedom of trade and protection of national investments. These are only hints of the important matters considered. The volume is full of information.

CANTEENING OVERSEAS, by MARION BALDWIN (Macmillan). This is the story, in letters written from the places of work in France from 1917—1919, of the service rendered to the French and American armies by an American girl. She must have been among the very youngest group in the service. The sympathy, courage, capacity for hard and trying work revealed by these home letters speak to the heart. It is a very human and very beautiful story; more direct and vivid than any fiction.

Scribners Westward Ho!

WINGS OF WAR, by THEODORE MACFARLANE KNAPPEN (Putnam). An interesting and informing account of the contribution of the United States to aircraft invention, engineering, development and production during the World War. Several chapters are devoted to the story of the Liberty motor.

THE STORY OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS IN WAR, by HENRY P. DAVIDSON (Macmillan). This is the wonderful story of the greatest enterprise in relief work the world has ever seen, told by the Chairman of the American Red Cross War Council. It is an important part of the history of the war, and the facts and figures contained in this book cover a range of human service, sacrificial heroism and practical business administration of which every American may well be proud. This is a cheaper but attractive edition following the fine original edition of last year

THE STORY OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS IN ITALY, by CHARLES M. BAKEWELL (Macmillan). A graphic detailed story of the American Red Cross work in those tragic days of the Great War when Italy suffered so much in our common cause, and through it is woven the record of Italy's heroic part in the war. Many statistics are given and the book is illustrated with photograph pictures.

THE PATERNITY OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN, by WILLIAM E. BARTON (Doran). Many a sensitive soul will be inclined to shrink from a good-sized book devoted to the question, Was the Great Emancipator an illegitimate child? Dr. Barton has met this unpleasant task for the purpose of establishing for all time the facts in the case, and after reading his book one is bound to appreciate the service he has rendered. He proves conclusively that Thomas Lincoln was the father of Abraham, and that the mother, Nancy Hanks, has been shamefully and falsely slandered by the gossips. It seems that there have been seven men, other than Thomas Lincoln, whom rumor has named as father of Abraham Lincoln. Dr. Barton takes each in turn and assembles all of the evidence he could find by diligent search in support of each theory; and it must be admitted that some of this evidence seems plausible; but there is a fatal defect in each case. "They effectually disprove each other and each is disproved also by independent evidence." Moreover, Dr. Barton proves conclusively that Abraham Lincoln was born to Thomas and Nancy Hanks Lincoln in lawful wedlock. To have assembled so much evidence with such positive results is an important achievement in research and literature.

EMPRESS EUGENIE IN EXILE, by AGNES CAREY (Century). The writer spent, in 1886, nearly a year as a kind of "lady in waiting" in Eugenie's informal court maintained at Farnborough Hill. These reminiscences are based upon daily journal records and daily letters sent home. An unusual intimacy came about between the royal lady and this member of her household. Among the quiet accounts of a stiff routine, come many confidences about Eugenie's simple girlhood and her spectacular career as Empress of the French. Monotony was often broken by visitors of many types and there was a never-to-be-forgotten visit to Queen Victoria. The latter celebrity is described as a fussy hostess and a forbidding specimen of a mother. Those clear young eyes observed everything without glamour.

A NEW ENGLAND ROMANCE (Houghton Mifflin). This is the true story of Ephraim and Mary Jane Peabody as told by their sons. Robert Swain Peabody and Francis A. Peabody.

Putnam
PEGGY STEWART

Genealogy, history and biography have been woven together into a remarkable narrative. The marriage was a strange union of "the frugality of the New Hampshire hills and the ample luxury of the merchant adventurers of Salem." Mrs. Peabody was a Derby, a fine lady who bravely and happily followed her circuit-riding missionary husband through all vicissitudes. Much interesting information is compressed within the covers of this small book.

Davis Otis Mears, An Autobiography, edited by H. A. Davison (Pilgrim Press). Dr. Mears rendered distinguished service as pastor of our North Avenue Church in Cambridge and the Piedmont Congregational Church in Worcester. Later on he was "successful pastor in Presbyterian churches in Cleveland and Albany." He was a writer of note, his "The Deathless Book" having been recently reprinted by the Pilgrim Press. The first part of the book consists of intimate and illuminating autobiographical sketches revealing the heart of the man. This extends through the Piedmont pastorate. The remainder of the life is told sympathetically by H. A. Davison. It is a book to inspire and hearten any minister.

For Boys and Girls

The Silver Prince, by Edward Leonard (Appleton). A boy, whose father dies just after discovering a rich vein of silver, comes to be known as the Silver Prince. But he has many difficulties before he wins his inheritance and the story is sufficiently exciting for any boy.

Peggy Stewart, Navy Girl at Home, by Gabrielle E. Jackson (Putnam). One of the best of the season's stories for girls, and the first in a new group of Peggy Stewart stories. The heroine is a charming girl of fourteen, mature for her years and possessed of a wonderful gift of managing horses. Indeed her pets are among the most interesting features of the story. This is an account of her last free year at home and her first forming of outside friendships. The tone of the story is admirable. It is an excellent Christmas gift book.

Reddy Brant, by W. C. Tuttle (Century). For a fourteen-year-old boy Reddy is remarkably shrewd courageous and capable. Eleven stories, all center about his adventures in the "Wild West" where he foils the plots of highwaymen and proves of great assistance to his loyal friend the Sheriff. It is exciting reading and will stir the blood of the youngsters.

Into Mexico with General Scott, by Edwin L. Sabin (Lippincott). The history of the capture of Vera Cruz and the march of American troops to the City of Mexico is faithfully described. Jerry, a drummer boy, who was in it all, is the story teller, weaving the course of events in with his own experiences. It is a good story and the boy who reads it will gain a clear idea of the way war was waged in those days.

The Air Raider, by Capt. Thomas D. Parker, U. S. N. (W. A. Wilde). The energetic, capable and patriotic young hero cannot go with his comrades to France on account of some heart difficulty. But stationed in a munitions factory "out West" he finds excitement enough, even fighting the Boche. What with spies within and without the works he is in a perilous enough situation and is able by his persistence and skill to render a great service to his country and even get into action as perilous as that "at the front."

The Blue Pearl, by Samuel Scoville, Jr. (Century). "The Boy Scouts in the Wilderness" was a great adventure story but this describes even more wonderful events. The same group go to the remotest part of the Alaskan islands in search of a blue pearl which the Indian boy has described. The lumber king again offers a great reward if they add this pearl to his collection. It is an undertaking full of peril but the boys, led by an old hunter, carry it through.

Bob Thorpe in Italy, by Austin Bishop (Harcourt, Brace & Howe). This is a sequel to "Bob Thorpe, sky fighter, in the Lafayette Flying Corps." It tells of the adventures of Bob and George Morgan flying seaplanes across the Adriatic. Bob and an Italian spy were landed and almost captured. Their adventures, while startling, are not more wonderful than what actually occurred to Italian aviators. Boys will enjoy the story.

The Trail of the White Indians, by A. Hyatt Verrill (Dutton). A sequel to "The Trail of the Cloven Hoof" and quite as stirring a story. In this a German submarine base in South America is discovered and destroyed. There are also other thrilling experiences.

The Hidden People, by Leo E. Miller (Scribners). The author is an explorer and in his "Wilds of South America" has revealed his knowledge of the antiquities of the land of the Incas. This boys' book is an exciting story of the adventures of two young Americans seeking hidden treasure and finding a hidden city wherein the Incas still survive. It is fiction, based on fact, so far as ancient customs, dwellings, etc., are concerned.

Boys' Book of Sea Fights, by Chelsea Curtis Fraser (Crowell). A book of thrilling stories of important battles upon the sea. Beginning with the defeat of the Spanish Armada by Sir Francis Drake, succeeding chapters describe the exploits of John Paul Jones, Lord Nelson, Commodore Perry, Admiral Farragut, Admiral Dewey, Admiral Jellicoe and other naval heroes. The book is well illustrated.

The Sheldon Six—Anne, by Grace M. Remick (Penn Pub. Co.). Anne's father called his family the Sheldon Six and appointed himself chauffeur of this imaginary family car and suggested that Anne be the steering gear. The rest of the family included Ellis, an older brother, Rose, next younger than Anne, Connie and the kiddies, Jim and Susan. Anne loved school and thought life a blank failure when she had to give it up. Naturally shy and unsocial and not loving outdoor sports—by the help of several friends she overcomes these handicaps and blossoms out into a real girl. A story for girls from twelve to sixteen.

Macmillan Children of Odin

Putnam Seven O'Clock Stories

Making Good, by Captain G. B. M'Kean (Macmillan). A rousing story of life on a cattle ranch in Northwest Canada. Jack Young, a sixteen-year-old tenderfoot, had a hard time learning the ways of the ranch, but he became in time an expert cowboy and "made good."

A Boy in Serbia, by E. C. Davis (Crowell). This is the story of Milosav, a Serbian farmer's boy, told by himself. It is told in a way so natural, so frank and so full of interesting details that the reader learns a great deal about life in Serbia and especially the experiences of such a boy as Milosav in play, in tending pigs and goats, in school and in the farm home life of that interesting Balkan country. The book is illustrated with real Serbian photographs.

Touchdown—and After, by Gardner Hunting (Macmillan). Here is a boys' school story so tense in its interest and carrying such a dramatic mystery to the very end that one has to read it through before laying down the book. Trouble starts in wild pranks the night after a football victory and the misunderstandings that follow are a severe test of character. Some wholesome lessons are learned, even to the profit of the hero of the tale as well as to the discipline of the chief trouble-maker.

Oh, Virginia! by Helen Sherman Griffith (Penn Pub. Co.). The title means that "Virginia" was always causing people to exclaim "Oh!" at the things she did. Most of the time she was called "Jinks" and she was always getting into scrapes. How she fared in and after her "Great Adventure." is told as a fitting climax to this interesting story for girls from nine to fourteen.

Cousin Nancy and the Lees of Clifford, by Gene Stone (Crowell). A really good story for girls. It is about a lively Western family living near the Sierra Nevada mountains. An Eastern cousin accustomed to ease and luxury, comes into the family and the experiences that follow while they are getting adjusted to each other make a wholesome breezy narrative full of good times and leading to good luck.

STORIES, by JULIANA HORATIO EWING (Duffield). The author is best known by the opening story, a children's classic, Jackanapes. Those who know Jackanapes will be glad to read Mary's Meadow, The Story of a Short Life, So-So, a Very Ill-Tempered Family, Lob Lie-by-the-Fire, The Peace Egg, Daddy Darwin's Dovecote, Dandelion Clocks, Old Father Christmas, and The Kyrkegrim Turned Preacher, all of which are in this volume and some of them of the same caliber as her masterpiece. The book is well illustrated with eight full-page pictures in color by Edna Cooke, is beautifully bound and well printed.

TONI, THE LITTLE WOOD CARVER, by JOHANNA SPYRI (Crowell). Here is another delightful Alpine story by the author of "Heidi." It is the story of a little boy who lived in a little stone house among the mountains. Toni had some very trying experiences but finally his great desire is realized and he and his mother are very happy. Yes, indeed, it is a good story and well told.

QUARTERBACK BATES, by RALPH HENRY BARBOUR (Dodd, Mead). Mr. Barbour is a deservedly popular writer of boys' football stories and here is one of his best. It is full of thrilling sport, clean and wholesome, and tells the experiences of a boy of seventeen who goes through trials and disappointments with the spirit that is bound to win until he makes his school team and finally finishes the season in a game that he helps to win with one of his brilliant runs. Good pictures illustrate the book.

For the Younger Children

OLD FRENCH FAIRY TALES, by COMTESSE DE SEGUR (Penn Pub. Co.). A beautiful volume of charming fairy tales all teaching indirectly but plainly that virtue and filial love are always recompensed. There are good and bad fairies, witches and enchantments, hard tasks for the heroes or heroines and always happy endings with faithfulness rewarded and evil doings punished. The numerous illustrations in color and in black and white will charm both old and young.

AWAKENING, by JOHN GALSWORTHY (Scribners). A delightful story of the mental awakening of a lovable eight-year-old boy. He was fond of reading, had a vivid imagination and acted out the doings of his heroes. Apparently he had no playmates, but he had a wise and loving father and mother who watched him with affectionate care. For a while his father held first place in his heart. A part of the process of "awakening" is his increasing response to mother love. The illustrations by R. H. Santor are amusing and of exceptional interest.

THE CHILDREN OF ODIN, by PADRAIC COLUM, illustrated by WILLY POGANY (Macmillan). With wonderful skill Mr. Colum has retold in this book the old tales of Norse mythology—the stories of the dwellers in Asgard, the wanderings of Odin, the plottings and punishment of Loki, the adventures of Sigurd with his mighty weapon, Gram, the sword of the Volsung's, the story of Sigmund and of Brynhild, and finally the death of Sigurd and the Twilight of the Gods. Not only children will enjoy these wonderful tales but their elders also and all lovers of folk-lore.

THE CHILDREN'S GREAT TEXTS OF THE BIBLE, edited by JAMES HASTINGS, in six volumes (Scribners). These children's sermons were originally published under the title of "Virginibus Puerisque" in The Expository Times. The texts used run seriatim through the Bible. The sermons are on a high level of language and style and do not "talk down" to the boys and girls. None of the many illustrations used are trivial. Many of them are from British history and heroes. The titles are taking, A Shining Staircase, Jacob's Ladder; Camouflage, when Jacob's Mother disguised him; The Making of a Great Man—"they took him (Joseph) and cast him into a pit." They would furnish thought not only for children's sermons—but for sermons for children of a larger growth.

MASTER FRISKY, by CLARENCE HAWKES (Crowell). A dog story in which the dog hero and the other animals talk like people, and s children who read the book find out how pe animals probably feel and what they would sa about things if they really could talk.

SEVEN O'CLOCK STORIES, by ROBERT GORDO ANDERSON (Putnam). A book for children be tween five and nine years old about the goo times that three children and three dogs wh live on a farm enjoy. Each chapter makes fine bed-time story—twenty of them—and ther are twenty colored pictures by E. Boyd Smit and very good pictures too.

A NURSERY STORY OF THE BIBLE, by LOUIS M. PLEASONTON (Stokes). The stories from th Old Testament and the New Testament told i simple language following very closely th Scripture text without explanations or com ments. The illustrations are full page and ar done by Florence Choate and Elizabeth Curtis Those done in color are excellent. It will mak an excellent Christmas present for children o primary age.

THE SANDMAN'S MOUNTAIN, by LOUIS DODG (Scribners). A very pretty book for father o mother to read to a small boy or girl. It de scribes the wonderful experiences that little five year-old Giddy had one afternoon when h climbed Sandman's Mountain and met the sin i-cal Eagle, and the Three Bears, and the Sor ceress, and found the Crystal Jar. His mothe thought he had been asleep and dreaming. Bu it was very real to Giddy.

THE AIRPLANE SPIDER, by GILBERT MURRA (Little, Brown). Boys and girls from six to te will enjoy this entertaining and instructiv story about the life and habits of the tarantul spider. While told in story form, frequent ref erences to Fabre indicate that the author ha the highest authority for his statements.

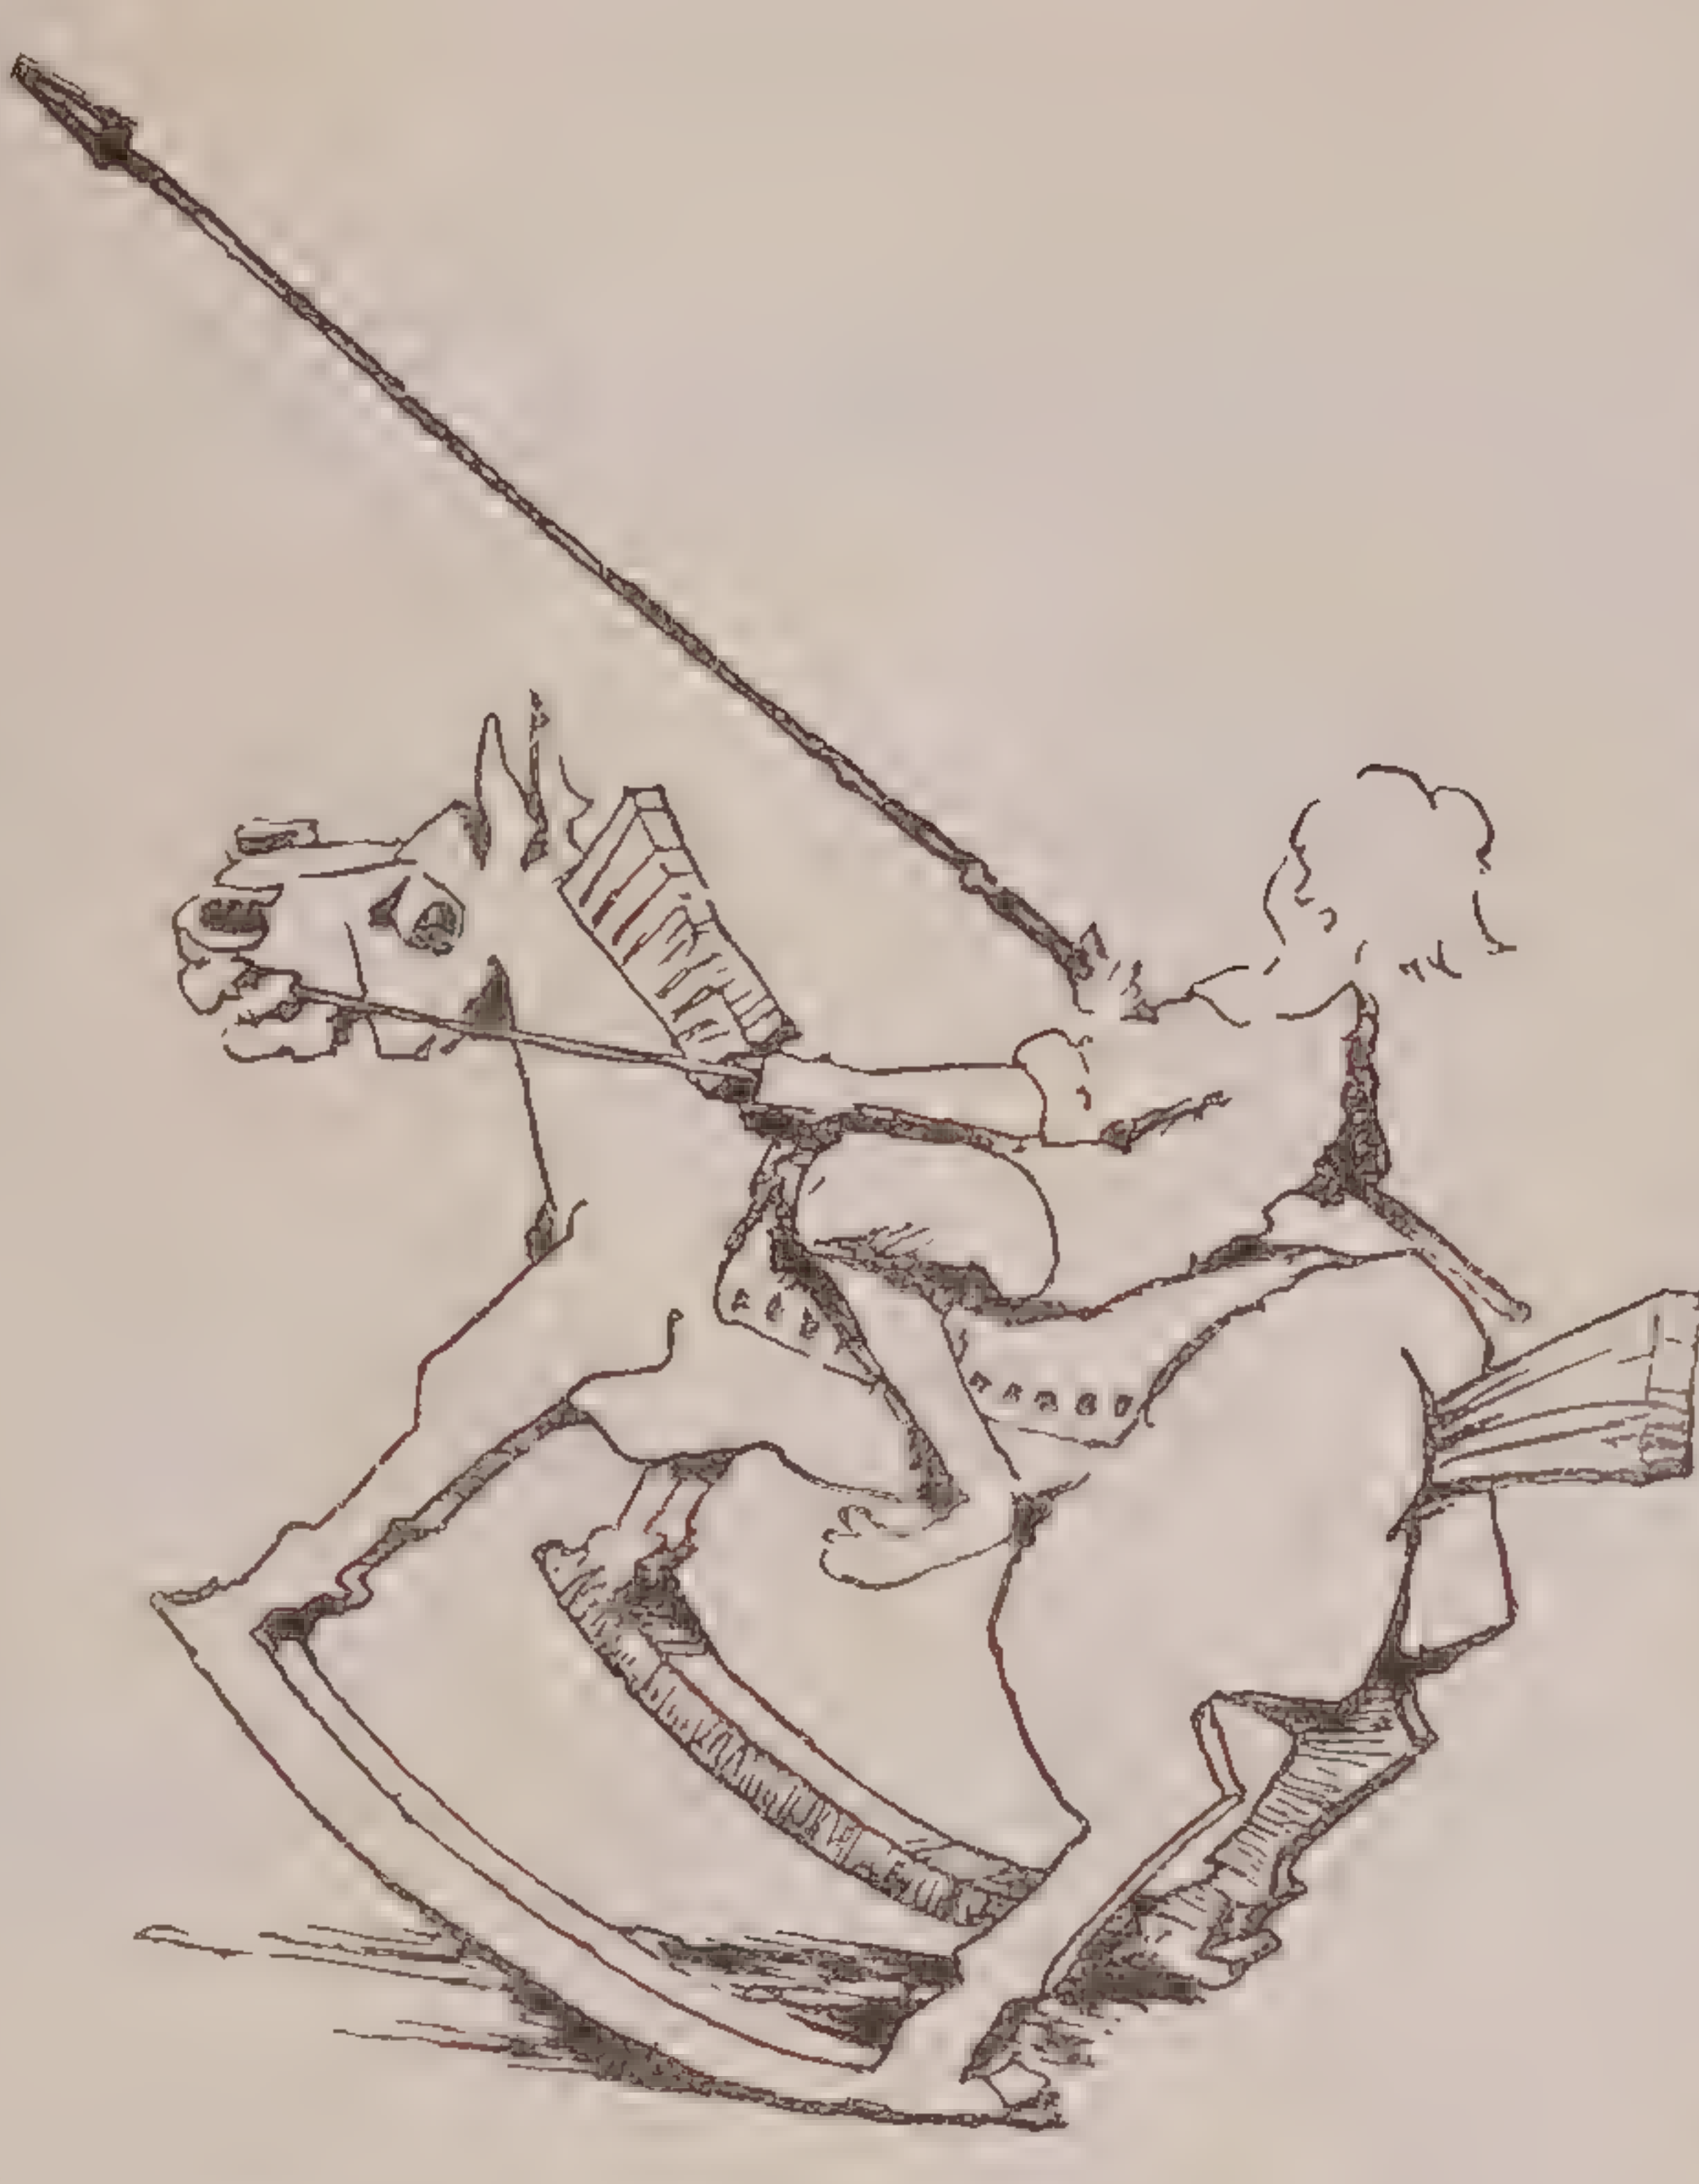
THE CHILDREN'S JESUS, by E. B. TRIS (Macmillan). The story of the Master's lif well told in simple style for children, with illus trations.

PROPHETS IN ISRAEL AND JUDAH, by E. B TRIST (Macmillan). Little stories for childre of some of the Old Testament prophets, so tol as to impress the lessons of each.

A LITTLE MAID OF MAINE, by ALIC TURNER CURTIS (Penn Pub. Co.). On of the best of the excellent "Little Maid series. There really were two sisters liv ing in Machias in Revolutionary day whose bravery helped to win "the firs naval battle." In the story much is tol about the way they worked and playe and this is entertaining. But the thril ing part deals with the planting of th Liberty Pole and capturing an Englis gunboat.

ANITA, by BERTHA B. AND ERNES COBB (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard). A stor of the Rocky Mountains is the sub-titl and explains the book. Anita, a child o the Far West, grew up in Colorado. He father is full of information of the coun try and the conditions which surroun them. His explanations of the metal and minerals, the rivers and the canyon the poisoned waters and the crystals, i fascinating and informing. Anita see the war dance of the Arapahoes, rides o the mail stage when it was attacked, ha a narrow escape from wild beasts, an has plenty of other thrills in the roug but delightful life of the range. Beside other fine illustrations there are thirt "home-made" drawings which are full o laughter.

CHATTERBOX FOR 1921 (Page). A ever-popular English annual picture stor book. Like the many similar "annuals that have gone before this one, for over generation, it contains scores of just th kind of pictures and stories that childre like.



Rode his rocking-horse .....

Scribners Awakening

Scribners The Sandman's Mountain

THE FINANCIAL PROGRAM OF M

Calls for an Every Member Ca

Our Joint Promotional Agency, T

Desires to Serve the Churches in the Inter

By Preparing Helpful Publicity
By Providing Necessary Materials
By Making Successful Methods Generally Known
By Furnishing the Assistance of Experienced Workers

The Churches and the Movement are Opposed to a Drive.

All Favor Strengthening Normal Financial Methods.

The Best Known Method is

THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

Planned with utmost care. Carried out in a Spirit of Prayer. Followed up with Fidelity,—the Aim Being to Secure as Many Subscribers for Benevolence as for Home Expenses.

Apply to your Regional Director or to

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT
287 FOURTH AVENUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.

NY CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

vass in the Month of December

---

e Congregational World Movement

s both of Home Expenses and Benevolence

The best publicity is a frank statement of the objects themselves. Use the Survey, the Digest, The Fine Art of Giving, The Congregationalist. The Movement will supply subscription cards for benevolences free; also for Current Expenses at 25 cents per hundred. Collection envelopes for benevolence, free, The Survey, free, at the rate of one for twenty members; additional copies at a nominal price. The Digest, free, in any quantity. The Fine Art of Giving, free, in any quantity. Stewardship enrollment cards, free, in any quantity, and other valuable materials concerning which correspondence is solicited.

The Movement desires to promote methods which have proven successful in thousands of churches, by furnishing expert helpers in organizing the work; by providing a Plan Book, the "E. M. C.," free; by providing a Plan Book on missionary methods, two copies free to each church. Additional copies 10 cents.

Apply to your Regional Director or to

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT
287 FOURTH AVENUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.

IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL

DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS

The Kingdom of Heaven

International Sunday School Lesson for Dec. 12. Matt. 13:44-58.

Note that the lesson does not call for a definition of the Kingdom of Heaven. It asks the question, What is the Kingdom like? That means that it is to be described in the terms of something that we know. This is far better than to try to attempt a definition.

It is Like Hidden Treasure. This makes us think of the days when we dreamed of Captain Kidd. It was a most real experience in the times of Jesus when there were no safety deposit vaults and men depended on the skill and secrecy with which they could hide their possessions. Often a field revealed some ancient hiding place as it was worked over. Note the accuracy of the story. A man found the hidden treasure; but he did not allow it to remain in the place where he had found it; he hid it over again in order that he might be sure to have it when he should have bought the field. Naturally the moral right of the man to buy the field under the circumstances arises; but it is not an essential part of the story. What Jesus is trying to show is that the treasure itself is so precious that the man who has found it is ready to make any sort of a sacrifice in order to secure it. We shall miss this point if we suffer ourselves to be drawn aside into the fruitless discussion of the moral issue involved in the story. Suggest some practical way in which we could show as much eagerness to obtain the Kingdom.

It is Like the Precious Pearl. We now see an Oriental pearl merchant. He is an expert in precious stones and jewels, but the one thing he buys and sells is pearls. He has discovered a treasure. It is a pearl so much finer in size and quality than any other that he has seen or handled that it can be compared with nothing else. He must have it at any cost. So he sells all the other pearls that he has in his collection and buys this one finest of all.

Jesus tells us that the Kingdom of Heaven is our greatest good. It is worth so much more than anything else that we can afford to give up anything else and put all our time and work on making this one gift ours. Do we believe it? Let us make an inventory of our ruling desires: can we honestly say that what Jesus called the Kingdom of Heaven is the supreme object of our quest in daily life? If not, is it reasonable to make it so? How can we do it?

It is Like a Drag-Net. The drag-net gathers many kinds of fish into itself. Some of these are valuable and some are quite useless; the net does not make any discriminations; the fisherman knows what to select and what to save. This raises the question of unworthy members in the Kingdom and what is to be done with them. We recall the principle of the tares and the wheat. The fact is that these "black sheep" do get into the flock. There is no way in which we can keep them out so long as men are the masters of their own decisions and decide what they will relate themselves to in this world. But no fisherman ever stopped his business because he caught some useless fish in his net. The farmer does not stop cultivating his fields because weeds grow on his land. Nor should the confidence which we have in the Kingdom of God or in the church be impaired because we find that there are unworthy persons included in its fellowship. The only reason leading men to counterfeit genuine coins is the worth of the thing that they imitate; the only reason that leads the black sheep to try to get in is the recognized worth of the fold.

It is Like the Foundation of a Permanent House. Every builder knows the importance of the foundation on which he rears the structure of a house. If it is not deep enough or broad enough the success of the whole work is rendered impossible. Every life has to be grounded in certain bed-rock convictions. The finest and firmest foundation for a human life is the principles and practice of the Kingdom of God. Jesus defined the fundamentals of noble living and the highest wisdom consists in erecting the structure of life upon them. What are the few fundamental propositions concerning the way of life which we derive from the teachings and the conduct of Jesus? Make a list of five at least. Now how can we work out a practical program that will issue in putting these principles into practice day by day in our ordinary conduct?

Ozora S. Davis

Chicago Theological Seminary.

The Return of Jesus

The So-called Premillennial Second Coming

In last week's article we saw that even the disciples' minds were so completely possessed with the political idea of the Kingdom that Jesus' failure to resist arrest made them cowards, and his crucifixion filled them with despair. If this was true of the disciples to whom he tried to convey the truer idea, what must have been the situation with the multitude!

Had not the prophets looked forward to a righteous king out of the root of Jesse upon the throne of David? Had not the apocalypses of David, Enoch and others promised defeat for their enemies through divine intervention and a political kingdom of God with the capitol at Jerusalem? Could it be possible that the real Messiah should teach in such an atmosphere as this and not have many of his sayings misinterpreted?

Surely the apostles would feel that they, the apocalyptic writers, and the great mass of Jewish people could not have been mistaken in their expectation as to a divine intervention and as to what the Messiah would do. So, while the crucifixion of Jesus compelled them to interpret his work more nearly in accord with his own idea, it was impossible for them to give up the idea of a Messiah such as they thought the prophets foretold and a divine intervention such as the apocalyptists promised.

Here, so it seems to me, and not in the actual teaching of Jesus, is the source of the so-called Second Coming idea, as we have it in our New Testament. Jesus did not fulfill prophetic hopes, as his people interpreted them; he did not fulfill the promises of the apocalyptists. Thus, they concluded, he will come again in the flesh and do these things.

We have seen that the disciples' minds were so pre-empted by the wrong ideas of the Kingdom and the Messiah that they completely misunderstood Jesus' idea during his earthly ministry. There is no reason to suppose that they and the New Testament writers were infallible in this and other particulars in the years following. Certainly no one who reads the accounts of the Sermon on the Mount in Matthew and Luke and the variations in many other accounts can claim verbal or even full thought accuracy. Matthew doesn't wholly win our confidence as to his interpretation and use of prophecy when he interprets Hosea 11:1 as he does in Matt. 2:15. Peter was hardly infallible. His narrow theology got a serious jolt in the dream experience on the housetop at Joppa and his visit to Cornelius, Acts 10. Paul had to resist him to the face because he stood condemmed. Gal. 2:11-14.

In Mark 13, Matthew 24, and Luke 21 we have a similar account of the destruction of Jerusalem plus other material which many think relates to the Second Coming and the end of the world. Scholars are agreed that Mark's gospel is the earlier and that the story part of Jesus' life in Matthew was taken from Mark. Note the question which Jesus is answering in this chapter, as given in Mark 13:4. Jesus and the disciples come out from the temple. They call his attention to the stones and buildings. Jesus tells them they will all be thrown down, and they asked, "When shall these things be, and what shall be the sign when these things are all about to be accomplished? In Matt. 24:3 there has been added to the question, "and what shall be the sign of thy coming and of the end of the world?"

Luke agrees with Mark as to the essence of the question. In all three accounts it says, "This generation shall not pass away until all these things be accomplished." This indicates that Jesus is here answering the question as we have it in Mark and Luke, about the destruction of Jerusalem, and that there is added in these chapters apocalyptical material from Daniel and other sources. Any other conclusion than that there is material here which Jesus did not utter necessitates the deduction that "generation" has a meaning wholly unusual or Jesus was mistaken. Many of the things mentioned did not occur in that generation; the destruction of Jerusalem did. It is probable that "generation" has its usual meaning and that the apostles, who were saturated with apocalyptic ideas which, they felt must be realized, were mistaken instead of Jesus.

Undoubtedly the disciples and the early Church believed in the early return of Jesus. Paul also shared this belief. But it is interesting to note that in John's gospel written late in the first century this belief is practically lost to sight. The discourse in Matthew, Mark and Luke referred to above is wholly absent from the discourses of the last week as given in John, and instead of a physical coming it is spiritual, the "Comforter," "the Spirit of Truth," is to come. Paul in 1 Thess. 4 and 2 Thess. 2, early epistles, puts great emphasis upon the return of Jesus, which is clearly ex-

(Continued on page 730)

THE HOUR OF PRAYER

Christian Work for Others

Comment on the Midweek Prayer Meeting Topic for Dec. 5–11

BY ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN

Scripture Passage. Luke 10:25-42.

Life as a Social Responsibility. We are members one of another—that is the ultimate Christian fact of living. To be stand-offish or exclusive, to grab what we want and then to run off into some safe corner to enjoy it all by our lonely selves, is the act of a mouse and not of a Christian man. And to avoid action that makes for helpfulness, as the priest and the Levite did in the story Jesus told, is to be an evader of our duty and our destiny. One does not have to go a-hunting to find social obligations which are also neighborly opportunities. They turn up and claim us as we are in the way of our ordinary business, just as they did for the Samaritan in the parable.

Special Responsibilities. They turn up in the family. We are told just now that prohibition has made men surly to their wives and children. Perhaps a surly husband is better than a sloppily good-natured one who spends the money the house needs in drink. But no husband ought to be surly any more than wasteful or drunk. Our families find us out. And the family is one of the biggest opportunities of witness for Christ. We do not have to invent it, or hunt for it. We wake up with it in the morning and we come back to it at night. The same is true of our own particular neighborhood. It is not to be searched for: it is there. Our nation is ours and we are, to the limit of our opportunity, responsible for it. And the world, so far as our influence can reach, is only a bigger neighborhood.

Delegating Responsibility. "Letting George do it" is one of the great sins of the individual church member, as well as of the individual citizen. The Scripture word for it is, "withdrawing the shoulder." Nehemiah says of Israel that "They gave a withdrawing shoulder." And our English translators make the figure even more emphatic when in the book of Zechariah God says of Israel that they "pulled away the shoulder." It is a vivid image of unwillingness. And when we pull away the shoulder some one is likely to fall down. We owed service to our nation in its need and gave it, some of our young men gave it even to death. But there were slackers and refusers then, some of them like those Bergdoll brothers who were enrolled and used their wealth to help them pull away the shoulder. In the needs of the world we cannot hide behind him who ought to work, for we ourselves are he. In the duties of citizens we must assume responsibility. In the church we must be burden bearers with the rest.

Other Men's Jobs and Our Job. That was the sum and substance of the message by which Carlyle tried to help the world—Find your own job, and do it. "And how shall I know my own job?" Do the next thing as well as you can and you will find that nearest duty a rung in the ladder which will help you up to wider vision of the world and deeper satisfaction in the work which is yours especially.

Closet and Altar

THE WAY OF PILGRIMAGE

These all died in faith . . . having confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.—Heb. 11:13.

There lies one of the most tremendous inspirations of life. No man has to perform any painful task or travel any lonely way as an absolute "novitiate." Some one has always gone before him. He may, if he will, see indubitable proof that God will care for him in the fact that he has been with his predecessors.—C. F. Goss.

When we can see his presence in the storm and the darkness as well as in the light and calm of life, then we can find occasions for joy where others see unmitigated grief.—Thomas Yates.

Step after step, feeling thee close beside me,
Although unseen,
Through thorns, through flowers, whether the tempest hide thee
Or heavens serene,
Assured thy faithfulness cannot betray,
Thy love decay.

I may not know, my God, no hand revealeth
Thy counsel wise;
Along the path a deepening shadow stealeth,
No voice replies
To all my questioning thought, the time to tell,
And it is well.

Let me keep on, abiding and unfearing
Thy will always,
Through a long century's ripening fruition,
Or a short day's;
Thou canst not come too soon; and I can wait,
If thou come late.
—Susan Coolidge, abr.

I look back upon the way in which God has made me walk, and truly I must praise him for finding such a way for me. I did not see the way. I did not choose it. At first I thought it could not be God's way, the hills were so high, the rocks were so large, the path so rough and there was so much to make me afraid. Now I see much that God meant and I am glad—glad with great joy. All God's work that I can see is good—the sky, the sea, the earth, all things great and small; but his work to me—to my own life and soul—seems best of all. —Joseph Parker.

We thank thee, Father in Heaven, that thou art ever with us and that thy Spirit is our guide. If the day be lonely, reveal thyself to us as friend and father. If the road seem long, refresh our souls with joyful memories of him who has gone before and is preparing resting places for us as we follow on. And may we be glad for those who have gone before, who endured to the end and been found worthy of the crown of overcoming. In that great companionship, of our Lord and those who love and follow him, may we be faithful. And make us always helpful, as thou givest opportunity, for those who are the companions of our pilgrimage

—Isaac Ogden Rankin.

Words that Help

Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic for Dec. 12–18

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: Wise Sayings That Have Helped Me. Prov. 1:1-6.

Light from the Bible Passage

Here is an instruction book, primarily for the young. It is "a handbook for the journey of life." At first it seems like an odd book to be in our Bible—not religious enough! Times have not changed so greatly that these counsels are out of date. Human nature's elemental needs do not vary. Its teachings aim to build up a happy contentment with life. The wise man is he whose life follows the course appointed by God. Fitting one's self for the highest service to our fellowmen is never selfish. It is our duty to make of ourselves all that we can possibly be. Verse 7 gives the underlying principle of all true living. In the light of that all the wise words of the book take on deeper meaning.

Leads for the Leader

This topic implies primarily a study of the Book of Proverbs. Read as much of it as you can in the week preceding this meeting. Mark the best, the most suggestive proverbs as you go along. Study their intimate relationship to problems in our individual lives. It may be wise to think of the topic as "Wise Sayings that Will Help Me."

As you read, find choice verses regarding—

1. Business conduct and money matters.
2. Management of thoughts and choice of words.
3. Behavior toward the poor and the rich.
4. Our life as friend and as a citizen.

Thoughts for Members

The Book of Proverbs points out the snares and pitfalls which menace the traveler, with the stiles and by-ways which tempt him into transient pleasures but lead in the end to ruin; while, on the other hand, it describes the true prizes of life, which are worthy of pursuit, and portrays in attractive colors those types of manhood which are noble and honorable.—James Stalker.

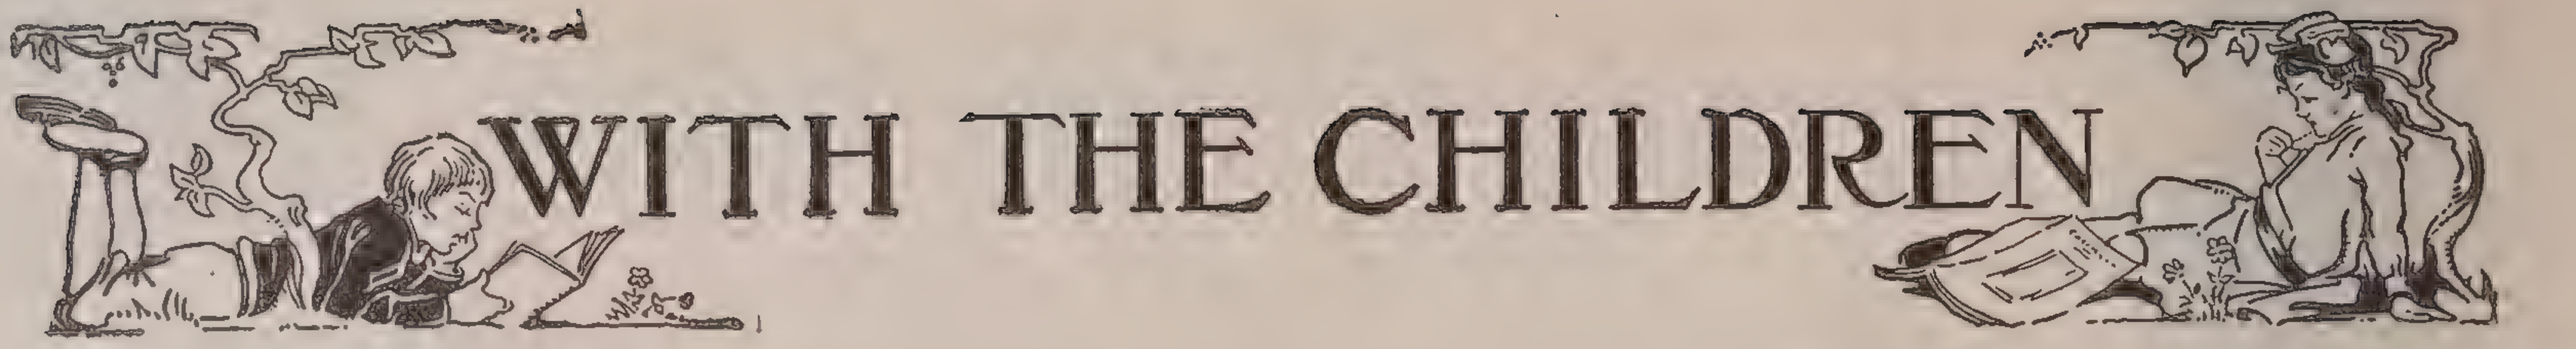
"And we, if we aright would learn
The wisdom it imparts,
Must to its heavenly teaching turn
With simple, childlike hearts."

Honesty, truthfulness, prudence, temperance, justice, generosity and pity, self-control, industry, humility, purity and chastity—such are the virtues extolled and emphasized in Proverbs as the marks of a truly wise man. He who neglects these things and practices their opposites is a "fool."—E. E. Nourse.

"The difference between iron and steel is fire but steel is worth all it costs."

A Moment of Prayer

We thank thee, O Father, that thou dost provide us with such careful counsels for the bettering of our lives. Give us anew a sense of the worth of these words of thy servants of old and may they fit us in fuller measure for the widest service for men and for thee. Amen.



Tales of the Mayflower Children

III. Humility's Pride

By Pauline Carrington Bouve

Synopsis of first installment—Humility Cooper, an orphan of gentle birth, is not pleased at being set to shelling corn with Richard Moore, a serving-boy. When Master Winslow tells her he himself did not scorn to learn the trade of a fustian-maker before leaving Leyden, she accepts the task with better grace.

PART II.

She was walking along briskly when a fair-haired boy of about fourteen years of age called pleasantly to her from a doorway: "You are late, Humility, but see, I have worked fast and done a part of your stint of turkey-wheat as well as my own," and he held up a basket more than half filled. "Mistress Hopkins sent word by Remember Allerton that we should do the shelling here."

"Mistress Hopkins takes much upon her shoulders. Why could not she have sent Constanta or Giles or Damaris to do extra work, if she needs must have it done?"

Richard Moore smiled good-naturedly. "You and I are different, being upon the public charge, and so"—He did not finish, for Humility uttered an angry cry.

"Yea, you and I are different, Richard Moore, even though they make me shell turkey-wheat with you till Doomsday!" and she stamped her foot furiously. "You came to serve the Brewsters; I came with my kinsfolk, the Tillies, and my mother's people are of the gentry in Yorkshire," she said in angry pride.

Richard's blue eyes looked at her calmly. "That may all be true, Humility, but it doth not mend matters for you. The Elder says we are here to make a new way of living and that the best bred man is he who does his work best and most honorably and works faithfully for the comfort and good of all. I do not gainsay that you are better born than I, but you must prove it by what you do and by the way you carry yourself."

"You are become a preacher too, since serving the Brewsters, and since I must work beside you I can but stop my ears!" and she stuck her fingers deep into her little pink ears and gazed at Richard scornfully.

"Then I must needs do all your part and my own," remarked the boy, with some philosophy, "but I did not know 'twas a mark of high birth to shirk what was laid upon one." And he began to shell rapidly as he whistled. This enraged Humility still more, and she turned her back upon her companion after dragging toward her a heap of unshelled ears of maize, for she was not so entirely lacking in true pride as to let him do all of her task.

The children had worked in this way for some time. The dropping of grains into the basket and the whisper of leaves stirred by the breezes outside were the only sounds, for the men were in the fields beyond, or in the forest cutting timber, while the women were busy with spinning or domestic duties in their humble homes.

As they sat bending over the corn, a shadow suddenly darkened the floor. Richard turned and saw a tall, fierce-looking Indian coming through the window opening which had no slide or shutter. The boy's heart gave a great leap of terror, but he gazed steadily at the intruder as he rose from his stool. If this savage was come upon an evil errand, what could he do to defend Humility and himself? His brain, quickened by the danger of the moment, worked rapidly. Glancing around desperately, his eye caught sight of a firelock in the corner nearest to him, and springing forward, he seized it and stood up boldly, aiming it directly at his visitor.

"Get behind me, Humility," he said in an even voice. "He shall not harm you. But look not frightened—I will not fire unless it is to save our lives."

The Indian scowled as he saw the boy's purpose, but as he noted Richard's slimness and youth, he smiled scornfully. "Watuwamut of the Pines tribe comes for corn," he said in gutteral English. "White boy give it to Watuwamut," and he pointed with a threatening look toward the basket of turkey-wheat.

Richard Moore shook his head resolutely. "The corn is not ours to give," he said firmly.

"Then it is for Watuwamut to take," said the Pines chief, coming nearer. "The corn or the white maid will he take back to his tribe. Her fingers good to gut fish and fringe moccasins," and he sprang forward intending to seize the firelock from the boy's hand. But Richard Moore had understood his intention and before the savage could reach him he fired the gun. With a cry of anger Watuwamut's outstretched arm fell to his side and he turned and fled, leaving a trail of blood upon the floor and window ledge as he made his escape, for he knew well that the report would alarm the white men and bring them in hot pursuit of him.

Humility gave a piercing shriek, and when the smoke cleared and the men came running from the fields and woods they found her still clinging to Richard's arm.

"What happened, lad?" queried Captain Standish, as he saw the bloodstains. "Was it man or bear or wolf after the corn?"

"The savage came in through yon window opening and wanted the corn, but I spied the firelock and got it in good season, and when he said he would carry off the corn, or Humility to clean fish for the Pinese, I pulled the trigger and fired at him. He was struck in the arm and he made off the same way he came, and that is all, sir."

"No, no," broke in Humility. "I called Richard low born, and stuck my fingers in my ears to keep from hearing his talk, and was rude and unmannerly, and let him do half of my share of the shelling, and then when the savage came he bade me get behind him and shielded me and saved my life, sir, and I am grievously sorry for my behavior and ask his pardon before ye all!"

"Well said, Humility," said Master Winslow. "'Tis only a truly proud spirit that confesses its own fault, and as for Richard, Captain, does it not seem fitting to put him to some work about the defenses of the fort, since he hath showed himself such a proper fighter? Methinks he hath the spirit of knight-errant, truly."

"God forbid we have knight-errants a-tilting here!" quoth Elder Brewster. "But brave men and youths are always needed."

"Then Richard shall fire the evening gun at sunset daily," said Captain Standish, and Master Winslow added slyly: "After all, this hath been a fine business all around, bringing us all to a better understanding one with the other and making a fair end of Humility's pride!" And he smiled as Richard Moore and Humility lifted the basket between them and walked homeward, sharing the burden happily and contentedly.

(THE END)

Copyright, 1920, by
Congregational Publishing Society

The Comrades' Corner

My dear Comrades:

From far away across the country a Comrade sends us this fine letter:

"Dear Comrade, Mr. Alden:

"I again feel it my duty to write to the Comrades' Corner and as the place where I live is situated near the foothills of the Cascade range of mountains, I think perhaps a little about this country might interest some of the Comrades.

"A granite quarry is not far from our town where some granite is mined, though not much.

"Wonderful natural falls called Granite Falls give our town its name. Their beauty is unhurt by the hand of man, and their banks are unmolested by power plants, water-wheels, etc.

"'Our' mountain is Mt. Pilchuck, a snow-capped peak towering up about 5,000 feet over us. Many of the people here take a vacation to climb the mountain. They camp in tents or stay at the forest ranger's cabin. Perhaps now I have told enough about Washington, and I must now get down to what I really wrote this letter for."

This letter is from Beatrice A. Jones, Granite Falls, Wash., Box 385, and what she "really wrote this letter for" is to say that she is interested in collecting stamps, and would like very much to correspond with other Comrades who also have taken up that fad.

Comrade Dorothy Walters, 895 40th Street, Milwaukee, Wis., would like to correspond with some one in the New England States. She is eleven years old (but is growing older every day.—Mr. A.).

From Maumee, O., Comrade Oril I. Brown writes interestingly:

"I read your Corner every week and have never seen a letter from a Comrade in Ohio, (This is the first one.—Mr. A.) and I think that 'Buckeye' State ought to be represented.

"My dad is the superintendent of a Children's Home in Maumee near Toledo. We have our own school here and I have gone here the first six years of my schooling. This year I am going to Newbury School in Toledo. It is four miles from here and I have to take my lunch, and say! don't I know how good it tastes at noon!

"Dad gives me $1.25 a week allowance, $1 pays my carfare, 25c. is spending money. Enclosed please find my 25c. spending money for this week. Please put it with the Lunch Fund."

Comrade Eleanor M. Knight sends in a contribution for the Fund, and says: "I should think that the pupils of Dorchester Academy must want an education very much to walk so far to get it. I think they deserve a hearty lunch."

Well, that Lunch Fund is growing, and next week I will try to give you a report on how much has come in. The picture in last week's Corner, and the letter from one of the teachers may start up a new stream of gifts.

Comradely yours,

Mr Alden

Theodore Roosevelt and His Time

Shown in his own letters

By JOSEPH BUCKLIN BISHOP

The career of no historic personage approaching Roosevelt in eminence and interest has ever been set forth so fully, so authoritatively, so humanly. Without reading it, no man can hope to understand the history of his own time. With portraits, 2 vols. $10.00

The Life of Joseph Hodges Choate

as gathered chiefly from his letters, including his own story of his boyhood and youth

By E. S. MARTIN

That power of leadership which made him one of our greatest lawyers and public men, that genial and witty personality which endeared him to thousands he never saw, are revealed largely in the words of Joseph Choate himself through his letters and records in this notable biography.
With portraits. 2 vols. $10.00

Italy and the World War

By THOMAS NELSON PAGE

Former U. S. Ambassador to Italy

Mr. Page lifts the curtain on an angle of the war that until now had been without adequate representation in the literature of the struggle. This is the one book needed to complete the historical record of what happened "over there." Mr. Page's first-hand description of the Piave struggle and its reactions on Italy is only one of the work's notable features. A November Book. $5.00

Jesus' Principles of Living

By Prof. C. F. Kent and Prof. J. W. Jenks

This book interprets the teachings of Jesus frankly, simply and constructively in the light of modern conditions and to make clear the trail that Jesus blazed by which each man may find the larger life in union and co-operation with Him.
$1.25

English Ways and By-Ways

By Dr. LEIGHTON PARKS

Rector of St. Bartholomew's, New York

Go to England with Dr. Parks—

A merry book of travel; a composite of fact and fiction, this sketch of a young clergyman's experiences in the land of Shakespeare, constitutes an ideal holiday gift. At all bookshops. $1.75

Luke the Historian in the Light of Research

By Prof. A. T. ROBERTSON, D.D.

With this book any one will have at his command information about the early church which every Christian eagerly desires, and he will be able to answer most of the questions which perplex the thoughtful reader of the New Testament. $2.50

The Shorter Bible—The New Testament

"An amazingly short, clear, and consecutive reproduction of the essential contents of the Bible."—The Continent.

"It is remarkable what freshness is added by this new presentation of the choicest New Testament teaching in short, crisp sentences and the plain speech of our own day. Even the story of the Gospels takes on new interest. The little volume is admirably adapted for use in the family or as a travel companion."—The Congregationalist and Advance. 326 pages. $1.25

ATTRACTIVE HOLIDAY BOOKS

Westward Ho!

By CHARLES KINGSLEY

This edition of Kingsley's masterpiece is illustrated in color by N. C. Wyeth. Mr. Wyeth has caught the spirit of the story and his artistic contributions unite with the fascination of the narrative itself in making the volume uniquely appealing as a Christmas gift. The work is edited by Jacqueline M. Overton.
$3.50

Grimm's Fairy Tales

Here, again the charm of a classic is supplemented by the work of a competent artist. Elenore Plaisted Abbott interprets these rare fables with fine delicacy and penetration. Her illustrations add greatly to the charm of the fables. $3.50

Charles Scribner's Sons Fifth Avenue, New York

IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE

Tercentenary at Montana Conference

First Church, Billings, entertained the "Pilgrims" of Montana at the State Conference, Oct 12-14. The beloved pastor for the past nine years, Rev. W. H. North, now of Warren Ave., Chicago, could not be present but Rev. G. N. Edwards, the Assistant Superintendent of Missions planned and carried through the fine Tercentenary program and the splendid "Pageant of the Pilgrims." The Pageant, given in Boston last summer, was produced here with skillful interpretation, and in some respects outshone the Boston presentation, for in this case real Indians from the Crow Agency gave the Indian scenes. The war dances were done in gorgeous costumes of ermine and beaded work, with decorations of elks' teeth and eagle feathers, costumes worth hundreds of dollars.

Another special feature of the program was the cowboy quartette, brought by the Rev. H. K. Waters from his new but already famous Powder River Parish in Southeastern Montana. The accompanying picture shows Mr. Waters with his quartette and reminds us of his "little" parish, 3,000 square miles in extent, much of it 100 miles from any railroad.

The retiring moderator, Mr. C. S. Wilcox of Billings, was succeeded by Rev. J. C. Blackman of Sidney, with Mr. John McKenzie of Great Falls as Assistant Moderator. Mr. J. R. Beebe, pastor of Ballentine, was chosen scribe, with Rev. W. T. Lockwood of Butte as assistant. The sermon was preached by Rev. F. E. Henry of Great Falls, District Superintendent of Northern Montana, on the subject, "Pilgrims of the Night and the New Day."

An interesting program built about the Pilgrims and their legacy was participated in by a dozen pastors and an historical review of the oldest churches was given by several laymen.

COWBOY QUARTETTE AT MONTANA CONFERENCE

Addresses were given by Secretaries Estabrook of Denver, White of Chicago, and Bloom of New York. The outstanding paper of the program was read by Rev. I. L. Cory of Hardin, 70 years young, "Father" of many of the men who now man our churches, and newly elected chairman of the Board of Directors.

The Registrar and Treasurer, Rev. F. E. Henry, reported six new churches, six new Sunday schools and an increase in membership in all organizations; also that all Conference debts were paid, including one of several hundred dollars to the National Council; and that the benevolent contributions were the largest ever made—this in spite of the fourth year of partial or total crop failure. Moreover, the Conference voted to adopt the C. W. M. apportionment for 1921, increased as it is from $4,000 to $14,000. This last work is in the hands of the newly appointed State Director, Rev. E. H. Johnson.

It was voted to print a combined issue of the Minutes and the Conference number of the State paper, Pilgrim Chimes, as an anniversary number of the Tercentenary Celebration. This is to be dedicated to Dr. G. J. Powell, veteran superintendent of the state, "whose eye is not dimmed nor his strength abated."

The M. W. M. U. held their annual meeting, re-electing Mrs. G. E. Snell president and Mrs. G. N. Edwards treasurer. Among other features Miss Patterson spoke of the work in China and the mission field in general. F. E. H.

Special Tercentenary Sermons

In observance of the Pilgrim Anniversary, Rev. L. L. Barber of PILGRIM, NASHUA, N. H., has arranged a series of addresses on "The Pilgrims and their Venture." These are being given at the Church Home Night Services during November and December. The topics in the series are: Who Were The Pilgrims? The First Migration; The Founders of Free-

LIPPINCOTT BOOKS
FOR GIFTS

"The Book has Dash, Fire and Romance."—THE OUTLOOK

NO DEFENCE GILBERT PARKER'S Great Romance

"Has dramatic situations and incidents; vivid pictures of West Indian forest and plantation life, and an appealing love tale."—THE OUTLOOK. The Irish and English temperaments are contrasted in many dramatic scenes. In "NO DEFENCE" Gilbert Parker has gone one step higher in his literary career. 4 illustrations. $2.00.

SEEING THE FAR WEST By JOHN T. FARIS

A remarkable panorama of the Wonderland of America, revealing the scenic glories of the states from the Rockies to the Pacific in the text and with the 113 illustrations and two maps. The most complete and comprehensive volume on the territory covered. Handsome octavo. $6.00.

THE BOOK OF JOB By MORRIS JASTROW, JR., Ph.D., LL.D.

"A noble book,—all men's book," wrote Carlyle, yet the soul, the beauty and the living fire of it hidden beyond a veil of conflicting interpretations. It has been for Dr. Jastrow with his rare insight and charm to give us this grandly conceived new interpretation of the original masterpiece. Frontispiece. Ornamental cloth. $4.00.

THE ORIENT IN BIBLE TIMES By ELIHU GRANT

The biblical gift book of the year for Bible readers of every denomination. It makes the Bible more intensely human and interesting. 30 illustrations. $2.50.

IN OLD PENNSYLVANIA TOWNS

By ANNE HOLLINGSWORTH WHARTON.

The Picturesque, the historic, the social, and human have been gathered and woven into this entertaining chronicle. A valuable addition to the literature of earlier days, replete with entertaining information for the traveler as well. 32 illustrations, handsome octavo. $5.00.

CLOUDY JEWEL

By GRACE LIVINGSTON HILL (Mrs. Lutz)

The story of Julia Cloud, family drudge, and her rejuvenation, results in an exquisite romance and a cheerful story as heart-satisfying as a fresh-blown rose. Frontispiece. $1.90.

HAPPY HOUSE By JANE ABBOTT

goes steadily on its way to greater and greater success. It is proving one of the most popular stories of the season. Frontispiece. $1.75.

NEW BOOKS ENTERTAINING AND USEFUL

A BOOK ON ANGLING, by FRANCIS FRANCIS, will quicken the pulse of every fisherman, angling from every angle, with many illustrations. $4.50. THE RABBIT BOOK, by PROFESSOR WASHBURN; a complete, practical manual on the care and breeding of all kinds of meat-and-fur-producing rabbits. 61 illustrations. $2.00. "MRS. WILSON'S COOK BOOK," suits every purse. Menus of the simplest to the most elaborate can be prepared from hundreds of new recipes. Women will appreciate the author's new method of presenting them. $2.50. "THE CHARM OF FINE MANNERS," by MRS. STARRETT, will be a great boon to fathers and mothers. In a charming way the author writes about behavior, self-culture, habits, conversation, etc. $1.00. For the Little Tots—THE KIDDIE-KAR BOOK, colored pictures and fanciful verses with the true nursery swing and ring, $1.50. THE CHILDREN'S STORY GARDEN, a collection of stories about animals, children, flowers, elves, etc., each one illustrating a Christian ideal of life. 10 pictures. $1.50. YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS SHOULD HAVE THE BEST. In addition to the books on this page we have a splendid selection of new LIPPINCOTT'S MERIT BOOKS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS. Write for circulars.

AT ALL BOOKSTORES

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY
PUBLISHERS PHILADELPHIA

BOYS AND GIRLS

Will find delight in these

ARTHUR RACKHAM'S
New Illustrated Gift Book
THE SLEEPING BEAUTY

A book of alluring beauty that will delight every child. Numerous delightful silhouettes, frontispiece in color, handsome binding, uniform with Rackham's "Cinderella." Octavo. $2.

PINOCCHIO

Collodi's delightful Italian classic can now be secured in two beautiful holiday editions uniform with Spyri's "Heidi," of last season. GIFT EDITION, 14 pictures in color, handsome binding. $2.50. SPECIAL EDITION, 14 pictures in color, mounted on mats, exquisite binding, stamped in gold, in a box. $6.00

STORIES ALL CHILDREN LOVE SERIES

18 famous stories for children. The new title is "CORNELLI," by the author of "Heidi." It is equally as entertaining. Ask to see the other volumes in this series. They are beautifully illustrated in color and make the best sort of Christmas gifts for young people. Incomparable at the price per volume. $1.50

CHILDREN'S CLASSICS SERIES

15 favorite fairy and story books, carefully edited and simplified for little folks. Beautifully illustrated. Each $0.75

JANE ABBOTT'S New Sunshine Story is HIGHACRES

It will delight her host of youthful readers who enjoyed "Keineth" and "Larkspur." Illustrated. $1.75.

DAN BEARD'S New One is
THE AMERICAN BOYS' HANDY BOOK OF WOODCRAFT AND CAMP-LORE

With 377 snappy illustrations showing just how to do things in the woods. Every boy wants this book. $3.00

THE AMERICAN TRAIL BLAZERS SERIES

12 thrilling stories of great pioneers. INTO MEXICO WITH GENERAL SCOTT, by Sabin, is the new one this year. It is a stirring tale of the Mexican War. These are splendid volumes for boys. Write for descriptive circular. Each volume illustrated. $1.75

RODEHEAVER'S
VICTORY SONGS
A New Gospel Song Book, Prepared by—
HOMER RODEHEAVER

A great advance in the world of church music. Contains 70 new songs and 259 of the old favorites. The selection meets with hearty approval from song leaders who have seen the new book.

Contains 288 pages of music. Single copies: Manila, 35c; Limp, 40c; Cloth, 50c; Postpaid. In quantities, not prepaid: Manila, 30c; Limp 35c; Cloth, 45c. —— ☞ Same prices for: AWAKENING SONGS; SONGS OF SERVICE.

ASK FOR OUR COMPLETE CATALOG.

THE RODEHEAVER COMPANY
1090 Monon Bldg., Dpt. C 814 Walnut St.
Chicago Philadelphia

NEW PARSONAGE AT ATLANTIC, MASS. The house is of stucco and was built at a cost of more than $8,300. Generous parishioners, besides giving money for the parsonage, contributed labor and other donations which helped along its erection. All the appointments of the house are of the best. Rev. T. W. Davison is the pastor of the Atlantic Church and with his family occupies the handsome new parsonage.

dom; John Robinson, the Pastor; William Brewster, the Leader; William Bradford, the Recorder; The Venture of Faith; The Early Days at Plymouth; The Pilgrim Contribution to America..

Pilgrim, in union with the First Congregational, the First Universalist, and the First Unitarian Churches of Nashua, will hold special observances of the Pilgrim Anniversary on Sunday evenings, Dec. 12 and 19 A great Pilgrim Pageant is planned for the early summer of 1921.

Rev. G. M. Miller, MERRIAM PARK, ST. PAUL, MINN., preached a series of sermons during November on "Pilgrim Convictions Modernly Applied." The special topics on which he spoke were "The Primacy of God," "The Individual as the Child of God," "The Sabbath as the Day of God," and "The Bible as the Word of God."

Rev. P. W. Gibson, WALWORTH, WIS., is preaching a series of sermons, some of the topics being The Pilgrims' Spirit, The Pilgrims' Bible, The Pilgrims' Creed, The Pilgrims' Bequest, The Pilgrims' Torchbearers, and The Pilgrims' Christmas.

Makes Use of Bulletin Board

For the past year ARGYLE, MINN., has been making good use of a large bulletin board with detachable letters. The board, which bears the name of the church, is situated on the principal business street. During the greater part of each week quotations from various sources are displayed on it and wide notice is taken of them. The comments they call forth are both many and interesting. The latter part of the week the services of the church are posted upon it. In all use of the board cheapness and sensationalism are carefully avoided; it decoys no one to the church but it attracts many. Rev. E. P. Baker is pastor of Argyle.

New Colored Community Center

Among the 15,000 Negroes who have recently come to Detroit, Mich., through the migratory movement from the South, are some of the best elements of the colored race—doctors, lawyers, teachers, business men and preachers. The religious facilities for the race are simply choked to suffocation, and the situation is entirely free from that denominational jealousy too often found in the South, so that other denominations are begging for help.

Our denomination has not been slow to take advantage of this situation, and has sent Rev.

The "ZENITH PORTABLE"
MOTION-PICTURE PROJECTOR

A STANDARD MACHINE
-not a makeshift!
A novice can operate with absolute safety

Standard Geneva Star and Cams and Gundlach-Manhattan Lenses

Incandescent Mazda Lamp and Lamphouse Equipment complete

Sold at one half the cost of any other Standard equipment

Entire Machine Officially approved by National Board of Fire Underwriters

FOR UNIVERSAL USE because it's SAFE—SIMPLE—SOUND—SURE!

The "ZENITH PORTABLE" has universal motor; alternating or direct current; high or low voltage; stereopticon attachment.

Each part and every machine is honestly built and fully guaranteed. The "ZENITH" meets every Projector requirement-in the World!

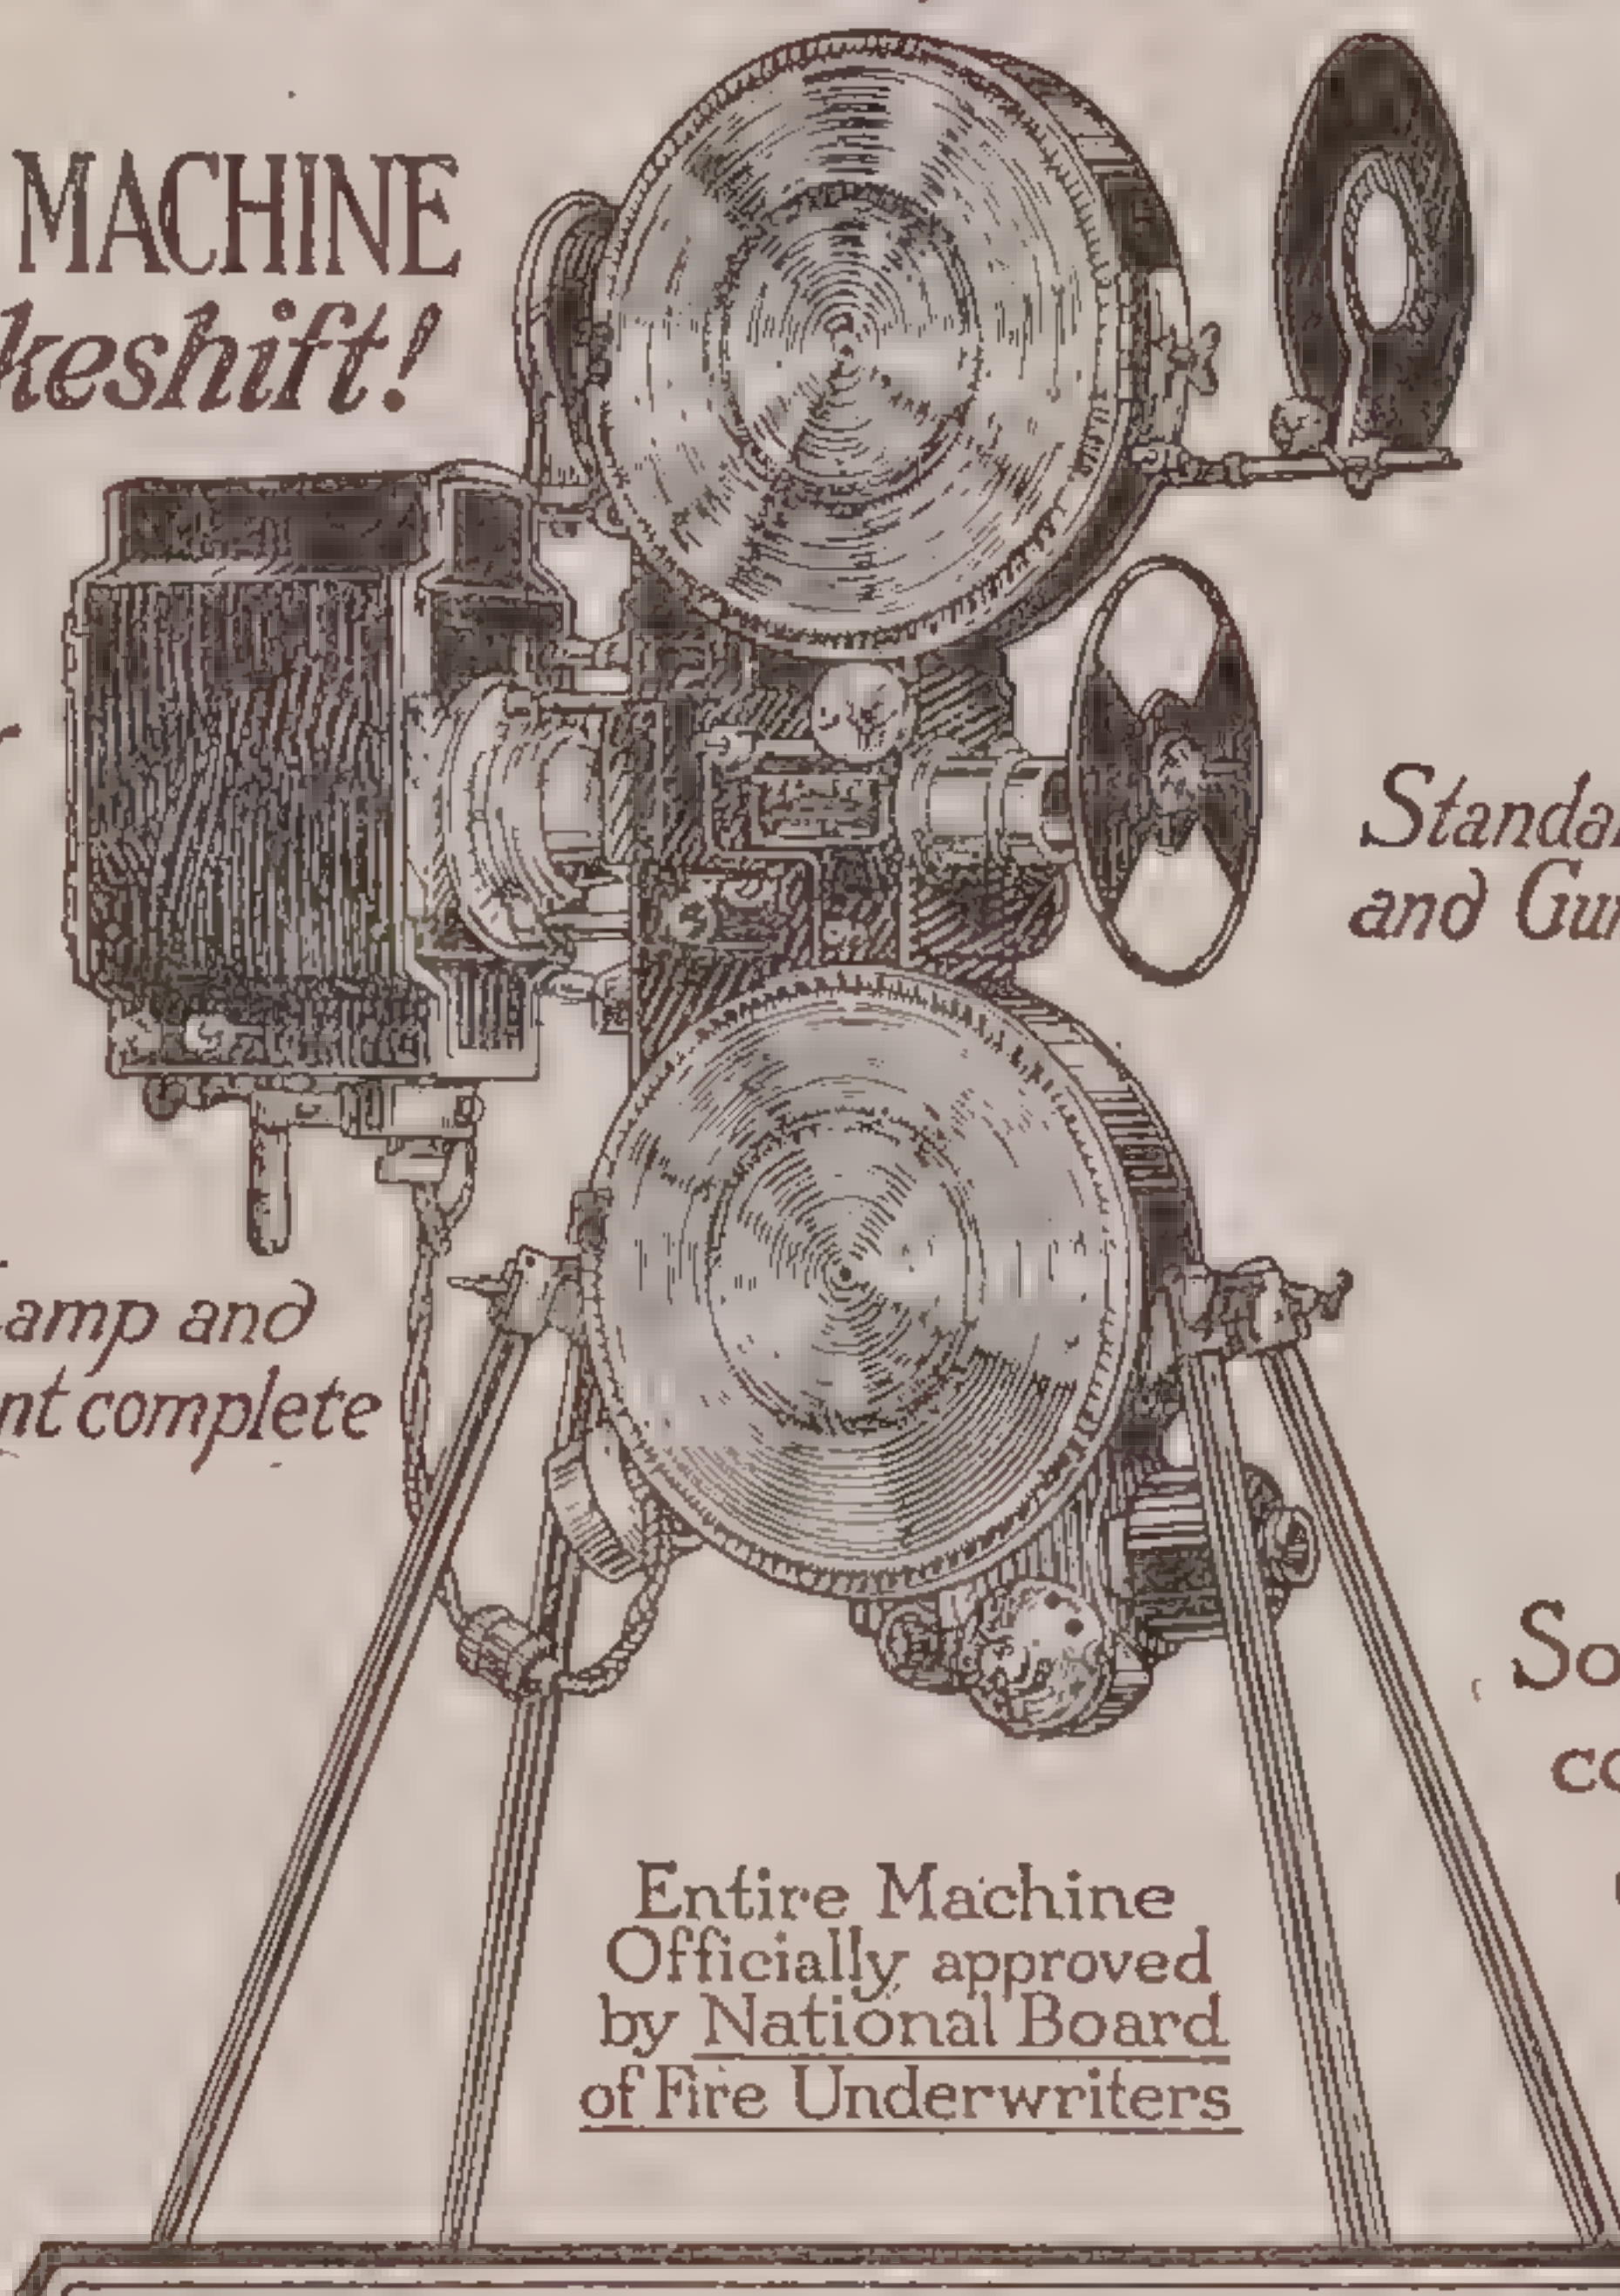
Terms if necessary

A few good Dealer and Distributor territories still open

COUPON

Fitzpatrick & McElroy, Dept. Z-24 202 S. State St., Chicago
Gentlemen: Answering your "Zenith Portable" Projector advertisement, I reply:
☐ Yes. ☐ No. Do you need a projector?
☐ Yes. ☐ No. Have you a projector?
☐ Yes. ☐ No. Are you satisfied with your present projector?
☐ Yes. ☐ No. Can we be of any service to you in either motion-pictures or projectors?
Name
Vocation
Street
City State

Fitzpatrick & McElroy
SOLE REPRESENTATIVES
of the
Ford Motion-picture Laboratories
and the
"ZENITH PORTABLE" PROJECTOR
202 South State Street Chicago



What Better Gift Than This?

THE LIFE OF CHRIST

By the REV. G. ROBINSON LEES, B.A.
Author of "Village Life in Palestine," etc.

With 63 full-page illustrations, reproduced from scenes modeled in wax by the celebrated Italian sculptor, D. Mastroianni

It is many years since an important LIFE OF CHRIST has been published. Professor Robinson lived for several years in Palestine studying and exploring in an intimate way, and preparing the background for this book. He has a sympathetic knowledge and love of the people and uses this in his interpretation of the life of Jesus.

Bible students need the evidence offered by the Holy Land as much as the knowledge gained from their study of the original text, if they desire to be properly equipped for understanding and interpreting the Gospel story. The need is greater now than ever. More interest in the country has been developed, and the desire for a right estimate of the meaning of the fellowship of Christ was never so intense as it is today.

At Book Stores or of the Publishers, $5.00

DODD, MEAD & COMPANY Publishers for Eighty Years NEW YORK

H. M. Kingsley, director of religious work among Negroes of the North, to take temporary charge of the field. He is assisted by Mr. R. W. Brooks as religious educator, and Mrs. E. E. Scott as parish visitor. Property has been purchased and a new church organized under the name of the New Plymouth. The original group of 33 has already been more than doubled, and the outlook is for another similar increase before the end of 1920.

The proposed center will include a modern house of worship, a parish house, day nursery, home for girls and facilities for recreational activities. The enterprise is being backed by First Church, Rev. G. G. Atkins, pastor, and the liberal-minded people of Detroit. This is one of the links in a proposed chain of similar churches to extend across the continent for the turning of the migratory movement into a stream of national blessing. H. H. P.

SUMMER CRUISE
THROUGH ST. PAUL'S
MEDITERRANEAN

INTERCOLLEGIATE TOURS
BOSTON U.S.A.

Palestine by auto and camp. The glory that was Greece and the mystery that was Egypt. University credit for Biblical History & Geography.

Prof. Albert E. Bailey
Leader
65-K Franklin St., Boston, Mass.

From East to West

VERMONT

Mr. Prince Leaves Bellows Falls

After almost four years of service, Rev. J. C. Prince recently resigned from First, Bellows Falls, to take up the field secretaryship for the Near East Relief Committee for Maine.

During Mr. Prince's pastorate First adopted the departmental type of organizations, free pews, and the Every Member Canvass system of finances for both current expenses and benevolences. This year the current expense budget was raised $1,200, and almost $3,000 will be given for benevolences. Fifty-two persons have been added to the membership. Mr. Prince has served as scoutmaster of the Boy Scouts of Troop One of the village. He has been active in denominational interests in the state and county, and has twice attended the National Council as delegate. For two years he was superintendent of young people's work of the Vermont Sunday School Association, and has spoken widely in the state at Sunday School and Christian Endeavor conventions.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

Between the exhilarating beginning of the Christian way, when life sings like a June morning, and the delightful place Christian habit makes later on, there is a dreary stretch of rough road, over which one must trudge with neither novelty nor habit to help. This is the place where one oftenest straggles away from the Christian company, yet it is the place where one needs it most.

MASSACHUSETTS

Roxbury Church Observes Anniversary

Immanuel-Walnut Ave., Roxbury, has just commemorated the 50th anniversary of the organization of the Walnut Ave. Church and Sunday School, in a way that has proved not only a pleasant reminiscence, but also an inspiration for the future work. On Nov. 11, a reception was given to the original members of the church and the former superintendents of the schools, at which were told many interesting events of the Church's history. The regular Friday evening meeting was also devoted to the memory of the men and women who have builded their lives into the Church. The anniversary service on Nov. 14 was of especial interest, including hymns that were sung at the installation of Dr. Plumb, and at the dedication of the Chapel. The pastor, Rev. B. A. Willmott, based his inspiring sermon on Hebrews 6:12, giving an outline of the history of the Church and interpreting its past labor in terms of present service. He paid tribute to the many men who have served the Church and especially to Dr. A. H. Plumb, the first and only pastor of Walnut Ave. Church, whose

A Choice Selection of Holiday Gift Books

The Portygee
By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN
In plot, in rich humor and in the delineation of quaint characters, "The Portygee" has been declared the best of a long line of Lincoln novels. This is the story of a temperamental youth compelled to live with his gruff old grandfather who has never quite forgiven his daughter for running away with a Spanish opera singer. "A thoroughly Lincolnesque tale. That should be enough praise for the thousands who delight in the Lincoln Books."—Boston Post. $2.00 net.

Miss Lulu Bett
By ZONA GALE
The plain, unvarnished story of a small-town drudge into whose life creeps an unusual romance. Critics everywhere declare this to be the outstanding literary event of the year. The Atlantic Monthly says: "'Miss Lulu Bett' is without flaw. The book is eloquent with condensation." $1.75 net.

Children in the Mist
By GEORGE MADDEN MARTIN
A portrayal of the colored race that fascinates by its splendid pictures of Negro characters through the medium of brilliant fiction. Annie Fellows Johnston says: "They are so true of the Negro as we know him down here and written with such fine discrimination and understanding, that they should take a unique place in literature." $1.75 net.

The Age of Innocence
By EDITH WHARTON
A story that ranks with "The House of Mirth" in its broad human appeal, its powerful delineation of character and its qualities of entertainment. A novel of New York's Four Hundred in the early seventies, when 42d Street was far up-town. Mrs. Wharton has honestly earned the right to be called America's foremost woman novelist and this book reveals her exquisite art at its pinnacle. $2.00 net.

Nancy Goes to Town
By FRANCES R. STERRETT
A novel that is full of humor and alive with the spirit of youth. The story of Nancy Mary Yates, daughter of a poor country doctor who enters upon her training in a hospital with the idea of marrying a very rich man, "Prince Moneybags." There's adventure and romance of an unusual sort in this book. $2.00 net.

Morale
By G. STANLEY HALL
Morale is the supreme standard of life and conduct according to Dr. Hall, who is one of our foremost thinkers and writers. In this book he discusses the subject from every conceivable angle and shows how it can be applied to the solution of our social and industrial problems. $3.00 net.

FOR BOYS
FOURTH DOWN!
By Ralph Henry Barbour
A ripping football story woven around the "big game" between rival boarding schools, by the boys' favorite author. There's excitement from start to finish and a corking good plot. $1.75 net.

A Book of Delight!
UNCLE REMUS
The original "Tar Baby" stories by Joel Chandler Harris. Pictures in color. Introduction by Thomas Nelson Page. A beautiful gift edition bound in green silk cloth stamped in gold. In a box. $5.00 net.

FOR GIRLS
GEORGINA OF THE RAINBOWS
By Annie Fellows Johnston
The charming story of a very little girl who bravely lives up to all of the traditions of her fighting ancestors. The book has a delightful introduction by George Madden Martin. $1.75 net.

At all Booksellers
These Are Appleton Books
D. APPLETON AND COMPANY, PUBLISHERS, NEW YORK

work in church and community was of inestimable worth. He spoke of the strengthened fellowship through the union, in 1907, with Immanuel Church, and of the perfect harmony and increased efficiency resulting therefrom.

Boston Ministers' Meeting

At the Boston Ministers' Meeting, Nov. 22, much time was occupied by an animated discussion of the advisability of considering resolutions concerning the events of the day. The executive committee, to which the matter had been referred, was of the opinion that more would be gained by giving the time to a speaker who came with a prepared subject, than by using the time of the meeting for the impromptu, spontaneous speeches that such resolutions would evoke. The meeting voted to support the executive committee in favor of the prepared program. Rev. E. Victor Bigelow, of Andover, Mass., presented a paper on "Some Mistakes in the Interchurch Report on the Steel Strike," which was listened to with great interest.

The attention of the meeting was called to the importance of a "no" vote on the two propositions for licensing the sale of beverages, to be submitted at the coming city election.

CONNECTICUT

Observes Tercentenary of Signing of Compact

Second, New London, Dr. J. B. Lee, pastor, extended an invitation to the New London Association of Churches and Ministers to celebrate on Nov. 11 the tercentenary of the signing of the compact in the cabin of the Mayflower. A Mayflower supper was held at six in the evening, in the Church House, at which 200 persons were delightfully entertained. After dinner, addresses were given by visiting clergymen, followed by a carefully prepared pageant of the Signing of the Compact.

The company then adjourned to the church, and gave a hearty welcome to Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, of Brooklyn, who in his own happy manner made the address of the evening upon "The Things the Pilgrims Brought with Them." The churches and ministers of southeastern Connecticut greatly enjoyed the occasion.

A. S. B.

Pomfret Restoring House of Worship

First Church of Christ, Pomfret, organized in 1715, is celebrating this Tercentenary year by restoring its old Colonial house of worship to its original architectural beauty, and installing a new organ, built by the same firm which built its present organ in 1848. The work on the outside and interior of the church will cost more than twice as much as the entire cost of the building 88 years ago. The $20,000 being expended will make a beautiful sanctuary that will be enjoyed by the many who come from the cities and who make this Lenox of Connecticut their summer residence. Rev. J. S. Voorhees is pastor.

INDIANA

Observing Armistice Day at Whiting

Armistice Day marked a departure in church activity by Plymouth, Whiting. From two to four P. M. the church was open to the public, and a continuous service was maintained. Hymns of patriotic strain were contributed by the pipe organ, while the pastor, Rev. C. E. Trueblood, read from prayer books of the different denominations those extracts that were considered most appropriate to the occasion. There was no sermon. Poems and songs that breathed of valor and sacrifice were

GOOD BOOKS MAKE GOOD GIFTS

Here are some of the season's best from the list of

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY

The Autobiography of Andrew Carnegie

"To the great trio of American autobiographies, Benjamin Franklin's, Booker Washington's and Henry Adams', must now be added a fourth—the story of Andrew Carnegie's marvelous career."—Boston Transcript. Illus. $5.00.

A Cycle of Adams Letters

The correspondence, edited by Worthington C. Ford, of Charles Francis Adams, the American Minister to England, and his two sons, Henry Adams, his secretary, and Charles Francis, Jr., then serving in the Northern armies, gives an unequaled first-hand account of our social, military and diplomatic history during the Civil War. A permanently valuable gift, sure to be appreciated by every admirer of "The Education of Henry Adams." 2 vols., boxed. Illus. $10.00.

Crowding Memories, by Mrs. Thomas Bailey Aldrich

"A work of permanent value to literature; the 'Cranford' of New England, but more vivid and vital, for it deals with more vital personalities."—Alfred Noyes. Illus. $5.00.

Lincoln the World Emancipator, by John Drinkwater

An illuminating study of Lincoln as the supreme embodiment of the best qualities and ideals of the Anglo-Saxon race, by the author of the successful play, "Abraham Lincoln." $1.50.

The Dame School of Experience,
by Samuel McChord Crothers

This new volume of essays by Dr. Crothers contains some of his best and most characteristic mingling of wit, wisdom, and whimsicality. $2.00.

Mary Marie, by Eleanor H. Porter

MARY MARIE has just the touch of optimism, humor and good cheer that make Mrs. Porter's books ideal for Christmas gifts. The Sunbeam Girl brings joy and happiness to every reader, young or old. Illus. $2.00.

The Italian Twins, by Lucy Fitch Perkins

The millions of children who have been made happy by the Twin Series, will welcome this delightful addition. Illus. $1.75.

The Courtship of Miles Standish

The favorite poem of America's favorite poet published in commemoration of the Pilgrim Tercentenary, lavishly illustrated in full color and black and white by America's leading illustrator.—N. C. Wyeth. $3.00.

The Hidden Treasure of Rasmola,
by Abraham Mitrie Rihbany

The story of a boyhood experience by the author of "The Syrian Christ," gives a vivid picture of Oriental life and customs. Illus. $1.75.

Young Peoples' History of the Pilgrims,
by William Elliot Griffis

"Put this book in the hands of your young people; it will help them rightly to value their great inheritance."—The Baptist. Illus. $3.00.

read. Altogether it was a splendid service and a wonderful idea of observance for Armistice Day.

MINNESOTA

Pilgrim, Duluth, Welcomes Dr. Elderkin

PILGRIM, DULUTH, after nearly a year without leadership was rewarded in its search by the coming of Rev. N. S. Elderkin of Chicago. Dr. Elderkin has already made a large place for himself in the esteem and affection of the church and city. Singleness of purpose, originality of thought, and of method, hatred of sham, of insincerity, and evasion—all these are dominant in his message and make escape from a practical application impossible. At his first Communion Service, Dr. Elderkin received twenty into the membership of the church. Pilgrim celebrates her 50th anniversary during the third week in January, at which time a recognition service will be held for the pastor.

Mr. Merrill Becomes Pastor of Alexandria

ALEXANDRIA has recently called to its pulpit Rev. G. P. Merrill, of Atlanta, Ga., and is looking forward to a generous period of service under his leadership. Minnesota also welcomes Mr. Merrill's return. For several years he was officially connected with the Conference and all are glad that he has returned to the state.

Granada Federation Discontinued

GRANADA has been federated during the past two years with the Methodist Church. Recently the Methodist Church withdrew from the federation, a reaction most favorable to the Congregational Church. Fifteen new members were received the following Sunday, and the pastor's salary was increased $300. Rev. R. K. Chapman is pastor.

CALIFORNIA

Seeley Has a Real Community Church

UNION, SEELEY, Rev. L. H. Austin, pastor, has the distinction of furnishing the only practical demonstration of a community church in Imperial Valley. Its membership includes representatives of half a dozen or more different denominations who are working together in perfect harmony. As neighbors and friends they appreciate the opportunity of co-operating in the church just as they do in Farm Center, the Chamber of Commerce, and the public school.

The meeting house is strictly a community affair. About $6,000 of its cost, besides the parsonage and grounds, were provided by the people of the community, many of whom are not members of the church. This building furnishes the home, not only for the church and its auxiliaries, but for the Chamber of Commerce, the Farm Center, and for all other gatherings of a community interest. Its well-equipped kitchen and dining-room are ever open to the use of any community group or organization desiring to serve a dinner.

The manse houses the public library and the mistress of the manse cares for it. Recently the church proposed a Community Welfare Committee, consisting of three members from each of the separate community organizations: the Chamber of Commerce, the Farm Center, the Board of School Trustees, and the church. Such a committee has been chosen and organized for community service. This committee will foster the live, healthy community spirit of Seeley and provide means for its expression along practical lines.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

ALLISON, J. M., Amery, Wis., to Viroqua. Declines.

BEAUMONT, A. E., Goodyear, Ct., to West Chicago, Ill. Accepts.

CARLSON, F. E., Milford, Ct., to Helena, Mont. Accepts to begin Jan. 1.

CLARIS, C. C., Quechee, Vt., to Pittsford. Accepts to begin Dec. 12.

DODD, T. H., Antioch, Cal., to Mayflower, Pacific Grove. Accepts and is at work.

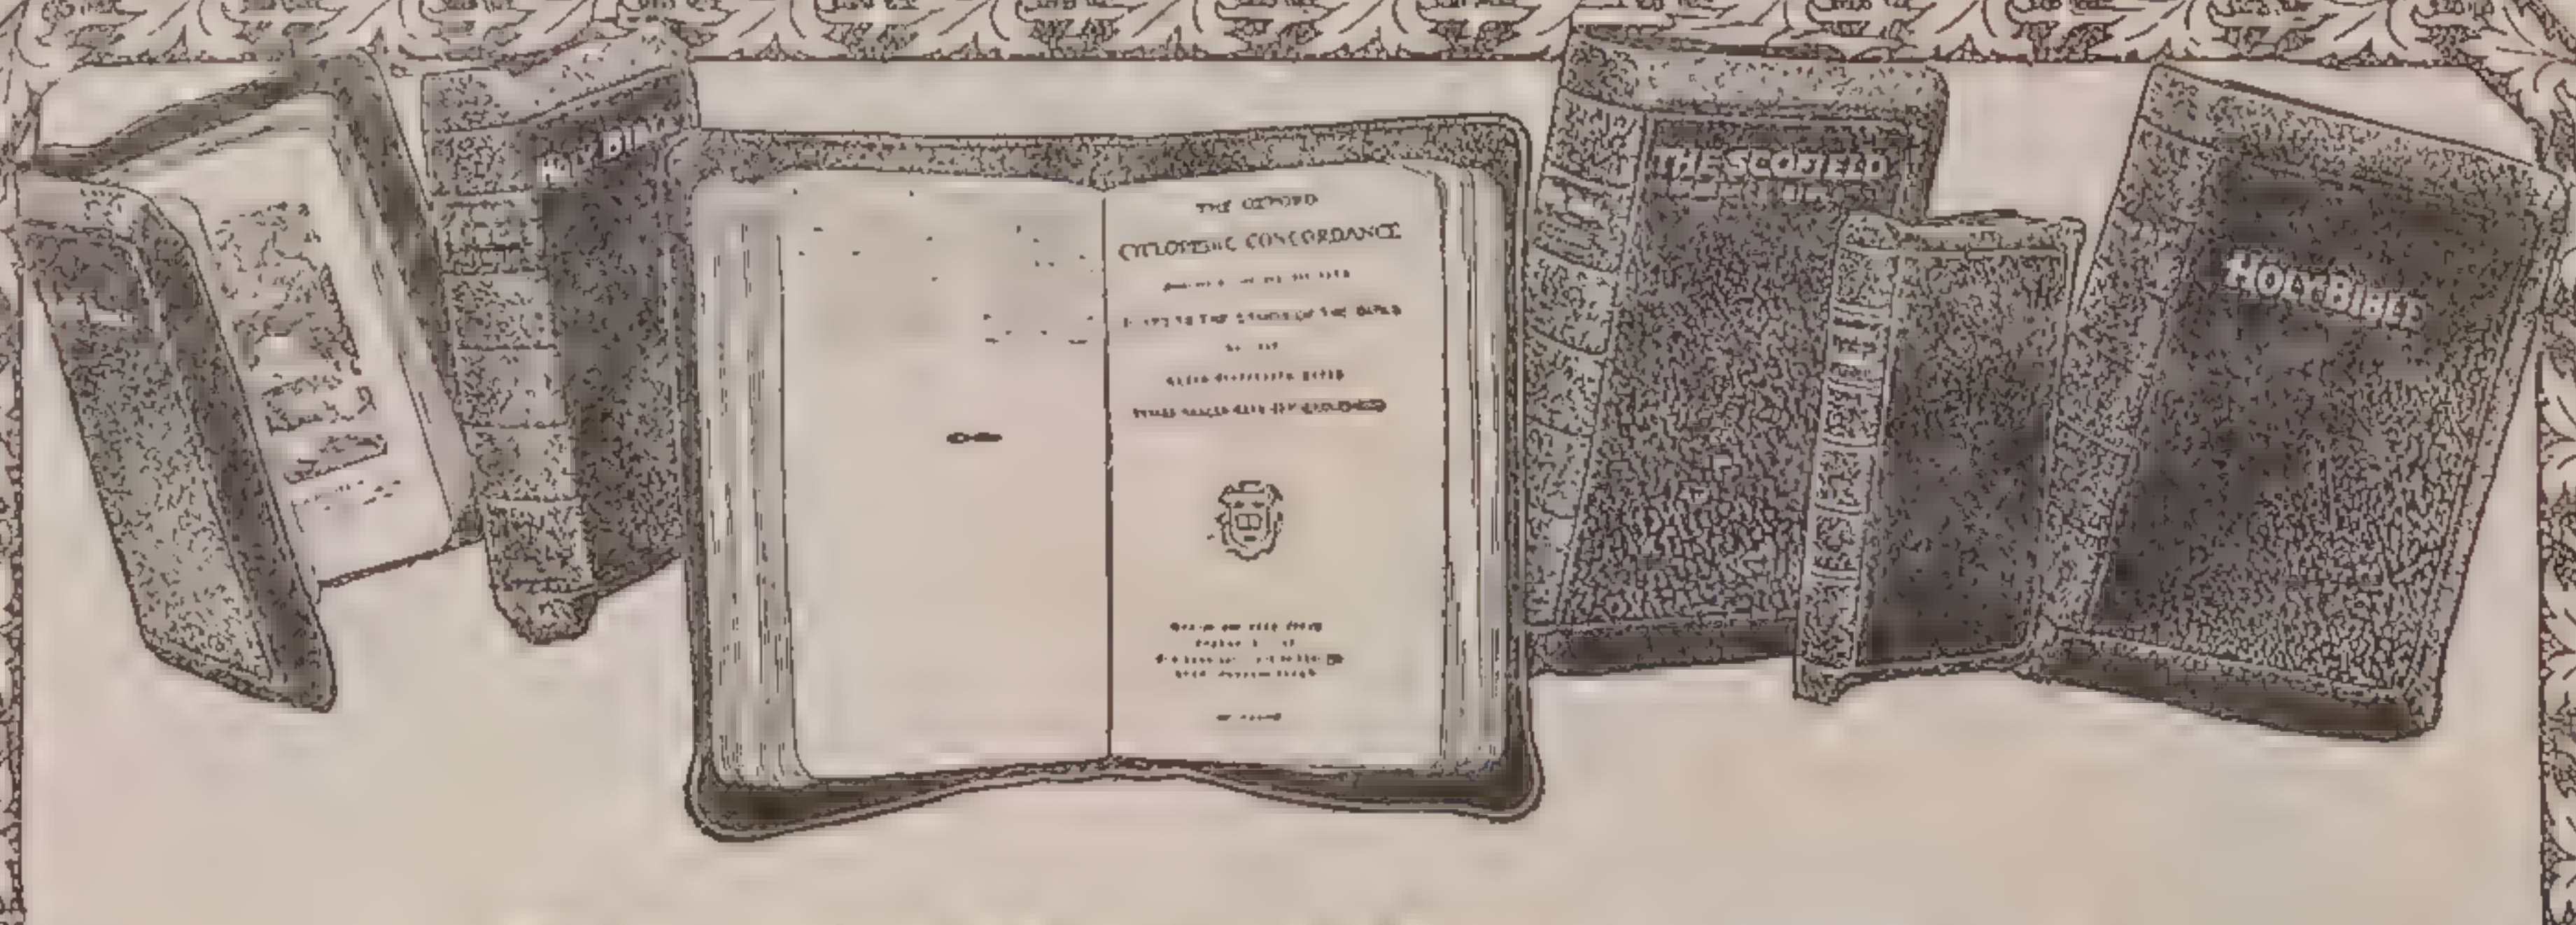
HALL, T. E., Webster, S. D., to Erwin. Accepts and is at work.

JONES, T. L., Erwin, S. D., to Dupree. Accepts and is at work.

MACLEOD, A. B., Leicester, Mass., to Union, Providence, R. I. Declines.

MCGIFFERT, A. C., Jr., Cambridge, Mass., to Pine St., Lewiston, Me. Declines.

MCLAREN, J. M., Sutton, Mass., to Hadwen Park, Worcester. Declines.



The Gift Supreme—
an OXFORD BIBLE

Put real Christmas joy into the heart of some one by the gift of one of these beautiful Oxford Bibles. Here is the gift, suitable for young and old, that will be prized always. It has a value that is far beyond its price. It shows your high regard as nothing else can.

Oxford Children's Bible
Contains 32 full page illustrations and special Bible study helps for children. Printed with clear type, French Morocco binding. Size 5¾ x 3¾ inches . . . . . . No. 03327 $3.70

Oxford Older Folks' Bible
With extra large type, excellent for older folks or those with impaired eyesight. Durable French Morocco binding. Size 9¼x5¾ inches. No. 01608 $6.15

Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible
With 300 pages of teacher's helps. Printed in heavy, black-faced type. French Morocco binding. Size 7¼x5 inches. No. 04453 $5.00

Scofield Reference Bible
A welcome gift to any Bible reader. Has helps on the pages where needed. Black-faced type, French Morocco binding, size 7x4½ inches. No. 53 $6.00

Oxford Pocket Bible
Clear, black-faced type Bible. Very compact and light. Printed on Oxford India paper. French Morocco binding, size 5⅛x3⅜x⅝ inches. No. 0113x $3.50

Oxford Home Bible
An extra large type Bible, with 24 beautiful colored illustrations and Family Register. French Morocco binding, size 9¼x5¾ inches . . . No. 02608 $6.65

Ask your bookseller for these OXFORD BIBLES by their numbers. If unobtainable, order direct from us.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS American Branch
35 WEST THIRTY-SECOND STREET NEW YORK

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK'S

"The Meaning of SERVICE"

will be ready December 3rd

Hundreds of thousands have been helped and inspired by Fosdick's messages on Prayer and Faith. They will find this new book timely, virile, impresive.

Handy, pocket edition volume, printed on THIN paper, bound in art leather cloth, round cornered. PRICE, $1.25

A WORTH-WHILE CHRISTMAS GIFT

A SPECIALLY BOUND SET of Fosdick's three "Meanings"—Prayer—Faith—Service.

The THREE books, uniformly bound in cloth, with morocco ridge, gold stamped, gilt top, with silk marker, encased in an attractive carton.
$5.00, postage paid

THE announcement of a NEW "Everyday Life" Book by FOSDICK is an event of moment to the Christian world.

FOSDICK'S triology on the meaning of Christianity—

"The Meaning of Prayer" $1.15

"The Meaning of Faith" $1.35

and NOW

"The Meaning of Service" $1.25

BOOKS WITH PURPOSE AP

At your bookstore or from us

ASSOCIATION PRESS
347 Madison Ave., New York

A GOOD INVESTMENT

A Little Money Spent for a Good Book

The Religions of the World

(Revised Edition)

By GEORGE A. BARTON

The author gives a keen and sympathetic interpretation of all the great religions. $2.00, postpaid $2.15.

Christian Faith for Men of Today

(Revised Edition)

By E. ALBERT COOK

This volume contains a clear and reasonable interpretation of life from the modern point of view. $1.50, postpaid $1.65.

The New Orthodoxy

By EDWARD S. AMES

A statement of the modern point of view in religion. $1.25, postpaid $1.35.

The Revelation of John

By SHIRLEY J. CASE

The central idea of the book is to explain the meaning of Revelation, as its author intended it to be understood by those to whom it was first addressed. $2.75, postpaid $2.90.

The Millennial Hope

By SHIRLEY J. CASE

The author describes the various types of hope that have been held in the past and shows the different influences that have shaped belief in a millennium at various periods in history. $1.50, postpaid $1.65.

A Guide to the Study of the Christian Religion

Edited by GERALD B. SMITH

A comprehensive survey, by twelve well-known scholars, of progress in the new scholarship of the past twenty-five years, in its relation to the Bible and theology. $3.00, postpaid $3.20.

How the Bible Grew

By FRANK G. LEWIS

This is the first single work to record the growth of the Bible from its beginning up to the present time. $1.50, postpaid $1.65.

The Gospel in the Light of the Great War

By OZORA S. DAVIS

Offers practical suggestions concerning the use of texts and illustrative material. The suggestions offered are simply examples of a profitable way to work the rich mine of biblical and recent literature. $1.50, postpaid $1.65.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS
5748 Ellis Avenue Chicago, Illinois

Millar, Samuel, North St., Middleton, N. Y., to Union, Cedar Grove, N. J. Declines.

Page, Harlan, Dover, Mass., to West Tisbury.

Palmgren, G. W., Swedish, Hartford, Ct., to Swedish Tabernacle, Chicago, Ill. Declines.

Parks, J. W., First and Second, Seward, Ill., to Bowen. Accepts and is at work.

Sowles, L. L., Hetland, S. D., to Faulkton. Accepts and is at work.

Van Valkenburgh, H. C., White River, S. D., to Buffalo. Accepts and is at work.

Vining, R. W., Cambridge, Mass., to Financial Secretaryship, Gordon Bible College.

Wilber, F. E., formerly of New Brunswick, to Bound Brook, N. J.

Williams, P. M., Creede, Col., to Fort Pierre, S. D. Accepts and is at work.

Resignations

Smith, Fred, Deadwood, S. D.

Trust, Harry, Second, Biddeford, Me. To enter business.

Ordinations and Installations

Bellingham, E. R., o., Big Timber, Mont., Nov. 16. Sermon by Rev. M. G. Inghram; other parts by Rev. Messrs. G. J. Powell, G. N. Edwards, W. P. Ketts and I. L. Cory.

Patch, D. I., i., Orthodox, Arlington, Mass., Nov. 17. Sermon by Rev. Orville Petty; other parts by Rev. Messrs. A. E. Dunning, David Fraser, J. G. Taylor, S. C. Bushnell, D. B. Eddy, J. W. Platner, Raymond Calkins and F. E. Emrich.

Wood, C. J., o., Piedmont, Worcester, Mass., Nov. 14. Sermon by Rev. H. S. Bradley; other parts by Rev. Messrs. J. L. Findlay, F. T. Rouse, B. F. Wyland, R. M. Grey and F. D. Thayer.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
Massachusetts
Northampton, Edwards	12	21
New Hampshire
Hampstead	12	18
Oregon
Portland, First		18
New York
Brooklyn, South	14	16

Personals

Beard, Dr. and Mrs. W. L., of Foochow College, China, are in this country on a year's furlough, renewing old acquaintance and taking advantage of the opportunity to give first-hand reports of the progress of events in the East. They are making their temporary home at 120 East College St., Oberlin, O. Dr. and Mrs. Beard are the representatives of Flatbush Church, Brooklyn, on the foreign field, and during the first two weeks of November, were entertained by the home church, speaking before practically all the organizations of the church and at several other gatherings in Brooklyn. Foochow College now has an enrollment of 400 scholars, an increase of 250 since 1912, when Dr. Beard took charge. Dr. Beard reports that there is an encouraging number of boys who are offering themselves for the ministry in the graduating classes, and that the "China for Christ" movement is alive throughout the length and breadth of China. The whole country seems to be wide awake for evangelism.

Convis, L. A., Milwaukee, Wis., after two years of almost continuous service under the Y. M. C. A. with the Polish Legion of Siberia and the Polish forces around Warsaw has returned to his home. Before going overseas Mr. Convis was pastor of Hanover St. Church, Milwaukee.

Cook, D. A., of Howard University, Washington, D. C., who has been spending several weeks studying under Dr. S. S. Curry, President of the School of Expression, Boston, gave a most delightful interpretation of Tennyson's "Holy Grail" recently before the students and faculty.

Grover, R. B. and Mrs. Grover were given a farewell reception on their leaving West Newbury at the close of a nine years' fruitful pastorate to take up the work at Petersham. On behalf of the parish the chairman of the Board of Selectmen presented Mr. and Mrs. Grover with a substantial purse. An appropriate gift book was placed in Mrs. Grover's hands as a token of good will on the part of the "Busy Bees," for

For ? Gifts

"If a Man Die Shall He Live Again"

25th THOUSAND

The Passion for Life

JOSEPH HOCKING

"One of the finest, most significant and most absorbing stories of these great epochal times."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph. Cloth, $1.75.

Personal Recollections of Andrew Carnegie

FREDERICK LYNCH, D. D.

Edu. Sec'y Church Peace Union

Intimate—revealing—packed with incidents not duplicated elsewhere—a book written from an unusual association of many years. Illustrated, Net $1.50.

China, the Mysterious and Marvelous

VICTOR MURDOCK

"Most refreshing, fascinating and all the more instructive for being so astonishingly entertaining."—Dr. Albert Shaw in The Review of Reviews. Illustrated, Net $2.50.

"Pussyfoot" Johnson

F. A. McKENZIE

Author of "Korea's Fight for Freedom"

"It is impossible to understand the movement which resulted in the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment without it . . . a sportsman in the best sense of the word."—The Outlook. Cloth, Net $1.50.

With Grenfell on the Labrador

FULLERTON L. WALDO

Henry van Dyke says "A vivid picture of one of the finest men of our age—an excellent book of inspiration and encouragement." Illustrated, Net $1.50.

Fundamentals of Prosperity

What They Are and Where They Come From

ROGER W. BABSON

The "statistician of Wellesley Hills" is probably the first economist to come forward with the claim that human souls constitute America's greatest undeveloped resources. Net $1.00.

A Tenderfoot Bride

CLARICE E. RICHARDS

"A romance of real experiences of a girl-bride suddenly plunged into the 'wild and woolly West.'"—Nashville Banner. Illustrated, Net $1.50.

A People's Life of Christ

J. PATERSON-SMYTH

A clean, constructive, unbroken view of the life of Jesus, by the author of "The Gospel of the Hereafter." A book for which we've long waited. Net $3.50.

Fleming H. REVELL'S AT ALL BOOKSELLERS BOOKS Revell Company

NEW YORK, 158 Fifth Ave.
CHICAGO, 17 N. Wabash Ave.

Latest DORAN BOOKS Titles

THE REAL CHRIST
R. A. Torrey, D. D.
Author of FUNDAMENTAL DOCTRINES OF THE CHRISTIAN FAITH
With rare spiritual discernment and with a deep intuitive appreciation of the character of the Master, Dr. Torrey has drawn a series of masterly and unforgetable portraits of the man Christ Jesus. 12mo. Net, $1.75

EVERYBODY'S WORLD
Sherwood Eddy
With panoramic sweep and the insight of a world missionary the author lays on our hearts the burden of the crying need of the nations. America's duty in the present crisis is defined with convincing clearness. Net, $1.90

FOUR HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED GOSPELS
Rev. Wm. E. Barton, D. D.
Author of THE SOUL OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN
While imaginary, these new stories of the Christ are based on the New Testament record and have great value and interest for the student of the Gospels. 12mo. Net, $1.50

STORY WORSHIP PROGRAMS FOR THE CHURCH SCHOOL YEAR
Rev. Jay S. Stowell, M.A.
A series of ideal devotional programs for boys and girls, covering every Sunday in the Church School Year. Contains the material and suggestions which Junior and Intermediate workers have long wanted. 12mo. Net, $1.50

THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF ST. PAUL
Rev. David Smith, D.D.
Author of THE DAYS OF HIS FLESH
This monumental life of the great Apostle presents the results of archæological findings and scholarly investigations of the past two decades. Octavo with series of beautiful new maps in colors. Net, $6.00

THE MENACE OF IMMORALITY IN CHURCH AND STATE
Rev. John R. Straton, D.D.
Pastor, Calvary Baptist Church, New York
Is America being destroyed like Ancient Greece and Rome by Immorality? This is the startling question raised by Dr. Straton. Second Edition. Illustrated. Net, $1.75

THE ARGONAUTS OF FAITH
With a Foreword by Viscount Bryce Basil Mathews
Author of LIVINGSTONE THE PATHFINDER
The adventures of the "Mayflower" Pilgrims told for young people. A most complete and fascinating story. With colored illustrations and maps. Net, $1.50

THE FOUNDING OF A NATION
A Romance of the Pilgrims Frank M. Gregg
Pictures with fascinating skill one of the most significant and epochal emigrations in the history of man's search for individual liberty. Net, $2.25

TALKS TO SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS
Luther A. Weigle
The accomplished author of "The Pupil and the Teacher" carries on in this new volume a continuation of his skillful treatment of teaching problems. Net, $1.25

THE LORD OF LIFE AND DEATH
Author of IF A MAN DIE Rev. J. D. Jones
The Expository Times says of this Exposition of the Miracle of the raising of Lazarus, "Here is a volume of pure exposition the like of which we have been told we should never see again." New Edition. Net, $1.50

BIBLE TYPES OF MODERN MEN
Rev. W. Mackintosh Mackay, B.D.
Author of THE DESEASE AND REMEDY OF SIN
In these inspiring lectures to young men Doctor Mackay draws a series of character portraits of men of today whose qualities parallel those of the great men of the Bible. New Edition. Net, $1.75

BIBLE TYPES OF MODERN WOMEN
Rev. W. Mackintosh Mackay, B.D.
Author of BIBLE TYPES OF MODERN MEN
A series of lectures to young women on Bible women and their modern exemplars. New Edition. Net, $1.75

GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY
244 Madison Avenue New York
Publishers in America for HODDER & STOUGHTON

the young people of the church. Their faithful ministrations will be missed not only by the people of this parish but by a much larger circle as indicated by the resolutions passed by the Essex North Association which were read by a neighbor pastor the evening of the reception.

Owen, Rev. C. I., who has hitherto served in the M. E. Church, has recently accepted a call as stated supply for six months at Denmark, Io. This is one of the oldest Congregational churches in Iowa. It was organized in 1838 and the present church building has been in use since 1861, when the original building was burned.

Vrooman, H. C., and Mrs. Vrooman, Greenville, Me., on Oct. 20, observed their 25th wedding anniversary in a most appropriate manner when they were the guests of honor at a reception in the church. After a short musical and literary program by members of the church, Mr. and Mrs. Vrooman were presented with a large box of silver, with instructions to convert the silver into any form which would best minister to their personal benefit and happiness. The box contained $209 and came to the pastor and his wife as a token of the good will and appreciation of their parishioners.

Wilson, G. H., who did splendid service in New England States in connection with the Pilgrim Memorial Fund campaign, is now Eastern director of the half million dollar campaign for added endowment and equipment of Yankton College. This winter Mr. Wilson will devote his energy in the East to aid Yankton in securing its needed added endowment. He will have a few Sundays open while in New England, and will gladly supply any church which may desire his services. His office is at 14 Beacon St., Boston.

Wright, Richard and Mrs. Wright, were happily surprised on the evening of Nov. 3, when the people of Pilgrim Church, Cambridge, Mass., gathered to express their affection for their former pastor. Mr. Wright has recently left Pilgrim Church after a pastorate of 14 years and, with Mrs. Wright, will spend the winter in Winter Park, Fla. The token of a gold watch to the pastor and a handsome traveling bag, with a purse of gold, to Mrs. Wright, only partially expressed the Godspeed of their many friends.

Events to Come

Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, Quadrennial Meeting, Boston, Mass., Dec. 1-6.

National Council of Congregational Churches, Los Angeles, July 8-16, 1921.

Woman's Board of Missions, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Dec. 3, 10.30 a. m. Speakers, Mrs. Alden Clarke and Miss Charlotte R. Willard, of Marsovan, Turkey.

Boston Ministers' Meeting, Pilgrim Hall, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Dec. 6. Special meeting, with an address by some prominent delegates from the Federal Council of Churches.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Advertising Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

BISBEE—Mrs. Helen M. Bisbee, wife of the late Rev. C. G. Bisbee, well known in religious and educational circles in Eastern Nebraska in early days, a graduate of Oberlin in the class of '59, died at her home near Arlington, Neb., Nov. 11, 1920.

REV. CEPHAS F. CLAPP, D. D.

On Oct. 25, at Washougal, Wash., Rev. Cephas F. Clapp entered into his heavenly rest.

Dr. Clapp was born near Lamoille, Ill., Dec. 17, 1884, and was thus at the time of his death nearly 76 years of age. In April, 1870, he graduated from Chicago Theological Seminary and at once entered upon his first pastorate at Prairie du Chien, Wis., where he remained six years. During this time he married Miss Carrie Adams who lived only a year. At her death he resigned his pastorate and threw himself zealously into evangelistic work in the Middle West. He was very successful in this kind of work and his subsequent ministry has always been characterized by a strong evangelistic note. From 1883 to 1887 he was pastor of the College Church at Yankton, S. D.

In 1885 he married Miss Imogene Goodrich of Logansport, Ind., and in 1887 went to Pilgrim Church, Oakland, Cal., where he remained two years. In 1889 he was called to be Home Missionary Superintendent of the Congregational Churches in Oregon. In this position he served the churches of Oregon for 18 years. He resided for nearly 20 years at Forest Grove, making his influence felt in a large way in the life of the local church and community and of Pacific University.

GIVE YOUR MINISTER A NEW BOOK

WHAT AND WHERE IS GOD?
By RICHARD L. SWAIN
A better book to put into the hands of the religiously perplexed and doubting has not been written for many a day. Prof. Douglas C. Macintosh (Yale). Will help your minister help the troubled. $2.50

THE RELIGION OF A LAYMAN
By CHARLES R. BROWN
No technicalities—just the main content and bearing of the more vital portions of the Sermon on the Mount in plain modern talk. How this preacher does it will be worth your pastor's study. $1.25

RELIGION AND BUSINESS
By ROGER W. BABSON
"Isn't the fact that the Church survives and prospers under conditions that would kill any other industry," says Mr. Babson, "proof of itself that the Church has something worth while?" Tells the minister a lot that you've been thinking. $2.75

HOW TO PRAY
By CHARLES L. STATTERY
Goes to the Lord's Prayer to learn how to pray. A companion in simplicity and reverence to his much used volume "Why Men Pray." Share this good home-made loaf with your pastor. $1.50

THE CALL TO UNITY
By WILLIAM T. MANNING
(Rector of Trinity)
"Christian Unity is the new spirit which alone can impart permanence to the new order. It holds the key to all our other problems, social, political, and economic."—Dr. Manning. Add to your minister's zeal in this good cause. $2.00

THE MODERN READER'S NEW TESTAMENT
(NEW) ABRIDGED
By R. G. MOULTON
Presents the essential contents of the New Testament in a form that may be read in two or three sittings. A fine gift to a friend. $2.25

ITEMS FOR YOUR NEXT ORDER
Power of Prayer.................... $4.00
Cadman: Ambassadors of God.......... 3.50
McConnell: Church Finance and Social Ethics 1.50
Coffin: A More Christian Industrial Order 1.00
Snowden: Personality of God........... 1.75
Enelow: A Jewish View of Jesus....... 1.50

THE MACMILLAN CO., Publishers,
64-66 Fifth Ave., New York City, N. Y.

Record Books for Church and Church School
For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Superintendent, the Secretary. Roll Books, Class Books, Collection Envelopes.
ASK FOR CATALOGUES
14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

His three children graduated from Pacific University and for many years Dr. Clapp was a very enthusiastic and efficient member of the Board of Trustees and was always interested in the cause of Christian education.

When he resigned from the Board in 1911 the university honored itself by conferring upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. When he retired from his position as State Superintendent he accepted a call to the pastorate at Washougal, Wash., where he labored in loving service to the day of his death.

Surviving him are his widow, a daughter, Frances B. Clapp, head of the music department of the Doshisha College, Kyoto, Japan, and two sons, Dr. Gordon A. Clapp, army surgeon, Camp Lewis, Wash., and E. Dwinell Clapp, in the Federal Reserve Bank, Seattle, Wash.

Dr. Clapp preached his last sermon in his own pulpit just one day prior to his death—falling peacefully asleep on Monday evening from heart failure. He had hoped to continue in active service until next April when he would have rounded out fifty years of a continuous ministry, but no servant of God was more willing and glad to go when his Master called him.

Mr. Clapp was a man of a wonderfully fine personality, sympathetic, large hearted, untiring in Christlike service and in ministry to the needs of others. He had a consuming love for souls and every sermon he preached breathed a yearning to win men and women and little children to the service of the Lord Jesus. He possessed a keen sense of humor and a large faith in his fellow men which kept him sane and sound and broad minded in his outlook upon thought and life. He was a friend to everybody and the little children trusted and loved him.

At the same time he was ever fearless in defense of right and justice and in seeking to overthrow cruelty and injustice. The cause of temperance and civic righteousness had no more wise and valiant defender than he.

For several years he was Juvenile officer in Washougal and always took a most active part in civic and community life.

He preached and practiced in an eminent degree the gospel of good cheer and good will toward all and his life was a benediction to all who came in contact with him.

Perhaps his most abounding characteristic was his supreme and unswerving trust in his Lord and Master Jesus Christ. Whatever discouragements and disappointments he experienced, he seldom revealed them to his friends. The sunshine and good cheer of his life wos not simply temperamental but was built upon his implicit trust.

He used to say of his evangelistic work that he always tried to do his very best and then left the results to the Lord. He was not disturbed by apparently meager outward evidences of success.

He was one of the most unselfish and lovable of men and I seldom have known a man more free from guile and self-seeking, which often mar an otherwise splendid whole.

Barely two weeks before he died he took part in the exercises at Forest Grove, Ore., in celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Congregational Church there.

Though frail in body and slow in step, yet his mental powers were undimmed and the sparkle of his wit and the serenity of his spirit were a joy to his friends.

The day of his burial was a day of widespread sorrow in Washougal and wherever the news of his death had gone. The funeral services in the place where he had stood three days before, were conducted by Rev. J. M. Barber, Rev. Daniel Staver and Prof. H. L. Bates of Forest Grove, Ore., friends of Mr. Clapp for many years, and Rev. R. B. Parcel, pastor of the Methodist Church of Washougal, and Rev. A. J. Sullens of Portland, Superintendent of the Churches in Oregon.

The public schools of Washougal were closed in honor of their friend and teachers and children came in a body to pay their tribute of love.

Surely such a life cannot end. Its influence will live on in hearts and lives made glad by intimacy with him and in the larger life above. H. L. B.

MARGARET ALGOE FOSTER

Died at Clifton Springs, N. Y., Nov. 18, Margaret Algoe, wife of Prof. Frank Hugh Foster.

She was born in Flint, Mich., Jan. 13, 1867, graduated at Wellesley College in 1888, taught in High School for a number of years, making meantime two trips to Europe, was Dean of Women in Olivet College, 1905—1911, and married in 1913. As a teacher she was painstaking, clear and remarkably successful, gaining a phenomenal and universal popularity. As Dean she tried to form the young women after the ideals of Wellesley,

"'Mansei! Mansei! M-a-n-s-e-i!'
'Ten thousand years for Korea!'
'Long Live Korea!'"

This was the cry which came from the Koreans at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of March 1, 1919, and with these words Professor Hugh Heung-wo Cynn, an educated Korean, begins his graphic and authentic account of

The Rebirth of Korea

The Reawakening of the People: Its Causes and the Outlook

The well known author, Dr. William Elliot Griffis, says of it: "The book is bound to be an epoch-maker and to bring the pressure of the world's enlightened opinion to bear upon Japan."

Illustrated. Important Appendices.
Net, $1.50, postpaid.

THE ABINGDON PRESS
New York Cincinnati

PELOUBET'S
Select Notes
The World's Greatest Commentary on the International Sunday-School Lessons
By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.
IT IS SCHOLARLY
CONDENSED
COMPREHENSIVE PRACTICAL
These four words sum up its true value
Let us send you a pamphlet containing the first lesson taken from the volume of 1921
Volume for 1921 Now Ready
Price, $2.00 Net; $2.10 Delivered
W. A. WILDE COMPANY
120 BOYLSTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.
Rand-McNally Building, Chicago
FOR SALE AT ALL BOOKSTORES

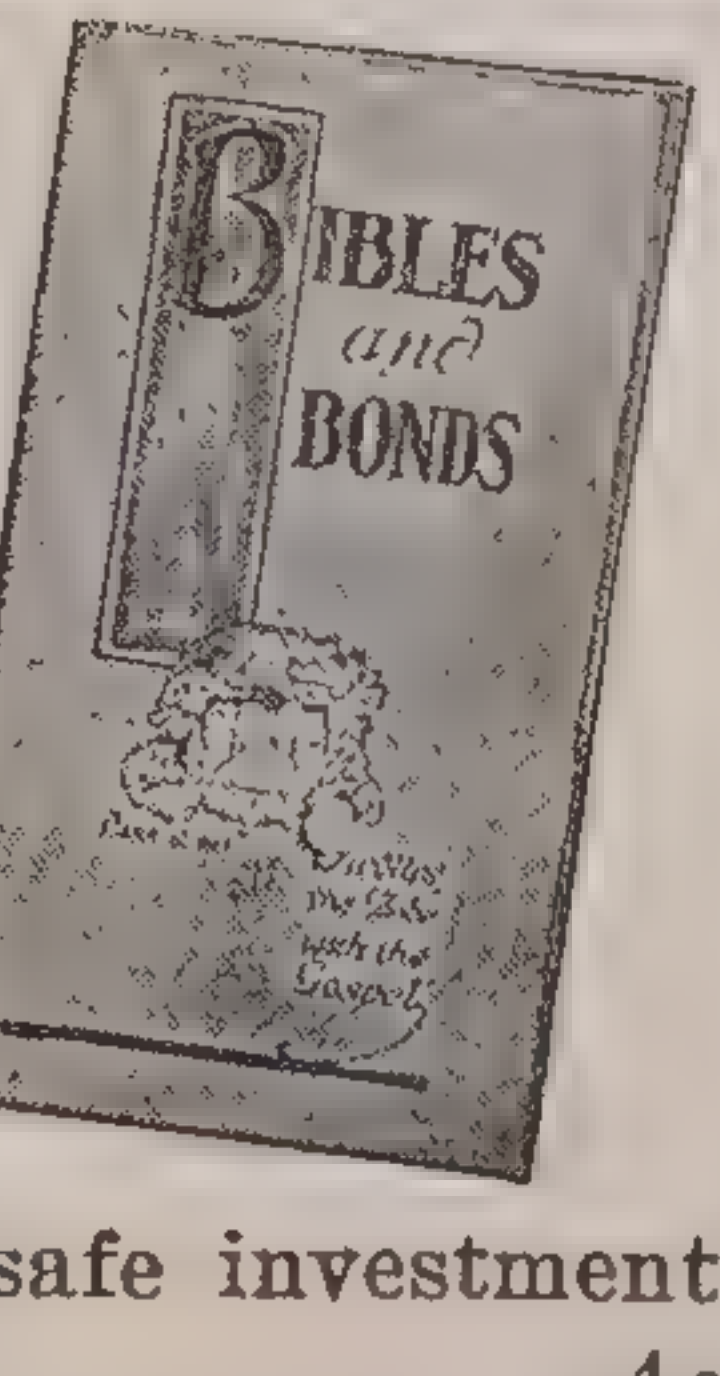
A Book for Business Men and Women
Roger W. Babson's
FORWARD-LOOKING WORK
Fundamentals of Prosperity
WHAT THEY ARE---WHENCE THEY COME
¶ A book much needed to-day, by the President of Babson's Statistical Organization, on "Strengthening the Foundation." WORTH MANY TIMES ITS COST!
BOARDS, NET $1.00
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

The Quality Investment

Guaranteed
Farm Mortgages
Forty Three Years
In Business---
Without Loss to
A Client

J. L. Pettyjohn & Co.
OLATHE, KANSAS

FAR SEEING INVESTORS
Are now buying securities issued by sound companies which are essential to the community.
Such securities are practically certain to yield a high return for a term of years. This applies to
STOCKS AND BONDS
Our list includes
Long Term Bonds
Secured Notes
Seasoned Industrial Stocks
May we send you lists of high grade New England Securities?
Earnest E. Smith & Co.
Specialists in New England Securities
52 Devonshire St., Boston
Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges



Write for this Booklet
"Bibles and Bonds" tells the interesting story of a world-wide work and a safe investment yielding as high as 8%.
Ask for Booklet J
American Bible Society
Bible House Astor Place New York

SERMONS BY

Dr. Clarence Edward Macartney

The Most Popular Sin in the World
Broken Ships
The Unpardonable Sin
Spiritualism and the Word of God
David—Does the Bible Praise Bad Men?
In the House of My Friends
25 cents the copy

Address W. HANF
Arch Street Presbyterian Church, 18th and Arch Streets
Philadelphia, Pa.

CASH FOR OLD LETTERS

United States or foreign correspondence with postage stamps or other postmarks of 1865 or previous. Also old collections of postage stamps I will buy at good price. Write or send with price asked.

W. VOIGT
3014 Bainbridge Ave. Bronx, New York City

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

STORY OF THE PILGRIM FATHERS

By H. G. TUNNICLIFF

Especially for young folks, but you'll enjoy it yourself

"Told with a peculiar charm that you will be loath to put it down until you have read it through."---LOOKOUT.

Copping's Famous Pictures. Net $1.25

F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

BOOK OF PRAYERS

Complete Manual of several hundred terse, pointed, appropriate Prayers for use in Church, Prayer Meetings, Young People's Society, Sunday Schools, Missionary, Grace and Sentence Prayers. Question of How and What to Pray in Public fully covered by model, suggestive and devout Prayers. Vest Pocket size, 128 pages. Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid, stamps taken. Agents Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

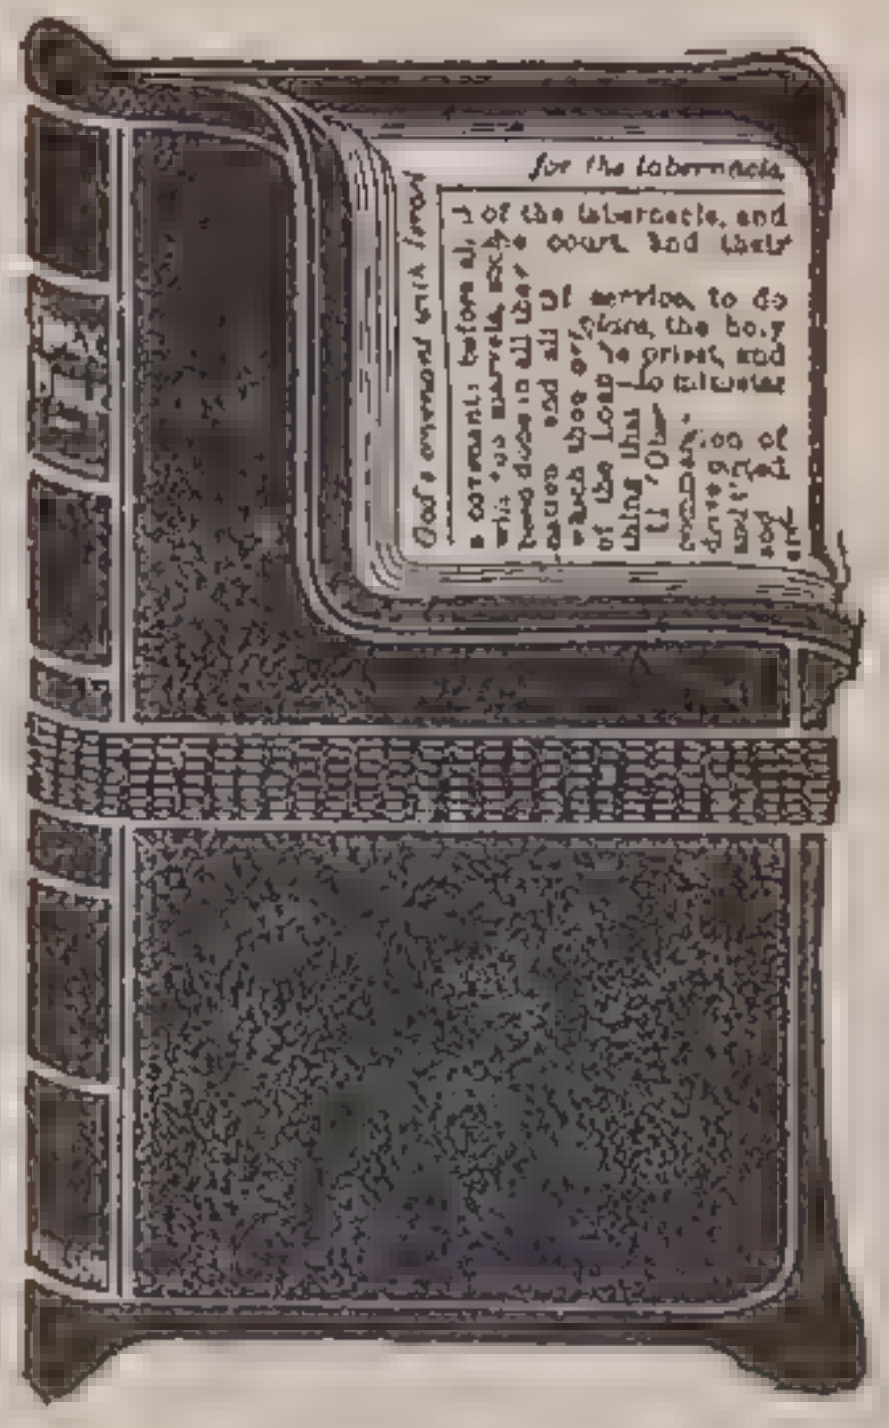
WHERE DID WE GET THE BIBLE?

Talks on the Bible—No. 3



How many books are in the Bible?

Who wrote the books of the Bible?

In what form was the Bible first produced?

In what language was the Old Testament first written?

In what language was the New Testament first written?

All these questions and dozens more of interest to you are answered in the Story of Our Bible. Write today for it to

THOMAS NELSON & SONS
Authorized Publishers
American Standard Bible
383 K Fourth Ave., New York City

The American Standard Bible text has been adopted by all the leading Colleges, Theological Seminaries, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and Bible Schools in the United States.

The American Standard Bible text is used by over 13,000,000 Sabbath School scholars to study their lessons from.

They realize that they cannot procure a more reliable version of the scriptures.

CHURCH FURNISHINGS

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.

Electric Organ blowing outfits for organs of any make.

Write, stating which catalog is desired.

Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER

is known all over the country. Four thousand churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars. THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio.

MENEELY BELL CO
TROY, N.Y. AND
198 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

PIPE & REED
CHURCH
ESTEY ORGANS
120 Boylston St.
BOSTON ~ MASS.

BILHORN THE BEST FOLDING ORGANS TELL THE TALE

BEGINNING with STYLE X. We Guarantee
Send for Catalog. Makers of the famous 3 and 5-ply OAK CASES
BILHORN BROTHERS, 136 West Lake St., Chicago

Church Chime Peal BELLS Memorial Bells a Specialty

McShane Bell Foundry Co., Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

THE
CHURCH SCHOOL EXHIBIT

IN ROOM 500, 14 BEACON ST., BOSTON, WILL, ON

MONDAY, DEC. 6, 1 TO 5 P.M.,

GIVE TEACHERS, PASTORS, AND PARENTS INTERESTED IN WORK WITH BEGINNERS AND PRIMARY CHILDREN

the opportunity of meeting

MISS FRANCES WELD DANIELSON

in an afternoon of

CHRISTMAS PLANS AND PLAYS, DEMONSTRATION OF HAND-WORK, AND DELIGHTFUL "STORY-TELLING HOURS."

From 2 to 2:30 and 4 to 4:30

Miss Danielson is the author of The Beginners' Course in the Graded Lessons, Chief Editor of the Pilgrim Elementary Teacher and a widely known Sunday School writer.

XMAS SUGGESTIONS FOR HOME AND SCHOOL

where she had herself been formed, and which she passionately loved. She was distinguished for her gracious manners, her great generosity, her large and chivalrous way of viewing life and its daily affairs, her unselfishness, promptness and reliability. As a companion she was perennially interesting and her wide interests in matters of suffrage, literature, education and religion, made her contributions to any common cause of great value to her associates. After a year's illness, which she bore without complaints and with undaunted courage and in which she was mercifully spared any great pain, she fell peacefully asleep. To the last hour of her consciousness she was receiving with great pleasure the messages of love from friends to many of whom her place can never be filled.

F. H. F.

DR. ANTON HUELSTER

Rev. Anton Huelster was born in Fredeburg, Germany, in 1844, and died at Barrington, Ill., Nov. 11, 1920, after a lingering illness from diabetes, at the age of 76 years. He was the youngest of five brothers, all of whom were ministers of the Gospel, and came from a Roman Catholic family. The family came to America in 1848, and settled in New York City, later going to a farm near Lomira, Wis. During his earlier years Mr. Huelster was a minister of the Evangelical denomination. In 1867 he went to Germany and in 1870 secured his Ph.D. degree from the University of Tuebingen. Returning to America that summer he was married to Miss Caroline Hesse, of Neenah, Wis., and in the fall entered Northwestern College at Naperville, Ill., as professor of Greek, and later was professor of theology in the Union Biblical Institute. In 1891 he transferred his ministerial affiliations to the German Conference of Congregational Churches, serving in a number of our German churches until about three years ago when he resigned the pastorate at Naperville and went to live at Barrington. The funeral services were held at the home in Barrington on the morning of Nov. 15, led by Rev. B. R. Schultz, and in the afternoon at the German Congregational Church, Naperville, where Dr. Eversz, Dr. Obenhaus, and others spoke. Interment was at Naperville. Dr. Huelster was the author of several books.

MRS. MARIAN HYDE OLMSTEAD

There passed from her earthly home at Wilton, Ct., on Oct. 24, 1920, to her eternal abiding place in Christ, a dear saint of God, Mrs. Edward Olmstead.

She was born in Norwich, Ct., in 1830, as Marian Hyde. Her lineage was direct from Elder William Brewster of Pilgrim fame.

She came to Wilton in 1855 with her husband, son of Hawley Olmstead, who founded and conducted the Wilton Academy for boys and girls, which was well known as one of the best of those famous fitting schools of which New England is still proud. Mrs. Olmstead not only mothered a large family of her own, but was a mother to the boys of the Academy, many of whom, as men, still acknowledge their obligations to her.

She has borne the Wilton Church in all its interests on her heart for these many years and her hands were always willing to serve it to the utmost.

Her life has been a poem of goodness and sweetness and the memory of it is very dear to a host of loving friends in Western Connecticut.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord—Yea saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

One of the world's leading pianists was kept for five years on one lesson. At last when he had begun to despair of ever making any progress, his teacher said to him, "Go, my son, you have nothing more to learn. You are the greatest musician in Italy." It only needs perseverance to accomplish great things.—Young People.

Walker's the Best Concordance

Over 50,000 more references than any other low priced concordance to the Bible. 980 pages. Cloth $3.00. ½ leather $3.75. Postage 20 cents.

14 Beacon Street
Boston
THE PILGRIM PRESS
19 W. Jackson St
Chicago

Lectures at Andover Seminary

Mr. R. A. Woods, of the South End House, Boston, who has recently returned from a journey of observation in the East, will give two lectures at Andover Theological Seminary, Cambridge, on the general topics of "The Social Emergency of Christianity in Asia." The first lecture will come on Tuesday, Dec. 14, at 4.30 in the afternoon, and the second Thursday, Dec. 16, at the same hour. A general invitation is given to ministers and others who are interested in this topic to attend these lectures.

Notes on Prohibition

In Washington, D. C., the number of arrests shows a decrease of almost 10 per cent. for the year ending June 30, 1920, as compared with the previous year.

The result of the voting in Canada is to close the whole country to the saloon, except in British Columbia, where the vote went in favor of "government" control, which it is alleged many voters understood that phrase to be the equivalent of making an end of the liquor traffic.

In San Francisco prohibition has decreased arrests for drunkenness from 17,354 during the year ending July 1, 1919, to 1814 during the year ending July 1, 1920. While crime all over the world has been doubling, San Francisco has seen at least a slight decrease in arrests on nearly every important charge.

Argentina has just concluded a commercial travelers' treaty with the United States in which there is a provision prohibiting traveling salesmen from representing liquor houses. A significant point is that the request for the insertion of this clause came from Argentina and not from the United States.

The sailors on ships entering our ports have shown a disposition to smuggle in liquor on a large scale and grow peevish about it when American customs officials search the ships and confiscate their stocks of intoxicants before they can be carried ashore. Many of them are no doubt the tools of bigger men. Time will prove to them that this smuggling in of liquor to the United States is a speculation of the riskiest sort.

Even under the inefficient enforcement of Prohibition in Chicago, the Juvenile Protective Association, according to its annual report, has had fewer cases of non-support of children and there have been a smaller number of prosecutions of parents under the juvenile delinquency laws than before the Volstead Act was put into operation. A betterment of the conditions in the dance halls of the city where liquor was formerly sold is also reported.

Moonshining has not stopped in the mountains of the South, it may even for the moment have increased. In an article in the New Republic, Mr. Louis Graves, after a close study of the situation, gives it as his opinion that alcohol is dying, but it is dying hard. United States Prohibition Commissioner John F. Kramer, in an address to the West Side Y. M. C. A. on the question, "What Does Prohibition Prohibit?" said:

> Prohibition will be real in a generation; it has already accomplished wonders, many persons formerly accustomed to their drinks have cut them out, the saloon has gone forever, but it will be another generation before the appetite for drink will be entirely eliminated from our people through the operation of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The Pratt Teachers' Agency
70 Fifth Avenue, New York
Recommends teachers to colleges, public and private schools in all parts of the country.
Advises parents about schools. WM. O. PRATT, Mgr.

A man may fight fiercely to hold his own in business; but he does not need to fight to get ahead of some one in the elevator, or up the car steps, or at the postoffice window. And no matter how strong competition is, business and personal courtesy make it easier and pleasanter for everybody.—William H. Hamby.

All along the course of God's leading of the race, men of short sight and small motives have bobbed up to interpose their opposition. They have hindered progress for a little time, but not for long. We may lay God's motions on the table, but we cannot defeat them.—John Andrew Holmes.

Edith Cavell
the martyred nurse, while in her Belgian prison, and to the day of her death, read and marked with her innermost thoughts, her copy of A'Kempis'
Imitation of Christ
The Oxford University Press has just issued a facsimile edition with all her markings. It is beautifully bound in red sultan, Venetian morocco, with gilt top.
Price $1.75
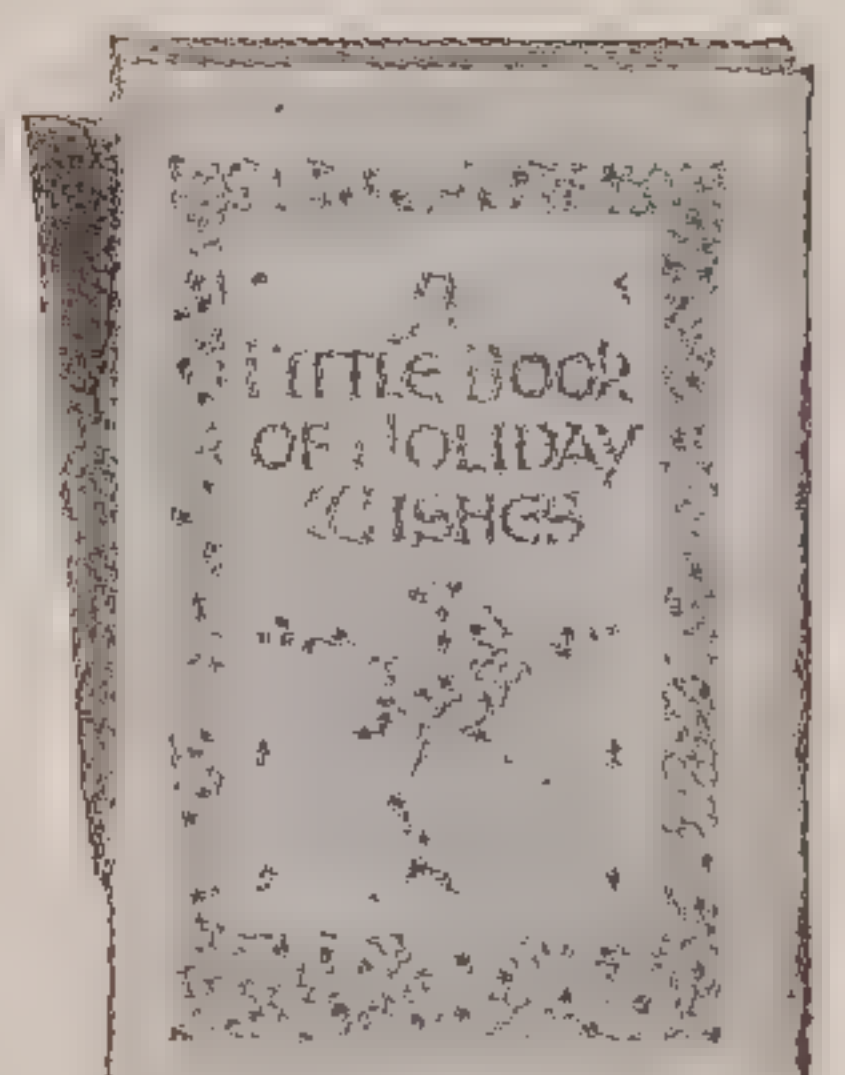
At all Booksellers, or the Publishers
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS AMERICAN BRANCH
35 West 32d Street, New York



WHY WAIT until the last moment to decide?
"After all THE MESSAGE is the thing."
"WISHING BOOKS" A series of dainty Booklets containing hand lettered messages. An ideal gift for CHRISTMAS NEW YEAR'S, Birthdays, etc., price 25 cents each postpaid. Canterbury Gifts are Artistic, Literary and Exclusive.
SEND One Dollar for Special Xmas Assortment No. 2, worth $1.50
For Illustrated Catalogue of Unique Gifts.

THE CANTERBURY COMPANY, 64 E. VAN BUREN ST.
CHICAGO, ILL.

HARTFORD
W. Douglas Mackenzie
President

Theological Seminary
Dean, M. W. Jacobus
School of Religious Pedagogy
Dean, E. H. Knight
Kennedy School of Missions
Dean, E. W. Capen

Through these associated schools Hartford offers full training for:

1. The Christian ministry.
2. The whole field of religious education.
3. The foreign field.

Each School has its independent faculty and its own institutional life, and together they form one interdenominational institution with the unity of common aim and spirit.

The Congregational Training School For Women
Trains for Christian leadership.
The work of Church Assistant, Director of Religious Education, and Instructor in Week-day Religious Education offers opportunity for the finest and highest type of social service.
One and two year courses. Expenses low.
MISS MARGARET TAYLOR, Dean,
5603 Dorchester Ave., Chicago, Ill.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
An undenominational training school for
The Ministry Religious Education
Foreign Missions Social Service
Curricula high grade and modern., Graduate degrees. University of California privileges. Opportunities for the study of Oriental peoples. Open to men and women of all Christian denominations. For catalogue address
WILLIAM FREDERIC BADE, Dean, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M. A., B. D. and Ph. D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

Chicago Theological Seminary
Is affiliated with the University of Chicago. Seminary instruction is supplemented by the varied and limitless opportunities of the University and the Divinity School. Tuition free.
Trains for
Pulpit and Pastorate
Missionary Work
Community Service
Religious Education
Opportunity is offered to secure the M. A. degree during preparation for the B. D.; also an annual two-year honor fellowship for post-graduate work.
5757 University Ave., Chicago, Illinois. OZORA S. DAVIS, President.

BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
105th year opens Sept. 29, 1920. For College or non-College men. Courses, regular and elective; leading to diploma or degree; modern, thorough, practical. Expenses low. For Catalogue or information address
Prof. WARREN J. MOULTON, Cor. Sec'y.

The Graduate School of Theology
OBERLIN COLLEGE
A strong, well balanced course, preparatory to the work of the ministry at home or abroad.
Second semester's work begins February 8 with all the regular faculty teaching.
Address G. W. FISKE, JR., Dean, Oberlin, Ohio.

OUR READERS' FORUM

An Appreciation of Dr. Herring

Dear Mr. Editor:

It was at the close of the month of July last when two of the American Board missionaries from Turkey met, by appointment, the warm-hearted Dr. Herring in his New York office. The hour was spent in talking over with the great leader the financial needs of Anatolia College, in the important part she must play in the reconstruction of Turkish Asia Minor.

As the missionaries related the experiences of the college in the great world war and told the story of its eleven martyred teachers and families, all of whom had remained faithful to their Master, the heart of the sympathetic man was touched. His many expressions of keen sympathy and profound interest in all future plans for rebuilding and reconstructing the college greatly encouraged those who were seeking counsel.

In the time spent with this busy man, we could not but be impressed with his breadth of interest in suffering humanity and with his intimate knowledge of the problems confronting Turkey and the whole of the Near East.

Dr. Herring was eager to learn of the widespread influence of Anatolia College on the Black Sea Coast and throughout the interior regions of Asia Minor. The few instances cited to him of the part the college alumni played in the war as doctors, druggists, nurses and soldiers in the Turkish army, besides the many who, because of persecution, were obliged to flee to America and who today are holding positions of trust and responsibility in our own fair land, interested him most profoundly.

The overworked man looked tired, yet spoke of spending most of his vacation in the city where he could attend to the various needs at the office. He spoke, however, of taking but a few days for rest at the seashore and it was only a short time after our visit that he was granted his prolonged vacation.

The impressions of this first and last meeting with Dr. Herring will go with these two missionaries through life, for to talk with him for only a short time made the stranger understand that Dr. Herring was truly "a man of God."

DANA K. GETCHELL.

Marsovan, Turkey.

Theological Extremes

Dear Mr. Editor:

The two theological extremes surely met in the Nov. 4 Congregationalist.

On the first page was the splendid write-up of the Second Church of Dorchester, with the reassuring testimony as to its loyalty to the fundamentals of our faith. It was rich beyond expression, and some of us find it very easy to pray for such a church and people and we are not surprised at its evident prosperity.

On the other extreme was the short article by Mr. Sheldon on "Facts about our Bible," which is highly destructive of that same faith. Such testimony sorely grieves the hearts of some of your readers. By that system of interpretation contradictions will be found most anywhere. In Phil. 4 : 12 Paul says he knows how both "to abound and suffer need." In 4 : 19 he tells the Philippians that "God will supply all their need." Why should the Philippians have all their needs supplied and the great missionary suffer actual need? Is that also a contradiction?

If Mr. Sheldon will allow the same liberty in interpreting the Bible as he uses when he speaks of "the rising and setting sun," there is not a single passage quoted that cannot be easily reconciled.

If the testimony of one who has read the Bible through nearly forty-five times is of any worth most of the so-called contradictions are fancied and have been discovered only recently.

O. A. BARNES.

Appleton, Minn.

Carl S. Patton for Secretary

Dear Mr. Editor:

May I suggest a name for consideration in connection with the very important office of Secretary of the National Council?

Whether the man I shall mention can be secured I do not know, for this letter is written without any conference with him and entirely without knowledge on his part that it is being written. But that he has in a very great degree the qualifications of personality, executive ability, constructive leadership, wide acquaintance, platform ability and familiarity with our denominational ideals and program will at once be evident so soon as the name is mentioned. The man I have in mind is Rev. Carl S. Patton, D. D., of Los Angeles.

J. PERCIVAL HUGET.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

The evangelism of the past which neglected education or shirked the social gospel has not endured. The American evangelism of the last three hundred years that has left permanent result, like that of Edwards, Lyman Beecher, Finney and Moody, has always linked impassioned evangelistic appeal with a program of education and social service.—William Horace Day.

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

Big demand for teachers for emergency vacancies. Ernest Olp, Steger Bldg., Chicago.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

PASTORATE WANTED

A young, well-educated and successful Congregational minister, now pastor of a leading church of the Northwest, desires change of pastorate on or before July 1. Holds Ph.D. from state institution. Expects $2,000 and parsonage. Address "S. R.," care Congregationalist.

Pastorate—By middle-aged Congregational pastor. Personal and training class methods used successfully. Over thirty additions to present Church since Jan. 1. Last pastorate ten years. Salary expected not less than $2,000 and modern house. Address Box 423, Oakland, Io.

POSITION WANTED

Position wanted as companion or invalid attendant by a lady who has had ten years' experience. Fidelis, care Congregationalist.

MISCELLANEOUS

A Congregational Minister will lose all his life's savings in mortgage if not redeemed by Jan. 1. Now pay ten per cent. interest. Will gladly pay any amount to get a five-year loan, business done through your own bank. References. "Wife," Congregationalist.

Stereopticon Slides—"Story of Hymns and Hymn Writers," "Some Mother's Boy," "Ruined Churches of France," "Life of Christ," "Boy Scouts," "Ben Hur," "Other Wise Man," "Quo Vadis," "Passion Play," "Red Triangle," "Bell and Flag," "Pilgrim's Progress," "Billy Sunday," "In His Steps." Many others. Card brings my complete list. Willis P. Hume, North Tonawanda, N. Y.

For Sale—Stereopticon Lantern. Oxy-Hydrogen, Dissolving, Sidney Herbert make, two lenses, 2¾" "Darlot, Paris," 4¾" condensers. Set kerosene lamps included. All packed in box 18 x 30 x 17". Just the thing for church and vestry use. Everett W. Lewis, 38 Oak St., Hyde Park, Mass.

Don't Wear a Truss

Brooks' Appliance, the modern scientific invention, the wonderful new discovery that relieves rupture, will be sent on trial. No obnoxious springs or pads.

MR. C. E. BROOKS

Brooks' Rupture Appliance

Has automatic Air Cushions. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No lies. Durable, cheap. Sent on trial to prove it. Protected by U. S. patents. Catalog and measure blanks mailed free. Send name and address today.

Brooks Appliance Co., 473 C State St., Marshall, Mich.

Vapo-Cresolene.

Used for more than forty years. The benefit derived from it is unquestionable.

(Established 1879)

FOR more than a generation we have been receiving grateful testimony to the virtues of this thoroughly tested and proven treatment. It stops violent coughing, and difficult breathing, assuring restful sleep because the antiseptic vapor carries healing with every breath. Booklet 60 tells why the diseases for which Cresolene is recommended yield to this simple and dependable treatment."

Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists

VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt Street, New York

Don't Cough

Quickly banish distressing, bronchial irritation, hoarseness, inflammation and sore throat discomforts the safe, sure way, as do thousands of speakers and vocalists.
Prices: 15c. 35c. 75c. and $1.25.

JOHN I. BROWN & SON
Boston, Mass.

TAKE BROWN'S Bronchial TROCHES

Girls! Girls!!
Clear Your Skin
With Cuticura

Sample each (Soap, Ointment, Talcum) of Cuticura Laboratories, Dept V, Malden, Mass. Sold everywhere.

ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION FOR

CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH

120 YEARS OF SUCCESSFUL USE

RELIEVES PROMPTLY AND SAFELY

ALSO FOR BRONCHITIS, LUMBAGO, RHEUMATISM.

W. EDWARDS & SON
157 QUEEN VICTORIA ST.
LONDON, ENG.

ALL DRUGGISTS OR
E. FOUGERA & CO. INC.
90-92 BEEKMAN ST, N.Y.

(Continued from page 694)

choice is given to correspond to the varying sums in a money campaign. The word "intention" is used instead of "pledge," because many would accept the former who would refuse the latter and most would respond as conscientiously to the one as to the other.

We have fixed our quota at 750 cards, being 150 per cent. of our resident membership. We are not attempting in this first experiment to fix on the number of "regularly," etc. We shall however divide the number as follows: Boys, Girls and Young People 150 cards, Men 250 and Women 350. The canvassing of men will be by men, of women by women and so with the young people. Each group will have "teams," but the rivalry will be not so much between teams as between groups. Which will go over the top first and farthest?

As to the standard in determining whether the outcome of these "intentions" is satisfactory in actual attendance we have fixed on 375 as the goal for Sunday morning attendance, not using average attendance but whether on one-half the Sundays in 1921 (excluding the summer vacation period) we have an attendance of 375 or over.

Each church would have to fix it own "quota" according to local conditions but they should be put well above the present attendance while still within reach.

An Experiment Worth Trying

We wish that a hundred other churches would try this experiment this fall and winter. Such a campaign should not be applied to church membership for that would lower the significance of church membership and the sacredness of the sacraments but it can safely be applied to church attendance. If by this we can draw others to the services it will give pastoral evangelism a new and splendid opportunity.

If in these one hundred experiments it appeared that the "Every Member Canvass" was an effective instrument in this way also, if we found that it increased our congregations ten, twenty, thirty per cent., we could make it known through The Congregationalist and it might come into general use. For several decades our Jeremiahs have been lamenting the decadence of church attendance. Perhaps, if all went at it in a systematic, united, intelligent, ardent fashion, as we do after money, the tide might turn. We have made the closing years of the Tercentenary memorable with the great sums of money brought into the church treasuries. Let us make the opening years of the fourth century equally memorable with the bringing of people to the house of God. Let us call it the Fourth Century Forward Movement.

West Roxbury, Mass.

League of the New Day

Next Week's Readings and Prayers

Week of Dec. 6–12

Monday. God's Messenger. Mal. 3:1-18; 4:1-5.

Tuesday. Light and Love. 1 John 1:1-10; 2:1-6.

Wednesday. Brotherly Love. 1 John 2:7-29.

Thursday. Our Father's Love. 1 John 3:1-24.

Friday. Casting Out Fear. 1 John 4:1-21.

Saturday. Overcoming Faith. 1 John 5:1-21.

Sunday. Waiting for God. Ps. 40.

Object for Intercession

For Those Who Are Out of Work and in Financial Trouble:

O Lord, who carest for us and for all thy children, remember in thy mercy, we entreat thee, all those who are in any distress of mind because of unemployment or the failure of resources. Open a way before them and in the midst of trouble let their souls be strong and confident in thee.—R.

Man becomes impatient with woman because her reasons are so insufficient, but ten years later, while still maintaining that her reasons were poor, he has to admit that her conclusions were good.—John Andrew Holmes.

"Come Ye Apart"
By DR. JOHN H. JOWETT
Dr. Jowett's new Year Book, contains a Scripture passage, a thought and a prayer for a year.
"Dr. Jowett has left America but he is still blessedly with us in these nugget messages."—S. S. TIMES.
ATTRACTIVE BINDING. Net $1.50
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

"Dear Santa: Please Make Mother Well"

Christmas morning this year will dawn bleak and gray for thousands of little kiddies, whose only Santa Claus will be the stalking spectre of Tuberculosis, exacting his toll of 150,000 lives this year in our country alone. Can we—can you—reflect on our Christmas spirit with a sense of righteousness if we have failed to include Christmas Seals with our gifts—?

Buy Tuberculosis Seals Use Christmas

Each seal helps finance your national, state and local tuberculosis associations who are devoting all that science and human devotion have in them to combat this preventable and curable scourge. Buy and use all the Christmas Seals you can afford.

NATIONAL TUBERCULOSIS ASSOCIATION
381 Fourth Avenue New York City

BIBLES of every description, size and price. We are always pleased to quote prices, send catalogues, or to fill orders promptly.
14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

Massachusetts General Hospital
Training School for Nurses. Established 1873. 1,350 Graduates. Prepares its students for advanced positions. For particulars consult Circular of Information. Address SALLY M. JOHNSON, R. N., Supt. of Nurses. Boston, Massachusetts.

THE
CONGREGATIONAL
HAND BOOK
for 1921

Needed in every Congregational Church for Daily Use and Frequent Reference.

Contains
Daily Bible Readings
Fellowship of Prayer
Church Prayer Meeting Topics
Christian Endeavor Topics
Sunday School Lessons
Directory of National Council and Missionary Societies
Colleges and Seminaries
Congregational Statistics
Books on Congregationalism
Great Names
Confession of Faith

Prices
SINGLE COPY - $0.10
12 COPIES - - 1.00
25 " - - 2.00
50 " - - 3.50
75 " - - 4.50
100 " - - 5.00

ORDER NOW
EDITION LIMITED

Circulation Dept.
The Congregationalist and Advance
14 Beacon St. BOSTON 19 W. Jackson St. CHICAGO

Best Things about Piedmont

By Dwight Mallory Pratt, D.D.

It is said that Piedmont is the best advertised college in America; but the best things about the college can never be mentioned in an advertisement. First among these is the fact that Piedmont, from its inception, has been pre-eminently a great venture of faith. When the little school founded with prophetic vision by Dr. Spence was no longer able financially, to carry itself, the purchase of the property and the assuming of its money obligations without resources in sight for doing this, involved a courage, faith and practical wisdom on the part of the present President that are far above the realm of human expediency.

When the Treasurer has come to the President with solicitude and said, "Within ten days a note of $900 must be met and there is no money on hand with which to meet it," he was answered, "Great things can happen in ten days; where is your faith?" And when the situation remained unchanged until the tenth day, and the morning mail brought three letters, one containing a check for ten dollars, another for twenty-five, and a third for two thousand, all totaling more than twice the amount needed for the immediate emergency, the President could again well say, as he handed the money to the Treasurer, "Where is your faith?" This oft-repeated experience warrants one in saying that Piedmont, notwithstanding the good business sense in its management and the wisdom with which it is advertised, is exceptionally built and sustained by faith.

A second feature of the college is its ideals. Like the Christian colleges of New England a generation ago, its teaching force is constituted of men and women who believe that the highest aim of education is character, and who have been so effective in their example that no student has ever graduated from the college without having definitely committed himself or herself to the Christian confession and life.

So appreciated is Piedmont in Demorest that three of the town's people have recently donated one hundred acres for one of the most beautiful and sightly college campuses in America. When the writer exclaimed at the surpassing beauty and grandeur of the Blue Ridge Mountains, lying along the whole sweep of the western horizon, President Jenkins remarked, "This constitutes our Department of Æsthetics." This additional acquisition of land endows the college with an estate of 500 acres in the heart of one of the most beautiful regions in the Southland. It is the only institution of its kind that provides higher educational advantages for the white population of the vast territory stretching from the mountains of Virginia to Florida. It constitutes an opportunity for social reconstruction and nation building unsurpassed in America, and which some people of large vision, Christian statesmanship and abundant wealth will yet recognize in gifts adequate to its endowment and its field.

¶ENDORSED BY ALL DENOMINATIONS. ¶THE ACCEPTED MODERN ENGLISH VERSION
The Twentieth Century New Testament
NEW POCKET EDITION, $1.25---READY F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

The Best Gift
Lasts Through The Year

Many Give a Year's Subscription to

The Congregationalist and Advance

A Great Year is Coming For the Christian World—For Congregationalists—For Our Own and Only National Church Paper—We all Need the Paper More Than Ever Before, for Every Member of the Family. It will be Full of Human Interest, Important Facts, Spiritual Help, Church Methods, Good Stories, Inspiration from Leaders of Thought.

Special Christmas Offer

Your Own Subscription Renewed for a Year and a Gift New Subscription for a Friend for $5.00. $6.00 worth for $5.00.

But Must Be Sent to Us Direct and Before Christmas.

We will send an Attractive Announcement of your Gift to your Friend.

Department of Circulation
The Congregationalist and Advance
14 Beacon Street, Boston 9 19 W. Jackson Street, Chicago

Favorite Poems

"A poem which always provides for me solid ground when the bottom seems to fall out of everything," is the way Rev. C. E. Peterson, pastor of the Congregational church at Central Lake, Mich., characterizes the following poem:

He might have reared a palace at a word
 Who sometimes had not where to lay His head.
 Time was when He who nourished crowds with bread
Would not one meal unto Himself afford.
 He healed another's scratch, His own side bled;
Side, hands, and feet with cruel piercings gored.
Twelve legions girded with angelic sword
 Stood at His beck, the scorned and buffeted.
Oh, wonderful the wonders left undone!
 Yet not more wonderful than those He wrought!
 Oh, self-restraint, surpassing human thought!
To have all power, yet be as having none!
 Oh, self-denying love, that thought alone
 For needs of others, never for its own.

R. C. Trench.

The Return of Jesus

(Continued from page 714)

pected in their lifetime, though Paul already finds it necessary in 2 Thess. to warn them not to be troubled as though the day were just at hand. In view of the emphasis in these early epistles it is interesting to note that the subject is so largely absent from his later epistles. Either Paul developed serious doubts about the doctrine or later considered it of no importance, or failed to give some of his churches instruction regarding what he formerly thought important.

F. M. Sheldon.

(This subject will be continued next week.)

Benevolent Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D. D., Secretary; Rev. John J. Walker, Associate Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 609 Congregational House, Boston.

CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, maintained by the Congregational Conferences of the six New England States, offers aid to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies in New England and elsewhere. Congregational House, Boston, Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Secretary, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D. D., Chairman.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Zeigler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BOSTON and vicinity (Incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel C. Bushnell, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Fred L. Norton, Sec., 919 Tremont Building, Boston.

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 503 Congregational House, Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIOR, 19 S. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas., Friday Meeting, 10 A. M.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIFIC, 760 Market St., Room 421, San Francisco. Mrs. Ernest A. Evans, President; Mrs. W. W. Ferrier, Treasurer; Miss E. S. Benton, Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Mrs. P. S. Suffern, Treas.; Miss Miriam F. Choate, Sec.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION (of Massachusetts and Rhode Island), Mrs. Amos L. Hatheway, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec., 607 Congregational House, Boston.

Boston Seaman's Friend Society

Incorporated 1829

306 Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

President, Samuel Usher; Cor. Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton. A Congregational Society devoted to the material, social and moral welfare of seamen of all nations and supported mainly by the New England churches. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Room at Tarpaulin Cove. Bequests should be made payable to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society. Contributions from churches and individuals solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis.

American Seamen's Friend Society

76 Wall St., New York, Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational National and International Seamen's Society.

Maintains a Sailor's Home and Institute, 507 West Street, New York.

Loan Libraries ($25 each) placed on vessels sailing from New York.

Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.

Publishes the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).

Officers: John B. Calvert, D. D., President; George Sidney Webster, D. D., Secretary. Send contributions to Clarence C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 76 Wall Street, New York.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817.

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps all churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.
8 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, a Constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trusts for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS can reach every principal city and town in the United States through the advertising columns of The Congregationalist and Advance.

For rates and other information write

KENNETH S. BALLOU,
Advertising Manager.

National Agencies

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Moderator, Rev. Henry Churchill King, Oberlin, O.
Secretary ad interim, Rev. Edwin D. Eaton,
289 Fourth Ave., New York
Assistant Secretary, Truman J. Spencer,
289 Fourth Ave., New York
Treasurer, Frank F. Moore,
287 Fourth Ave., New York

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)
14 Beacon Street, Boston
19 West Jackson Street, Chicago

ALBERT W. FELL, Business Manager
HARRY M. NELSON, Treasurer
VERNON M. SCHENCK, General Sales Manager
A. A. HAGSTROM, Western Manager
KENNETH S. BALLOU, Advertising Manager

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Established by the National Council at Grand Rapids, in 1919

DR. LUCIEN C. WARNER, Chairman
REV. HERMAN F. SWARTZ, General Secretary
REV. JAMES E. MCCONNELL, Ass't Secretary
WALTER E. BELL, Treasurer
REV. JOHN LUTHER KILBON, Financial Sec'y

Program for the coming year to include Missionary Education, Stewardship, and a Financial Campaign in behalf of our denominational work.

Regional Directors for 1920-21

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont: Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Massachusetts, Rhode Island: Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D. D., 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Connecticut, New York: Rev. Charles E. Burton, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Porto Rico: Rev. George L. Cady, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee: Rev. L. H. Keller, D. D., Central Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Colored Churches of South: Rev. Alfred Lawless, Jr., D. D., 45½ Auburn Ave., Atlanta, Ga.
Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia: Rev. John Luther Kilbon, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska: Rev. Robert W. Gammon, D. D., 19 West Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.
Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota: Rev. William F. English, Jr., Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., and 19 So. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana: Rev. W. W. Scudder, D. D., Fountain and Aubert Sts., St. Louis, Mo.
Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico: Rev. W. J. Minchin, D. D., Guardian Trust Bldg., Denver, Col.
Southern California, Arizona: Rev. George L. Kenngott, Ph.D., 831 So. Hope St., Los Angeles, Cal.
Northern California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Alaska: Rev. H. H. Kelsey, D. D., Phelan Bldg., San Francisco, Cal., and Plymouth Church, Seattle, Wash.

All correspondence relative to the local work of promotion should be addressed to the Director of your Region.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

Conserves the welfare of the ministry by making modest grants to meet the needs of aged ministers, or their widows and children.

Rev. William A. Rice, Secretary
Rev. Charles S. Mills, Associate Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

A sound, scientific, contributory system of old-age pensions for the Congregational minister, affording also protection for disability and the defense of his family in case of his untimely death; endowed by the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. William A. Rice, Associate Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

A Permanent Tercentenary Memorial Fund of $5,000,000 held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council, the income used to endow the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers by providing funds to supplement the minister's annual payments toward old age annuities.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, Executive Secretary
Lucius R. Eastman, Chairman Executive Committee

National Societies

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Edward Lincoln Smith

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Wm. E. Strong
Candidate Secretary, Rev. Alden H. Clark
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr.
19 So. Lasalle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast District, Rev. Henry H. Kelsey,
Phelan Bldg., San Francisco
New York Office, 287 Fourth Ave., N. Y.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Rev. William S. Beard, Secretary of Promotion
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry,
Secretary of Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Nineteen self-supporting state organizations are in Federated relations with the National Society. The state Superintendent or Secretary is the official representative of all home mission interests.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. George L. Cady, Secretary
Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis, Associate Secretary
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Eskimos, Chinese, Japanese and Hindus; in Island Territories of Porto Rico and Hawaii. New work in Southwest taken under instruction of National Council.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

289 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
(Church Extension Boards)
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Rev. Charles H. Richards, Editorial Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. In sixty-six years it has helped to build 4,982 churches and 1,334 parsonages.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Rev. A. E. Holt, Social Service Sec.
Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Missionary Education Sec.
Samuel F. Wilkins, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service and Missionary Education; aids Colleges, Academies, Training Schools, Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities and among immigrants.

American Tract Society

Its work is interdenominational and international in scope, and is commended by all the evangelical churches. It has published the Gospel Message in 178 languages, dialects and characters. Its colporters meet the immigrants with Christian literature in many languages, and visit the spiritually destitute. It has issued over 19,000,000 copies of publications in Spanish and Portuguese for the people of Latin-America. Its benevolent work is dependent upon donations and legacies.

WILLIAM PHILLIPS HALL, President.
JUDSON SWIFT, D. D., General Secretary.

Donations may be sent to Louis Tag, Treasurer, 101 Park Avenue, Cor. 40th Street, New York, N. Y.; those from New England should be forwarded to Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, Ph.D., Field Secretary, 50 Bromfield Street, Boston, Mass., and those from the West and Northwest to Rev. P. Marion Simms, Ph.D., Field Secretary, 420 Valley National Bank Building, Des Moines, Io.

ANY BOOK YOU WANT FOR CHRISTMAS

Will be promptly supplied if obtainable anywhere by either one of our well equipped stores in Boston or Chicago.

Any Book on Any Subject, Published Anywhere

Our Christmas Book List Mailed on Request

The list covers the best of recent Fiction, History, Biography, Travel, Out-of-door Books, Religious, and Books for Boys and Girls

---

Suitable Gifts Published by the Pilgrim Press

TWO GREAT BOOKS FOR THE PILGRIM TERCENTENARY

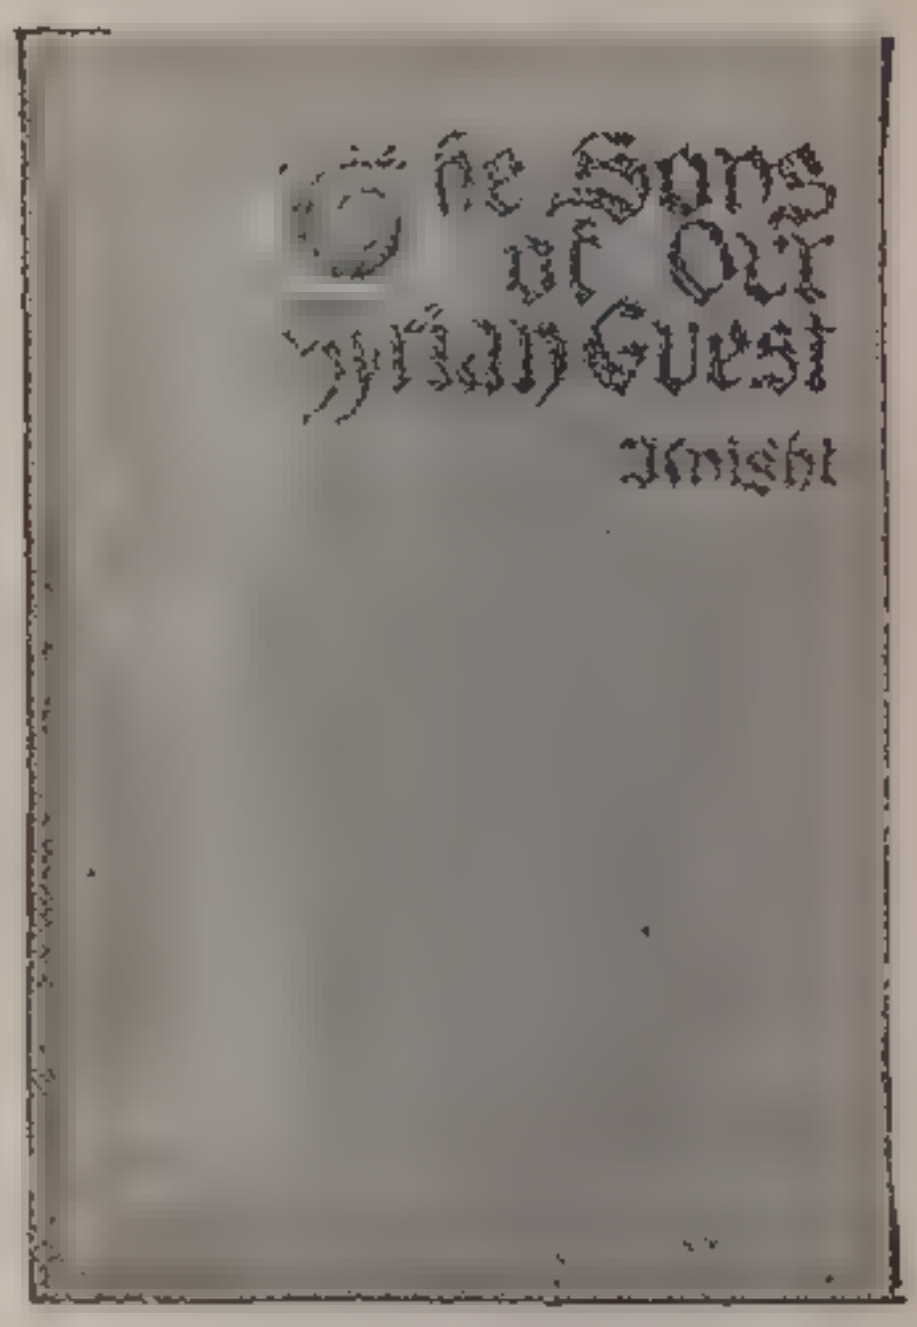
NEW ENGLAND IN THE LIFE OF THE WORLD, $4.00, by Howard A. Bridgman
THE WOMEN WHO CAME IN THE MAYFLOWER, $1.50 by Annie Russell Marble

Books by Margaret Slattery

Three New Ones: The Highway to Leadership, $1.50; Never Mind Me, 35 cents; Jesus Christ is Born Today, 35 cents; all equal in quality to her previous books, a list of which we will gladly send on request.

Books by William Allen Knight

The wonderful Song of Our Syrian Guest, envelope editions, 35 cents; Copeland, illustrated edition, 75 cents. Eleven other titles make up the list of Dr. Knight's choice books. (List yours for the asking.)



FOR THE BOYS AND GIRLS

Star Stories for Little People, by Gertrude Warner (60 cents); The City that never Was Reached, by Jay T. Stocking ($1.00); Johnny Blossom, by Emilie Poulsson ($1.35); Stories for Sunday Telling and The Outdoor Story Book, both by Carolyn Bailey ($1.00 each); The Good Crow's Happy Shop, by Patten Beard ($1.00).

Christmas Stories

Like The Wise Man's Story, by Albert E. Bailey (50 cents); The Crowded Inn, by John M. Foster (50 cents); The Thorn Tree that Blossomed at Christmas, by Oliver Huckel (35 cents); The Costly Star, by Margaret Slattery (60 cents); The Dreamer, by Emma Coolidge (75 cents).

Books for Devotional Reading

Prayers and Thanksgivings for a Christian Year, by Isaac Ogden Rankin ($1.25); Inspiration for Daily Living, selected from Lyman Abbott ($1.50); Prayers for the Social Awakening, by Walter Rauschenbusch ($1.00).

Books for Church Workers

The Cradle Roll in the Church School, by Lucy Stock Chapin ($1.25); The Mayflower Program Book, by Misses Perkins and Danielson ($2.00); Good American Vacation Lessons ($1.00); Living Teachers, Seed, Soil, and Sower, and The Teacher's Candlestick (all by Margaret Slattery, and 60 cents each in price).

For the Pastor

Walker's Comprehensive Concordance ($3.00, one-half leather $3.75); Weymouth's New Testament in Modern Speech (from $1.35 to $6.00); The Beauty of the Bible, by James Stalker ($2.25); The Gospel in Art, by Albert E. Bailey ($4.50).

A well selected Christmas Book List sent on request

---

14 BEACON STREET
BOSTON

THE PILGRIM PRESS

19 W. JACKSON STREET
CHICAGO

The Congregationalist and Advance

Vol. CV. No. 50

December 9, 1920

CHRISTMAS NUMBER

Courtesy of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, owners of the picture

MADONNA AND SAINTS, BY FRA ANGELICO

THE CHRISTMAS FUND

For Our Aged and Disabled Ministers

Nineteenth Year Amount desired, $35,000

As he leaves he turns to give one last yearning look and to cry
"Good-bye! Old Church, good-bye!"

An Interpretation

In the spirit of the experience of hundreds of ministers

He had preached the gospel for forty years.

He had given himself utterly.

She had made his labors possible.

She had shared in all the sacrifices.

His salary had never provided more than a bare subsistence.

He could make no adequate provision for age.

Now, with the weight of years upon him, he must make way for a younger man.

The old Doctor commands highest honor and reward for his counsel.

The old Lawyer retains his leadership before the courts or is elevated to the judge's bench.

The old Teacher, when his years in the classroom are over, is retired on a life pension.

THE OLD MINISTER* is turned out of his vocation into a world which demands market price for the necessaries of life.

The far-reaching plan of the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers, endowed by the Pilgrim Memorial Fund, will, in a few years, relieve the situation by providing old age annuities, and, in time, will care for all except emergency cases, but it will take a generation to reach that point. To attempt more with the funds provided would jeopardize the whole plan.

Meanwhile, we must care for our veterans and their widows. To leave one soldier of the cross in the limitations of age, helpless to provide for himself or to allow one poor, feeble widow to suffer for food and clothing, or to become a public charge, would be an intolerable reproach to the church.

The average grant by the Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief this year is $215, and the maximum is $400. How long could you live on that?

The Christmas gift is added to the grant as a token of love. It helps to meet the imperative exigencies of life.

Send contributions for the Christmas Fund to

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF
375 Lexington Avenue, New York

WILLIAM A. RICE, Secretary. CHARLES S. MILLS, Associate Secretary. B. H. FANCHER, Treasurer.

The Congregationalist and Advance

December 9, 1920

Volume CV. Copyright, 1920 All rights reserved Number 50

By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

CONTENTS

Finding the Christmas Meanings 737
What the Christian World is Doing 738
Editorial—America Must Soon Decide 740
  The Hardest Winter of All
  A Turning Point in the Woman's Board
  Co-ordinate the Agencies
  The Key Man
  Mediating for Armenia
  The Parable of Consistency
From Our Western Window 743
And Glory Shone Around, by Mary Louise Daniels 744
What I Think of the Interchurch Now, by James I. Vance 745
Another Bethlehem, by Shepherd Knapp 746
Helpful Books 748
How One Church Has Raised Its Budget, by Noah C. Gause 748
Our Pilgrim Pulpit—Messages from the Manger, by Jay T. Stocking 749
Among the New Books 750
In the Church School—Dr. Davis' Bible Class—The Bible and "The Second Coming" 752
The Hour of Prayer 753
With the Children 754
In the Congregational Circle—Church News 755
The Herring Memorial Fund 769
Favorite Poems 770
League of the New Day 770

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. Howard A. Bridgman, D. D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
Associate Editor, Rev. Isaac Ogden Rankin
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D. D. (Chicago)
Literary Editor, Rev. Parris T. Farwell
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Editorial Assistants: Miss Florence A. Moore; Miss Janet L. Savage; Miss Sallie A. McDermott (Chicago)
Contributing Editor, Rev. William E. Barton, D. D.
Business Manager, Albert W. Fell
Advertising Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou
Circulation Manager, Miss Ethel M. Wentworth

The Congregationalist and Advance succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Congregationalist, 1849; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday, by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

Rates: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions are discontinued on date of expiration, appearing on the address label of the paper. Remittances: Should be made payable to The Congregationalist and Advance, and will be acknowledged by a change of date on the label. Receipt will be sent if two-cent stamp is enclosed with remittance. In renewing do not fail to send exact address as on label. Change of Address: Both old and new addresses must be sent in and be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies may be obtained at the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Subscription correspondence may be directed to The Congregationalist and Advance, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Talk of the Sanctum

This Issue and the Next

Our readers will find some interesting and, we trust, helpful Christmas features in the following pages which go to you with our heartiest wishes for a Merry Christmas. We are sure you will be interested also in what the man who started the Interchurch World Movement says about it now. Read Dr. Vance's article. And, by the way, Dr. Vance is at the front in the present meeting of the Federal Council of Churches in Boston. He is chairman of the Executive Committee.

Next week we shall publish a report of the Federal Council's notable sessions, emphasizing the most significant features. That issue will be our Forefathers' Number, commemorative of the 300th anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth. It will be an important issue.

Our Cover Picture

Our cover picture this week is a reproduction of one of the treasures of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, by whose courtesy we are able to use it, the Madonna with Saints of Fra Giovanni da Fiesole, better known as Fra Angelico. The giver of the picture kneels in front of the Madonna's throne, wearing the robes of a canon in the church, and presented by Saint Peter. On the left are Saint Peter and Saint Paul, on the right Saint George in armor and with sword and banner. Behind the throne are four angels. The painter lived just before the change in the life of Italy, which we call the renaissance, when in the art of painting technical skill began to displace simple piety. Fra Angelico entered a convent at twenty-one and his whole life thereafter was devoted to painting religious pictures. His simplicity, unworldliness and genuine piety are as evident as his love of gay color and of beauty and his mastery of his art. Those who have visited Fiesole, on its hilltop looking down upon the valley of the Arno and Florence, in the flowery spring of Tuscany, will understand how appropriate that setting was to the artist-monk who more than almost any other Christian painter has and communicates the spirit of a serene and childlike faith.

In the Circulation Department—

We feel the rising tide of the Christmas spirit. We are glad to have a part in it. The good people who receive a year's subscription to The Congregationalist as a Christmas gift will soon come pouring into our goodly fellowship. We shall try to make the year a pleasant and inspiring one. On another page we tell about our plan of sending the paper as a gift from present subscribers. That plan may interest you. Meantime, what an encouragement it is to have so many expressions of appreciation and good will from those who know our paper. We are deeply grateful for such kind words as these:

"It is amazing to me how you have kept the paper at the same high standard without increasing the price." (From New Hampshire.)

"It is getting better all the time and I await the weekly visit with deep interest." (From Oklahoma.)

"I prize your paper very highly. It was one of the few I didn't feel I could do without, even during the financial stress of war prices." (From Japan.)

"No paper or magazine of the many coming into our home is so highly valued as The Congregationalist and Advance. (From Massachusetts.)

Jordan Marsh Company — The Store that is filled with the Spirit of Christmas

New England's Greatest Store

is Thoroughly Prepared for its Busiest Holiday Season

¶Aisle after aisle is now teeming with interesting and fascinating Christmas merchandise. Here you'll find carefully chosen merchandise that is destined by virtue of its character and merit to answer thousands—yes, hundreds of thousands—of our patrons' gift-giving problems in a most satisfactory manner.

¶Years of experience and our far-reaching buying channels have enabled us to assemble this merchandise from the chief productive centers of the the entire world. It is merchandise that is creditable for us to sell and dependable for you to buy. Our two immense and spacious buildings offer for your inspection and choosing unlimited opportunities for fitting and appropriate gift selections. All in all, this establishment is admittedly

The Most Inviting and Appropriate Shopping Center of New England

¶It is not too early to buy the Christmas gifts now. To do so means leisurely choosing—avoiding the throngs that are characteristic of the busy just-before-Christmas days, which will be here before you realize it.

¶New shipments of fresh new goods are constantly being added to the already large and varied Christmas assortments, which makes selection at this time most satisfactory. We advise all who can to shop early and profit by early advantages.

Jordan Marsh Company

Boston

The Congregationalist
and Advance

Finding the Christmas Meanings

CHRISTMAS, as we know it, is, in the churches which represent the Pilgrim tradition, a modern institution. As we yield ourselves, season after season, to its charm and spell we wonder how portions of the world got along so many centuries without it. Still more do we wonder that so many excellent Christians have missed its meanings.

Even those remarkable men, the Pilgrim Fathers, who are this year receiving special honors, paid no attention to the day that marked their Lord's nativity. When some young men of the Plymouth Colony clamored for a holiday, Governor Bradford granted it. When they began to pitch quoits, he sternly reminded them that if they were not willing to work on Christmas, they must not play. Think, ye modern children, to whom Christmas is such an entrancing affair, of what little Peregrine White and Oceanus Hopkins and Love and Wrestling Brewster and all the other boys and girls of Plymouth missed through never hanging up their stockings or through never beholding such a wonderful spectacle as a Christmas tree!

THE Pilgrims are not the only people that have missed the real meaning of Christmas.

The ecclesiastic wrapped up in his ceremonial or administrative round, attending scrupulously to this or that detail, has often missed the inner significance of symbol or routine.

The theologian bent on dissecting the theories of Christ's nature, eager to determine his precise relation to God and to the universe, has sometimes missed all that irradiation and beautifying of human life which grows out of the Christmas emphasis on the babyhood, the youth and the manhood of Jesus.

The destructive higher critic jauntily declaring that there was no star of Bethlehem and that no chorus of angels ever sang carols over the Bethlehem plain, has missed the greater miracle, even the presence of such a child as Jesus in a human home.

The worldly man of every generation, the really worldly man whose chief interest is in what he eats and drinks and wears and buys and sells and enjoys, always misses the heart of the Christmas joy!

BUT from the very first Christmas there have been those who saw the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, even when he lay in his mother's arms. A few shepherds out of many, two or three wise men out of a large number, a devout temple worshiper, an aged prophetess—simple, teachable souls like these, and their successors throughout two millenniums, yearning to know God and to walk in his ways, have been the keepers of the real Christmas and have passed its glorious meanings down to us. The brush of Raphael and of Fra Angelico has domesticated Jesus in human homes and haunts. Close students of the gospels like Stalker, Bruce, Dods and Farrar, who a generation ago issued their lives of Christ, and like Dr. Glover in our own time, have helped to create that new feeling for the man Jesus, which has simplified and sweetened our theology and brought his spirit and teaching home to the business and bosoms of mankind. We have rediscovered the Son of Man without losing the Son of God.

So when we wake a fortnight hence and hear the Christmas bells, our first thought may well be of Him who represents man at his best, whose perfect humanity forbids us to think or speak lightly of our fellow men as though they were not made in God's image, as though they were all cheap and gross and venal.

BUT Christmas also reveals God at his very best. Jesus was not a fair flower springing up without depth of earth, to blossom into perfect loveliness and then to fade and die. He was rooted in God. Behind him, flowing through him were the infinite love and compassion. On Christmas day we cannot think too highly of our God. He is like Jesus.

And why, when Christmas shows us both God and man at his best, should members of our human race be oppressing and devouring one another? Why should nations be scheming to outwit sister nations? Why should such grievous things happen to men, women and little children that the knowledge of their woe, borne to us, it may be, over many leagues of land and sea, makes bitter our Christmas cup of joy?

O Lord Jesus Christ, once so tiny and helpless in thy mother's arms but now the world's prince and savior, send into our hearts at this Christmas season a new sense of the meaning and wonder of thy earthly life. Forbid that we should be so busy and happy or so lonely and self-centered as to miss the deeper meaning of thy coming into our world. Grant us larger and more gracious thoughts of our fellow men as the proper objects of our love and our service. Impart to us some measure of thine own knowledge of God as He really is. H. A. B.

WHAT THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IS DOING

A Notable Pilgrim Parade in Omaha

PERHAPS one of the most remarkable Pilgrim Parades that will be staged anywhere in the country during this Tercentenary Celebration was given in Omaha recently. To understand the magnitude of this parade and how it all came about it will be necessary to go into a little past history. Along in the late 90's, when we were in the midst of a national panic, Omaha was particularly hard hit because she was just emerging from a very unwholesome boom. In the very darkest hour some of the business men got together and determined to turn the tide and re-establish morale. These men organized what has been known now for 25 years as the "Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben"; the last word is Nebraska spelled backwards. The object is to further the interests of Omaha in every possible way, both at home and abroad, and one of the many things they do is to hold every year a great Fall Festival known as "Ak-Sar-Ben Week," when literally thousands and tens of thousands of people from all the surrounding country visit Omaha and enjoy the various programs of entertainment that are provided for them.

Two features of this entertainment given every year are in the nature of street parades; an elaborate electrical parade which is given on one of the evenings of the week in which floats, carrying out some great historic event, are driven on the street car tracks through all the down town district and are lighted by trolley arrangements from the trolley wires above; I am told there is not another parade like this in this country and it certainly is surpassingly beautiful and wonderful. Then, besides this, there is always an afternoon parade given over to the carrying out of some historic scheme.

A Wonderful Parade

THIS year when Governor McKelvie, of Nebraska, appointed Gen. John L. Webster as State Chairman to carry out a program in the state in commemoration of the "Landing of the Pilgrims," he certainly got the right man in the right place. He took the whole matter up with the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben and they agreed to make the daylight parade this year a parade in memory of the landing of the Pilgrims and appointed Gen. Webster to head it up. Gen. Webster went to clubs and other organizations and individuals and got them to provide the money for twenty-eight floats at a total cost of about $20,000. Each float represented some interesting scene in the story of the Pilgrims. Each one had its own name and its own individuality. Following the title float came "The Persecution of the Pilgrims" and after that "The Mayflower" and then "The Embarkment and Benediction," followed by "The Signing of the Compact," and this by "The Landing at Cape Cod," and so right on down. There were twenty-one floats that dealt exclusively with some phase of the Pilgrim story; then beginning with the twenty-second was the "Boston Tea Party," and the following six brought the story down to today, the last one representing the "Great American Nation" with the Goddess of Liberty, etc.

It was indeed a wonderful parade. Given under the direction of the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben it was relieved of any prejudice that might have existed in the minds of the public had it been given under different circumstances. With the whole city interested and providing abundant funds it was possible to produce it on a scale that would otherwise have been entirely impossible. It passed through miles of the down town district and the streets were packed from the curb clear back to the buildings through the entire route.

Rev. Frank G. Smith, of Omaha, who sends this report to us, says: "As Congregationalists we are trying to do many things in Nebraska to bring home the lesson of the Pilgrim story in this Tercentenary year. Our Fall Conference at York recently was entirely given over to this idea and was a splendid meeting. Our local churches are preaching sermons and having study classes and dinners and all that sort of thing, but I believe this Pilgrim Parade will stand out as the most significant thing done in this state and perhaps in any of the states as a fitting tribute to the contribution made by these great ancestors of our Congregationalism to all that is best in our life of today and as a reminder of our consequent responsibility and obligation in the affairs not only of the church but of the state and the world.

Prayers for the Dead

THAT free-lance in the London pulpit, Dr. Orchard, who at the same time is one of the most popular preachers in the city, made another departure from the conventional order the other day when a solemn requiem for the repose of the soul of his wife, who has recently died, was sung on Sunday morning. In his sermon he defended the practice of prayers for the departed and the invocation of the saints. He said that to many people the common conception of heaven was not very likable and that Christian thought about it must express itself in new interpretations. Dr. Cadman of Brooklyn expressed himself the other day as believing in prayers for the dead.

Facing the City Problem

IN at least four Eastern cities, New York, Boston, Springfield and New Haven, the question of continuing separately the existing denominational and Protestant alignment or of moving forward toward certain mergers is under consideration. In New Haven a minister boldly asserted the other day that the city would be better served by thirty Protestant churches than by sixty. This was a good starter for the publicity man, and he promptly interviewed a number of other ministers, many of whom stood strongly for a considerable reduction of existing churches, while others wrote or spoke to the effect that the fewer churches you had the less religion you might have. In Springfield the effort of one denomination to relocate itself in a field already pretty well covered by Protestant churches has occasioned some plain words from Rev. Reuben J. Goddard, pastor of Faith Church, who in his Sunday sermon protested strongly against the contemplated intrusion. Undoubtedly in the older cities of the East there is a good deal of marking time or of unnecessary competition. The situation calls for leadership that shall seek to conserve all that is best in the present alignment, and at the same time to meet adequately the strain and stress of these difficult years in church work.

OMAHA PILGRIM PARADE

Aid for Ex-Service Men

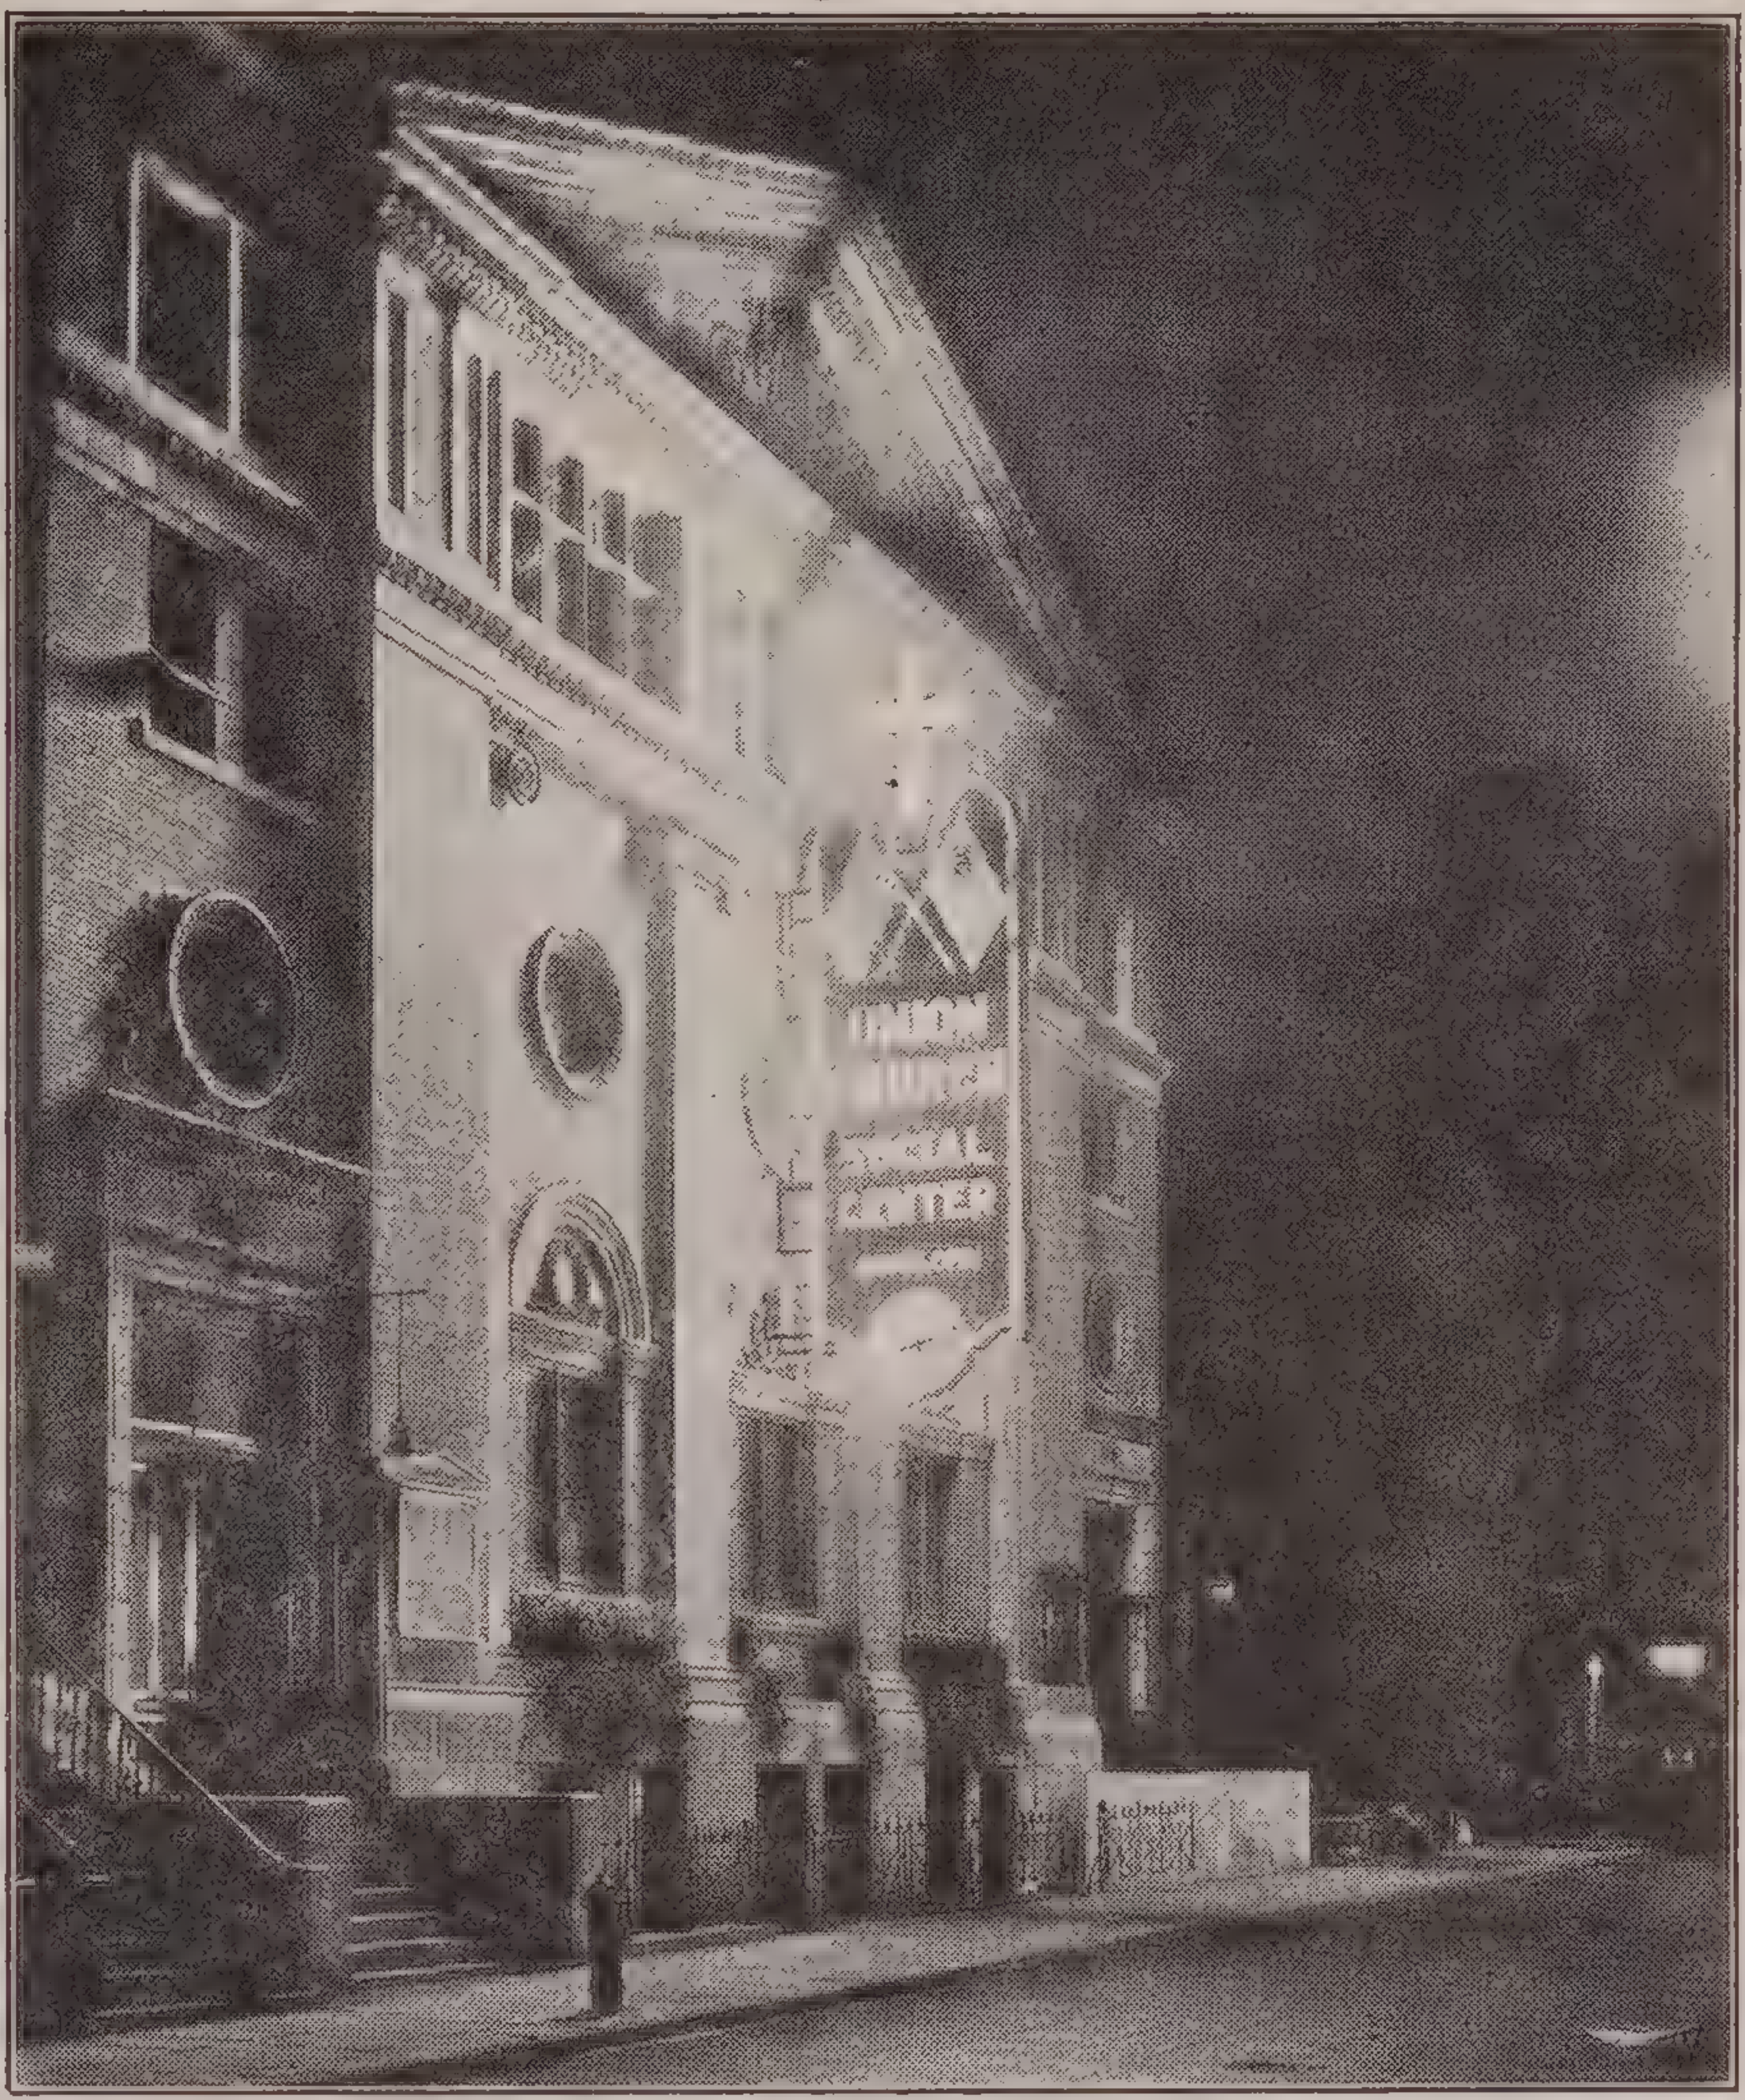
MORE than $6,000,000 has been appropriated by the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. for free scholarships to former service men. Free scholarship awards, amounting to $2,367,895, have been given to 38,582 men, according to the report of the educational service committee. The men aided represent every state and more than two-thirds of the cities and counties of the country.

The Sign of a Reawakened Church Off Broadway

THE great electric sign on Union Methodist Episcopal Church on Forty-eighth Street, just off Broadway, New York, has been dedicated this fall. For the first time in many years the beautiful auditorium of Union Church was filled, and after an impressive service the congregation went to the street, in front of the church, and while the band played several religious and patriotic airs, vast throngs filled the street to witness the turning on of the large sign which is to be a silent preacher of the Christ to the wanderers along Broadway. At 9.45, Bishop Wilson announced the word and the sign began its mission of keeping aglow the invitation of a re-enlivened church, according to the New York Christian Advocate.

Many lines of social activities have been inaugurated with a purpose of rendering a real spiritual ministry to the community and to the great throng of travelers that frequent this region. While every form of social ministry necessary will be undertaken, yet it is the purpose of the pastor to make the supreme note evangelistic and spiritual.

The entire cost of the sign, which amounted to over three thousand dollars, has been paid for by the people of the community. One prominent Hebrew has given $500 and pledges $500 a year to keep it burning. A stranger from Australia happened to see it the night it was dedicated and asked the privilege of paying for the cost of lighting the sign for one hour every week. Many letters with checks for money to be applied toward the cost of keeping the sign burning have been received.



A NEW SIGN ON BROADWAY

The invitation of Union Methodist Episcopal Church in the midst of New York's Great White Way of Amusement. (From Christian Advocate.)

A Great Conference in China

THE Christian forces in China are preparing for their greatest effort. A national Christian Conference has been called to meet in Shanghai in April or May, 1921. The purpose is to aid the Christian forces to see more clearly the present stage in the progress of the Christian Movement in China, and to work their plans for advance into a more comprehensive whole for all the forces in the whole country. Under the leadership of the China Continuation Committee a thorough survey of missionary work in China has been in progress during the past three years. This has been brought to completion, and a very thorough-going report is being published, which will form the basis for the Conference. It is probably true that this is the first time in the history of the Christian Church that a national Christian Conference is held with a complete and accurate statement of the Christian occupation of the field in the hands of those who are members of the Conference. It is expected that the delegates to this Conference will number about one thousand, of whom the co-opted members shall not exceed twenty per cent. The Chinese churches will elect about four hundred delegates, distributed in the ratio of one delegate to each thousand communicants. This also adds significance to this Conference, as it is the first time that native Christians have shared equally with foreign missionaries in a National Conference. The foreign missions will elect about an equal number, distributed in the ratio of one delegate to every twenty foreign missionaries. A considerable number of delegates from the missionary societies in America and Europe are expected. The preparation of the program is in the hands of a special committee of thirty appointed by the China Continuation Committee.

A New Kind of Church Co-operation

A NEW chapter in the history of the Church's relation to industrial conditions in America was written recently in Denver. A strike on the street railways had occurred and the bitter industrial war that ensued had virtually paralyzed the transportation system and had cost several lives. After more than one fruitless attempt had been made to settle the controversy the religious bodies of the city—Protestants, Catholics, and Jews—took upon themselves the task of investigating the whole affair. Dr. Edward T. Devine, representing the Federal Council, and Dr. John A. Ryan and Dr. John A. Lapp, representing the Catholic Welfare Council, were the investigators. No one offered any objection to being interviewed. No one wanted to oppose openly the combined religious forces of Denver and the two national church organizations. It was the first time that such an attempt had been made by Protestant and Catholic bodies in the United States, probably in the world, and the harmony was immediate and complete. The findings of the investigation are now being reviewed by the Commission and it is expected that they will shortly be ready for publication.

EDITORIAL

A Word for Our Times

Our ambition is to create by degrees, within ever-widening spheres, a certain common life of nations ruled by principles of justice, swayed by good faith and loyalty and inspired by an international spirit. I mean a spirit which places general interests above individual interests, a spirit of fraternity which strives to alleviate the sufferings of peoples and difficulties under which Governments labor, to co-ordinate their action and to appease hates and rivalries which sometimes suddenly give rise to those great outbursts of madness which shake the world to its foundations and threaten to ruin the work of centuries.—Paul Hyman, President of the Assembly of the League of Nations.

Co-ordinate the Agencies

Now that the Federal Council of Churches plans to give more effort to administration of the co-operative movements of the denominations upon the field, can it not do something to co-ordinate the forces or to reduce the number of interdenominational agencies at work on various tasks in the field of religious endeavor? Not only are pastors and church officers harassed by the demands made upon them to officer so many organizations and furnish the steam to keep them going, but there is also much overlapping and waste of effort and not a little rivalry. It often happens that these interdenominational organizations, instead of being clearing houses for the co-operative efforts of the denominations where they could best work together, come into competition with them. This competition not infrequently becomes so keen that leaders of some organizations show scant courtesy for those of others engaged in like service.

For example, at the Conference for older boys and girls held by two interdenominational organizations in a Western state some months ago a young people's worker of national reputation held up Sunday school superintendents, teachers, and other officers of the school to scorn before the young people and indicated that the superintendents especially are "old fogies" and "mossbacks" and are not equal to the leadership of the youth. This speaker was not only misrepresenting the facts, but he made what he had to say all more vicious by sarcasm. These young people went back to their home churches with a much poorer opinion of their leaders. And the tragedy of it is that the churches to which they returned must nevertheless retain the constant responsibility for their religious culture.

The experience of the Interchurch indicates that interdenominational organizations, as well as all general benevolences, are for the most part financed by church members. In spite of this fact it has become the custom of a number of the interdenominational organizations to ignore the right of the church to have a part in every attempt to indoctrinate its youth in Christian ideals. The church has a right to demand that the organizations which live on its money cease to thwart its plans of work. Cannot the Federal Council so co-ordinate all the forces doing the co-operative work of the denominations as to make them entirely representative of those whom they are supposed to serve? Ought not the Council to bring about mergers of organizations so as to eliminate duplication, much of the overhead expense and all of this strife and working at cross purposes? The Council will find that pastors will respond to such a movement as this at once and will give it hearty indorsement.

* *

The paper famine was worse in the Middle Ages than it is today, and it often happened that parchment on which classic texts were written was scraped to allow re-use for tedious homilies or other pious matters. Now it has been found that photography will often show the partially erased text and scholars begin to hope for the recovery of some of the lost literature of the ancient world. It is a parable of the reappearance of matters we had thought and wished forgotten in our own memory and as a ground of a final estimate of our lives.

The Federal Council in Boston

The Fourth Quadrennial Meeting of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America has just begun in Boston, as we go to press with this issue. It is a great gathering with a broad construction and inspiring program. The retiring, highly successful president, Dr. Frank Mason North, is succeeded by Dr. Robert E. Speer, who has long borne a leading part in co-operative Christian effort, especially along missionary lines. A comprehensive report of the Boston sessions, from Dec. 1 to 6, will appear in next week's issue of The Congregationalist.

America Must Soon Decide

That was an ominous gathering in Boston the other night when six thousand people flocked into Mechanics Hall to hear the Republican governor of New Hampshire and two Democratic Senators pronounce gleeful obituaries upon the existing League. It shows that there is a strong body of sentiment in this country bent on interpreting the last election as a mandate to the incoming administration to have nothing to do with the present League. President Lowell and the other friends of the League who voted the Republican ticket and who expressed their confidence in advance that the United States would simply have to combine with the European nations to prevent war will have to work hard to neutralize such sentiment as that represented by the Mechanics Hall meeting and a section of the Republican press. On the other hand, Vice-President-elect Coolidge is courageously ranging himself with those who do not interpret the election as a mandate to scrap the League for which statement he was promptly taken to task by Senator Moses.

The fact that Mr. Harding is assembling this week a large group of persons, including a number of religious leaders, to confer on the international situation is encouraging. May he take his stand not with the irreconcilable, but with the moderate and progressive elements of his own party.

Meanwhile, Europe is waiting and representatives of England now in this country are pleading almost pitifully, "Come in on your own terms."

Mediating for Armenia

Sooner or later the League of Nations was certain to be compelled to take some action in regard to the condition of the Armenians in their home in the Caucasus. The League chose to act at once, though the situation has grown far more difficult than it was even a year ago. It has asked President Wilson to attempt a mediation between the Armenians and the Turkish Nationalists who have repudiated the Turkish treaty and have been at the doors of Armenia. This is not a renewal of the proposal that we should accept a mandate; it is a suggestion that we should seek to get Turkish Nationalist and Armenian together to see whether they cannot reach a peaceful understanding. The whole situation is confused and we have nothing like the full facts which would be needful for an intelligent opinion of the true conditions at the far Eastern end of Asia Minor. But certain facts seem clear.

Armenia has been of late like a grain of corn between the upper millstone of Russia and the lower millstone of Turkish nationalism. And the spirit of patriotism among the Armenian people has been strong enough to repell the Turk. A letter from Mr. E. A. Yarrow, connected with the educational work of the American Board in Eastern Turkey, in the Missionary Herald for December, gives the impression that these republics of the Caucasus are beginning to be able to stand on their own feet, both in diplomacy and in war. The rival ambitions of Turkish Nationalism and of Russian Soviet power have clashed and the Turkish leader has warned the Russians that the further invasion of Armenia will be regarded as a cause of war. Armenia is still dependent on the West for food and will be more so as the winter draws on. And, finally, it may be possible to drive a bargain with Mustapha Kemal which will include the security of Armenia from direct Turkish attacks.

President Wilson has accepted the invitation to attempt mediation, not in person but through a deputy of his own appointment. But he claims as a preliminary the support and moral sanction of the nations of the League. He states plainly that he cannot speak for the United States or count upon support from Congress. But what he can do by his personal good offices to put an end to hostilities and bring about a good understanding he will gladly do. Events may move swiftly in this field, but at the moment of writing this is the situation as we see it. Our people, who have refused a mandate for Armenia, certainly will rejoice that something can be done in the name of our chief magistrate, if not of the whole nation, to put an end to the destruction of at least this portion of the Armenian people.

Keep the Lord's Day Out of Politics

We are not disposed to look with favor on political activities which aim to bring the nation back to legislation for a Puritan observance of the Lord's Day. In the first place, we do not favor compulsion in matters that have a purely religious significance. That we all need one day out of seven as a time of rest and an opportunity of worship no one who has studied the question dispassionately will for a moment question. But we are not in favor of compelling people to go to church or to stay at home, or depriving them of the means of getting about except when the church bells are ringing. Those who wish to go to our places of worship can go as things are now. What we want is an inner compulsion which will drive men to worship because they need it and recognize that the nation needs God first in all its ways and a sincere desire for common prayer and fellowship. We are not under the Jewish law. We do not keep the Sabbath. We are Christians and remember the Lord's Day under the freedom of Christian responsibility and charity.

Any political agitation directed toward a change in the established habits of the people must establish a necessity for the whole community. Of course if the agitators for a Puritan observance of the Lord's Day can persuade a preponderant majority that the community needs such a repression of natural activities for health or for security, they are free to do so. But they will make a mistake in a country where at least a huge minority are only nominally Christian to associate repression and limitation and what will seem to many a tyranny of the religious spirit with the recurring first day of every week.

We want a better observance of the Lord's Day in worship, quiet, family life and neighborly work. But that will never come by political agitation. It is within the power of the churches to bring it about whenever they choose. If Christians would keep the Lord's Day as it should be kept, their witness would go far toward changing the whole atmosphere of the nation. A joyful, genuinely Christian Sunday, fifty-two times in the year, by all Christians would be better and more effective than a Constitutional Amendment.

The Hardest Winter of All

There are said to be 3,500,000 children in Europe who are on the edge of starvation and who must be saved, if they can be saved at all, mainly by contributions from the American people. We have said year by year that the coming winter would be hard, but for many of the exhausted, well-nigh hopeless people of the impoverished nations this promises to be the hardest winter of all. In order to efficiency in this work of aid and support, eight organizations have confederated under the name of The European Relief Council, with Herbert Hoover as Chairman. His characteristic announcement is that the purpose of the Council will be to provide funds for these three and a half millions starving and diseased children and to administer this relief economically. The Council is made up of the American Relief Administration, American Red Cross, American Friends Service Committee (Quakers), Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, Knights of Columbus, Young Men's Christian Association and Young Women's Christian Association. Here is a call to sympathy expressed in giving which we can hardly let pass us by without response.

A Jarring Note

Prejudice and ignorance of facts are the curse especially of religious controversy. We had been gratified that the Tercentenary of the Pilgrims, except in certain "catholic" quarters of the English Established Church, had called out so many expressions of appreciation and good will. But here comes along an American Roman Catholic pastor, Father MacMahon, to say that the Pilgrims established a régime more cruel than the Spanish Inquisition, and that they had no influence on the history of the country except that their theory of the separation of church and state led to the menace of Bolshevism today. We accept the Spanish Inquisition as a fair measure of fiendish cruelty under the name of Christ and are glad that Father MacMahon agrees with us. But he has evidently either not read the chronicles of the Pilgrims or has read them at second hand and with a mind colored by prejudice. He gives them credit for demonstrating that the new world was a fit place for Englishmen to live in, a credit to which they are by no means exclusively entitled, as Virginia had proved it long before. He makes a point against them in regard to the initial communism, which was forced upon them and which they abandoned as soon as they could. And, being Englishmen, he calls them fools because they did not eat the fish, which were not there in December, and the corn, which they did eat. He calls them Unitarians, which would have shocked Robinson and Brewster, and adds significantly: "Our effort today is to undo the effect of the Pilgrim idea, which has permeated the country."

A little course in first-hand Pilgrim history with the fair mind and courteous speech which becomes the historian and the Christian, might bring Father MacMahon to see that, though the Pilgrims had the misfortune not to be Irish, and were entirely human, they were men of sense as well as of courage. The idea that they were fools does not fit in well with the acknowledged fact that their influence has permeated the nation.

* *

The British Weekly devotes a long editorial to the weaknesses and potential strength of the Recognition Meeting, which in England is a cross between our installation service and a popular reception to a new pastor. It thinks that at such gatherings the exaggerated panegyric and undue length of program are likely to neutralize the value of an occasion that might be made serviceable to both pastor and people. We have attended services in this country at which the effect of much that was sensible and strong was considerably offset by too many "parts" and by too much jocosity.

The Key Man

Many ministers, in these days when our missionary societies are facing disaster, are proving themselves financial statesmen of the first rank. It is one of the rare privileges granted to the minister not only to show his people a vision of the world, but to help them to make the vision real by sacrificial giving. The minister's own attitude is in many cases all that most of his parishioners need to start them on the right road.

A few months ago a young minister took an important church in Chicago. He has a group of forward-looking laymen. Instead of groaning and complaining about the large apportionment for 1921 this minister and his official board took such high ground immediately, that the congregation will undoubtedly follow. This is what he put in his calendar concerning benevolences before the campaign began: "Last year the budget for benevolences was $2,000, which was later increased by a special campaign for $1,000, making a total of $3,000. The $4,000 asked for on the proposed budget, therefore, does not seem unreasonable in the light of the growth of the church." Another young minister, pastor of a wealthy church, as soon as his apportionment for 1921 was assigned, told his official board that it was outrageous, that the church ought not to think of raising it, and that the best thing to do was to forget about it.

The 1921 apportionment will succeed if our ministers believe in it enough to commend it to their people by bringing the need of our societies vividly before them, by giving extended teaching in systematic and proportionate giving and by helping to plan and carry through a thorough Every Member Canvass. Ministers should see Dr. Herring's little pamphlet entitled "The E. M. C." It is not the minister's job to raise the apportionment, but it is his task to give the leadership of his office toward providing a friendly atmosphere, an intelligent people, and an efficient organization for doing the work. Our denomination and the people around the world who are reaching out hands to us for salvation, material and spiritual, are depending upon the minister to lead. What will his answer be?

Hindrances to Good

Two causes which we have very much at heart have received rather serious setbacks, we regret to say, of late. One is the cause of world-wide disarmament. Of all the countries in the world it would seem as if Australia from its very remoteness might get along without a great military establishment. Yet here is Premier Hughes who in addressing the representatives of the whole Australian Commonwealth said:

> The world as we see it today is obviously a world in which no nation can allow its war insurance policy to lapse. . . . We cannot hope to maintain a white Australia policy by mere pious or blatant declarations of our intentions and determination. Behind this there must be some force, and it cannot be anything less than the utmost resources of this nation.

We still believe that the way of peace is the way of disarmament all round and that Japan, the only nation which Premier Hughes fears, is not the bogy which is pictured by extremists either in Australia or California.

The other cause which is dear to us and which has been endangered is that of the full enforcement of the Prohibition amendment. The decision of the Supreme Court that the Volstead law cannot be invoked to prevent the transport of intoxicants legally owned from places of storage to homes, or kept in storage outside the home, seems to open the door to many evasions and to strengthen the hands of those who are trying to evade the law. We believe that in spite of this opening of a crack in the door that the law can be and will be enforced and we wish to do all in our power to help the officers in their efforts at enforcement.

Scotland Not Hopelessly Wet

Mr. W. E. Johnson, known in campaigns for prohibition of intoxicants as "Pussyfoot," is much encouraged by the results of the Scotch referendum. On the surface that result seemed like a decisive use of local option to keep things as they are. But Mr. Johnson's measure of comparison is the beginning of the campaign for prohibition in our American states. Scotland, he says, did better than any American state did in its early elections. As to Glasgow, he notes the large number of votes for no-license—141,327 to 183,560 for "no change"—and says that no American city of similar character ever did so well until it had been voting for twenty years. It is significant that the residential parts of Glasgow which have had few licenses showed a wish to be rid of them, while the crowded quarters—and the slums of Glasgow are about as bad as any in the world—voted to keep them. The education of Scotland has begun. Mr. Johnson thinks it will go on steadily toward the exclusion of bar-rooms altogether.

The Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of Consistency

There came to me a man who said, Safed, thou speakest many wise words, but thou art not always consistent.

And I said unto him, If I were always consistent, then should I never be wise.

And he said, Thou utterest dark sayings.

Then said I unto him, There are no completely consistent men aside from those in the Cradle and in the Asylum for Imbeciles. The only consistent man is the Completely Ignorant Man. There once lived a Philosopher named Immanuel, whose surname was Kant, who showed unto men that any line of thought consistently followed doth bump up against the Impossible. Man doth begin life in complete Consistency, which is to say, that he beginneth it in complete Ignorance. But there cometh a day when he learneth a Truth, namely, that his Toe is capable of being brought up into his Mouth; and that Truth maketh his Ignorance Lopsided.

And he said unto me, I had not thought of that; but it cometh to pass in time that he can no longer get his Toe into his Mouth.

And I answered, So happeneth it with much of what we apprehend as Truth; by the time we learn it, the thing is no longer possible nor yet desirable; nevertheless, the Truth hath been worth the learning, and it hath its logical relation to other Inconsistencies, which are properly apprehended as Truth.

And he said unto me, Say on.

And I said, The circumference of men's Ignorance is vast, and every new Truth discovered is the Lengthened Radius whereby to measure the Diameter and Area of a Vaster Ignorance and a Greater Inconsistency. Yet hath it a Value. For each new Truth becometh an Interrogation Point, which reacheth out like a Fish Hook after the mouth of Leviathan. And albeit neither thou nor Job the servant of God can draw him out, yet doth the Interrogation Point Hook now and then a Sculpin of Information or an Hornpout of Knowledge, or some slippery Eel of Truth, which maketh our Ignorance Lopsided.

Furthermore, I said unto him, Men do walk, not by any process of Bisymmetrical Progressive Motion, but by Hitching one side Ahead, and then Pulling the other side up and a Little Ahead, and by throwing the Center of Gravity out of Plumb and catching themselves before they fall, so that in falling forward but never striking, and wabbling ahead with first one foot and then the other, we contrive an approach to Consistency through Inconsistency. And the process of the Advancement of Human Knowledge, yea and of Human Goodness, is more or less Like Unto it.

And he said, I have learned enough for one day.

And I said, Go now and learn something on the other side of thine Ignorance that will help to balance up. For a False Balance is an Abomination unto the Lord, and the best thing about Inconsistency is that it doth challenge us to learn another Truth.

In Brief

Do not forget that there are millions of Chinese who are in need of bread. A little disaster makes life difficult for the crowded farmers in the Chinese river valleys and a great disaster forces them to migrate or to sell their children to get bread.

* *

A good many elderly people and people whose hearing is not as good as it was fifty years ago come to church on Sunday. Don't forget that large contingent in your audience, Mr. Preacher, especially if you have a congenital tendency toward dropping your voice at the end of every sentence.

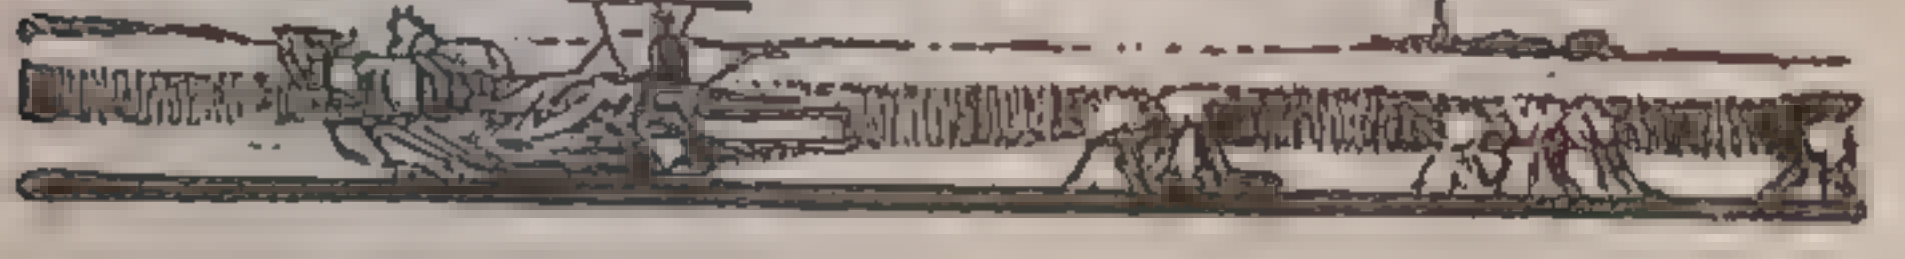
* *

One-fifth of all the school children of Massachusetts are in parochial schools, and the number will soon be increased to one-fourth, if the present rate of advance goes on. In fifteen years ending in 1915 the public school enrollment in Boston showed increase of 31.8 per cent., while the increase in the parochial schools was 58.1 per cent. In Philadelphia during the same period, the number of the pupils in the public schools increased 30.2 per cent., and in the parochial schools 86.7 per cent. It will be well for all good citizens to ponder the significance of these statistics, which are taken from a book just issued by Frank V. Thompson, superintendent of the Boston schools. He believes that this situation creates a very delicate problem in connection with the supervision which it is right for the state to exercise.

* *

An older centenary than that of the Pilgrim's voyage is being celebrated just now in South America. Chili, to which most of the Straits of Magellan belongs, is holding public gatherings in memory of the bold Portuguese navigator, Fernaho Magalhaes, or in Spanish, Ferdinand Magellan, who four hundred years ago discovered the strait and was the first European to sail westward on the Pacific to the other shores. Like Columbus, he was a foreigner in the service of Spain when his great discovery and voyage were made. Magellan himself was killed in a fight with natives in the Philippines, but his companions completed the first round-the-world voyage in the Victoria, the one surviving vessel. It was because of the good weather which Magellan encountered as he sailed westward from the opening of his strait that the name of Pacific was given to the greatest of the oceans.

FROM·OUR·WESTERN·WINDOW



It was customary in a former day to accuse our state universities of being hotbeds of infidelity and to contrast them in religious matters with the denominational colleges, much to the discredit of the universities. While there was undoubtedly some ground for the accusation against the universities, it was probably never true to anything like the extent that it was painted by its foes. One of the schools especially maligned in those days was the University of Michigan. For many years its president was the late James B. Angell, a Congregational minister of such broad sympathies and Christian outlook that he was allowed to be president of the university what time the United States Government kept hands off; the rest of the time he was our Minister to Turkey. His successor at the university is now succeeded by Dr. Marion L. Burton, some time President of the University of Minnesota, of Smith College, and before that pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, New York. His inaugural address indicates that he is a worthy follower of Dr. Angell for he believes that a great university should manifest the spirit that is summed up in the words, "He that will be greatest among you shall be your servant." The following quotations from his address indicate how completely "service" is the keyword of his program for the most noted of the state universities of the West:

> A new day must dawn in American higher education. Anyone who has been close to the people during the war realizes that educators are expected to understand America and to interpret it. I am convinced that in serving the state we must aim consciously and deliberately to assume our share of responsibility for the new American civilization which must inevitably develop in this period of readjustment. Our universities have failed to focus.
>
> That education must serve the state has been proclaimed many times. The years of the war, however, have burned it into our souls.
>
> In one sense it will be merely the rebirth of original American intentions. It will mean that this versatile, complex, growing, pulsating entity which we call "America" must be welded into a unified whole.
>
> Some one must ascertain what are America's flaming desires and intense yearnings and direct them into proper channels. Some one must drag out into the full light of day the most serious national and international obligations that rest upon our people and focus public attention upon them.
>
> The university must expand to the breaking point the range of its understanding of American life as it is today. America must have unification, direction, interpretation. Herein lies the specific duty of the university.

Dr. Burton's address may serve to remind us that the state universities are now furnishing the churches many recruits for leadership of the enterprises of the Kingdom. It is especially encouraging that so many of our strong Foreign Mission recruits come from the state-supported schools and the indications are that we shall get an increasing number of these fine young people for our work. It is very heartening also to have men of the type of President Burton chosen as leaders for these great universities.

* *

It is interesting to note the fine response made to the repeated statements of Roger Babson, the statistician, that religion must dominate the American people if they are to move on to the best things. It is good to find leading newspapers in sympathy with his attitude. We have had much to say of late years about the degeneracy of the press and no doubt much that we have said was well within the bounds of the truth. It is one of the tragedies of our civilization that great newspapers wielding tremendous power should use that power to delude the people and to lead them astray. There are a good many newspapers, some of them in the first class, that are now standing for high ideals. The Chicago Evening Post is one of the cleanest and best of the daily papers of the Middle West. In an editorial the other day it took a stand with Mr. Babson for religion in the home and in all the relationships of life. This editorial is really a remarkable setting-forth of the very things which ministers of all denominations desire. These brief quotations indicate its spirit:

> Men like Roger Babson, interested keenly in the larger phases of American business life, are sounding a note which should be heeded. They are calling men to a sense of religious responsibility. It is interesting and encouraging to hear these voices raised in the street and mart. They are sympathetic of an awakening to the fact that our vast material achievements may prove a mere illusion of success if we are indifferent to the things of the spirit.
>
> We think no man who is in touch with the tendency of the time can fail to be aware of the drift away from faith. The tragic consequences of the drift are the decreasing sense of obligation, the weakening conviction of moral duty, the disappearing of authoritative ethical standards for individual conduct. These things were strong in the life of the nation when there was a more general consciousness of God.
>
> The institutionalizing of religion in the modern church, with its Sunday school and its young people's societies and other agencies, was an inevitable and necessary development, but it has had one effect which almost offsets its many advantages. It has fitted in too well with other modern tendencies which have directly operated to take religion out of its natural stronghold in the home.

After recounting the efforts of the Board of Sunday Schools of one of the denominations to promote home religion the editorial continues, "We are convinced that true religious strategy lies in this direction." There is "little hope that the day may come when the old practice of family worship will be restored," but religion should have a place in the table talk and the family circle conversation. "It is in such interchange of thought that the real interests of the home are reflected. Society, fashion, baseball, politics, art, literature, the drama—these are frequent subjects of discussion. How often is religion mentioned? What place has God in the conscious and uttered life of the average home? But it is here that the revival of interest in spiritual things must have its beginning if the conditions felt by men like Roger Babson are to be met and if institutionalized religion is to be a vital and efficient force."

We have passed through dark days, periods when the most influential forces in our American life seem to be at best but negative in the struggle for great ideals. It is a happy thing to be able to record that leaders of such powerful agencies for good or for evil as are the universities and the newspapers are commending to our people religion and service. R. W. G.

Chicago, Oct. 25.

OUR "CAMINO REAL"

Building for the Future

The Extension Department of any Protestant denomination on the coast may well heed the wisdom of the Spanish Padres in locating their missions a day's journey apart along El Camino Real, for strategic selection of site often determines a church's destiny. More often our churches have, like Topsy, "just growed," but modern ecclesiastical engineering inclines toward discrimination at the outset of the enterprise. Outstanding among churches for which such preliminary care has been taken is the Hollywood Church, Los Angeles, and the dedication of its first unit, the Woodruff Memorial Chapel, on Sunday, Oct. 17, marked the consummation of six years' planning and effort.

For some time previous to 1914 there developed in the minds of a small group of people the growing conviction that a Congregational church was needed in Hollywood. Active among this group was Rev. C. C. Tracy, D. D., honored missionary of the American Board, whose aim extended beyond the service for local needs to the possibilities of such a home base in strengthening the mission needs abroad. In co-operation with the Congregational Extension Society of Los Angeles a canvass was made which resulted in the opening of services in the Hollywood Theater in June, 1914, with Rev. Ray Carter as the pastor. The church was organized in October of the same year, with 96 charter members. In January, 1917, the place of meeting was changed to the Woman's Club House and in the following June Mr. Carter resigned from the pastorate, his successor, Rev. J. H. Lash, D. D., assuming leadership in November.

War conditions rendered building inadvisable at this time, but the work of collecting subscriptions progressed steadily, so that a church might be erected as soon as opportunity offered. The Extension Society purchased an admirable site on Hollywood Boulevard at a cost of $23,000, and held it for the church until subscriptions could be gathered to meet the obligation. The Society actually gave $10,000 toward the undertaking, in addition to the help of outside friends and the constant counsel of the Society's officials. Ground was broken for the building in December, 1919, shortly after which the son and daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Woodruff gave $25,000 toward the building in memory of their parents. Thus was made possible the first portion of what will eventually be an unusually well-equipped church plant.

The dedicatory services were not confined to a single day, but the entire week, Oct. 17-24, was designated as Dedication Week, with meetings of various kinds each night. The formal dedication occurred on Sunday, the 17th, beginning with an appropriate service for the church school, whose equipment needs are so well met in the new edifice. Before the eleven o'clock service, every seat was occupied and standing room scarce, for not only members and community friends, but scores of outsiders desired to join in this happy occasion. Dr. Lash preached the sermon and led the service of consecrating the building to Christian work. At a Fellowship Meeting in the afternoon, presided over by Supt. G. F. Kenngott, whose aid in this project has been continuously effective, greetings were brought from local pastors. Tuesday evening a reception to the public was held, followed by a program of musical selections and addresses by Rev. Carl Patton, D. D., of the First Church, Rev. H. K. Booth, D. D., of Long Beach, and Dr. W. H. Snyder, Principal of the Hollywood High School. On Thursday, observed as "Church Night," the members and friends gathered for dinner in the new dining-hall and enjoyed a program of addresses and music. The young people held sway on Saturday evening at a banquet followed by a short program and installation of officers for the year.

The week culminated on Sunday, the 24th, when thirty-seven new members were received at the morning communion service, and when evening services were initiated by an address from Rev. D. F. Fox, D. D., of Pasadena, on "The Church and the Changing Order."

The new chapel is of North Italian architecture, and the soft pink of the plaster, roofed with tiles, blends into the California landscape, so like the Italian. The memorial windows also add color and dignity. The interior, finished in antique plaster, gray woodwork, gray carpets and rose-colored draperies, produces an effect uniquely attractive. The basement provides for a banquet room, seating three hundred, a large

(Continued on page 768)

And Glory Shone Around

A Christmas Message

By Mary Louise Daniels

Dark patches of huddled sheep in the Bethlehem field under glistening stars and nearby shadowy groups where watchful shepherds rested, wrapped in their homespun cloaks.

And suddenly glory shone around! Unearthly light irradiated the common scene and as always when heaven draws close to earth poor humanity shrank in fear before the revealing splendor. No doubt each man saw with contrition the misdeeds of his past life. Then calming words fell on their ears—"Fear not"—and the announcement was made which sent them hurrying in quest of the Saviour born for them and "all people."

When they returned to the sheep earth and sky wore their wonted dress. The glory had removed into their own hearts and there abode—that glory which is joy in a Saviour found.

* *

A young deacon of the Early Church, Stephen by name, proved resistless in his arguments for the new faith. Even well-tested debaters from Alexandria and Roman Asia could not withstand his power. False witnesses were put forward, a great excitement was aroused and finally the mob seized the young man and brought him before the religious court of trial.

And glory shone around!

It was in Stephen's face. Its radiance flooded the cold court room.

At once the High Priest, unmoved, unwarned, flung a challenge to the prisoner, "Are these statements true?"

And Stephen poured out his soul to win his brethren and fathers.

"As they listened to these words they became infuriated and gnashed their teeth at him. But full of the Holy Spirit and looking up to heaven Stephen saw the glory of God and Jesus standing at God's right hand."

Was it just then that glory penetrated the man's inmost soul and made him able, when mad rage had stoned him, to cry in the spirit of his Master, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge"?

Invisible but actual—that glory which is forgiving love toward a deadly foe.

* *

For six long years a race of human beings has been groaning and travailing in pain under the cruel lash of a tyrant nation—and this in a Christian era! An open door into safety was placed before these persecuted, suffering Armenians. To them, as to Stephen, a challenge was flung, "Deny Christ—become a Moslem!"

Beyond that door lay food, clothing, home, families, villages, peace, protection.

On this side of it lay hunger, rags, weary wanderings, sickness, tortures and death.

Men and women, thousands of them, answered the challenge with staunch loyalty to Christ. One pastor who took his stand may well voice the spirit of all these, so faithful:

"I have very little hope to see you again in this world. But be sure, by God's special help, I will do my best to encourage others to die manly. I also will wait for God's help for myself to die as a Christian. May this country see that if we cannot live here as men we can die as men."

No glory cloud rolled down from the skies to illumine the blood-stained highways and byways of Armenia, and yet in reality glory shone around. It was there because it abode in the souls of heroes—that glory which is faithfulness unto death.

* *

A woman was turned aside from sharing in the activities of Christ's Kingdom. She had loved the meeting of the familiar group which gathered monthly to study missions and pray for the missionaries. To lose the joy of such companionship and service was a deep bereavement. Lying upon her bed, in weakness and loneliness, prayer began to stir in her heart and reach out yearningly to God—not a self-centered praying for personal comfort but intercession, with largeness of vision, for Christ's Kingdom and for dearly loved missionaries, named over one by one.

And glory shone around!

One entering would see only a plain room and a frail form among the pillows. But if eyes could glimpse the spirit room within they would be dazed by its pure light—that glory, which is unselfish communion with God.

* *

A glorious red rose looks down at me from a tall vase on my desk. Many petals are lapped and overlapped about a central heart and I draw them gently aside in order to peer into the velvety depths.

"Here is the real glory of this rose," I am thinking, "its ego, its spirit." And I think further, "This rose suggests a church with its manifold activities lapped and overlapped about its inner life."

I draw gently aside the outer wrappings one by one. Past the form of worship, the programs, the committees, the benevolences, the social functions, yes, past the testimonies and prayers I search, looking for Spirit like unto Christ's. And I find its fragrance in the hearts of men and women—but even so, there is a depth beyond and my quest is ended only when I reach to the first and smallest care of the church—a little child.

The church and its children—the Christ-child come again in every one, so radiant with divine possibilities!

To work into the very fiber of every unfolding child-spirit a consciousness of God and a love for all his children, enforcing teaching with related activities, this is the beginning and source of all the purity, beauty and power within the life of a church. This way comes its glory—that glory which abides and "shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

O Lord, we praise the wonder
  Of that glory, shining round!
We praise thee more for precious store
  Of glory shining, bound
In humble hearts and faithful,
  In the church, within the child,
We ask the will, the love, the skill
  To hoard this, undefiled.

I AM PERSUADED

By E. Leigh Mudge

I am persuaded nothing shall avail
To part the saving love of God from me;
Go I to Rome to face a prison death,
His love abides with me.

Or should I live, surrounded by my foes,
Or flattering friends to vitiate my will,
Though life bear dangers death may never know,
God's love abideth still.

Let angels come, with guise of purity,
Or prince of air, to tempt my soul away,
The spirits by the love of God I try;
That love remains for aye.

The present things of sense, or trembling dread
Of woes unknown the future has in store,
Breed no dismay nor wake disheartening fear,
Since God's love goes before.

No threatening Power upon his lofty height,
Nor depth of distance he may banish me,
Nor other creature, fair or foul, can break
The love of Deity.

For through the love of God, who gave to man
The Love incarnate, his beloved Son,
We more than conquerors are, and life and love
Eternally are won.

What I Think of the Interchurch Now

A Message from the Father of the Movement

By Rev. James I. Vance, D.D.

What is success? Would Paul have been a greater success had he raised more money? Is success milking a hundred million dollars, more or less, from a plutocratic but reluctant constituency of One Who Himself "had not where to lay His head?"

Doubtless there are people today who would be throwing up their hats for the Interchurch if it had been successful in its financial drive, but who, since it fell so many million dollars short, are lifting their eyebrows and shaking their heads at the thing that failed.

But if it takes a hundred million dollars to make the Interchurch a success, it can never be a success, e'en though it get ten times a hundred million, for the kingdom of God is "not meat and drink." And if the Interchurch was a movement of God's Spirit, the failure to collect shekels cannot make the movement a failure.

Spiritual Standards

We have got to apply another standard to spiritual enterprises. The main thing is not, are they successful, but are they of God? The daily papers would have reported Calvary as the collapse of a great religious leader.

I am not cast down over the misfortunes which have befallen the Interchurch; and I am not discouraged over the serious difficulties which now beset it. I am only concerned that enough faith be found to man the walls until "the morning cometh"; that enough of the spirit of sacrificial service be found "to endure as seeing him who is invisible."

Oh, yes, the Interchurch made mistakes. It spent too much money. It was over-confident. Sometimes it confounded size with greatness and mistook organization for efficiency. But does this make it peculiar, or entitle it to stand in a class by itself?

Nothing ever gets anywhere without making mistakes. I should be suspicious of the Interchurch had it committed no blunders and provoked no opposition.

Nothing has been so misunderstood or so bitterly opposed, which is a sufficient certificate that the Interchurch was not a pipe dream.

For one glorious year it put religion on the map. The world knew there was a Christian church, and that it was functioning. The program of activities was projected on a scale measurably worthy of a Saviour whose dream is world conquest.

This is what matters—not whether the Interchurch has failed, but whether it was in line with the Christian ideal.

As the air clears and the church comes to a sober reflection and a just estimate, and gives the Movement a square deal, I am inclined to think its verdict will be "well done!" We cannot go on with our denominational selfishness and competition. It is imperative that the Christian churches of America get together and do team work.

The kind of co-operation that is needed and is feasible today is not that which seeks a common creed or heads for organic union. It is that which co-ordinates church activities and enables us, in a unified way, to move forward together to perform our world mission.

This is precisely what the Interchurch sought to do, and something must keep on seeking to do it until it is done.

That means that the Interchurch or another movement with a different name but substantially the same purpose must carry on.

Must Not Be Abandoned

It makes little difference what becomes of the Interchurch as an organization, or of the men and women who, with an enthusiasm that has rarely been surpassed, abandoned themselves to the ideal. But it makes a tremendous difference what becomes of this ideal.

It cannot be abandoned without abandoning the strategy taught in the Bible, embedded in the very nature of a religion whose one law is love, preached by the church for two thousand years, and practiced today perhaps more extensively by forces which operate against the church than by the church itself.

I feel that the set-back the movement has received is itself a part of the program of progress. While no chastening for the present is pleasant but grievous, it is needed; and it should be of some comfort to the friends of the Interchurch to know that "whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth."

We must not become discouraged, for discouragement is only "disenchanted egotism." We must take stock and adventure again. We must not admit that Protestant Christianity is so divisive that team work is impossible. We must keep on training and changing the harness, until we pull together. Only as we do can we hope to translate Christ's dream of world conquest into reality. It is not a divided, but a unified and united church, co-ordinated and co-operating, that is challenging and convincing.

"That they may be one . . . that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me."

First Presbyterian Church,
Nashville, Tenn.

Another Bethlehem

A Christmas Story

By Shepherd Knapp

Part I.

Doctor Sage and Judge Wittington arrived at the door at the same moment, both of them wondering why their friend, William Knowles, had sent for them on Christmas night. He met and greeted them in the hall, but not till the servant had taken their coats from them and the three were alone by the fire in the dimly lighted library, with the doors closed behind them, did he give any explanation. Then he thanked them for being willing for his sake to leave their families on Christmas night.

"The reason," he said, looking at the judge, as he spoke, "is because I may be on the point of solving at last the mystery of my boy's disappearance; and I need your counsel.

"It happened long before you knew me, Sage," he added, turning to the doctor, "and you have heard little or nothing about it from me, for it has been too profound a sorrow. It influenced our whole lives, and shortened my wife's life without a doubt. The facts in brief were these. Our little boy, our only child, a baby of eleven months, was stolen from us by his nurse. The motive seemed clear at first, for almost immediately I received a letter demanding money for his return, and appointing time and place. I complied with the directions in every particular, but no one met my messenger, and from that day, in spite of all our efforts, we could learn nothing, absolutely nothing. We hoped against hope that he was alive, and would return to us; and then, as the years went by, we could only hope that he was dead and spared the suffering of want and ill-treatment. Our comfort, such as it was, has been in making other children happy, both here in New York, and to some extent in other places. That was how our Children's Hospital came into existence and our farm colony for boys up in Westchester.

"And now, after all these years," he continued, again including the judge in his audience, "the mystery is perhaps to be explained. Last evening I received by mail this letter,"—he drew it from his pocket, as he spoke. "It is dated Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, and is signed Emmanuel King. Let me read it to you."

"Read it by all means," said the judge.

"'You do not know me,' the letter begins, 'and though I have seen you more than once, and have considerable knowledge of you in certain particulars, I am not personally acquainted with you. I must therefore indicate at once my reason and warrant for writing you this letter. There has come into my possession, partly through chance, partly of my own seeking, important information connected with the disappearance of your son thirty-one years ago: and I have reached the conclusion that I ought to make it known to you.'"

"One moment," said the judge, interrupting. "Does he ask for money before he gets through?"

"No, there is no evidence of any mercenary motive," answered Mr. Knowles. "'I will confess frankly,' the letter goes on, 'that I have hesitated to take this step, doubting seriously whether it would do good or harm. Until recently I have felt sure that it was best for me to keep to myself the facts which have come to my knowledge, feeling that it would endanger interests far more important, in my judgment, than the happiness of any individual man. To me the one thing worth living for and working for is the creation of better human relationships, the substitution of mutual understanding and mutual helpfulness in place of jealousies and strifes and hatreds, and at the present day—' "

"A suggestion of the fanatic there," interposed the judge, "or at least of the visionary."

His friend nodded without pausing in his reading. " 'And at the present day the greatest need for fundamental improvement in human relations and the greatest danger from our human tendency to hatred and strife is in the industrial field.' "

"I am afraid, Knowles," said the judge, "that the real motive back of all this is some sort of labor agitation."

"I fancy you are right about that," admitted the other. "What I want to know is whether, in spite of that, it may not be wise to hear what this man can tell me." He returned to the letter: " 'It was through my own work for better relations between employers and working men that I first became interested in the facts related to your son's disappearance: and those facts are vitally connected with an individual to whom I look for important service in the cause to which my own life is devoted. If I tell you the facts, I place that man, to a considerable extent, in your power. How will you then use your power? That is the question which I have debated within myself. Influenced by the reputation which you have among working men as a prejudiced and harsh member of the employer class, I was disposed to keep silence.' "

"You see!" exclaimed the judge.

"Yes, but wait a moment till you hear the rest. 'But at the same time,' the letter continues, 'I used all the means at my disposal to learn more about you, to dig below your reputation and find your real self: and I have now reached a different conclusion. I know now of your benefactions, and how you have devoted to them not only a very large part of your fortune, but also a very large measure of your time and thought and energy. Also, I know that you not only profess devotion to religion, but express your religion in constant acts of Christian kindliness and generosity. I have thus assured myself of the genuineness and depth of your human sympathies, however they may seem to have been contradicted by the harshness and prejudice with which your reputation credits you.'

"Excuse my reading these very personal matters," Mr. Knowles broke off to say. "I should be glad to omit this part, if the letter could be understood without it."

"There is no need for you to assure us of that," said the doctor, who had remained silent up to this point, not joining in the judge's comments on the letter. "No one could ever accuse you of blowing your own trumpet, Knowles. All the more for that reason it interests me that this stranger, whoever he is, should have put his finger so unerringly upon your real character. Often you succeed in hiding it even from your friends."

"Let me finish the letter," said Mr. Knowles. "There are only a few more sentences: 'Therefore instead of fearing, as at first, that my information will in your hands be used against the cause of better industrial relations, I have begun to hope that, when it reaches you, it will have the effect of transforming you into a friend, perhaps a champion, of that cause. In this I may be mistaken. Only the event can prove whether I am or not. But I have determined to take the chance.

" 'Accordingly I ask you whether you will come to this city'—you remember," Knowles interjected, "that the letter is dated Bethlehem, Pennsylvania—'two weeks from today, on January sixth, and meet me at the Sun Hotel at seven o'clock in the evening. I shall need the intervening time to safeguard, as well as I can, the individual to whom I have already referred; and I ask you to notify me, by an advertisement inserted in the New York Times for December twenty-seventh, whether you accept my offer, addressing me by my initials and signing your own.

" 'I am by no means unaware that in addressing to you this letter I am opening an old wound, and that my responsibility is all the more serious because of the many years that have passed since that wound was originally inflicted. I should be guilty of cruelty in doing this, were it not for my sincere belief that the information which I propose to give you will be of some real comfort and service to yourself.

" 'Very truly yours,

" 'EMMANUEL KING.' "

"Honestly, I do not know what to make of it," said Judge Wittington. "The last of it makes a little better impression, I confess." He fell silent.

"Well?" said his friend.

"Of course," the judge began again, "we must recognize that we are working in the dark; but, on the whole, I am inclined to believe that the writer of the letter, when he says that he has information of importance to you, is sincere, that he at least believes it to be important. What the information is we have no means of accurately knowing. There is the possibility, though the letter itself nowhere suggests it, that your son is alive, and that the information offered to you is a clue to his whereabouts. It is more probably a clue to those who were responsible for his disappearance. Whether, in that case, anything could be gained by your knowing it, is questionable: it might even prove painful, by relating past facts which cannot now be changed and which you would be as happy not to know."

"I have thought of that," said Knowles. "And yet—"

"And yet"—the judge continued his sentence for him—"on the chance that there is something which you would wish to know, or even something which you ought to know, though you might not wish it, you dare not leave the clue unfollowed. I understand your feeling."

"And you agree?"

"Yes; somewhat reluctantly, I admit—but, yes, I agree."

"And you, Doctor?"

"I think you are right," replied the doctor. "If I were in your place, I should hear what the man has to tell."

"There is one more thing that I want to ask of you both," continued Knowles, with a certain air of hesitation. "Perhaps it is too much to ask. Perhaps I am foolish to wish it. But there are so many uncertainties involved in this, it is so impossible to tell beforehand what it will lead to, what quick judgments and decisions it may demand, and besides, I feel myself so much shaken by this sudden flaring up of the old sorrow, that I shrink from trusting to myself alone."

"You want us to go with you to Bethlehem, is that it?" asked Dr. Sage.

"That is it."

"You'll not need to ask us twice. Eh, Judge?"

"It's a very sensible idea," said the judge. "I should have suggested it myself, Knowles, if you hadn't."

"Thank you," said their friend; "thank you more than I can say. And now you must hurry back to your families. I have not forgotten how much you have given up to come to me tonight."

"There is one thing to guard against," said the judge, as they stood to take their leave. "Let us not, during the nearly two weeks that intervene between now and the sixth of January, indulge in hopes and fancies which may crumble into dust at the touch of reality. We are three sensible men. I suppose," he added with a smile, "that considering the positions of something like prominence which we have attained in three difficult callings, we might even be described as three wise men. Surely we are at least wise enough not to let hopes and fancies run away with us, only to bring us up short with a jolt of disappointment at the end."

"All of which is aimed at me," said Knowles smiling. "But don't be afraid. I do not expect that this man's information will bring me any great happiness or comfort. I see clearly that it offers only a little ray of hope, a mere point of light, not much bigger than a single star in a night sky; and yet it is by a star that sailors bring their ships across the sea to far-off ports. Perhaps on the sixth of January we also may reach some welcome haven by following a star.

(To be concluded next week)

The Interpreter

Lysander's Christmas Shopping

There are almost as many moods in looking toward Christmas as there are individual minds. Many roads lead toward Bethlehem; but some of the travelers are very far away. Some would not come at all unless they were prodded and pushed. Many come in a spirit of reluctance and complain of unreality. Which implies, I think, that the real spirit of the time is a social spirit and that no one can enjoy his Christmas time alone. I notice that wise men and angels and shepherds came to the Child in groups. I wonder how St. Simeon of the pillar in the desert celebrated Christmas! He may have spent more time in hauling gifts up hand over hand and waving blessings to the crowd. But there is not much room on a column top—nor yet in any other narrow place of lonely self-regarding.

Lysander this morning asked me whether I had finished my Christmas shopping. There was the suspicion of a sneer upon his lips as he said the words and I perceived that he was far away upon his road to Bethlehem. Lysander is a kindly soul, but rather overburdened with cares and chained fast to the stuff. Some of his dependents, I fear, are both exacting and extravagant. I think he might enjoy, for once, a Christmas in the wilderness. He said as much, indeed, when I turned upon him and demanded why he had such a grouch with Christmas. "I wish," he said—and the words were weary—"I wish that I could go to sleep and not wake up until it is necessary to calculate my income tax."

Think of all that Lysander would miss if he were taken at his word! I make no plea for waste and pride at the Christmas season. They seem rather wicked when little children by the million are going hungry. I think that Lysander might be wise to cut out Christmas shopping until he feels in a more Christmas mood. A letter, written at leisure and carrying individual thought and affection, might be the best of Christmas gifts for those who really love him. His children see too little of him and such a letter would be more of a surprise than any five-pound box of candy all tied up with pink ribbons, and much less likely to result in bills from the doctor.

But if Lysander does go shopping he ought to get the fun of it himself. No gift is really good unless the giver puts a little of his own pleasure in the packing. I am not quite sure that Lysander is capable of the fun of Christmas shopping any more. His moral joints are getting somewhat stiff. His sense of humor creaks a little as it works. A bit of grumbling wraps itself up in many of his purchases, while affection and consideration are the true envelope of all gifts. If he had these, he might go on his shopping errands with something of the joy he knew, as a child of ten, holding his mother's hand in the great adventure of the crowd. That is the Christmas spirit, the spirit of giving gladly, as Christ did when he gave himself for the need of the world.

So this is what I told Lysander: "My good fellow, you are regarding Christmas as a task and not as a delight. You are robbing yourself in somewhat futile and perfunctory gifts to others. Don't let your mind be hustled. Take time for affectionate and considerate thought. Cut yourself loose from precedents. Forget your grouch and get a little fun out of your giving. Be childlike as you remember Christ the child." And I took the sermon to myself and meditated upon it, as every wise exhorter should. R.

OUR PILGRIM PULPIT

Messages from the Manger

By Rev. Jay T. Stocking, D.D.

Upper Montclair, N. J.

"And they came with haste and found both Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in the manger."—Luke 2:16.

Once again we join the mighty throng of pilgrims who kneel in reverence at the manger side. Bethlehem is the Mecca of all pious hearts. The most precious scene in the world's history is this manger scene. Artists have striven with each other in a futile attempt to express the religious sentiment that surrounds it. The hearts of men find here the messages for which they thirst.

The manger has a message for the man of the common lot. In the familiar pictures of the nativity the light proceeds from the Babe. It falls upon the faces of Joseph, Mary and the shepherds. It gilds the implements of travel and toil. It glorifies the stable and all its occupants. And not one of these was of the nobility. They were people who shared the common lot and the necessity for toil. They were artisans and tenders of sheep. How much it has meant to the world that Jesus was not high born, but was of lowly origin. No man can scorn the life of toil if he recalls that Jesus shared it. The message of the manger to the common man is reassuring. Do not despise your place. The greatness and the glory of life do not depend on the eminence of your station. Men are not "cabin'd, cribb'd, confined" within their surroundings. There is room enough within the narrowest walls for one to be noble. If a carpenter's lot was big enough for Jesus, your place in life offers room enough for you.

There is a message for democracy. The scene of Jesus' birth was humbler than the common lot. The manger is glorified in our imagination. But the fact remains that a manger is only a cattle stall and a stable is but a barn. Shepherds, seen close to, are not very æsthetic individuals. They are unkempt, ill-clad; they smell of the flock. Remove the halo from this scene and it is very plebian, indeed. It is out of such a lowly place that He came upon whose shoulders should rest the "government." The manger scene lifts up the head of the lowliest. It lays the ground for democracy. There are many children who are coming to our shores today who were born in stables. We cannot despise them because of their origin. None of them can be born in more lowly surroundings than the Master of men.

There is a message for the home. Jesus was not a detached individual. He was a member of a family; he was a child of the home. You cannot explain Jesus apart from Joseph and Mary. He shared the family life, the family worship, the family instruction. To a great degree he was what his home life and training made him. This fact glorifies the life of the home. It emphasizes the sacred significance of its tasks. It reveals its possibilities. Mother and father find refreshment and renewal of strength in remembering that Jesus came from a Holy Family and in reflecting that out of other holy families there may be expected other saviors of mankind.

There is a message for the nation. We are told that wise men came and knelt at the foot of the Babe at Bethlehem. There was something more important than their knowledge. The imagination of artists has sometimes pictured kings at his feet. This reveals true insight if it does not picture historical fact. It is not learning or culture or military power that makes a nation great. "Not by might nor by power, but by my spirit." The manger tells us that national order and security lie in expressing the spirit of Jesus in national institutions and national dealings. The only will that will finally prevail is good will.

There is a message for the Christian. Jesus did not come into the world full grown. He came as a little child. He grew in wisdom, in stature, in grace and in favor with God and man. So the Christian spirit in us must first be born and then grow to maturity. We must expect it to grow, aspire to have it grow. We are not to be discouraged if we fail over and again to live up to our best expectations for ourselves. The truest test of our religion, perhaps, is whether we are growing daily in grace and in the "knowledge of Christ."

Once again the manger has a message for the burdened. The angels sang when Jesus came to earth; they bade the earth rejoice. "Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy." The Word was made flesh. The spirit of God was manifested in human love. Now the world of burdened hearts could see what the heart of God was like. Men have fought furious theological battles in efforts to prove that Jesus was like God while the world has wanted to know that God is like Jesus. The nativity tells us that God stoops to share the lot of the humblest.

We are told that the wise men came to see the Babe and that after they had seen him "they departed into their own country another way." So we shall return each to his own lot and tasks "another way" if we only hear what the manger has to say to us.

Department of Religious Drama and Pageantry

Conducted by Mary Alice Emerson, Ph.D

Christmas Messages through Drama

An increasingly large number of churches substitute for the "Christmas Sunday school concert" an inspirational form of church worship, or a pageant. At the conference and demonstration on pageantry given Monday afternoon, Nov. 22, under the auspices of the Congregational Education Society many plans for the present season were discussed. The series of Saturday afternoon conferences at the Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service gather many representatives of the Sunday School Association. Prof. H. Augustine Smith, head of the Department of Fine Arts and Religion, with his colleagues discuss and demonstrate some good ways to present to different ages the Christmas message as it may be given through music, art and pageantry.

Two of the newer services for Christmas that have recently appeared are: "The Prophetic Child," arranged by Rev. Langley Sears and published by the Pilgrim Press; and "Following the Star," a Christmas service prepared by Ruth Seabury and Mabel I. Emerson, also published by the Pilgrim Press. Two of my own new pageants, "Christ for the World," and "Pilgrims of the Star," are available in typewritten form.

So many questions have been asked concerning a somewhat unique service that was given in 1917 at Union Congregational Church, Boston, that I am adding the gist of the text. The value of the service was that the promises were really fulfilled. So sincere and spontaneous was the response from the church and the church school, that many welcome promises were made, and later redeemed, by friendly visitors. Obviously the details of the promises may be easily adapted to local needs.

A Promissory Christmas

Foss—Now, children, the truth is all your Christmas presents are in the express office of the B. & M. R. R. in Boston.

Sally (lisping)—Why don't you geth them out then?

Supt.—We can't, Sally. We wish we could.

Foss—But we promise that we'll get them as soon as possible—we'll have a promissory Christmas.

Sally (breaking into tears)—Boo-hoo! I don't want any promithory Chrithmath—I want a real one!

Loud Chorus—Me too!

(Enter Sexton with cablegram. Supt. reads to self and then aloud.)

Supt.—"Somewhere in France. If detained send Christmas greetings. Promise return first chance."

Deacon Brown—Another disappointment! We shall feel as blue as the children. We did think our pastor would get back to us by Christmas.

Foss—I have a bright idea. Let's write our promises to these Sunday school children and give them to them. We'll write out our promises and give them to you to keep so you can collect on the promises just as people do on promissory notes.

Foss (Writing rapidly and reading)—"I promise to give every child in this Sunday school a bag of candy, an apple and at least one other present by Jan. 1.

Loud Hurrah! Hurrah!

Supt.—I promise to help Santa Claus deliver those presents on or before Jan. 1. Also I promise to give every teacher in our Sunday school a copy of my new book, "The Ideal Church School."

Teachers (heartily)—Thank you! Thank you!

President Women's Association—Would it help any if we women promised to furnish a free supper on the night the other presents are distributed?

Boys—You bet it would!

Foss—Write it out, Miss Bates, and bring it up here. (Throwing down pack and taking small bag from pocket) Here's my promise. (Drops his slip in) Now yours, Mr. True (passes to Supt. who drops his in). Now, Miss Bates. (Miss Bates comes up and drops hers in.)

Mr. Price—The orchestra will promise to give a free concert that night or any time it will help most.

Santa—Here, here! Put it in black and white. (Mr. Price comes up and drops slip in bag.)

Miss Syckes—Semper Fidelis Class will promise to give their teacher the Liberty Bond we know he wants more than anything for himself.

Mr. Hersey—Your affection is dear to me. Will you make that Liberty Bond into the nucleus of a fund for our Red Cross Unit? We need the money for war materials.

Foss—Perhaps some other class would like to promise a present for their teacher.

(Three or four together in different parts of the church) We do! We do!

Dr. Hart—Do these presents all have to be things? I haven't much money this year. I'd like to give my bit to the whole church by increasing my yearly pledge one-half. (Applause.)

Mrs. Sweetser—If it doesn't have to be things, I'd like to promise to make three calls a week this year on our "shut-ins."

Supt.—Of course it doesn't have to be things. Promise what you have. God asks us, as he asked Moses, "What is that in thine hand?"

Foss—We'll have the biggest Christmas yet, if it is promissory. I can see lots of you want to be in on this. Ushers, pass slips and pencils to everybody, and let's see how many promissory presents we can collect right now.

(Usher starts rapidly around. Organist starts. Ushers collect, etc.)

Foss—"I promise to be on time to my 9.30 Sunday school class every Sunday this year." Signed—A. Delinquent. "I promise to let my boy bring all the boys he wants home for a jamboree, as he calls it, one night a week. I don't care if things do get all mussed up." Signed—An over-particular mother. "I promise not to shirk committee work again for a whole year." Signed—One who often forgets. "The C. E. Society promises to tie up with the church better than ever before." Signed—President, Vice-President, Secretary, Chairman of Committees. "I promise to believe in people and causes more sympathetically." Signed—Doubting Thomas. "I promise not to pity myself again for a year, but to take the class of girls Mr. True wanted me to." Signed—Wide Awake at Last. "I promise to attend choir practice more regularly." Signed—Miss "I Didn't Think." "The Student Class promise to help entertain the soldiers and sailors once a week." Signed—Secretary. Hello, here's a printed slip—(Printed) "I promise to do what my teacher and Mr. True and Mr. Donald want me to, for I love them." Signed—Susie W.

Supt.—Bless you, Susie. We appreciate that. (Sexton keeps poking his head in and beckoning excitedly. Supt. finally sees him and goes out. Deacon Foss keeps on reading. Soon Supt. comes back with Mr. Donald, the minister).

Many—Mr. Donald! Mr. Donald!

(Supt. precedes Mr. Donald to front of platform. Deacon Foss shakes hands warmly, walks to right still reading promises and smiling happily.

Foss (to people)—Here is the first of our promises redeemed. Mr. Donald promised to come as soon as he could and here he is. (To Mr. Donald) Who's this? (Boy hides shyly behind Mr. D.)

Mr. Donald—This is Lucien Arreras, a little boy I found at Verdun. His father and mother were both killed when the city was shelled and he was nearly crazed by fright.

Supt.—Will you shake hands, Lucien? I like little boys (bends down to speak to Lucien who is gently pushed forward by Mr. Donald. Lucien retreats again behind Mr. Donald, but the child smiles for the first time).

Mr. Donald—Lucien is still shy, and he does not understand much English. He is an affectionate and grateful little fellow and will soon love you all. (To L.—These are all your friends.) I have adopted him in the name of Union Church. Will you help me bring him up?

Mrs. Noble (Coming forward and speaking eagerly)—Please let me have him first. Willie and Bettie will just love him. (Stoops and pleads with little boy who finally shyly goes with her, looking back all the time at Mr. Donald.)

Supt.—We are having a promissory Christmas.

Mr. Donald—Promissory Christmas? How so?

Chorus—"We're promising what we'll give one another." "Express Company on strike—no presents."

Supt.—Yes, so Deacon Foss and I have promised to give the children their candy, cards, mittens, etc., by Jan. 1.

Foss—There are a good many other interesting promises here. I read some before you arrived, and here are some just for you. (Passes them to Mr. Donald who reads them smilingly.

Supt (looking over Mr. Donald's shoulder)— Read that one. (Takes it and reads teasingly I promise not to go to sleep during your missionary sermons. Signed—One who does no believe in missions.

Mr. Donald (reclaiming the slip)—These ar personal. They were not intended to be rea to you.

Children—Oh, read them, read them!

Mr. Donald—Well, I shall read one or tw without the names, for I want you to share m pleasure. (Reading) "I promise not to mak excuses to get out of any church work you giv me this year." (I wish about 50 more woul promise that.) "I'm a shut-in, and I can't d any church work, but I promise to pray for yo during sermon time every Sunday morning unless absolutely prevented." ("More things ar wrought by prayer than this world dreams of.") "We promise to be understudies for Aaron, holding up your hands." (Signed by five splendi young men.) "Until you can find a better leader I will try to do Tommy McDougal's work as C. E. President till he gets back from France.' (This is signed by one of the girls. I hope some of the other girls will underwrite the complete list of our boys still overseas.)

Supt.—What's that promise? Poetry, I do believe.

Mr. Donald (Putting the rest into his pocket) —You can't read that. It's from dear Aunt Sally Hooper, aged 93. Friends, I can't begin to tell you what these promises mean to me—

Susie (on front seat)—Don't you want to promise something, Mr. Donald?

Mr. Donald—Yes, I do, Susie. I promise to love you all more than ever, and not to be too busy to show it. I also promise to work harder than ever on the task God has given this church in this community. (After slight pause raises his hands in benediction) And may the God who has made such wonderful promises to his children keep us all true to our promises to him. Amen.

Supt.—Let us sing, "O Jesus, I have promised."

How One Church Has Raised Its Budget

The Every Member Canvass Plus

By Rev. Noah C. Gause

There are no men of wealth in the Grantwood, N. J., Congregational Church; but last year a large achievement was put across by adopting an unusual program of raising the budget. It was the Every Member Canvass and the envelope system, plus something else; and it was that something else that achieved success.

That the achievement may be better appreciated a brief statement of the environment and historical background seems fitting. Grantwood-on-Hudson, N. J., is carved out of a primeval forest on the heights of the Hudson, thirty minutes from New York City. Trees, ferns, wild flowers and natural shrubbery still abound in the vacant lots with vast reaches of untouched forest immediately beyond. To the West, in a few minutes' walk, one may lose himself in a veritable forest-wilderness where abound wild berries and tangled vines; to the East, across the picturesque Hudson, the skyline of New York City is seen as far as the eye will carry.

About fifteen years ago Grantwood lots were put on the market and settlement thereon had more the appearance of some remote Western community than a suburb of New York City. A small group of Christian people, representing several denominations, formed a Congregational church. It was not long thereafter that the Missionary spirit of the Pilgrims manifested itself in the Grantwood Church, for, while struggling to maintain their own early life and growth, the church founded a mission among the Italians at Cliffside, a near-by community, which, with missionary help, it has maintained with growing success; the associate pastor at Grantwood being in active charge.

With regard to raising the budget: a year ago the church was confronted with a budget of $4,400, with pledges through the envelopes of $1,800 with which to meet it. The Board of Trustees called into council the pastor and the heads of the auxiliaries of the church to devise ways and means of raising the money. It was felt by some present that it was not good financing to raise the difference between $1,800 and $4,400 by the usual means of bazaars, entertainments and the like, however successful the church had been along that line in the past. By others it was thought that it could not be raised any other way.

Habit and custom have strong hold upon people and institutions. However, it was proposed by one who had the courage of his convictions that it should be raised by direct giving through the envelope system, first determining how much each member should give. This was naturally opposed by some of those present. It seemed quite impossible. Others called attention to the fact that it was in keeping with the New Testament spirit of stewardship; and also that large sums of money are raised by certain Christian organizations by some such method, naming the Y. M. C. A. for example.

The idea caught fire and swept the Board into unanimous opinion that it was sound and practical financing. Other officers of the church were summoned to a meeting of the Board and their enthusiastic co-operation was secured. A gathering of the entire body of the church followed and every one was given an opportunity to express himself. The sentiment was favorable to the plan, the old slipshod method so prevalent among churches condemned, and the Board was given the moral backing necessary. A committee of the Board then went over the membership list and determined, to the best of their judgment, the financial status of each.

Then a letter was sent to each one calling attention to the new plan and naming the amount that the individual was being asked to give; reserving, of course, the right of the individual to state in a return envelope whether or not the amount suggested was too high or too low.

The results showed the wisdom of the undertaking; some went over the amount asked of them, many increased their subscriptions several hundred per cent. and the average increase was over one hundred per cent. The total amount thus pledged was even more than estimated. The budget was raised and the subscriptions for benevolences leaped from $116 in 1918 to $1,363 in 1920. This includes the subscriptions to the Congregational World Movement in the Emergency Campaign when the church went over its apportionment of $873 to a total of $1,100.

It must be borne in mind that there are no families in the Grantwood Church of wealth. The realization of the goal to meet the Budget was by the adoption of effective, businesslike methods. All this has given a certain spiritual impetus to the church as a whole, allowing time and inclination to direct the energy of the church along higher lines of endeavor than was possible hitherto and giving relief from the former anxiety and uncertainty of questionable methods of financing.

Grantwood, N. J.

Helpful Books

In Answer to the question, "What Book Has Helped You Most This Year?"

PRINCIPLES OF SOCIAL RECONSTRUCTION

It is a little difficult to say, but perhaps the book that has been worth most to me this year is Bertrand Russell's "PRINCIPLES OF SOCIAL RECONSTRUCTION." Not because I always agree with it, but because it is a stimulating discussion of its theme.

HENRY CHURCHILL KING.

Oberlin College.

SEVERAL HELPFUL BOOKS

I will not use my two hundreds words in mentioning the theological and metaphysical books with which many of my brethren will doubtless deal, nor can I confine myself to any one book as pre-eminently "helpful" in all respects.

If your word had been "interesting" I would mention Archibald Marshall's "THE GREATEST OF THESE," a book that touches more than one ministerial problem. If your word had been "unique," I would say, "THE STORY OF OPAL," which Viscount Grey considers so remarkable. As I happen to know Opal Whiteley as an earnest Christian worker among the young, I can vouch for the genuineness of her book, for her character is as charmingly transparent and simple as when she wrote about "Thomas Chatterton, Jupiter Zeus," and the "most dear woodrat," and about "Michael Angelo Sanzio Raphael," and the "grand fir tree with the understanding soul."

If your word had been "illuminating," I would refer you to Keyne's book on "THE ECONOMIC SIDE OF POST-WAR CONDITIONS IN EUROPE," though I know that some of his conclusions are questioned.

If your word were "devotionally uplifting," I would say, Dr. Jefferson's book, "THE CHARACTER OF JESUS," which we have read through at our leisurely family prayers this summer.

After all, the help that a man gets for his soul in confirming his faith, hope and charity (love) is the best help of all, so if you insist upon but one book, I will vote for Dr. Jefferson's.

FRANCIS E. CLARK.

Christian Endeavor Headquarters,
Boston, Mass.

A GOOD BOOK FOR PREACHERS

The book that has given me the largest measure of joy and stimulation during the past six months is "THE CHRISTIAN ADVENTURE," by Rev. A. Herbert Gray, published by the Association Press. It is a statement of the content of the Christian religion in the terms of the teaching of Jesus which seems to me one of the most clarifying and inspiring that has come to me in a long time. Perhaps it meant more to me because I came to it from a reading of "WHAT IS THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN?" by A. Clutton-Brock. But the latter, in spite of the freshness of its method and the novelty of its approach—the touch of the artist is upon it at every point, and this is a welcome relief at times from the heavier handling of the dogmatician—is hard reading in spots. But Dr. Gray, from the beginning in which he sketches Jesus with a master hand, until the end, never flags. The book seems to me to indicate the method by which Christianity is really to take hold to make the new world, not through its metaphysics, but by love and forgiveness and good will. I wish that our preachers might get their point of view from this great little book. There are only 134 pages in it.

OZORA S. DAVIS.

Chicago Theological Seminary.

STIMULATING VOLUMES

Speaking professionally, the two most outstanding and stimulating books of the year, have been "OUTSPOKEN ESSAYS," by William Ralph Inge, Dean of St. Paul's, which I have read three times and am not through with yet, and "THE DOCTRINE OF THE CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN REUNION," being the Bampton lecture for the year 1920, by Rev. A. G. Headlam, D. D., which is a star of the first magnitude in the firmament of the modern literature of what is the most immediate and imperative challenge of the Church of the Living God today. If one may add a third, it is the proceedings of the conference of bishops of the Anglican communion, held at Lambeth Palace, July 5 to Aug. 7, which no intelligent American minister can afford to overlook—or underestimate.

NEHEMIAH BOYNTON.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

OLD SOURCES OF REFRESHMENT

To the man hungry for new sources of power and fresh springs of inspiration, the books published this year that have come to my notice have not been especially helpful. Manifestly too many books are reflective rather than dynamic. I have come back this year as never before to the old and never-failing sources of refreshment for the mental and spiritual life—to Dante and Browning, to Bushnell, Gordon, and Brierley. I have re-read history and browsed in familiar biography—always with a sense of satisfaction which it seemed impossible to secure from new books.

I will mention one new book of real merit, "THE SCIENCE OF POWER," by Benjamin Kidd. This volume is a keen and arresting analysis of our present-day thinking with sane and constructive suggestions, not for reform, but for making new our habits of thinking and living. The author expresses in terms of social fellowship the ideals of religion in a way that not only holds the attention but creates new resolves in the heart. He presents a program of Christian ethics and action from the point of view of the historian and social psychologist. The book gives a new revelation of the place and power of woman in the making of our coming civilization, and furnishes an impetus for the religious education of the young beyond anything found in books on education or psychology. There is truly "power" in it.

W. A. ROWELL.

Hinsdale, Ill.

Old Gifts and New

By Alice M. Hawes

When wise men knelt before the Babe of old,
We wonder, "Did the tiny fingers stir,
Uncurl their rosy tips, then clasp the gold,
The frankincense and myrrh?"

We know not, but our hearts make answer swift,
"Today, the Lord Christ's gentle, mighty hand
Is open to receive the humblest gift
Our grateful love has planned."

From a Missionary in China

Dear Mr. Editor:

With most Congregationalists, we have been glad of your position on the League of Nations and that the church sees that the issue is not purely a political affair. We have but recently received the paper of Aug. 5 in which issue is taken by Mr. Dumm with the action on the League of Nations taken by the International Council. We have great difficulty in understanding his position, that is, in what seems to us his confounding of important with unimportant matters. If it is a question of running counter to the Constitution, then let's amend it, as it has been found necessary to do eighteen times already, but that action is doubtless unnecessary.

The thing which is necessary and of major importance is to put the United States alongside other forward-looking nations in this first real attempt at keeping the permanent peace of the world. It ought to be patent to everybody that it is impossible for the United States of America to go back to the isolation of pre-war times. Furthermore, for anybody with altruistic motives in their hearts to think that America can selfishly turn her back on the great opportunities for service thrust providentially upon her in these last years without serious detriment to the soul of the nation itself seems incomprehensible. What a good number of senators need, to say nothing of a large number of other persons, is to live for even a few years outside the forty-eight states. Such an experience would probably cure the provincialism which now exists in so many quarters. We wish more than one senator had come with the congressmen to the East this summer. One gets a different viewpoint of world matters and the relationship of America thereto from living abroad. In the missionary body and among Americans generally I have met, there is unanimity in the desire to see America taking her active part in world affairs, not only for her own good but for the help she can give a needy world.

The struggle between the evil power of the military governors and the growing popular desire for real republican government still goes on here in China, and just now there is added hope in the overthrow of the vicious An-fu clique which the students and other patriots had good reason to suppose was selling their country to Japan. With disinterested helpfulness from her Pacific neighbors China will finally get on her feet and with power and resources to be truly great. There is every reason for fostering close and happy relations with America, and also with a Japan stripped of imperialistic designs. There is such a Japan but we do not see much of it in her relations with China.

EDWIN D. KELLOGG.

Shaowu Tukien, China.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Old Boston Streets

The Crooked and Narrow Streets of Boston, by Annie Haven Thwing (Marshall Jones). Old Boston families and their descendants will find this attractive volume full of interesting information. As its title suggests it is mainly a history of old Boston streets and their inhabitants, or public buildings. Many of the names of those streets are a thing of the past but good maps of old Boston, inserted through the volume, show where they were, and the text generally indicates also the present locations as clearly as possible. The maps are of Trimountain in 1630, Boston about 1645, the North End, the Government and Business Center, the Residential Part (from School Street to Boylston, and Tremont Street to the wharves, about 1750), the West End and "The Neck" before any filling in had begun. There are also twenty-four full-page illustrations of early Boston. Interwoven with the text is a great amount of information of general interest. In fact all present-day Bostonians will find the volume a storehouse of interesting historical material. The publisher has given it also a very attractive setting.

Out-of-Doors Books

The Sea Shore, by W. P. Pycraft (Macmillan). A delightful pocket volume for young or old, telling briefly in simple, non-scientific language the interesting biography of the seas, their influence upon man, their awe-inspiring physical characteristics—such as the abysses, some of which could swallow the highest mountains with hundreds of fathoms of rolling water to spare over their heads; of fearsome creatures inhabiting these profundities and of others of wondrous beauty living in shallow seas. There are chapters on Beaches, River Mouths, Islands, The White Cliffs of England, etc. Many small cuts and larger illustrations add to the interest and value of the book.

Roaming Through the West Indies, by Harry A. Franck (Century). An entertaining account of a travel trip down Florida to Key West, across to Havana and over Cuba from west to east, then in a circuit to all the important and interesting places in the West Indies. He describes baseball and the lotteries in Havana, a Christmas tree for the natives in Haiti, and the death of Charlemagne, a bandit chief. Haiti, an American Protectorate since the summer of 1915, is the theme of several chapters, and there is an enlightening section on our recently purchased acquisition of the Virgin Isles. The narrative is full of anecdotes, accounts of the life, customs, characteristics and habits of the various people and many illustrations from photographs taken by the author.

Minstrel Weather, by Marian Stone (Harpers). This small volume, spite of its Quaker dress, is a sort of ecstatic calendar of the round year, the months passing in review and having each its own rhapsody wherein are noted the flowers and leaves, birds, animals, skies, etc., by which for the moment nature most distinctly mirrors for us her changing countenance. Quaintly illustrated by full-page woodcuts and chapter-head decorations symbolical in character in what may be called the Rossetti manner.

The Wonders of Natural History, by A. Frederick and Virgil D. Collins (Frederick A. Stokes). Young people like to know about animal life and especially in its relation to the life of man. Chapters on such subjects as Pre-historic Animals, Man in the Making, Birds of Today, Modern Fishes, and Lower Forms of Animal Life make this volume of value to those interested in natural history. It is a splendid gift book for younger readers. Charts and illustrations add to its value.

Penn Pub. Co. The Book of Chicago

THE LAKE FRONT

Tahiti Days, by Hector MacQuarrie (Doran). Many gifted writers have described their experiences and observations among the South Sea Islands, but none are more entertaining, picturesque or informing than this author in his account of a year of touring. He shows the islands and the natives as they are today. A chapter on "The Movies" in the South Seas, and the impression they make on the natives raises questions of comparative moral standards Pearl diving, fire walking, dances and cyclones are some of the varied themes of the pages. Th volume is well illustrated.

Century Roaming Through the West Indies

CUBAN SOLDIERS

The Abandoned Farmers, by Irvin S. Cob (Doran). A humorous account of the author's search for "an abandoned farm," the final discovery of the place desired and experiences in the process of developing it into an attractive dwelling place. To any one who has "gone back to the land," this record must call up vivid reminiscences. On the whole it is encouraging for on the final page is the assertion that the author will never become "a flat dweller" again

See America First

A Wonderland of the East, by William Copeman Kitchin (Page). A picturesque description of motor trips taken during four successive seasons in the beautiful mountain and lake country of Eastern New York, Vermont New Hampshire, Maine, Massachusetts and Connecticut. This is also a country rich in historic interest which is briefly described in the course of the tours. Maps from the Blue Book of 1920, and details of trips are given at the end of the volume for the aid of the traveler But the narrative is also full of interest for the stay-at-home who delights in well-written travel books, taking many journeys in imagination where he may not go in person. The book is beautifully illustrated and is an excellent gift for the holiday season.

The Book of Chicago, by Robert Shackleton (Penn Pub. Co.). The author's earlier volumes on Boston, New York and Philadelphia hold an assured place among the best of their kind. He has a remarkable gift for collecting what is most striking in history and tradition and weaving it into an interesting account. The story of Chicago is very different from that of Boston, but it is hardly less enthralling. It has romance, tradition and history of its own, and the Chicago of today is in many ways a wonderful city, unsurpassed in its places of importance, attractiveness and beauty. There are chapters on Books and Writers, How Art Came to Chicago, Music, The White City, An Oxford of the West, The Making of Gary, etc. The volume is well illustrated. Altogether it is a very readable and entertaining book which all Americans will enjoy reading.

The Affable Stranger, by Peter McArthur (Houghton Mifflin). A bright and breezy book by a brilliant Canadian journalist who traveled through the United States last spring to find out why his people across the border have been developing distrust of us. Humor, philosophy, keen insight and good will abound in his pages and ought to teach some wholesome lessons and help to restore more cordial feelings on both sides of the border.

Concerning Famous Men

Gambetta, by Paul Deschanel, President of the French Republic (Dodd, Mead). We have brought together here two famous names of recent French history. Gambetta was the soul of the French people in the days when the empire crashed and he escaped from Paris by balloon to rally them for defense against the invading Prussians. He was also an influence of the first value in the formation and strengthening of the present republic. The author, long known as a great historical writer, came to the presidency as the people's choice over Clemenceau, in a term too soon cut short by accident. He pictures Gambetta as a child of the South, half Italian, probably part Saracen in blood, eager, aggressive, great as a man of action as well as eloquent and inspiring as a speaker. All his fine powers as a historian are used to set the man before us in his human as well as in his political relations. He himself had been so much an actor in the later stages of the story he traces that he could speak from personal impressions of many characters in the brilliant drama of Gambetta's career. He tells the story of the France that rose from its overthrow, paid its debts of penalty, rebuilt its life, reconquered its leadership in the life of the world and made itself strong and wise for the rôle of deliverer against the new hordes of barbarians. The biography is full of material for the historian and is informing and inspiring for the general reader.

The Americanization of Edward Bok (Scribners). This is a brilliant and entertaining account of the remarkable career of the editor for thirty years of The Ladies' Home Journal. It is written in the third person, as if the author were telling the story of another than himself. It is naturally largely devoted to the explanation of editorial methods, problems and accomplishments and will especially interest editors, publishers and writers. It is a story of indefatigable industry and amazing results. The final chapters, Where America Fell Short with Me and What I Owe to America, furnish much food for reflection. The narrative abounds in humor and entertaining anecdote about men and women. To a remarkable degree it is a review of popular progress along many lines and throws light upon a multitude of well-known public men and important events of the past half century.

The Romance of Madame Tussaud's, by John Theodore Tussaud (Doran). The author is the great grandson of Madame Tussaud and inherits the same artistic talents. He can also write and his account of the origin and growth of the remarkable collection of effigies and historic groupings, extending from the famous characters of the French Revolution to the recent additions of Lord Kitchener and Edith Cavell, is most interesting. The record covers over 130 years and is rich in anecdote connected with the famous people represented in wax. Numerous illustrations add greatly to the value of the narrative.

Burns' Poems

The Poems of Robert Burns, edited by James L. Hughes (Doran). A selective edition of the best of Burns' poems, arranged in four groups. Poems of the Ayr and Alloway districts, Religious and Ethical Poems, Democracy and Brotherhood Poems, and Love Songs. The volume is fully illustrated with photographs of the Burns county, taken by the editor. A good Glossary of Scotch words and phrases, an Index of first lines, and an introduction for each group of poems add greatly to the value and interest of the volume.

Reims Cathedral

The Cathedral of Reims, by The Rt. Rev. Maurice Landrieux (Dutton). A monumental volume giving the story from day to day of the German desecration of the great cathedral. The author is Bishop of Dijon and Arch-Priest of Reims Cathedral. He remained in and about the building during the whole course of the war. He denied then, officially, and repeats the denial, that the Cathedral was ever used as an observation post, or that French troops were placed near it. No excuse whatever exists for the bombardment. It was a malicious crime. This volume with its large collection of photographs showing the damage to various parts of the building is a record of permanent historic value. It is also a fine example of book-making. The text is an original source by an unimpeachable authority.

Little, Brown From Black Bartlemy's Treasure

Selected Fiction

It Pays to Smile, by Nina Wilcox Putnam (Doran). If the title is right the average reader should be well off by the time he finishes the story, for he will be kept smiling. It is the story of two Boston maiden ladies "of impeccable social standing but financially embarrassed." The younger of the two breaks all rules and takes a position as companion to the untrained daughter of a California millionaire. They go almost directly from Boston to Monte Carlo and plunge into very high and shocking society life. But Miss Talbot is "a good sport" and in many situations proves that good sense and quick wit are stronger than tradition. It is an unusual story, with romance, mystery and adventure mingled in satisfactory proportions.

Black Bartlemy's Treasure, by Jeffery Farnol (Little, Brown). The author of "The Broad Highway" returns again to the tale of fierce adventure. The heroine is as excellent as any he has ever drawn and the hero as strong and courageous and fit for every emergency. It is a buccaneering tale with the man and woman cast ashore upon a deserted island; and there are skeletons and hidden treasure and heavy villains and mighty fighting. The end is rather abrupt, with a suggestion of a much-to-be-desired sequel. The admirers of Farnol's rough romance will find this a story hard to put aside until it is ended.

Century The Purple Heights

The Purple Heights, by Marie Conway Oemler (Century). It is Mrs. Oemler's forte to take a hero who is down and out and to weave a fascinating tale in the process of his rehabilitation. This time it is a forlorn scion of the South Carolina gentry. In his fallen estate certain old Negroes are his best friends and nature, not books, his educator. But in the midst of drudgery he looks toward "the purple heights" of ambition as his mother had taught him to do. On the road to the heights, however, he makes one great mistake. Or was it a mistake? Answering the question makes the story. The scene changes to London, Paris, the French battlefields, and to a little coast town in Maine.

Captain Macedoine's Daughter, by William McFee (Doubleday, Page). A story as alluring and as repellent as the personality of the woman about whom it centers. Ships and British seamen and strange glimpses of far lands form its background, and through the narrative runs Mr. Spenlove's disturbing criticism of Western civilization—"There may be something in life which we miss because we are so careful of life." The technique repays close, thoughtful study, but the story lacks the scope and clearness of detail which makes Casuals of the Sea a great book. Mr. McFee's genius would move more freely were it less closely wrapped in Conrad's mantle.

Eli of the Downs, by C. M. A. Peake (Doran). In the multitude of novels which take the form of "life histories" this stands on the highest level. Eli was a shepherd of Wessex who became a wanderer over the face of the earth and ended his days in the same quiet country district of England. Here a young college youth finds him and out of their fine friendship grows the chronicle. In spite of sound training he evolved into a careless vulgar youth emerging from that state into a beautiful love marriage. When tragedy blotted out this phase he followed the sea for a decade and then became a frontier ranchman. It is all told with perfect simplicity and the art of compelling interest, not only in the outward events of Eli's life but also in his mental reactions. The great crises are described with not a word too many or one unnecessary emotional stroke. Such restraint of style is as gratifying as it is unusual.

The Captives, by Hugh Walpole (Doran). By what amazing wizardry does this author provide such compelling attraction in such a bleak story! It is a long, slow narrative with no plot. An obscure, fanatical English cult of religion holds its followers in thrall, not only those of the Inner Circle but also the outer fringe of adherents. There are many characters, etched in lines both deep and fine. Yet there is only one whom any normal person would care to meet and she is rather vague and appears only casually. In spite of this, the hand eagerly turns the page to the next chapter as soon as each is finished.

Wanted: A Fool, by Philip Curtis (Harpers). An actor without an engagement sees an advertisement as indicated in the title. He obtains employment which takes him to a rustic camp in the lake and mountain country where he finds an interesting young woman and a mystery. It is an unusual and interesting story, well told.

Winsome Winnie, by Stephen Leacock (Lane). Eight "nonsense novels," caricatures of as many types of fiction, a ghost story, a detective tale, a romance, a political novel, etc. Readers of Mr. Leacock's previous nonsense novels will welcome this new volume in the same humorous vein.

IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL

DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS

The Birth of Jesus

International Sunday School Lesson for Dec. 19. Luke 2: 8-20.

How is it possible to tell this old story again with any hope of keeping its beauty and power? We know every item of it so well! But a mother never tires of having her child tell her that he loves her. No man ever wearies of talking over the loyalties and ideals of life with his boy. After all, the old stories are the best and most beautiful. The greatest joy we have is to tell them over and over again. Let us do it with the Christmas story today.

1. The Heavenly Message. Think of the wonderful beauty of a perfect night under the stars! Think of the simple and responsive souls of shepherds whose life consisted of hard work and of unselfish care of weak and erring sheep! Then add the fact that heaven is nearer to earth than we think and our dull senses do not let us hear but a fraction of all the music of the universe! That is the raw material out of which the story of the angel song at Bethlehem is made.

There are two items in the song that are especially significant to us now. First, it is good news. This means precisely what it says. The world needs to know whether or not God is real, is ready to give us help as we meet the trials of our daily life. And the Christmas message is wholly clear and confident on this point. It affirms that we may trust God and that he will bring us "salvation." This is a great word and includes everything that we think of when we speak of anything as being preserved out of conditions in which it would be destroyed into conditions where all its possible value may be realized. The positive aspect of salvation is what we most emphasize. For example, John Wesley was saved from the fire in the rectory and the people doubtless rejoiced at the moment as they thought that one of the children had been saved from physical death. They had no idea of the precious quality of this lad's life; but when we think of the rescue of the child from the fire we rejoice in the life and work into which this boy, John Wesley, was saved. This is the way in which to think of the salvation that Christ brings to the world. He is the Saviour from sin; but still more he is the Saviour into life.

Then observe the timely meaning in the conception of peace as the messengers of God announced it. The world is to be at peace when it conforms so closely to the will of God that he is well pleased in it. Peace cannot be produced by conventions and treaties. It grows out of the motives in the hearts of men. When we love our brethern in the way that is pleasing to God the peace of the world is guaranteed, and in no other way.

2. The Holy Family. So far as we know these shepherds were the first visitors to the little family made complete by the birth of the Christ-child. They discovered that God was saving the world through the gifts of life and love made real in a human family. At Christmas we do well to lay emphasis once more on the meaning of a human home. It stands for sacrificial love, for strength devoted to the care of weakness, for patience and trust and the holiest joys that can possibly come into our lives. This is the method by which God saves the world. The great redemption comes from him; but it is worked out through human means, and the love and sacrifice that are realized in a family are the instruments by which God carries out his plan for the restoration of the race.

3. The Treasury of a Mother's Heart. Perhaps Joseph had not listened intently; very likely the shepherds soon forgot the details of their visit to the family in the Bethlehem stable; but there was one person whom nothing escaped and who hid it all in the sacred place of her heart; it was Mary the mother of Jesus. There is where all the sacred and beautiful things are stored up. Mothers understand and remember. Let this tender and accurate touch in the narrative bear its lesson to us as we study the old story. The churches may quarrel about the place they give to Mary the Mother; but all Christians will appreciate the beauty of her life and spirit as they are revealed in the gospels.

4. Praising God. This is the inevitable issue of a renewed study of the old story of Christmas. It is impossible to review it without a kindling sense of gratitude and joy that God so entered into human life in Christ that we may know him and understand what he wills to do with his world and with us. This is what Christmas means. God wills our highest good and has taken means to enable us to realize it in co-operation with him. This is a glorious fact; it calls for the expression of our deepest joy. We praise God for his wisdom and love. How shall we get this Christmas spirit of grateful praise? There is no better way than to win it as the shepherds did by coming once more in love and reverence to the Christ who still lives forever and whom we may find in the contacts that the spirit makes with him through trust and obedience.

Ozora S. Davis

Chicago Theological Seminary.

The Study of the Bible

The Bible and "The Second Coming"

Did Jesus believe that God would intervene in a miraculous manner, overthrow his enemies and establish his Kingdom? And did he believe that he himself was to come again as God's representative to do this? When Jesus is represented as saying, "Verily I say unto you, there are some of them that stand here, who shall in no wise taste of death, till they see the Son of Man coming in his Kingdom," Matt. 16: 28, does it mean that he is to return in such a manner that we can see him with the eye of the flesh? Or is this picturesque figurative language and the coming a spirtual coming?

Certainly the spiritual coming is the only one that occurred before those people saw death. But this passage and the one in Mark 8: 38 and 9: 1 are coupled with statements about the Son of Man coming in the glory of his Father with the holy angels. In Matt. 24: 30, Mark 3: 36, and Luke 21: 27, the Son of Man is pictured as coming on the clouds with power and great glory.

One of two things seems certain: Either this is picturesque, figurative language, the coming is spiritual and the Kingdom spiritual, or the statement is to be taken literally, in which latter case either Jesus or those who reported him were mistaken; for there was no such literal coming before some of those who stood there died. If we accept the figurative interpretation of such language in our New Testament and interpret the coming and the Kingdom spiritually, then the doctrine of the premillennial second coming has no Biblical basis, and must be discarded. If we are to take these sayings literally, in which case Jesus or those who reported him were mistaken, the writer must conclude that it was the reporters and not Jesus who were mistaken.

This conclusion is reached for three chief reasons:

First: We have seen that Jesus' conception of the Kingdom of Heaven, of the Messiah and his work differed so widely from that of John the Baptist, that John, who had been sure that Jesus was the Coming One, began to doubt; from that of the Jewish authorities and people that they crucified him, and from that of the disciples that they misunderstood him, denied him and were in utter despair when he was crucified. The disciples' attitude and idea of the Kingdom, even after the resurrection, are indicated by their question in Acts 1: 6, "Lord, dost thou at this time restore the Kingdom to Israel?" The kingdom they had before and wished restored was a political kingdom. If they so misinterpreted him when he was here in the flesh, they might do so in the matter of his return.

Second: This idea that Jesus would come on the clouds of heaven and usher in the Kingdom, and particularly before some who heard him died, does not fit in with the idea of the Kingdom and the process by which it is to come as indicated in the parables of the sower, the leaven permeating and leavening the whole, the mustard seed, the seed growing secretly and producing "first the blade, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear," with the Kingdom coming not with observation and being already within or among them, with the idea in John's Gospel of the spiritual coming, or with Jesus' emphasis upon the spiritual as we see it in the Sermon on the Mount, and in his entire life and work.

Third: Apocalypses, such as Daniel and Revelation, were written in two of the most critical periods through which our religion has ever passed and for very specific immediate purposes.

Daniel was written between 168 and 165 B. C., when the Greeks controlled Palestine. Antiochus Epiphanes, the king, determined to destroy the Jewish religion, putting Greek gods, religion and even the worship of his own image, in its place. The book was written during the terrific

(Continued on page 769)

THE HOUR OF PRAYER

How Shall the Church Lead?

Comment on the Midweek Prayer Meeting Topic for Dec. 12-18

BY HENRY M. BOWDEN

Scripture Passage. 1 John 9:2-11; 3:15-24.

The Problem. The main problem before us in America, now as always, is that of integrating our life. Our different sections have not always understood nor sympathized with each other. Class strife makes rifts, political, economic, social. Religious quarrels often retain bitterness after they have lost something in fierceness. The real process of Americanization is this of integration. The business of the Christian Church is to direct and strengthen those moral and spiritual forces which underlie life, and which alone create and guarantee real unity. He who feels himself a part of the community, responsible to it, dependent upon it, creating it by virtue of his relations to his God and his fellows, is the real American.

First Things. The first business of the churches is with their own members. In order that the foreigner may come to feel himself a member of the community, it is necessary that the community should feel that the foreigner is a member of it. We may think our safety lies in keeping him out; in reality it lies in compelling him to come in. But here compulsory laws are self-defeating. The only compelling force in spiritual integration is the power of fellow feeling. Our sense of America must be wide enough to include every foreigner within our borders.

What Can We Do? Four things the churches may and should do.

(a) Strengthen sympathetic feelings toward foreigners. In this year of our remembrance of the Pilgrims, let us remember that we too were strangers in the land of Egypt.

(b) Speak well to the foreigner and of him. He is sensitive, he is not stupid, and he spurns sympathy which is camouflage.

(c) And add brotherly kindness. Rather kindliness than charity, for the stranger needs friendliness rather than assistance.

(d) Especially should the churches give the stranger the gospel in his own tongue, that he may come to understand the kindliness. For the religious motives are the foundation of sympathetic appreciation of other people. The increase of our own faith will lead us into sympathy with others, and the increase of their faith will lead strangers into sympathy with us. Religious truth is most appreciated when it speaks the language of one's childhood. All of us need to remember, and some of us need to learn, that all languages are the open road of the Spirit of God.

The Church must know and face the whole task. Her objective is not a few brands snatched from the burning. God's plan is a world plan. Hers can be no less. It must include her total spiritual responsibility. Her plan must be radical, go to the root of the matter.—William Horace Day.

A keen, warm sympathy that makes your brother's need your own—nothing short of that is really charity.—Phillips Brooks.

Closet and Altar

THE GLORY OF THE COMMONPLACE

What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.—Acts 10:15.

Even this world is larger, deeper, richer and more glorious than we have yet discovered. Why do we go about as those who, having eyes, see not? And why do we miss the beauty and the wonder of our quiet days and commonplace surroundings? For there is not a place upon the earth, however undistinguished, but God is there to give companionship and satisfy our thought.—

How many persons reflect that the day's work has an eternal significance? How many try to find the key to their own endeavors? The world is a dreary, disappointing place if we live for the moment only. Everything becomes sacred if we consecrate it to the idea of the Kingdom of God. No labor is degrading, no task impossible, no position unworthy of the children of the All-Father.—R. G. Campbell.

Give me, dear Lord, thy magic common things,
  Which all can see, which all may share,
Sunlight and dewdrops, grass and stars and sea,
  Nothing unique or new, and nothing rare.

Just daisies, knap-weed, wind among the thorns;
  Some clouds to cross the blue old sky above:
Rain, winter fires, a useful hand, a heart,
  The common glory of a woman's love.

Then, when my feet no longer tread old paths
  (Keep them from fouling sweet things anywhere),
Write one old epitaph in grace-lit words,
  "Such things looked fairer that he sojourned here."

Whosoever has not a Christianity that sanctifies the trifles has a Christianity that will not sanctify the crises of his life.—Alexander Maclaren.

Now thankfulness retains a sense of the sacredness of things. The commonplace wears a nimbus. There is a halo upon the ordinary. A mystic fire burns in the wayside bush. God is seen in the lowly shrine. The common meal becomes a sacrament. To say "thank you," and mean it, keeps the soul awake to the Divine.—J. H. Jowett.

We thank thee, Lord, that thou art ever with us and that even our most ordinary tasks and commonplace surroundings may speak to us of thee. Open our eyes that we may understand. Teach us to bring our lowliest thoughts and works into thy presence, that they may shine with something of thy light. Awaken our sense of the beauty and wonder of ordinary things that we may feel ourselves called to a large place and crowned with gracious opportunities. So may we rejoice in thy bounty and make fresh discoveries of thy meaning where to unapprehending eyes no beauty is. In the name of Christ. Amen.

—Isaac Ogden Rankin.

The Grace Christlike

Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic for Dec. 19-25

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: The Spirit of Generosity. 2 Cor. 9:6-15. (Christmas meeting.)

Light from the Bible Passage

God loves generous giving. Such giving is inspired by deliberate choice and by openness of heart (v. 7). Evidences of willingness so to give he welcomes by providing the abundance out of which to give. He provides enough for us to serve our own needs, and enough to make gifts to others. Full-hearted generosity makes the giver to be remembered for his good deeds through the years ("forever," v. 9). Real giving is as seed providing fruit for the giver and the recipient. No man can really confess Christ and not be generous, as far as in him lies, to all for whom Jesus died. Our giving not alone wins hearts for us by our kindness, and joy in the hearts of the recipients, but also produces something rich for God (v. 12). The finest gift, within the reach of all, and which all need, is brotherly love.

Leads for the Leader

It is fortunate that the emphasis is becoming so general on giving rather than getting in our Christmas thought and practice. A leader hardly has to argue this among Endeavorers today Even very small children are catching this new spirit.

Generosity is a necessity in the Christian life. It follows from confession.

Generosity receives its highest impulse from consideration of God's generosity.

What is the value to us of giving that is prompted by its being the "fashion"? To the one who receives?

Is America in its relations to other nations growing in the spirit of generosity? The League of Nations. Missions.

Secure a copy (or enough copies for each member) of Dean Charles R. Brown's suggestive article, "The Fine Art of Giving," and make liberal quotations from it. It appeared in The Congregationalist for Oct. 7, and has been reprinted as a folder (for free distribution) by the Congregational World Movement, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

Thoughts for Members

Genuine Christianity is based on a God who gave, a Christ who gives and a Christian who imitates both.

Outlet as well as intake is imperative if we are not to become green, scummy, stagnant pools. Fine impulses within the heart are worse than useless except they find prompt and wholesome expression in finer forms of effort. Retained, they wither and die, poisoning the springs of action. The most direct mode of expression is to be found in giving—in giving time, money, strength and interest to needy lives and to worthy causes.—Dean Brown.

A Moment of Prayer

We thank thee, O thou who givest to all men liberally, that thou dost not give us for ourselves alone. For every opportunity that thou dost give we pray thee stir within us the impulse to give of our thought, our resources and our love. For the Master Giver's sake. Amen.

WITH THE CHILDREN

How the Flying Man Brought Christmas

By Daisy D. Stephenson

Lee and Alice were standing at the living-room window, looking out with disapproval at the snow that had fallen steadily all day. "If we had a sled, I wouldn't care how deep it gets," sighed Lee, flattening his nose against the pane to see how cold it was.

"A sled wouldn't do us any good as long as our throats are sore," Alice reminded him quickly. "Grannie won't let us out even to make a snow-man until there's not a cough left in us."

"A fine Christmas we're going to have," grumbled Lee, flinging himself down by the fire impatiently and poking it as if it were to blame, "with Daddy's train stuck in the snowdrifts of Marshall Pass most likely, so he can't get home!"

There were footsteps, and with a squeal of delight Alice ran to admit their favorite "flying man." Kellogg cottage stood on the outskirts of the Western city, and a little distance beyond lay the plains that, as Lee said, stretched "from here to Kansas." Several acres had been converted into an aviation field, and with great interest the children had watched the building of the hangars that housed the aeroplanes. Their favorite pastime was watching to see the great red and yellow "Orioles" roll out, glide swiftly along the ground, and soar up into the sky.

One of the young aviators who was a stranger in the West had noticed the children and to their delight had made friends with them. So it happened, as winter came on and he had more time to feel lonesome so far away from his home, William Carson, "Bill" to his friends, found his way to the hospitable little house where Grannie Kellogg did her best for the motherless children.

Alice greeted him with an ecstatic "O Mr. Bill! and drew him toward the wood fire. In two seconds by the big clock in the corner Lee and Alice were pouring out their troubles to him. But somehow when Grannie came in with a dish of apples and handed the popper and some corn to Lee, every one's worries disappeared up the old chimney with the smoke. She looked so cheerful, rocking slowly with her knitting, that Mr. Bill forgot his homesickness and felt almost as if he were chatting to his own dear mother.

"Of course everybody's short of money just now, with things up as high as one of your Orioles!" laughed Grannie. "But dearie me, it isn't just money that makes a merry Christmas, now is it?" She beamed down at the children, who, cosey as kittens, were busy with indoor snowflakes.

"N-no," admitted Lee, slowly, "but if you were little, Grannie, you wouldn't be very happy about Christmas if your Daddy was gone and you couldn't have a sled or a tree or anything you wanted."

"Whew!" whistled the flying man. "Is it as bad as that?"

"The boys who came round with trees asked seventy-five cents and a dollar for the scrubbiest little ones," Grannie told him simply, "and we really can't afford one this year. Seems queer, doesn't it, when a few miles in three directions you can find canyons with hundreds of Christmas trees growing!" Then she bustled out to "put Mr. Bill's name in the pot," for of course he must stay to supper. So while Alice set the table carefully and Grannie prepared a delicious meal of stew and corn muffins and ginger bread, the flying man and Lee planned a partnership Christmas.

"When I left that lonesome little room of mine to-day," confessed Mr. Bill, helping himself to popcorn, "I had a notion to go to sleep and snooze right through Christmas. The folks at home are having a family dinner, and I'd just love to fly back there, even if I froze solid on the way! But let's go shares and make a real success of it, bad as it looks. Shall we?"

For reply Lee held out a small brown hand and Mr. Bill gripped it hard.

"Then it's agreed," he smiled as he started out into the storm that evening, "that we have a real celebration in spite of too much snow and too little money."

It sounded funny to Alice and Lee, and having Mr. Bill for partner had suddenly changed matters greatly. "It's like a game now," declared Alice. "We'll pretend everything's going to be lovely and it will be," she added gayly, "for just having our flying man to dinner will be jolly." But later as she strung popcorn and made pretty gilt things for the make-believe tree she grew sober. "Poor Daddy," she sighed. "With four of us together we'll have a good time even if Santa can't get here. But think of Daddy away up on that mountain road, not able to budge his engine. There's no way even to wish him 'Merry Christmas.'"

"The old storm spoiled it all!" burst out Lee, disgustedly. "It was Daddy's turn for a layoff, and he would have been here Christmas Eve for a whole week."

Luckily, just as they began to feel gloomy again Grannie took the cookies out of the oven and out ran Alice and Lee to admire the fat brown gingerbread Santa she had made for Mr. Bill. After that they made taffy and pop-corn balls, and the time flew as swiftly as Mr. Bill's airship through the keen December air. For the snow had stopped whirling, and bits of blue peeped through the gray clouds, so Mr. Bill had donned his snuggest outfit and was soaring away toward the hills like a great eagle.

* * * * * * *

Alice eyed the old clock anxiously, while Grannie in the kitchen looked at the fat brown hen with approval. "It's done to a turn," she told Lee, who hovered about in the way, sniffing expectantly. "Now for the gravy. Lee, did you set up the chairs? Where's Alice?"

"It's exactly the time we said dinner would be ready, and he isn't here," mourned Alice from the doorway. "Maybe he's sick. You know we haven't laid eyes on him since that snowy afternoon. Maybe he won't come."

"Ho!" said Lee. "He'll be here, if he has to come in an ambulance!"

The children had played their pretend game bravely up to this minute, though it had been trying to get up on Christmas morning and find nothing but the stockings and mittens Grannie had been knitting for them.

"No regular surprise," Alice had confided to Lee. "Just what we'd have had anyway. But why won't Grannie let us go near her room, I'd like to know?" And over that they puzzled vainly. Now Lee's eyes met his sister's in silent consternation. What if something happened to keep their flying man away? Grannie's eyes were dancing as she stirred the gravy and peeped at the steaming Christmas pudding that was as full of raisins as Jack Horner's pie was full of plums.

"We're going to take dinner up," she announced firmly, "for I believe in Mr. Bill just as I always have in fairies and Santa Claus. What's that?"

There was a scraping of feet, a loud tattoo, and the children fairly raced to the front door. Grannie's cheeks were still pinker, and she gave an exclamation of joyous surprise when she heard besides Mr. Bill's voice and the children's shouts of delight another that asked, "Where's mother?" Grannie had picked up the roasting-pan to pour out the bubbling brown gravy, and in her excitement she held on to it and started for the door. Her big boy, the children's Daddy, met her in the dining-room and hugged her tight, gravy and all, before Mr. Bill thoughtfully relieved her so that she could do some hugging on her own account.

Then followed such a wonderful time of questions, explanations, and hearty laughter that Grannie said they might as well be eating a plain everyday dinner of pot roast, though nobody agreed with her for a second. Mr. Bill, brimming over with fun and Christmas spirit, will always be a sort of Santa's eldest son to the children. It all came out when Grannie, fairly bursting with satisfaction, went into her room and came out with a lovely little tree, trimmed from its tip to its lowest branch. Alice and Lee recognized their decorations, but their staring eyes expressed the conviction that the tree must have sprouted by magic.

"I flew to a mountain park for it," explained Mr. Bill, modestly. "I meant to do that all the time. I sneaked it here night before last when you youngsters were dreaming, and Grannie did the rest. But getting your father took some manœuvring," he went on, as they hung upon his words. "I knew the snow-plough would likely clear the track by tomorrow, but that was a day too late. I found the engineer who was to relieve Mr. Kellogg, and had to talk him into doing his part. He was afraid at first, but by the time we landed he was so proud of playing bird that he forgot how cold he was!" How Mr. Bill did laugh! And everybody joined in with him.

"I've always wanted to fly," broke in Mr. Kellogg, "and I was so anxious to get home for Christmas that I was about ready to climb a peak and jump a mile or two in this direction. So we hopped in, the Oriole hopped off—"

"And here we are!" finished Mr. Bill, boyishly. "Now we've finished the best Christmas dinner in the state we'll dance a jig around the tree. Oh, by the way," he told Lee, as if he had just thought of it, "there's something out on the porch for you."

So while Alice with shining eyes held a beautiful new shut-eye doll in her arms, Lee whooped delightedly over a new sled at the door. "Seems to me you youngsters have a very good bird-man," laughed Mr. Kellogg, as he seated Grannie in her wicker chair and handed her some packages to open.

Running up to Mr. Bill, Alice nestled her curly head against the flying man's arm. "You're as good as Santa, every bit!" she declared thankfully. "You brought Christmas to us out of the sky!"

Copyright, 1920, by
Congregational Publishing Society

IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE

Elected to Connecticut Legislature

One of the effects of the late election was to bring into well deserved recognition the personality and work of Rev. Grace I. Edwards, pastor of Nepaug, in the Northwestern part of Connecticut, and representative-elect to the State Legislature.

Miss Edwards was reared in Sayville, Long Island. In 1903 she became a student in the Hartford School of Religious Pedagogy, undecided as to what form of Christian work she would take up. The Connecticut Home Missionary Society asked her to take charge of the Nepaug church during the absence of the pastor on account of sickness. Thinking the experience would be valuable, she accepted, little anticipating that years of service awaited her there. But the pastor was unable to return and Miss Edwards continued to supply the church until her graduation from the School of Pedagogy, when she became resident pastor, occupying the parsonage and giving herself fully to the needs of the community. In 1911 she was ordained, and now serves the Bakerville Methodist Church in connection with her work at Nepaug.

By her sympathy, wisdom and unselfish service, Miss Edwards has won the confidence and warm regard of all the people in her vicinage. To this her election to the General Assembly is testimony. "It came so unexpectedly," she writes, "that I can scarcely bring myself even yet to think it true. I was made a voter on Saturday, Oct. 9, and at that time I had not even thought of such a thing as having any part in political affairs other than the privilege of casting my first ballot, and I was not aware until Sunday afternoon that my name had been generally approved as a candidate for the Legislature. I was simply stunned. My deacons with whom I consulted advised me to let matters take their course. I attended the Republican caucus on Monday evening, and simply did nothing. After several ballots, I was declared nominated, and the Democrats meeting later, indorsed the nomination. I have not been able to find out who first suggested my name. I certainly did not seek the nomination. The best thing about it to me is the confidence and good will of my people. The publicity of it I do not enjoy."

Plymouth Sunday School Burns

A misfortune which has brought deep concern to all the people of Brooklyn, N. Y., irrespective of church affiliation and which will be shared by thousands of friends throughout the country, was the disastrous fire which, on Nov. 23, destroyed the Sunday school and lecture room of historic Plymouth Church, causing a loss of at least $100,000. It was thought at first that a good part of the Henry Ward Beecher relics, which were in this part of the church plant, had been lost; but later reports show that most of them were saved. The greatest loss comes from the destruction of six of the beautiful stained-glass windows in the church, depicting historic scenes: Lincoln signing the Emancipation Proclamation, the founding of the Woman's Educational Movement, Beecher delivering the last of his famous antislavery sermons in England, the signing of the Mayflower Compact, John Eliot preaching to the Indians, and Daniel Webster delivering an address. Another great loss is a collection of letters received by Mr. Beecher from prominent fellow workers in the Emancipation Cause and influential statesmen on various subjects.

The church auditorium itself did not take fire, but the wall between the main building and the annex containing the Sunday school and lecture room was so weakened that it will not be possible to use the building until thorough repairs are made. In the interval the services will be held at the Academy of Music.

The building which was destroyed was on the site where Henry Ward Beecher preached his first sermon in Brooklyn in 1847. Many famous meetings had been held in this building. The lecture room on the first floor housed most of the Beecher memorabilia and on the walls were portraits of many former members of Plymouth Church now dead. This collection was little damaged. The flat mahogany desk or pulpit, also, from which Mr. Beecher's sermons were thundered forth to be heard almost around the world and from which the sale of the slave girl was conducted during the Civil War, was found intact after the fire. The oil painting of Mr. Beecher, taken from life and valued at $6,000, which hung at the back of the lecture room, was ruined by the flames.

It is not known how the fire started. It was discovered by the caretaker at a little past one o'clock in the morning and had gained considerable headway by that time. B. A.

Brooklyn Tercentenary Celebration

The Brooklyn Tercentenary Celebration reached its height on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 28, with a mass meeting which filled the great Academy of Music. The meeting was arranged by a committee of the Brooklyn Brotherhood, all the Protestant churches of Brooklyn were invited to take part in it, and on the program were represented all the denominations of the Congregational type. The prayer was offered by Dr. S. M. Lindsay of the Hanson Place Baptist Church of Brooklyn, the Scripture reading was by Dr. F. M. Gordon of the Flatbush Christian Church, and the benediction was pronounced by Dr. E. A. Bartlett of All Souls Universalist Church. The three addresses were given by Canon A. E. Burroughs of Peterborough Cathedral, the representative of the Church of England, Dr. S. M. Crothers of the First Church (Unitarian) of Cambridge, Mass., and Dr. J. P. Huget of Tompkins Ave. Congregational Church of Brooklyn. Congregational singing furnished the music.

Canon Burroughs addressed his remarks to his "brothers and sisters of the one great English-speaking family" and called upon his hearers to emulate the uncalculating courage and faith of the Pilgrims and not to refuse "to strike out into the new paths which seem to open before us and beckon us along their way. In this moment we are confronted by the picture of the Pilgrim and he speaks to us across three centuries, of their faith and their courage; 1620 is sent by God to guide and warn and encourage us, perplexed citizens of 1920. They stretch out their hands to us across the centuries and say, 'We did what we were called upon to do. You are our children, our blood is in your veins, our ideals are those upon which you were

CHRISTMAS and NEW YEAR'S

could not be spent in a more pleasant place than up here among the hills of the Connecticut River Valley at

The Northfield

If you enjoy real New England hospitality with a bountiful table, fine service, good beds, roaring open fires, etc., you should surely plan to visit us. Guests of the hotel are privileged to attend the entertainments and lectures of the Northfield Schools. Open all the year.

Write for illustrated leaflet.

Ambert G. Moody, Mgr. Frank W. Kellogg, Asst. Mgr.

EAST NORTHFIELD, MASS.

brought up, you can do your task if you share our spirit.' "

Dr. Crothers referred to the Pilgrim emigration as being only a part of the great revolutionary movement of the 17th century in Europe, the older individualistic conception of religion struggling against the newer ideal of a religion which should be a power to remake the world.

That was Puritanism, he said, to realize a Christian commonwealth in which justice, righteousness and good will should be embodied, not only in the individual life, but in the public life. "A public state for the cause of God; that is the whole essence of militant Puritanism. It introduced the new idea of religion in public affairs. "This problem of the Puritan," Dr. Crothers went on to say, still remains. "Has our American a soul that can be touched by the world's need; that can be responsive to the great opportunity that comes to us today? Every denomination is pleading for an association of nations to keep the peace of the world —the greatest ideal that ever came to the mind of man. Are we of the same stuff as the Pilgrim Fathers? Have we a tithe of their spirit in our hearts which will give us courage to face our own world as they faced theirs; or shall it be said that America slept through a great crisis of mankind? God grant there may come to us some spirit equal to theirs answering to the world's need today."

Dr. Huget spoke eloquently of the Pilgrims as a group of men and women who "were adequate to the occasion, who were lords of their event." They heard the call to new adventure and answered it, setting before themselves a definite task, to which they were willing to give everything they had, even to life itself. Dr. Huget ended with a glowing prophecy, in answer to Dr. Crothers' questions, that the same heroism and high spirit which had sent our men and boys forth on a new crusade to give their lives, if need be, for justice and righteousness, still lived in the hearts of the American people and would still lead them on to new fields of daring and service.

Mr. E. P. Maynard of the Church of the Pilgrims presided at the meeting.

In the evening of the same day an interesting and unusual service was held in the Tompkins Ave. Church, in which the two Episcopal churches of the neighborhood, Church of St. Matthew and Church of the Good Shepherd, had been invited to join by Dr. Huget. The Episcopal evensong was given by the two rectors, Dr. F. W. Norris and Dr. Robert Rogers, and the sermon was by Canon Burroughs of Peterborough. The music was by the choir of St. Matthew's.

More than 2,500 people witnessed the presentation of "A Pageant of the Pilgrims," by Esther Willard Bates, presented by the young people of Tompkins Ave. Church on Nov. 28, and a second performance was given by request on the following Monday evening. Dr. Huget, pastor of the church, took the part of the Interpreter and the cast of 150 young people of the church was assisted by E. K. Macrum, organist, and the choir. B. A.

The Texas Conference

The meeting of the Texas Conference this year was at Port Arthur, and for a delightful extra the usual gracious hospitality of local friends was supplemented by a visit to the wonder Texas Company plant, one of the largest in the world, where the pastors and delegates were the guests of the company at an elaborate lunch served in one of the company's cafeterias, followed by an automobile ride through the grounds.

Rev. W. I. Caughran is pastor of Port Arthur. He was also the retiring moderator and his address at the first session at once set a high standard of thoughtful, accurate statement as he treated the relation of the church to social service, welfare and charity work, holding that while other modern organizations carried out rightfully the large part of needed social ministries the real function of the church is to give ideals and spiritual motive. The sermon on the first evening was by Rev. A. D. Shaw of Austin and was also a message marked by clear thinking and inspirational power.

The suggestions of the 300th anniversary pervaded the program, Dr. H. B. Harrison of the Extension Societies bringing specifically its aroma in The Pilgrim Spirit in the Twentieth Century. Two interests were given prominent place, the World Movement, presented by Supt. A. E. Ricker and Dr. W. W. Scudder, the latter also bringing a message of splendid power at an evening session; the other interest was that of religious education, ably presented in a series of addresses by Sec'ys F. J. Estabrook and Fred Grey. Dr. C. A. Riley was elected moderator, Mr. S. E. Schmink assistant, Dr. T. H. Harper scribe, while a strong organization was effected through elections to the Texas Committee and standing committees. The next meeting is to be in Central Church, Dallas. A hopeful note pervaded the meeting. The coming of Drs. Harper to Dallas and Willisford to Houston reinforces the workers and gains in property and new members, together with closer organization and a clearer program, give promise for the future. A. E. R.

Changes in Southern California

First, San Diego, has as its new pastor Rev. Roy Campbell. During the war Mr. Campbell's service under the Y. M. C. A. in the San Diego camps won for him the admiration of a host of local people, who instinctively turned to him when the San Diego church became pastorless. Mr. Campbell's excellent service at Pilgrim, Seattle, since the Armistice, gives good promise for the future in San Diego.

Dr. C. N. Queen has accepted the pastorate of Mayflower, Los Angeles. After several years' absence from Southern California, during which time he served as Dean of Atlanta Seminary, Dr. Queen returns to a district where he is well known, his other fields in Southern Cali-

(Continued on page 758)

Long
JEWELER

Christmas Gifts
At Popular Prices

Gold Signet Rings	$3.00	to	$50.00
Gold Link Buttons	3.00	to	50.00
Gold Bar Pins	3.00	to	75.00
Gold Lingerie Clasps	$2.00	to	$10.00
Gold Cuff Pins	1.50	to	10.00
Gold Bangles	3.50	to	30.00
Gold Pendants	2.00	to	50.00
Sterling Bar Pins	2.00	to	20.00
Sterling Pencils	2.50	to	5.00
Sterling Military Brushes	11.00	to	20.00
Sterling Toilet Sets	25.00	to	75.00
Cut Glass Bowls	4.00	to	15.00
Cut Glass Vases	5.00	to	20.00
Cut Glass Water Sets	15.00	to	35.00
Cut Glass Candy Jars	1.50	to	12.00
Domestic Ivory Toilet Sets	9.50	to	25.00
Leather Hand Bags	$6.00	to	$20.00
Velvet Hand Bags	5.00	to	25.00
Pearl Necklaces	2.50	to	75.00
Fountain Pens	2.50	to	15.00

41
Summer St.

FRANKLIN ACADEMY

A REAL ACADEMY REALLY CHRISTIAN

1881 FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY 1921

February 9

A Christian School, planted forty years ago, on a new, far frontier by a little group of praying men. It has enrolled over five thousand students—graduated four hundred and twenty two, more than half of whom have gone on into college. It has sent six missionaries to Arabia, China, India and South America; nine ministers in America—six recent graduates now in college preparing for ministry and missionary service—a multitude of Christian physicians, nurses, bankers, farmers and home makers. Born in prayer and nurtured in prayer, a dynamic in Christian character building. We can make no graphic, pathetic plea as for backward neglected people.

FRANKLIN WANTS TO CELEBRATE FREE OF DEBT

Our boys and girls are just plain Americans with red blood and high ambitions, "The best young people on earth," a large part of them, "Working their own way."

An investment in such boys and girls will produce the best dividend on earth and under the conditions of the offer of the Congregational Education Society stated above will yield also 100% on the dollar.

> "Dear Mr. Mitchell:
>
> May I express to you most heartily my belief in the necessity of such an institution as Franklin Academy.
>
> Personally I owe the profoundest debt to the Christian influence of an academy. May you find friends and resources abundantly for your most important constructive work in the building of Christian character.
>
> Yours cordially, OZORA S. DAVIS.

THE PROCESSION OF THE FORTIES

We are paying interest on a debt of	$15,000
(The accumulation of forty years)
The Congregational Education Soc. Boston, offers	7,000
On condition that the Academy raises balance	$ 8,000
Add interest on $15,000 for one year	1,000
Total for the Academy to raise	$ 9,000

40 gifts of $100 each	$4,000
40 gifts of $ 50 each	2,000
40 gifts of $ 25 each	1,000
40 gifts of $ 20 each	800
40 gifts of $ 15 each	600
40 gifts of $ 10 each	400
40 gifts of $ 5 each	200
280	$9,000

NOTE WELL THREE THINGS

1. Every dollar given on this pledge will be used exclusively to help wipe out our interest bearing debt.
2. Every dollar so given (up to $7,000) will secure for us for the same purpose another dollar from the Congregational Education Society. 100 per cent. on your investment.
3. At your option, your gift may be without condition, or on the condition that the full $9,000 be secured.

THE PLEDGE OF THE FORTIES

To help secure the conditional offer of $7,000, described above, to clear Franklin Academy of debt, and to meet accruing interest, I will be one of the forty persons to give to Franklin Academy,

One Hundred, Fifty, Twenty-Five, Twenty, Fifteen, Ten, Five, ($.............)
(Underscore)

.... DOLLARS on the condition that the full sum of $9,000 be secured.
(Write here the sum you will give) (Erase this if given without condition)

Payable on or before February 9, 1921, the 40th anniversary date.

Date .... Name ....

If we give like "forty" we can raise it.
Liberty Bonds received at par. Send us a shower. Address ....
All this is a part of the campaign for $300,000 for endowment, building, and general funds.

Remit to G. W. Mitchell, President, Franklin, Nebraska

(Continued from page 756)

fornia having been First, San Bernardino, 1909—1914, and Berean, Los Angeles.

The change at GLENDALE has been reported in these columns in the New England news. While Lee, Mass., regrets, Southern California rejoices in the acceptance of Rev. Charles Calderwood to that church's call. Mr. Calderwood visited this district last summer and received a unanimous call from Glendale. With its building project in view and its splendid promise of growth in the next decade, it offers a real opportunity to the Massachusetts minister. A reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Calderwood was recently held and all departments of the church have geared themselves up to the new régime.

After a brief sojourn of two years at RIVERSIDE, Rev. George Laughton has accepted a call to Winnipeg. The Canadian church offers him a great field, but Southern California regrets his departure. In the Riverside pastorate Mr. Laughton has strongly built up the organization. The morning congregations are excellent and the evening gatherings, where the use of the motion picture has been introduced, taxes the seating capacity. In this latter service Mr. Laughton has preserved a distinctly religious tone. Although some people may come for the pictures, they do not go without receiving a definitely evangelistic message. Riverside has not announced any plans for the future, but Mr. Laughton's loss will be keenly felt.

The desert railroad town at BARSTOW has a new leader in the person of Rev. A. E. Paterson, from Meriden, Ct. This community, with its constantly shifting population, challenges its pastor to a ministry whose far-reaching effects may extend a long way on the Santa Fe trail.

The illness of Rev. William Davies, of VERNON AVE., LOS ANGELES, has necessitated a three months' leave of absence. His many friends hope for an even quicker recovery. Meanwhile the church is being supplied by Rev. C. H. Davis, late of Stoneham, Mass., who occupies the parsonage and conducts the regular services of the church. S. E. B.

Good Topics for a Men's Class

Eighty-five men of FIRST, CLIFTONDALE, MASS., are enrolled in the McDuffee Bible Class and on the average Sunday 35 at least of them are found attentively following the course of discussion, given each week to a timely and important theme. The class has its president and other regular officers. The leader is Rev. C. B. McDuffee, the pastor. The list of subjects being considered is so unusual that we print it entire. We should be glad to publish suggestive lists from other Men's Bible or Topic classes.

SEPTEMBER—Co-operation and Organization

Co-operation vs. Individual Effort.
Organization the Method of Concentrating Effort.
Christian Co-operation Making Its Entrance in World Life.
Is Christian Co-operation Productive of Greater Strength Than Selfish Co-operation?

OCTOBER—Ecclesiastes

The Cynic.
The Scientist Testing Life's Values.
What is Man's Boast over the Beast?
The One Thing Lacking.
The Conclusion.

NOVEMBER—Christianity and the World

Is Christianity More for this World or the Next?
Is it Likely to Become Dominant?
Can Progress in Civilization be Made Faster With or Without It?
Is it Advisable to Practice it with Individuals and Nations Who Do Not Understand and Appreciate It?

DECEMBER—Evolution of Human Qualities

Did Humanity Emerge from Savagery Along the Line of Might or Right?
Did Virtue Come into Practice through Desire or Necessity?
Has Militarism or Morality Been the Determining Factor in the Survival of the Fittest?
Do Backward and Forward Nations Owe Their Present Stage to Geographical Conditions or Religious Ideals?

JANUARY—Problems in Applied Christianity

Would Christianity Overturn or Transform the Present Social and Economic Life of the World?
Jesus Severely Condemned Rich Men. What Would Be the Status of the World in Respect to Wealth if It Were Christian?
Is Competition Christian? Can the World Progress Without It?
If Any One, Whatever His Work or Interest Might Be, Should Begin to Practice Christianity in Everyday Life, Would He Have to Sacrifice any Essentials of His Life?
Should One's Prime Purpose in Living Christianity Be to Make the World Better?

FEBRUARY—Stimulants of Faith in the Universe

The Microscopic World.
The Telescopic World.
The Perfection of Operation in the Universe.
The Mystery of Life.

FOR THAT CHRISTMAS GIFT

Your Friend will appreciate the Cross-Reference Digest of the Bible

The Cross-Reference Digest of the Bible brings the topical analysis found in the Cross-Reference Bible within the reach of the masses. It contains all the foot-notes of the Cross-Reference Bible. These have been carefully revised by at least seven associate editors of the Cross-Reference Bible and by Drs. Jacobs and Weidner of the Lutheran Church and are therefore strictly undenominational in character. It has an alphabetical index of the verbs of the Bible and a complete list of persons and places.

What the Digest of the Bible Contains

The Digest of the Bible contains a classical, critical introduction to each book of the Bible, a scholarly digest of the teachings of all the Bible upon any one subject; a scholarly and classified division of all subjects so that any one can not only find at once the subject he wants but he can also find all the Bible says on any phase of it.
It gives a concise index of all the Bible subjects as well as a topical analysis of them. It is really a Bible of the Bible and both a dictionary and an encyclopedia of the Bible and it is the Most Complete Topical Index of the Bible Ever Published.

If You Have only two books in your home, the Bible and one other, that other should be the Cross-Reference Digest of the Bible. It is a Scriptural library for the Sunday School Teacher, the College Teacher, the Student, the Preacher, and for every Christian.

Agents interested in greatly increasing their present income will find this book a winner. Unrestricted territory. No competition. There is only one Digest of the Bible. Write for full particulars.

You need this book. Send your order for it today.

A $7.50 BOOK FOR $5.00

We were very fortunate to procure the stock for this valuable book before it became almost exhorbitant, and can therefore give you the benefit of the low price of $5.00 for this large and splendidly cloth-bound book. It is beautifully printed in 8 point or brevier type and contains 821 pages. Size 6″ x 9″ x 1½″. Send cash with order or if you prefer you may send only $2.00 as the first payment and the remainder in thirty days. Descriptive literature sent free upon request.

CROSS-REFERENCE BIBLE CO., 2209 W. Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

SHOP EARLY

TOYS

There is no better place to follow this advice than in the buying of Toys, because it will save you trouble and disappointment and may save you from disappointing the children. If you leave the purchase of Toys until the last few days before Christmas the assortment is likely to be so broken that you cannot find what you know the children want, and even if you do find it there may not be time enough left to have the Toys properly packed and sure to reach their destination before Christmas morning.

R. H. STEARNS CO.

Tremont Street and Temple Place
BOSTON, MASS.

From West to East

WASHINGTON

Goes to Connecticut Pastorate

Rev. J. H. Bainton has closed a ministry of 18 years at Colfax, breaking the record in this part of the country. It has been a noted pastorate, not only for its length, but also for its efficiency and influence. During Mr. Bainton's ministry the church has developed in every respect, a splendidly equipped building has been erected, and the constituency greatly strengthened. Mr. Bainton has made a reputation as a pleasing and scholarly preacher, and he has had larger audiences than ever during this year. The whole town regrets his departure and at a largely attended banquet strong words of appreciation were expressed. On the last communion Sunday he had the pleasure of receiving 27 to membership of the church. He leaves Colfax for a new pastorate at Cheshire, Ct.

J. E.

CALIFORNIA

Significant Meetings

The first week of November was a gathering time for groups of churches. On Nov. 1 and 2, a Church School Conference was held in Los Angeles; on Nov. 3 and 4, the churches of the Kern Association held a two-day conclave; and on Nov. 4 the San Bernardino Association held its annual meeting.

This close schedule of events was arranged because thus advantage could be taken of the opportunity to have the presence of Rev. F. M. Sheldon. His forceful addresses served to give new stimulus to the interests of religious education and his impact upon the churches in Southern California assure him of a hearty welcome whenever he shall turn this way again. In addition to participating in these three gatherings during his week's visit here, Mr. Sheldon also spoke in two individual churches and addressed the students of Pomona College.

The Conference in Los Angeles gathered teachers from 27 churches in the city and vicinity. The program, planned along lines similar to those followed in an institute held last January, provided opportunity for general discussion in an open forum hour led by the Conference Director of Religious Education and more specialized consideration of departmental problems when separation came into smaller groups. Each of these divisions, led by an expert who understood the needs of pupils in that particular department, furnished opportunity for informal discussion on ways and means of meeting those needs. The supper hour fell between these two general divisions of the program and at that time friendly fellowship prevailed. Each evening's program closed with an address by Mr. Sheldon, who also led the Administrative Division.

The place of training in worship and the importance of a service planned to that end were given special consideration in the forum discussion and well illustrated by the direction of the worship period each evening, in charge of Rev. A. S. Donat.

In the newly renovated church at Oil Center the 11 sister organizations in Kern County gathered for a two-day session. The first day was divided among the outside speakers—Rev. F. M. Sheldon, Dr. E. P. Ryland, Chairman of the Evangelization Committee of the Conference, and Supt. Kenngott. The second day's program was provided by local leaders and the general

GUIDING GIRLS
TO CHRISTIAN WOMANHOOD
By A. H. McKINNEY, Author of "Guiding Boys," etc.
A BOOK you need, teacher, parent, worker among girls. Methods best calculated to enrich and develop the nature as life becomes fraught with responsibilities. Excellent bibliography. Activities for growing girls, etc. Net $1.50.
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Corp'n

Gifts for Christmas of Moderate Values

Our Stock is Ready for Holiday Service and is Full of Novelties which may be had at moderate prices.

The above cut shows a few shapes of Covered Pitchers ranging in price from $1.00 to $10.00 each.
We also mention at random other items.
China Plates Tea Cups and Saucers Pudding Saucers
Bread and Butter Plates Dinner Sets Ice Cream Sets Individual Breakfast Sets Demi-Tasse Coffee Cups
Two Handled Coupe Soup Plates and Saucers Chocolate Sets
Cake Plates Bouillon Cups Nut Sets Service Plates
Salad Bowls Covered Toast Dishes Berry Sets Jelly Sets
Children's Cereal Sets Baby Plates Syrup Jars
Cake Sets Tea Strainers Etc., Etc.
Glass Water Goblets Glass Pitchers Glass Olive Trays
Glass Celery Trays Glass Centre Handle Cake or Sandwich Servers
Glass Footed Compotes Glass Finger Bowls Candlesticks
Bathroom Toilet Bottles Covered Cheese Dishes Sherbet Servers
Glass Spoon Trays Flower Vases Etc., Etc.

Quaint Shapes of Allervale Pottery

From Devonshire, England, decorated with quaint mottoes, a few of which we quote:

Pitchers Teapots Covered Jugs
Candlesticks Bowls Trays
Teapot Stands Mugs Kettles
Cups and Saucers Puzzle Jugs

"Life has many shadows,
But 'tis the sunshine makes them."

"Do the work that's nearest
Tho 'tis dull at whiles,
Helping when you meet them
Lame dogs over stiles."

"This is a saying old and musty, yet 'tis ever true,
'Tis never trouble trouble till trouble troubles you."

and many other mottoes.

Dinner wares of all grades selected from our stock patterns enables the purchaser to select only the articles required without being obliged to purchase a complete service.

Also Table Glassware and Electric Lamps

Special Christmas Tables

Classified values, many items of which have been marked down to close out, $5.00 Table—$2.00 Table—$1.00 Table—75 Cent Table—50 Cent Table.

Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Corp'n
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
Crockery, China, Glass and Lamp Importers and Distributors
33 Franklin St., corner Hawley, Boston

consensus of opinion was that the program achieved a level of excellence not previously attained.

The annual meeting of the San Bernardino churches, held at Perris, was crowded into a one-day session of unusual value. Somewhat the same general program was followed there as in the Kern meeting. Additional features of that session were: the launching of plans for the Congregational World Movement drive, under the leadership of Rev. John Toomay and Rev. H. C. Ide, between whom the churches of that Association are divided. These two aggressive leaders are organizing their sub-teams most efficiently. The second additional feature was the presence of a goodly number of young people and the allotment of an hour late in the afternoon session for reports on the Long Beach Conference. Miss Bundy presided in that session, but most of the statements were given by the delegates who were themselves in attendance. At the dinner hour the singing of the young people added much to the enthusiasm of the meeting and through the Resolutions Committee were expressed formal appreciation of the young people's presence and the hope that their participation would become an established feature.

S. E. B.

NEBRASKA

Young People's Rally at Fairmont

A special rally for young people was held at FAIRMONT on the evening of Nov. 17. In response to the invitation of Fairmont, groups of young people came from the neighboring churches of Geneva, Exeter, Grafton and Friend. They came in auto loads, Geneva sending the largest group of 28, 125 being present, together with the pastors of four out of the five churches.

The meeting was addressed by Rev. Paul Reynolds of Chicago, and Sec. C. G. Murphy, of Lincoln. The subject of life recruits was strongly presented. The Fairmont young people, under the leadership of their pastor, Rev. W. B. Kline, royally entertained, and served refreshments at the social hour. This is the first attempt to bring together the young people from a group of churches for such service, and the success of this meeting was encouraging.

Mr. Reynolds also addressed a group of young people in First, Lincoln, and the students at Doane College. The young people are open-minded and responsive to an appeal for service.

C. G. M.

MICHIGAN

Dr. Hadden a City Commissioner

Since the item was printed a few weeks ago concerning the pastorate of Dr. Archibald Hadden at MUSKEGON, he has been re-elected one of the Commissioners of the city of Muskegon, which is under a commission form of government. Dr. Hadden is so well known, and his services for the city had been so acceptable that he received a large vote. He will maintain his residence in Muskegon, where for many years he was pastor of First Church.

MINNESOTA

New Pastor for Mankato

MANKATO is now rejoicing in the settlement of its new pastor, Dr. G. F. Armington, who comes from Salina, Kan. Dr. Armington is a strong preacher and will fill a much-needed place in this important center of business and educational activity.

ILLINOIS

Galesburg Church Observes Tercentenary

As their contribution to the "Pilgrim Tercentenary" EAST MAIN ST., GALESBURG, Rev. W. P. Drew, pastor, decided to present the pageant, "Faith of Our Fathers Living Still," by Mary Alice Emerson, on Nov. 11, the anniversary of the signing of the Compact in the Mayflower.

For a church with less than 250 resident members, this was an ambitious undertaking,

The Spirit of Christmas
Permeates Throughout
the Entire Store

Among our very large and comprehensive stocks will be found articles that are practical, sensible and sure to be appreciated.

We Call Your Attention to Our Assortments of

Gloves, Hosiery, Neckwear, Slippers, Handkerchiefs, Toilet Articles, Silver, Stationery, Waists, Men's and Boys' Furnishings, Books, Art Needlework, Fancy Linens, Silk and Cotton Underwear, Men's and Women's Bath Robes, Linens, China, Glassware, Lamps, Leather Goods, Jewelry, Clocks, Sweaters, Furs, Candles, etc., etc.,

When Planning your Christmas Gift List it is well to keep this fact in mind, that for 65 years we have sold dependable merchandise at the lowest prices, quality considered. We are doing so now and shall continue to do so hereafter.

Gilchrist Co.
The Store of Progress

FREE To any S. S. Superintendent or Teacher we will send, free, Miss Tarbell's wonderful and practical challenge for next year's teaching. Send at once. A post-card will bring it.

Tarbell's
TEACHERS' GUIDE
BY MARTHA TARBELL, PH. D.
for 1921

THE WORLD'S GREATEST HELP TO THE
SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

$2.00, net (postage, 10c.)

At all booksellers or of

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY
NEW YORK, 158 Fifth Ave. CHICAGO, 17 N. Wabash Ave.

Margaret Slattery's Books
The Charm of the Impossible, 50c.
The Girl in Her Teens, 85c.
The American Girl and Her Community, $1.35
The Girls' Book of Prayer, 35c. cloth 60c.
The Girl and Her Religion, $1.25.
Just Over the Hill, $1.25.
The Costly Star, 60c.
Add 10% for postage
14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

THE BRIDE OF MISSION
SAN JOSÉ

A Tale of Early California

BY JOHN AUGUSTINE CULL

A story of early Spanish Mission days! At once there is a vision of pale gray walls, chiming bells, scarlet bloom—and romance. And here they all are, woven into a charming love story, together with interesting light on the strife between England and America over California.

Frontispiece. Net, $2.00, postpaid.

AT THE BETTER BOOKSHOPS

THE ABINGDON PRESS
New York Cincinnati

calling as it did for 150 or more characters, nearly all in elaborate costumes. It was, however, successfully accomplished, and resulted in the development of a new spirit of loyalty and devotion and faith in prayer in the membership; and also in awakening in the large audiences a deeper realization of the faith of our forefathers, which led them to go forth from their homes into a land that they did not know in order to secure freedom to worship God as they thought right. The pageant was repeated the following night at Central Church. The proceeds went to the support of the Congregational World Movement.

The "Neighborhood Church," the name by which East Main St. Church is now known, is fortunate in having as pastor a man who is not afraid to undertake the impossible, and with a united and loyal membership is undertaking hopefully the winter's campaign. L. G. W.

Rev. I. D. Stone Pastor of Woodstock

Rev. I. D. Stone, who has just begun his work as pastor of WOODSTOCK, had his training at Wheaton College and Chicago Seminary. He has served with great acceptance our churches at Plainfield, Illini, Glenwood, Iowa, Buda, and Carpentersville, Ill. He served the last church for nearly five years. During his administration the church school and the young people's work were thoroughly reorganized and the whole organization brought to great efficiency. Woodstock is influential in its community and has an excellent equipment for an all-round service.

Second, Rockford, Pushing Forward

Rev. John Gordon has just completed the eighth year of his pastorate with SECOND, ROCKFORD. Seventy-six new members have been received so far during this year, which brings the membership close to the 1,200 mark. During Mr. Gordon's pastorate the church has accepted as its representatives in the foreign field Rev. and Mrs. Paul Nilson, who are stationed at Tarsus, Turkey. The church pays their salary in full. The quota of the church for the C. W. M. was more than subscribed and, since the establishment of Camp Grant near Rockford, it has been especially active in looking after the soldiers. The membership is in every way a united working body of people and the relationship between the pastor and his church is a most happy one.

New Pastor for Bryn Mawr, Chicago

Rev. M. R. Boynton, who has just taken up the pastorate of BRYN MAWR, CHICAGO, is a son of Dr. Nehemiah Boynton of Brooklyn. He had his training at Amherst, Harvard University and Andover Seminary, and was student pastor at Ashland, Mass., from 1911 to 1913. He and his brother, Rev. E. C. Boynton, were ordained in 1913 at their father's church. From 1913 to 1918 Rev. M. R. Boynton was his father's assistant and then served as chaplain of the Third Regiment, 2d Provisional Brigade, U. S. Marine Corps, stationed at Santo Domingo.

Bryn Mawr, the youngest church of the Chicago fellowship, is strong and aggressive and apparently has a promising future. It has welcomed Mr. Boynton with enthusiasm and enters upon its community task with complete unanimity.

CONNECTICUT

Wolcott Celebrates 150th Anniversary

The 150th anniversary of the founding of the church at WOLCOTT was celebrated on Nov. 14. The program included an address of welcome by the pastor, Rev. L. H. Merrill, and a response by Rev. E. B. Hance of Naugatuck. The principal address of the occasion on The History and Work of the Wolcott Church was given by Rev. Sherrod Soule, of Hartford, Superintendent of the Missionary Society of Connecticut. Dr. R. H. Potter of Center, Hartford, spoke on The Church and the Future.

The history of this little church on the bleak hills of Northern New Haven County is a part of the story that makes Connecticut rich. It grew out of the desire back in the middle of the 18th century that a church be organized so that the settlers who had fought their way through the wilderness from Waterbury on one side and Bristol and Farmington on the other might have a place of worship. The church has had its struggles and its disappointment but it has kept alive and maintained its work. Not a few men of real ability and high character have occupied its pulpit and left their imprint on the church and on the town. A. Bronson Alcott, father of Louisa M. Alcott, the Sage of Concord, and friend of Ralph Waldo Emerson, attended the church as did his ancestors before him.

C. S. L.

MASSACHUSETTS

The Situation in Germany

Prof. H. J. Cadbury, of Andover Seminary and the Friends' Relief Commission, addressed the Boston Ministers' Meeting Nov. 29, on "The Situation in Germany." Prof. Cadbury visited

Theodore Roosevelt and His Time

Shown in his own letters

By JOSEPH BUCKLIN BISHOP

The career of no historic personage approaching Roosevelt in eminence and interest has ever been set forth so fully, so authoritatively, so humanly. Without reading it no man can hope to understand the history of his own time. With portraits, 2 vols. $10.00

The Life of Joseph Hodges Choate

as gathered chiefly from his own letters, including his own story of his boyhood and youth

By E. S. MARTIN

That power of leadership which made him one of our greatest lawyers and public men, that genial and witty personality which endeared him to thousands he never saw, are revealed largely in the words of Joseph Choate himself in this notable biography.

With portraits. 2 vols. $10.00

English Ways and By-Ways

By DR. LEIGHTON PARKS

Rector of St. Bartholomew's, New York

Come to England with Dr. Parks—

This merry book of travel is a composite of fact and fiction. It is an ingratiating account of a young American clergyman's experiences, traveling in the land of Shakespeare. It is a book uniquely appropriate for holiday giving. At all bookshops. $1.75

The Shorter Bible—The New Testament

"An amazingly short, clear, and consecutive reproduction of the essential contents of the Bible."—The Continent.

"It is remarkable what freshness is added by this new presentation of the choicest New Testament teaching in short, crisp sentences and the plain speech of our own day. Even the story of the Gospels takes on new interest. The little volume is admirably adapted for use in the family or as a travel companion."—The Congregationalist and Advance.

326 pages. $1.25

Charles Scribner's Sons Fifth Avenue, New York

JUST DORAN BOOKS OUT

THE MALDEN SURVEY

A Report on the Church Plants of a typical city, showing the use of the Interchurch World Movement Score Card and Standards for Rating City Church Plants.

Compiled under the direction of

Professor Walter S. Athearn

Author of A NATIONAL SYSTEM of EDUCATION, Director School of Religious Education and Social Service, Boston University.

This great source book of information for City Church Workers marks the beginning of a new epoch in the organization, administration and co-operation of religious bodies in urban communities. Exhaustive data. Compiled with scientific accuracy and thoroughness. Square 12mo. Net, $2.50

PICTURES IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION Frederica Beard

Author of PRAYERS FOR USE IN HOME, SCHOOL AND SUNDAY SCHOOL

A book that fully meets the needs of Bible teachers for a complete manual of the use of pictures in Christian teaching. The one authoritative and complete handbook on this important subject. 12mo. Illustrated. Net, $1.75

THE ENCHANTED GARDEN

Alexander R. Gordon, D. Litt., D.D.

Author of THE POETS of the OLD TESTAMENT

A series of story sermons for children covering the leading events in the book of Genesis. The author is noted for the poetic and dramatic quality of his talks to little folks. 12mo. Net, $1.50

GREATEST THOUGHTS ABOUT GOD J. Gilchrist Lawson

Author of GREATEST THOUGHTS ABOUT JESUS CHRIST

This third volume in the "Greatest Thoughts Series" offers the minister, teacher and Bible student an exhaustive collection of definitions and characterizations of Deity from every known source. Fully classified and indexed for ready reference. 12mo. Net, $1.75

CONTENDING FOR THE FAITH

Rev. Leander S. Keyser, D.D.

A notable restatement of the essentials of the Christian faith by an able, conservative scholar. A book that calls with a voice of authority and conviction to a renewal of faith. 8vo. Net, $3.00

TRAINING THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE

Luther Allan Weigle and Henry Hallam Tweedy

A model little text book on the art of training children in prayer, praise and worship. Net, 75c.

NEW FURROWS IN OLD FIELDS

William C. Covert, D.D.

A book which prescribes applied Christianity as the one remedy for all our present-day social and industrial ills. Net, $1.50

A NATIONAL SYSTEM OF EDUCATION

Prof. Walter S. Athearn

Practical plans for a nation-wide advance in religious education. Net, $1.50

A BETTER WORLD Tyler Dennett

Author of "THE DEMOCRATIC MOVEMENT IN ASIA"

A review of the world's religious resources and their application to the realization of democratic ideals. Net, $1.50

APT ILLUSTRATIONS FOR PUBLIC ADDRESSES A. Bernard Webber

A notable collection of fresh, original incidents covering a wide range of subjects. Net, $1.50

THE USE OF THE STORY IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

Prof. Margaret W. Eggleston

A recognized expert tells where to find and how to use the right story for every occasion. Net, $1.50

GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY

244 Madison Avenue New York

Publishers in America for HODDER & STOUGHTON

Germany last summer in the service of the Commission and told frankly of what he saw and the impressions he received. He said that the difficulties we have known here in this country with the H. C. of L. are infinitesimal as compared with Germany. "I have resolved never to speak of the cost of living again as relating to myself. The intensive U-boat campaign in 1917 followed the famous 'turnip-winter' in Germany. Turnips were practically the sole food. They were boiled, or ground to flour and baked as bread, or cut up in water and stewed as soup, but the nation lived on a turnip diet. Since then till now there has been increasing scarcity of food, increasing loss of life, and increasing sickness from food conditions. A million children in Germany today depend for their lives solely on foreign relief. The Friends' Commission aim to see that a million children get one good meal a day for the next six months.

"The blockade is the most cruel weapon of war. It attacks the weak and the sick, the children, the women and the aged, and destroys them, not by the quick death of the battlefield, but by long-continued torture.

"There is scarcely any sugar or meat to be had in Germany. There is practically no fuel. Children go barefooted in winter as in summer even in the snow. A noted theological professor of Marburg told me he could do no literary work in winter as he had no heat or light. Every man over sixty is absolutely without hope. There is denunciation of the Church for indorsing the war but there is little bitterness toward America. I have great hope, much more than they have, for the spiritual revival of Germany. There is an irreparable moral loss from the war and much civil bitterness. We are teaching them something of democracy and I hope we are teaching them some faith in man and in God. My own interest in this work is its opportunity for America. We have suffered irreparable moral loss from the war and here is an opportunity for the American people to recover their own soul."

The Steel Strike Report—Another View

In his address on The Mistakes of the Interchurch Report on the Steel Strike before the Boston Ministers' Meeting Nov. 29, Rev. Victor Bigelow made these four points:

In accepting the principle of collective bargaining, the Commission overlooked the principle of the freedom of contract, by virtue of which a man may decline to do business with undesirable persons. This justified the United States Steel Corporation in refusing to do business with the American Federation of Labor.

The Interchurch investigators diagnosed the strike as arising from low wages and long hours, whereas the Senate committee states positively that the cause was the determination of the American Federation of Labor to organize the steel workers.

The Commission was consistently biased against the Steel Corporation and distrusted their testimony, even when made under oath.

The Commission was blind to the deliberate campaign of the American Federation of Labor to damage the Steel Corporation, which is on a par with the efforts of trusts to damage small companies which refuse to do business with them.

Successful Federation at Hyannis

Hyannis federated with the Universalist Society nearly four years ago and was incorporated last year under the name of the Federated Church of Hyannis. It has a membership of 104, 36 of whom are men, the leading professional and business men of the community among the number. The Universalist church building is used for the strictly religious purposes and the Congregational building has been fitted up for recreational work. The combined churches are working harmoniously and effectively for community betterment. Rev. Sarah A. Dixon, Ph.D., the pastor, was called to the work the first year of the federation.

Maverick, East Boston, Doing Good Work

A union service of admirable fellowship was held Thanksgiving morning at Maverick, East Boston, the Presbyterians, Methodists and

(Continued on page 764)

GIVE YOUR PASTOR A NEW BOOK

THE POWER OF PRAYER

By VARIOUS WRITERS

Every standpoint of the positive religious thought of the higher civilizations is represented. Prayer is the most instinctive and compelling power in our Twentieth Century world according to their united testimony. Octavo. 528 pages. Your pastor needs this unusual book. $4.00

THE PERSONALITY OF GOD

By JAMES H. SNOWDEN

"It aims to define God as a person in terms that the ordinary reader can understand. A very treasure house of material for the teacher and preacher."—Baptist Observer. Help on your pastor's worship of God with his mind. $1.75

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE LIFE OF TODAY

By JOHN A. RICE

"The writers of the Old Testament are living men who are now actually walking our streets, sharing our struggles and seeking to solve our problems."—Dr. Rice. Put your pastor into live contact with the great trunk line truths of this older world. $3.00

HOW TO PRAY

By CHARLES LEWIS SLATTERY

Goes to the Lord's Prayer to learn how to pray. A companion in simplicity and reverence to his much used volume "Why Men Pray." Share this good home-made loaf with your rector. $1.50

SHALL WE STAND BY THE CHURCH?

By DURANT DRAKE

An impartial search for a way to avoid the pitfalls into which the churches have fallen, for a straighter road to their goal. Your pastor will benefit by this earnest, thoughtful study of church problems. $2.00

THE CALL TO UNITY

By WILLIAM T. MANNING

(Rector of Trinity)

"Christian Unity is the new spirit which alone can impart permanence to the new order. It holds the key to all our other problems, social, political, and economic."—Dr. Manning. Add to your minister's zeal in this good cause. $2.00

ITEMS FOR YOUR NEXT ORDER

Moulton: New Testament (Abridged)....$2.25
Enelow: A Jewish View of Jesus...... 1.50
Cadman: Ambassadors of God.......... 3.50
Brown: Religion of a Layman.......... 1.25
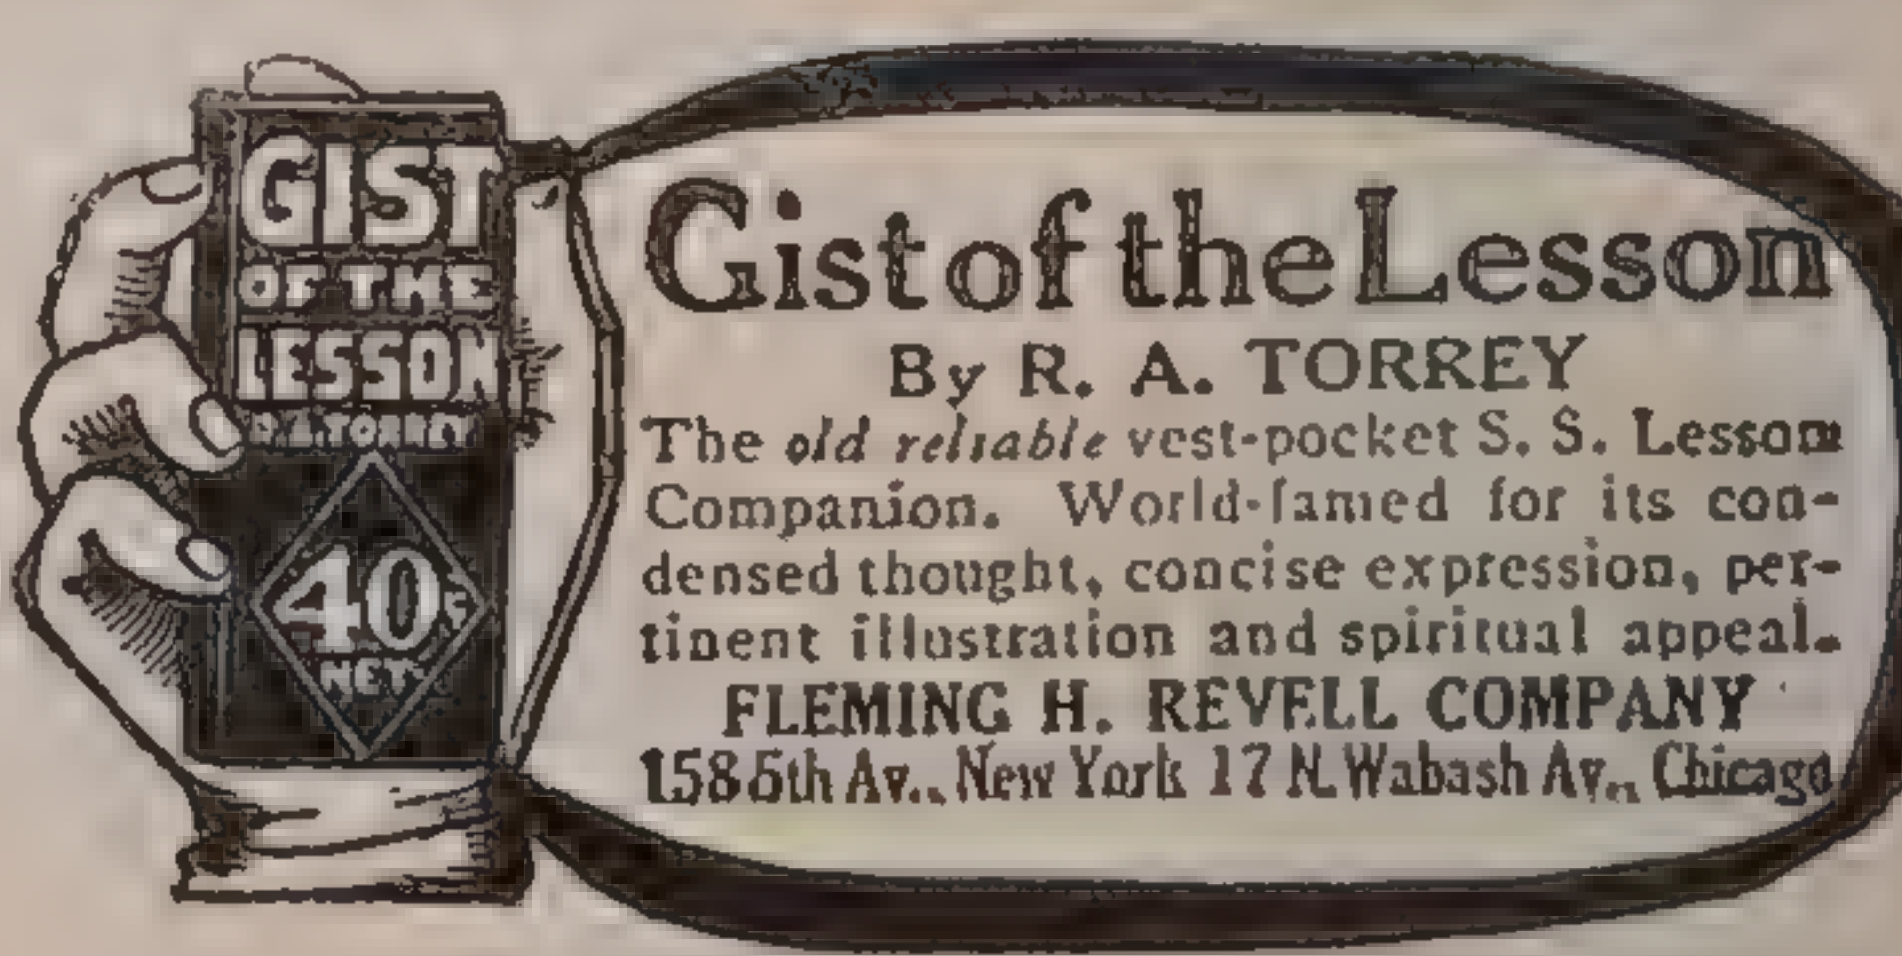
Babson: Religion and Business.......... 2.75
McConnell: Church Finance and Social Ethics 1.50

THE MACMILLAN CO., Publishers,

64-66 Fifth Ave., New York City, N. Y.



Gist of the Lesson

By R. A. TORREY

The old reliable vest-pocket S. S. Lesson Companion. World-famed for its condensed thought, concise expression, pertinent illustration and spiritual appeal.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY

158 5th Av., New York 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

in the United States have reached the following

Financial Objectives

within the Past Twelve Months

1.	Paid on Pledges to Pilgrim Memorial Fund, over	$1,800,000
2.	Subscribed on Old Apportionment (approximately),	2,000,000
3.	Subscribed on Congregational World Movement Quotas,	1,700,000
4.	Estimated subscriptions by churches that have not reported,	300,000
5.	Additional Amount Subscribed by States Having Special Programs, including Hawaii,	1,450,000
6.	Amount Subscribed in Several States for Causes Other Than Congregational World Movement,	100,000
	Total...........	$7,350,000

The Apportionment for 1921 is $5,000,000 or $2,350,000 less than what has been assured during the past year.

WE CAN IF WE WILL

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT,
287 Fourth Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Religion in the HOME

TWO NEW BOOKS By ROBERT CLUETT

DAY by DAY with the MASTER

For the many earnest boys and girls eager to form helpful habits of daily Bible reading and prayer. Readings and prayers for three months—a topic for each day, relating to important incidents in the life of Christ; a few words of comment; a brief Bible passage; a prayer in simple language. Cloth, $1.50

EVERY MORNING

A prayer a day for three months, in harmony with the Bible reading for that day. Not more than five minutes is needed. The choice of topics is a happy one and the prayers are of a high order. Each page of EVERY MORNING is printed in large size, easily read type. Cloth, $1.50

At your Bookseller's or from

ASSOCIATION PRESS

347 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

(Continued from page 762)

Baptists uniting and the rector of St. John's Episcopal Church bringing his vested choir and organist to give beauty to the musical part of the service. A large congregation was in attendance. Dr. Edward D. Eaton, of the National Council, preached the sermon. A group of Italian lads was one of the evidences of the way Rev. W. W. Sleeper, the pastor, is getting hold of the diverse elements in his varied parish.

H. J. K.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Dr. J. W. Bixler Installed at Exeter

An unusual and delightful feature of the installation services at EXETER last week was the greeting of Principal Perry of Exeter Academy in behalf of the townspeople. Equally impressive was the ceremony of installation led by John M. Thompson, senior deacon, in the course of which the congregation and the minister-elect pledged mutual loyalty and co-operation. Still another out-of-the-ordinary element in the service was a short organ concert which revealed the exceptional ability of Mr. William H. Bush, thirty-five years organist of the Second Congregational Church of New London, Ct., Dr. Bixler's former charge. Dr. Bixler who has been on the ground some time has waited for his installation until the union between First and Phillips Church, in the bringing about of which he has had an important part, should be thoroughly consummated. The resulting organization, known simply as the Congregational Church of Exeter, N. H., is now moving on strongly to the satisfaction of its members and of the community. Two of Dr. Bixler's close friends at Amherst College and Yale Divinity School had parts in the program, Dr. L. H. Thayer of Portsmouth acting as Moderator and preaching the sermon, and Rev. H. A. Bridgman extending the right hand of fellowship.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

While it is possible that all men may get to heaven, yet I apprehend that some of them will disturb the rest by arriving late.

Reception for Next Governor

The next governor of New Hampshire, Albert O. Brown, is a regular attendant and loyal supporter of HANOVER ST., MANCHESTER. Accordingly that church organized a reception and congratulatory service for him last week that brought together several hundred of his admirers. Mr. and Mrs. Brown were in the receiving line during the early part of the evening, after which addresses were made by Maj. Frank Knox, editor of the Union-Leader, also of Hanover St., Mrs. Flora Spaulding, a prominent club woman of the state, and the pastor of the church, Rev. H. A. Jump. "It is a unique situation," said Mr. Jump, "when a church-goer in the United States is elected to a political office. Not only have church and state been legally separated, but they have practically drifted altogether too far apart. It is the more gratifying, therefore, when a commonwealth exalts to high office a man of such sterling honesty and unquestioned uprightness that not even his political antagonists wish to breathe the slightest suspicion against him."

VERMONT

West Lebanon Reports Progress

At the Sunday morning service of WEST LEBANON, on Nov. 21, 20 persons were received into membership, 17 on profession of faith and three by letter. At the same service ten children were baptized. Since the present pastor, Rev. L. L. Dunnington, assumed the pastorate last July, the attendance at church and Sunday school have about doubled, an organized men's class, two women's classes and other new classes have been formed. The general situation is encouraging.

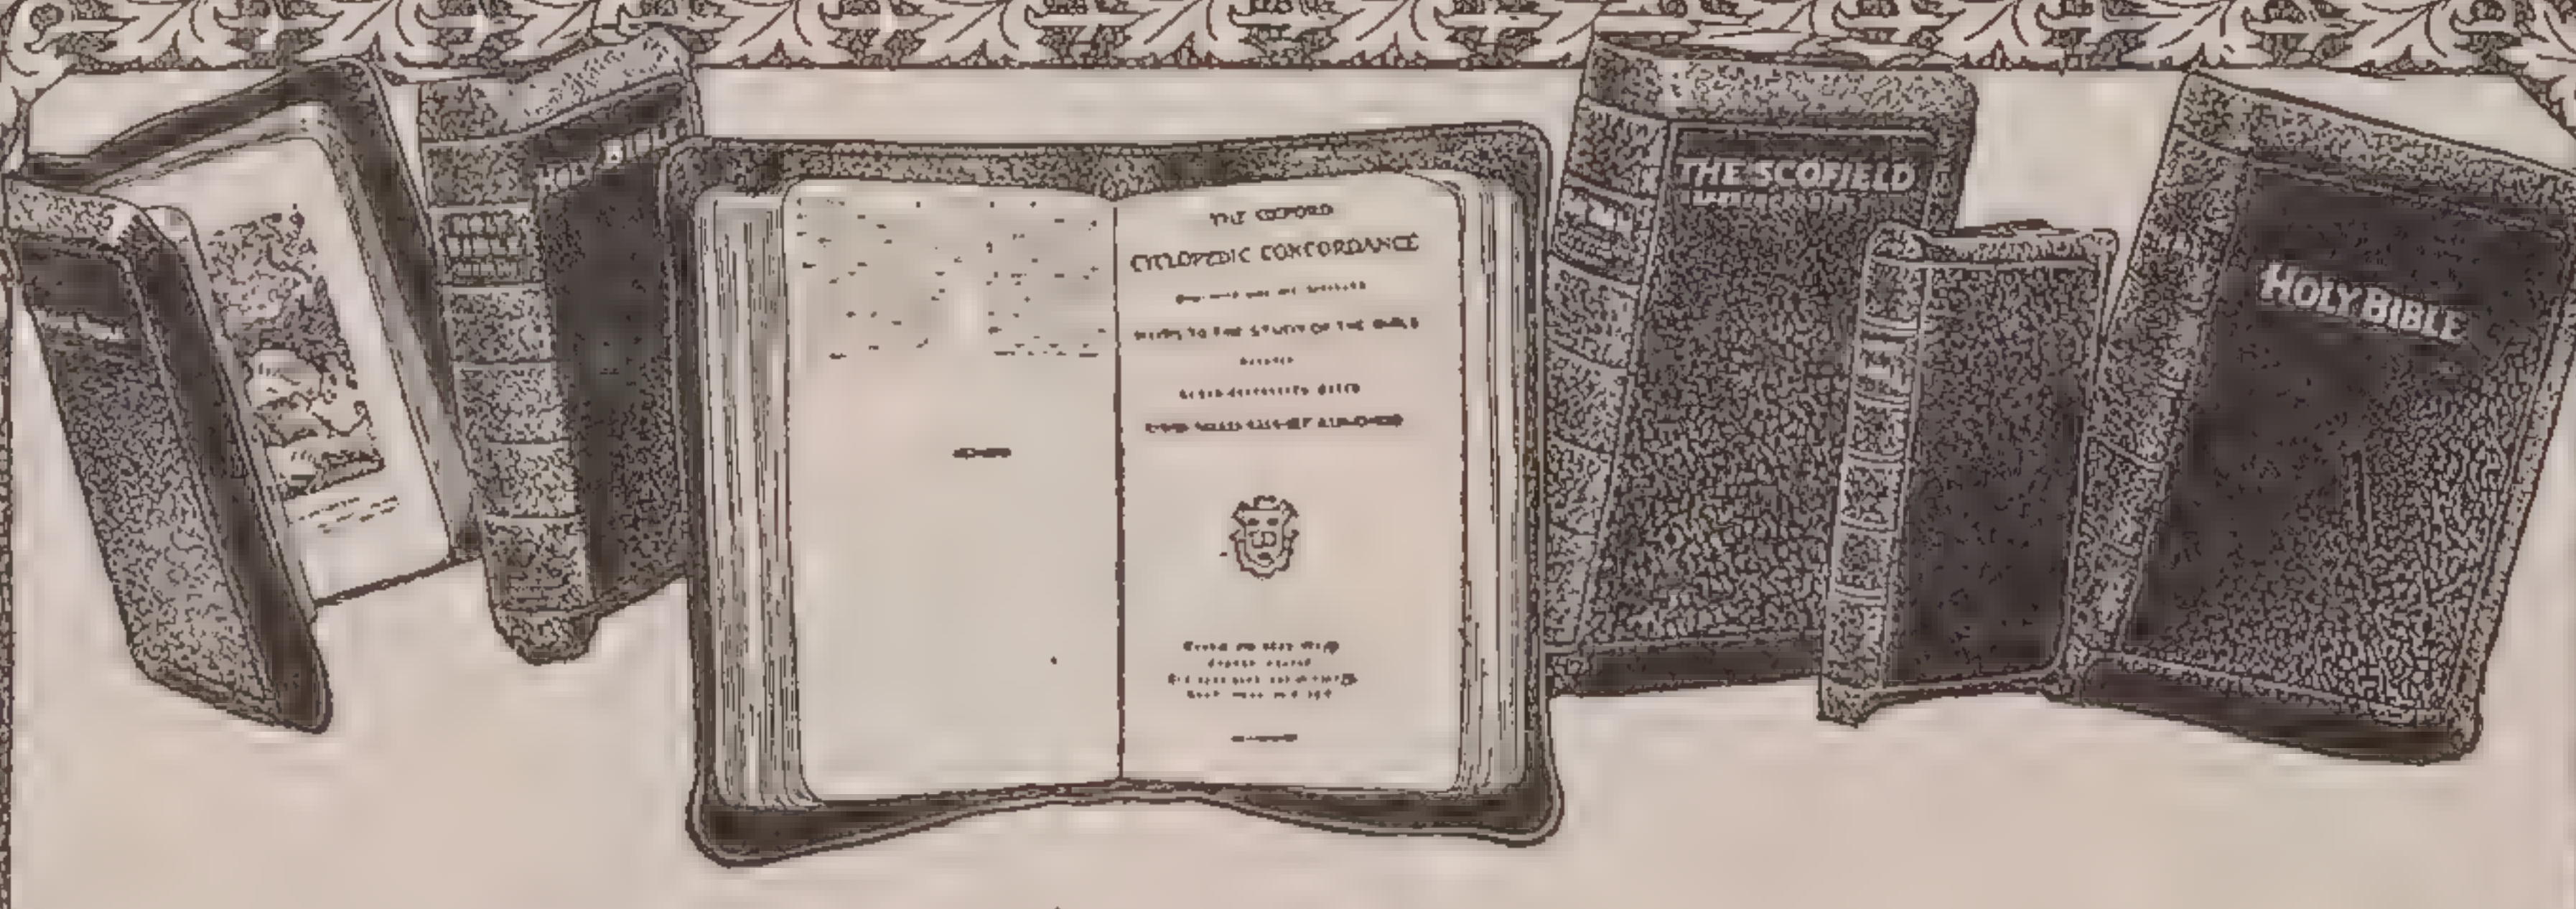
MAINE

Rev. A. H. Wright, D.D.

Rev. A. H. Wright, for 32 years pastor of ST. LAWRENCE, PORTLAND, died recently in Brattleboro, Vt., as the result of an apoplectic shock.

Dr. Wright was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1840. His studies for the ministry at Bangor Seminary were twice interrupted by war service, but at the close of the war he returned and graduated in 1866. After a short pastorate at Winterport, he came in 1871 to the pastorate of St. Lawrence, where he passed the remainder of his active life.

Dr. Wright received into his church over 400 members, paid off the debt and in 1897 built a



The Gift Supreme—
an OXFORD BIBLE

Put real Christmas joy into the heart of some one by the gift of one of these beautiful Oxford Bibles. Here is the gift, suitable for young and old, that will be prized always. It has a value that is far beyond its price. It shows your high regard as nothing else can.

Oxford Children's Bible
Contains 32 full page illustrations and special Bible study helps for children. Printed with clear type, French Morocco binding. Size 5¾ x 3¾ inches . . . . No. 03327 $3.70

Oxford Older Folks' Bible
With extra large type, excellent for older folks or those with impaired eyesight. Durable French Morocco binding. Size 9¼x5¾ inches. No. 01608 $6.15

Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible
With 300 pages of teacher's helps. Printed in heavy, black-faced type. French Morocco binding. Size 7¼x5 inches. No. 04453 $5.00

Scofield Reference Bible
A welcome gift to any Bible reader. Has helps on the pages where needed. Black-faced type, French Morocco binding, size 7x4½ inches. No. 53 $6.00

Oxford Pocket Bible
Clear, black-faced type Bible. Very compact and light. Printed on Oxford India paper. French Morocco binding, size 5⅛x3⅜x⅝ inches. No. 0113x $3.50

Oxford Home Bible
An extra large type Bible, with 24 beautiful colored illustrations and Family Register. French Morocco binding, size 9¼x5¾ inches . . . No. 02608 $6.65

Ask your bookseller for these OXFORD BIBLES by their numbers. If unobtainable, order direct from us.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS American Branch
35 WEST THIRTY-SECOND STREET NEW YORK

Send to a Friend

WOUNDED WORDS

by

Cora Berry Whitin

FOUR SEAS CO., BOSTON

THE
CONGREGATIONAL
HAND BOOK
for 1921

Needed in every Congregational Church for Daily Use and Frequent Reference.

Contains

Daily Bible Readings
Fellowship of Prayer
Church Prayer Meeting Topics
Christian Endeavor Topics
Sunday School Lessons
Directory of National Council and Missionary Societies
Colleges and Seminaries
Congregational Statistics
Books on Congregationalism
Great Names
Confession of Faith

Prices

SINGLE COPY	$0.10
12 COPIES	1.00
25 "	2.00
50 "	3.50
75 "	4.50
100 "	5.00

ORDER NOW

EDITION LIMITED

Circulation Dept.

The Congregationalist and Advance

14 Beacon St. BOSTON
19 W. Jackson St. CHICAGO

new and much larger church. In 1903 he retired and was made pastor emeritus, a relation which he kept as long as he lived in Portland. Dr. Wright was given the degree of D. D. by Bowdoin College in recognition of more than 25 years' faithful service in the ministry. A forceful preacher, he was a genuine power in the community, and his own beautiful Christian character made him greatly beloved in the city to which he gave most of his working life. He is survived by one son, Dr. Charles S. Wright, of Portland.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

ACHENBACH, S. T., Fryeburg, Me., to Bethel.

BELL, E. F., Summit, Dubuque, Io., to Plymouth, Madison, Wis. Accepts.

BREEN, F. L., Chebanse, Ill., to Bloomington. Accepts.

BROWER, C. DEW., Sanford, Fla., to First, Tampa. Accepts.

CAPRON, H. S., Hammond St., Bangor, Me., to United, Newport, R. I. Accepts to begin Jan. 1.

CUTLER, F. M., formerly army chaplain, to Executive Secretaryship of Federation of Churches, Worcester, Mass.

EARL, DANIEL, Crystal City, Manitoba, Can., to temporary position as assistant superintendent of Congregational Conference of North Dakota. Accepts and is at work.

EDWARDS, T. D., Melville, N. D., to North, Columbus, O.

LAUGHTON, GEORGE, First, Riverside, Cal., to Central, Winnipeg, Can.

MARSH, G. B., formerly of Becket and North Becket, Mass., recently residing in Milford, Ct., to Guildhall, Vt. Accepts.

NUGENT, T. E., Kewance, Ill., to Valley City, N. D. Accepts.

PAGE, HARLAN, formerly of Dover, Mass., recently residing in Jamaica Plain, to West Tisbury.

PHELPS, T. T., Durand, Wis., to Green Bay. Accepts.

QUAYLE, T. R., to Oswego, Ill. Accepts.

SCHUDER, H. A., formerly of Elkhorn, Wis., more recently in war work, to Plymouth, Fargo, N. D. Accepts and is at work.

SCHWAB, R. K., Chicago Seminary, to Rock Falls, Ill. Accepts.

STAFFORD, H. S., recently of Montour, Io., to New Hartford, Ct. Accepts and is at work.

STEVENS, E. A., East Troy and La Fayette, Wis. Declines call to permanent pastorate.

THURLOW, G. L., First Baptist, Lexington, Mass., to Federated (First Baptist and Congregational), Skowhegan, Me. Accepts to begin Jan. 1.

VIRTA, ARTHUR, Alberta, Canada, to Finnish, Gardner, Mass. Accepts.

Resignations

ACHENBACH, S. T., Fryeburg, Me.

BLOOM, GUSTAVE, Swedish, Fitchburg, Mass.

CAMPBELL, ROBERT, JR., First, Warren, Mass.

LAUGHTON, GEORGE, First, Riverside, Cal. Accepts call to First, Winnipeg, Canada.

MOUSLEY, W. H., High St., Portland, Me.

Ordinations and Installations

BIXLER, J. W., i., Exeter, N. H., Nov. 30. Sermon by Dr. L. H. Thayer; other parts by Rev. Messrs. E. W. Pond, G. W. Clark, R. W. Coe and H. A. Bridgman, D.D.

SEEBART, A. W., pastor of Forman, Gwinner, and Havana, N. D., o. at Forman, Nov. 18. Sermon by Rev. R. A. Beard, D.D.; other parts by Revs. Messrs. J. S. Rood, E. H. Stickney, and F. H. Bergman.

Events to Come

National Congregational Council, Los Angeles, Cal., July 1-8,

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Dec. 13. Will be addressed by three theological students of different denominations on "Why I Am Entering the Christian Ministry."

DAY OF PRAYER FOR MISSIONS, Feb. 18, 1921.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Jan. 7, 1921, 10.30 A.M.

The Quality Investment

Guaranteed Farm Mortgages

Forty Three Years In Business--- Without Loss to A Client

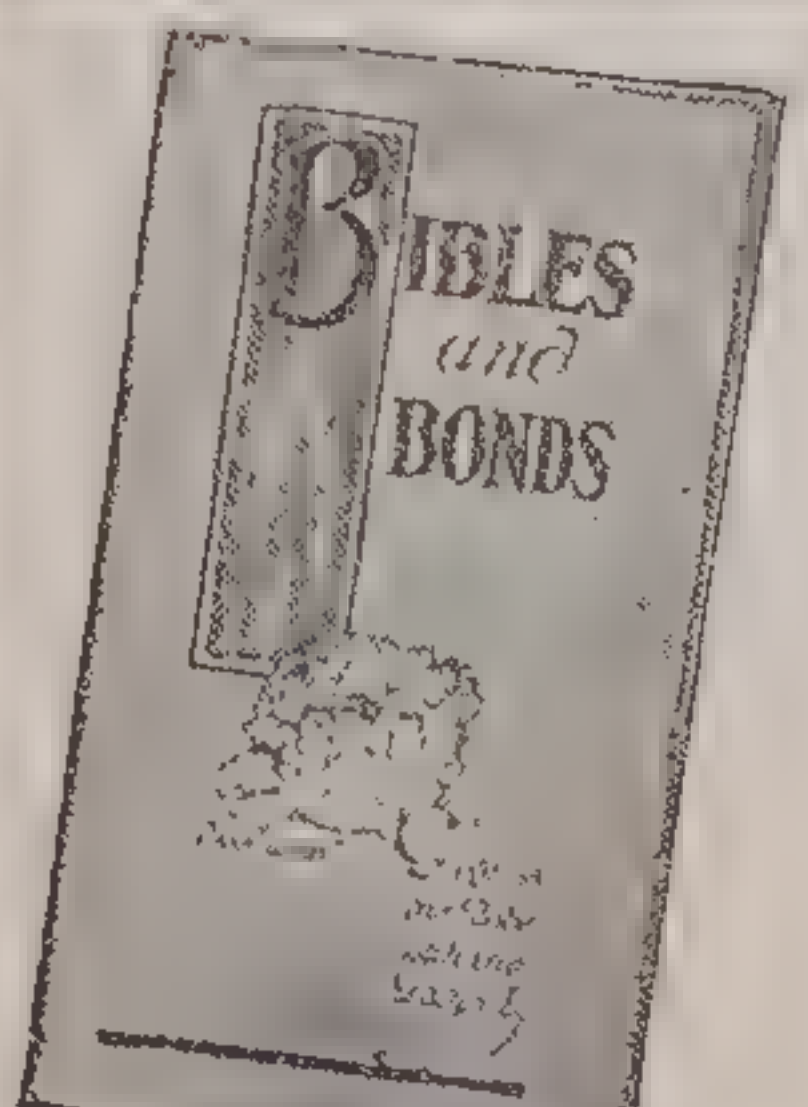
J·L·Pettyjohn & Co
OLATHE, KANSAS

EVERYWHERE

people are congratulating themselves on the cheaper commodity values. Lower prices mean higher bond prices in the not distant future. Not in the last two decades have such opportunities been offered to the bond buyer.

Send for list of Bond Offerings to yield 6½% to 8½%

Earnest E. Smith & Co.
Specialists in New England Securities
52 Devonshire St., Boston
Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges



Write for this Booklet

"Bibles and Bonds" tells the interesting story of a world-wide work and a safe investment yielding as high as 8%.
Ask for Booklet J

American Bible Society
Bible House Astor Place New York

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Advertising Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

PEABODY—In Orono, Me., suddenly, Nov. 20, Helen Blakeslee Peabody, wife of Clarence W. Peabody—professor in the University of Maine—and daughter of the late Rev. Erastus Blakeslee and Mary N. Blakeslee.

OSGOOD—In Bellows Falls, Vt., on Nov. 23, Fanny Cutter Searle, wife of Charles W. Osgood, with whom she celebrated on Nov. 16 her 56th wedding anniversary. As a Christian woman and a home-maker, she represented the sterling New England type.

AMERICUS FULLER

Rev. Americus Fuller, D.D., who died at Los Gatos, Cal., on Nov. 3, was often referred to by his missionary and Armenian associates as "Apostle John." This is because of his loving disposition, his life of love and his messages of love. His dying words as reported were: "Tell everybody: Love God; love one another." Many American graduates of Central Turkey College, Aintab, of which he was president from 1888 to 1905, will remember this characteristic of their beloved leader when all other good traits are forgotten.

Dr. Fuller was born at Jay, Franklin County, Maine, Nov. 1, 1934. After graduation from Bowdoin College in 1859 and from Bangor Seminary in 1862, and after ordination and some twelve years of service in Maine and Minnesota, he sailed as an American Board missionary to Aintab, Turkey. There he began his work as missionary Nov. 2, 1874. His service was interrupted for some three years in the early eighties, but in 1888 he was found at Aintab again as president of Central Turkey College. He served this institution with great ability against heavy odds until 1905 when for health reasons he had to retire from the service of the Board.

REV. WALTER D. KING

Died, at Fargo, N. D., Nov. 5, Rev. Walter D. King, aged 90 years.

For thirty-one years Mr. King was pastor of different Congregational churches of Michigan, mostly home missionary churches. He died at the home of his son-in-law, Prof. W. H. Walker, of Fargo College. He was buried beside his wife at one of their early Michigan homes, Commerce. Besides his daughter, Mrs. Walker, he is survived by his second daughter, Mrs. H. G. Bissell, of Newton Center, Mass., widow of Rev. Harry G. Bissell, formerly of the Marathi Mission of the American Board.

REV. GEORGE EDWARD MARTIN, D.D.

A tribute from the First Congregational Church of Fairhaven, Mass.

On Monday morning, Nov. 15, in Fairhaven, Mass., Rev. George Edward Martin, D.D., of Auburndale, Mass., passed from this earth to the Greater Life Beyond. His death followed a shock sustained at the close of his sermon in the Fairhaven Congregational Church the day previous.

In 1919, when Mr. Lytle, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Fairhaven, was in France with the Y. M. C. A., Dr. Martin supplied the pulpit for the full year. He gave to our small church the best fruits of his long experience in much greater fields. He served us well not only in the pulpit but often at no small inconvenience coming from his own home during the week to perform some ministerial duty, to conduct a funeral service or to perform a marriage ceremony. We recall with pleasure a series of lectures which he gave in our church for the benefit of the music fund, inspiring lectures given without personal remuneration, that the whole financial profit might be ours. We know that in this year of service Dr. Martin came to have a strong attachment to the people of the First Congregational Church, an attachment which the church reciprocated to the full.

This fall, when our minister, Mr. Lytle, to our great regret, was called to another field, Dr. Martin wrote us offering his assistance at any time during the trying and uncertain period between settled pastors. It was in fulfillment of this desire to be of service that Dr. Martin came to us on Nov. 14 to supply the pulpit for that Sunday and to discuss with us some of our problems.

It was with the latter in mind that he preached to us from the text in I Chron. 12:38, "All these men of war who could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron to make David king." In his sermon he urged upon us steadfastness, earnestness of purpose and above all continued unity of thought and action, that when the time came we might welcome our chosen minister with enthusiasm, loyalty, a sinking of individualities in a common devotion, that with a perfect heart we might "make David king." Dr. Martin closed his sermon with these verses from his own poem, "Keep Rank":

Keep time with the rhythm of the years of God,
Keep step with the ranks of the men of God,
Whose march ne'er ends at the rounded sod;
  Their souls are marching on.

CHURCHES contemplating the purchase of art windows, or individuals considering memorials, will find it to advantage to consult The Congregational Church Building Society which has several very fine windows of various sizes available, at prices far below those ruling under present conditions. Address Charles H. Baker, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

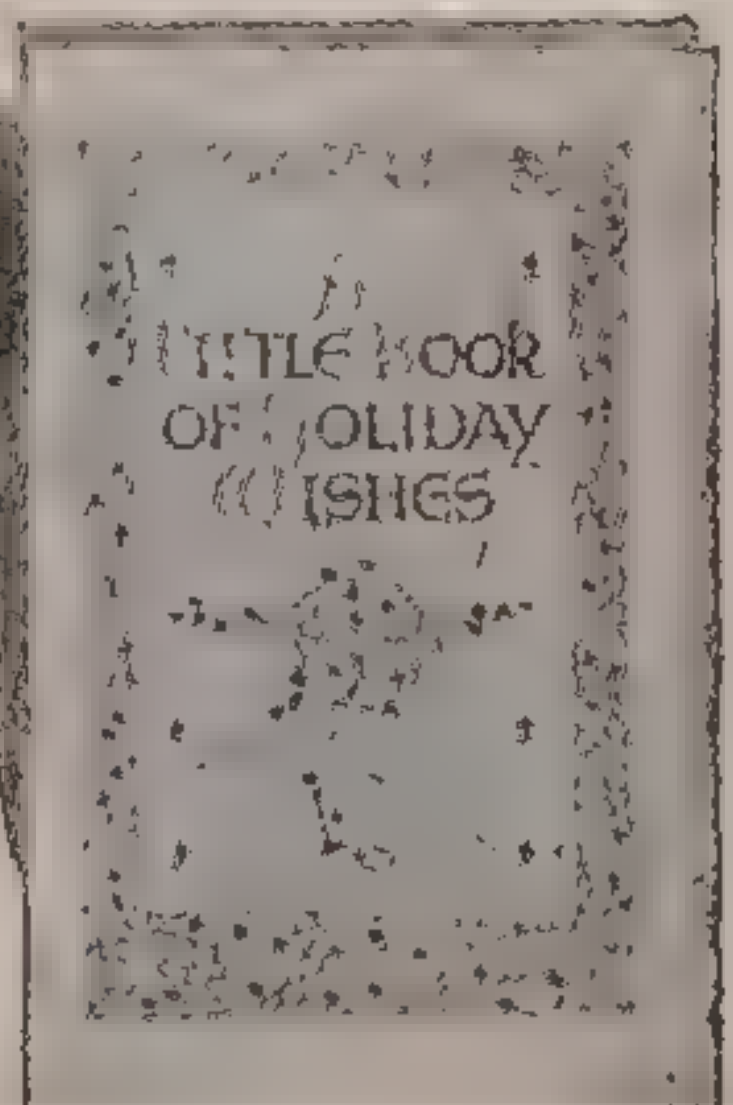
The Church Beautiful

Thousands of churches in America have been rendered more beautiful and inspiring by the workmanship of our master wood carvers.

All of their experience and training gained through these many years of devoted application to the finest traditions of their art is at your command and disposal.

We shall consider it an honor and a privilege if we can be of any assistance to you in the building or refurnishing of your church edifice.

American Seating Company
EXCLUSIVE MANUFACTURERS OF ECCLESIASTICAL FURNITURE
General Offices—1072-82 Lytton Bldg.,
CHICAGO, ILL.
SALES OFFICES IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES



WHY WAIT until the last moment to decide? "After all THE MESSAGE is the thing."

"WISHING BOOKS" A series of dainty Booklets containing hand lettered messages. An ideal gift for

CHRISTMAS NEW YEAR'S, Birthdays, etc., price 25 cents each postpaid. Canterbury Gifts are Artistic, Literary and Exclusive.

SEND One Dollar for Special Xmas Assortment No. 2, worth $1.50 For Illustrated Catalogue of Unique Gifts.

THE CANTERBURY COMPANY, 64 E. VAN BUREN ST. CHICAGO, ILL.

Plans for Sunday School Evangelism
By FRANK L. BROWN
"Here is a record of a successful superintendent's experience, and how others won their scholars to Christ. If you buy only one book this year---let it be this one."---S. S. TIMES. $1.50.
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

Keep pace with the best of the old-time world,
Keep close to the banner that never was furled,
Though hostile hosts have round it swirled;
  Its Glory leading on.

Cheer up at the shining of the Cross,
Bear up to that line where life is lost,
And then, march up and march across
  To Glory and to God.

It was as he repeated these last lines that Dr. Martin was stricken. In the few hours that he was conscious following his shock, he told some of us who were with him that he felt physical premonitions just before he began his sermon and that he had earnestly prayed that he might finish what he had to say. His prayer was answered. In the light of what happened, we who heard him now realize in what measure Dr. Martin became the vital embodiment of those very qualities of which he was speaking, unflinching physical courage, earnestness of purpose and steadfast devotion. With a perfect heart, he kept rank to the very end.

That his relatives and his many friends in other places may know something of Dr. Martin's last supreme effort, we ask that this tribute, though inadequately expressed, be printed in The Congregationalist.

PELOUBET'S
Select Notes
The World's Greatest Commentary on the International Sunday-School Lessons
By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.
IT IS SCHOLARLY
CONDENSED
COMPREHENSIVE PRACTICAL
These four words sum up its true value
Let us send you a pamphlet containing the first lesson taken from the volume of 1921
Volume for 1921 Now Ready
Price, $2.00 Net; $2.10 Delivered
W. A. WILDE COMPANY
120 BOYLSTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.
Rand-McNally Building, Chicago
FOR SALE AT ALL BOOKSTORES

QUALITY REPRODUCTIONS OF
The Pilgrim Charter
Oldest Legal Document in America
Circular sent on request
DAVID W. BUTTERFIELD CO.
8 BEACON STREET, BOSTON

INTERCOLLEGIATE TOURS
BOSTON U.S.A.
SUMMER CRUISE
THROUGH ST. PAUL'S MEDITERRANEAN
Palestine by auto and camp. The glory that was Greece and the mystery that was Egypt. University credit for Biblical History and Geography.
Prof. Albert E. Bailey
Leader
65-K Franklin St., Boston

Massachusetts General Hospital
Training School for Nurses. Established 1873. 1,350 Graduates. Prepares its students for advanced positions. For particulars consult Circular of Information. Address SALLY M. JOHNSON, R. N., Supt. of Nurses. Boston, Massachusetts.

BROOKE HOUSE
79 Chandler Street, Boston
(Founded in 1892 by the Rev. Stopford W. Brooke.)
A comfortable home for young working women, near Copley Sq. and the Common. Transients accommodated in summer. Apply to Supt.

The Fisk Teachers' Agencies
2A Park St., Boston 225 Fifth Ave., N. Y.
Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Birmingham, Chicago, Denver, Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles. Everett O. Fisk & Co.

Rev. R. C. Gillie at Boston Club

The last meeting of the Boston Congregational Club had as the guest of honor and speaker, Rev. R. C. Gillie, pastor of the Marylebone Presbyterian Church in London and president-elect of the British Free Church Council. He speaks in Tercentenary celebrations and the Boston meeting of the Federal Council of Churches. He spoke at the club on the Kingdom of God in England which he saw in the progress of the labor movement, the purpose of the pending Irish Home Rule Bill, in the League of Nations and in the liberal religious outlook. He spoke earnestly of the good that comes as Britain and America work together for high ideals.

With the Schools and Colleges

Anniversary of Franklin Academy

Forty years ago four Christian laymen of the Pilgrim faith and spirit, kneeling on the earthen floor of a sod house, in what was then a far frontier, were asking guidance of the Heavenly Father in their plans for the founding of a Christian academy. The result was Franklin Academy. The Academy was indorsed and adopted by the Republican Valley Association of Congregational Churches of Nebraska, in special session, Feb. 9, 1881.

The first term was opened Dec. 6, 1881, with 55 students, under the principalship of Rev. W. S. Hampton, now of Wilcox, Neb.

Franklin Academy has enrolled over 5,000 students, has graduated 422 and has sent more than 50 per cent. of them into college. It has six missionaries on foreign fields, nine ministers in America, and has six recent graduates now in college preparing for the ministry and missionary service. The present enrollment is 135.

It is within safe bounds to say that no fewer than 1,500 young people have been profoundly influenced in Franklin Academy in favor of the Christian life.

The Academy is planning to celebrate the 40th anniversary of Founders' day, Feb. 9, and more especially at the commencement in May next.

Death of Dr. Reuben L. Breed

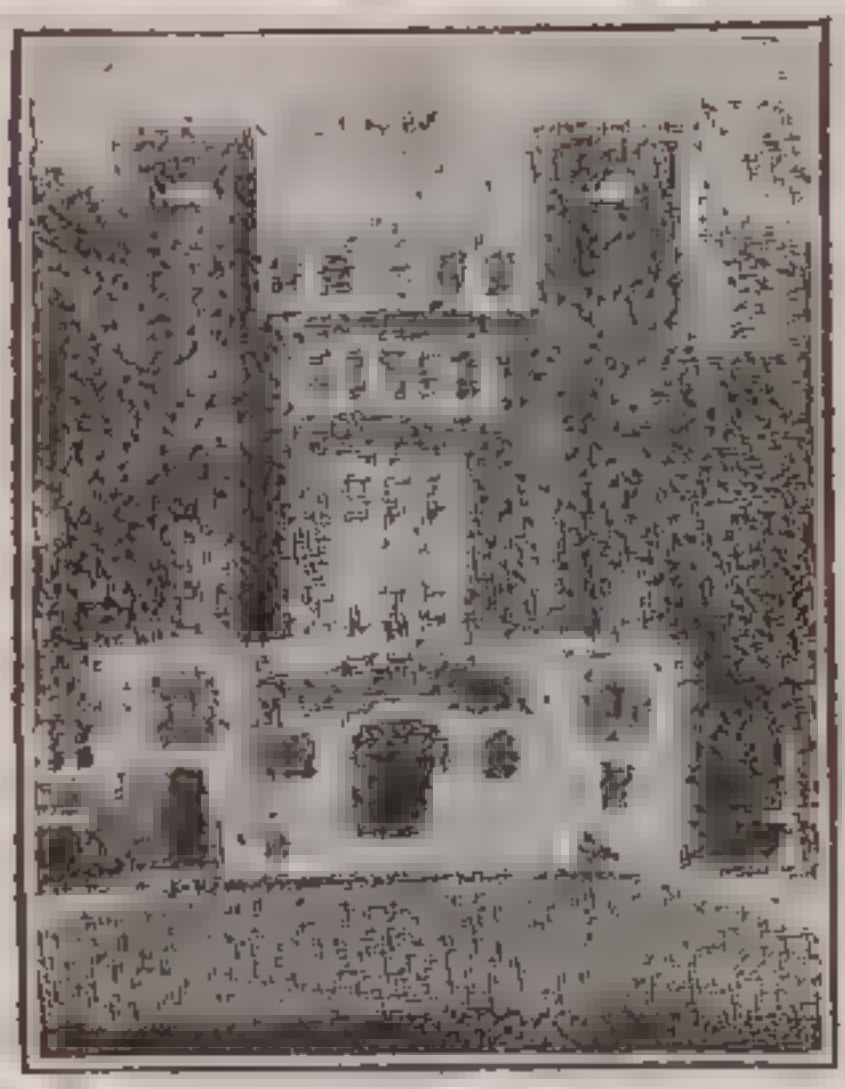
Dr. Reuben L. Breed, Secretary of the Chicago City Missionary Society, died in Chicago Nov. 30, after a brief illness. Dr. Breed was formerly assistant secretary of the Congregational Home Missionary Society in New York.

What America needs more than railway extension, and Western irrigation, and a low tariff, and a bigger wheat crop, and a merchant marine, and a new navy, is a revival of piety, the kind father and mother used to have—piety that counted it good business to stop for daily family prayer before breakfast, right in the middle of harvest; that quit field work a half-hour early Thursday night so as to get the chores done and go to prayer-meeting. That's what we need now.—Wall Street Journal.

A large man can hold his Americanism and his internationalism together without crowding either.—John Andrew Holmes.

Chicago Theological Seminary
Is affiliated with the University of Chicago. Seminary instruction is supplemented by the varied and limitless opportunities of the University and the Divinity School. Tuition free.
Trains for
Pulpit and Pastorate
Missionary Work
Community Service
Religious Education
Opportunity is offered to secure the M. A. degree during preparation for the B. D.; also an annual two-year honor fellowship for post-graduate work.
5757 University Ave., Chicago, Illinois.
OZORA S. DAVIS, President.

The Congregational Training School For Women
Trains for Christian leadership.
The work of Church Assistant, Director of Religious Education, and Instructor in Week-day Religious Education offers opportunity for the finest and highest type of social service.
One and two year courses. Expenses low.
MISS MARGARET TAYLOR, Dean,
5603 Dorchester Ave., Chicago, Ill.



CARLETON
COLLEGE
Liberal Arts
Science Music
D. J. COWLING, President
Northfield, Minnesota

ANDOVER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
Cambridge, Massachusetts
Affiliated with Harvard University
A professional training school for Christian Ministers, with a three years' course of study leading to the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. Courses in all departments of Theology, with liberal privileges of election.
For catalogue and information apply to the Dean.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
An undenominational training school for
The Ministry — Religious Education
Foreign Missions — Social Service
Curricula high grade and modern. Graduate degrees. University of California privileges. Opportunities for the study of Oriental peoples. Open to men and women of all Christian denominations. For catalogue address
WILLIAM FREDERIC BADE, Dean, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

The Graduate School of Theology
OBERLIN COLLEGE
A strong, well balanced course, preparatory to the work of the ministry at home or abroad.
Second semester's work begins February 8 with all the regular faculty teaching.
Address G. W. FISKE, JR., Dean, Oberlin, Ohio.

BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
105th year opens Sept. 29, 1920. For College or non-College men. Courses, regular and elective; leading to diploma or degree; modern, thorough, practical. Expenses low. For Catalogue or information address
Prof. WARREN J. MOULTON, Cor. Sec'y.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M. A., B. D. and Ph. D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

OUR READERS' FORUM

Mary Will Fall in Line

Dear Mr. Editor:

The overwhelming Republican victory has not, in my judgment, decided our attitude toward the League of Nations. It is true that the Democratic party made that their paramount issue, but the Republican party did not clearly oppose it. The outcome of the election will probably be that there will be a slight change in the wording of the Covenant to make it appear that America has gotten what she wants, but the principle remains unchanged.

Mary was the belle of society in the backwoods town. She abhorred the style of the city, and declared emphatically that she would never submit to its ways. But she had not been in the city very long before the heels of her shoes were higher, her skirts shorter and narrower, and her millinery quite in harmony with the style of the city. And she had not altered the city style in the least.

We as a nation have entered the international life. We may be ever so sure that our ways are better than the ways of the rest of the world, and that the world must change to our style. But the probability is that we, like Mary, will fall in line. H. C. JUELL.

Huron, S. D.

METHODS
of Church School Administration
By HOWARD JAMES GEE
Cloth, $1.00 net
W. C. PEARCE, Internat'l S. S. Ass'n, says: "A rich storehouse of information. Will lead the Sunday-schools forward with mighty strides."
Endorsed by Marion Lawrance, Prof. Athearn, and others
F. H. REVELL CO., 1[illegible]8 5th Av., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Av., Chicago

"The Mills of God Grind Slowly"

Dear Mr. Editor:

You open an editorial in your issue of Oct. 14, on "The Men and Women of Tomorrow," with a singularly incorrect statement. It is commonly made and may therefore be pardoned; but it nevertheless reflects a careless attitude toward life.

Twenty-five years from now the human world will remain exactly what it is today, and the modifications which our children will effect will be so slight the advance will be strictly negligible. Twenty-five hundred years from now some little progress may be noted; but the end of a brief period, such as you note, will find our successors doing precisely the same things, in the same spirit, that we are doing.

This observation is true because it states a vast sociological law which accounts for the painfully slow progress of our race. The veneer of civilization is exceedingly thin, and as achievements are now marked, thousands of years may roll by before a perceptible advance may be gained. The transitions of today are closely intertwined with those of yesterday, and by no stretch of the imagination will the children of your twenty-five years differ a whit from the men and women of today, who are themselves but treading in the paths worn a little less deep by generations which precede them.

If you have the time to delve into the rich and startling and ripened wisdom of our chief American scientific philosopher, Lester France Ward, you will learn, as the writer has, that the tides which surge through our social forces are not quickly or successfully changed by a single generation.

The age awaits another Wendell Phillips and another Henry George to shake the foundations of human society, and set the fires of moral enthusiasm in motion. Those men are yet unborn, and if history is any guide, we will tarry a long time here before their true and worthy successors appear as "voices crying in the wilderness."

WILLIAM A. WOOD.

Framingham, Mass.

OUR "CAMINO REAL"

(Continued from page 743)

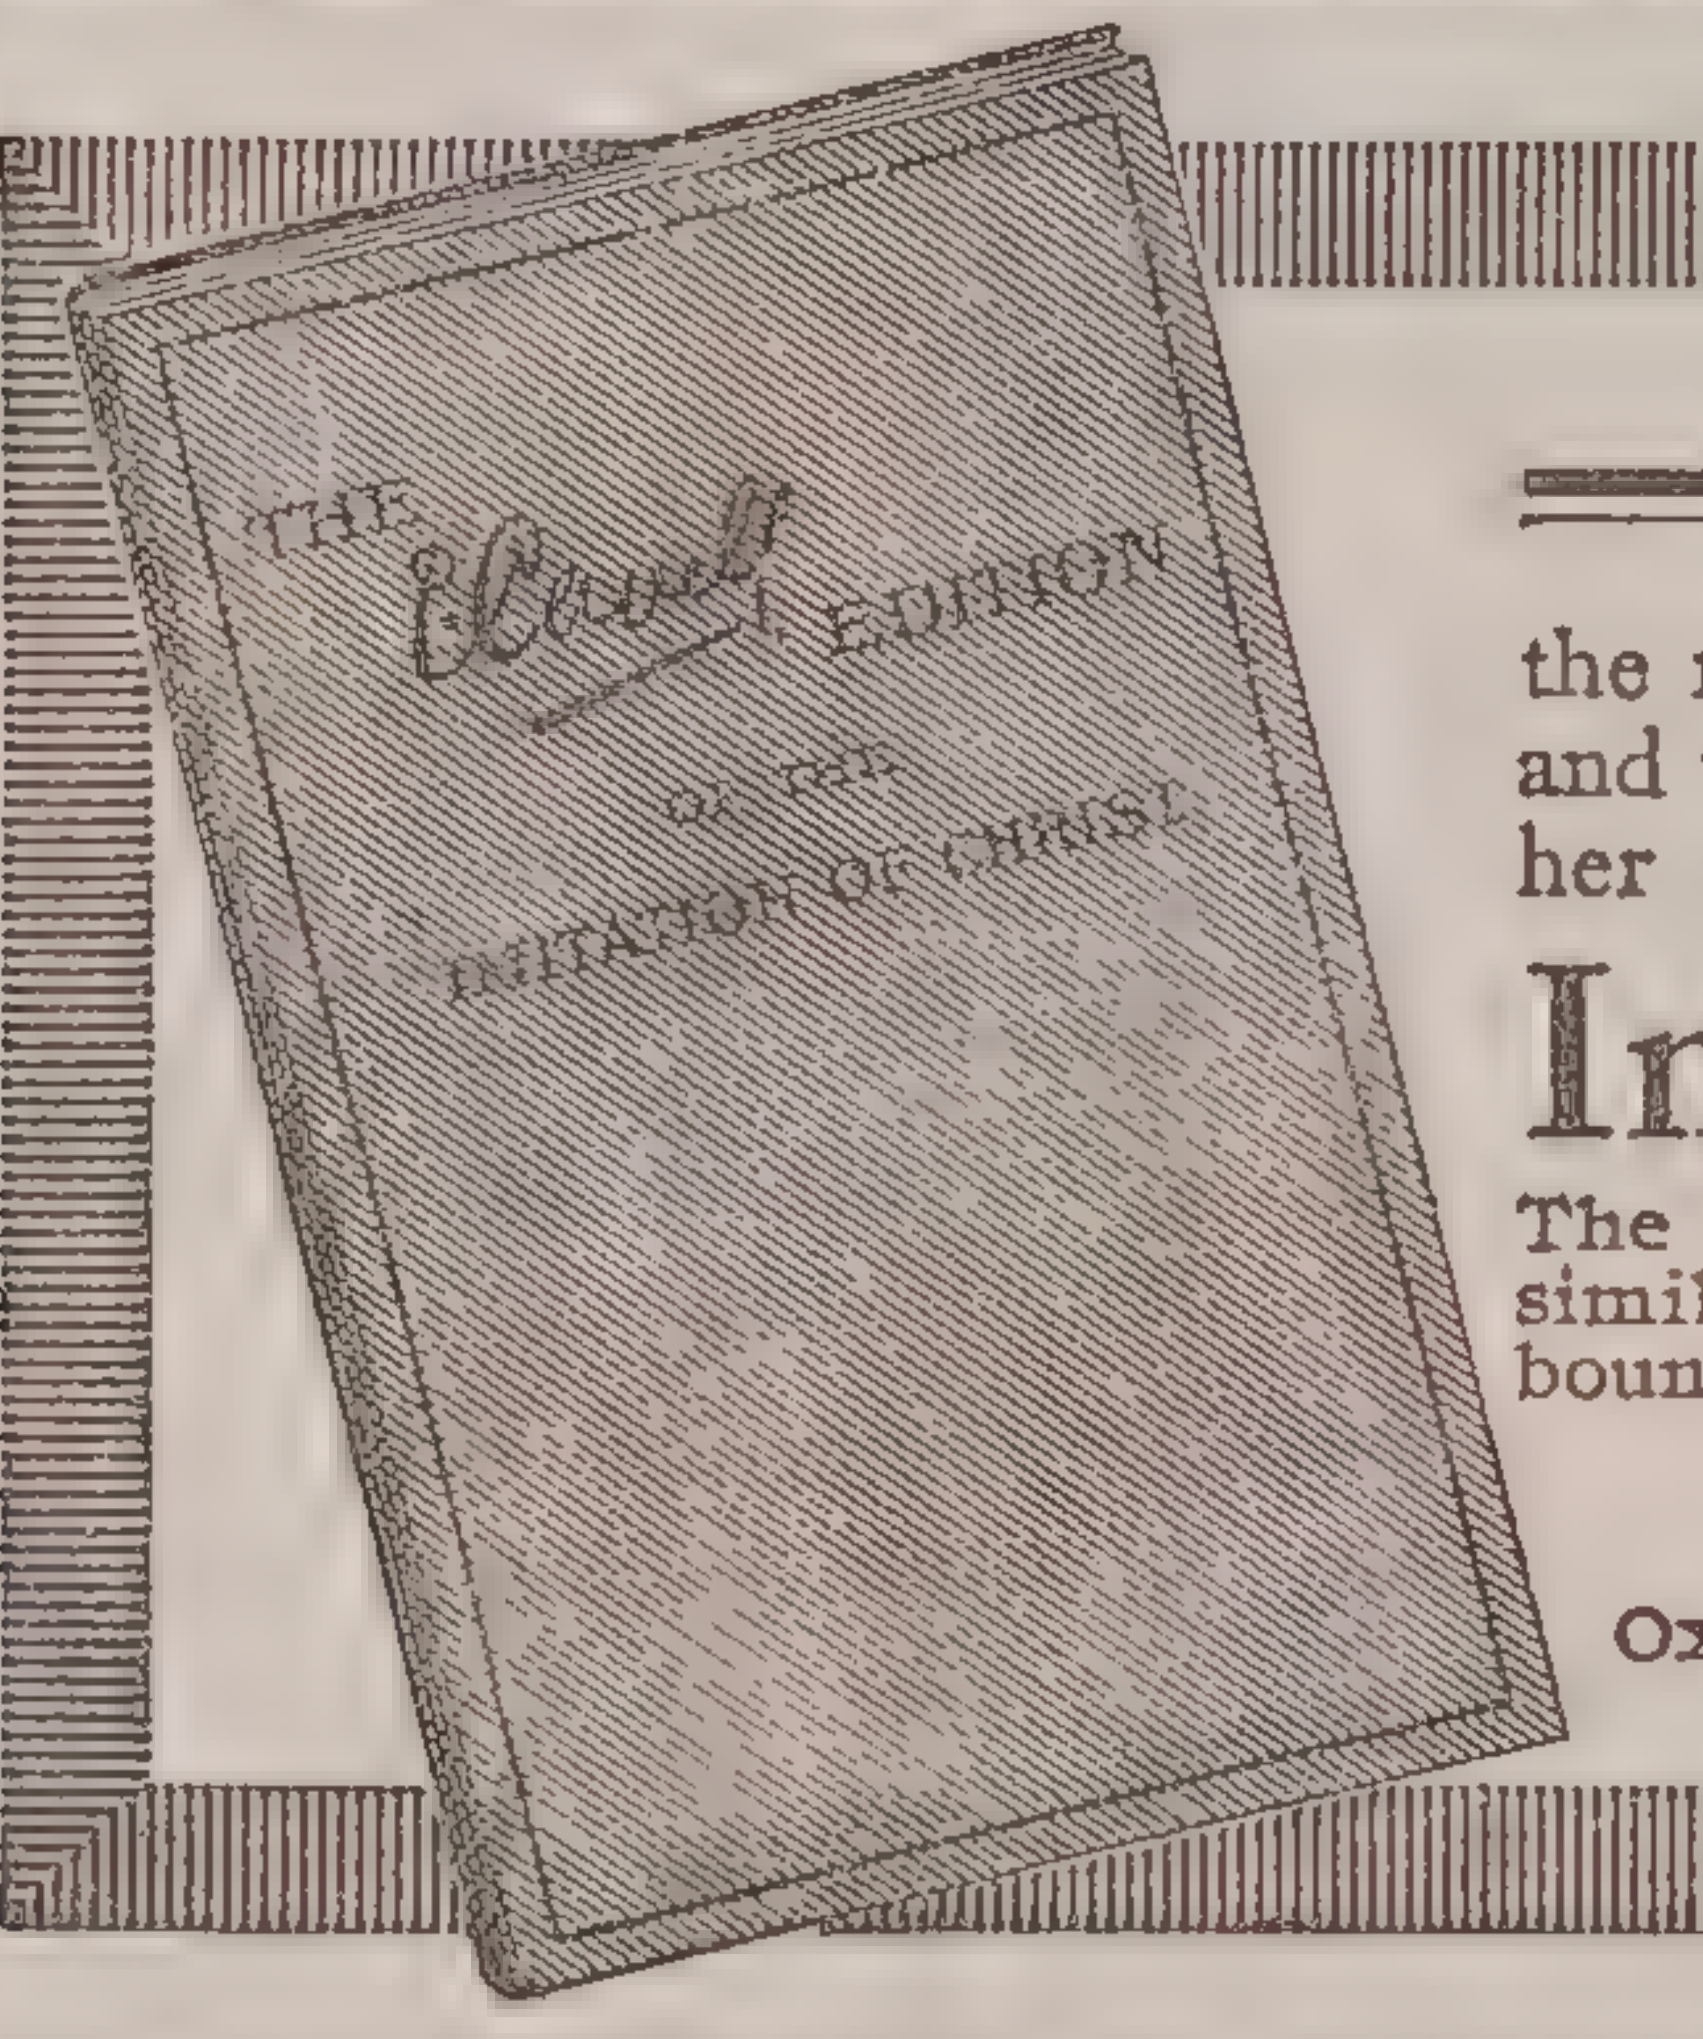
kitchen and serving-room thoroughly equipped, and well-lighted quarters for the Juniors and Boy Scouts. On the first floor, in addition to the auditorium seating 250, are the ladies' parlor and the arcade, both of which provide extra seating space. At the rear of the building the primary room and the beginners' room may be thrown together when desired. The second floor contains the balcony, pastor's study, choir room, class rooms, rest room and a well-equipped motion picture booth.

To an unusual degree the building combines beauty and practicability, making possible the community service so long needed in that locality. The church stands indeed as an outward and visible sign of the ideals and perseverance of the little group of people whose consecrated effort and devotion have achieved such splendid fruition, and at the same time it constitutes a denominational stronghold which represents extension work at its wisest and best. S. E. B.



Edith Cavell
the martyred nurse, while in her Belgian prison, and to the day of her death, read and marked with her innermost thoughts, her copy of A'Kempis'
Imitation of Christ
The Oxford University Press has just issued a facsimile edition with all her markings. It is beautifully bound in red sultan, Venetian morocco, with gilt top.
Price $1.75
At all Booksellers, or the Publishers
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS AMERICAN BRANCH
35 West 32d Street, New York

CLASSIFIED WANTS

Each week this paper goes into over twenty thousand Congregational homes. It is read by those earnest people who form the very backbone of our denomination. Our classified columns offer exceptional opportunities for those who have something to sell or are looking for something to buy, for positions wanted or to be filled, together with many other wants. Classified rates are four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

CASH IN ADVANCE ONLY

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

Emergency vacancies in colleges and universities. American College Bureau, Walter Agnew (Ex-President Hedding College), 419 West 119th St., New York.

NURSES WANTED

Nurses Wanted—Moline Public Hospital offers splendid training to young women with one year's high school education. Nurses' home one of finest in state, good allowance paid while training. Write Moline Public Hospital, Moline, Ill., for further particulars.

POSITION WANTED

Situation wanted as housekeeper and pleasant homemaker, for one Christian adult of means, in or near Boston. Address Housekeeper, Box 66, Standish, Maine.

MISCELLANEOUS

Let us help you select your Christmas cards at home this year. On approval we will send you an assortment of hand-illuminated cards of the highest quality but moderately priced—just the cards you will like to send because they express your own thoughts in their Christmas messages. The Meadowcraft Studio, 1106 Riverdale St., West Springfield, Mass.

Holly with berries at rate $1.00 per cubic foot, without berries $0.50, plus postage. Gathered by ministers' children. Promptly shipped. Country Life Academy, Star, North Carolina.

Wanted—Good Protestant home in greater Boston for seventeen-year-old High School boy. Moderate amount to be paid for board. Boy could help care for furnace, etc. Address H. P., Congregationalist.

Ready-to-make manual training articles. Toys and "usefuls." Trial package with return privilege $1.00. E. B. Lincoln, Hyde Park, Mass.

J. S. WATERMAN & SONS INC.
ESTABLISHED 1859
UNDERTAKERS
City and Out-of-Town Service
Offices, Chapels and Warerooms
BOSTON—BROOKLINE

Ladies Let Cuticura Keep Your Skin Fresh and Young
Soap, Ointment, Talcum, 25c. everywhere. For samples address: Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. V, Malden, Mass.

The Herring Memorial Fund

(Designed to be serviceable to Mrs. Hubert C. Herring while she lives. After her death the Trustees of the Annuity Fund, in perpetuation of Dr. Herring's devotion to his brethren of the ministry, distribute the income, as their judgment shall deem best, to ministers who, in order to secure the benefits of the Annuity Fund, need special assistance in meeting their requisite annual payments. In case any part of the income in any one year is not needed for such purpose it may be used to supplement the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund. The minimum hoped for is $20,000).

Carter, C. F., Hartford, Ct.
Bates, Charles S., Exeter, N. H.
Blakeley, Quincy, Torrington, Ct.
Bouden, Henry M., New York City.
Buchanan, G. E., Appleton, Wis.
Clark, V. F., Beatrice, Neb.
Hazen, Frank W., Richmond, Vt.
Marsh, Burton E., Manson, Io.
Peck, Epaphroditus, Bristol, Ct.
Roper, C. Fremont, Riverpoint, R. I.
Scott, E. H., Chicago, Ill.
Alexander, Miss J., Piedmont, Cal.
Champlin, Arthur P., Portland, Me.
Davey, Sam, Mansfield, O.
Davies, J. W. F., Winnetka, Ill.
Garfield, E. Chandler, West Brookfield, Mass.
McCollum, G. T., Chicago, Ill.
Moxom, Philip S., Springfield, Mass.
Smith, Charles W., Andalusia, Ala.
Smith, Frank G., Omaha, Neb.
Webb, Henry W., Wiscasset, Me.
Clark, George M., Evanston, Ill.
Flagg, James W., Rye, N. H.
Nash, C. S., Berkeley, Cal.
Shepard, Mary E., Bonne Terre, Mo.,
Alford, Martha A., Brookline, Mass.
Best, (Mrs.) Annie H., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Best, W. N., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Burroughs, C. H., Savannah, N. Y.
Church, First Congregational, Danbury, Ct.
Parsons, Edward S., Marietta, O.
Perkins, Sidney K., Manchester, Vt.
Scudder, Doremus, Winchester, Mass.
Anonymous, Providence, R. I.
Child, Frank S., Fairfield, Ct.
Cross, R. T., Twinsburg, O.
Dodge, L. L., Minneapolis, Minn.
Johnson, P. Adelstein, Grinnell, Io.
Koch, Johannes, Windsor, Col.
Miles, Harry R., New Haven, Ct.
Peterson, Carl J., North Craftsbury, Vt.
Preisch, Maurice E., North Tonawanda, N. Y.
Stratton, Harold L., Boston, Mass.
Van der Pyl, N., Oberlin, O.

(309 subscriptions aggregating $10,368.06)

The Study of the Bible

(Continued from page 752)

struggle which ensued to strengthen loyalty to God and secure patient endurance till God comes in deliverance, crushes the oppressor and sets up his Kingdom, which, according to Daniel, was to occur within three and one-half years.

Revelation was written during the reign of Domitian, Emperor of Rome, who died in the year 96 A. D. He determined to exterminate Christianity completely, and demanded that he himself should be worshiped by the people in the provinces. In this time of supreme crisis the book was written to stir resistance even unto death, by the assurance that God and his Christ would defeat their enemies and bring deliverance.

These two books are flaming tracts for their own stirring times. Their purpose was to bring help in the immediate pressing crisis and not to indicate when or how the end of the world would come. Their use to support Second Coming schemes is largely a misuse.

Jesus does not need to return, he is already here. Truth, love and spiritual power are his permanent means for bringing in the Kingdom. God is not likely to bring in the Kingdom by a miraculous interference, when we have the power, by the help of his Spirit, to build that Kingdom ourselves. Since it is a kingdom of character, right life attitudes where love holds sway, it cannot be produced by some spectacular stroke. The Comforter, the Spirit of Truth, the Holy Spirit is here and the Holy Spirit has not failed. We are still to seek first his Kingdom, to work and pray for it, and waste no time looking for or trying to fix the date of some divine cataclysmic intervention, through a coming of the Christ who is now here and with us "always, even unto the end of the world."

Is the Christianity of Our Bible the Final Word in Religion? will be the subject next week.

F. M. SHELDON.

Walker's the Best Concordance
Over 50,000 more references than any other low priced concordance to the Bible. 980 pages. Cloth $3.00. ½ leather $3.75. Postage 20 cents.
14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St Chicago

The Best Gift
Lasts Through The Year

The Congregationalist and Advance

Is One Of Those

A great year is in store for the Christian world—new problems, new thoughts and new successes. During these epochal days we need more than ever before our national church paper. Every member of the family can benefit through its columns. It will be full of human interest, important facts, spiritual help, church methods, good stories, and inspiration from the leaders of thought.

Special Christmas Offer

Your Own Subscription Renewed for a Year and a Gift New Subscription for a Friend for $5.00. $6.00 worth for $5.00.

But Must Be Sent to Us Direct and Before Christmas.

We will send an Attractive Announcement of your Gift to your Friend.

Department of Circulation
The Congregationalist and Advance
14 Beacon Street, Boston 9
19 W. Jackson Street, Chicago

THOMAS
Individual Cups
Used by over 35,000 churches. Clean and Sanitary. Send for catalog and special offer. Trial free.
Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 5 Lima, Ohio

BRONZE
HONOR ROLLS
AND
HISTORICAL TABLETS
REED & BARTON, TAUNTON, MASS.

MENEELY BELL CO
TROY, N.Y. AND
198 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY
BELLS

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
79 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Desks—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.
DeMoulinBros&Co. Dept. 14 Greenville, Ill.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER is known all over the country. Four thousand churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars. THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio.

Favorite Poems

We are receiving many replies to our request for poems that "comfort and inspire." It is interesting to see the variety of the material which has proved helpful to our readers and we are glad to pass them on for the benefit of our big circle of friends. F. M. Montgomery of Rutland, Vt., who sends the following poem, writes:

"Among innumerable poems which I count precious, and barring out all the immortal classics as such, I enclose this simple bit of verse written by a beloved comrade now serving in that City whose Builder and Maker is God."

Touched by Thy spirit with my soul on fire
This is my best, my holiest desire—
Create a heart so pure and true in me
That I may live in fellowship with Thee;
Oh, let me wander where the fern fronds nod
And let me there commune with Thee, my God;
Cause me to listen when the wild birds sing
And help me treasure, Lord, the word they bring!
Oh, speak to me a message through the trees,
Whisper sweet words and waft them on the breeze;
Give me a love for solitude and men
And what Thou givest help me give again;
Give me one friend for comfort in my need
The loss of whom would make my heart to bleed,
A sharer of my ecstasies and woes
Oh, such a friend as mortal rarely knows,
An angel of the Lord in human form
Of loving nature through sunshine and storm—
With this my best ambition in the end
To prove well worthy of this noble friend.
This is my prayer. Amen.

H. L. P.

EXHIBIT and DEMONSTRATION of Materials and Methods of

MISSIONARY EDUCATION

DECEMBER 13, 2–5, P. M.

Under direction of the Secretary of the Missionary Education Department of the Congregational Education Society.

For All Ages—All Departments of the Church School—All Organizations in the Church.

Practical Methods—The Kind that are Workable—

Featuring

1. How to Use Story-telling in Missionary Education.
   What are Good Stories for this Purpose?
   Where to Find Them.
   A Story Told by an Experienced Story-teller.
2. Missionary Dramatizations.
   A demonstration by an average class of an average production, the kind that you can use in the average school.
3. The Exchange Bureau.
   Where you can get suggestions as to ways that are different.
   Costumes, literature, plays, help of all sorts.
4. Conference on Your Own Problems.
   The chance to ask questions about the thing you most want to know.
5. The Manual of Principles and Methods of Missionary Education.
   A little booklet of practical information for Pastors, Church School Superintendents and Leaders, the Missionary Education Committee, in short, any one and every one interested in promoting Missionary Education.
   It tells you how. You can get it here.

MISS RUTH ISABEL SEABURY, Secretary of Young People's Work, W. B. M., will conduct the dramatization.

League of the New Day

Next Week's Readings and Prayers

Week of Dec. 13–19

Monday. The Word of God by Joel. Joel 2: 1-20.

Tuesday. God's Spirit Poured Out. Joel 2: 21-32.

Wednesday. Jonah in Nineveh. Jonah 3: 1-10; 4: 1-11.

Thursday. A Letter from John. 2 John 1-13.

Friday. Belshazzar's Feast. Dan. 5: 1-30.

Saturday. The Book of Remembrance. Dan. 12: 1-13.

Sunday. God's Mighty Deeds. Ps. 66.

Object for Intercession

For Pastors and Our Pastor in Particular:

O Lord of the sheepfold, who hast sent under-shepherds to be guides and helpers of the flock, so endue them with heavenly grace that they may be strong and faithful in their work. Make their work fruitful and keep them and those who are theirs in the midst of the needs and trials of the world. Especially we remember before thee him who is our leader and helper in the church which thou hast made our home on earth. May he be guided and upheld and taught of thee; that all the people of our brotherhood may be built up in their most holy faith. In the name of Christ. Amen.

It Will Pay You to Read

COLLIER'S STRIKE CURE—AND ITS CRITICS, by HERBERT HOOVER (Collier's, Nov. 27). The proposal of Collier's for regional adjustment boards for every zone in the United States is approved and interpreted, with an analysis of the reason given for opposition. The article is a live center of constructive debate in regard to one of the urgent questions.

UNITED STATES' DIPLOMACY IN SOUTH AMERICA, by E. S. ZEBALLOS (Living Age, Nov. 20), taken from the Revue Politique et Parlementaire of Paris. The author was formerly Argentine Minister for Foreign Affairs. He discusses the difficulties arising from a lack of continuous policy and skilled diplomacy on the part of the United States as affecting public opinion in the Latin-American states. It is a study which is full of instruction for our people, written by one who is their proclaimed and sincere friend.

ITALY'S ROLE IN THE PEACE DRAMA, by GUGLIEMO FERRERO, from La Revue de Genève (The Living Age, Nov. 20). Signor Ferrero presents the Italian point of view in the negotiations and its disappointment with the results with power and clarity. The article was written before the signing of the Treaty with Jugo-Slavia defining the Adriatic settlement just agreed upon by the two Powers.

WHY LEARN FRENCH, by J. H. HALLARD, from the Anglo-French Review (Living Age, Nov. 20). A convincing statement of the worth of French in English education as a substitute for Greek where that tongue is dropped and an argument that French in any case is needed and fitted to supplement in special fine qualities of English by others in which it is itself superior.

"John, your manners are awful! I noticed that you dusted the chair at Mrs. Heep's before you sat down. And their little boy was watching you, too." "Yes, and I was watching him! I am too old a fish to be caught on a bent pin!"

Offering Envelopes
For all purposes. Prompt Service
Ask For Prices
14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

Benevolent Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D. D., Secretary; Rev. John J. Walker, Associate Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 609 Congregational House, Boston.

CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, maintained by the Congregational Conferences of the six New England States, offers aid to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies in New England and elsewhere. Congregational House, Boston, Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Secretary, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D. D., Chairman.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Zeigler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BOSTON and vicinity (Incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel C. Bushnell, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Fred L. Norton, Sec., 919 Tremont Building, Boston.

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 503 Congregational House, Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIOR, 19 S. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas., Friday Meeting, 10 A. M.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIFIC, 760 Market St., Room 421, San Francisco. Mrs. Ernest A. Evans, President; Mrs. W. W. Ferrier, Treasurer; Miss E. S. Benton, Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Mrs. P. S. Suffern, Treas.; Miss Miriam F. Choate, Sec.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION (of Massachusetts and Rhode Island), Mrs. Amos L. Hatheway, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec., 607 Congregational House, Boston.

Boston Seaman's Friend Society

Incorporated 1829

306 Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

President, Samuel Usher; Cor. Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton. A Congregational Society devoted to the material, social and moral welfare of seamen of all nations and supported mainly by the New England churches. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Room at Tarpaulin Cove. Bequests should be made payable to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society. Contributions from churches and individuals solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis.

American Seamen's Friend Society

76 Wall St., New York, Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational National and International Seamen's Society.

Maintains a Sailor's Home and Institute, 507 West Street, New York.

Loan Libraries ($25 each) placed on vessels sailing from New York.

Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.

Publishes the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).

Officers: John B. Calvert, D. D., President; George Sidney Webster, D. D., Secretary. Send contributions to Clarence C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 76 Wall Street, New York.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817.

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps all churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.
8 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, a Constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trusts for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS can reach every principal city and town in the United States through the advertising columns of The Congregationalist and Advance.

For rates and other information write

KENNETH S. BALLOU,
Advertising Manager.

National Agencies

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Moderator, Rev. Henry Churchill King, Oberlin, O.
Secretary ad interim, Rev. Edwin D. Eaton, 289 Fourth Ave., New York
Assistant Secretary, Truman J. Spencer, 289 Fourth Ave., New York
Treasurer, Frank F. Moore, 287 Fourth Ave., New York

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)
14 Beacon Street, Boston
19 West Jackson Street, Chicago

Albert W. Fell, Business Manager
Harry M. Nelson, Treasurer
Vernon M. Schenck, General Sales Manager
A. A. Hagstrom, Western Manager
Kenneth S. Ballou, Advertising Manager

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Established by the National Council at Grand Rapids, in 1919

Dr. Lucien C. Warner, Chairman
Rev. Herman F. Swartz, General Secretary
Rev. James E. McConnell, Ass't Secretary
Walter E. Bell, Treasurer
Rev. John Luther Kilbon, Financial Sec'y

Program for the coming year to include Missionary Education, Stewardship, and a Financial Campaign in behalf of our denominational work.

Regional Directors for 1920-21

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont: Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Massachusetts, Rhode Island: Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D. D., 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Connecticut, New York: Rev. Charles E. Burton, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Porto Rico: Rev. George L. Cady, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee: Rev. L. H. Keller, D. D., Central Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Colored Churches of South: Rev. Alfred Lawless, Jr., D. D., 45½ Auburn Ave., Atlanta, Ga.
Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia: Rev. John Luther Kilbon, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska: Rev. Robert W. Gammon, D. D., 19 West Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.
Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota: Rev. William F. English, Jr., Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., and 19 So. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana: Rev. W. W. Scudder, D. D., Fountain and Aubert Sts., St. Louis, Mo.
Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico: Rev. W. J. Minchin, D. D., Guardian Trust Bldg., Denver, Col.
Southern California, Arizona: Rev. George L. Kenngott, Ph.D., 831 So. Hope St., Los Angeles, Cal.
Northern California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Alaska: Rev. H. H. Kelsey, D. D., Phelan Bldg., San Francisco, Cal., and Plymouth Church, Seattle, Wash.

All correspondence relative to the local work of promotion should be addressed to the Director of your Region.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

Conserves the welfare of the ministry by making modest grants to meet the needs of aged ministers, or their widows and children.

Rev. William A. Rice, Secretary
Rev. Charles S. Mills, Associate Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

A sound, scientific, contributory system of old-age pensions for the Congregational minister, affording also protection for disability and the defense of his family in case of his untimely death; endowed by the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. William A. Rice, Associate Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

A Permanent Tercentenary Memorial Fund of $5,000,000 held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council, the income used to endow the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers by providing funds to supplement the minister's annual payments toward old age annuities.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, Executive Secretary
Lucius R. Eastman, Chairman Executive Committee

National Societies

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Edward Lincoln Smith

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Wm. E. Strong
Candidate Secretary, Rev. Alden H. Clark
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr. 19 So. Lasalle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast District, Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco
New York Office, 287 Fourth Ave., N. Y.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Rev. William S. Beard, Secretary of Promotion
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Secretary of Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Nineteen self-supporting state organizations are in Federated relations with the National Society. The state Superintendent or Secretary is the official representative of all home mission interests.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. George L. Cady, Secretary
Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis, Associate Secretary
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Eskimos, Chinese, Japanese and Hindus; in Island Territories of Porto Rico and Hawaii. New work in Southwest taken under instruction of National Council.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

289 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary (Church Extension Boards)
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Rev. Charles H. Richards, Editorial Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. In sixty-six years it has helped to build 4,982 churches and 1,334 parsonages.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Rev. A. E. Holt, Social Service Sec.
Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Missionary Education Sec.
Samuel F. Wilkins, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service and Missionary Education; aids Colleges, Academies, Training Schools, Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities and among immigrants.

THE CONGREGATIONAL COMMISSION ON EVANGELISM

287 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Established by the National Council at Des Moines in 1904.

Rev. William Horace Day, Chairman
Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, Executive Secretary

Promotes an all-the-year-around program of church work to enlist men in the worship and service of the church and provides helps for the use of pastors and churches.

Record Books for Church and Church School

For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Superintendent, the Secretary. Roll Books, Class Books, Collection Envelopes.

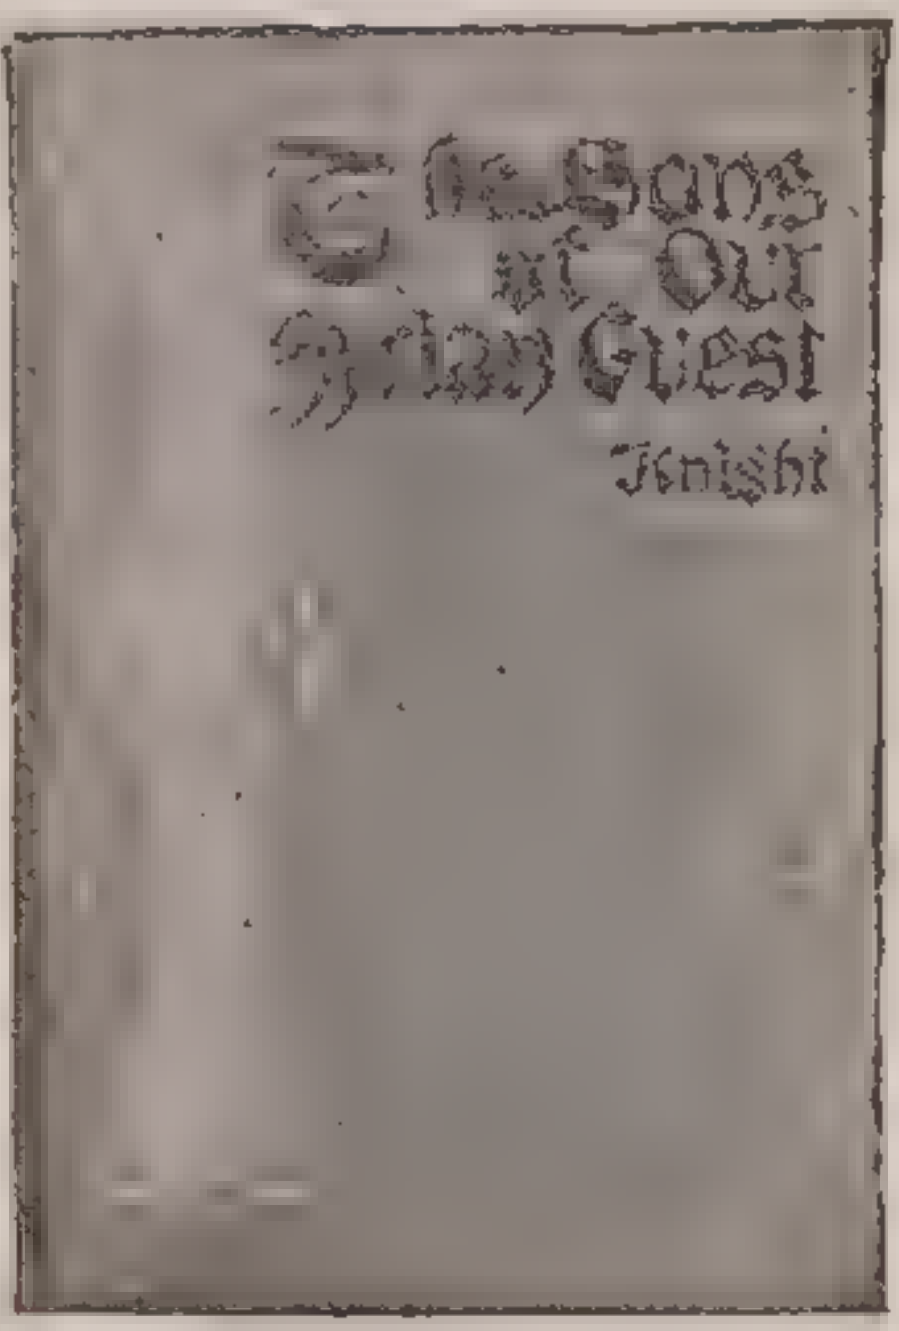
ASK FOR CATALOGUES

14 Beacon Street
Boston

THE PILGRIM PRESS

19 W. Jackson St.
Chicago

Gift Books Which Never Grow Old



Nearly 2,000,000 Copies

THE SONG OF OUR SYRIAN GUEST

have been sold and yet the demand for this wonderful little book continues unabated. A beautiful story on a beautiful theme in an attractive binding. As Margaret Deland has well said, "It has brought richness and life into the 23rd Psalm." Attractively bound in cloth, illustrated by "Copeland." 75 cents, postage 5 cents.

The Envelope Edition, printed in two colors, with frontispiece, 35 cents net, postage 3 cents.

Other Famous Books by William Allen Knight

WAR-TIME "OVER HERE"

A collection of editorials written during the year 1917 for the Boston Herald, always inspired by some war event of interest. A review of the feeling of an intelligent loyal American during the first year after the United States entered the war. 12mo. 140 pages. $1.00, postage 10 cents.

THE SHEPHERD OF JEBEL-NUR

A worthy successor to "The Song of Our Syrian Guest." The tale is deeply spiritual, and is an aid to meditation and appreciation of the protection of the Divine Shepherd. 50 cents net, postage 5 cents. Unique Envelope Series. 35 cents net, postage 3 cents.

THE WELL BY BETHLEHEM'S GATE

"Do you remember that fine story of a time when David was warring in the hills of Judea—how it says, 'And David longed, and said, Oh, that one would give me water to drink of the well of Bethlehem, which is by the gate'?" Photographic illustration. 60 cents net, postage 5 cents.

NO ROOM IN THE INN

A charming little story of life in Palestine. One who journeys along the roadways traveled by Joseph and Mary long ago tells in beautiful word pictures of experiences and scenes which cause the incident of "no room in the inn" to stand out in its touching actuality. Photogravure illustrations. 50 cents net, postage 5 cents.

SAINT ABIGAIL OF THE PINES

It bears the odor of brine from the ocean in every chapter. It is the story of the old New Bedford whaling days, and the fascination of the sea is entwined in it from beginning to end. 50 cents net, postage 10 cents.

THE PICTURELAND OF THE HEART

One of the most helpful volumes that this author has written. In this book he brings into view the things which the human heart has pictured for its peace and happiness, lighting up life's way. Beautifully illustrated and exceptionally attractive. Boxed ready for delivery as a gift. $1.25 net, postage 10 cents.

ON THE WAY TO BETHLEHEM

A beautifully illustrated book of the sympathetic journey through Palestine of a man of rare insight and unusual descriptive power. Sixteen beautiful halftones in colors. Boxed. $1.00 net, postage 10 cents.

OUTSIDE A CITY WALL

A beautifully written description of the places outside the wall of Jerusalem which are connected with the life and work of Jesus Christ, such as Gethsemane, Calvary, and the Tomb in the Garden. 35 cents net, postage 5 cents.

THE SIGNS OF THE CHRISTMAS FIRE

A dreamy sketch of pure and noble sentiment, and throws light on the old, ever new story. 50 cents net, postage 5 cents.

GEORGE A. GORDON

50c Inspiring Books by Eminent Men 50c

Postage 5 cents

WILFRED T. GRENFELL

THE ATTRACTIVE WAY Wilfred T. Grenfell
"The Christian Life, a simple, natural, happy experience—this is the central message of this little preachment.

THE PRIZE OF LIFE Wilfred T. Grenfell
The author says, "The prize of life is to be won every day. The winner is always a hero. The prize is obtained in the act of answering that call."

ON IMMORTALITY Wilfred T. Grenfell
"Shall a Man Live Again?" A vital assurance of faith in immortality.

THE WAY OF PRAYER John Edgar McFadyen
"Carries with it an atmosphere of peace and confidence."

AN ORIGINAL YEAR Charles E. Jefferson
"It tells how the next year, however commonplace and monotonous it may seem, may be made stirring and entrancing."

THE GREAT ASSURANCE George A. Gordon
"A fervid affirmation of the literal fulfillment of this promise, 'And lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world.' "

CROSSING THE BAR George A. Gordon
"In a brief analysis the author shows the poet's belief in the future life as set forth in 'Crossing the Bar.' "

THE SECRET OF ACHIEVEMENT Marion L. Burton
Vision, courage, perseverance, these are the splendid keynotes struck in this inspiring summons to achievement.

ON BEING DIVINE Marion L. Burton
An inspiring address based on the text: "I have said ye are God's, and all of you are children of the Most High."

LIFE INDEED Marion L. Burton
This inspiring address to young people shows what are the essential qualities of "the life that is Life indeed."

FIRST THINGS Marion L. Burton
A very practical address to young people, holding up high ideals and enforcing permanent values.

THE LOVING FATHER Ambrose W. Vernon
This immortal parable receives in these pages a new and timely interpretation.

THE PRODIGAL SON TEN YEARS LATER John Andrew Holmes
In imagination the author has interviewed the Prodigal Son ten years after his return home and gives us an intimate glimpse of his life at home and the lessons he has learned from his experience.

14 BEACON STREET
BOSTON

THE PILGRIM PRESS BOOKSHOP

19 W. JACKSON STREET
CHICAGO

The Congregationalist and Advance

Vol. CV. No. 51 FOREFATHERS' NUMBER December 16, 1920

The Dawn of a New Era

By courtesy of The Old Colony Trust Company, Boston

THE PILGRIMS GO ASHORE

But our reverend pastor, Mr. John Robinson, of late memory, and our grave elder, Mr. William Brewster (now at rest with the Lord) . . . Out of their Christian care of the flock of Christ committed to them, conceived, if God would be pleased to discover some place unto us (though in America) . . . where, the Lord favouring our endeavours by his blessing, we might exemplarily show our tender countrymen by our example . . . where they might live and comfortably subsist, and enjoy the like liberties with us, being freed from antichristian bondage, keep their names and nation, and not only be a means to enlarge the dominions of our State, but the Church of Christ also, if the Lord have a people amongst the natives whither he should bring us, etc. . . . hereby, in their great wisdoms, they thought we might more glorify God, do more good to our country, better provide for our posterity, and live to be more refreshed by our labours, than ever we could do in Holland, where we were.—EDWARD WINSLOW; "Brief Narration."

THE GREAT NEEDS OF A GREAT RACE

Twelve Millions of People Cry for Opportunity

Howard University was born in a prayer meeting in the First Congregational Church, Washington, D.C.,
in November, 1866.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY is the capstone of Negro education. Here are trained more than two-thirds of all the Class A colored college students of America. But not only is Howard moulding the leaders of the race in America! She is also moulding the world leaders of the race, for she draws her students from ten foreign countries as well as thirty-eight states of the Union. As the students of Howard University are moulded and trained today, the race will be led tomorrow.

HOW HOWARD UNIVERSITY SEEKS TO MEET THE NEW DAY

Howard University has taken most advanced standing in educational life. The first two years of her collegiate life are called the Junior College. Here are taught those fundamental subjects, which are the students' foundation. The second two years are called the Senior Schools. Each student must decide as early in his course as possible, the profession to which he will give his life. Having chosen he will go to his last two years of college life, specializing in that chosen field. The University offers him schools of agriculture, architecture, liberal arts, commerce and finance, civil, electrical and mechanical engineering, education, journalism, languages, library science, law, medicine, dentistry and pharmacy, music, physical education, sciences, theology. What all the white schools of higher education in America do together for white students, Howard University must do for this great race. The task is the most crushing, yet the most glorious task in America.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY MUST HAVE HELP BECAUSE THE RACE MUST HAVE HELP

Can I Show You Her Needs?

School of Religion

There are about 37,000 colored churches in the United States. These call for at least 1,900 new ministers every year. Last year not 20 college trained colored men left the seminaries for the ministry! If the blind lead the blind—what? The colored preacher is the guide of the colored race. "Nine out of ten letters are from colored preachers, regarding better schools."

Howard University has a School of Religion. While all the other major schools have buildings of their own, this School is crowded into three rooms upon the third floor of the old administration building. What is the conclusion of these 1,700 college men and women on the campus? Why—"religion is the least of all the needs of the race"—is their conclusion. We must have a building for the School of Religion and we must have more men as Christian teachers!!

Who will give a building to God for this great race?

Who will endow a chair for a teacher?

School of Medicine

The only Class A Medical School in the world for colored men! Here the students have all the advantages of a great Government hospital. But our building is old, small, and most inadequately equipped. Why, the Dental School is conducted in the old wooden barracks built for soldiers in 1862. In 1868 the buildings were used "for housing about 350 sick, decrepit and lunatic patients who were unable to care for themselves." Come and see for yourselves, and get the pain and pathos of it all. If no help comes, we must turn away students and so crush their only hope for such education.

The General Education Board has granted the Medical School $250,000 on condition that she raise an equal sum in two years! But Howard has no money constituency. The rich men of America are yet giving their money to white schools, already endowed, while this great race pleads for a chance!

Who will help this race to help itself?

Send gifts and tell how you would have them used to
J. STANLEY DURKEE, President, or EMMETT J. SCOTT, Secretary-Treasurer,
Howard University, Washington, D. C.

The Congregationalist
and Advance

December 16, 1920

Volume CV. Copyright, 1920 All rights reserved Number 51

By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

CONTENTS

The Cultivation of Religion—An Editorial Message 777
What the Christian World is Doing 778
Editorial—On the Right Track 779
  Why Not Face the Main Point?
  The Turn of the Year in Prayer
  Once More the Minister's Pay
  An Overture of Help for Armenia
  A Christmas Parable—The Sermon of the Little Child
Our Pilgrim Pulpit—The Pilgrimage of Faith, by William E. Barton 782
From Our Western Window 782
The World the Pilgrim Fathers Knew, by Isaac Ogden Rankin 783
Another Bethlehem, by Shepherd Knapp 785
The Ship that Sailed Away, by Samuel Valentine Cole 786
League of The New Day 787
Department of Religious Drama, conducted by Mary Alice Emerson 787
A Larger Program for the Federal Council, by Frederick B. Noyes 788
Tercentenary Preparations at Plymouth 789
Plymouth's Compact Celebrations 789
Among the New Books 790
In the Church School—Dr. Davis' Bible Class—Is the Christianity of the Bible the Final Word in Religion? 792
The Hour of Prayer—Comment on Midweek and Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topics—Closet and Altar 793
With the Children 794
The Puritan as a Modern Man, by Helen Kendall Smith 796
In the Congregational Circle—Church News 798

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. Howard A. Bridgman, D. D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
Associate Editor, Rev. Isaac Ogden Rankin
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D. D. (Chicago)
Literary Editor, Rev. Parris T. Farwell
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Contributing Editor, Rev. William E. Barton, D. D.
Advertising Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou
Circulation Manager, Miss Ethel M. Wentworth

The Congregationalist and Advance succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Congregationalist, 1849; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday, by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

Rates: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions are discontinued on date of expiration, appearing on the address label of the paper. Remittances: Should be made payable to The Congregationalist and Advance, and will be acknowledged by a change of date on the label. Receipt will be sent if two-cent stamp is enclosed with remittance. In renewing do not fail to send exact address as on label. Change of Address: Both old and new addresses must be sent in and be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies may be obtained at the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Subscription correspondence may be directed to The Congregationalist and Advance, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Talk of the Sanctum

Our Cover Picture of the Landing

We owe our cover picture this week to the kindness of the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston who have issued a beautifully printed and illustrated book of Pilgrim history in honor of the Tercentenary, and have given us permission to use this ideal picture of a landing in the ship's boat of a company of men from the Mayflower. The original, by Botkin, is in the possession of the Old Colony Trust Company. A picture of the landing on what we celebrate as Forefathers' Day it is not, for the Mayflower on December 21, 1620 (New Style), was still at anchor in Cape Cod Harbor near what is now Provincetown. But the spirit of the landing is here, expressed in ideal terms and with a fine sense of compositional pattern and values. The landing which we celebrate, it must always be remembered, was from the shallop, putting across from Clarke's Island to Plymouth beach that exploring party which had been searching for the Plymouth harbor which one of the ship's officers had known in a previous voyage. Not only was the Mayflower not there, but there were no women in the landing company.

The Death of a Valued Contributor

Many of our readers who have read with appreciation the poems of Margaret Cable Brewster that have appeared from time to time in our columns will be sorry to learn of her death at Modesto, Cal., Nov. 23. She was the wife of the Episcopal rector in that place and the daughter of the well known novelist, George W. Cable, of Northampton, Mass., in which city she grew up. The literary impulses which came to her by inheritance found expression in a considerable body of poetry of unusual merit. During the last ten years she had made a brave fight against tuberculosis and her resignation to the will of God and her constant growth in the spiritual life are reflected in her songs of trust and hope. In the light of these facts we think many of our readers will be glad to turn back to her Thanksgiving poem which appeared in our issue of Nov. 18, and which the Boston Herald last week made the text of an editorial in the course of which the writer says, "She knows by some deep experience the wonderful things she has put into lines of exquisite workmanship."

In the Circulation Department—

We feel the Pilgrim spirit and the Christmas spirit combined. It is a fine idea that many of our good friends have of celebrating this Tercentenary Christmas by giving a year's subscription to our Pilgrim home paper—The Congregationalist—as a gift to a friend or kinsman. Where can one find a paper or magazine that carries the Pilgrim spirit into modern life as does our national and only Congregational journal?

Our editors have given us a peep into their plans for the coming year. It looks like a great year for our readers. Inspiring messages from Christian leaders and up-to-date authoritative interpretation of what is going on in the world, helps for church and home and young and old, the news of our churches and always surprises of new good things that turn up every little while to surprise and please the staff as well as the readers.

The more friends we have who are really extending the circulation of the paper the more we shall be able to accomplish in every way.

We thank you for all you have done and for all you may be able to do now.

THE CHRISTMAS FUND

For our Aged and Disabled Veterans or their Widows

Six Hundred Families

Fourteen State Societies sharing in the distribution

PROPOSED FUND, $35,000

Echoes from the Christmas Fund of 1919

From one who had been the Pastor of a Prominent Church:

"I never imagined I should need the care that the Board of Relief so considerately gives to the old veterans. I never allowed myself to dream of such need in my own case. I had sustained my heart with the self-made plan that God would allow me to wear the pastoral 'harness' only so long as I could draw the load. Then he would release me and take me off the earth. But that plan awaits fulfillment. God knows best, of course, and among the reasons no doubt one is that I should realize, as I had probably not done before, all the labor of love, the joy of service and the fellowship of comforting sympathy in Christ, which the work of the Board illustrates."

From a Widow in South Dakota:

"May Our Father bless each one who had a part in this kindly, helpful deed. For some weeks I have not been at all well. The children help all they can, but this Christmas check lifts over the hard places and once more gives courage. It will provide a pair of new shoes. Coal and rent and other needs, too, will be met."

From a Veteran in Ohio:

"When we read your letter, my wife exclaimed—'Isn't that grand! That helps us out splendidly.' It would be a sin for us to slip into Bunyan's Slough of Despond, when good friends do so much to keep our feet on solid ground. We do thank all the good friends who have contributed to the need and comfort of the 'down and outers.' May God's blessing be upon them all and upon the Board of Ministerial Relief and its co-workers this coming New Year."

From a Widow in New York:

"The money helps me through, so I can begin the New Year with more pleasure and less care, for I was beginning to realize that there was much to go out and not very much to come in."

From a Minister and his Wife in Nebraska:

"I was out of the house when the mail man brought the letter the day before Christmas, and my wife said, 'It quite took my breath away when I saw how large it was.' And, oh, it will help to do so many things, to buy some more coal, to pay for some groceries, to purchase a few dishes for the table, etc. Yesterday was a day of cheer as we three gathered around the Christmas table. 'God bless you and the many friends who have sent so much cheer into the home.' "

Let all who shared in the gift rejoice in these songs of gratitude.

As you renew your gift, or for the first time join in the Fund, may the sense of the joy it gives to others fill your soul with gratitude that you have the power to bring such Christmas cheer.

Already (December 4) we have nearly the first tenth of the proposed $35,000
Will you help in the last nine-tenths?

Only three weeks to do it.

Send contributions for the Christmas Fund to

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief
375 Lexington Avenue, New York

William A. Rice, Secretary — Charles S. Mills, Associate Secretary — B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

The Congregationalist and Advance

Pilgrim Virtues in Modern Life

VI. The Cultivation and Use of Religion

CURRENT commemorations of the Tercentenary that dwell exclusively on the flowering of the Pilgrim seed in civic institutions and in America's marvelous material development miss the main point. The Pilgrims stand out because they crossed a wide ocean chiefly in the interests of their religion in order that they might enjoy it themselves and communicate it to others. That created and sustained the adventuring spirit. That put iron into their blood. That enabled them to endure hardship and master difficulties.

Ecclesiastically the radicals of their day, the Pilgrims shared the prevailing theological views. Yet we do but follow the counsel of their great teacher, John Robinson, when we apprize their theological opinions from the point of view of all the light which in these three hundred subsequent years has broken forth from the Word of God. We are not under obligation to accept every detail of their theology any more than we are to accept their discrimination against Christmas or their way of observing Sunday. At heart we are not so far away from what was the center of their faith—personal reliance on the mercies of God through Jesus Christ our Lord. But whether conservative or liberal, we are bound to be as tolerant as they, and to recognize as fellow-seekers after God all who are sincerely and teachably moving along the way of Christ. For the Pilgrims had a place in their company for Standish, whose family may have been allied with Roman Catholics, and their attitude toward Roger Williams who spent two years with them preaching frequently on Sunday was not so uncompromising as was that of the Bay Colony.

IF we are to hold them before us not as absolute guides in theology or as perfect models in religion, but rather as big, devoted, forward-looking men and women, we must recover the inward urge of two impulses which swayed and transformed them and gave character to the religious life of New England for centuries to come.

The first is their vivid sense of God. He may have been further off in space than modern philosophy, which stresses his immanence, would lead us to think. But in whatever corner of the universe they might have thought him to be, he was something more than a stream of tendency. He was a burning reality. They understood what the writer of Hebrews meant when he speaks of a God "with whom we have to do."

The other element in their faith which tends to become blurred in our faith as the modern world grows more engrossing and alluring is their appreciation and anticipation of the heavenly life. They never rested in the illusion that they were permanent residents of this particular planet. They "confessed that they were pilgrims and strangers," in contrast to many of us who buy and sell, build and plan, eat, drink and are merry as if we expected to live here forever.

Dr. Richard S. Storrs in his noble essay on The Puritan Spirit has stated in striking words the attitude toward the heavenly life which characterized them and their fellow believers of New England: "The Puritan conception of life on the earth," he says, "has always been that of a battle and a march, under watchful heavens, toward superlative issues, with great destinies involved."

BUT though the Pilgrims knew that their stay on earth was transient and that heaven, "their better country," was at the end of the journey, they never indulged in self-centered other-worldliness. They shunned the way of escape from human associations and temptations provided by monasticism. They went to work to better the world so long as they stayed in it and if today the fabric of American civilization has any elements of strength and beauty in it, if in three hundred years has been built up a system of laws that at least approximate justice, if our institutions and customs embody anything of the spirit of Jesus, it is largely because the men of Plymouth had courage to blaze the way toward a righteous social order and communicated that instinct to their successors.

The Pilgrims are the outstanding and irrefutable answer to the question, "Can religion work?" Yes, if we prize it above every good, if we cultivate it, if we give it ample and effective expression.

GOD grant that we, our children and our children's children to whom is entrusted the task of helping shape the next three hundred years of American history, may constantly exalt the religious ideals which made the Pilgrims what they were. God grant that we and those who come after us may keep perpetually burning the ancient fires on the altar of our hearts. H. A. B.

WHAT THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IS DOING

A Crowded Calendar

WHAT with the celebrations of the Pilgrim Tercentenary, the round of Christmas services, the Every Member and the Friendship and Fellowship Canvasses, and other regular and special events, the local church has all it can do to keep up with the procession this month. Hardly a local church, at least of the Congregational order, is failing in some way this season to honor the Pilgrims. In many cases pageants and special gatherings supplement effectively words of commemoration and incentive from the platform. Meanwhile the children and young people will see to it that Christmas is kept on the ecclesiastical map and of course the missionary administrators and state committee men charged with the task of making equitable apportionments and following them up will not let this December pass without emphasizing the special opportunities it provides for teamwork and for laying strong and broad financial foundations for the coming year.

Each Church a Law unto Itself

BECAUSE so many interests reach a kind of focal point this month and so many appeals, missionary, charitable and didactic, emanate from denominational and interdenominational headquarters, the local church may sometimes feel that its autonomy is threatened and that all power of initiative on the part of the pastor is taken away, or rendered needless. This is far from the case, as we understand the situation. It still remains true as it has for the last three hundred years in American Congregationalism that the sovereignty of the local church resides in its own membership. Any appeal can be tossed at once into the wastebasket or it can be adopted in whole or in part. When the letters and the drives seem to be always with us, let contentment of spirit be engendered by the thought that the freedom of the individual church continues to be a cardinal principle of Congregationalism.

The Tercentenary Mass Meetings—The East

THE twenty speakers who recently invaded many sections of the United States bearing the message of the Pilgrims have returned. Reports have come in from the communities into which they carried their message concerning the men and women who came over in the Mayflower. In Albany, N. Y., the beautiful Chancellors' Hall in the Educational Building was packed and hundreds anxious to hear Drs. Jefferson and Ramsay were unable to gain admission. Over fifteen hundred people attended the meeting in Rochester, N. Y. Capacity audiences greeted the speakers in Syracuse, Elizabeth, Bridgeport and New Haven. Dr. Fort Newton and Dr. Gillie were greeted with splendid audiences and in Detroit, Pontiac, Akron, Columbus, Dayton and Cleveland they spoke to thousands of people. Dr. Samuel A. Eliot and André Monod had successful meetings in New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, Oklahoma City and Memphis. The meetings in Trenton, Baltimore, Washington, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh and Scranton were excellent. Canon Burroughs, Dean Talcott Williams and Bishop McDowell addressed this series. The celebration in Washington, D. C., was successful. A mass meeting in Carnegie Hall with English, Dutch, French and Belgian speakers was the big feature of the New York city celebration.

The Tercentenary Meetings—the West

FOUR thousand people were present at the Chicago meeting to hear General Nivelle and Dr. John H. Finley and over two thousand attended the meeting in Springfield, Ill., at which General Nivelle and Harold Spender spoke. In Milwaukee nearly three thousand heard the General and Dr. Herbert L. Willett. In Indianapolis, Louisville and Cincinnati the largest public buildings were packed to the doors. Mr. Harold Spender and Dr. Gaius Glenn Atkins were greeted by large audiences in Kansas City and St. Louis.

In New England

THE New England meetings were not so well attended. Westerly, the smallest town of the six in which Dr. Percival J. Huget and Mr. P. Whitwell Wilson spoke, presented the largest audience of the group. Inclement weather was undoubtedly a factor in bringing about a rather small gathering in most of the New England towns. The Irish question has also been suggested as a more likely explanation. One prominent man, however, ventured to add that Ireland did not cut as much of a figure in the lack of New England enthusiasm in Tercentenary celebrations as the foreign population—the indifferent non-Anglo-Saxon groups, some of whose leaders do not care to have them know much about the Pilgrims. Expressions of gratitude are reaching the Mayflower Council from every division of territory into which the Pilgrim message was taken. The speakers were evangelists of international friendship and good will. More things have been wrought by the commingling and teamwork of French and British and American speakers in these meetings than perhaps we dream of.

The Week of Prayer

THE Federal Council of Churches has issued a call for a Week of Prayer for the churches from Jan. 2 to Jan. 8, 1921. In the interest of community of faith and action among the churches of the world it has adopted, with slight changes, the message and subjects for the Week of Prayer issued in behalf of the World's Evangelical Alliance by the British Evangelical Alliance. The topics are as follows: Monday, Jan. 3, Thanksgiving and Confession; Tuesday, Jan. 4, The Church Universal; Wednesday, Jan. 5, Nations and Their Rulers; Thursday, Jan. 6, Missions Among Moslems and Heathen; Friday, Jan. 7, Families, Educational Establishments, and the Young; Saturday, Jan. 8, Home Missions.

Syrian Protestant College Changes Its Name

IN accordance with a recommendation from the late Dr. Howard S. Bliss, its president for eighteen years, Syrian Protestant College at Beirut has obtained a new name, the American University of Beirut. With the expansion of the college, the old name no longer served to express the scope and purpose of the work of the institution, which now ranks as the equal of Robert College at Constantinople in its influence over the social and commercial life of the Near East. Friends of Dr. Bliss have recently established a Howard Bliss Memorial Fund, the object of which is to meet the budget for the current year by securing $80,000 and to raise an additional amount of $320,000 in order to wipe out the deficit accumulated during the war. The Board of Trustees have not yet found a successor to President Bliss.

A Hospitality Test

THE Chicago Evening Post has been testing the hospitality of the wealthy Chicago churches by sending its reporters, dressed as down-and-outers, to the Sunday services. Generally speaking the churches gave the reporters a fairly cordial welcome. Some adults gave the visitors the cold shoulder, and a few of the youth giggled. The Post recognizes that not all who attend the services of the church are Christian, and that not all Christians are thoughtful. It goes to the heart of the problem as follows:

> Here were men who, by all appearance, stood in need of a pull upward. It was evident that they were ill clad and cold; it would have been natural to suppose that they might be hungry and jobless. Their immediate physical discomfort and material need formed the points of contact from which advances could be made to the needs of the spirit. Jesus never failed to make such points of contact. It is in no carping or ungracious humor that we note the churches failed. It is beside the point to say that if any one of these men had asked for material assistance he would have been given it. The manifest poverty which evoked from the un-Christian an avoidance should have called forth from the Christian something more to the immediate purpose than a kind word and a friendly smile.

The Post undertook its experiment so that it might make constructive criticism of the relationship of the churches to the poor. Its editor and publisher is a member of a church strongly evangelical, and is in full sympathy with the fundamental aims of the church. His criticism is from the inside.

EDITORIAL

Supporting The Congregationalist

The directors of the Congregational Publishing Society have asked advice from the Commission on Missions and the Executive Committee of the National Council with regard to The Congregationalist.

The unprecedented cost of paper and printing has made it impossible for the denominational papers of the country to be published without financial loss. The Congregationalist inevitably shares in this condition, which in its case has been emphasized by the obligations which it assumed at the direction of the National Council in taking over The Advance.

The Commission on Missions and the Executive Committee of the National Council, after careful consideration, have unanimously advised that The Congregationalist, which is in no sense a business venture, but exists as an educational agency of our churches, be taken over by the Education Society as a part of its national service.

The Board of Directors of the Education Society have felt it clearly their duty to accept this responsibility until the meeting of the National Council next July, at which time they will ask for the further direction of the representatives of the churches.

Meanwhile, we bespeak the hearty and increasing support of all of our churches for The Congregationalist. In its history and reputation we take just pride. It is encouraging that the list of its paid-up subscribers is now larger than ever before. Its strength and service are an indispensable element in the unity, influence and efficiency of our churches.

Henry C. King, Moderator of the National Council.
Charles F. Carter, Chairman of the Executive Committee.
Edward D. Eaton, Secretary ad interim.

On the Right Track

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is consolidating its forces, finding an enlarged sphere of operations and assuming an importance paramount to that of every other association of American Protestants. The Boston meeting just held marked the beginning of a new era. At the same time the Council is just as impotent to do anything without the consent and approval of its thirty constituent bodies as it ever has been.

The present situation in American church life seems like an anomaly. Never was there such denominational compactness, such definiteness of aim, such a concert of purpose, such zeal for the welfare and usefulness of the individual body as now exists among Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, Disciples, Lutherans and all the others, including, we are glad to say, Congregationalists. On the other hand, never was there so much real brotherliness, such eagerness to do things together, such yearning to give to the world a convincing example of the fact that at heart Christ's followers are one.

This being the actual state of affairs, we must all make the best and the most of it. Those of us who believe that denominations are likely to go on substantially as they are for a half century to come, and those of us who want to see community churches replace a half dozen competing organizations and the integration on a wider scale of bodies that have no essential reason for keeping apart, can unite in supporting the Federal Council as the providential instrument at hand for bringing to pass ultimately things we all want to see accomplished. The Providence of God usually does take more time to arrange matters than we in our haste, impatience and short-sightedness would take under similar circumstances.

Unquestionably the future is with the get-together movement. The present denominational esprit de corps is altogether different, broadly speaking, from the old secretarian spirit, which issued in so much strife and rivalry. Existing denominational enthusiasms are linked up with earnest effort to secure common understandings and to enter into joint undertakings. The yearning for unity cannot be repressed. It has grown mightily during the past year, stimulated in large measure by the Inter-Church Movement. Unstable as was the basis of that Movement, faulty as many of its methods, it engendered a spirit which abides. If after the disappointments arising from the outcome, there had been no organization at hand to serve as a residuary legatee of its spirit and of what was best in it, our American Protestantism would have gone to work to create a new organization to represent the new instincts and objectives of twenty-three million American Christians.

Fortunately the Federal Council was at hand. From the first it had the right foundations, being the creature of the highest official bodies of its component parts. With real statesmanship, its leaders undertook months ago not in its own behalf selfishly to profit by the existing situation, but surveying it impartially and thoroughly to ask what under the circumstances can the Council, as the accredited agent of American Protestantism, do to conserve all the gains of recent years, and to help block out a path of progress in which the churches could walk safely.

The Council, through a representative committee headed by Dr. Robert E. Speer, brought into the Boston meeting a report which became at once the object of earnest consideration. Charged with a difficult task which involved both technical readjustments and constitutional amendments as well as the projecting in bold lines of a larger sphere of action for the Council, the Committee succeeded without multiplying words in mapping out a program and a relationship to other bodies which ought to serve the needs and demands of the next few years. It recommended:

The strengthening and enlargement of the secretarial staff of the Council.

The provision by the constituent bodies of a budget of $300,000 per annum for the next five years.

A conference of interboard agencies, such as the Foreign Missions Conference and the Home Missions Council, with a view to careful adjustment of spheres and better service on the part of all.

Other suggestions included some adequate arrangement for supplying information and interpretation regarding the activity of the churches, more general acceptance of the principle of stewardship, both of money and of life, the provision of a clearing house for all the women's Christian organizations and the effort to promote and correlate lay activities in the churches.

The report as a whole means a closer relating of the Council to existing interdenominational agencies in an advisory rather than a supervisory way. This will both vitalize the Council and aid the other organizations. It is going as far in the direction of administraton as it is desirable for the Council to go at present.

A recommendation, cordially agreed to by the Council, was that the thirty denominations raise $300,000 yearly for the Council through assumption of their share as a legitimate and regular item in their respective denominational budgets. Last year the Council spent about $180,000. Of that sum only about twelve thousand dollars were appropriated directly from the treasuries of the denominations. The rest came through private solicitation. But if the Council has worth and is to have dignity, its officials should be relieved of personal solicitation from individuals who, under the stress of the recent situation, have been obliged to resort to the questionable method of circulating little subscription books broadly through the mail. If the Council is worth anything to American Protestantism, its support should be accepted as a legitimate fixed charge. If the Council can function as the one central unifying and impelling Protestant instrumentality, $300,000 a year is not a great sum for nineteen million evangelical Christians to supply. On its part, the Council, if thus entrusted with the official support of the churches and commissioned by them to do a larger work should, and we believe will, seek to approve itself to them in three particulars:

In the personnel of its executive staff and its administration. In electing Dr. Robert E. Speer to the presidency for the next four years, the Council established a very high standard. His character and abilities mark him as the man for the hour. An experienced administrator, a scholar, a world traveler, he stands pre-eminently for the personal spiritual life. His aid will be powerful in keeping the Council from becoming a machine, and in making it a spiritual powerhouse. The proposed enlargement of the secretariat is another step that will add to the prestige and influence of the Council. Yet it should never be forgotten that both in fact and in the thought of its present executives, the voluntary service of capable men is one of the greatest assets the Council can have. That such men as Prof. William Adams Brown, Dr. James I. Vance, Dr. Frank Mason North, Dr. Albert G. Lawson, Fred B. Smith, and Robert Speer are willing without compensation to spend long hours in the patient work of the committee room is reassuring. When such men as this think the object in view is worth their voluntary expenditure of time and thought, the rest of us should try to see and grasp the idea at stake.

In the sending forth of its literature and in the work done by its commissions, the Council may well guard against the unnecessary multiplication of documents and instrumentalities. Discrimination is needed both in the sphere of publicity and propaganda and in the choice of tasks. In saying this we would also express our appreciation of the good work already done by the commissions of the Council. Especially notable was the work of the War-time Commission, whose report at the Boston meeting fully justified all the labor and expense involved.

The Council must speedily relate itself more definitely to the local communities. Multitudes of earnest church members have no idea what the Council is. Upon the minds of hundreds of Christians in the metropolitan Boston district last week's gathering made no more impression than a convention of conchologists would have done. The existing local federations offer a means of approach to the larger cities which should be utilized more vigorously. In the towns and cities where there is no federation, groups should be organized of men and women who will keep alive in their own hearts and spread through the community the desire for unity. It need not be in any case a large group, provided that in the few who do gather occasionally the passion burns.

Why Not Face the Main Point?

The Saturday Evening Post takes the makers of the Inter-Church report on the steel strike to task because these churchmen knew while they were condemning the steel trust for paying insufficient wages that the ministers of their respective denominations were grossly underpaid. The probabilities are that the members of the Commission that investigated the steel strike were as sensitive to this fact as were the editors of the Saturday Evening Post, perhaps more so. The fact is that if the church or any other organization waited until all the wrongs within its own fold were righted before it set out against other wrongs there would never be any leadership given nor progress made against the kingdom of evil.

The Inter-Church World Movement made many mistakes, but among the many good things that it did was the stirring of a mighty sentiment for paying ministers decent salaries. The editorial in the Saturday Evening Post could well be used to divert our attention from the main issue as could much of the rest of the comment on the Inter-Church report of the steel strike. The main point is that the church has the right to announce and must proclaim the great Christian principles that should underlie all human relationships and it must be absolutely fearless in the application of these principles to conditions of life. This does not mean that the church should undertake to make a technical program for industry nor that it shall cease to make its first message one relating to the relationship of God and the individual. This is first and central, but it is not the only message of the church. Jesus was not silent about oppression and his true followers, if they are intelligent, will not be silent.

Any church that fails to demand the application of the teaching of Jesus to the conditions of life everywhere is failing in one-half of its work. Any emphasis, however great, placed upon repentance, forgiveness of sins, and a holy life in the narrow range of individual living cannot make up for lack in the application of the gospel to every field of human endeavor. The members of the Committee of the Inter-Church that reported on the steel strike, had they been speaking to the point of ministerial salaries, would undoubtedly have said things just as unpleasant for the churches to hear as they did say concerning the strike. Their report may have been biased, but the main issue is the question of the right of the church to demand that all life everywhere be lived upon a Christian basis, and to criticize when this is not done.

An Overture of Help for Armenia

A new stage is opened, we sincerely hope, in the long and cruel history of Armenia by the proposal of the League of Nations that Mr. Wilson—in his private capacity, of course—should attempt in connection with others a mission of mediating between the Turkish Nationalists and the Republic of Armenia and by the proposal of President Wilson in his message to Congress that a loan of some twenty or more million dollars should be made by the United States Treasury to Armenia for purposes of construction and reconstruction. The President puts this proposal of a loan on the same basis as the advances which were made in war time to some of the smaller and even to the larger allied nations.

The proposal, of course, is immediately flouted by such extreme leaders as Senator Borah, who stands for a complete refraining from all official relations with other countries. It will have, we are sure, the backing of many men of mark and influence, even of those who were unwilling to commit the nation to unreserved membership in the League. It should have the approval of the great majority of the broad-minded citizens of our country. Less than this in the way of help we can hardly offer. And there is some hope that in wise hands this may make the turning point of hope and confidence for an able but afflicted people.

Once More the Minister's Pay

As the annual church meetings draw on apace we want to enter one more plea for raising the minister's salary. The Congregationalist has harped away on this subject—we trust not to the distaste of our readers generally—for the last three years. Our Salary Roll of Honor, listing churches that have lifted the ministerial stipend, has now lengthened to 1,344. A number of churches have been registered two or three times, representing successive additions to the salary. This list ought to be swollen by several hundred additions between now and next March. We know that coal costs more than it used to and the sexton has come in for a raise, or at least ought to. We appreciate the difficulties with which church committees struggle, but our point is that just as in planning home expenditures certain necessaries are given right of way, so in the life of the church the salary of the spiritual leader should be scheduled before rather than after the appropriation for coal and the sexton.

As long as Protestants maintain a paid ministry where compensation is determined in advance and not, as in the case of other branches of the church, left to a considerable extent to the initiative and painstaking of the priest, we believe our churches should provide for the health, the comfort and the efficiency of the minister and his family. In connection with current drives designed to increase the salary of college professors, the appeal has often been made to "give the the professor enough to enable him to live like a gentleman." Ministers of Christ have no expectation of or desire for luxury. But they know they would be better able to do Christ's work if they were not hampered by debt and if they were relieved of some portion of the pressure that is upon the middle class everywhere today. Not one minister in ten pleads for himself. Because of that fact we once more plead in their behalf.

The Turn of the Year in Prayer

A correspondent makes a plea, which we are glad to second, for watch night meetings as we close this year of trouble and perplexity and look around the corner to the opening of another year. The significant time makes the significant opportunity. We do not say that this should be a meeting in which the ambition of pastor and organizers should look toward numbers. It is first for those who know in their own experience the meaning and the blessing of prayer. For prayer is not something to be argued about. Men who have never learned to pray are sterile soil for the sowing of faith in a real communion with God and intercession. While the invitation should be general, it would be better to have for such a meeting at the year's end a handful of people who are in full sympathy than a crowd who come unwillingly or to be entertained.

As to the objects for intercession, it may be well to make them few but definite. It is no time nor place for a scattering fire. As in all true prayer, sincere confession may come at the beginning. Then we ought to ask for the aid of the Holy Spirit in the work we have to do. That God would raise up leaders and that he would give power to the leaders we already have; that he would bless the means employed and help us to devise ways to make them more helpful and efficient; for Christian nurture of the children of the church; for the community, the state, the nation; for the Christianizing of the world in all its ways; and for its peace and brotherhood—here are definite and pressing needs enough, which may, if it is thought wise, be assigned singly and with careful consideration beforehand to those who will assuredly take part, that there may be no praying at random, no careless overlapping and no waste of spiritual energy in platitude and rhetoric.

Such a Watch Night meeting, of a dozen, or of a whole congregation, could not fail, we think, to be profitable and memorable for those who are present, an incentive toward enterprise in the life with Christ and a step forward in the faithful, courageous and patient witness of the church in the community where it is gathered. Plan it out a little beforehand, brethren, and do not merely improvise it when the last evening of the year comes round.

A Christmas Parable of Safed the Sage

The Sermon of the Little Child

There was a day in Early Winter, when the sun had set, and the daylight grew dim. And I entered the House of God. And there cometh ever upon me as I enter a feeling of Reverence, and a sense of the Beauty of the place. For if the Sun be shining, then is the place flooded with Golden Light; and if it draw toward evening, then is the light less, but richer and more peaceful.

And I heard as I entered a Small Voice, and I beheld a Small Light. And they were Very Far Away, even in the Pulpit.

Now the Light was the Light of the Electrick Lamp that is fastened above the Pulpit. And it sheddeth its beams not toward the Congregation, but backward, and downward. For it is Hooded.

And Between the Top of the Pulpit and the Hood of the Light, I beheld a Little Face. And the Face was Rosy, and it was fringed round with Golden Hair. And the little round Mouth was open, and the Front Teeth were gone. And there stood the Daughter of the Daughter of Keturah. And she stood upon her Toes, that she might look in the face of the Congregation. And the Congregation sat on the Front Seat, very Attentively. For he was her Little Brother, whose age is Three. And he hath Great Admiration for his Sister, who hath late become Six.

And she held a Book in her Little Hands, and she sang. And he also sang. And when the song was finished, then did she climb up into my Great Chair and sit down.

And I also sat down, but far away, and I listened while they twain went through the Service. And the Daughter of the Daughter of Keturah was Grandpa, and her Little Brother was the Congregation. And at the end of each part of the service did she climb up into the Great Chair, and presently did she climb down again, and do the next thing.

And she came unto the Sermon. And she said,

Once upon a time there was a Cruel King. And he was not kind to the Little Jesus. And Joseph and Mary were kind to him. And they took him and went into Egypt. And Mary rode on a donkey and carried the Little Jesus in her arms, and Grandpa has a picture of it. And we must be kind to Jesus. When we see a little Kitten that Mews at the door and has no mother, do we be kind to it? Yes, yes. And when we see a little Birdie, do we be kind to it? Yes, yes.

And when she said, Yes, yes, then did her brother also say, Yes, yes; for that was his Amen. And when she had finished, she clapped her hands and applauded her own sermon, for ministers also do the same, though not so frankly. And her brother he also applauded.

And she said, Hullyhoo Root is here. Would he like to say a few words to the children?

Now I had not known that she had seen me, nor had she ever before called me Elihu Root; but as she was Grandpa, I had to be some one else. And she hath a long list of distinguished friends, whose names she useth very freely. And what I or Elihu Root said to the children mattereth not.

But this will I say for myself and for Elihu Root and for all men unto men and women everywhere—Be kind. For the miracle of Bethlehem is repeated wherever a child of God awaiteth a deed of love from any other child of God. In more than one place on earth hath there been an Inn with no room for the Christ. And when the Christmas Day cometh once again, give not alone to those who give unto you again, but be kind. When thou seest a Friendless child, and thou dost be kind unto him, hast thou done it unto Jesus. And if there be an home in need, and thou dost minister thereto in love, hast thou been kind to Him.

And the angels shall answer, Yes, yes.

In Brief

The Red Cross is always on its job. When an earthquake in Albania made some 15,000 people homeless, a Red Cross party was immediately organized, provisioned and on its way toward the scene of trouble. The Red Cross sentinels are everywhere quick-sighted to observe the needs of help.

* *

The Nobel Peace Prize comes to a lover of peace when it is given to President Wilson, just as it did when President Roosevelt was the recipient; and now, as then, it is a compliment to the whole United States. It must be a satisfaction to the President that this side of his character and purpose is just at this time recognized in a manner to fix the attention of the world.

* *

We all breathe freer air now that the election is over and we can resume our old habits of consideration and courtesy for political opponents. On the political side Mr. Harding has borne himself wisely on his visit to Washington, and Mrs. Wilson has been courteous in inviting Mrs. Harding to drink tea at the White House. It is only in remote places and narrow minds that bitterness of spirit is perennial.

* *

Not one word too much is said by a New Hampshire correspondent on page 798 of this issue about Dr. Burton W. Lockhart, who retires Jan. 1 from the pastorate of the Franklin St. Church, Manchester, N. H. He has enhanced the reputation of a traditionally great pulpit. Besides that he has incarnated in his own character, day by day, the spirit of Jesus Christ. What some one said of William Pitt, England's distinguished statesman, applies equally to Burton Lockhart: "No one went forth from his presence without being a braver man."

* *

Some of our Christmas money should this year go to feed the starving of the world, in China, in Armenia, and in Europe. Mr. Hoover has promised to give his whole time toward raising the sum of $23,000,000, which is the goal of effort for the fund. All our readers, we hope, will keep an open ear for the appeals which are to be made and do as the Corinthian Christians were asked to do: "Let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that no collections be made when I come." This fund and the fund for China should have a place in the budget which we all of us should be planning, for the coming year.

* *

Argentina has a secretive and rather autocratic President in the person of Dr. Hipolito Irogoyen. It is difficult to make out his policy in regard to the League of Nations, from which the Argentine delegate to the Assembly has withdrawn after failing to secure amendments which would, among other things, have asserted that all nations are, irrespective of their desire and the will of the League, members of it. Certain nations are evidently not yet quite measuring up to the requirements of the League constitution and should not be admitted until they do. Argentina's withdrawal will not, however much regretted, wreck the League. And the course of action at Geneva seems to point unmistakably to wise caution in postponing amendments, such as those which Canada and the Scandinavian powers have offered, until next year. That seems like holding the door courteously open for the United States in particular to enter and to share in the final constitution of the League.

OUR PILGRIM PULPIT

The Pilgrimage of Faith

By Rev. William E. Barton, LL.D.

First Church of Oak Park, Ill.

And Jehovah appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there he builded an altar unto Jehovah.—Gen. 12:7.

That was the important feature of the migration of Abraham; he not only moved, but he built. He lived in a time of migrations, and among a people who were migratory in their habits. One move more or less was not in itself significant. But in a time of instability, he prepared for a stable habitation and a spiritual possession. He moved from somewhence, but he also went somewhither; and he knew when he had arrived, and he established there a memorial of the permanence of his occupation. It was an altar to his God.

That also was the way the Pilgrims did. There was much moving in their day. It was a time of migration. There were conditions from which it was desirable to escape. Many restless people were departing from England. Most of them went nowhere, so far as any permanent influence upon history is concerned. They left but did not arrive. They disappeared from the places where they had been, but they registered no permanent mark of arrival at any port in recorded history. It was not so with the Pilgrims. They did more than leave England; they lived in Holland and there maintained the distinctive features of their social life. They did more than depart from Holland; they set up in America the monuments of a permanent civilization. They erected an altar, as Abraham did; and they builded other structures around it.

An altar might have seemed the least consequential and the most easily postponed and forgotten of all their possible works of construction. It might have seemed that their most significant undertaking would have been recorded in other terms: they might instead have built a courthouse; a bank; a mill; a market; a threshing-floor. All these structures they needed, and the equivalents of all these the descendants of Abraham needed, and in time procured. But first of all came the altar. It was a family altar in the first instance; but it became the altar of a church and a nation.

The Pilgrim movement had its commercial features; there was a business aspect of the venture; but that was not its most significant feature. The organific idea of the colony was not commercial; it was spiritual. It centered not in the fur-trading establishment or in the fish-drying sheds or in the grocery store. It had its center in the church.

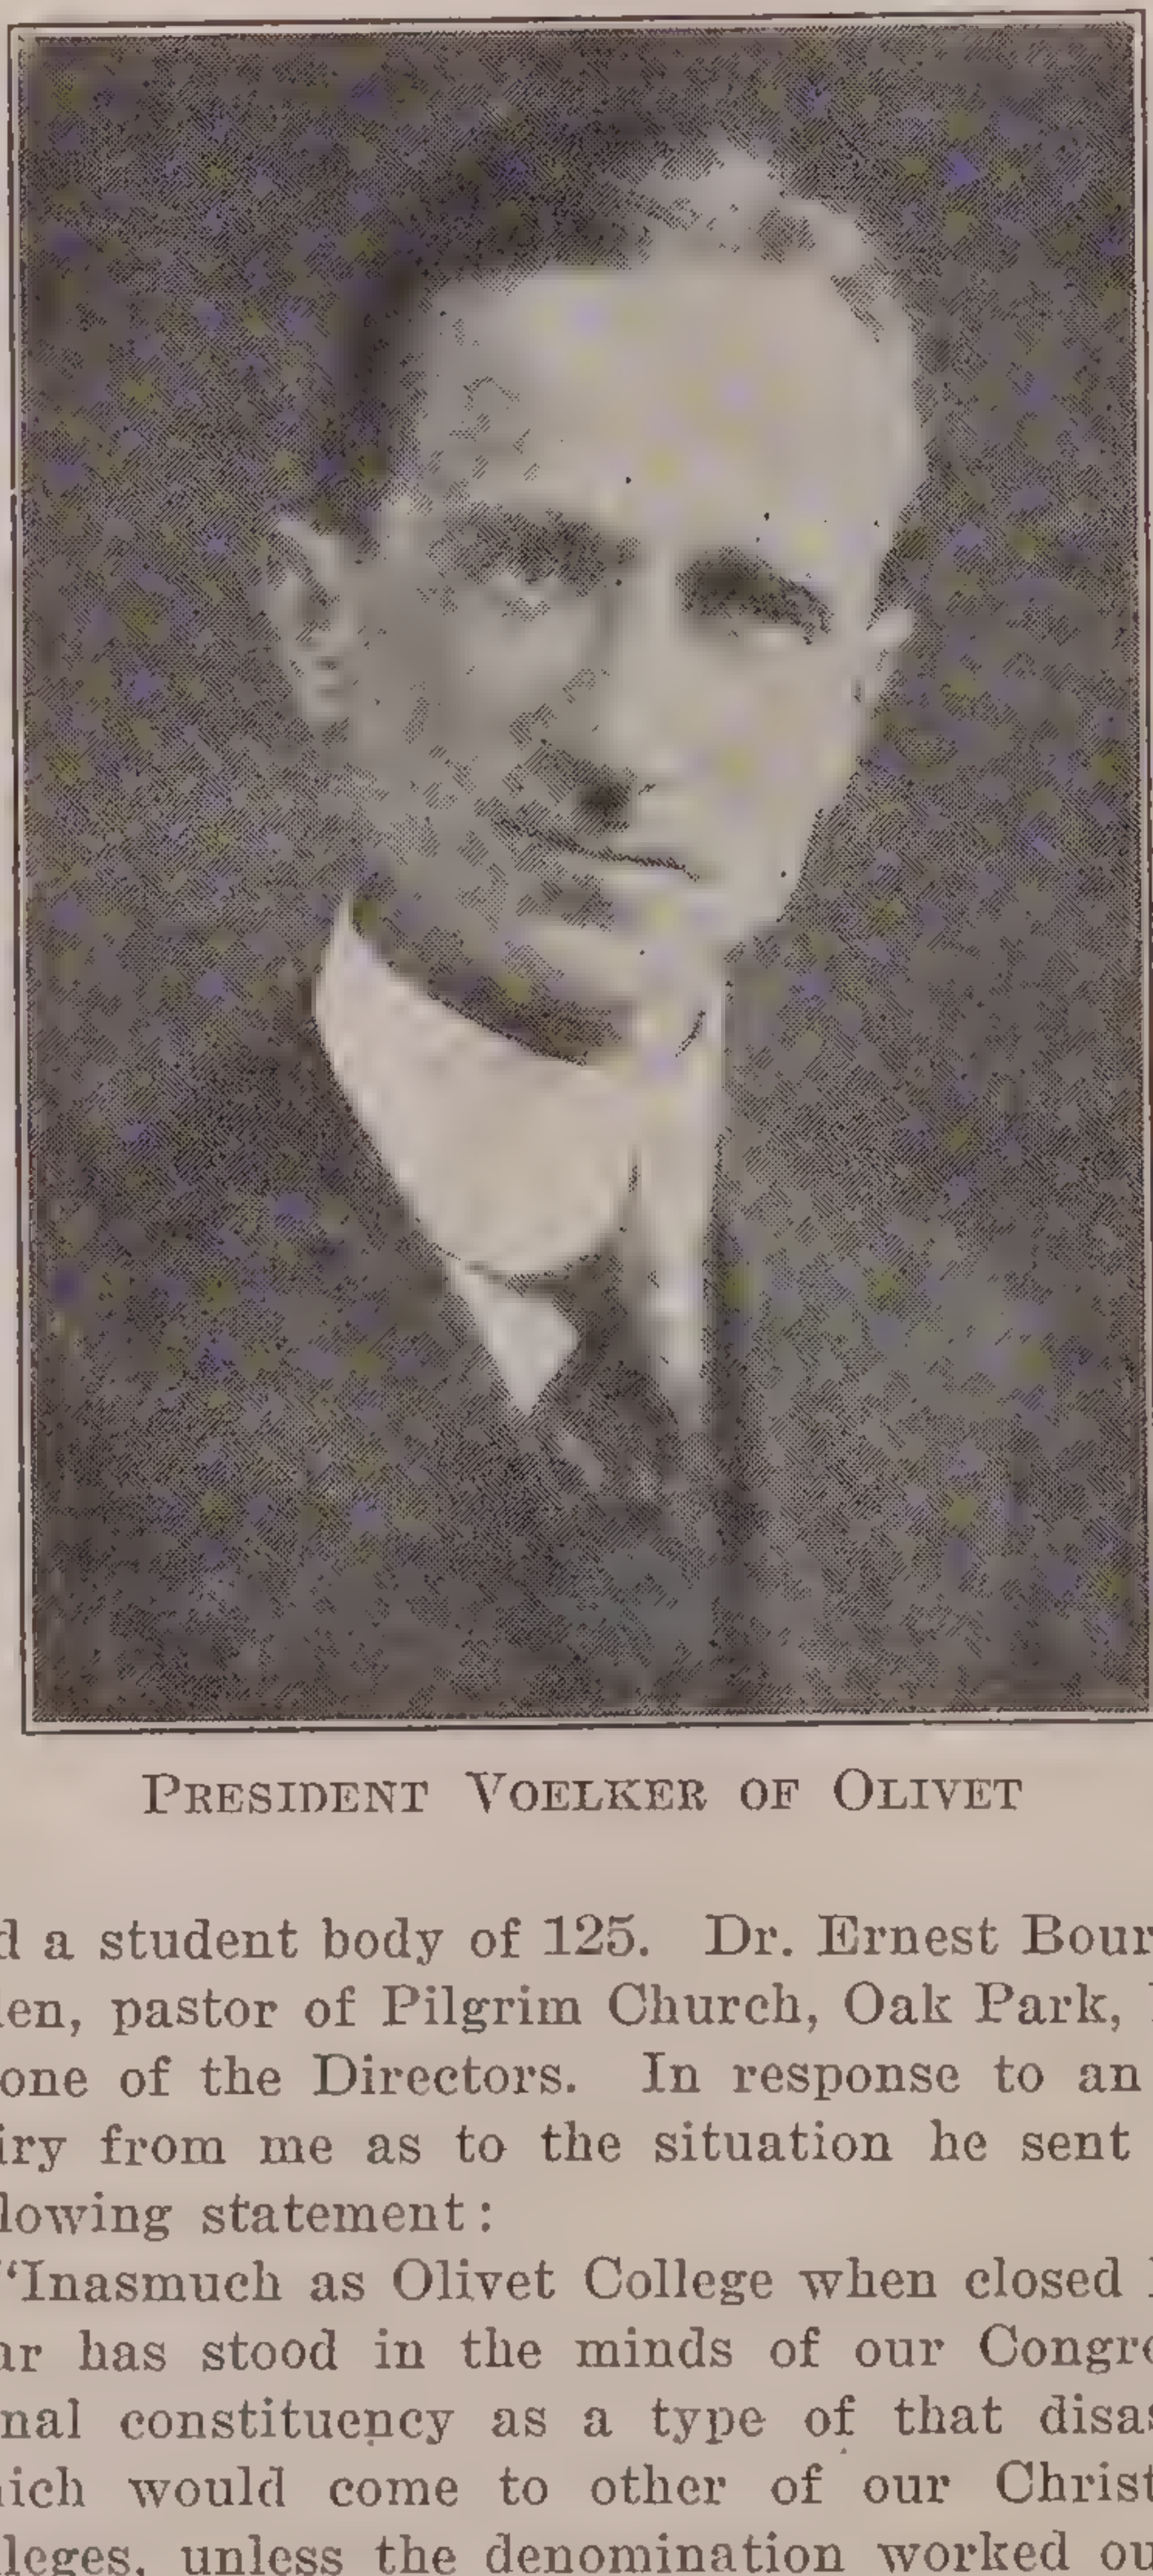
Civilization confesses its failures in institutional form in its jails and asylums, and its pathetic efforts at reclamation in its hospitals and reformatories. The support of these swells the burden of the taxpayer, and weighs down the progress of the race like an Old Man of the Sea. The Pilgrims, as the years went by, had sad need of their share in these confessions and sad attempts. But in the beginning it was not so, neither was it inherent in their ideal. Their forms of institutionalized life were four —the Home, the Church, the School, and the State. The altar which they builded to God stood four-square. It incorporated these four conceptions of the social life of the community. Such an altar, with a spiritual ideal animating the organization of life in home and church and school and state is still the hope, as it must be the salvation, of the republic.

The Pilgrims brought with them their wives and children. They could not afford to indulge in any dreams which would not pay a living wage to the men who dreamed. Stern necessity stood beside the Pilgrim altar, and poured the salt water of contempt on all unpractical idealizations. The Pilgrim was a practical idealist: he had to be.

Our American civilization treads in the wide road which was first a footpath for Pilgrim feet. It moves, and cannot long remain in any one situation. It can never safely move beyond the region within which it can erect an altar to the God of the Pilgrims, an altar anointed with their consecration and walled round by their practical wisdom; an altar standing four-square, facing on its four linear dimensions the Home, the Church, the School, and the State.

FROM·OUR·WESTERN·WINDOW

It ought to bring encouragement to our churches that are just now in the midst of their campaign for the 1921 apportionment on the $5,000,000 basis to know some of the great things accomplished by the Emergency Fund subscribed in April of this year. The American Board and the Home Missionary Society both of them would have had a debt at this time that would have been staggering had it not been for this Emergency Fund. The debt that both the Societies have had to incur is large enough as it is. There is this good word to be said, however—that their obligations will be further reduced by the payments still to be made on the Emergency subscriptions. As noted in The Congregationalist, one of our colleges, Olivet, was closed last year because of the financial situation. It is now open, has a good faculty, and a student body of 125. Dr. Ernest Bourner Allen, pastor of Pilgrim Church, Oak Park, Ill., is one of the Directors. In response to an inquiry from me as to the situation he sent the following statement:



PRESIDENT VOELKER OF OLIVET

"Inasmuch as Olivet College when closed last year has stood in the minds of our Congregational constituency as a type of that disaster which would come to other of our Christian colleges, unless the denomination worked out a plan for adequate undergirding and help, it will interest the many friends of the college to know what splendid progress has been made as the result of the heartening gift of $25,000 made through the Congregational World Movement.

"The most enthusiastic and largely attended meeting of the Board of Trustees which has occurred in many years was held at the College recently. Encouraging reports of the outlook and present condition were made. Over $18,000 has been raised and paid out for permanent repairs, in addition to that secured for current expenses. A choice student body recruited in the brief period after Aug. 1 has been gathered together. The faculty includes some of the well-known and highly honored alumni of the college and is already a well-organized group, loyal to the traditions of the past, the ideals of Christian education and the opportunity of the new day.

* *

"A committee on increasing the present endowment was appointed, consisting of Mr. J. N. Klock, one of the new members of the Board elected by the Michigan Congregational Conference; Mr. George R. Wilson, of the A. W. Shaw Co., Chicago, one of the most energetic and loyal alumni; and myself. A fine senior class will be ready for graduation next June. The president and the faculty will readjust certain courses in line with the highest educational standards, having in this matter the skilled assistance of Pres. Charles McKenney, an alumnus and trustee of the college and now president of the Michigan State Normal. A rousing convocation was held at the usual chapel hour when the Board of Trustees was introduced to the student body and various addresses were made. Great enthusiasm accompanied by college songs and yells was manifested during the dinner hour at old Shipherd Hall.

"Congregationalists have always been pioneers in education and have stood for the highest type of training for their ministers. The tidal wave of students now engulfing our state universities and other schools is calling attention to the rare opportunity and unique service of our own smaller Christian colleges. The plan for co-operation with these colleges which is now being worked out by the denomination promises much for the future. We have determined that besides bragging about our educational institutions we will also back them to every reasonable limit."

* *

The evidence that the denomination is doing the thing that Dr. Allen has indicated is to be found in the fact that it has undertaken to raise a half million dollars in 1921 to take care of college deficits. It is also encouraging to find that in a number of states the colleges and the State Conference have already established a new relationship. This is especially true in Michigan where the Conference has representation on the Board of Trustees of Olivet. Apparently Congregationalists have no disposition to undertake to control their colleges, but there ought to be a very close relationship established so that the colleges may have the hearty support, moral and financial, of the churches, and so that the churches may look to the colleges to thoroughly Christianize their students and to send them back to be sympathetic leaders in the home church.

The whole course of our church life would be changed if the fine young people who attend our colleges could be given courses in the Bible, in teacher training, in the organization of the church school, in leadership of church music, and religious education, and the development of the all-round life of the youth in the church. The churches have money enough to finance their denominational institutions if they will give it, and the college can do for the young people it trains everything indicated above. Let's get together. R. W. G.

Chicago, Nov. 30.

The World the Pilgrim Fathers Knew

XI. The Pilgrims Cross the Sea

By Isaac Ogden Rankin

From Leyden to Plymouth, by rail and by steamer from Rotterdam and rail from Boston or New York is now a matter of less than a fortnight's travel. But Bradford and the Pilgrims were nearly half a year upon the way. Practically the whole distance was by water and at least three vessels had a share in carrying them, one on the canal to Delfshaven, one across the Channel to Southampton, and one on the Atlantic to Cape Cod and Plymouth. But having determined where they meant to go, they had first to make arrangements with the English authorities under whom they meant to live.

Reluctant King and Intolerant Bishops

The full story of the long negotiations between the Pilgrim Church in Leyden and the English commercial companies lies outside my plan. They were of necessity working at cross purposes for the Pilgrims wanted a religious freedom, a home and a place to grow, while the companies wanted money. The Leyden Pilgrims were still under the ban as Englishmen, but they were in demand as colonists. It was not easy to get the right sort of people, and especially the right sort of women, to go on such an adventure and endure the hardships of settlement. Indentured wives, to be wooed suddenly and paid for in tobacco, were sent to Virginia about the time the Pilgrims came—somewhat as "picture brides" were for some time sent from Japan to California. But nothing of that kind happened in New England, where the wives came with their husbands. Among the Mayflower passengers, for example, were seventy-three males and twenty-nine women and girls. It was the pilgrimage of a church built largely upon the full family life.

Delfshaven, Whence the Speedwell Sailed

The English theory of occupation and control in America at this time was not in substance different from the Spanish and Portuguese. Queen Elizabeth gave Sir Humphrey Gilbert a patent to take possession of "any remote, barbarous and heathen lands not possessed by any Christian prince or people." There was no question of self-determination for the Indians. But the Pilgrim idea, including as it did the thought of evangelism, was more liberal. They had, as Bradford writes, "A great hope & inward zeall of laying some good foundation, or at least to make some way therunto, for ye propagating & advancing ye gospell of ye kingdom of Christ in those remote parts of ye world; yea though they should be but as stepping stones unto others for ye performing of so great a work." And again, he writes: "The place they had thought on was some of those vast & unpeopled countries of America, which are fruitfull & fitt for habitation, being devoyd of all civill inhabitants, where ther are only salvage & brutish men, which range up and downe, litle otherwise than ye wild beasts of the same." There is a considerable difference in point of view between this and the Spanish invasions of Mexico and Peru, or even the charters and ambitions of Elizabeth and James in Carolina and Virginia.

English Friends and Foes

In the long and confused negotiations for permission to settle and be undisturbed in their religious life the Pilgrims had some influential friends in England. Chief among these was Sir Edwin Sandys, the son of Brewster's landlord at Scrooby Manor and grandson of the Archbishop of York. But the whole story of these negotiations is like the path across a swamp, difficult to find and slow and muddy in the going.

The king by this time was ready to wink at the religious independence of the Pilgrims for the sake of the commercial gains in which he hoped to share. But the Bishops were unyielding. There was dissension and desertion in the trading companies, which changed like a kaleidoscope. When the Pilgrims landed on Cape Cod they found themselves, or thought they found themselves, outside the jurisdiction of the company whose charter they held and, indeed, of any company whatever. Even their friends in England were divided: "For some of those yt should have gone—fell of & would not goe; other marchants & friends yt had offered to adventure their moneys withdrew, and pretended many excuses. Some disliking they wente not to Guiana: others agaíne would adventure nothing excepte they wente to Virginia. Some againe (and those that were most relied on) fell in utter dislike with Virginia, and would doe nothing if they wente thither. In ye midds of these distractions, they of Leyden, who had put of their estate and laid out their moneys, were brought into a great straight, fearing what issue these things would come too."

The only wonder is that under these conditions they got away at all. The sad result was that they came poorly provisioned and in winter time to an inhospitable shore and half of them died before the first seed could be put into the ground.

They had sent as agent and forerunner to England John Carver, afterward elected Governor upon the voyage. He had as coadjutor Robert Cushman, who seems to have been in England already. Carver had his quarters at Southampton, gathering stores. Cushman, who seems to have been rather an unstable soul and a wretched bargainer, conducted negotiations. He was forced into an agreement at the last moment, when it was too late for the Pilgrims to retreat, by which the colony was to become for seven years a communist society for the benefit of their financial backers and all gains were to be put into a common pool.

The Parting

It had been agreed in Leyden that the church should be divided and that only part should go at first on the great venture. As the larger half elected to remain, it claimed Pastor Robinson, so that Elder Brewster went out with the colony. There was a providence in that, for Brewster was probably better fitted for the hardships of the voyage and wilderness than Robinson. And the colony needed for a little the vigorous and wise support of Robinson and the Leyden company. The enemies of the church alleged that there had been a schism but this is earnestly denied by Winslow in words which must be quoted here: "For I persuade myself, never people upon earth lived more lovingly together and parted more sweetly than we, the church at Leyden, did; not rashly, in a distracted humor, but upon joint and serious deliberation, often seeking the mind of God by fasting and prayer; whose gracious presence we not only found with us, but his blessing upon us, from that time to this instant, to the indignation of our adversaries, the admiration of strangers, and the exceeding consolation of ourselves, to see such effects of our prayers and tears before our pilgrimage here be ended."

The Leyden Pilgrims, then, probably on the last day of July, both those who were to go and many of their friends from Leyden, journeyed, by canal, some 25 miles across the flat land of Holland from Leyden to Delfshaven on the Meuse, which is now a part of the great commercial city of Rotterdam.

Winslow tells us of the last night in Leyden: "And when the ship was ready to carry us away, the brethren that stayed having again solemnly sought the Lord with us and for us, and we further engaging ourselves mutually as before, they, I say, that stayed at Leyden feasted us that were to go at our pastor's house, being large; where we refreshed ourselves, after tears, with singing of psalms, making joyful melody in our hearts, as well as with the voice, there being many of our congregation very expert in music; and indeed it was the sweetest melody that ever mine ears heard." I should like to know what psalms and songs those friends through many trials sang together on that night of parting.

When they reached Delfshaven, "There was little sleep that night," Bradford tells us, "but the time was spent in friendly entertainment & Christian discourse and other reall expressions of true Christian love. The next day, the wind being faire, they went aborde and their friends with them. But ye tide (which stays for no man) calling them away yt were thus loath to departe, their Revered pastor, falling downe on his knees, (and they all with him) with watrie cheeks commended them with moste fervente praiers to the Lord and his blessing. And then with mutuall imbrases and many tears, they took their leaves one of an other; which proved to be ye last leave to many of them.

They had a short and favorable voyage across the Channel in the Speedwell, though they must have been much crowded together. And then in Southampton their troubles began. They found themselves in debt and pledged to a slavery seven years long, and they protested both to Cushman and in a letter to the merchant adventurers. They had to sell stores, largely butter in firkins, to pay debts which had been incurred. And they had to rearrange the passenger list, dividing the Leyden and the London Pilgrims between the Mayflower and the Speedwell.

The Pilgrim Ships

What were these two famous ships like? Bradford in his history never gives a name to either of them. They are "the larger and the lesser ship." Both were old. The Pilgrims owned the Speedwell, the "larger ship" was only hired. The Mayflower, of 180 tons burden, was considerably larger than most of the ships on which the famous voyages of that age were made. To take a modern comparison—the Gloucester fishing schooner Esperanto, which won the ocean race off Halifax in November was seven-ninths the Mayflower's size. But the Mayflower was a towering ship, high at the bows and stern, as many ocean tramps are today. She was herself an ocean tramp of her generation, now a whaler, now a carrier of goods, famous only because once in her career she carried the Pilgrim Church from the old world to the new. Romance has gathered about her. The attempt has ben made of late to show that she was one of the ships that fought off the invincible Armada of Spain in the year before Bradford was born. There was certainly a Mayflower and also a Speedwell, of something like the corresponding size in that proud fleet of England's sea mastery and the world's deliverance. Dr. Rendell Harris believes that her timbers are still in use as the framework of a huge barn in England, and has much to allege in evidence for his claim. Bradford evidently had few pleasant memories of the nine tedious weeks on board. It was a time of misery and extreme discomfort and Bradford was no great sailor, if we may judge by what he says of his sea experiences. The Pilgrims, it must be remembered, were mostly inlanders. Not one of them seems to have had any real acquaintance with the sea.

The Mayflower at Sea

For its time the Mayflower was a large ship. Two out of three of the ships of Columbus were not even decked, both of them were smaller than the Speedwell. The third, on which Columbus himself sailed was only of 100 tons to the 180 of the Mayflower. Henry Hudson's ship Discovery, in which he sailed to Hudson Bay, was of only 55 tons. But the Mayflower carried a colony and its household stuff to an unsettled wilderness. Most of the Pilgrims were mechanics, there must be room found for their tools. John Alden brought his cooper's adzes and hammers on board when he was hired for the voyage at Southampton. One man had taken the pains to fetch along from Leyden that big jackscrew which held the broken beam and saved the ship half way across the Atlantic. And there was a corner somehow for the Winslow cradle, which still survives. But there was little elbow room on board and no privacy at all.

The Pilgrims were unlucky in captains just as they had been in escaping from England to Holland. The captain of the Speedwell was a liar and a cheat, and Captain Jones of the Mayflower was something of a tyrant and was accused, wrongly, I think, of betraying them by a corrupt bargain with the Dutch. But they got away at last—only to be forced to put in first at Dartmouth and then, turning back from the last point of England, to Plymouth, where the Mayflower was loaded to capacity and the Speedwell, with the faint-hearted and too much encumbered people, was sent back to London, to speed no longer, well or ill, in the service of the Pilgrims.

There must have been an amazing amount of sheer discomfort on the Mayflower, whether she sailed before a favoring wind, or "incountered many times with crosse winds, and mette with many feirce stormes, when the ship was shroudly shaken, and her upper works made very leakie," or when a main beam threatened to give way or when the sailors were grumbling and threatening the passengers, or the seas were "so high, as they could not beare a knote of saile, but were forced to hull, for diverce days together." Between the fore and after decks the space was mainly taken up with the shallop, where some of the Pilgrims used to sit or lie in pleasant weather. They had experience of birth and death. There were 102 passengers of all ages crowded into a common room, which in bad weather was entirely without ventilation. They cooked in iron pots over fire made in a bed of sand. Many of them were seasick, and some of them seem to have been seasick much of the time. There was no chance of exercise, water was scarce and soon grew bad. The beer, of which they had good store, both for the outward and the return voyages of the ship, seems to have been doled out grudgingly. Cushman complains of its quality in his letter before the start. John Alden, hero of Longfellow's rather unveracious romance, was hired when they were at Southampton to take care of the casks. In the sick time after landing Governor Bradford had a quarrel with the captain because he could get no beer, which was all to be reserved for the ship's company on the return voyage. We have an echo of thirst and distaste on board in the delight expressed by Bradford when the first spring on the Cape was found: "But at length they found water and refreshed themselves, being ye first New England water they drunke of, and was now in thir great thirste as pleasante unto them as wine or bear had been in for-times." And Winslow gives careful advice to intending colonists: "Let your cask for beer and water be iron-bound for the first tire, if not more."

Their Good Fortune

The Pilgrims were fortunate, on their crowded ship in the autumn time, in having so little serious sickness. What a long voyage might mean three hundred years ago we may gather from the experience of Magellan on the Pacific when they were 98 days out of sight of land. "For most of these 98 days," says the article in the "Encyclopedia Britannica," "the explorers had no fresh provisions, little water (and that bad) and putrid biscuits, the rages of scurvy became terrible. The worst anticipations of Magellan (he would push on if they had to eat the leather of the rigging) were realized, ox-hides, sawdust and rats became coveted food."

The Pilgrims were not so unfortunate but that there were few romantic notions gendered in their brains by recollections of the Mayflower we may gather from that echo of their experience preserved for us in Captain John Smith's "History of New England," published within four years of that landing of the exploring party of the Pilgrims on Plymouth beach which we celebrate as Forefathers' Day:

"But being pestered nine weeks in this leaking, unwholesome ship, lying wet in their cabins, most of them grew very weake and weary of the sea; then for want of experience, ranging two and againe six weeks (on shore) before they found a place they liked to dwell on, forced to lie on the bare ground without coverture, forty of them died, and three score were left in a very weake state at the ship's comming away, about the fifth of April following."

And yet was not Nathanial Morton justified when he could write of them: "Ought not and may not the children of these fathers rightly say, our fathers were Englishmen, which came over the great ocean, and were ready to perish in this wilderness; but they cried unto the Lord, and he heard their voice, and looked on their adversity. Let them therefore praise the Lord, because he is good and his mercy endureth forever; yea, let them who have been the redeemed of the Lord, show how he delivered them from the hand of the oppressor"?

(Chapter X, French and Dutch Adventures in America before the Pilgrims Came, has been displaced and will follow next.)

> From gushing multitudinous hearts we now thank these lowly men that they dared to be true and brave. Conformity or compromise might, perhaps, have purchased for them a profitable peace, but not peace of mind; it might have secured place and power, but not repose; it might have opened a present shelter, but not a home in history and in men's hearts till time shall be no more. All will confess the true grandeur of their example, while, in vindication of a cherished principle, they stood alone, against the madness of men, against the law of the land, against their king. Better be the despised Pilgrim, a fugitive for freedom, than the halting politician, forgetful of principle.—Charles Sumner, at Plymouth Festival, Aug. 1, 1853.

Another Bethlehem

A Christmas Story

By Shepherd Knapp

Part II.

That same night in the home of a working man in Bethlehem, Emmanuel King sat on the floor, faced by three eager children, to whom he was telling stories. He had reached the house at the very end of their Christmas, but they had welcomed him joyously at the door with a chorus of Merry Christmases. Their father, John Mann, had called out to his wife, who was drying the dishes in the kitchen, "Here's Emmanuel," and she had come to the kitchen door, towel in hand, to add her greeting. Emmanuel had been shown the tiny Christmas tree on the table in the corner, with its single string of tinsel. He had seen the gifts, mostly things to wear—mittens, a cap, a hair ribbon. And he had viewed the glory of the one unuseful gift that the family purse had been able to afford, the sled, which was to be used in turn by all the children: even the very littlest was to be given rides on it.

And now, while their mother was putting the youngest child to bed, and their father, smoking his pipe, looked down on them from the height of the rocking chair, the three were listening to Emmanuel's stories. He had told them the story of the first Christmas, the story of the birth of Christ in Bethlehem of Judea, and had straightened out, what was always a perplexity to their childish minds, the fact that the Bethlehem in the gospel story was not their Bethlehem, no, not even like it, he said, though theirs was named after the other. And did they want to hear how theirs was named, far back in the days of the Indians? They said they did, and he told them of the Christmas day long before the Revolutionary War when the little group of Moravian Christians, living in the first house of the settlement, with cattle under the same roof with themselves, with the forest and the snow and the fear of Indians all around them, had sung together a quaint old carol with repetition of the name of Bethlehem, and forthwith had chosen that name to be the name of the coming city, which now, after more than a hundred and fifty years, was so busy with its stores and mills, so proud with its many schools and churches. The children liked that story, though they had hoped perhaps that Indians would play a larger part in it.

It was now time for all the little folks to go to bed, their mother helping; and the two men were left together.

No sooner were they alone, than John Mann exclaimed to his friend, "You've won, Emmanuel."

"Do you mean it?" the other answered eagerly, leaning forward.

"Yes; all the week I've been plagued with it. I felt I ought to take the step, as you've kept urging, but I didn't feel ready to bend my own will to the Christ's, as you say a Christian must. I've wanted for a good while to do the right thing, as you know, but I've wanted to do it in my own way. It's been mighty hard to give that up: and I've pulled back strong against it. But something—conscience, perhaps—or you—or he—has kept pushing me. Do you know when it was that I decided? It was just now, while you were telling the kids the story of his birth. It seemed as though he were born again in me."

"I knew it would come," his friend said, with happiness in his eyes, "but I had not realized it was so near. I thought you would perhaps need more time, more light, some new experience, before you would take the final step."

"The one thing," said the other, "that has been harder for me to get over than anything else has been your insisting that, if I want to be a Christian, I've got to think and work, not only for people of my own sort, working men like myself, but for all sorts. That includes our employers, of course, who seem to me to be perfectly well able to look out for themselves. You know how I've felt about that."

"Yes: bitter; prejudiced."

"But you yourself," said John Mann, "have admitted that there's cause for it."

"Some cause," Emmanuel answered; "but often you go beyond the limit of the cause. You have hated on mere report; on mere suspicion. You could see no good; could believe all evil. But all the time I felt sure that your heart was capable of a deeper and truer reaction. For I know how in actual cantact with actual men—your own comrades, for instance; even those of them whom you do not personally like—you are not necessarily governed by your prejudices. You have your prejudices, strong likes and dislikes; but once you find some man in actual need, in actual trouble, you can strip your prejudices from you as a man strips off his coat to leap to the rescue of one drowning. But your hatred and prejudices with regard to the whole employer class gains headway, because you never come into personal contact with them. And yet, if you are to serve the great cause of human welfare, not merely the selfish cause of one class, you must surmount your prejudices. That is why I've been set on your becoming a Christian, and why I've insisted that Christianity demands the mastery of that prejudice, and the service of all. Also, it is only the broad deep Christian motive that will give you a strong enough incentive to continue to work for progress, when the sharp sting which prejudice has supplied, is gone."

"It's a high ideal," John Mann admitted.

"Yet perhaps it is nearer and more practical than you think," his friend continued. "You have heard of William Knowles?"

"One of our masters!" exclaimed the other, with a tone of bitterness. "An absentee owner, at that. A part of the stone wall against which we break our heads in our demands for higher wages and better conditions; but the wall isn't hurt. And yet you say that as a Christian I must make my fight, not against him, but for a larger good that'll take him in. It's right, and I hold to my pledge to try for it. Yes, it's right: but it's hard."

"I wish," said Emmanuel King, in quiet tones, "that you might meet William Knowles face to face."

"I? Meet him? How?—I should like to know. You might as well suggest my meeting the angel Gabriel. Notice," he added with a sly smile, "I don't say the devil Lucifer."

His friend smiled also. "But seriously," Emmanuel continued, "suppose a way should open, would you do your best to meet him in a generous spirit, go half way, as the saying is?"

"What you mean to ask, Emmanuel, is whether my new Christianity really amounts to anything, whether it will stand up under a real test. Well, honestly, I'd try; I'd mean to be generous, to meet him half way, as you say. A man can't promise more than that, even if he is a Christian. This is a new business for me, remember, this trying to think about everybody at the same time. I'm glad that, for the present, such a test of it as meeting William Knowles is only imaginary."

"Perhaps not so entirely imaginary as you suppose."

"But how could it actually happen? Tell me, in the name of common sense."

"I may not be able just now to explain to you the whole of the possibility, as I see it; but suppose, for instance, that William Knowles should become interested in you because of your known leadership among the men; and because he has reason to think of you as a man with an open mind, more than the average; and because—suppose it, just by way of argument—because deep in himself there was something that answered sympathetically to what he found in you: in that case it would not be difficult to imagine a meeting between you, would it?"

"Oh, of course if you suppose half a dozen impossible things," said John Mann, "you can prove anything you please."

"Well," said the other, "keep your eye open for the impossible: that's all I say."

"You do love a mystery, Emmanuel," said John Mann, looking at his friend with a combination of interest and amusement.

"Perhaps," Emmanuel admitted, adding, "all life is a mystery, and I love life. I love it for its mysterious hope and promise. Is it necessary today—on Christmas Day—for me to plead my right to do that?—on Christmas, when the whole world remembers in happy reverence the birth of a little child, the mystery of new life, the mystery of a new ideal of life, born into the old world. And surely I do not need to excuse myself to you, John Mann, of all people, to you in whom that little child, that new ideal, has on your own showing been born again today, a new Nativity."

* * * * * * *

At seven o'clock on the sixth of January, William Knowles and his two friends, the doctor and the judge, waited in a room at the old Sun Hotel in Bethlehem, for the fulfillment of the letter's promise.

Promptly at the hour Emmanuel King was announced and shown into the room.

"At least," thought the judge, while the formal words of meeting were exchanged, "we are dealing with a normal intelligent man: that is one comfort."

"Mr. Knowles," Emmanuel King began at once, "I owe it to you to come directly to the point. What I could not wisely tell you in my letter I tell you now. I have found your son."

For a moment there was silence. William Knowles looked intently into the eyes of the man who had spoken the momentous words: his friends, anxious for the effect upon him of the sudden news, looked at him.

"You have found him," Knowles repeated, as though to assure himself that the words had actually been spoken. Then—"Where is he?"

"He is here in Bethlehem. I can take you to him, whenever you desire it."

"Does he bear my name?"

"No, and of his own identity or his relation to you he, as yet knows nothing."

"His circumstances. He is poor?"

"He is a working man, an employee in the steel works, on a wage that suffices, though it barely suffices, to keep his family."

"He is married, then. And has he children?"

"He is married and has had six children: four of them are living."

"His wife?"

"A woman of the people; plain, simple, kind; he loves her."

"He has had few advantages, or none, I assume."

"None—except a healthy body, a sound mind, a good heart. He has had the minimum of

THE SHIP THAT SAILED AWAY

By Samuel Valentine Cole

A hundred ships at anchor lay,
Although the wind blew down the bay
And all the roads were free;
They fell and lifted with the tide,
As if the world, however wide,
Had naught for them to do beside—
But one ship put to sea.

How fair they looked, with bulwarks high
And masts that pointed to the sky,
In golden light or grey!
But somehow fairer seemed to me—
Although herself I could not see
Except in dreams and mistily—
The ship that sailed away.

The harbor is a quiet place
Where danger seldom lifts its face;
But out beyond the bay
The mile-long billows roar and sweep,
And the storm-giant treads the deep
With fearful footstep—heaven keep
The ship that sailed away!

When tides that roll and winds that blow,
And man's ambitious heart say "Go,"
The harbor's word is "Stay";
Yet courage is the power that brings
Whatever blessing round us springs,
And ships are waste and useless things
Unless they sail away.

The poets and the sages teach
That 'tis by ventures bold we reach
Our Indies or Cathay;
The Argo, Maria, Golden Hind,
Mayflower, and Roosevelt, do you mind,
Discovered realms for humankind
Because they sailed away.

How nobly now the crown of fame
Rests on the vessel with the name
That wears the flower of May!
Undaunted by the perils hurled
Across her path, with sails unfurled
She bore the seed that changed the world—
Thank God she sailed away!

A hundred ships at anchor ride,
Moved with the moving of the tide;
They have their idle day;
But voices from beyond the bar,
And golden dreams of goals afar,
Make evermore men's hope and star
The ship that sails away.

education required by law. Beyond that, nothing. He has had no financial help or backing from any quarter; for he has had no friends except men as poor and, in a worldly way, as powerless as himself. He has had no time for study or reading. Yet he has made a home for his wife and children, such as it is—a roof, a shelter, the bare necessities of a physical existence, and the happiness that comes with love and courage. Also, he has the confidence of his fellow working men. He is a leader among them. They trust him for his good sense and for his integrity."

In the pause that followed, the doctor, laying his hand on his friend's arm, said, "Sit down, Knowles. You'll need time to hear the whole story. Take it as easy as you can, old man."

As they seated themselves—Knowles indicating a seat to Emmanuel King—the judge said, "I assume, of course, that you can provide definite proofs of the identification which you have made, proofs upon which we also can pass judgment."

"The evidence," Emmanuel King replied, "is, I feel sure, complete; the essential facts can all be verified; as you will learn from this report, which I have written out, of the steps which led to my discovery." He handed several typewritten pages to Mr. Knowles. "Will you read it," he asked, "or shall I tell you the story by word of mouth?"

"I prefer to hear you tell it," answered Knowles, and handed the papers to Judge Wittington, who went aside with them to a table, and sat there examining them while the story was being told. Yet he was at the same time listening to what was said, and indeed was checking up the points made in the spoken story with the proofs offered by the papers.

The narrative in its bare outline was as follows. The chain of events had begun five years before, when the name "John Mann," already known slightly to Emmanuel King as that of a young leader among the steel workers, was spoken in the dying confession of a woman in St. Luke's Hospital in Bethlehem. She had asked for a clergyman, and Emmanuel King, though not an ordained man, was so frequent a visitor in the hospital, seeking out the friendless and destitute among the patients there, that the doctors and nurses had come to regard him as the unofficial chaplain. It was he, therefore, to whom the dying woman told her story; how twenty-five years before, with the hope of enriching herself and an accomplice, she had stolen from his parents a child entrusted to her care as nurse; how she had taken but the first step, traveling with the child from New York to Philadelphia, when she became terrified at what she had done, and, dreading equally the punishment for her lawless deed and the anger of the accomplice whom she was deserting, had left Philadelphia a few hours after reaching it, choosing at random her new destination, and had thus arrived at Bethlehem; how she had there deserted the child, taking extra precaution to baffle inquiry by writing the false name, "John Mann," on a slip of paper and pinning it to the child's dress. Her feeling for the child so far got the better of her fears that, after making a wide circle, she returned to the place where she had left him, to assure herself that he had been found. Some one had already taken him away: nor did she ever know what had become of him.

Had it not been for his familiarity with the name "John Mann," Emmanuel King might not have attempted to make any practical use of the confession which he had heard, or, had he attempted it, might not have succeeded. But provided with that clue and with the names and dates which the woman had given in answer to his questions, he was able to trace the strange story both backward and forward, proving that the child whom she had stolen and deserted, was, on the one hand, the son of William Knowles, the well-known New York financier, and, on the other, the Bethlehem steel worker, whose childhood had been spent in the Bethlehem orphanage known as the Children's Home. The records of that institution showed that he had been received as a foundling on a date which corresponded with that given in the woman's story; and there was, besides, the still more important evidence provided by the clothes which the child had worn when found, carefully preserved by the institution in accordance with its custom in such cases.

"Judge," said William Knowles, when the long story had been told in full detail, "can I believe this?"

"If," said the judge deliberately, "the evidence, which Mr. King in his narrative, and more precisely in these papers, describes as being in existence, does actually exist—and I see no motive for deception in a matter that can be so speedily put to the test—then I have no doubt that the story which we have heard is true."

"Mr. King," said William Knowles, "I must see my son at once. And yet," he added, turning to his two friends, "do you wonder that I shrink from it? He is a man of thirty-two: I am nearly sixty, and there is no bond whatever between us, except the blood in our veins?"

"There is one other bond," said Emmanuel King.

"What other bond? You have already shown that in education, in experience, in outlook, in surroundings, we belong to two different worlds."

"You are both Christians."

"God forgive me, I had forgotten the possibility of that. Both Christians! If only—" he paused.

Emmanuel King read his unspoken thought, and put it into words: "If only religion is a vital reality to both of you, you would say." Knowles nodded, silent. "For John Mann it is," said the other. "I can vouch for that."

"I was thinking of myself," said Knowles, in a low voice. "When the need comes that religion should suddenly serve as the main pivot on which one's whole life turns, the question whether it is strong enough, real enough, is a serious one to face."

It was arranged that, after John Mann had been prepared in some measure by Emmanuel King for the strange eperience, the father should at first go alone to meet him. His friends without his knowledge, unwilling to stay at a distance, lest they should suddenly be needed, paced patiently up and down the sidewalk on the opposite side of the street, Emmanuel King with them, till the lights in all the other windows visible to right or left had been extinguished one by one. But no call for their presence or assistance came; and at the appointed time, late in the night, they mounted the dingy stairway to the third-story tenement, where their friend and his son had been finding one another through the preceding hours.

At their first knock William Knowles was on his feet, and he seemed to them, when they saw him, like one from whose shoulders a great weight had rolled away. His voice was stronger, his eye clearer, his whole manner younger and more confident.

"This," he said, grasping the arm of the younger man who stood beside him, "is my son: and this is his wife, my daughter."

"And now sit down," he continued, himself taking one of the kitchen chairs, which Emmanuel King, foreseeing a shortage, carried in, "sit down; for my son and I have come to a decision which will surprise you.

"My own first thought," he said, "was, I confess, that the life of which my son had been robbed all these years could now be restored to him; in short, that he and his family could come at once to me, and share all that I have; but he feels, and I feel, after he has explained his own feeling to me, that whatever changes come to him now must not take from him his own life. And his life is the life of a working man among working men—yes, and for working men, for I can see that it is by no means of his own personal tastes or choices only that he is thinking. But he cannot work in that way for working men unless he is a working man himself; and he cannot be a working man, trusted and followed by his comrades, if he at the same time tries to live as the wealthy son of William Knowles. He means, therefore, to live on in this same sort of home, to wear the same sort of clothes, to stick to his job, as though the events of this sixth of January had not taken place. For the children, he agrees to let me make sure that their clothes, though as plain as before, shall never lack anything of necessary warmth; that their food, though as plainly cooked and served, shall never lack in abundance or the qualities of nourishment; and that they shall continue their education as long as they can truly profit by it. Also, the fear of old age and disabling sickness is once and forever lifted from his own shoulders—but of that, as long as he continues well and strong, no one but ourselves will know. In short, he keeps his own place in the world, the place he has made for himself, unchanged in all essentials."

"Except for one thing," John Mann broke in. "From now on, mixed up with whatever I try to do for men of my own kind, there will always be the fact that now I know, as a man knows a man, one at least of the people I used to think of just as our enemies—my father. Emmanuel," he said, turning to his friend, "you were right. Christianity, when it says that we must work for everybody at once, all sorts, all classes, the whole world, isn't just a beautiful ideal: it's plain common sense. A fellow sees that, when once he really sees both sides. I think I won't be able to forget it any more, because now, through my father, I can see the other half."

"And I," said his father, "have a son among the working men. Never again will I say or think of them, as I often have, 'They have chance enough, if they will only use it; they are as well off as they deserve; they would have more, if they were worth more.' When I see my own son as one of them I feel differently—I know differently. I have lived too much in my own class. From now on I must live for his class also; for the whole, as you say. Judge, Doctor," he continued, turning to his friends, "we called ourselves wise men—do you remember?—when we planned this journey, but I find a truer wisdom at the journey's end."

"So was it," said Emmanuel King, "with three other wise men once, in another Bethlehem long ago. Though they came bearing gifts of price, they went away far richer than when they came."

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

If a single member is separated from the body of the church on Sunday morning, the whole body is crippled.

League of the New Day

Next Week's Readings and Prayers

Week of Dec. 20–26

Monday. A Call to Trust. Matt. 6:19-34.

Tuesday. Forefathers' Day. 1 Chron. 29:10-20; 1 Kings 8:54-62.

Wednesday. The Vineyard. Mark 12:1-17.

Thursday. The Great Commandment. Mark 12:28-44.

Friday. Our Strength and King. Ps. 46, 47.

Saturday. Christmas Day. Luke 2:1-20.

Sunday. Desiring God. Ps. 42.

Object for Intercession

For the Mothers of Little Children:

Remember, O Lord, those to whom thou hast entrusted the care and training of the lives of those who shall be the citizens and the leaders of the world hereafter. Give them grace to trust in thee. Give help in weariness and wisdom in teaching. Uphold and provide for them and for the children of their nurture, and let their Christmastide be joyful. In the name of Christ who was once a child in Bethlehem. Amen.—R.

Department of Religious Drama and Pageantry

Conducted by Mary Alice Emerson, Ph.D

SOME NEW DRAMAS

One of the significant plays being given many times this month is "Lighting the Christmas Candles." This is a simple but heart-stirring appeal for the women and girls of America to light the candles of their less fortunate sisters in the Orient. It is hoped that $10 from 100,000 men and women and smaller gifts from colleges will make Christmas, 1920, a day never to be forgotten by Japan, China and India.

The play was given in Jordan Hall, Dec. 4, by the Lend-a-Hand Dramatic Club. In the opening scene was shown a gaily decorated Christmas tree and a table laden with beautiful but somewhat superfluous gifts. The children of the family danced about the tree, each choosing a candle to light for his own pleasure. When the children had been sent to bed, the Spirit of Christmas came in and examined the gifts.

Presently after a timid knock a Japanese student entered from Tokio College, bearing an unlighted candle. She begged that one light be spared, but the Spirit said, "Christmas is a busy time and people have so little money." The girl departed sadly while the Spirit recalled that in 1919 the candy bill was $500,000,000, and the perfumery bill $180,000,000.

Then followed eager pleaders from Peking, Ginling, Lucknow, Madras and Vellore Colleges. The girls slipped away sorrowfully, but as the invisible choir sang "It came upon the midnight clear," they returned and clung to the Spirit of Christmas. The Spirit turned to the audience and after an eloquent plea said, "May I light these candles in His name and yours? Will you help?" There was a generous response, "You may. We will."

The play is full of the spirit of "the birthday of the King."

"The Christmas Guest" is being given with some variations this Christmas. The play is brief and requires little in the way of costuming. By a home fire, four children are talking with their mother about their new gifts of cloak and hood, mittens and fur-lined shoes. The mother is called away, and a beggar knocks at the door. After a little hesitation the children feed him and put on to him their own new gifts of cloak and hood, mittens and shoes. When he departs with grateful thanks, the radiance shining through the window tells them that they have entertained the Christmas Angel.

"The Song for the King" is a simple exercise requiring only three young people and an older person, though it might easily be enlarged. A brother and two sisters discuss what will be the best Christmas song to sing when the chimes ring midnight on Christmas.

The boy says a glad, merry glee will be just the thing since every one is happy on Christmas, and he practices an old English wassail song. One of the girls says it should be a story with "lots of action," and she chooses "Good King Wenceslaus." The third says it should be worship, and sing "O come, all ye faithful." When their father enters, they appeal to him and he chooses "We three Kings of Orient are," because it suggests gifts in return for Christ's "great gift of himself." As the clock strikes twelve an invisible choir is heard singing "The whole wide world for Jesus." All say together, "The song for the King," and repeat softly the chorus.

A Larger Program for the Federal Council

Fourth Quadrennial Meeting in Boston

By Rev. Frederick B. Noyes

We are all made of the same stuff, but that stuff has innumerable variations, and nowhere has this protean masquerade been more in evidence than in American sectarianism. And yet something has happened in Boston, the week from Dec. 1 to 6, to satisfy all that humanity sweeps onward. The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America has so spiritually committed Protestantism to a larger program, that the delegates all returned home with the undefinable impression that we are on the threshold of a united church.

If we confound votes and resolutions with a subtle spiritual transformation, we shall not go far in finding the value of this great meeting. If we look to a church conference to take sides with our prejudices we shall be disappointed in the findings of this body of five hundred representative Americans. The paramount interest of these churchmen has been to create a will to unity. Is not that enough to achieve now?

Dr. Frank Mason North, as President for the past four years swung into line all the Protestant churches of the nation, under the impulse of the war, and Dr. Robert Speer aims to steady things, to prepare the church for measures ahead. It is not a time for too much initiative. No sentence was cheered more than that of Nehemiah Boynton, in applying a quotation of Emerson to the times. "The Concord philosopher said, 'I do not care to see my friends very often, but I just want to know that they are there.'" After picturing the pathos of the torn and bleeding world, he closed with the words, "It is sitting in its wretchedness, waiting to know whether America is there."

Dr. Boynton believes in the individual touch through the friendly visitor. As an American he has just returned from making this human approach in France. At Rheims he first wanted to weep and then wanted to swear. He did not say which mood won.

The Church and the Government

This is the Council's utility in American life. During the war the main body convened only once, in 1916, but it was always "there." The government oftentimes was asking, not what is the opinion of a particular Christian denomination, but, what is the Christian sentiment of this nation. What do the churches of America want done, and how can they be reached in a united way? In the very nature of the case, the government could not adapt its policies to a denominational or sectarian plan, but when a body composed of representatives of the evangelical churches, and constituted in such a way as to stand for pure Protestantism in the United States made its approach and appeal, the government recognized something "there" to deal with.

Never before was the relation of free churches to a free government so well defined as by Bishop McDowell of the Methodist Church, in his paper on "The Church in its relation to the National Government." As the government shows preference for dealing with one body, the Council's Washington office can be serviceable in arranging innumerable interviews and hearings and in presenting memorials. The coming Congress should not be left to moral exposure, but the sacramental character of government itself should appear in this new crisis in the world's history. A spiritualized government is needed to heighten the morale of government.

Applause greeted the Bishop's epigram, "Neither Romanism nor Protestantism as such has a claim on official positions as such." Anything that performs a sacramental service like the cabinet of any administration, deserves to be spoken of with respect and not the flippancy shown by the newspaper that said Secretary Colby's first official duty should be "to find out the exits of the State Department" as he was likely to be "fired" as was his predecessor.

Rev. Robert E. Speer
President of the Federal Council

Chaplains Axton of the Army and Fraser of the Navy presented the churches' obligations in providing chaplains, admitting that there were now only eighty chaplains where one hundred and forty were required. There were ships with nine hundred men having no chaplains. The army officer closed with the words of Canon Westcott, "Great ideas perish unless they find lodgment in societies, societies perish unless they embody great ideas."

Industry and Rural Life

The discussion of the industrial question was refreshing in its scoring of doctrinaires and its dispassionate approach. Most religious conventions hand down verdicts on capital and labor, though they are rarely ever judicial verdicts. They are discounted as the utterances of ill-informed clergy at white heat. The Federal Council substituted an intellectual process for the usual emotional one in such gatherings. Both sides were presented and the spirit of the body seemed to be a conviction that the question is about "fifty-fifty." Just as much humanity on the side of capital as on the side of organized labor. There was both fearlessness and diplomacy in the words of Bishop Francis J. McConnell in the meeting on Sunday afternoon that handled "The Christian Challenge to Co-operation between Employers and Employees."

President Thompson of Ohio State University, President Butterfield of Amherst, Bishop Nicholson of Illinois, Dr. Taylor of Indiana, described with great insight the desperate situation of the rural churches. The war and the Interchurch survey helped us to discover this startling fact. It was shown that in the Middle West the districts where the soil is very poor and also where it is the best are most destitute of churches. The cause for this condition in the latter districts is due to the system of land tenancy. Religion and the home are very intimately associated. On the richest land there are no homes, only corn cribs. The owners of the land live in the cities. The rural problem is created by these great estates. One owner said, "Us land-hogs are doing for rural Missouri what Germany did for Belgium." There is no vital, continuing spiritual leadership in whole counties.

The agrarian situation is as acute as the industrial. The community church by making the county a federation unit has reached out into these vast areas.

Rev. E. Tallmadge Root, the Secretary of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches, received two tributes from the floor of the Council for what he has already accomplished in the field of interdenominational co-operation. He was presented to the Council by the retiring President, Dr. North, as "youthful in appearance, but an old-timer in the work." Dr. Butterfield believes that the church, while central, is still weaker than other institutions in the rural districts.

The racial question was never absent from the sessions. Dr. Vance's mention of certain facts scientifically presented in Lothrop Stoddard's book, "The Rising Tide of Color," facts that cannot be blinked, caused one delegate to characterize the volume as "the wickedest book of the ages." The intense race consciousness of some of the members of the Council led to the bringing of this book several times into the forefront of discussion. But when inter-racial problems actually appeared on the program as the order of the day in the last session, Bishop J. H. Jones of Wilberforce, O., Bishop of the African Methodist Church, made a deep impression by asking the North to respond to the plaint of the South and help keep the colored people there. His closing appeal was restrained but moving. "I do not wish to seem to lecture you. We colored people cannot do this. Your voices can reach white people of the South. You speak for us."

Dr. George E. Haynes asked that the Negro be guaranteed fair treatment in the actual affairs of life, in the schools, courts, ballot, industrial opportunity, and declared the acid test of our national Christianity and our professed sympathy with other darker races, was in our treatment of the Negro at home.

Religious Education

President King of Oberlin outlined a constructive program of religious education. Characterizing the stupendous failure of Germany's system of education as "training for intoxication of power and deification of force," he showed the comparative failing of our own system on the ideal side. The deeper life of the people can only be touched by the scientific spirit, the historical mind, the æsthetic attitude and religious discernment. He drew with much effect the parallel between the pursuit of truth and the pursuit of duty, and closed with this motto for the teacher, "I will help the child to conquer himself whatever it may cost me."

Dean Henry B. Washburn of the Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge said we should consider some of the opposing historical interpretations of the sixteenth century as "magnificent bits of emphasis." We should also look back to the first century and see first of all the unity of faith and only secondarily the unity of church government.

The theologian can revolutionize the whole basis of our seminary teacher by his ability to express religious experience. Faculties and students should be estimated not by their theological views, but by the kind of life they lead. He plead for interdenominational lecture rooms in our seminaries. "This would not level us down where we all agree but would give opportunity for each to express his own warm, vital Christian experience as a humble contribution to the co-operative ideal."

Great Moments

It is absolutely impossible to measure the output of this quadrennial meeting of five hundred men and women picked from thirty-one denominations, each one representing an average of fifty thousand church members. It would take the highest art to represent on a page of The Congregationalist an impression equivalent to that made by this original, unique, national body. Reducing the scale a few great moments may be recalled—

When Dr. North introduced his successor, Dr. Speer, in the evening session in the Old South Meeting-house, with these words, "That mighty chaplain who believes that the movement for co-operation is absolutely undefeatable."

When Dr. Edwin H. Delk of St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, with singular dramatic power, portrayed the fair-haired German and the Romanist poilu lying side by side in the grass, after having bayonetted each other in the charge on a great battlefield in 1918. All force and hate was spent and each was reaching for something to give him peace in his dying moments. The German found his mother's New Testament and kissed it, the Frenchman's broken arm was unavailing so Saxon Protestant found in French Catholic's breast the crucifix and held it to his foe's lips in death. "If religion can so unite in death, why not in life?"

When Dr. Blakeley said, "Evangelism is more of a passion than a method;" when Robert Speer said, "The race question is not a menace but an omen that the Parliament of Man is about to be staged," and when he, as President of the Federal Council, took the hands of Bishop Gaylor of Memphis, Tenn., and Bishop Talbot of Bethlehem, Pa., standing on the platform between the two.

Amusing Statements

Some amusing statements were made. Dr. Thompson quoted the man who didn't believe in Foreign Missions. "I believe the world is going to the devil. I'm a regular old optimist."

When Henry van Dyke played with the memory of the Pilgrim Fathers, saying they were a quiet and peaceful folk except when provoked, they were strict Calvinists, but with a spirit that made up for that. Contrasting the Pilgrims with his own Dutch ancestors, he declared there was a mighty small difference between them, one was a religious community with commercial principles, the other a commercial community with religious principles. "The Pilgrim Fathers left Amsterdam because the accent on the last syllable was too strong for them."

One delegate said that he was announced as a candidate for a Presbyterian pulpit "from Princeton Zoological Cemetery," and another said he did not reason himself out of Christian Science, but got out because he was "tired of being so blooming happy."

It was a great moment when Herbert Hoover declared it to be a greater thing to have the American flag flying in the hearts of the three and a half million of children he is trying to save, than to have it flying over every citadel of Europe.

One delegate was overheard to say that he had found the housing conditions of Boston worse than those of Pittsburgh, only you couldn't see them in the latter city. But the historic appeal of Boston was deeply appreciated. Dr. Ramsay was much moved by Concord and Lexington. Many delegates went to the State House to see the Bradford manuscript.

The Spirit of United Protestantism

The Council did not fade out. The interest of the delegates persisted to the end. Perhaps the revelation of the spirit of this quadrennial meeting of united Protestantism appeared in this striking fact more than in anything else.

There was a depressed mood at one point when speakers followed one another in quick succession, emphasizing the suspicion and distrust in the air of today, and claiming that the zone of hatred had widened immensely in the past four years.

But from the moment Bishop Lawrence arose to preside at the banquet on Monday night at the City Club, a steady ascent was made. His tribute to the ethical type contributed to our national life by the Jews, and his spontaneous comment at the end of Dr. Ramsay's appeal for the future friendship of the English-speaking nations, prepared the way for the reconciling message given an hour later in Park Street Church at the closing session of the Council.

Dr. Ramsay had mentioned the great words of Grant, that he had just found on his tomb in New York, "Let us have peace." Bishop Lawrence was cheered by the Council rising immediately from the banquet tables when at the end of Dr Ramsay's fine appreciation of America he said, "We wish you, sir, to take back to England the echo from our hearts of your words and sentiments."

And so the final moment contained resolutions recognizing the world unrest and authorizing the administrative committee to present to the President-elect and the Senate the hope of the churches that some acceptable way may be found for our participation in the League of Nations.

The resolutions also satisfied all who believe in fairness to the Jews and enforcement of prohibition.

But the one supreme occasion that turned all from the outward to the inward through its symbolism that hushed the delegates in the presence of the real Christian spirit was the great meeting Friday evening in Trinity Church. This occasion is something for future church historians to study and explain. There was no basketful of federation plans here, but a lifelike gesture—when General Nivelle kissed President King and feelingly pointed to the "Star-spangled Banner," actually using our own phrase for our flag. When Dr. Gillie of London said the Pilgrims not only dreamed of a new world but created it. When John R. Mott pleaded for an international network, a unity of control, which will express not the dark evil shadow of nationalism but a passional nationality made through common experience and memory, all felt the Tercentenary had touched all communions. In the words of the real fighter, after such a thriller, we are ready "to go on the mat" of the new era.

Tercentenary Preparations at Plymouth

Actual work was started at the Rock in Plymouth, Mass., on Monday, Dec. 6. There are three separate pieces of work planned. First, all the buildings on the land to be taken as a Reservation will be removed. This means all land from the brook to what is known as Brewster Street. Another project is to dredge the harbor and construct a pile wharf; while the third is to remove Pilgrim wharf, remove the canopy over Plymouth Rock and lower the Rock to its original position. This is the contract which the papers of a few days ago said, "The contract to move Plymouth Rock has been given," then told how Plymouth Rock was to be moved at some distance. The Rock is where it always has been but a little higher. This third piece of work has been contracted for and work actually begun.

Powers Brothers of Brockton, Mass., have the work in charge and expect to push it along as fast as weather will permit. One other piece of work has been completed, at least as far as it will be carried for the present, the removal of the houses on the side of Burial Hill. Looking from Court Street the hill now looks as one can think that it might once have looked, coming down in gentle slope to Russel and School Streets.

Autoists will be glad to know that Plymouth and some of the neighboring towns are doing good work, with the help of the state, on their roads in anticipation of next year.

Plans for Dec. 21 are beginning to take shape in Plymouth. The celebration by the State Tercentenary Committee will include a meeting in the theater at eleven o'clock with Senator Lodge as orator. Prof. LeBaron R. Briggs of Harvard will read an original poem. This session will be attended by invited guests from out of town. The capacity of the building will limit the number of townspeople who can attend. For this reason another meeting is planned in the afternoon. The speakers are not yet arranged for but this will be the town celebrating its own day in its own way. On Sunday the 19th, there are to be two religious services. The morning service will be at the First Church, where it is planned to have representatives of all the churches of which the Plymouth Church is the mother. Orleans, in the old days Eastham, Duxbury, Kingston, Marshfield, Manomet, Plympton, and The Church of the Pilgrimage of Plymouth. The principal speaker will be Dr. James L. Barton. In the evening another service will be held in the Pilgrimage church at which all these churches will be represented with speakers from them on the program.

C. P. M.

Plymouth's Compact Celebrations

Celebrations and observances come often to Plymouth, Mass., these days. Those of the moment are commemorations of the signing of the Compact. Provincetown claims this as her own special part of the great events in 1920, for they say that it was in Cape Cod Harbor that the famous paper was signed. Still if it had not been for the Nantucket Shoals it might never have happened. But the Shoals would be a bad place, especially this time of year, to have a celebration.

Among those who celebrated the Signing of the Compact was the Society of the Sons and Daughters of the Pilgrims. Gathering on Saturday, Nov. 20, 1920, first at Plymouth Rock they assembled close around the historic boulder which has seen many such a gathering this year. The Doxology was sung and speeches were made by Ex-Gov. LeBaron Prince of New Mexico, Gen. Nathan W. Littlefield, Capt. Granville Standish and others. The affair was informal but impressive; closing with singing of the Breaking Waves Dashed High. Leyden Street, the first street laid out by the Pilgrims and leading from the Rock to the Burial Hill has seen many Pilgrims this year. From the Rock up this historic street these descendants of the Fathers walked to the First Church and had their more formal exercises.

The devotional services were led by Dr. Theo. E. Busfield of the Church of the Pilgrimage and an address of welcome by Rev. Arthur B.

(Continued on page 805)

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

The Authorized Life of Roosevelt

Theodore Roosevelt and His Time, 2 vols., by Joseph Bucklin Bishop (Scribners). "Shown in his own letters" is the explanatory phrase attached to the title. It has been a great task, worthily performed, to sift and arrange this correspondence. Mr. Roosevelt is said to have written 150,000 letters during his public career. His early years are covered in his Autobiography so that his chosen editor has wisely treated only the mature years of public service. To an unusual extent in this case, a biography can be made from the letters for "they reveal his personality with all the fullness of a frank and truthful man talking to tried and trusted friends." And they flood with light "his times" for "he touched life at all points and, on its intellectual side, touched the highest points in every land." Some of the chapter titles will indicate a few of the great events upon which these letters throw their clear light. The War with Spain, The Northern Securities Suit, Coal Strike Settlement, The Kaiser and Venezuela, Securing the Panama Canal, Russo-Japanese Peace Conference, Secret History of the Algeciras Convention, World Voyage of the Navy, The Taft Campaign, From Khartoum to London, Roosevelt and Royalties, The Progressive Convention of 1912, etc. About a dozen portraits accompany this singularly satisfactory life of the great man beloved of so many and so many kinds of people.

In Other Lands

The Spell of the Heart of France, by Andre Hallays (Page). A traveler who knows how to be leisurely even in an automobile has written his impressions of "the towns, villages and châteaux about Paris." The result is a pleasing mixture of landscape, architecture, history and tradition, quite unlike the conventional travel book. It is an ideal way in which to meet, just casually, Madame de Maintenon, Madame Roland, Bossuet, Voltaire or Lamartine. Other characters are less familiar for there is variety in treatment. Or some abstract topic comes up such as the relation of trees to spires or the seventeenth century attitude toward nature. The style is impressive without being rhetorical. More than forty illustrations embellish the volume, some of them in color with soft backgrounds, and there is a map.

A Short History of the Italian People, by Janet Penrose Trevelyan (Putnam). The younger Trevelyans would seem to have steeped themselves in Italian history. Mrs. George Macaulay Trevelyan has made her own independent study, not from original sources, as she explains, but relying on the works of the best scholars. The result is a single volume covering the long period from the Barbarian Invasions to the Attainment of Unity. It is a plain narrative of events of great value to the busy inquirer who cannot spend time culling and assembling fragments of knowledge. Any particular period may be studied at length with the aid of the comprehensive bibliography. Six maps accompany the volume and twenty-four illustrations.

Belgium, Old and New, by George Wharton Edwards (Penn Pub. Co.). This beautiful volume while it refers frequently to picturesque features in past history deals more particularly with the Belgium of today. It is especially "a study of economic life and manners of the Belgians" rather than a chronicle of its monarchs and campaigns. It devotes chapters to describing the great cities, Antwerp, Brussels, Ghent, Bruges, Liége, Mons, etc. A chapter, The Glorious Story of the Yser, describes the heroic stand of the Belgian army barring the enemy from Dunkirk and Calais, and the story of Cardinal Mercier, "the duel between a man and a nation," is the theme of another eloquent section. Many illustrations by the author in color, or black and white, show the public buildings as they were before the merciless guns of the enemy destroyed them. The text is always interesting, the volume is beautifully printed on heavy paper and presented in rich binding. It is an admirable gift book.

Scribners Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

Putnam Short History of the Italian People

GIUSEPPE MAZZINI

Belgium, Past and Present, by A. R. Hope Moncrieff (Macmillan). The present-day interest in Belgium makes timely and welcome this scholarly and readable review of the long history from the time when Cæsar fought with the Belgæ, "the bravest of the Nervii," to the death of Belgium's first king in 1865. It is a long and bloody record, for Belgium has been the battlefield of English, French, Spanish and German, as well as Roman, campaigns. Many great names appear on its annals and many critical events, turning points in history, are recorded. Only casual references are made, from time to time, to connect places or incidents with the Great War.

A History of the Japanese People, by Capt. F. Brinkley, with the collaboration of Baron Kikuchi (Doran). For forty years Captain Brinkley has been actively identified with the political and economic progress of Japan. He has been proprietor and editor of the Japan Mail and correspondent of the London Times. This volume is said to be the "first complete history of Japan" based on Japanese sources. It deals with the art, manners and customs, literature and religion of the Japanese, as well as with its political history. Printed on India paper it is a handy volume in spite of its 700 pages. It is also abundantly illustrated by Japanese artists and there is a full analytical Index of forty pages adding enormously to its value as a reference book.

An American's London, by Louise Closser Hale (Harpers). This American is an actress, but the London she speaks of is not so much of the stage as of the housekeeper and her problems. It is a chatty account of social conditions in the transition period. It is a new London seen through sympathetic eyes and made visible to us with clever touches.

For Boys and Girls

Adele Doring on a Ranch, by Grace May North (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard). Number two of the Adele Doring series. She and several of her friends have the great joy of visiting at an Arizona Ranch with enough of the right sort of adventures to make a lively summer.

The Sons of Liberty, by Walter A. Dyer (Holt). An admirable story for boys, describing with essential accuracy the life and times of Paul Revere. The boy or girl reader should obtain a vivid impression of life in Boston and vicinity during a score or more of years preceding the Revolution. The Boston Massacre, the formation of the Sons of Liberty, the Tea Party, the Battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill and other interesting matters are described as if by one who was on the spot. The story of Paul Revere is intensely entertaining and it is well told in these pages.

Eileen's Adventures in Wordland, by Zillah Macdonald (Stokes). An ingenious story about words, showing how they are related, as "Mother Glow and her children Glimmer, Glitter, Glisten and Gleam," and how some are of Roman origin, and others of Greek, or Arabic, or German, or Norman, or Saxon or other origin. It is quite entertaining and curiously illustrated.

Dick Arnold Plays the Game, by Earl Reed Silvers (Appleton). The story of a boy in a preparatory school, who gives up chances to win medals and honors that he may help where he can be of most use to the school.

STORY-TELLING BALLADS, selected by FRANCES JENKINS OLCOTT (Houghton Mifflin). A well-selected collection of interesting ballads, suitable for story-telling, or for reading aloud, or for boys' and girls' own reading. There are seventy-seven in all, romances, hero tales, legends and adventures. Some are familiar, Little Billee, The Skeleton in Armour, Robin Hood and Little John, The Heart of the Bruce, Sir Galahad, etc. But most of them will be new both to the young people and to their elders.

IN THE TRENCHES, by CAPTAIN CHARLES A. BOTSFORD (Penn Pub. Co.). This is the fifth volume in the Victory series and traces the further adventures of Ralph Storm and Rod Van Horn at the front in the World War. It describes the trip from their billets to the front line trenches and an attack in the Toul section and all the preparations which were made before. All the varied phases of trench warfare are shown—bombs, machine guns, barbed wire and snipers. No man's land is pictured and the inevitable spies. It is a good, wholesome story for boys from fourteen to seventeen years old.

TROOP "ONE" OF THE LABRADOR, by DILLON WALLACE (Revell). A story for boys showing the life of people in Labrador and among them some fine lively Labrador boys who have some very thrilling adventures. The boys have heroic stuff in them, and when Doctor Joe comes along and helps them to be Boy Scouts of course they make Troop One worth while. The author knows Labrador as an explorer and makes the book instructive as well as interesting.

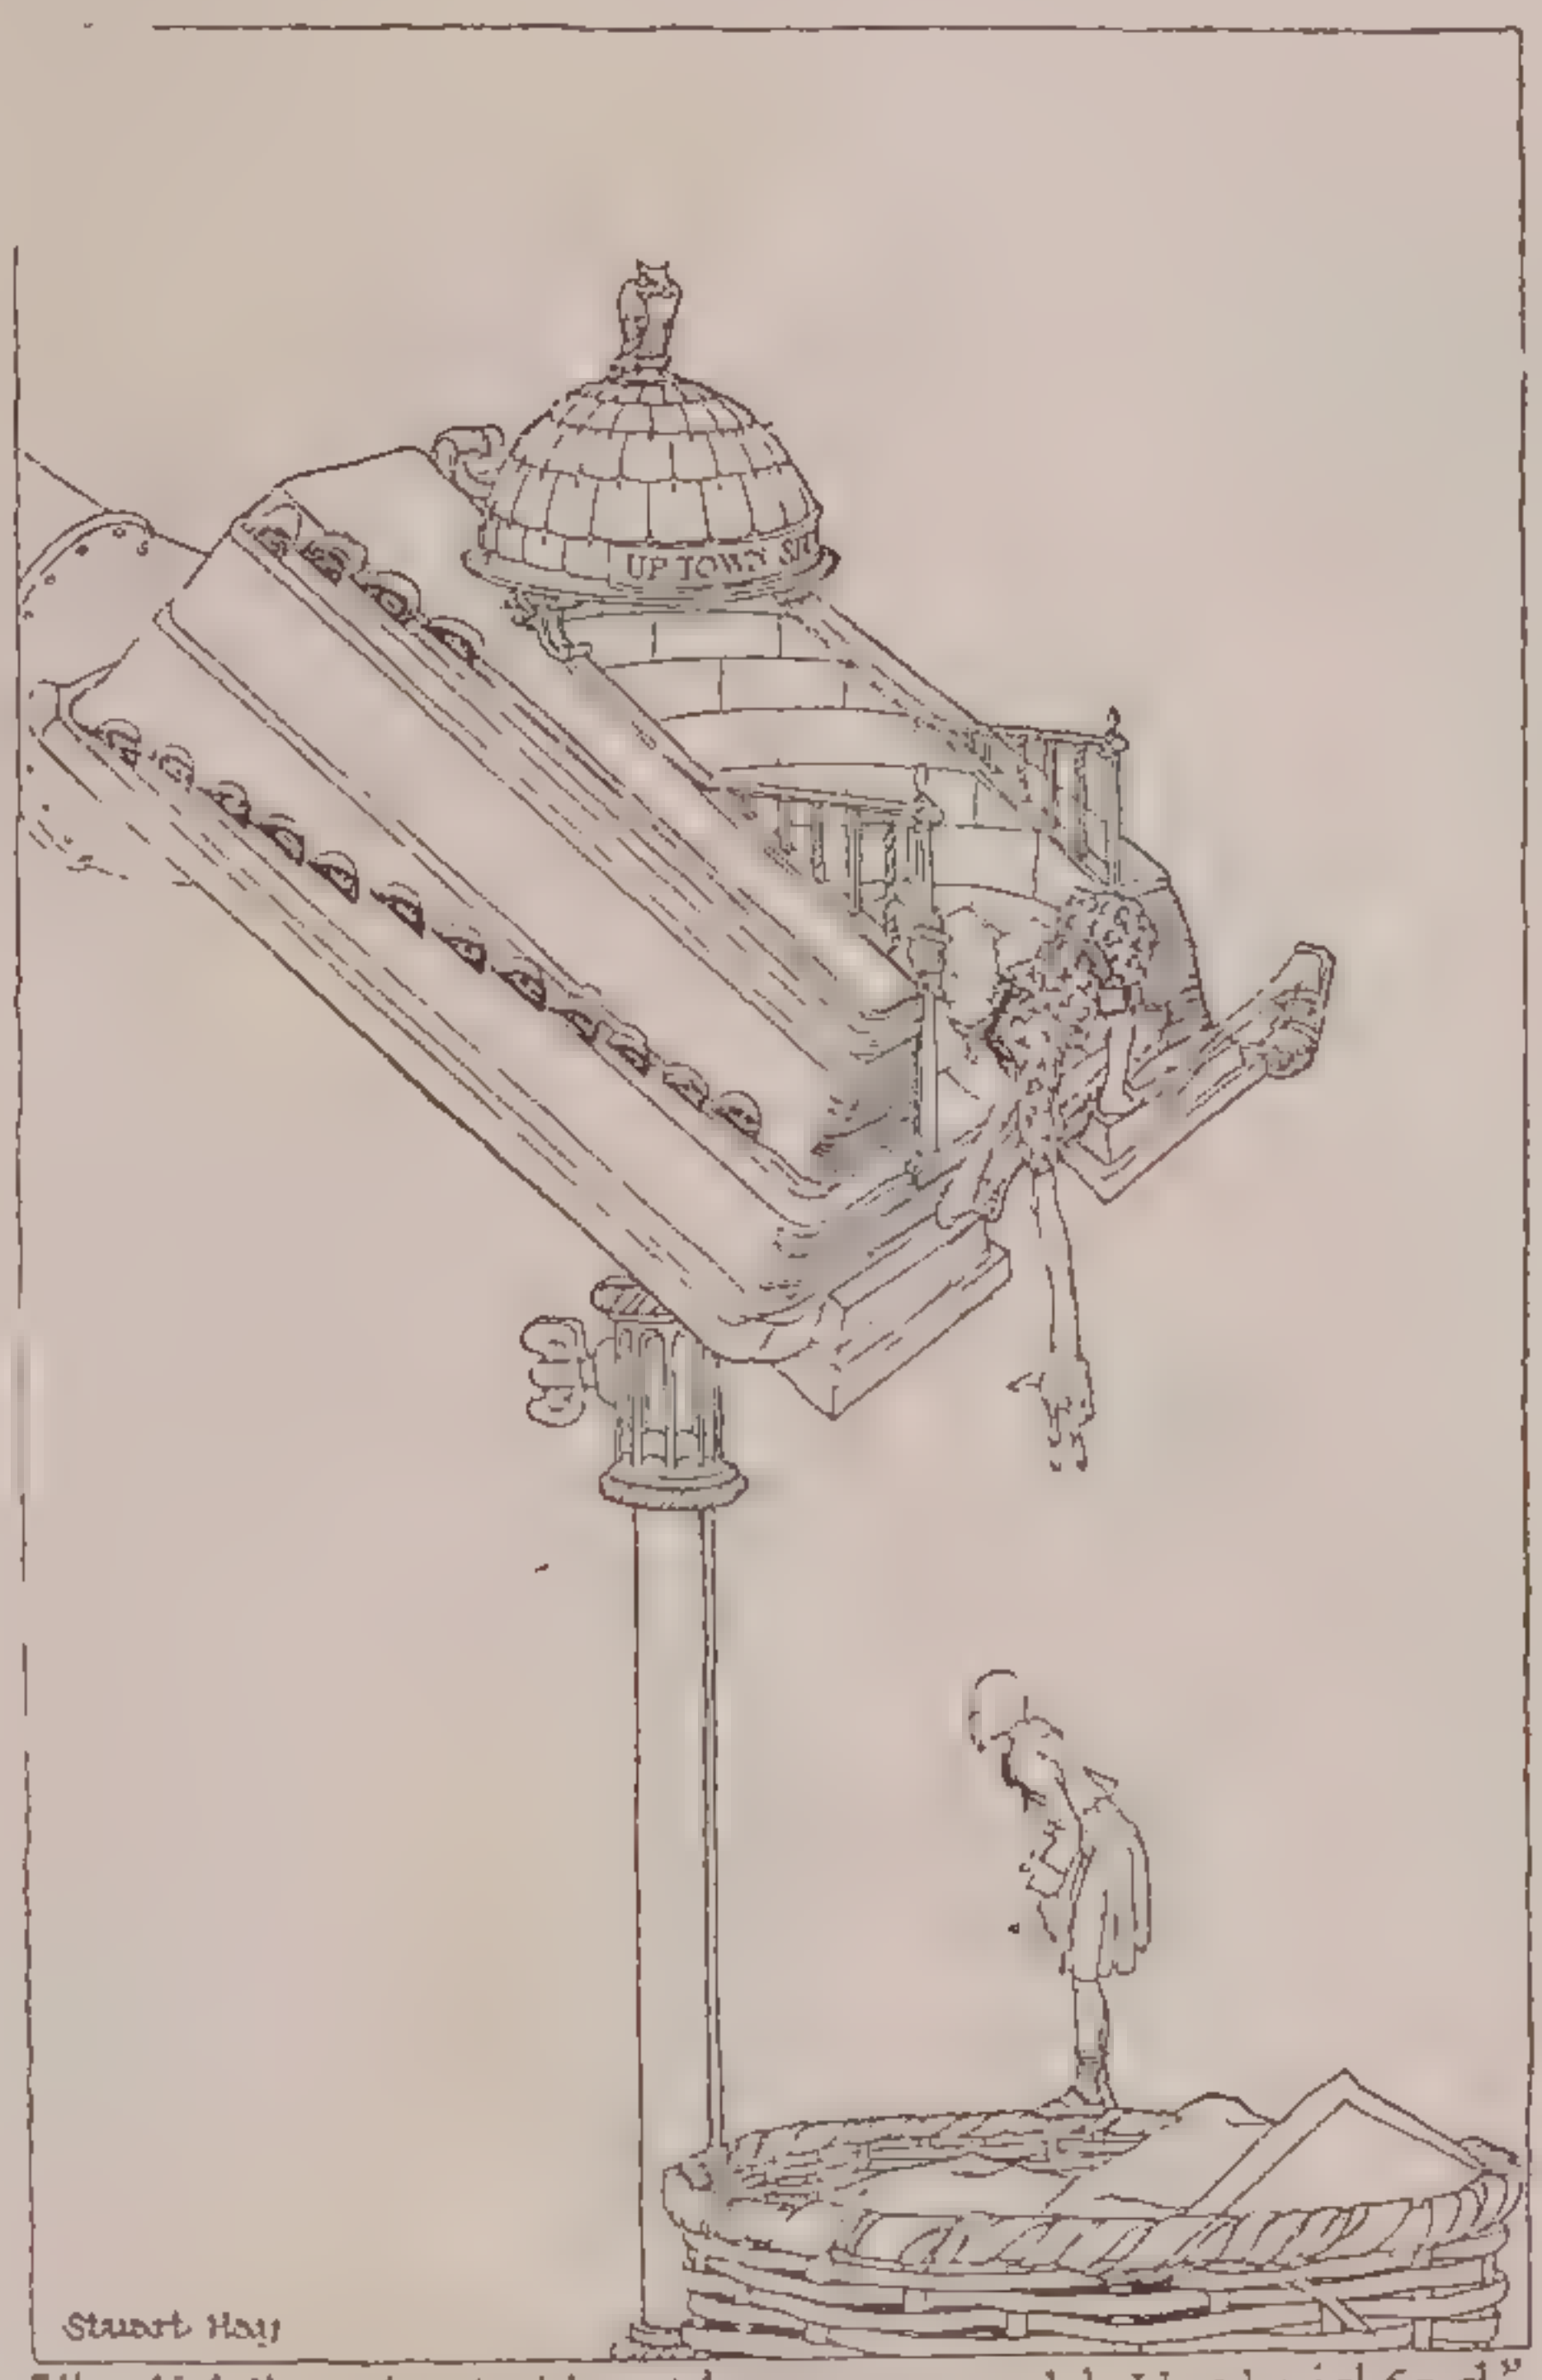
ARCHAG, THE LITTLE ARMENIAN, translated by MARGARET P. WATERMAN from the French of CHARLES H. SCHNAPPS (Dutton). Another of the Little Schoolmate series which have made Young America acquainted with boys and girls of other lands. This book shows the life and customs as well as the sufferings of the Armenians. We see their farms, their weddings and family life as well as their schools. Central Turkey College and Archag's life there is given in detail. The book is as interesting to grown-ups as to the young people for whom it is written.

HONOR BRIGHT, by LAURA E. RICHARDS (Page). After the death of her parents, Americans living in the Far East, little Honor, who has red hair and the impulsive, warm-hearted nature that goes with it, knows no home but the Pension Madeleine, a boarding school kept by two kindly French sisters in Vevey, Switzerland. An accident gives Honor a chance to spend a never-to-be-forgotten week in a Swiss chalet and to share the simple, serene life of its owners. After her return to the school, a fairy godmother appears and Honor's days at school end in a burst of excitement. A charming, wholesome story for the thirteen and fourteen-year-olds.

THE PURSUIT OF THE APACHE CHIEF, by EVERETT T. TOMLINSON (Appleton). A lively story for boys describing the hazardous experiences of two brothers who were in the Apache lands when General Miles was sent to put down an Indian outbreak under Geronimo.

SCOUTING ON THE BORDER, by EVERETT T. TOMLINSON (Appleton). A story of the days of the punitive expedition led by Pershing against Villa. Twin brothers, sons of an American owning mines in Mexico, are led to act as "Pershing Scouts" on account of their familiarity with the hilly lands where Villa and his soldiers were in hiding. It is a stirring tale which boys will enjoy.

WANG, THE NINTH, by B. L. PUTNAM WEALE (Dodd, Mead). A realistic and vivid story of a Chinese boy. Wang is the son of a Chinese peasant who lives just outside of Peking. The time is the Boxer Rebellion. The boy becomes a groom to one of the members of a foreign legation shut up in the city. He acts as the trusted messenger to the Allied forces on their way to the relief of Peking. With all this is interwoven how a Chinese boy thinks, lives, acts and believes.



"it didn't look like the same old Unabridged",

Stokes Adventures in Wordland

A YANKEE GIRL AT FORT SUMTER, by ALICE TURNER CURTIS (Penn Pub Co.). The story of a little Boston girl who lived in Charleston just before the outbreak of the Civil War. Sylvia had many good times with her delightfully kind and generous Southern friends. She and her devoted little black girl had one or two exciting adventures, too, in the anxious days just before Fort Sumter was fired upon. A well-written book, helpful to the little girl who is just beginning to study her country's history.

LUCKY PENNY OF THISTLE TROOP, by AMY E. BLANCHARD (Wilde). Samantha Penrose, known as "Lucky Penny," is a charming girl, just the kind one would like to meet. She is a loyal Scout and the activities of her Troop are curiously varied. The account produces a great respect for those bands of girls everywhere.

Little, Brown Poor Man's Rock

JACK HEATON, OIL PROSPECTOR, by A. FREDERICK COLLINS (Stokes). How Jack Heaton kept his father from being swindled by a Mexican Oil Company. The story has thrills and hairbreadth escapes enough to suit any boy. Incidentally it includes some good information about oil and the oil industry.

Recent Fiction

CHRONICLES OF THE CLINTONS, 5 vols., by ARCHIBALD MARSHALL (Dodd, Mead). Mr. Marshall's novels have been published in this country in irregular order. Many of his readers have yet to experience the delight of tracing the story of the Clinton family in proper sequence. Only thus can the evolution of the twins, for instance, be fully appreciated, or the revelation of Mrs. Clinton's suppressed yet heroic nature. It is an absorbing pleasure to watch the author's accelerating power and skill through "The Squire's Daughter" and "The Eldest Son," to his greatest height in "The Honor of the Clintons." "The Old Order Changeth" shows some of the cracks in those walls of caste and property which have hitherto guarded the English gentry. "The Clintons and Others" is a curious collection of tales about members of the family in different generations, ending with one which exhibits the reactions of the Great War.

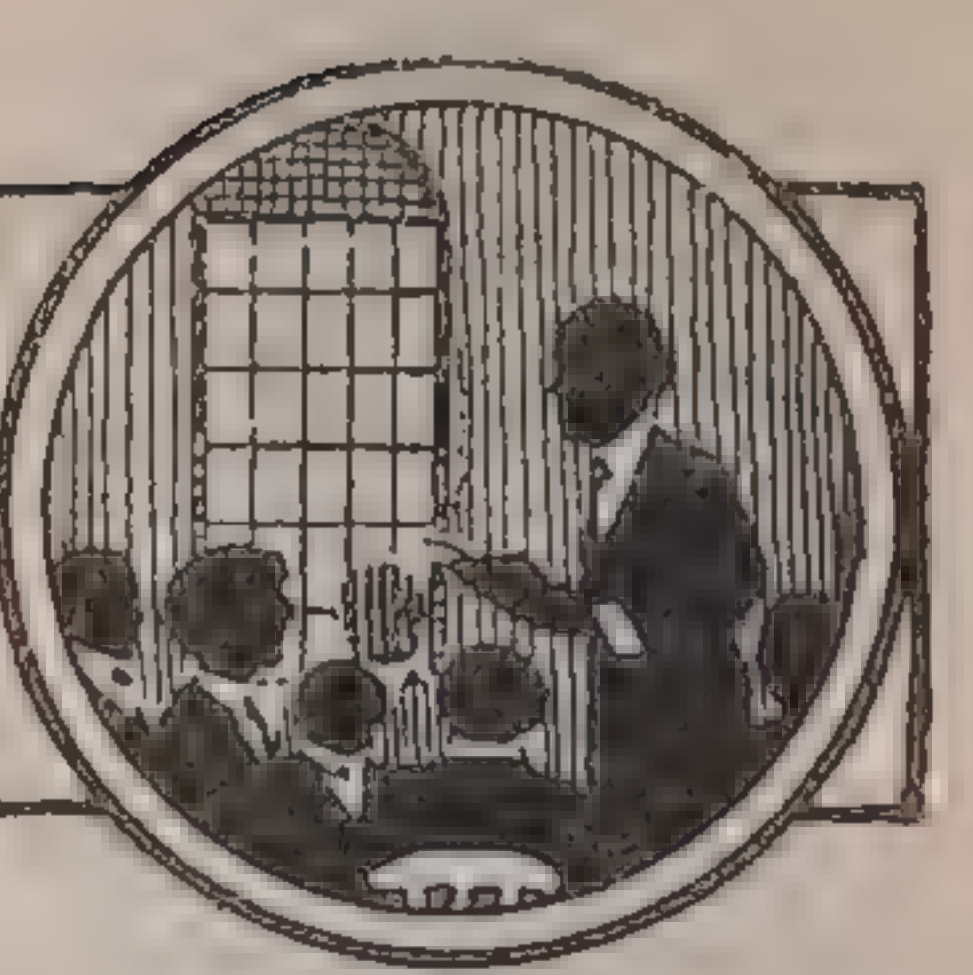
AT FAME'S GATEWAY, by JENNIE IRENE MIX (Holt). A musical genius from a small Western city comes to New York at the expense of her home neighbors to be finished and win fame. Her acquaintances, disillusionments, her sudden passion for a famous violinist, who she knows is married and is only amusing and refreshing himself with her youth and beauty, make the material for a story of what we have come to call the Greenwich Village circle. It's best point is the contrasts of character and point of view between town and country, foreign and American people.

CHRISTMAS ROSES, by ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK (Houghton Mifflin). By a pleasant conceit each of this group of stories of English life has a flower for a title. They are all written in the same exquisite style but vary greatly in theme and in depth of sentiment. The last story, "Autumn Crocuses," rises to a great height of sincere emotion and of victory through courageous endurance of suffering.

THE TRUCE OF GOD, by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART (Doran). A beautiful Christmas story presented in attractive form for a gift book. It is a mediæval tale of the birth of a son at Christmas time and the ending of estrangement between a French king and his faithful wife. It is charmingly told and worthy of the season.

POOR MAN'S ROCK, by BERTRAND SINCLAIR (Little, Brown). This latest work of a promising author shows decided gain in strength, steadiness and character drawing. The Canadian salmon fisheries furnish the background for the hero's exploits upon his return from the war. His inheritance has gone, mostly into the hands of a wealthy neighbor. In short there is little left him except a deadly feud rooted in a love story of the past generation. Young, alone, penniless, he sets himself to beat down the enemy. How he succeeds and why he is disappointed comprise the story. "Love does not make the world go round," he thought, "but work and fighting." So he fought the sea and unscrupulous monopolies and the man he hated. The action is gloriously strenuous and the book is full of ideas about the real values of life, the idle rich and the conduct of business. And for all his independence Cupid finds him out, to his sorrow and his joy.

IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL



DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS

Class Conference Hour

International Sunday School Lesson for Dec. 26.

It may be somewhat difficult to fix our attention upon the subject proposed for our discussion today in view of the pressure of the holiday spirit; but it is proposed in the conviction that it is imperative and timely.

One of the most perplexing facts in the life of our Christian people today is this: the central item in the teaching of Jesus is almost unknown and terribly unrealized in the thought and conduct of even the most devoted followers of Christ. A study of the religious ideas of the soldiers revealed the fact that practically none of them had any idea of the Kingdom of God. So far as they had any sort of Christian knowledge it was not made up of this great idea which Jesus emphasized so strongly.

A recent writer has said, "It may be doubted whether two per cent. of the people who attend churches have any clear conception of the meaning of this phrase (the Kingdom of God) which was so constantly on the lips of Jesus. It might have been expected that it would have been the very first thing to be explained to children in connection with Christianity, and that church members would receive abundant instruction about it. It would have been natural if it had filled a great place in catechisms, and in confessions of faith. But as a matter of fact, it hardly has any place at all in creeds, or catechisms. A man might read a great deal of ordinary Christian literature and never come across the expression" (Gray, The Christian Adventure, 1920, p. 20).

Is this judgment accurate? How large a place in your own Christian thinking is occupied by the idea of the Kingdom of God? Do you actually make it one of the working factors in your conception of life? If so, how? If not, why?

The point for our consideration, therefore, is, How can we make the idea of the Kingdom of God central and strong in our thought and life as Jesus made it in his? So far as Jesus had a working plan of life it is summed up in these words, The Kingdom of God.

We must read and study the gospels more carefully. Jesus was perfectly clear and consistent in his message. He used, of course, a set of terms that were understood by those to whom he spoke. We could wish that he had not used a kingdom as the symbol of his new conception of life; in some ways the family would have been a better figure. Yet kings were a most real item in the thought and life of his day, and he used familiar words.

Now what is the Kingdom of God, that was so clear an item in the consciousness of Jesus? As we review the studies of the quarter we may be satisfied by the answer given by Dr. Gray, whose book has just been cited. He calls the Kingdom of God "a description of what human life becomes when it is lived under the constraint of two truths—the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man." Or, again, "The Kingdom means human life dominated through and through by love." State your own definition as fully as you can. Be sure that it is comprehensive enough to include all the elements that Jesus included in it, but also simple enough to be easily understood and appreciated.

What are the conditions of entrance to the Kingdom? Jesus made them clear. In a word, those who belong to the Kingdom are such as do not make self but make others the object of desire and action. They must give up their selfish life in order that they may find life truly and wholly in service to their comrades. This seems like a contradiction of terms; but it is not. We can understand it when we enter into the full meaning of two great statements of Jesus, one in which he said that he came to bring men life and to give it to them abundantly; the other, in which he said that for the sake of others he perfected his own life. That is, life in the Kingdom is the largest and the most perfect possible; but it is for the purpose of serving and enriching the lives of others. To put it most briefly, one enters the Kingdom when he takes the ruling motives from which Jesus acted habitually and holds them steadily at the center of his own customary action.

What are the rewards of the Kingdom? This is a fair question. We can hardly ask any one to undertake any course of action without telling them the issues of it. They are well summed up in the Golden Text for Dec. 12: Righteousness, peace and joy. Think these through. The first reward of the Kingdom is simply goodness, the old-fashioned and splendid quality of right living. And this is needed now throughout the world. We need to be sure that we can depend upon the morality of men. Then comes peace; and no word needs to be spoken to emphasize the yearning of humanity for this. But it cannot be guaranteed by anything less than the fact of membership in the Kingdom of God. If there ever is a League of Nations that will endure and bless the world it will be the plan that realizes the ideals of Jesus concerning the Kingdom of God. And finally comes that joy which issues from loyalty to Christ, the King. We ought to be happy; we can be; the way is through the Kingdom of God.

It is summed up in one principle: Loyalty to Christ.

Ozora S. Davis

Chicago Theological Seminary.

XI. Is the Christianity of the Bible the Final Word in Religion?

> The essential teaching of Jesus is the final word in religious and moral ideal.
>
> The sacrificial love of God, as manifest in Jesus Christ, is the final word in redemptive power.

In the previous articles it has been urged that all should be tested by the essential teaching and spirit of Jesus. Even other portions of the Bible must be subjected to this test, if we wish to teach others and guide our own lives only by what is highest and best.

Granted that Jesus is our standard, can the standard be surpassed? Without hesitation it may be said that for this life there is nothing above and beyond Jesus' revelation of the Father and his ideal for humanity. His conception of God as Spirit, as Love, as Father, as Friend, as Saviour has nothing beyond it, whether we consider his teaching or the manifestation of his Father in his own work and life. He lifted religion out of all national, racial and ecclesiastical limitations and made it universal.

If there is anything beyond loving God with all one's powers and one's neighbor as himself, what is it, except it be this, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another even as I have loved you," or "Love your enemies and pray for them that persecute you, that ye may be sons of your Father who is in heaven." If there is anything beyond being perfect as your Father in heaven is perfect, if anything can exalt the worth of human personality more than, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and forfeit his life?" If there is anything beyond the redemptive purpose and love of God as expressed in Jesus Christ, if there is anything beyond the determined purpose to have the will of God done on earth as it is in heaven, if there is a higher social ideal than that of the Kingdom of God on earth, in which righteousness, love, brotherhood and the will of God are to reign, a universal brotherhood cemented in the common fatherhood of God, we have never heard thereof. These are ultimate, final. There is no beyond.

Jesus gave us ultimate religious teaching, and what is more, he realized this teaching in his own life. Jesus brings men into complete moral fellowship with God, throwing into their lives the mightiest redemptive force known to earth. Whatever we may think about the Christ, the best that we know of God, of man, and the way of life come from him. What he was, God is; in him we have seen the Father.

The New Testament is inestimably rich in its view of God and man and incomparable in the personality that irradiates it all. There is some alloy even here, but there is pure gold in abundance. The Sermon on the Mount stands alone in the religious and moral world. The parables of our Lord are unequaled as instruments for religious teaching, Epistles expand, interpret, and adjust the Christian message to the need of growing churches. And the writer of most of them has found the answer to Job's question, why do the righteous suffer, in that power through which we can make all things work together for good. In this New Testament we find essential Christianity.

The mask was never torn from the face of sin with more unerring accuracy, and the veil was never so completely lifted from the face of the God whose supreme purpose is to bear away the sin of the world, at whatever cost. The skillful surgeon's knife is applied to cut away the last vestige of cancerous sin, and the healing love of God is oil and wine to wounded and bleeding lives. The clouds are recognized, but these clouds are shot through with rays of light

(Continued on page 795)

THE HOUR OF PRAYER

A Memorial of the Pilgrims

Comment on the Midweek Prayer Meeting Topic for Dec. 19-25

BY ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN

Scripture Passage. Gen. 11: 1-12.

The Changes of Three Hundred Years. Human nature has not changed. The Good News of Christ and his invitation to share his Kingdom and to get about his work are just as fresh to the needs of men as they were when the Pilgrims were driven out of England. But manners and aims of living have changed in many ways completely. This is the time to ask what are the permanent things in the Pilgrim testimony; and then how far we have been faithful to them and tried to make their convictions effective in the life about us. In a time of laxity in a great part of England the Scrooby Church stood for the reality of religion as a factor of everyday living. They were not of those who were religious on Sunday and pagan or self-seeking on all the other days of the week. Their theology did not work in spurts. Their faith bore the test of persecution and bore it well. Are our faith and practice of like active and resistant quality? If we had to choose between sacrificing faith or losing our homes, going out like Abraham or the Pilgrims to some foreign shore, could we stand the trial? They were also keen on extending the witness which had been given them. What we call the missionary spirit seems to have been the decisive factor in their choice of a home.

How Far Have the Pilgrim Ideals Been Made Real? The flood of population has overtaken the descendants of the Pilgrims, but it has not wholly overwhelmed them. Their ideals are still alive. They have been the leaven of a nation. The spirit of reality in religion has never died out in America, though it has sometimes appeared to be asleep. Many of the results may be tabulated. The freedom of religion is one of them. We have established the principle that men are free to follow what form of faith they will, and this came largely from the ideal of the Pilgrims—the ideal of sole responsibility to God. And yet in combination with the Puritans of the Massachusetts colony it had to pass through the experiment of church establishment. We are, in fact, nearer to the Pilgrim ideals in many matters than their descendants were in the Colony of Massachusetts.

What is There Next to Do? We must next recover fully the everyday practical application of the principle that God is Lord in all our lives. There is a modern flabbiness of conviction which hurts and lames us. We are too often much too much at ease for the full development of our Christian convictions. They do not grip us as they did the men in Scrooby. We want to get back that sense of the urgent authority of obedience to Christ in shaping all our human duties and relations. We must also seek to regain that fresh view of the life we live and of the world as a place of our activities which has been too much dimmed by the multitude and multiplicity of modern interests and engagements. By comparison the Pilgrims were nearer to Christ's idea of childlikeness. The real tasks are old, but they repeat themselves for every fresh generation.

Closet and Altar

GOLD AND FRANKINCENSE AND MYRRH

And they fell down and worshiped him; and when they had opened their treasures they presented unto him gifts; gold and frankincense and myrrh.—Matt. 2: 11.

Here, too, is the worship and consecration of believing hearts. For here the rich and poor, the wise and unlearned, meet together in common fellowship. Already he draws all men to him, and changes life for them. The rich pour out their treasures of gold, frankincense, and myrrh, at his feet. The poor leave the yet greater treasure of their devotion, and go forth to proclaim him in the testimony of captured hearts. Bethlehem becomes to them all the starting-point of a new life. From henceforth they are not their own.—J. Stuart Holden.

"They laid their offerings at his feet:
The gold was their tribute to a king,
The frankincense, with its odor sweet,
Was for the Priest, the Paraclete,
The myrrh for the body's burying."

In the quality of the gifts offered to the infant Jesus by the Magi, they set forth all his attributes—as a king they laid gold at his feet; as God they offered him incense; as man they gave him myrrh. Thus the homage they rendered became a proclamation of all the mysteries of the religion he was to establish. As man he was to die; as God he was to live again; as king he was to judge all men.—Hilary of Poitiers.

O come, all ye faithful,
Joyful and triumphant:
O come ye, O come ye, to Bethlehem;
Come and behold him
Born the king of angels;
O come, let us adore him,
O come, let us adore him!
O come, let us adore him, Christ the Lord.
—Bonaventura, tr. by F. Oakeley.

Wealth and worship and weariness are all to be brought in offering to Christ, that he may use them for his purposes.—R.

O God our Father, giver of the most loving gift, make us partakers of thy joy at Christmas time. We too, with simple shepherds and the wise men come to bend the knee before the kingly Child, bringing our gifts of faith and love in true self-offering. Show us our way of service and give us willing hearts to walk therein. For motherhood and childhood, for love that gives and learns, we bring thee thanks. Have mercy upon wives and mothers in distress and children fatherless. Hasten the coming of thy kingdom. Bring an end of war and give the shaping of the world to men of good will. Teach our hearts to make ready for that age of peace. In the name of Christ, who loved us and gave himself for us. Amen.

—Isaac Ogden Rankin.

Good Tidings for a Stricken People

Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic for Dec. 26-Jan. 1

Topic: New Opportunities for Christian Service in the Near East. Heb. 11: 32; 12: 2; 1 Cor. 16: 9. (Missionary meeting.)

Claims Upon Us

Paul, the great missionary, was constantly finding open doors to new opportunity and the fact that obstacles and adversaries were in the way only seemed to give zest to the enterprise. The Near East is one great open door and the recital of its tragedies would present another witnessing of faith like the roll of honor in Heb. 11.

Their Need, Our Chance

It is in no cold-blooded spirit that we recognize the opportunity which the need of the Near East gives to us for a practical Christian ministry. After the Armenian massacres of 1894-1896 thousands of orphans were put into the care of Christian missionaries and received training that probably would not have been possible under normal conditions. The opportunities for such service are multiplied today. Not only the children but adults, practically a whole nation are dependent.

What They Need

1. They must have food, shelter and clothing; or die. The manner in which these come to them from Christians in other lands will help to shape their conceptions of real Christianity.

2. They need the ministry of healing. Even in normal times the scarcity of doctors, the ignorance of modern methods of sanitation and medicine, the lack of hospitals and nurses, present a strong appeal for aid. How much more in these days of misery following the war, with every disease-breeding agency heightened in power and the means of combatting it lessened.

3. They need education. The final solution of their most pressing problems will never be reached except as it comes through the wise guidance of their own leaders trained in the principles of fairness, justice and good will.

4. The women need help in finding a new life. The old seclusion of the harem is passing. Women dare to appear with unveiled faces upon the public street. Whither shall this liberty lead them? To make it safe, we must multiply such influences as are exerted in our schools for girls.

5. They must have our sympathetic help as a nation. In the present confused state of international affairs, it is not easy to see just where or how we can be most helpful. One thing is certain, however, we cannot relapse into selfish indifference to their need without dishonor and without forfeiting any claim to being a truly Christian nation.

REFERENCES for further reading: Everybody's World, by Sherwood Eddy; Chap. II. The New Near East; The Christian Approach to Islam, by James L. Barton, especially chapters 16, 20 and 21; World Facts and America's Responsibility, by C. H. Patton, pp. 33-38, 98-100, 124-132; Pen Pictures of the Siege of Aintab, by J. E. Merrill; (Envelope Series, A. B. C. F. M., Oct. 1920); Shepard of Aintab, by Alice Shepard Riggs; Masoud, the Bedouin, by Alfreda Post Carhart, and files of the Missionary Herald, World Outlook and Missionary Review of the World.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Tales of the Mayflower Children

Wrestling Sets a Fox-trap

By Pauline Carrington Bouve

"Father," said Wrestling Brewster one autumn afternoon after he had finished his stint of labor in the field and his task in the lesson-book, "some wild thing of the woods hath again trampled down the corn and there is a broken place in the palisade."

"I wonder John Dotey, who was such a hunter of game in England according to his own tale, hath such poor luck here with the foxes that he lets them destroy our planting and devour our fowl," complained Mistress Brewster. "He is ever prating about his traps and weights that he brought with him from England, but they be of little use."

"For all his talk, he hath not much luck," remarked Wrestling. "If father says I may, I would try my hand at it, and, marry, I could do better, who am but a boy. I would catch the thief. May I try, father?"

Elder Brewster laid by his goose-quill and pushed back the inkhorn.

"So thou wouldst pit thy skill against that of John Dotey, who hath a man's experience?"

"Yes, father," answered Wrestling, who was inclined to argue when he dared, and was moreover a bit of a braggart. "John hath not set so many traps before we landed here that he knows so much more about it than other folk. 'Tis an easy matter to catch the thief if one places the trap in the right spot," and Wrestling spread out his thumbs with a gesture of easy confidence.

Elder Brewster thought a moment and then said: "'Twere a fine thing to catch thief Reynard, and if thou art so clever at it as thou thinkest thyself, mayhap it will be no great trouble, but where wilt thou get a trap?"

Wrestling flushed at the question, for though he knew well that John Dotey or any of the men who had traps would lend him one, he did not wish his venture known, lest he make a failure and be a laughing-stock.

"Oh, there be many a trap in the Towne, mayhap," he replied evasively as the Elder's grave eyes surveyed him critically.

"Thou hast my consent. If thou canst catch the marauder, thou shalt have the pelt to barter with any purchase thou canst find; but if thou dost no better than John Dotey, of whose skill thou hast such poor opinion, thou needs must do extra tasks about the common labor and in thy lesson-books to teach thee the folly of over-confidence in thy superiority over thine elders."

Flushing at the rebuke, Wrestling hastily left the house, for the thought of selling a pelt for his own benefit was delightfully exciting. What a fine thing it would be to be able to tell John and everybody else that he, Wrestling Brewster, had done what they had failed to do! What a surprise it would be! How the boys would envy him, and how the girls would admire him! Then he remembered that if he borrowed John's trap and weight, there would be no surprise, for John would be sure to tell.

"I will borrow it without telling him till afterwards," he said to himself at last. "It will be no harm, for he would surely say yes, if I asked." But the idea was not altogether a pleasant one, for Wrestling, though vain, was at heart an honest lad. Temptation had knocked at the door, however, and Wrestling rather shyly at first bade him enter.

"It's no harm to borrow from a neighbor," he kept saying as he stealthily approached John Dotey's house and went to the lean-to shed where he knew he kept his traps and hunting-gear. John was still busy in the fields, and no one would see him. Somewhat guiltily he took up the trap, but alack, the weight and its chain were missing, and search as he might, he could not find them! What could he do? Suddenly he remembered that the copper chain with the padlock that had secured his father's chest of books was in the kitchen closet. He could attach one end of the chain to the trap, fasten the other to a tree or stump, click the lock, and even a bear could not escape! It was a wonderful idea, and he hurried home to carry out the plan. Chance favored him, for his mother had gone to help Mistress Hopkins with little Oceanus who was ailing, Love was studying his Latin lesson for the following day, and Fear and Patience were with their mother.

"I will take this fresh deerskin to kneel upon while I hide the trap and chain, so Mr. Fox will not scent me," he said as he hastened out of the cottage and beyond the palisade of the cornfield.

There were groups of trees on every side, all about the same size and equally distant from the place where the palisade was broken. Selecting one whose roots came a little above the surface of the ground, Wrestling went back to kill a chicken, for the trap was of little use if not baited.

Spreading the deerskin, he scooped up the earth and made a hole sufficiently large to contain the steel trap, to which he attached one end of the copper chain. This done, he carefully covered the opening with slight sticks placed crosswise and close enough together to support a light covering of earth. On the top he laid the dead fowl and then, digging a shallow ditch, he laid the chain in it, and covered it. Fastening the end around the root of the tree he had chosen, he snapped the lock and covered the whole very carefully with earth and leaves and sticks so that even a very observing fox would not become suspicious!

Well satisfied with his work, Wrestling went home to his supper. Too excited to eat, he caused Mistress Brewster such uneasiness that she offered him a dose of physic and would have proceeded to make him swallow it had not Captain Standish come in to say that a rumor was about that the Massachusetts (the Boston Bay Indians) were in a threatening mood and ready to make trouble for the Plymouth Colony.

After talking over the matter it was agreed between the Elder and Captain Standish that, as this was but hearsay, the wise course would be to go among them, partly to see their country, partly to make peace, and partly to trade with them, so, after calling in the Governor, it was decided that ten men should be chosen to go upon this journey with Tisquantum, a friendly Chief, to interpret for them, and two other savages with him. All this caused some excitement, as there were preparations to be made. "It were well to gather the men together at once," said Captain Standish. But who will be our messenger?"

"I do not like to send Wrestling out after curfew, but necessity needs must stand before the law upon occasion, so write the lad a bit of passport lest John Alden or some other forbid him," said Elder Brewster. Then calling out: "Come, Wrestling, here is a better chance to help the Towne than trapping foxes. Captain Standish would have you go to Master Allerton and Master Hopkins and bid them muster out the young and able-bodied men to the fort, where we will meet them forthwith. If any one stay you on the way, show them this bit of paper writ by the Captain's hand, and Wrestling, mind you do not tarry on this errand, for it be urgent."

Never before had Wrestling been called upon to do so important an errand for the common good, so for the moment all memory of the fox-trap went from his mind, and in great excitement he put on his mantle cloak and hurried out.

"I will take a short cut behind our palisades and rouse Master Allerton at the back door," he said to himself as he hastened out. A full moon silvered the fields and made strange shadows among the clumps of trees, but Wrestling was too full of pride to feel nervous as he strode along boldly, thinking of his own importance and nothing else. Suddenly he stumbled. His foot went through a hole, and he felt the grip of sharp steel that held it as in a vise. At the same moment an intense pain shot through his foot and ankle. Instantly he remembered, and realized what had happened. He was caught in the trap he had set for the fox, and there was no escape! Every time he tried to move his foot, the chain pulled the clamp tighter and his pain increased. What was to be done? Far worse than the pain was the knowledge that he would fail to perform an important errand intrusted to him, and then there would be no possible chance to conceal the fact that he had "borrowed" something without asking the consent of the owner and, above all, been himself caught in his own trap!

These thoughts were very bitter, and Wrestling forgot the pain of his foot in an agony of mortification and shame. The minutes seemed hours as they passed. He knew that his father and Captain Standish and the Governor were wondering why he did not return from his errand. Soon they would send some one to search for him and then what a ridiculous figure he would cut squirming about in his own fox trap! He wiped the cold drops of perspiration from his forehead, and try as he would to keep them back, the tears would rise to his eyes and trickle down his cheeks. Though it was less than an hour, it seemed a long time before he heard shouts and saw the glimmer of torchlights. His father, the Captain, and the Governor, followed by others, were coming in search of him. He heard John Dotey's hearty voice saying, "I trust the lad has not fallen in with that rascally fox or a treacherous savage!" and his father's deep voice in answer, "God forbid!" John Dotey spied him first of all, and ran forward, only to halt in amazement when he saw and understood Wrestling's plight!

"Why, how came this? The boy is caught in a fox trap! Who set it, I wonder?" Then all came toward him with questions.

"In a moment, lad, I will set you free," cried John Dotey. "Where is the weight? I see none anywhere."

"'Tis fastened to yon tree," answered Wrestling, in trembling tones, "by father's copper chain that has a padlock. That is why I was caught so hard and fast. And, O John, 'tis your own trap I took without your leave, and I am fairly punished for my wrong-doing, which I pray you and my father will forgive!" and no longer able to control himself, for every one was laughing as hard as ever they could except the Elder, who looked sad and stern, he burst into passionate sobs.

"Nay, nay," said the good-natured John, trying to suppress his merriment. "The trap was welcome to you, lad, and, marry, your notion of locking it to a tree was a good one. Methinks if you had not come this way yourself, our thief would sure have been caught fast. So, friends, there is no need to laugh at his sorry plight, for he hath given us hunters a great and new notion."

"That may be," said Elder Brewster, "but he must make good to you for thus trespassing upon your place and taking that which was not his own for his use. Go you back to my house and get from Mistress Brewster the padlock key to this chain that hangs on a nail by the chimney and set this little fox free."

Wrestling knew that his father, though he would doubtless give him many tasks to make him remember what he had done, would forgive, knowing that he had really meant to do a useful thing for the Towne. For years to come there were many sly jokes about two-legged foxes caught in their own traps, but the Pilgrim folk were kindly at heart and did not hold things against young folk too long. The Elder himself said that the lesson of the fox trap had taught Wrestling the folly of thinking himself wiser and cleverer than those about him, and, better than all else, had brought home the lesson that to be truly honest, one must respect the property of another and make use of nothing without the consent of the owner. So out of the setting of the fox trap and what came of it, Wrestling became the most careful and trustworthy boy in Plymouth Towne.

Copyright, 1920, by
Congregational Publishing Society

The Comrades' Corner

Dear Comrades:

Some one wrote me the other day asking if I am a descendant of John Alden (and Priscilla Mullens, I suppose, also; she is quite necessary). I am sorry to say I am not; I wish I might say that I am.

I like to read the brief notes about them in the appendix to William Bradford's History "of Plimoth Plantation." One says: "John Alden was hired for a cooper, at South-Hampton, where the ship victuled; and being a hopfull yong man, was much desired, but left to his owne liking to go or stay when he came here; but he stayed, and maryed here." (This history is not a particularly good example for poor spellers, is it?—Mr. A.)

Another note reads:

"Mr. Molines, and his wife, his sone, and his servant, dyed the first winter. Only his dougter, Priscila, survied, and maried with John Alden, who are both living, and have 11. children. And their eldest daughter is maried, and hath five children."

Did all of you know that John and Priscilla had eleven children? I wonder if all the boys were as bashful as their father, and the girls as pretty as their mother.

What times those children of the Plymouth Plantation must have had! How careful they must have been about going out into the woods, along the banks of the Town Brook or out to Billington Pond!

I have just been reading a delightful book, written for young folks, "Argonauts of Faith," by an Englishman, Basil Mathews. You can probably get it at your library. Your minister may have it. Get it if you can and see what experiences those little Pilgrims went through. See whether you would like to exchange places with them.

It is just about three hundred years ago since they and their fathers and mothers landed at Plymouth. How many of you will enter into an agreement with me to read through William Bradford's History, which I mentioned above? It is very quaint, but full of interest, written, you see, by some one who was right there. I will gladly print in an honor roll all who will read the history before Jan. 15. Will you be one?

I wish I might have taken you all with me the other day when I went to the State House library in Boston and saw this wonderful old book, in Governor Bradford's own handwriting.

Let me report here that our Dorchester Academy—Comrades' Corner Lunch Fund—now totals $39.13. Hoo-ray! That means a whole lot of good cheer and good "feeds" for those deserving boys and girls. I will give you next time the names of the donors not previously mentioned.

Still another R. F. D.—er, No. 8, Florence L. Lattin, whose post-office address is Shelton, Ct., would like "to exchange letters with some one who lives in the city, as I have lived in the country all my life, and would like to know what they do in the city." She gives us a good conundrum: What word in the English language is it, that if you take one letter from it, it will make you sick? I will save the answer until next week.

I have some letters with fine lists of odd names which I shall have to give you soon. There is no use trying to shut down on that subject.

Comradely yours,

Mr Alden

In The Church School

(Continued from page 792)

and drenched with golden glory. There are lives broken by sin, but this evangel causes the "note of joy to break even from the bruised reed." And through it all and back of it all, there is a life which in its daily walk, even as much as in its teaching, reveals the character and redemptive purpose of God, as we have never seen them before or since. In him, we see what God is, what God means, and what is God's purpose of love toward man. Jesus Christ is the master of life, and the master of death. He holds the secret of the ages. Into our lives, while we live, he throws the dynamic of God's sacrificial love; and when the shadows lengthen, when our sun of life is setting, he lifts the rainbow of immortal hope before our eyes, to cheer us on the lonely pilgrimage.

Whatever there may be in the Bible that is lower, provincial, temporary, out of accord with Jesus' teaching, and thus with no right to control us, this universal truth, this word of God contained within the Bible, has full authority. Nothing can destroy it and no theory of inspiration can increase it. The voice is that of our Father and "its authority is beyond the reach of criticism as the soul is beyond the reach of physical analysis." It is not dependent upon the accuracy of manuscripts. It finds us, as it has the right to find us, in our deepest depths and stands by its own self-evident truthfulness. Here indeed is the very bread of life for our hungry souls.

Subject next two weeks: Making the Bible a Living Book. Then answers to questions will begin. FRANK M. SHELDON.

Post-Election Wisdom

From Our Readers

Dear Mr. Editor:

You insulted Democrats before and after the election with belittling phraseology.

You are self-condemned by your own words: "The superb organization of the Republican party, behind which were wealth," etc.

Clear enough that wealth has precedence of all else in your mind. Money above Jehovah and Jesus.

How can a servant of money be follower of any god but money?

Again: "The Republicans framed too severe an indictment."

Then Republicans lied.

An un-Christian act insupportable by a Christian publication.

Unfortunately you occupy a position which should and could be exalted to a true Christian plane by a capable, honest and just follower of Jesus. May God have mercy on your soul.

JESSE R. ZOOK.

Joplin, Mo.

Dear Mr. Editor:

You are too modest in accepting the verdict of your reader who writes from Southern Pines, S. C., hinting that your paper is not infallible. You have the right to claim the infallibility of the truth, and I feel that your attitude on the League of Nations and your hopes for the Interchurch World Movement are both nearer the truth than the individualism which he claims is now in the saddle. We hope you will continue to dare to be a prophet of the new day; and such prophets will ever be bemeaned and derided by those who dwell comfortably in the valley of individualism and whose motto is "Safety First."

Moses did not see the accomplishment of the great Forward Movement he launched in Egypt. The dreams of Isaiah are only now being slowly and painfully worked out into international instruments. We have heard it said that permanent human progress is attained by, first a dream, then a wish, then a struggle, and finally it becomes a fact.

The ideals you have inspired us to accept and be willing to want and struggle for will some day, under God's leadership, be a glorious fact.

I shall never cease to be grateful to my father who, while I was but a lad, taught me to fear and fight the organized liquor traffic. He "throwed away his vote," as men told him, many times, by casting it with the Prohibition party, but I do not today agree that it was thrown away. He dreamed of and earnestly wished for a day which he never lived to see, but his three sons are living today in a nation divorced from the organized and licensed liquor traffic.

"Where there is no vision the people perish." Don't relax, or confess defeat. The Congregational churches of America will this year, in my opinion, raise twice as much for the advancement of the Kingdom as they would if the Interchurch World Movement had not given the impetus. And some of us believe with Mr. Taft, Wickersham, Lowell, Hoover, and perhaps even Prof. Fisher, that the League of Nations is more of a fact, more of a power and more freighted with promise today than it ever has been. It is dawn on the mountains, as those in the valley of provincialism will soon awaken to find.

CLAUDE ALLEN MCKAY.

Gardner, Mass.

To lightly surrender a faith that has given pragmatic proof of its truth through the solace and strength it has afforded a hundred generations of human beings is not a sign of culture. —John Andrew Holmes.

The Puritan as a Modern Man

Our Heritage from Seventeenth Century Radicals

By Helen Kendall Smith

The picture of Puritan New England has often been painted with unsympathetic brush, throwing strong light upon its narrow-mindedness and severity, while passing over in shadow that which has been praiseworthy, enduring or productive of future growth. A complete view of the Puritan and of his work cannot be briefly presented, but even a glimpse may discover a few of the characteristics essential to his success and deserving of enduring appreciation. Old diaries, letters and records, made accessible in print, have revealed the secrets of his daily life, his ideals and methods, and in these arcana may be discovered much that anticipates modern development and that has contributed to our national history and social progress.

A Successful Executive

First of all the Puritan had that clear-sighted mind which could bring order out of affairs theological or secular and construct a system of government that has proved lasting. Both church and state were well organized, while each small community had in itself the machinery to manage its local affairs. This executive genius, the quality most highly valued in these days of great organizations, is a gift to us from the Puritan. You may say that his outlook was narrow, his field of activity limited by conformity to Mosaic ideals, but in spite of this he was able to found a state that outgrew these boundaries and has proved an example unto others.

The greatest quality of the Puritan was his single-minded devotion to duty. It has been well said: "Our fathers may have been narrow and straight-laced, but they were not cross-eyed from trying to keep one eye on God and the other on the main chance."

The Puritan was aggressive, not content to sit still but ready to seize the first advantage for greater growth. Continually his settlements pushed back the frontier; one whole community crossing the pathless wilderness to the fertile Connecticut before the parent villages were securely established. Settlers driven from home by Indian attacks were ready to return with new courage at the earliest opportunity. Not long after the arrival of the first colonists the hammer of the shipwright was heard, and soon New England sailors in home-built vessels visited all lands and returned laden with rich cargoes. No obstacle daunted their spirits and success followed in their footsteps.

Undesirables Excluded

The influence of the Puritan church in temporal matters and its close connection with the state have been emphasized in many ways. In a covenant drawn up by the settlers of a town founded in 1666, the people declared their desire "to be of one heart and consent that, through God's blessing, with one hand they may endeavor the carrying on of spiritual concernments as also civil and town affairs according to God and a Godly government." To realize this ideal the citizens felt the need of controlling the character of those who lived with them and accordingly took action to exclude undesirable inhabitants from their colony. Church members only were admitted to a share in the government of the colony as a whole, but the towns were glad to give the franchise to any man of sober conversation and industrious habits. Careful inquiry was made into the character of the newcomer and if he was found lacking he was invited, and when necessary forced, to "depart the town." Shipmasters were obliged to hand in a report for "a more certain and ready obtaining knowledge of such passengers as shall hereafter arrive." Some of our own laws governing immigration are conceived in the same spirit.

The Puritan as Socialist

A marked sense of social responsibility interested the Puritan in the improvement and welfare of his fellow beings. Wisdom, too, is shown by the recommendation of the Watertown selectmen to relieve material suffering before trying to improve mind or morals. In children the New Englander saw future citizens and by training them in habits of industry and righteousness he seized the opportunity to strengthen the state. The selectmen, responsible for their education and morals, made house to house visits, examining the youth in the catechism, the Bible and in their knowledge of the chief laws of the country. Young men were carefully watched and if inclined to ways of idleness or extravagance were put under the tuition of a guardian. One Edward Cook of Dedham was forced, in 1666, to give an account of his finances because it was found that he did not "in any way improve and lay out what he earned or attained by his own labor as he might for his own good but embezells the same to his own impoverishment and hazarding the Town's charge in time." As a warning to the youth of Boston, a resident who preferred a life of leisure to honest toil was deported to the West Indies.

Marriage was encouraged by the early New Englanders not only as God's holy ordinance but for the obvious advantages accruing to the community. More land was given to married men than to bachelors and these latter were obliged to live with some family and be subject to its rule. The truly modern experiment of giving lots to unmarried women was tried temporarily but was soon abandoned in order, as Governor Endicott wrote, "to avoid all precedents and evils events in granting lots unto single maidens not disposed of."

To the Puritan we owe our system of national education, from the common school to the university. Many of the famous blue laws are singularly like our most recent attempts to regulate vice and the liquor traffic. If, as optimists say, the public conscience has never been more active than it is now, nor the demand for personal purity and probity stronger, once again may thanks be given to our Puritan forefathers for first setting the high standard of righteousness in public and private affairs which is the glorious heritage of New England.

Plymouth Hill

By Ethel Merrill Beale

(Memories of the Congregational Pilgrimage, July 1, 1920)

Across the hill in Plymouth
Where lie the Pilgrim dead,
Their spiritual children
With hushed footsteps tread.
They come, our noblest leaders,
Revered from shore to shore;
Great souls, they pay their homage
To great souls gone before.

Will it be so in heaven?
Shall we hear some one say:
"Yonder is Martin Luther;
There Lincoln goes his way"?
Will great souls be about us,
(Elijah and St. Paul)
Just as those were in Plymouth?
Then will a glory fall,

As we, in some transcendent place,
Behold the Master face to face?

The Herring Memorial Fund

(Designed to be serviceable to Mrs. Hubert C. Herring while she lives. After her death the Trustees of the Annuity Fund, in perpetuation of Dr. Herring's devotion to his brethren of the ministry, distribute the income, as their judgment shall deem best, to ministers who, in order to secure the benefits of the Annuity Fund, need special assistance in meeting their requisite annual payments. In case any part of the income in any one year is not needed for such purpose it may be used to supplement the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund. The minimum hoped for is $20,000).

Extract from Letters Accompanying Subscriptions

From a country pastor: "Glad to be counted in—wish it were more, but at seventy-two, working on a salary of $600, do not feel that I can."

Church, South New Britain, Ct.
Clifford, A. W., Windham, Ct.
Dorman, F. A., New York City.
Jenkins, R. A., Newark, N. J.
Murphy, C. G., Lincoln, Neb.
Savides, Y. S., Hillsboro, N. D.
Day, Ernest E., Whittier, Cal.
Fisher, C. W., Stockbridge, Mass.
Garford, Mary N., Elyria, O.
Goodliffe, George E., Morrisville, Vt.
Haarvig, John O., Lancaster, N. H.
Hill, Gilman C., Waterbury, Ct.
Judd, John K., Holyoke, Mass.
Myers, M. A., Chicago, Ill.
Patton, Carl S., Los Angeles, Cal.
St. John, B., Redwood City, Cal.
Stearns, Edward R., Concord, N. H.
Wright, Reuben B., Boise, Ida.
Murphy, William H., Detroit, Mich.
Anthony, Alfred W., New York City.
Collins, Mrs. Cornelia H., Pittsfield, Mass.
Harding, John P., St. Joseph, Mo.
Head, W. W., Cathlamet, Wash.
Hill, Mr. and Mrs. O. J., Kansas City, Mo.
Hooker, Thomas, New Haven, Ct.
McCready, Harry S., Willimantic, Ct.
Robins, Raymond, Chicago, Ill.
Whitehead, R. C., Stratford, Ct.
Breed, Reuben L., Chicago, Ill.
Hitchcock, Samuel, Williston, N. D.
Huget, J. Percival, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Oakley, E. Clarence, Mill Valley, Cal.
Parker, Fletcher D., Boston, Mass.
Smith, James R., New York City.
Augur, E. P., Middletown, Ct.
Augur (In memory of Mrs. Susan B.), Middletown, Ct.
Burger, Charles C., Sherrill, N. Y.
Jones, J. E., Beulah, N. D.
Thain, A. R., National Home, Milwaukee Co., Wis.
Talcott, John G., Talcottville, Ct.
Elliot, Mrs. Frank M., Evanston, Ill.
Gammon, Robert W., Chicago, Ill.
Reed, E. A., Springfield, Mass.
Thompson, Miss Ruth N., Portland, Me.

(352 subscriptions totaling $11,862.06)

The Financial Campaigns of Other Denominations

THE BAPTISTS	are undertaking to raise $100,000,000 in five years,—$50,000,000 already subscribed,—$12,500,000 in new subscriptions to be sought each year for next five years. Plan to appropriate $12,500,000 in 1921 for missionary and educational purposes.
THE EPISCOPALIANS	are seeking to secure $46,000,000 in a three-year campaign, 1920–1922. 40% already subscribed. Plan to appropriate $7,000,000 for missions and diocesan expenses in 1921.
THE METHODISTS	have $108,000,000 assured as the result of their Centenary Campaign. Recently appropriated $21,000,000 to be divided equally between home and foreign missions.
THE PRESBYTERIANS	are expecting to realize $23,000,000 for missions and education during year ending March 31, 1921.
THE UNITARIANS	with only three hundred churches, are raising $3,000,000 for new work and have already passed half-way mark.

These and other denominations are attempting to assume their share of world responsibility at the present time.

$5,000,000

is asked of our Congregational churches in 1921 to enable us to do our part.

WE CAN RAISE IT—IF WE WILL

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT
287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE

Rhode Island Conference

The Rhode Island Conference held at Saylesville, Nov. 9, was eminently practical and inspirational. Dr. H. F. Swartz portrayed the Congregational World Movement in its second year, setting forth vividly our opportunity and responsibility for the revered and valuable trusts which our pioneer fathers have built up in sacrifice and left us in confidence for Christ and the world. Prof. Theodore Collier, out of rich experience, brought his conception of the moral and spiritual unity and solidarity of Congregationalism, so requisite for past tasks and so necessary for our present world open door. Rev. E. R. Evans decided that the Congregational denomination is still needed to emphasize democratic principles in a democratic world. The Puritan pronouncement was and is the priesthood of believers. The world needs vitally John Robinson's breadth, Brewster's books and the Standish sword.

Miss Maude Evelyn Bradley's message to the women was "The shaft must be sunk deep down into the things of God." G. A. B.

The South Deerfield Retreat

The first of a series of "Retreats" in the interests of the Congregational World Movement was held at the parsonage in South Deerfield, Mass., on Monday, Nov. 29. Some twenty ministers and a few laymen of the Franklin Association were present, besides Secretaries Patton and Bell of the American Board.

After the devotional period in the morning Mr. Bell explained the new apportionment figures of the Movement from the viewpoint of the missionary work abroad. Dr. Patton followed with the presentation of the situation at home, including the needs of the home societies. Questions were freely asked, and in general the meeting was quite informal. The fact was revealed when Dr. Pratt of Greenfield presented the new apportionment figures that all but one of the churches represented were using the Every Member Canvass—apparently a record for the associations of Massachusetts.

After a luncheon served by the ladies of the South Deerfield Church the afternoon was devoted to missionary education and to the subject of Christian stewardship. Then a strong appeal by Dr. Patton for an advance in these days of opportunity at home and abroad was made. The meeting closed with a half-hour service of intercession.

It was the common testimony as the Retreat broke up that it had been well worth all that was spent upon it in time and energy. A fine spirit of fraternity prevailed. Each and all were given a vision of the possibilities of our unit through the Congregational World Movement, and all felt encouraged and strengthened in purpose to lay before their churches the new apportionment figures. Particularly did each feel the power of united prayer as applied to the denomination's problems of the day.

The Henry Ward Beecher of New Hampshire

There are few instances where the pulpit primacy of a state has long been as undisputed as in New Hampshire. Probably not a person acquainted with the religious life of the Granite State would gainsay the assertion that Dr. B. W. Lockhart, whose resignation from the pastorate of FRANKLIN ST., MANCHESTER, was accepted on Nov. 28, has stood for many years as the peerless preacher of New Hampshire.

For a quarter century and two years additional he has occupied a platform in the metropolis of the commonwealth formerly adorned by such diverse prophets as Ex-Pres. W. J. Tucker of Dartmouth College and Joseph Cook, the famous lyceum lecturer. Under his masterful ability that platform and the pulpit upon it have lost none of their glory.

Small of stature, hampered by physical disabilities that might have discouraged a less will receive soon after December 15th a package of samples of Lenten church helps, and an invitation to send for an adequate supply for his church. The package will include samples of the following—

EVERY PASTOR

1. THE FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER FOR 1921 (Rev. C. E. Burton), a booklet for private prayer and group devotional meetings, consisting of Scripture readings, meditations, hymns and prayers.
2. THE LENTEN HYMN BOOK, giving words and music of the hymns of the Fellowship.
3. THE GOSPEL OF JOHN, Vest Pocket Edition.
4. A TEXT BOOK FOR THE PASTOR'S TRAINING CLASS (Rev. R. E. Brown and Rev. W. H. Day). The lesson matter is divided into sections for weeks and days — a most helpful presentation of Christian truth.
5. PERSONAL EVANGELISM (Sherwood Eddy), a manual for Christian workers.
6. A CALL TO HIGH SERVICE (Rev. E. B. Allen), an introduction to Christian service.
7. CONGREGATIONALISM (Rev. H. C. Herring), the Kansas City Creed and a short summary of Congregational History, spirit and polity with an application for church membership.

Additional samples of these will be sent postpaid to any pastor or church worker on request.

THE CONGREGATIONAL COMMISSION ON EVANGELISM
287 Fourth Avenue, New York City

REV. WILLIAM HORACE DAY, Chairman. REV. FREDERICK L. FAGLEY, Secretary.

heroic soul, he nevertheless consecrated his powers to the proclamation of the truth with so burning a devotion, and he has equipped himself for his prophetic task with such assiduous and never relaxed self-discipline that his fame spread to and overpassed the confines of his state, and has made him for two decades and more one of the outstanding figures in New England Congregationalism.

Dr. Lockhart has ever maintained that the pulpit of a Congregational minister in America was a throne. That throne he has occupied with fine dignity, resorting neither to pyrotechnic rhetoric nor to flamboyant sensationalism to draw his congregations. He was a theological progressive when progressivism was far less popular than it is today. He has habitually and skillfully related his gospel' to the problems of the times, in so large and luminous a fashion as to prove himself a veritable statesman of the spirit. He has kept office hours in his study with the great thoughts of the ages, meeting as friend the mighty poets and seers of Christian history; and then with the shekinah still upon his countenance he has stepped into his pulpit to thrill and to persuade.

A master of invective, gifted with a subtle and genial humor, enriching his discourse with happy allusion and illustration culled from an amazingly comprehensive familiarity with the poetry, the philosophy and the serious literature of the day, he leaves behind him when he retires on Jan. 1, 1921, a pulpit tradition for which thousands of helped lives will bear sweet testimony of gratitude. His plans for the future involve travel and literary work, but they will leave him free to accept opportunities to preach as occasion may open. H. A. J.

Pilgrim Sermon Topics

Rev. H. N. Dascomb, Plymouth, Denver, Col., is preaching a series of sermons on Pilgrim Personalities and Principles, under the special headings of Bradford, the Paternal Governor; Brewster, the Man of Affairs; Winslow, the Publicist and Diplomat; Standish, the Exponent of Enforced Justice; and Eliot, the Apostle to the Disinherited."

During November and December Rev. E. W. Bishop of Plymouth, Lansing, Mich., is preaching on the topics, Reverence as a Factor in Life, What is a Pilgrim? Some Far-Reaching Episodes in Pilgrim History, On Certain Pilgrim Excellencies, The Pilgrim Character, The Pilgrim Church, and How the Mayflower Kept Sailing West.

Rev. R. J. McColl, pastor of First, Big Rapids, Mich., is preaching on the Convictions of 1620 Applied to the Needs of 1920, the topics being Fidelity through Freedom, Foundations of Faith, Culture and Character, and Propagation of Christian Ideals.

Sunday Evening Institute

Willimantic, Ct., of which Rev. H. S. McCreedy is pastor, is striking out on something of a new path for Sunday evenings. It goes under the name of Sunday Evening Institute, though that does not wholly describe it. It seems that the Church school meets before the morning service at 9.45 and it was found, as very often happens with schools meeting at that hour, that it was almost impossible to secure the attendance of those above the intermediate grade. Hence the idea of an evening session of the Church school was conceived. And it works.

At seven o'clock all meet in the Assembly Hall of the Church House, known as "The House of Brotherhood," for a ten-minute period of worship. At 7.15 in the various rooms classes of adults, of young men and of young

DORAN BOOKS

Some Really Good Holiday Books

MARGOT ASQUITH: An Autobiography
The greatly-heralded, eagerly-awaited autobiography of Margot Asquith, which much more than sustains its promise of international in interest, sensation and lively gossip, illustrated by many sketches and portraits.
Octavo. Two Volumes. Boxed. $7.50.

TAHITI DAYS Hector MacQuarrie
A picture of South Sea life as it is today; leisurely, colorful days, a primitive civilization, quaint personalities in a setting of tropical beauty.
Unusual Illustrations. Octavo. $4.50.

ADVENTURES AND ENTHUSIASMS E. V. Lucas
"Probably there is no better observer than Mr. Lucas in the English-speaking countries. His stories verge upon essays, and his essays hover upon the edge of narrative, real or fictitious. They make the pleasantest kind of a book in the world."—New York Post. Illustrated. $2.00.

THE ABANDONED FARMERS Irvin S. Cobb
By the author of "SPEAKING OF OPERATIONS——" Cobb's humorous account of a retreat from the city to the farm. With his genius for seeing the funny side, his narrative of vicissitudes keeps a man in a continual chuckle. Octavo. $3.00.

THE LAST DAYS OF THE ROMANOVS
George Gustav Telberg and Robert Wilton
The record of a royal murder. The first half is devoted to an investigation made by the Kolchak Government. In the second part is the personal narrative of Mr. Robert Wilton, London Times correspondent in Russia.
Illustrated. Octavo. $3.00.

MEN AND BOOKS AND CITIES
Robert Cortes Holliday
The genial philosopher of WALKING-STICK PAPERS takes a fruitful jaunt to points west, and returns with much literary loot. $2.50.

A GARDEN OF PEACE: A Medley in Quietude
By the author of THE JESSAMY BRIDE F. Frankfort Moore
For all who relish a quiet mind, an old world garden and good talk on art, literature, drama or life. Illustrated. Octavo. $3.00.

THE ROMANCE OF MADAME TUSSAUD'S
With an Introductory Essay by Hilaire Belloc John Theodore Tussaud
"Aside from its value for purposes of recreation and entertainment, such an exhibition as Madame Tussaud's is of course of great historical significance."—Boston Transcript. Illustrated. Octavo. $6.00.

THE PATERNITY OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN
William E. Barton
Decidedly a book to be appreciated by every student, every lover of Lincoln, for the author of THE SOUL OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN settles in a most interesting and satisfactory fashion all doubts concerning Lincoln's parentage.
Octavo. $4.00.

THE TRUCE OF GOD Mary Roberts Rinehart
A prose idyl in which is recaptured the romantic appeal of the days of chivalry. Beautifully illustrated and bound, it makes an unusually appropriate gift.
$1.50.

THE CAPTIVES Hugh Walpole
By the author of THE SECRET CITY, JEREMY, etc. "Is receiving great attention. Coteries are discussing its scheme of ethics and philosophy. Preachers are making it the text of sermons."—Chicago Post. $2.00.

A POOR WISE MAN Mary Roberts Rinehart
By the author of DANGEROUS DAYS. Mrs. Rinehart has found in the life of today a rich store of dramatic material, and holds before us in a broad and flashing mirror the loves and braveries of our own time. $2.00.

WOUNDED SOULS Philip Gibbs
"The book of the week. Read it—you'll be shocked, surprised, informed, and, we hope, delighted."—Chicago News. $2.00.

BONNIE PRINCE FETLAR Marshall Saunders
The author of BEAUTIFUL JOE, the most widely read dog story of modern times, has written with all her wealth of sympathy and understanding of animal life, the story of a Shetland pony. $2.00.

GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY Publishers New York

THE
CONGREGATIONAL
HAND BOOK
for 1921

Needed in every Congregational Church for Daily Use and Frequent Reference.

Contains

Daily Bible Readings
Fellowship of Prayer
Church Prayer Meeting Topics
Christian Endeavor Topics
Sunday School Lessons
Directory of National Council and Missionary Societies
Colleges and Seminaries
Congregational Statistics
Books on Congregationalism
Great Names
Confession of Faith

Prices

SINGLE COPY	$0.10
12 COPIES	1.00
25 "	2.00
50 "	3.50
75 "	4.50
100 "	5.00

ORDER NOW

EDITION LIMITED

Circulation Dept.
The Congregationalist and Advance

14 Beacon St.
BOSTON

19 W. Jackson St.
CHICAGO

women gather for three-quarters of an hour study. At the same time the boys and girls who belong to classes which meet in the morning and yet who like to come out in the evening, engage in Bible dramatization or pageantry. Just now two groups of these "Pilgrim Players" are at work; one group is preparing to give "The First Thanksgiving Dinner" as a part of the Tercentenary Celebration; the other group is at work on a Home Mission play, "The Happiest Plan."

At eight o'clock all classes disband and come together in the Assembly Hall for a social hour. Some light refreshments are usually served and the evening closes with an informal "sing" about the piano. The scheme seems to be working well. The best result is that the total number of those enlisted definitely in Bible study is about doubled and the scope of the educational work of the church has been widened to include all ages.

From East to West

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Notable Accessions at Hampstead

The Sunday of Nov. 7 will go down in the annals of HAMPSTEAD, Rev. Arnaldo Natino, pastor, as one long to be remembered. At the morning service 18 persons were received into the membership of the church, four by letter and 14 on confession. Among the number was a man and his wife, the parents of 10 children, and grandparents to 19. By their side were one of the daughters and her husband. Another father and son stood together to receive the right hand of fellowship, and five members of the young ladies' class in the Sunday school, and three of the young men's class completed the fourteen.

On the pastor's birthday two weeks ago his people had a reception in his honor and presented him with a handsome oak desk and revolving chair. Mr. Natino has been minister of Hampstead since July of this year.

MASSACHUSETTS

Spencer Fittingly Observes Tercentenary

A notable celebration was held by FIRST, SPENCER, Nov. 14-16, in a joint observance of the Tercentenary of the Landing of the Pilgrims and the 177th anniversary of the organization of the church. First Church was formed in 1744 with nine members; the present membership is 420.

The three days' celebration began Sunday, Nov. 14, with an anniversary sermon by the pastor, Rev. R. G. Armstrong, and was followed in the afternoon by a vesper communion service. At the Sunday evening service the various churches of the town and their pastors participated, the program being partly of an historical nature and including papers prepared and read by Miss Ella F. Tucker and Mrs. H. P. Howland. Dr. C. H. Patton of the American Board gave an address on A Pilgrim of the New Day. One of the speakers at the exercises on Monday was Rev. Neil McPherson of Springfield. The only living former pastors of First, Spencer, are Rev. C. J. Hawkins, of First, Lowell, Mass., and Rev. E. G. Zellars of Wallingford, Ct. The first meeting-house of the Spencer church was erected in 1743, the present edifice being the third building.

During the celebration an historical exhibit of great interest was held in the old Pope mansion, which was for many years the residence of the first two pastors of Spencer, Rev. Joshua Eaton and Rev. Joseph Pope.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH OF SPENCER

During the three years that Rev. R. G. Armstrong has been pastor 75 persons have been received into the membership of the church, many of them young people. At the communion service during the anniversary six more united with First. Mr. Armstrong is a progressive leader and is doing much to create a greater interest in religious activities in the town.

Boston Ministers Hear about Federal Council

At the Boston Ministers' Meeting, Dec. 6, Dr. H. L. Willett, professor in the University of Chicago, and editor of the Christian Century, in attendance at the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, spoke of the various phases of the movement for the co-operation of the churches. He described the Interchurch Movement, which undertook a

PELOUBET'S
Select Notes
The World's Greatest Commentary on the International Sunday-School Lessons
By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.
IT IS SCHOLARLY
CONDENSED
COMPREHENSIVE PRACTICAL
These four words sum up its true value
Let us send you a pamphlet containing the first lesson taken from the volume of 1921
Volume for 1921 Now Ready
Price, $2.00 Net; $2.10 Delivered
W. A. WILDE COMPANY
120 BOYLSTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.
Rand-McNally Building, Chicago
FOR SALE AT ALL BOOKSTORES

BRADFORD'S
History of the Plymouth Settlement
The history of the experiences of the Pilgrims in England and Holland, their voyage on the Mayflower, etc., is one of the most venerated and precious mss. on earth. In this book HAROLD PAGET renders it into modern English so that it is now accessible to all. $3.50
E. P. DUTTON CO., 681 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

Salary Roll of Honor

Churches Which Have Recently Raised Their Pastor's Salary

Previously reported, 1,332

1333. Saratoga Springs, N. Y., $400.
1334. Des Moines, Io., Greenwood, $400 (2d).
1335. Sioux Rapids, Io., $300.
1336. Granada, Minn.
1337. Waukegan, Ill., First.
1338. Springfield, Ill., First, $300.
1339. Lawrence, Mass., Riverside, $200 (2d).
1340. West Palm Beach, Fla., Union, $600 (2d).
1341. Hampstead, N. H., $500.
1342. Chicago, Ill., Green St., $300.
1343. Ashfield, Mass., $200 (2d).

larger program than the churches were willing to carry out and which, beginning as a movement to do interdenominational work, was submerged by denominational drives. The Federal Council is the last and the most promising attempt at co-operation. The Council itself is the great mediating agency of the churches. The Commissions of the Council are doing a notable work. Each one has a secretary and a small nucleus of those who are intensely interested. They hold conferences all over the country and formulate great principles on which the churches can safely build. The local federations are not organically connected with the Federal Council but are a part of the same plan. They differ as do the communities where they are. They undertake to do that in a community which no one church or no one denomination can do. There are a score of different forms of activity, such as religious education, religious work in public institutions, prevention of overchurching, etc. The great cathedrals of Europe were built by the community for the glory of God and as expressions of the community life. We need forms of expression of the community life.

The Federal Council is seeking relationship with Christian bodies in other lands. The time has come for a great forward movement in the co-operation of the American churches. The Federal Council is the appropriate instrument.

A. J. M.

Church at West Bridgewater Recognized

By a recognition service Sunset Ave. Chapel Association, West Bridgewater, has become a Congregational Church, No. 606, in the state. The Baptist church of the town fostered the chapel—growing from a house-school—organized the Association and erected the building several years ago. The entire enterprise is a commentary on a happy comity existing in that part of the Pilgrim country. When the majority of the local committee decided that a Congregational church would best meet the needs of the community, the Baptists agreed and granted an option of the edifice, now valued at $3,000. In June last the ministers of Norfolk Union reviewed the proceedings and adjourned to September when the church was formally accepted pending concurrent action by the Association of Churches. This event occurred Nov. 12 when a large delegation of representatives and other friends filled the church. A service of interest and impulse was presented. The history of the movement was given by Rev.

Walker's the Best Concordance

Over 50,000 more references than any other low priced concordance to the Bible. 980 pages. Cloth $3.00. ½ leather $3.75. Postage 20 cents.

14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St Chicago

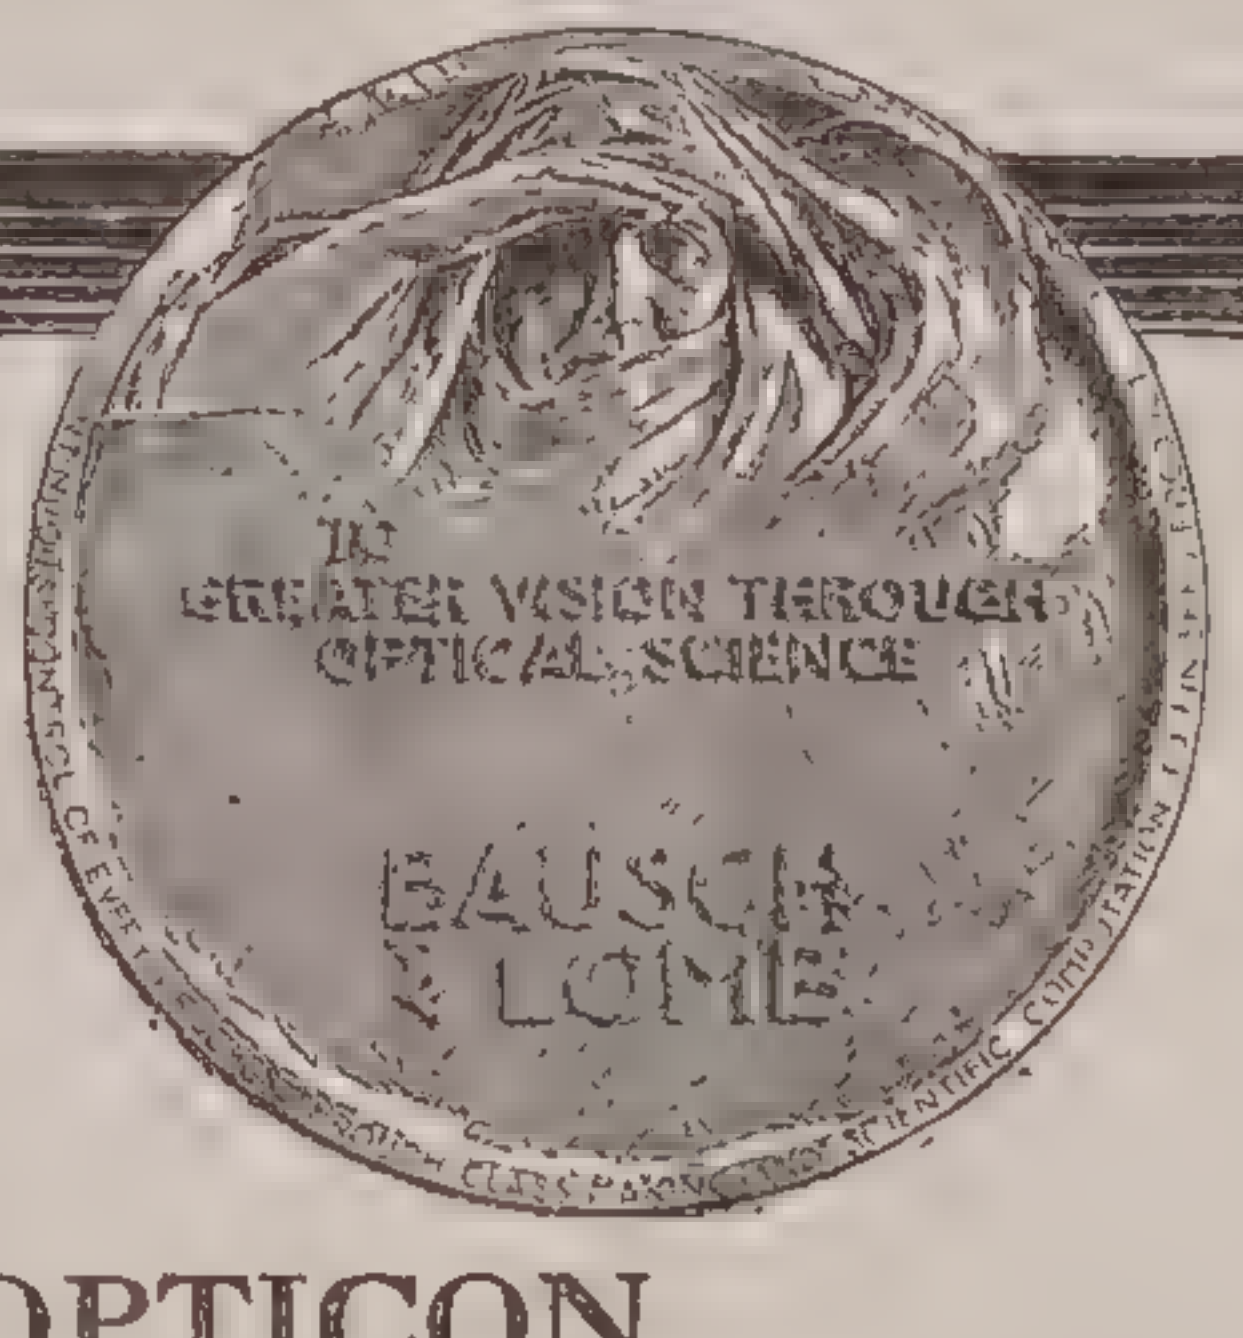
Long
JEWELER

The Problem Is Solved
FOR MODERATELY PRICED
Gifts for Men

GOLD JEWELRY
Scarf Pins	$2.00 to $75.00
Link Buttons	3.00 to 50.00
Pocket Knives	5.00 to 25.00
Pencils	10.00 to 25.00
Signet Rings	$5.00 to $50.00
Stone Rings	10.00 to 60.00
Cigar Cutters	6.00 to 20.00
Waldemar Chains	7.00 to 50.00
Belt Buckles	10.00 to 30.00
STERLING SILVER
Buckles with Belts	$4.75 to $18.00
Match Boxes	2.75 to 8.00
Pocket Knives	1.25 to 3.50
Pencils	2.50 to 5.00
Pocket Combs	1.00 to 3.00
Military Brushes	11.00 to 20.00
LEATHER
Dressing Cases	$5.00 to $50.00
Traveling Man Sets	3.00 to 15.00
Bill Books	3.50 to 10.00
FOUNTAIN PENS
Waterman's Ideal	$2.50 to $16.00
Moore's Non-Leakable	2.50 to 12.00
INK PENCILS
Onoto	$3.00 to $7.50

BUY GIFTS THAT LAST

41 Summer St.



GREATER VISION THROUGH OPTICAL SCIENCE
BAUSCH & LOMB

Uniform Visualization of Word Pictures

follows the illustration of lectures. Every hearer's eye sees the cathedral, the waterfall, the industry or the foreign country exactly as the speaker saw it. Every impression created is true to life and the lecturer's intent when assisted by the

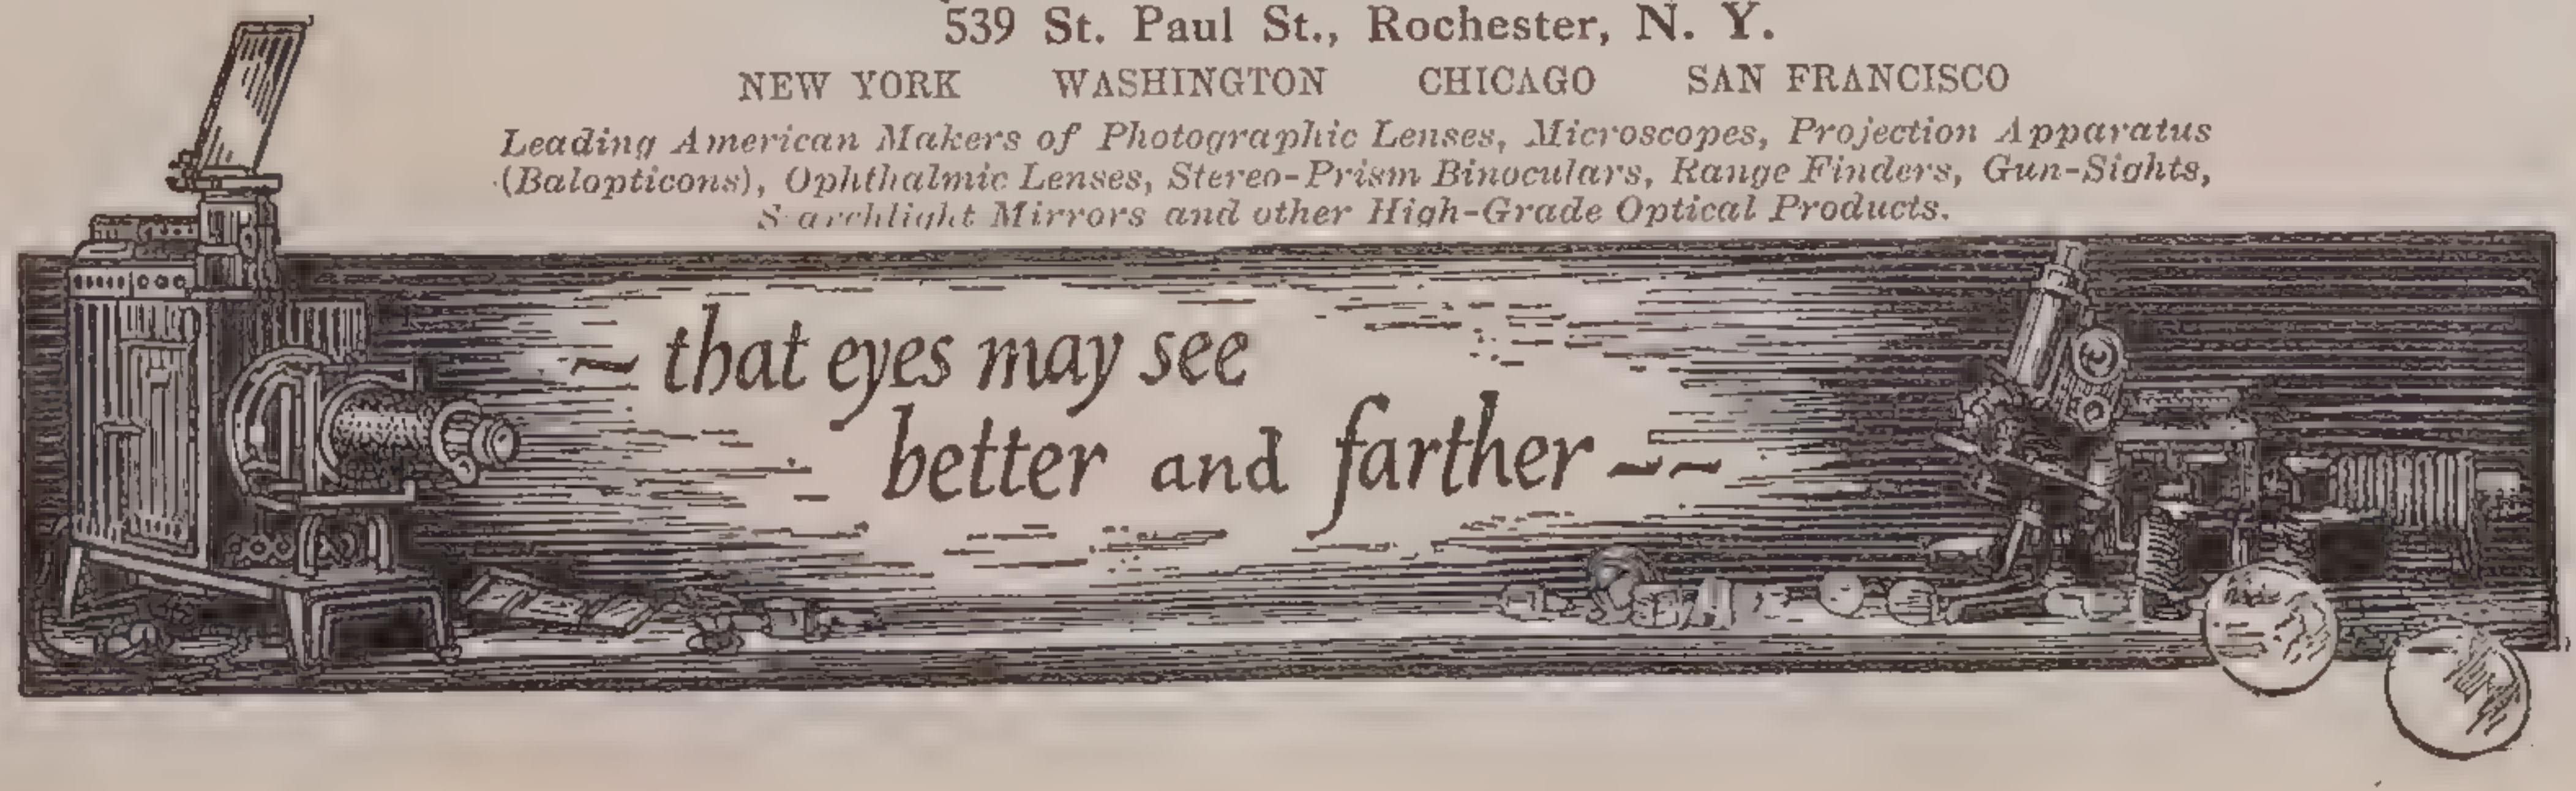
BAUSCH & LOMB BALOPTICON
The Perfect Stereopticon

There are Balopticon models for slides, opaque objects or both, including photo prints, post cards, specimens, illustrations, etc., even in full colorings. The new gas-filled Mazda Lamp assures safe, steady and evenly distributed light.

Price—$50.00 up.

BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL CO.
539 St. Paul St., Rochester, N. Y.
NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO

Leading American Makers of Photographic Lenses, Microscopes, Projection Apparatus (Balopticons), Ophthalmic Lenses, Stereo-Prism Binoculars, Range Finders, Gun-Sights, Searchlight Mirrors and other High-Grade Optical Products.



that eyes may see better and farther

MARY STEWART'S Famous Story-Telling Books

"TELL ME A STORY"

FIFTY THOUSAND SOLD
DELIGHTFULLY ILLUSTRATED

Tell Me a Story I Never Heard Before
Tell Me a Hero Story
Tell Me a Once-Upon-a-Time Story
Tell Me a Story of Jesus
Tell Me a True Story

In Five Volumes. Each $1.75

¶ "Fortunate indeed," says a prominent editor, "will be the children who find among their Christmas gifts copies of these delightful books. And fortuuate, too, will be the parents who, when the children have romped to bed, pick them up."

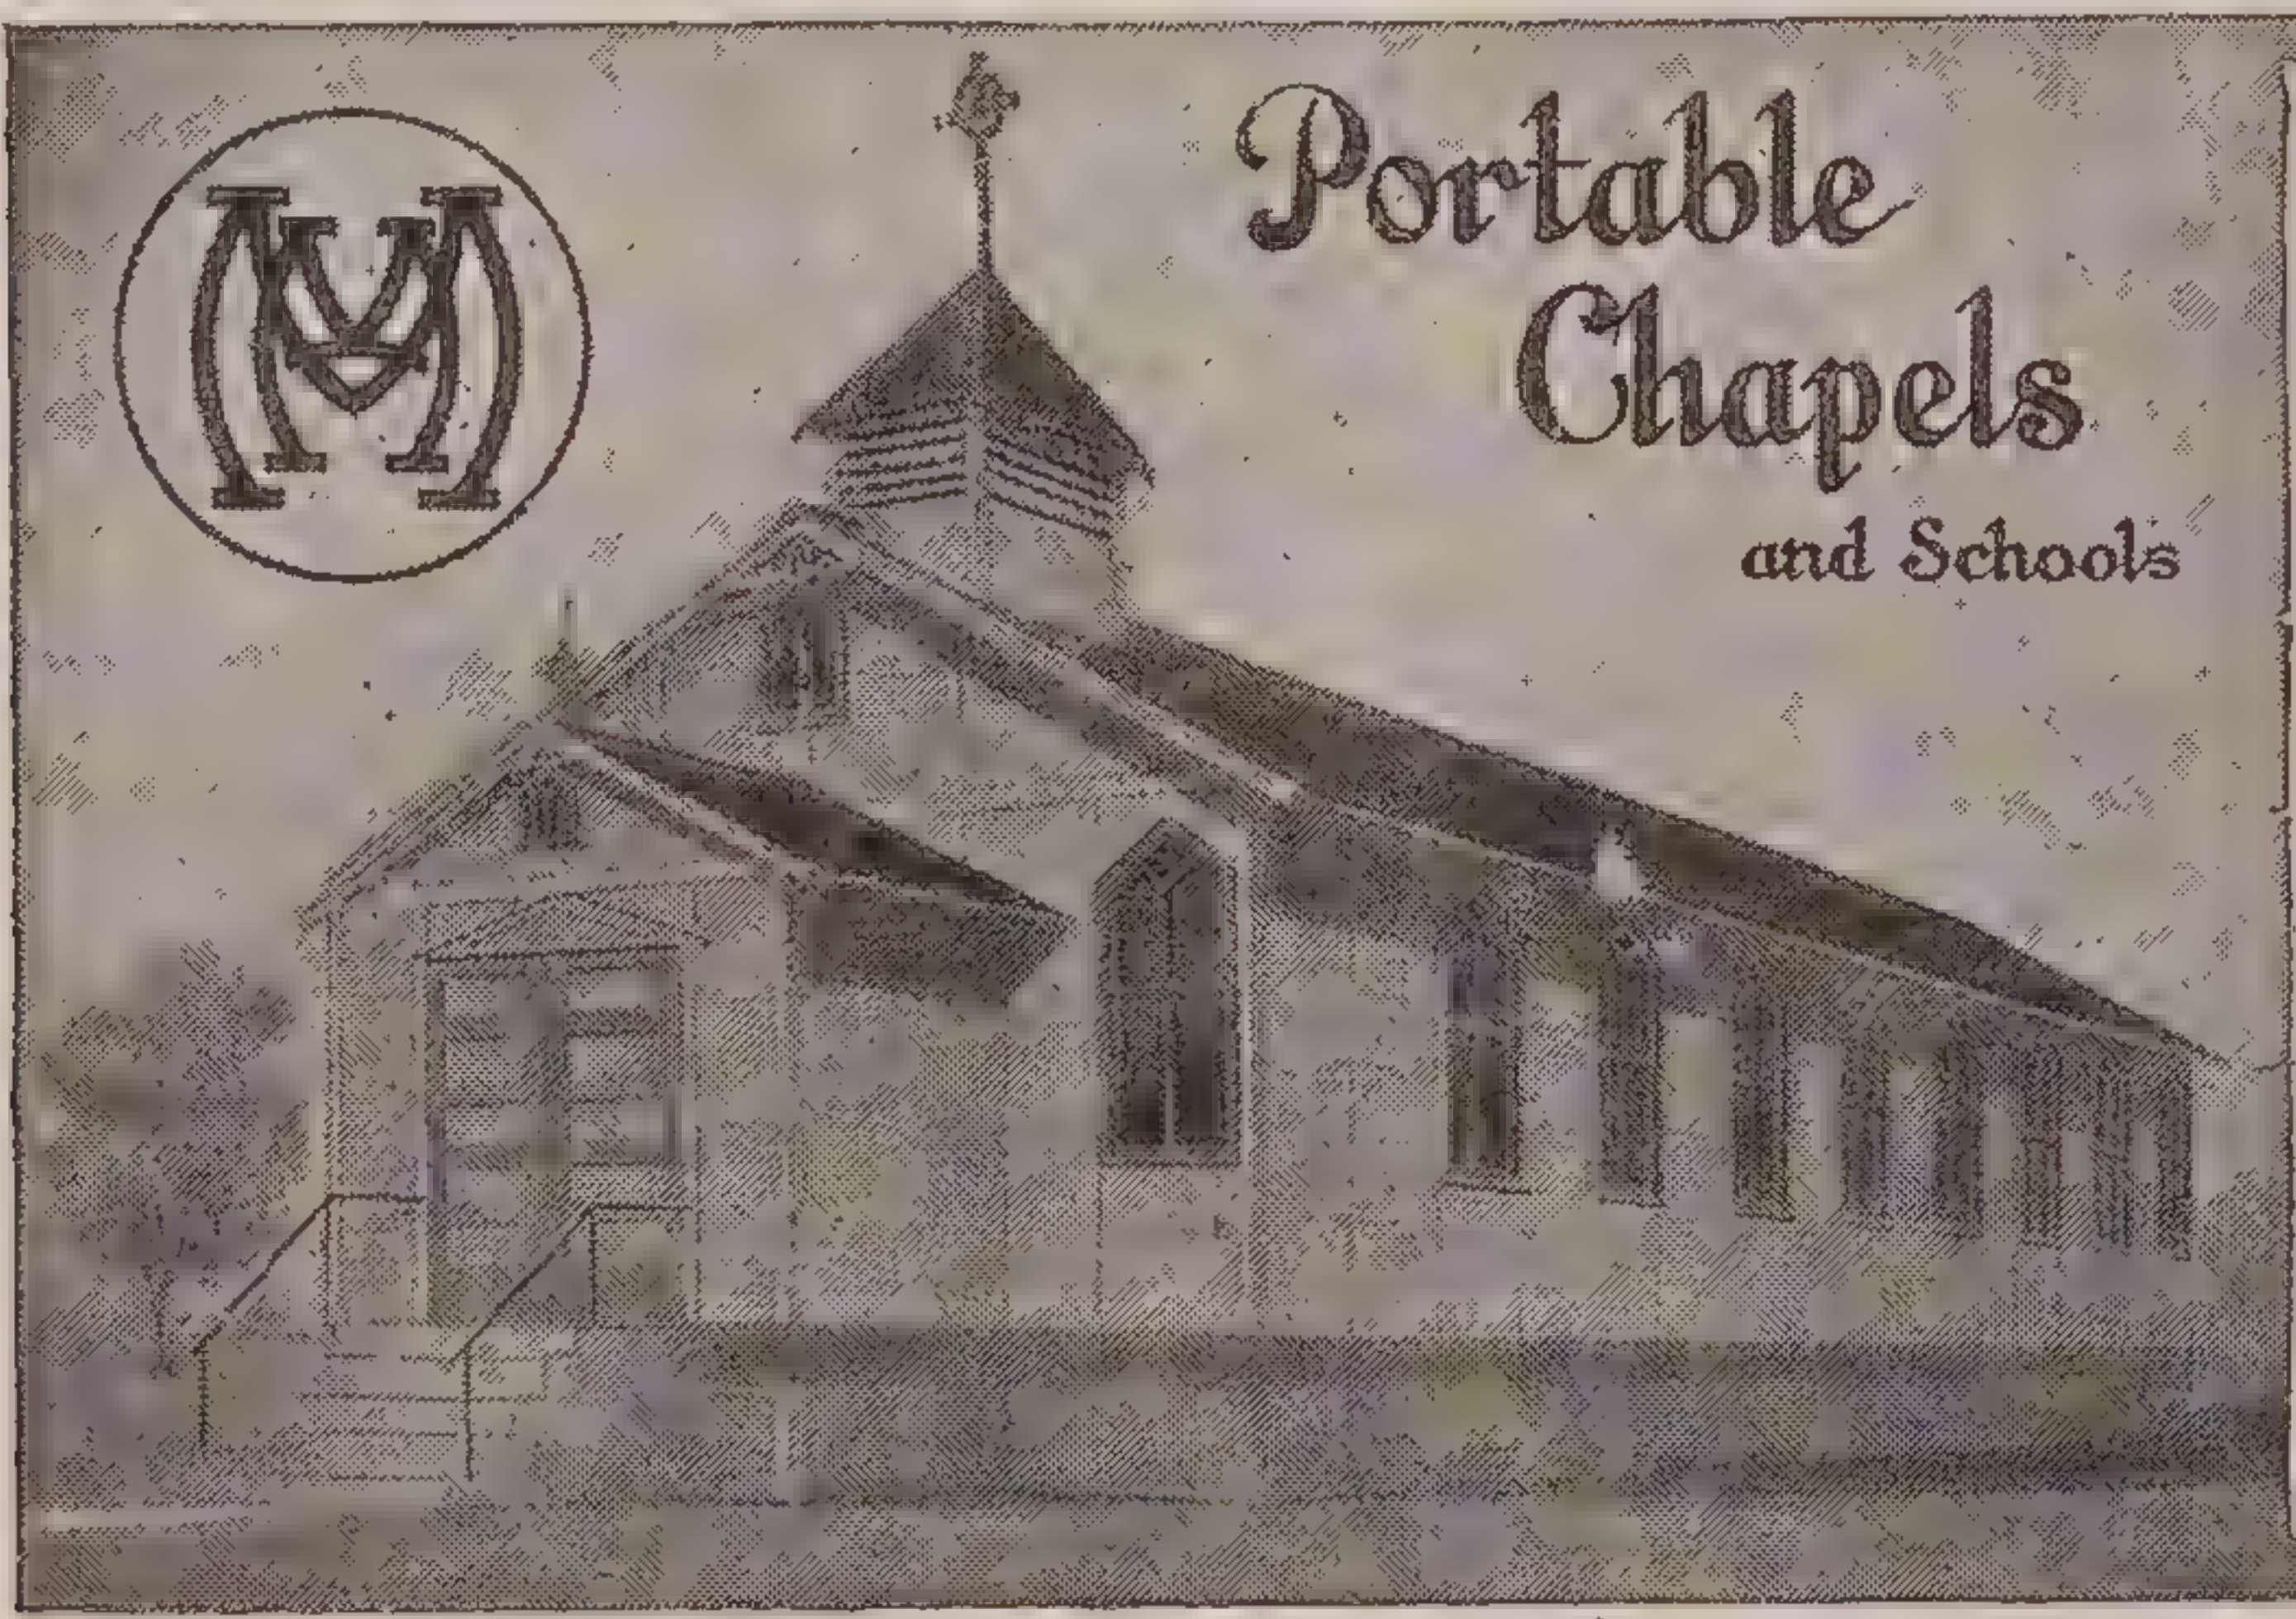
Henry van Dyke says: "Brings the meaning to the child's level."

Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin: "Fascinating—much-needed—a treasure."

Christian Work: "The most beautiful of all the children's stories books."

Christian Intelligencer: "The illustrations are like beautiful golden threads."

At All Booksellers FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY, 158 Fifth Ave., New York; 17 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago



For Twenty Years

M. & M. Portable Chapels have been giving excellent satisfaction to many denominations. They are scattered over the United States and in mission fields in foreign lands. They are ready-built in sections, with locks, glass, window fasteners, etc. in place. Can be erected in a very short time by unskilled labor with no tools but wrench and screw driver. Building Committees, Pastors, Church Extension and Missionary Boards should have our free catalog on file. Send for a copy today.

MERSHON & MORLEY CO.
92 Main St., Saginaw Mich.

READY

New England in the Life of the World

HOWARD A. BRIDGMAN

This graphically told summary of the hardy New Englanders' wonderful contribution to Western development and world progress abounds in fascinating incidents which will delight any reader anywhere.

An Ideal Christmas Gift

$4.00. Postage, 15 cents

14 Beacon St., Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St., Chicago

The Springfield Weekly Republican

Offers for $1.50 for One Year

A more comprehensive and intelligent survey of what is going on in the world than any other weekly magazine. It goes into every state in the Union.

The Springfield Republican, Springfield, Mass.

S. K. Tompkins, Brockton, moderator, and Rev. Herbert Walker, Holbrook, scribe. Secretaries Emrich and Walker of the Home Missionary Society made brief addresses of welcome and encouragement. The prayer was offered by Rev. H. F. Holton, Brockton. At present the pulpit is filled by supplies. Sunset Ave. Church faces the sunrise. W. P. L.

CONNECTICUT

Fine New Parish House for New Haven Church

The recent dedication of a $135,000 parish house by the Church of the Redeemer, New Haven, completes the first stage of an enterprise which, when finished, will give to this church one of the most beautiful pieces of ecclesiastical architecture in the city, and facilities for religious work of all kinds excelled by none. The work was planned some time ago, was delayed by the war, and has been beset by many difficulties arising from post-war conditions. Its completion at this time is a monument to the loyalty and resourcefulness of the people and to the wisdom, patience and energy of the pastor, Rev. Roy Houghton.

The building is of colonial design with a frontage of 75 feet and depth of 92. On the main floor are rooms for the kindergarten and primary departments of the Sunday school, and a beautiful chapel, equipped with pipe organ, seating 500 persons. Above, are other Sunday school rooms, pastor's study, secretary's room, and ladies' parlors with kitchenette. Below, is a basement in which is a well-equipped gymnasium 30 by 70 feet, and 14 feet high. The gymnasium has a stage, with footlights for entertainments, baths, club rooms, and a moving picture outfit. The gymnasium floor will make an ideal place for church suppers. A kitchen with every convenience adjoins.

The dedicatory exercises, which were held Oct. 10, consisted of a communion service in the morning in the new chapel, and the dedication proper in the evening at which Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter of Hartford spoke upon "The Mission of the Meeting-house." The dedication prayer was made by Dr. Watson L. Phillips, pastor emeritus.

Ultimately a large colonial church will be added to the parish house. In the meantime the congregation will have every facility for worship amid suitable surroundings and for educational and social work.

NEW JERSEY

Around the State

Unusual activity is noted in Northern New Jersey, due to the fact that many families are being crowded out of New York into the Metropolitan area of New Jersey. Dr. C. W. Carroll and Dr. Lyman Hood, of River Edge, keenly alert to this strategic opportunity, have already made a preliminary survey of parts of Bergen County, with a view to organizing a new church. The Executive Committee of the C. H. M. S. of New Jersey has appointed a sub-committee to obtain from New York and Brooklyn pastors the names and addresses of Congregational families which have recently entered the state. The fact that 90 people have recently left one of our Brooklyn churches for this state indicates the opportunity. The C. H. M. S. has decided to appoint a missionary for Pennsylvania, to relieve Dr. Carroll, so that he may have more time to serve New Jersey.

River Edge, Dr. Lyman Hood, pastor, has taken on new hope and activity. Dr. Hood is making a great place for himself in the community. Under his virile leadership plans are being made to erect a community house to house the secondary school and to be a young people's center for the community. It will cost at least $15,000 and the committee hopes to do it without the aid of the Church Building Society.

A new day of Christian fellowship is at hand at VINELAND, Rev. John MacMillan, pastor. The churches of Vineland have been holding a series of union meetings for the last three weeks, during the first week an outside representative of a different denomination preaching each evening. Mr. MacMillan is the recognized leader in the spiritual life of Vineland, highly esteemed both by the pastors and people of all denominations.

Having no regular pastor, ELIZABETH has sold its property and taken an option on a fine site in the most desirable part of the city. The church is working in counsel with the Executive Committee of the New Jersey Home Missionary Society.

PLAINFIELD, Rev. H. E. Clark, pastor, received 12 new members Nov. 7, making 56 for 1920, the largest number for any year in the history of the church. The Sunday school gave $271 for the A. B. C. F. M. on Nov. 14 as their annual tercentenary offering.

Mr. Clarke is giving an eight weeks' series of morning sermons on "The Pilgrims and Their Achievements," which is attracting great interest. In addition the church is having six Wednesday evening illustrated addresses on "The Pilgrims and the Development of Religious Liberty." The church troop easily ranked first for the whole city in the election day meet of the Boy Scouts. The church recently gave a reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Clark to which more than 500 were invited. H. E. C.

OHIO

Installed Pastor of Painesville

Rev. W. A. Warren, for ten years pastor of Plymouth, Columbus, was installed as pastor of FIRST, PAINESVILLE, on Nov. 29, the Plymouth Rock Association acting as the installing body. Combined with the installation service was a fellowship meeting at which Dr. Nicholas Van der Pyl of Oberlin gave an address on The Causes of Industrial Unrest, and Rev. F. Q. Blanchard of Cleveland an address on Modern Methods in Evangelism.

Rev. W. A. Warren gave his statement of belief in a paper entitled Some Suggestions on Faith and Work. This statement was so entirely satisfactory that the Association, without question or desire for a private session, voted unanimously for installation.

In the installation services Dr. Van der Pyl preached the sermon on Faith; Rev. P. W. Sinks, a former pastor, gave the charge to the pastor; Rev. N. W. Bates gave the charge to the people, and Rev. A. B. Cristy, the recent pastor, offered the installing prayer.

NEBRASKA

Weeping Water Observes Anniversary

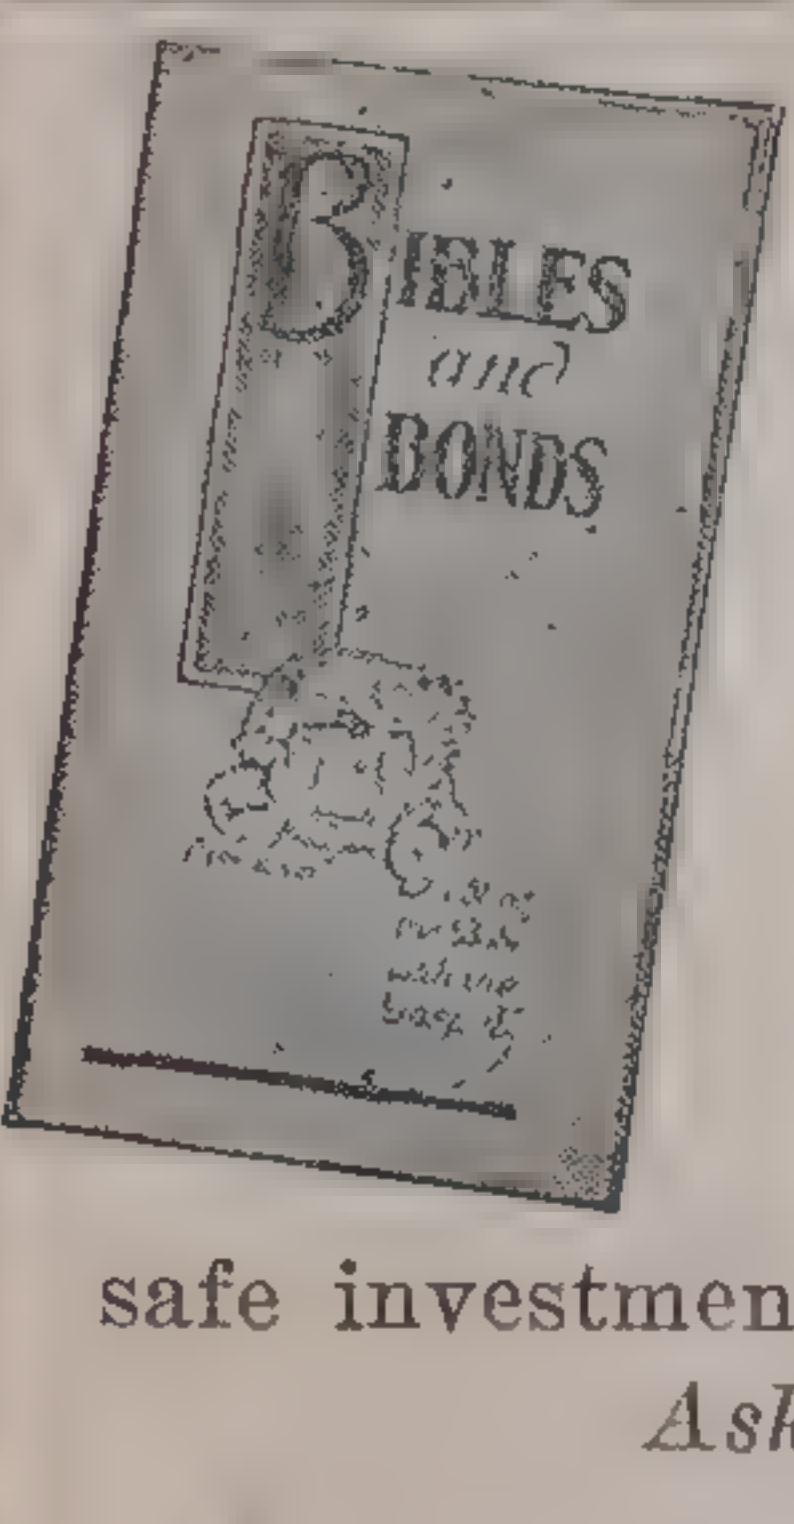
WEEPING WATER, Rev. W. H. Riley, pastor, recently celebrated its 60th anniversary with appropriate services. On Nov. 14, the pastor spoke on The Congregational Fellowship to a well-filled house; on Wednesday, under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Society, the ladies of the church, to the number of 75, met for one o'clock luncheon, with appropriate program following, the chief speaker being Mrs. S. I. Hanford, wife of a former pastor of the church; on Thursday evening, the real birthday of the church, a Reminiscence Meeting was held, the older members of the church bringing to the others brief accounts of special seasons in the past life of the church; Sunday, Nov. 21, the pastor spoke again on the theme, The Future of the Church, and in the evening the Christian Endeavor Society held a special service.

The church was organized Nov. 18, 1860, with seven members; the last Year Book shows a total membership of 412. Many hundreds have passed in and out of the church membership during the 60 years, so that its influence has been widely spread. It has been known as a deeply spiritual church, and during the past year much more money has been raised for purely benevolent purposes than was ever even attempted before.

NORTH DAKOTA

Eckelson Reorganized

SANBORN and ECKELSON, Rev. J. B. Burkhardt, pastor, have recently received new members, Sanborn 12 and Eckelson 21. Eckelson was closed for about a year and its membership had been reduced to two. During August of this year the Ladies' Aid and the Sunday school resumed their work and in September



Write for this Booklet

"Bibles and Bonds" tells the interesting story of a world-wide work and a safe investment yielding as high as 8%.

Ask for Booklet J

American Bible Society
Bible House Astor Place New York

The Christian Statesman

Devoted for 54 years to safeguarding and strengthening our Christian ideals as a nation and as citizens—A non-sectarian, non-partisan but vitally Christian monthly, backed by leaders of all churches,—the only such,—authoritative articles covering a wide range,—from foremost leaders. Whatever else you will have in 1921, you will need this. It's different—Rate $2.00—3 mo. trial 50 cents—January issue, 20 cents. Address 404 Publication Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Combination Offer

The Christian Statesman . } $4.00
The Congregationalist and Advance } for one year

To new subscribers only

DEPARTMENT OF CIRCULATION
14 Beacon Street, Boston

CASH FOR OLD LETTERS

United States or foreign correspondence with postage stamps or other postmarks of 1865 or previous. Also old collections of postage stamps I will buy at good price. Write or send with price asked.

W. VOIGT
3014 Bainbridge Ave. Bronx, New York City

Massachusetts General Hospital

Training School for Nurses. Established 1873. 1,350 Graduates. Prepares its students for advanced positions. For particulars consult Circular of Information. Address SALLY M. JOHNSON, R. N., Supt. of Nurses. Boston, Massachusetts.

BOOK of 625 NEW BIBLE STORIES SCRIPTURE ANECDOTES

625 NEW Bible STORIES
Illustrations & Scripture Anecdotes
Interesting Stories for Bible Talks, Christian Workers and Home Instruction. Arranged under Topical Heads for use of Speakers, Teachers & General Reading. Complete Manual of New Word Pictures on Bible Subjects. Vest Pocket size, 128 pgs. Cloth, 25c. Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

INTERCOLLEGIATE TOURS
BOSTON U.S.A.

SUMMER CRUISE
THROUGH ST. PAUL'S
MEDITERRANEAN

Palestine by auto and camp. The glory that was Greece and the mystery that was Egypt. University credit for Biblical History and Geography.

Prof. Albert E. Bailey
Leader
65-K Franklin St., Boston

The Quality Investment

Guaranteed Farm Mortgages

Forty Three Years In Business— Without Loss to A Client

J. L. Pettyjohn & Co.
OLATHE, KANSAS

RUNNING OVERTIME!

An old established New England Company is now running overtime and has orders that will not be completed until next autumn. Would you like to have details?

Earnest E. Smith & Co.
Specialists in New England Securities
52 Devonshire St., Boston
Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges

Offering Envelopes
For all purposes. Prompt Service
Ask For Prices
14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

"A little narrative of genuine beauty."—Brooklyn Eagle.

"So interesting and vital to boys and young men as to warrant the widest possible circulation."—L. Wilbur Messer, Secretary, Chicago Y.M.C.A.

The Prodigal Son Ten Years Later

By DR. JOHN ANDREW HOLMES

Pastor of the First Church in Lincoln, Nebraska, and writer of weekly epigrams for various religious and secular periodicals.

Make this book your Christmas gift to young men

New Envelope Edition, 35c.

BOSTON THE PILGRIM PRESS CHICAGO

The Congregational Training School For Women

Trains for Christian leadership.

The work of Church Assistant, Director of Religious Education, and Instructor in Week-day Religious Education offers opportunity for the finest and highest type of social service.

One and two year courses. Expenses low.

MISS MARGARET TAYLOR, Dean,
5603 Dorchester Ave., Chicago, Ill.

BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

105th year opens Sept. 29, 1920. For College or non-College men. Courses, regular and elective; leading to diploma or degree; modern, thorough, practical. Expenses low. For Catalogue or information address

Prof. WARREN J. MOULTON, Cor. Sec'y.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Research and Training in Five Departments:

(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.

Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.

Degrees of M. A., B. D. and Ph. D., may be obtained by students. For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.

Electric Organ blowing outfits for organs of any make.

Write, stating which catalog is desired.

Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

BILHORN THE BEST FOLDING ORGANS TELL THE TALE

BEGINNING with STYLE X. We Guarantee

Send for Catalog. Makers of the famous 3 and 5-ply OAK CASES

BILHORN BROTHERS, 136 West Lake St., Chicago Style O

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER

is known all over the country. Four thousand churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars. THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio.

Chicago Theological Seminary

Is affiliated with the University of Chicago. Seminary instruction is supplemented by the varied and limitless opportunities of the University and the Divinity School. Tuition free.

Trains for
- Pulpit and Pastorate
- Missionary Work
- Community Service
- Religious Education

Opportunity is offered to secure the M. A. degree during preparation for the B. D.; also an annual two-year honor fellowship for post-graduate work.

5757 University Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

OZORA S. DAVIS, President.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION

An undenominational training school for

The Ministry Religious Education
Foreign Missions Social Service

Curricula high grade and modern. Graduate degrees. University of California privileges. Opportunities for the study of Oriental peoples. Open to men and women of all Christian denominations. For catalogue address

WILLIAM FREDERIC BADE, Dean, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

The Graduate School of Theology

OBERLIN COLLEGE

A strong, well balanced course, preparatory to the work of the ministry at home or abroad.

Second semester's work begins February 8 with all the regular faculty teaching.

Address G. W. FISKE, JR., Dean, Oberlin, Ohio.

PIPE & REED CHURCH

ESTEY ORGANS

120 BOYLSTON ST.
BOSTON ~ MASS.

MENEELY BELL CO

TROY, N.Y. AND
198 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY

BELLS

Church Chime Peal BELLS Memorial Bells a Specialty

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY CO., BALTIMORE, MD., U. S. A.

preaching was begun. Special meetings were held in October and on Nov. 14 the church was reorganized with 23 adult members.

CALIFORNIA

From Los Angeles to Tucson

As a decided surprise to state Congregationalism comes the announcement of Rev. George Andrews' resignation from PLYMOUTH, LOS ANGELES. Dr. Andrews has accepted a unanimous call to Tucson, Ariz., and took up his new position Dec. 12. With its college constituency, gathered around Arizona's state university, our church at Tucson offers a rare chance for just such intellectual gifts as Dr. Andrews possesses.

In 1916, Dr. Andrews left Monson, Mass., to cast his ability into the West, and his leadership at Plymouth has made itself felt not only in that church but in denominational activity at large. As a member of the Conference and Los Angeles Extension Society Boards, his counsel has been sought on many committees, and his civic contribution has been of value also to Los Angeles. Dr. Andrews served the "Y" in France during the last year of the war and throughout his ministry here has applied himself especially to men's work. He will be distinctly missed from this Conference and is relinquished to Arizona with genuine regret.

S. E. B.

Splendid Progress at Plymouth, Oakland

During the past three years PLYMOUTH, OAKLAND, has paid off a debt of about $35,000. Nearly 200 members have been added to the church and a disheartened membership facing seeming disaster has been turned into a spirited, well-organized fighting force. In addition to the subscriptions for the debt large increases have been secured in the weekly pledges and the church's financial condition is the best in its history. Dr. C. L. Kloss, the pastor, recently received a call from El Paso, Tex., and accepted it but the membership of Plymouth rose almost en masse and demanded not in vain that he remain to complete the important work he had so well started.

WASHINGTON

New Church for Green Lake, Seattle

Despite the resignation of Rev. Albert C. Moses who closed his work at GREEN LAKE, SEATTLE, on Oct. 31, the church is going forward with its steadily enlarging plans. A new building is to be erected following the plans drawn by the retiring pastor, funds for which are practically all on hand. The church regrets that Mr. Moses is lost to them, but rejoices in his new field of service as assistant pastor of First Presbyterian, Seattle.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

ALLISON, A. L., Dwight and Antelope, N. D., to Providence, Ill. Declines.

ANDREWS, G. A., Plymouth, Los Angeles, Cal., to Tucson, Ariz. Accepts and is at work.

BARWICK, A. W., Plainfield, Ct., to Mendon, Ill. Accepts to begin Feb. 1.

EUSDEN, R. A., to Plymouth, Lawrence, Kan. Accepts and is at work.

FORD, A. H., Milburn, Ill., to Chillicothe. Accepts.

MCGIFFERT, A. C., Jr., New York, to All Souls', Lowell, Mass. Accepts and is at work.

MOORE, LEON, Curtis, Neb., to 7th Ave., Denver, Col., a former pastorate. Declines.

PEGGS, FREDERICK, Oswego, Ill., to Farmington. Accepts.

STEWARD, GLEN, Big Rapids, Mich., to Geneva, Ill.

WILTBERGER, L. W., Postville, Io., to Lake View. Accepts.

Resignations

ALLISON, A. L., Dwight and Antelope, N. D. Mr. Allison declined to withdraw resignation, though the church asked him to do so.

Reynolds, M. W., Housatonic, Mass., to accept appointment as chaplain in the Regular Army. Has taken effect.

Smart, G. T., Newton Highlands, Mass. To take effect March 1.

Ordinations and Installations

Bockoven, P. J., o., St. Charles, Minn., Nov. 19. Sermon by Rev. W. A. Bockoven, father of the candidate; other parts by Rev. Messrs. W. L. Sutherland and W. E. Dudley.

McConnell, R. A., i., South, Brooklyn, N. Y. Sermon by Rev. Richard Roberts; other parts by Rev. Drs. Oliver Huckel, R. W. McLaughlin, E. W. Lyman and J. P. Huget.

Warren, W. A., i., Painesville, O., Nov. 29. Sermon by Dr. Nicholas Van der Pyl.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
Connecticut
Branford, First	8	17
Old Saybrook	1	4
Massachusetts
Boston, Central		5
New York
Brooklyn, Church of the Evangel		14
Flatbush	6	35
Ocean Ave.	8	21

Personals

Brower, C. DeW., who has recently accepted a call to First, Tampa, Fla., will reside at 2203 Florida, Ave., Tampa.

Hunt, Mr. Charles J., St. Paul, Minn., has accepted the secretaryship of the Pilgrim Victory Campaign of North Dakota with headquarters at Fargo. Mr. Hunt has had extended experience in the Pilgrim Fund Campaign and in other similar work.

Favorite Poems

Rev. F. W. Raymond, pastor of the First Church of Christ, Glastonbury, Ct., sends us the following poem as one of his favorites:

Indwelling

If thou couldst empty all thyself of self,
Like to a shell dishabited,
Then might He find thee on the ocean shelf
And say—"This is not dead"—
And fill thee with Himself instead.

But thou art all replete with very thou,
And hast such shrewd activity,
That, when He comes, He says: "This is enow
Unto itself. 'Twere better let it be:
It is so small and full, there is no room for Me."

—T. E. Brown.

Plymouth's Compact Celebrations

(Continued from page 789)

Whitney, pastor of the First Church. Response by Nathan W. Littlefield, Governor-General, and addresses followed by Hon. Robert G. Harris, Capt. Granville Standish, and Dr. Perry, Episcopal Bishop of Rhode Island. A meeting in the afternoon with an oration by Hon. LeBaron Bradford Prince, Ex-Governor of New Mexico, on "The Pilgrims: Their Contribution to Our Nation and the World." An original poem by Thomas W. Bicknell, secretary-general of the society.

On Sunday afternoon Plymouth itself celebrated the same event by a mass meeting in the theater in which the Woman's Club, the clergy, the Legion and the public school children all had a part. The Hon. Sherman L. Whipple of Boston and Plymouth was orator. His address was on The Compact in which he brought out the great place this germ of self-government has had in history.

BIBLES of every description, size and price. We are always pleased to quote prices, send catalogues, or to fill orders promptly.

14 Beacon Street
Boston
THE PILGRIM PRESS
19 W. Jackson St.
Chicago

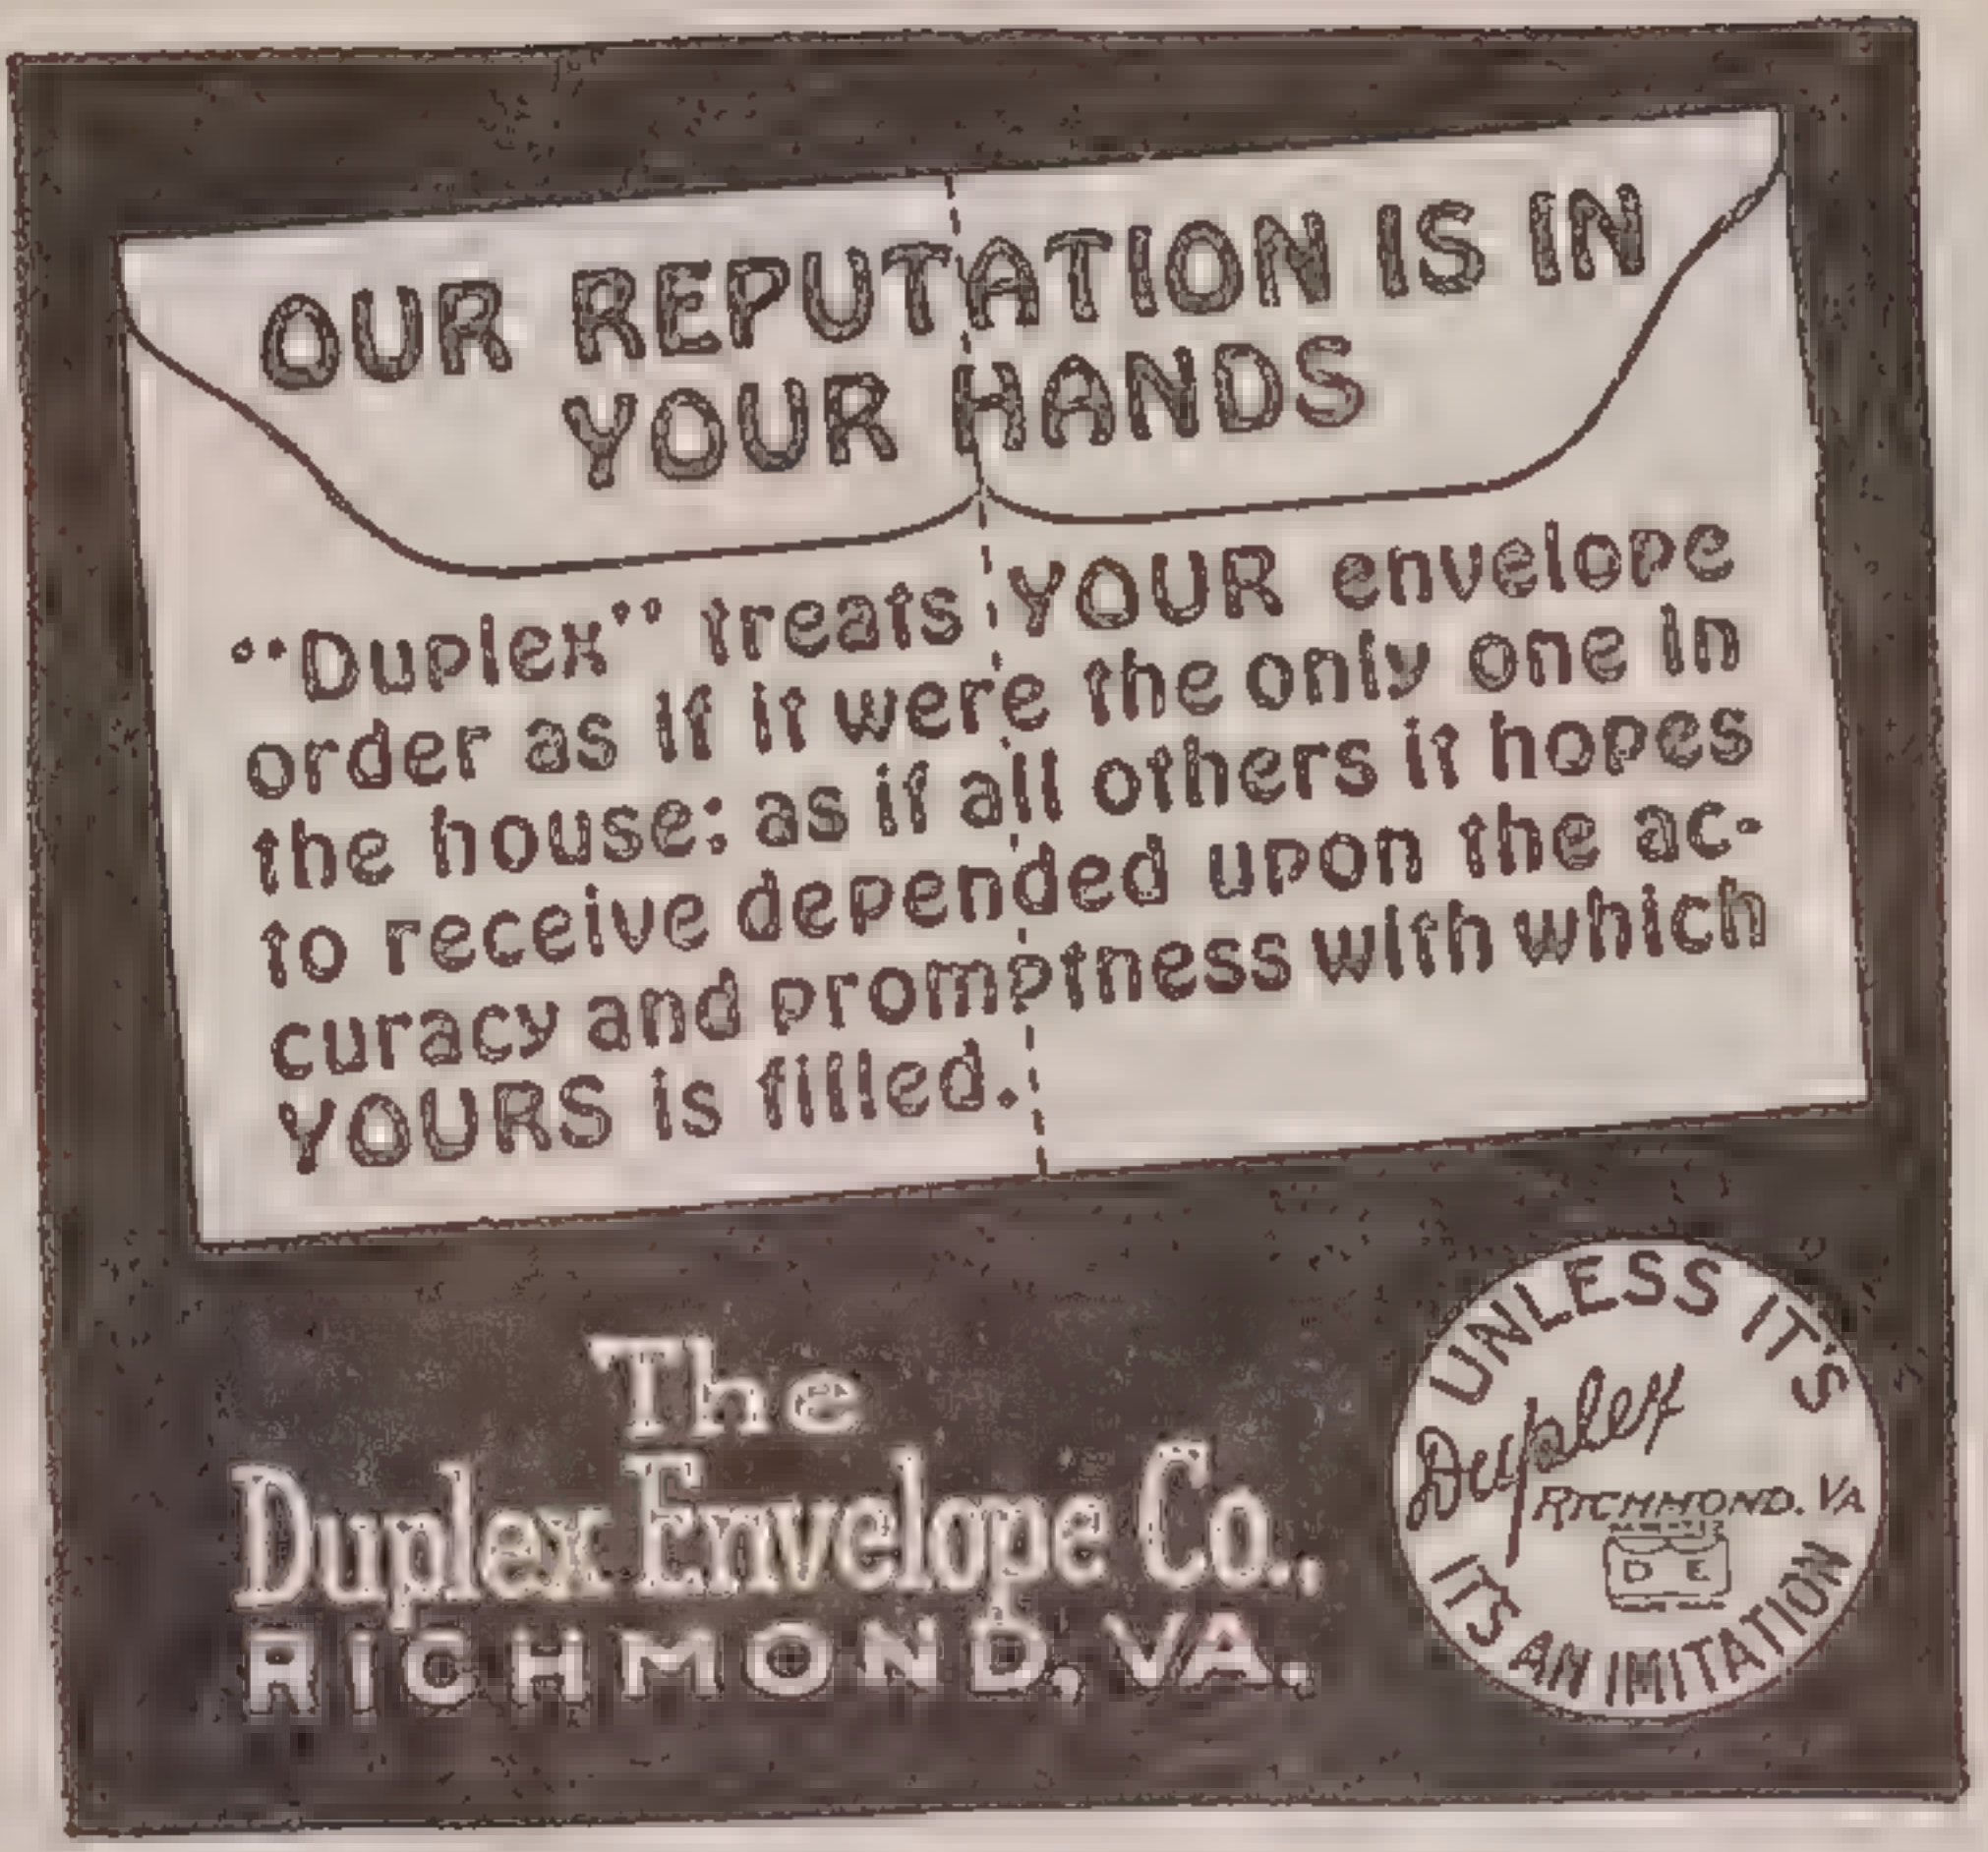
Events to Come

National Congregational Council, Los Angeles, Cal., July 1-8.

Boston Ministers' Meeting. Regular meeting in Pilgrim Hall, Dec. 20, will be omitted. Congregational ministers will unite with the Unitarians in Unity House at 12.30 at a luncheon presided over by Rev. Harry Foster Burns and addressed by Mr. Ernest G. Adams, Chairman of the Unitarian Forward Movement, and by Mr. Edwin O. Childs, Mayor of Newton and an active layman in Eliot Church.

Woman's Board of Missions, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Jan. 7, 1921, 10.30 a. m.

Day of Prayer for Missions, Feb. 18, 1921.



OUR REPUTATION IS IN YOUR HANDS

"Duplex" treats YOUR envelope order as if it were the only one in the house: as if all others it hopes to receive depended upon the accuracy and promptness with which YOURS is filled.

The Duplex Envelope Co.,
RICHMOND, VA.

UNLESS IT'S Duplex RICHMOND, VA. D E IT'S AN IMITATION

Christmas Gifts

ordinarily are the reflection of one's own taste. Because of this very fact is the gift highly prized and its pleasure to the recipient increased many times.

What better gift could there be than a year's subscription to our own church paper

The Congregationalist and Advance

arriving as it does at the home of those near and dear for fifty-two weeks and bringing with it its cheerful and interesting message?

The News of the Church throughout the World. Timely Editorials. New Church Methods. Good Stories. Reviews of the Best Books. Interesting Sermons. Articles from our Leaders.

Christmas Offer

Your own subscription renewed for a year and a gift new subscription for a friend for $5.00. $6.00 worth for $5.00. But must be sent to us direct and before Christmas.

We will send an attractive announcement of your gift to your friend.

Department of Circulation
The Congregationalist and Advance
14 Beacon Street, Boston 9
19 W. Jackson Street, Chicago

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Advertising Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

McLANE—Died in Leominster, Dec. 1, after long illness, Frances Robertson, wife of William W. McLane.

REV. R. A. GOODWIN

Pastor, Hardwick, Mass., died Nov. 23, 1920. A preacher's estimate of a preacher-friend.

Some years ago when Andover Seminary was being moved to its present location adjoining Harvard, a group of Andover boys migrated to the far Pacific Coast, to complete their interrupted studies at the Pacific Theological Seminary (now the Pacific School of Religion). R. A. Goodwin was one of these. It was at the Seminary in Berkeley that I came to know him. The quality of the young man showed itself in that journey and throughout my acquaintanceship with him. Our Western forefathers who crossed the great plains in ox-carts, endured their own hardships; so also did this little group of migrating theologs. The trip was long and expensive; there was not enough money to go around. In such an emergency, Goodwin was always the one to come forward and make the supreme sacrifice to friendship. He lent his hard-earned and desperately saved dollars to a comrade, enabling him to sleep in a Pullman car, while Goodwin tortured his own back through the long nights of the journey sleeping upright in the day coach.

This man possessed that precious quality so rare amongst us—yes, amongst us preachers who profess to follow Christ—the quality of unselfishness. He was one of the few I have known who entered into the saying of Jesus, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Goodwin knew that he had a call to the ministry; he knew what that call was; and he held fast to it in spite of discouragements in the Seminary, and difficulties incident to inadequate salary after graduation. Goodwin had the gifts of a succesful salesman in this our day when successful salesmanship is exalted and rewarded far above "spiritual gifts." He could at any time have stepped out of his humble parishes and quadrupled his earnings by selling something other than salvation; but he accepted his economic martyrdom, stuck to his post, fought the good fight, kept the faith, and finished his course. And he kept his smile to the end. "Of such is the Kingdom of God." Among the much-vaunted heroes who did their part on the firing line he has his place also in the invisible regiment of those who, by sheer grit and by faith, held their difficult posts during the war in the face of the terrible cost of trying to be fair to one's growing family as well as faithful to the Church of Christ.

Beneath Goodwin's modest and unassuming manner there was genuine worth of character. He possessed no spectacular gifts. But when the words of some of us who have deemed ourselves eloquent shall have passed away as the noise of tinkling cymbals and sounding brass, Goodwin's unselfish and friendly life will still be preaching from the Pacific to the Atlantic Coast, and from New Hampshire to Connecticut. He gave his life fully and freely. By his power of sympathy he blended into the need of people's lives. Small things reveal the true greatness of men. Three of us fellow theologs were acquainted with the same household in Berkeley, Cal.; the others fondly believed themselves to be, homiletically, more than Goodwin's peers. But when the family dog died—in that household of our acquaintance—Goodwin was the one who was chosen to give it an honorable burial. And when a blind member of this man's parish, in New Hampshire, spoke bitterly because his days were dark and empty, it was Goodwin who taught him to read in a book for the blind.

He worked hard, denied himself for the sake of his family and parish, was a friend to be counted upon, and lived the Gospel he preached. When he died, he left to his children a preacher's legacy—a good name, and a tradition. He has gone from us early in life but he has left an impress upon many which will endure. It is upon the quiet influence of such men that the enduring foundations of the Kingdom of God rest.

MARSHALL DAWSON.

Storrs, Ct.

MARIA B. FRENCH

Maria Boynton French, born Feb. 11, 1845, in Williamsville, Berkshire Co., Mass. Died in Hermosa, S. D., Nov. 25 1920. Buried in Glenwood, Io., Nov. 28, 1920. For eight years a scholar in the Congregational Sunday school, Brookfield, Mass. Her church membership was with the Congregational churches in Amboy, Ill., Esmond, S. D., and Glenwood, Io.

For the last seventeen years she has been the agent for getting subscribers for The Congregationalist in Glenwood, Io.

ELBERT R. HOWELL

Elbert R. Howell, a member of Central Church, Brooklyn, since 1875, died at his home in Lake Grove, N. Y., Nov. 30, 1920, in his 72d year, after a long and painful illness. He was active in the work of the church and Sunday school during most of the period of his long residence in Brooklyn and was a deacon of the church during the pastorates of Dr. Scudder and Dr. Behrends. He is survived by his wife, Ann Holmes Howell, daughter of the late Rev. Otis Holmes, two sons, Arthur H. and William E. P., and a daughter, Carolyn L. Gruendler.

Religion is the essential. The community without the church goes to pieces. I have seen it again and again in New England. Our nation was founded by men who came over for the sake of religion. They made it what it was. Our nation cannot live without morality and morality cannot live without religion.—Calvin Coolidge.

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

Big demand for teachers for emergency vacancies. Ernest Olp, Steger Bldg., Chicago.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

NURSES WANTED

School of Nursing. The Children's Hospital, Washington, D. C., 150 beds, gives a three-year course, including adult nursing. Accredited school. Class entering Jan. 1. Address Superintendent of Nurses.

Nurses Wanted—Moline Public Hospital offers splendid training to young women with one year's high school education. Nurses' home one of finest in state, good allowance paid while training. Write Moline Public Hospital, Moline, Ill., for further particulars.

PASTORS WANTED

Superintendent A. J. Sullens, of Oregon and Idaho, leaves Portland for Chicago Jan. 1. Wishes enroute to interview pastors considering Pacific Coast pulpits. Write him for appointment, P. O. Box 905, Portland, Ore.

Young man, good mind, good speaker, liberal theology, some promise of human success, church near Chicago, salary $3,000. Give ample references. Address "V. W.," Congregationalist.

PASTORATE WANTED

Ordained Congregational Minister, 25 years old, ten years' platform and pulpit experience, now in Middle-Western pastorate, desires church in some industrial center where social gospel may be preached along liberal, democratic, and non-sectarian lines. Prefer New England, New York, Pennsylvania, or New Jersey; others considered. Good references. Interested parties address "Preacher," care Congregationalist.

HELP WANTED

Wanted—Reliable housekeeper for two. Good home. Jennie Baker, 147 Lincoln St., Franklin, Mass.

MISCELLANEOUS

Stereopticon Slides—"Story of Hymns and Hymn Writers," "Some Mother's Boy," "Ruined Churches of France," "Life of Christ," "Boy Scouts," "Ben Hur," "Other Wise Man," "Quo Vadis," "Passion Play," "Red Triangle," "Bell and Flag," "Pilgrim's Progress," "Billy Sunday," "In His Steps." Many others. Card brings my complete list. Willis P. Hume, North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Holly with berries at rate $1.00 per cubic foot, without berries $0.50, plus postage. Gathered by ministers' children. Promptly shipped. Country Life Academy, Star, North Carolina.

For Sale—Second-hand Prince Albert coat and vest, size 38, good condition. Will accept $25. "W. M.," Congregationalist.

If any church has second-hand Sunday School Hymn Books to give away, please write to the American Missionary Association, Congregational House, Boston.

Don't Wear a Truss

Brooks' Appliance, the modern scientific invention, the wonderful new discovery that relieves rupture, will be sent on trial. No obnoxious springs or pads.

MR. C. E. BROOKS

Brooks' Rupture Appliance

Has automatic Air Cushions. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No lies. Durable, cheap. Sent on trial to prove it. Protected by U. S. patents. Catalog and measure blanks mailed free. Send name and address today.

Brooks Appliance Co., 473 C State St., Marshall, Mich.

Safe but SURE Promptly relieves coughing, hoarseness, sore throat, bronchial irritation and asthmatic discomforts. A little piece relieves a child's cold. Handy and dependable. Prices: 15c, 35c, 75c & $1.25.

John I. Brown & Son, Boston, Mass.

BROWN'S Bronchial TROCHES

Vapo Cresolene

Used for more than forty years. The benefit derived from it is unquestionable.

(Established 1879)

FOR more than a generation we have been receiving grateful testimony to the virtues of this thoroughly tested and proven treatment. It stops violent coughing, and difficult breathing, assuring restful sleep because the antiseptic vapor carries healing with every breath. Booklet 60 tells why the diseases for which Cresolene is recommended yield to this simple and dependable treatment.

Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists

VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt Street, New York

CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH

ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION

Relieves promptly and safely. Effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.

W. EDWARDS & SON London, England

All druggists or E. FOUGERA & CO. 90-92 Beekman St. N.Y.

No One Need Buy Cuticura Before He Tries Free Samples

Soap, Ointment, Talcum, 25c. everywhere. Samples free of Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. V, Malden, Mass.

Benevolent Societies

Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D. D., Secretary; Rev. John J. Walker, Associate Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 609 Congregational House, Boston.

Congregational Board of Pastoral Supply, maintained by the Congregational Conferences of the six New England States, offers aid to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies in New England and elsewhere. Congregational House, Boston, Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Secretary, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D. D., Chairman.

Massachusetts Board of Ministerial Aid. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Zeigler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

The Congregational Church Union of Boston and vicinity (Incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel C. Bushnell, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Fred L. Norton, Sec., 919 Tremont Building, Boston.

Women's Organizations

Woman's Board of Missions, 503 Congregational House, Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

Woman's Board of Missions of the Interior, 19 S. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas., Friday Meeting, 10 A. M.

Woman's Board of Missions for the Pacific, 760 Market St., Room 421, San Francisco. Mrs. Ernest A. Evans, President; Mrs. W. W. Ferrier, Treasurer; Miss E. S. Benton, Secretary.

Congregational Woman's Home Missionary Federation, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Mrs. P. S. Suffern, Treas.; Miss Miriam F. Choate, Sec.

Woman's Home Missionary Association (of Massachusetts and Rhode Island), Mrs. Amos L. Hatheway, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec., 607 Congregational House, Boston.

Boston Seaman's Friend Society

Incorporated 1829

306 Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

President, Samuel Usher; Cor. Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton. A Congregational Society devoted to the material, social and moral welfare of seamen of all nations and supported mainly by the New England churches. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Room at Tarpaulin Cove. Bequests should be made payable to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society. Contributions from churches and individuals solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis.

American Seamen's Friend Society

76 Wall St., New York, Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational National and International Seamen's Society.

Maintains a Sailor's Home and Institute, 507 West Street, New York.

Loan Libraries ($25 each) placed on vessels sailing from New York.

Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.

Publishes the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).

Officers: John B. Calvert, D. D., President; George Sidney Webster, D. D., Secretary. Send contributions to Clarence C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 76 Wall Street, New York.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa, Founded 1817.

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps all churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. Carver, Supt.
8 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Connecticut Societies

The Fund for Ministers provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

The Missionary Society of Connecticut, a Constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trusts for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS can reach every principal city and town in the United States through the advertising columns of The Congregationalist and Advance.

For rates and other information write

Kenneth S. Ballou,
Advertising Manager.

National Agencies

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Moderator, Rev. Henry Churchill King, Oberlin, O.
Secretary ad interim, Rev. Edwin D. Eaton, 289 Fourth Ave., New York
Assistant Secretary, Truman J. Spencer, 289 Fourth Ave., New York
Treasurer, Frank F. Moore, 287 Fourth Ave., New York

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)
14 Beacon Street, Boston
19 West Jackson Street, Chicago

Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Harry M. Nelson, Treasurer
Vernon M. Schenck, General Sales Manager
A. A. Hagstrom, Western Manager
Kenneth S. Ballou, Advertising Manager

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Established by the National Council at Grand Rapids, in 1919

Dr. Lucien C. Warner, Chairman
Rev. Herman F. Swartz, General Secretary
Rev. James E. McConnell, Ass't Secretary
Walter E. Bell, Treasurer
Rev. John Luther Kilbon, Financial Sec'y

Program for the coming year to include Missionary Education, Stewardship, and a Financial Campaign in behalf of our denominational work.

Regional Directors for 1920-21

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont: Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Massachusetts, Rhode Island: Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D. D., 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Connecticut, New York: Rev. Charles E. Burton, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Porto Rico: Rev. George L. Cady, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee: Rev. L. H. Keller, D. D., Central Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Colored Churches of South: Rev. Alfred Lawless, Jr., D. D., 45½ Auburn Ave., Atlanta, Ga.
Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia: Rev. John Luther Kilbon, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska: Rev. Robert W. Gammon, D. D., 19 West Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.
Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota: Rev. William F. English, Jr., Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., and 19 So. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana: Rev. W. W. Scudder, D. D., Fountain and Aubert Sts., St. Louis, Mo.
Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico: Rev. W. J. Minchin, D. D., Guardian Trust Bldg., Denver, Col.
Southern California, Arizona: Rev. George L. Kenngott, Ph.D., 831 So. Hope St., Los Angeles, Cal.
Northern California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Alaska: Rev. H. H. Kelsey, D. D., Phelan Bldg., San Francisco, Cal., and Plymouth Church, Seattle, Wash.

All correspondence relative to the local work of promotion should be addressed to the Director of your Region.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

Conserves the welfare of the ministry by making modest grants to meet the needs of aged ministers, or their widows and children.

Rev. William A. Rice, Secretary
Rev. Charles S. Mills, Associate Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

A sound, scientific, contributory system of old-age pensions for the Congregational minister, affording also protection for disability and the defense of his family in case of his untimely death; endowed by the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. William A. Rice, Associate Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

A Permanent Tercentenary Memorial Fund of $5,000,000 held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council, the income used to endow the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers by providing funds to supplement the minister's annual payments toward old age annuities.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, Executive Secretary
Lucius R. Eastman, Chairman Executive Committee

National Societies

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Edward Lincoln Smith

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Wm. E. Strong
Candidate Secretary, Rev. Alden H. Clark
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr. 19 So. Lasalle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast District, Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco
New York Office, 287 Fourth Ave., N. Y.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Rev. William S. Beard, Secretary of Promotion
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Secretary of Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Nineteen self-supporting state organizations are in Federated relations with the National Society. The state Superintendent or Secretary is the official representative of all home mission interests.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Rev. George L. Cady, Secretary
Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis, Associate Secretary
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Eskimos, Chinese, Japanese and Hindus; in Island Territories of Porto Rico and Hawaii. New work in Southwest taken under instruction of National Council.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

289 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
(Church Extension Boards)
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Rev. Charles H. Richards, Editorial Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. In sixty-six years it has helped to build 4,982 churches and 1,334 parsonages.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Rev. A. E. Holt, Social Service Sec.
Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Missionary Education Sec.
Samuel F. Wilkins, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service and Missionary Education; aids Colleges, Academies, Training Schools, Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities and among immigrants.

THE CONGREGATIONAL COMMISSION ON EVANGELISM

287 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Established by the National Council at Des Moines in 1904.

Rev. William Horace Day, Chairman
Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, Executive Secretary

Promotes an all-the-year-around program of church work to enlist men in the worship and service of the church and provides helps for the use of pastors and churches.

Record Books for Church and Church School

For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Superintendent, the Secretary. Roll Books, Class Books, Collection Envelopes.

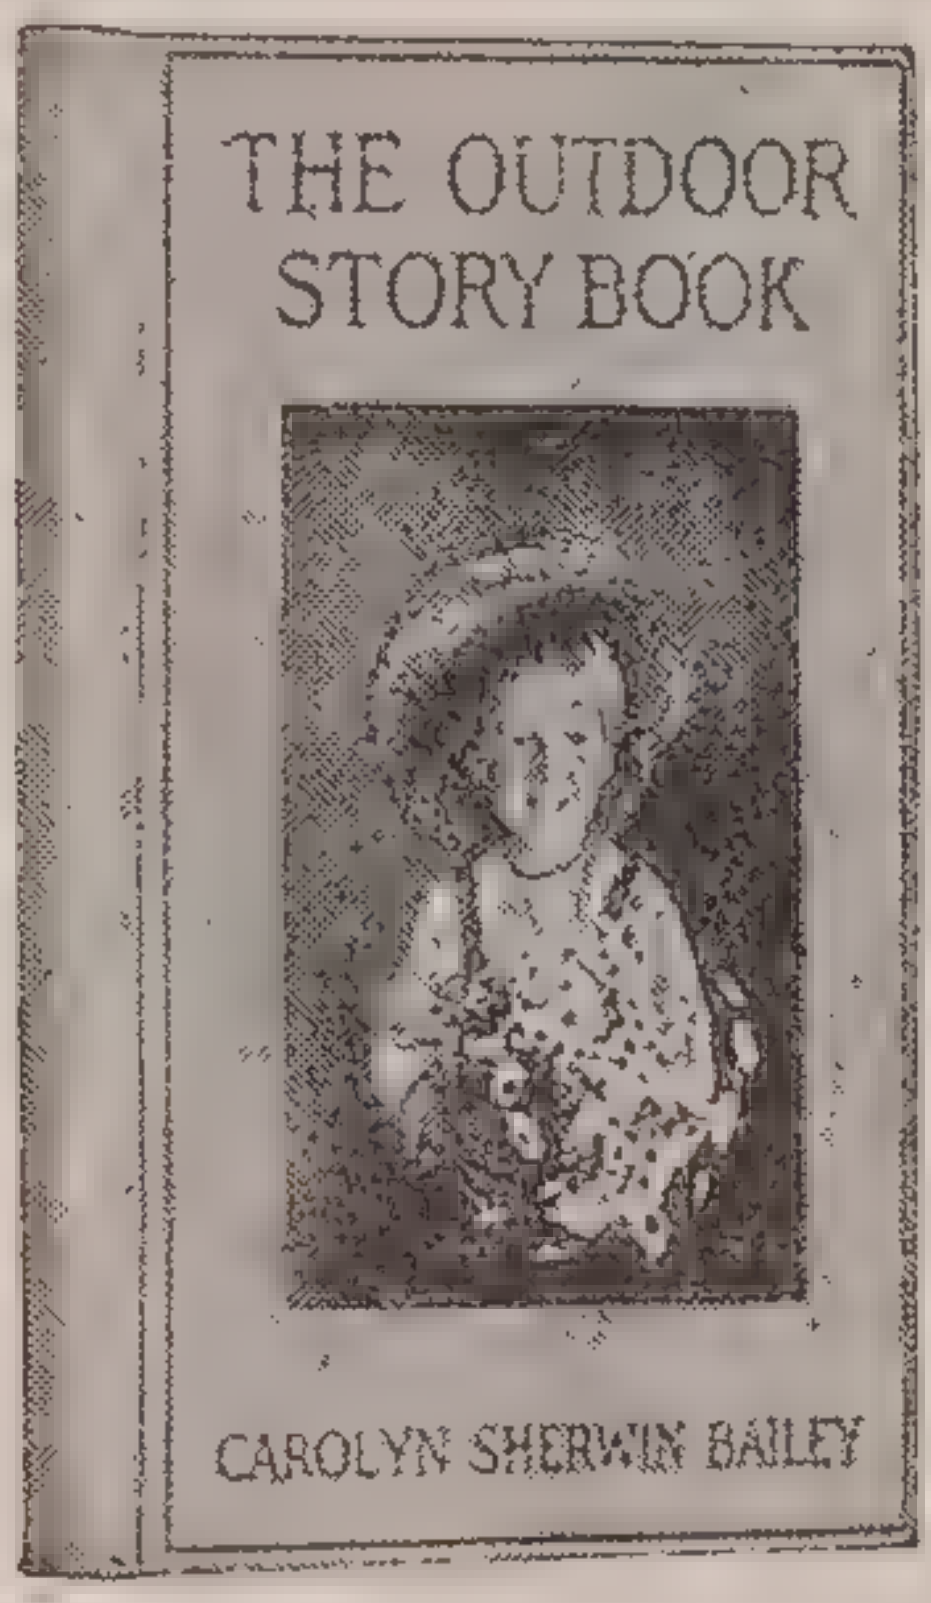
ASK FOR CATALOGUES

14 Beacon Street, Boston — THE PILGRIM PRESS — 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

For the Young Folk's Christmas

THE OUTDOOR STORY BOOK

By Carolyn S. Bailey



There is no book of nature stories for little children like it. The most universal and humble facts of the year, outdoors, are used to make story plots of wonder tale and miraculous interest.

Short stories for the home, bedtime, the kindergarten, the Sunday School, church, and for the primary child who needs interesting supplementary reading.

12mo. Cloth. $1.00, postage, 10 cents.

STORIES FOR SUNDAY TELLING

By Carolyn S. Bailey

Mothers and teachers will not only find these stories a great aid in entertaining children, but the book is a solution of the Sunday afternoon problem when the children crave entertainment. $1.00, postage 5 cents.

THE CITY THAT NEVER WAS REACHED

By Jay T. Stocking

"One can hardly say enough in praise of these dainty, fanciful, wholly admirable tales. They are uplifting and altogether helpful in their influence upon the reader."—United Presbyterian. $1.00, postage 10 cents.

THE GOOD CROW'S HAPPY SHOP

By Patten Beard

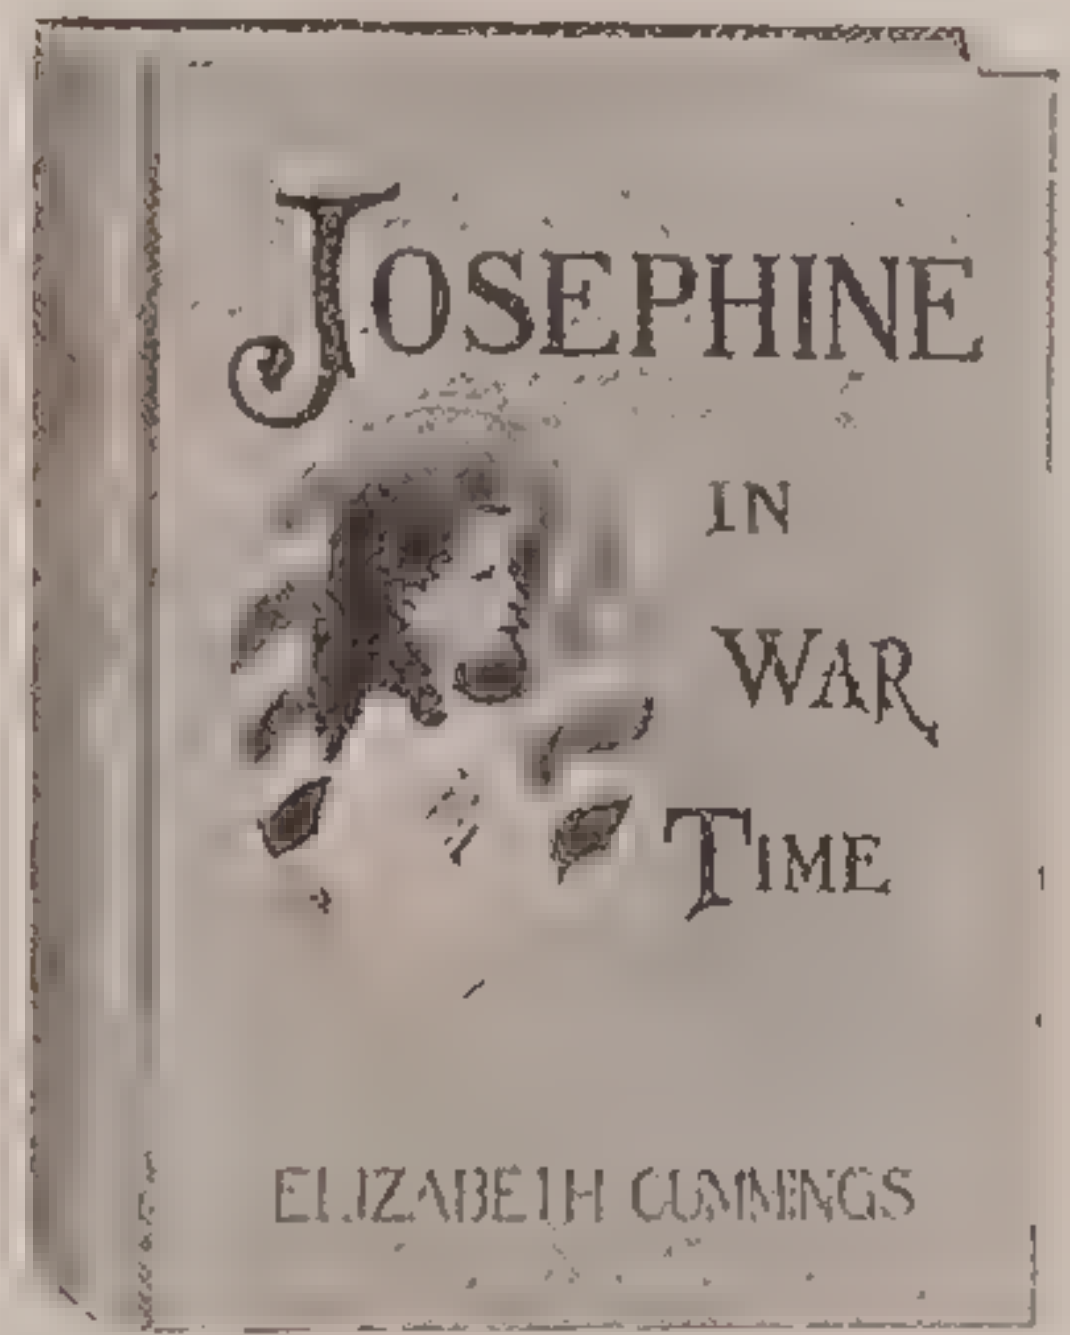
Author of "The Bluebird's Garden," "The Jolly Year"

The story of a little girl who spent many hours in The Happy Shop making all sorts of pretty things from wall-paper. The crow was only a "pretend," but this remarkable bird knew all about the things that little girls like to make, paper dolls, doll furniture, valentines, May baskets, even moving pictures. A story for girls from 8 to 13. Cloth 8vo. $1.00. postage 12 cents.

JOSEPHINE

A Story of the Civil War

By Elizabeth Cummings



Now is a good time to bring the Civil War and its meaning to the present generation.

"Chapters in the life of a little girl in war-time" is the sub-title of the book. Josephine, the eleven-year-old girl, is a charming heroine, and the descriptions of her own experiences, her child friendships, her theological difficulties, are delightful. The story is a very lifelike description of the effect of the Civil War on the various members of a community. Illustrated by Frank T. Merrill. $1.25, postage 12 cents.

STAR STORIES FOR LITTLE FOLKS

By Gertrude Chandler Warner

is unquestionably one of the finest little books you could choose for little boys or girls.

Little people love the stories and soon learn to know the stars.

Astronomically accurate and one of the best Children's Books ever published.

60 cents. Postage 5 cents

LITTLE BOY BEAR

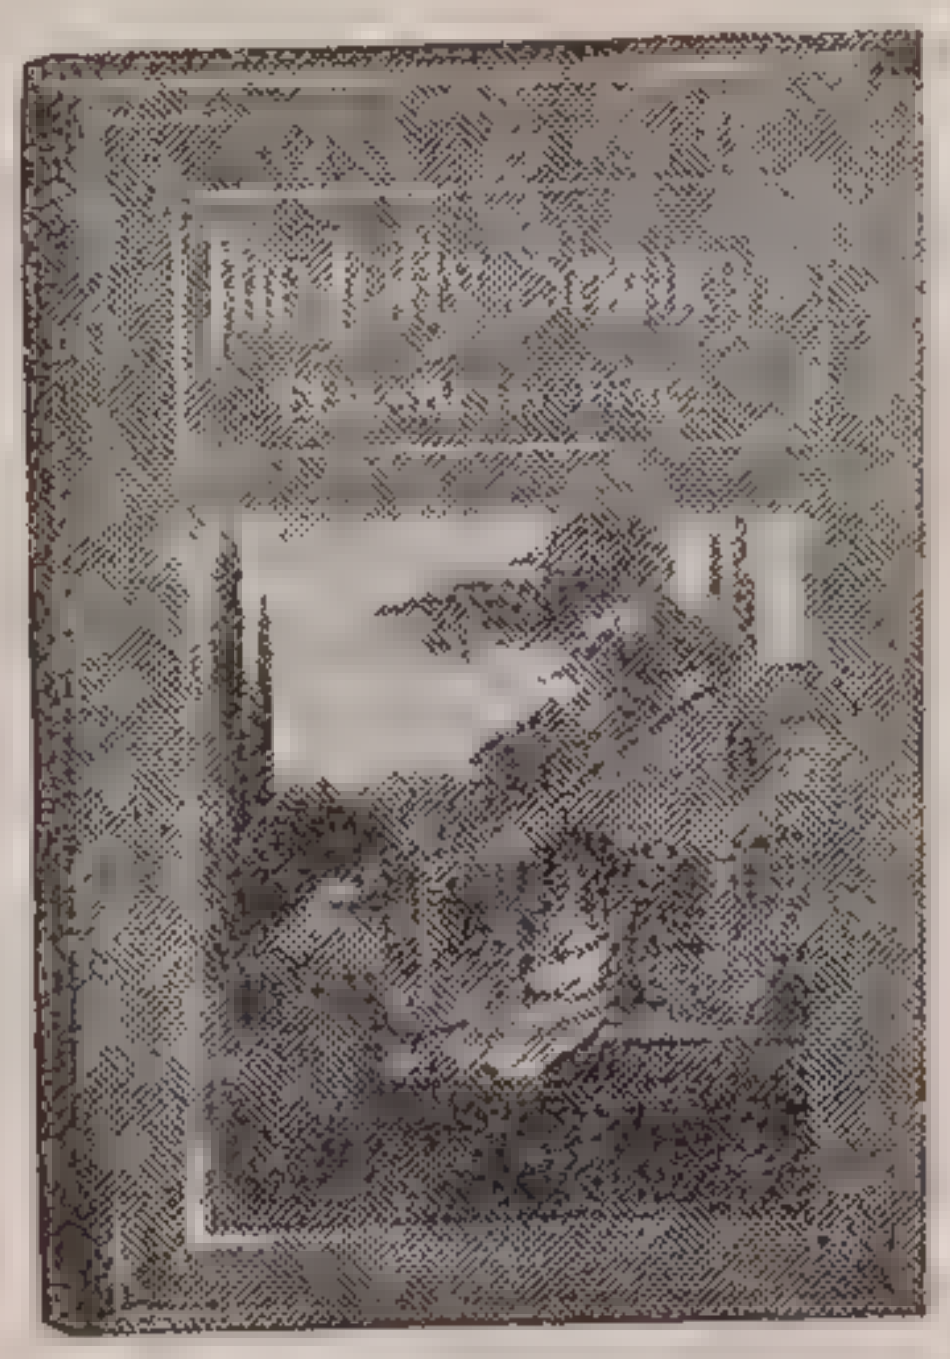
By Belle K. Maniates

Author of "Amarilly of Clothes-Line Alley," etc.

Every youngster from 5 to 8 who ever saw a bear will be delighted with this very human little cub who befriends the little boy who has saved his life. (Illustrated.) Cloth. 60 cents, postage 5 cents.

THE JOLLY SHIPLEYS

By Elizabeth Price



A story of two families living side by side; on the one hand, the Kingsburys, who are wealthy and exclusive and have one son. Adjoining them is a piece of property occupied by the Shipley family, father and mother and six children, a healthy, happy family of hard workers. The lonely boy in the rich man's family in the course of time strikes up an acquaintance with the children in the humbler home and the influences back and forth are very pleasantly portrayed. The result is decidedly to the advantage of the rich youngster.

This is a wholesome story of home sentiment and good and joyful living. It is told in lively fashion and will carry the interest of girls certainly and of most younger boys. Illustrated. $1.25, postage 10 cents.

JOHNNIE BLOSSOM

By Emilie Poulsson

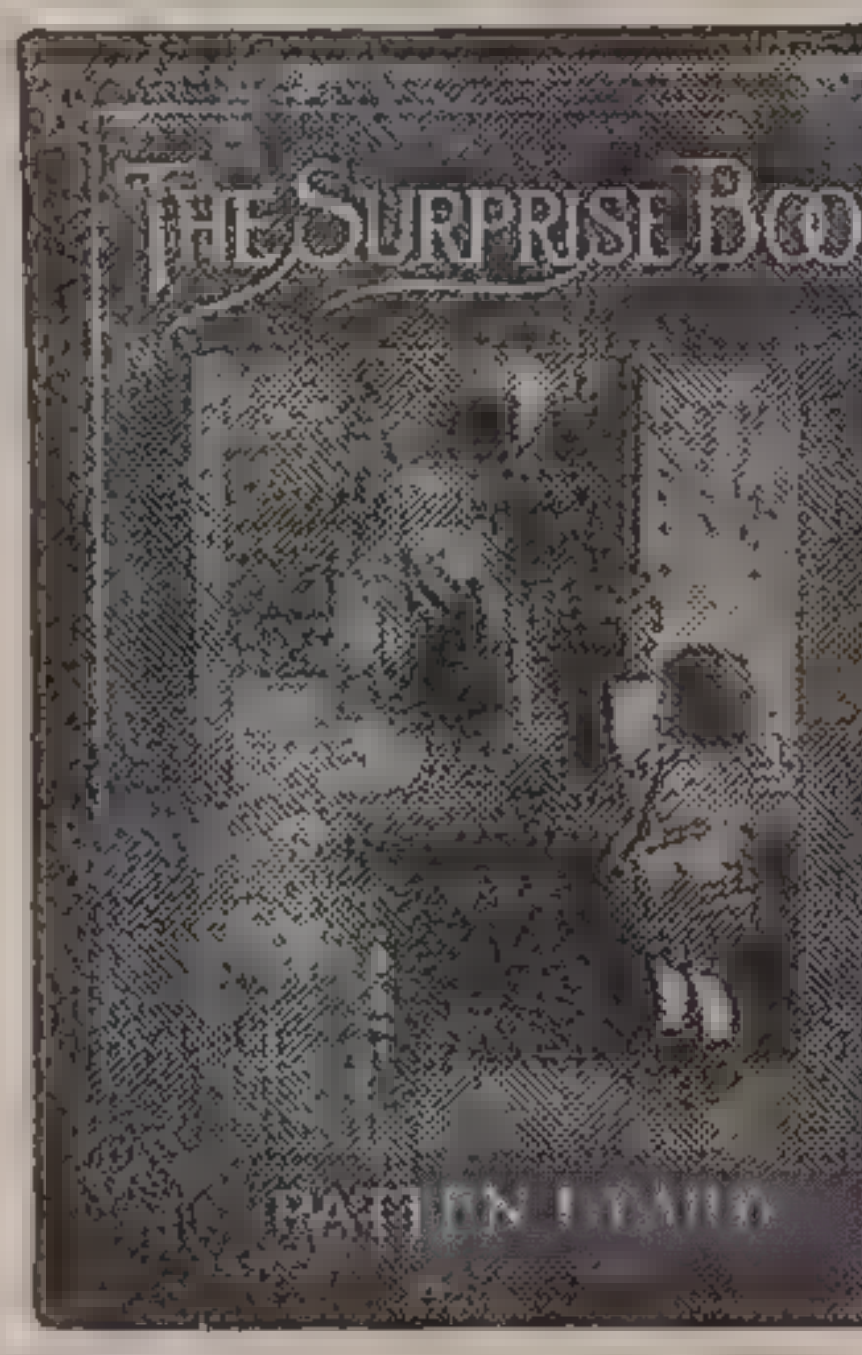
One of those rare books which appear once in a decade. No better book was ever put in a child's hand.

All children who read this book will not only love Johnny and every one of the dear people in the book, but will know better than ever before what truth, courage and obedience mean through this healthy-minded lad.—Alice E. Fitts, Director Pratt Institute School of Kindergarten Training. $1.35, postage 10 cents.

THE SURPRISE BOOK

By Patten Beard

An Unusually Attractive Book



A little girl has a delightful time making a scrap-book of pockets into each of which she puts stories for each month of the year. Every girl reader of this clever story will want to make a "scrap-book" for herself. $1.00, postage 10 cents.

THE JOLLY YEAR

By Patten Beard

This we consider one of the handsomest and surely one of the most interesting children's books we have ever published. It is made up of an introductory story and of twelve other stories, one for each month of the year, which boys and girls of 10 to 15 years will find great pleasure in reading. $1.00, postage 8 cents.

CHIMNEY CORNER TALES

By Caroline Stetson Allen

The title suggests the feast in store for every boy and girl who likes to curl up in a corner by the fireplace and revel in the doings of other boys and girls.

These stories appeared in St. Nicholas, Little Folks, and other Periodicals. A handsome book, attractively illustrated. $1.00, postage 8 cents.

STORIES FOR ANY DAY

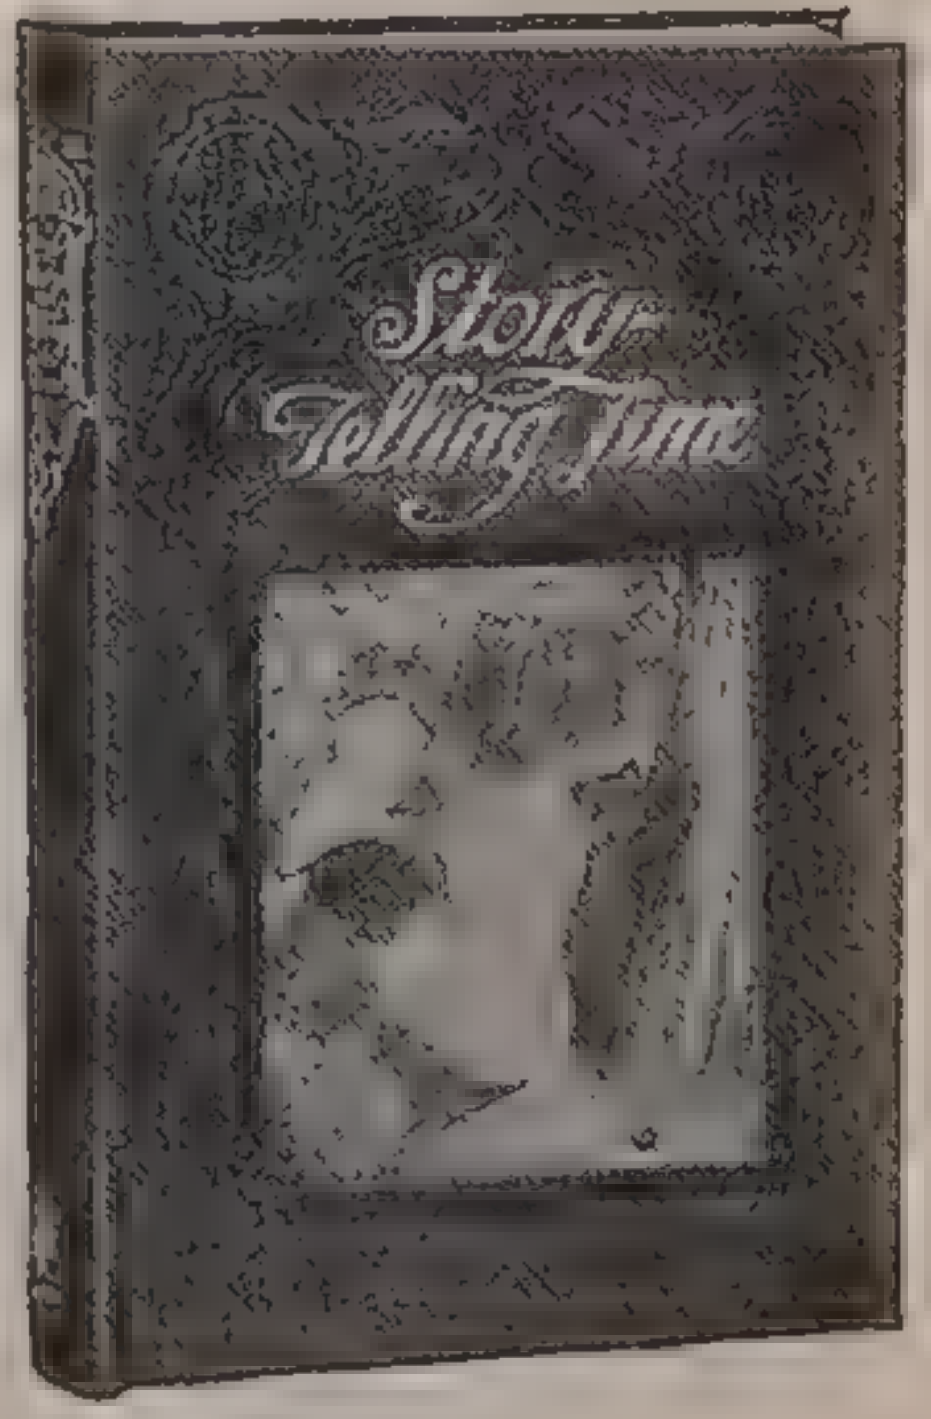
By Carolyn S. Bailey

Author of "Stories for Sunday Telling," "Firelight Stories," "Stories of Long Ago," etc.

A collection of short stories based upon true incidents and suitable for telling or reading to children of 4 to 11. Many of them are stories of home life, what happened to Grandfather when he was a boy and Grandmother's adventures as a girl. How Grandfather Captured the Indian, Grandmother's Bear, How the Birds Came to the Sunday School Picnic, The Missionary Bed Quilt, The Little Lost Cat Bird, are some of the titles. All children delight in Miss Bailey's stories. 75 cents, postage 6 cents.

STORY-TELLING TIME

Frances Weld Danielson
—Grace W. Conant



"Short and interesting stories for children, just the kind of a book which mothers can make use of to a decided advantage to entertain their children during the long winter evenings."—Evangelical Messenger. $1.00, postage 8 cents.

14 BEACON ST.,
BOSTON

THE PILGRIM PRESS BOOKSHOP

19 W. JACKSON ST.,
CHICAGO

The Congregationalist
and Advance

Vol. CV. No. 52

December 23, 1920

Bethel—The Place of Jacob's Dream

A Christmas Cairn of Remembrance

1920

By John Finley

When one of old beheld in his night skies
(O'erhead, nor feared ill-luck) a Ladder rise
And Angels (such as Shepherds heard afar)
Threading its rundle bars 'twixt earth and star,
Like darting shuttles, whose bright woof adream
Did weave between the two a binding gleam—
He built a Cairn to mark the awesome site
And named the pilgrim place a holy height.

* * *

So, in whatever place you lay your head
On Christmas night, may it be haloéd
With such angelic light as shone on them
Who slept at Bethel or at Bethlehem;
And what is now a Wish may it then be
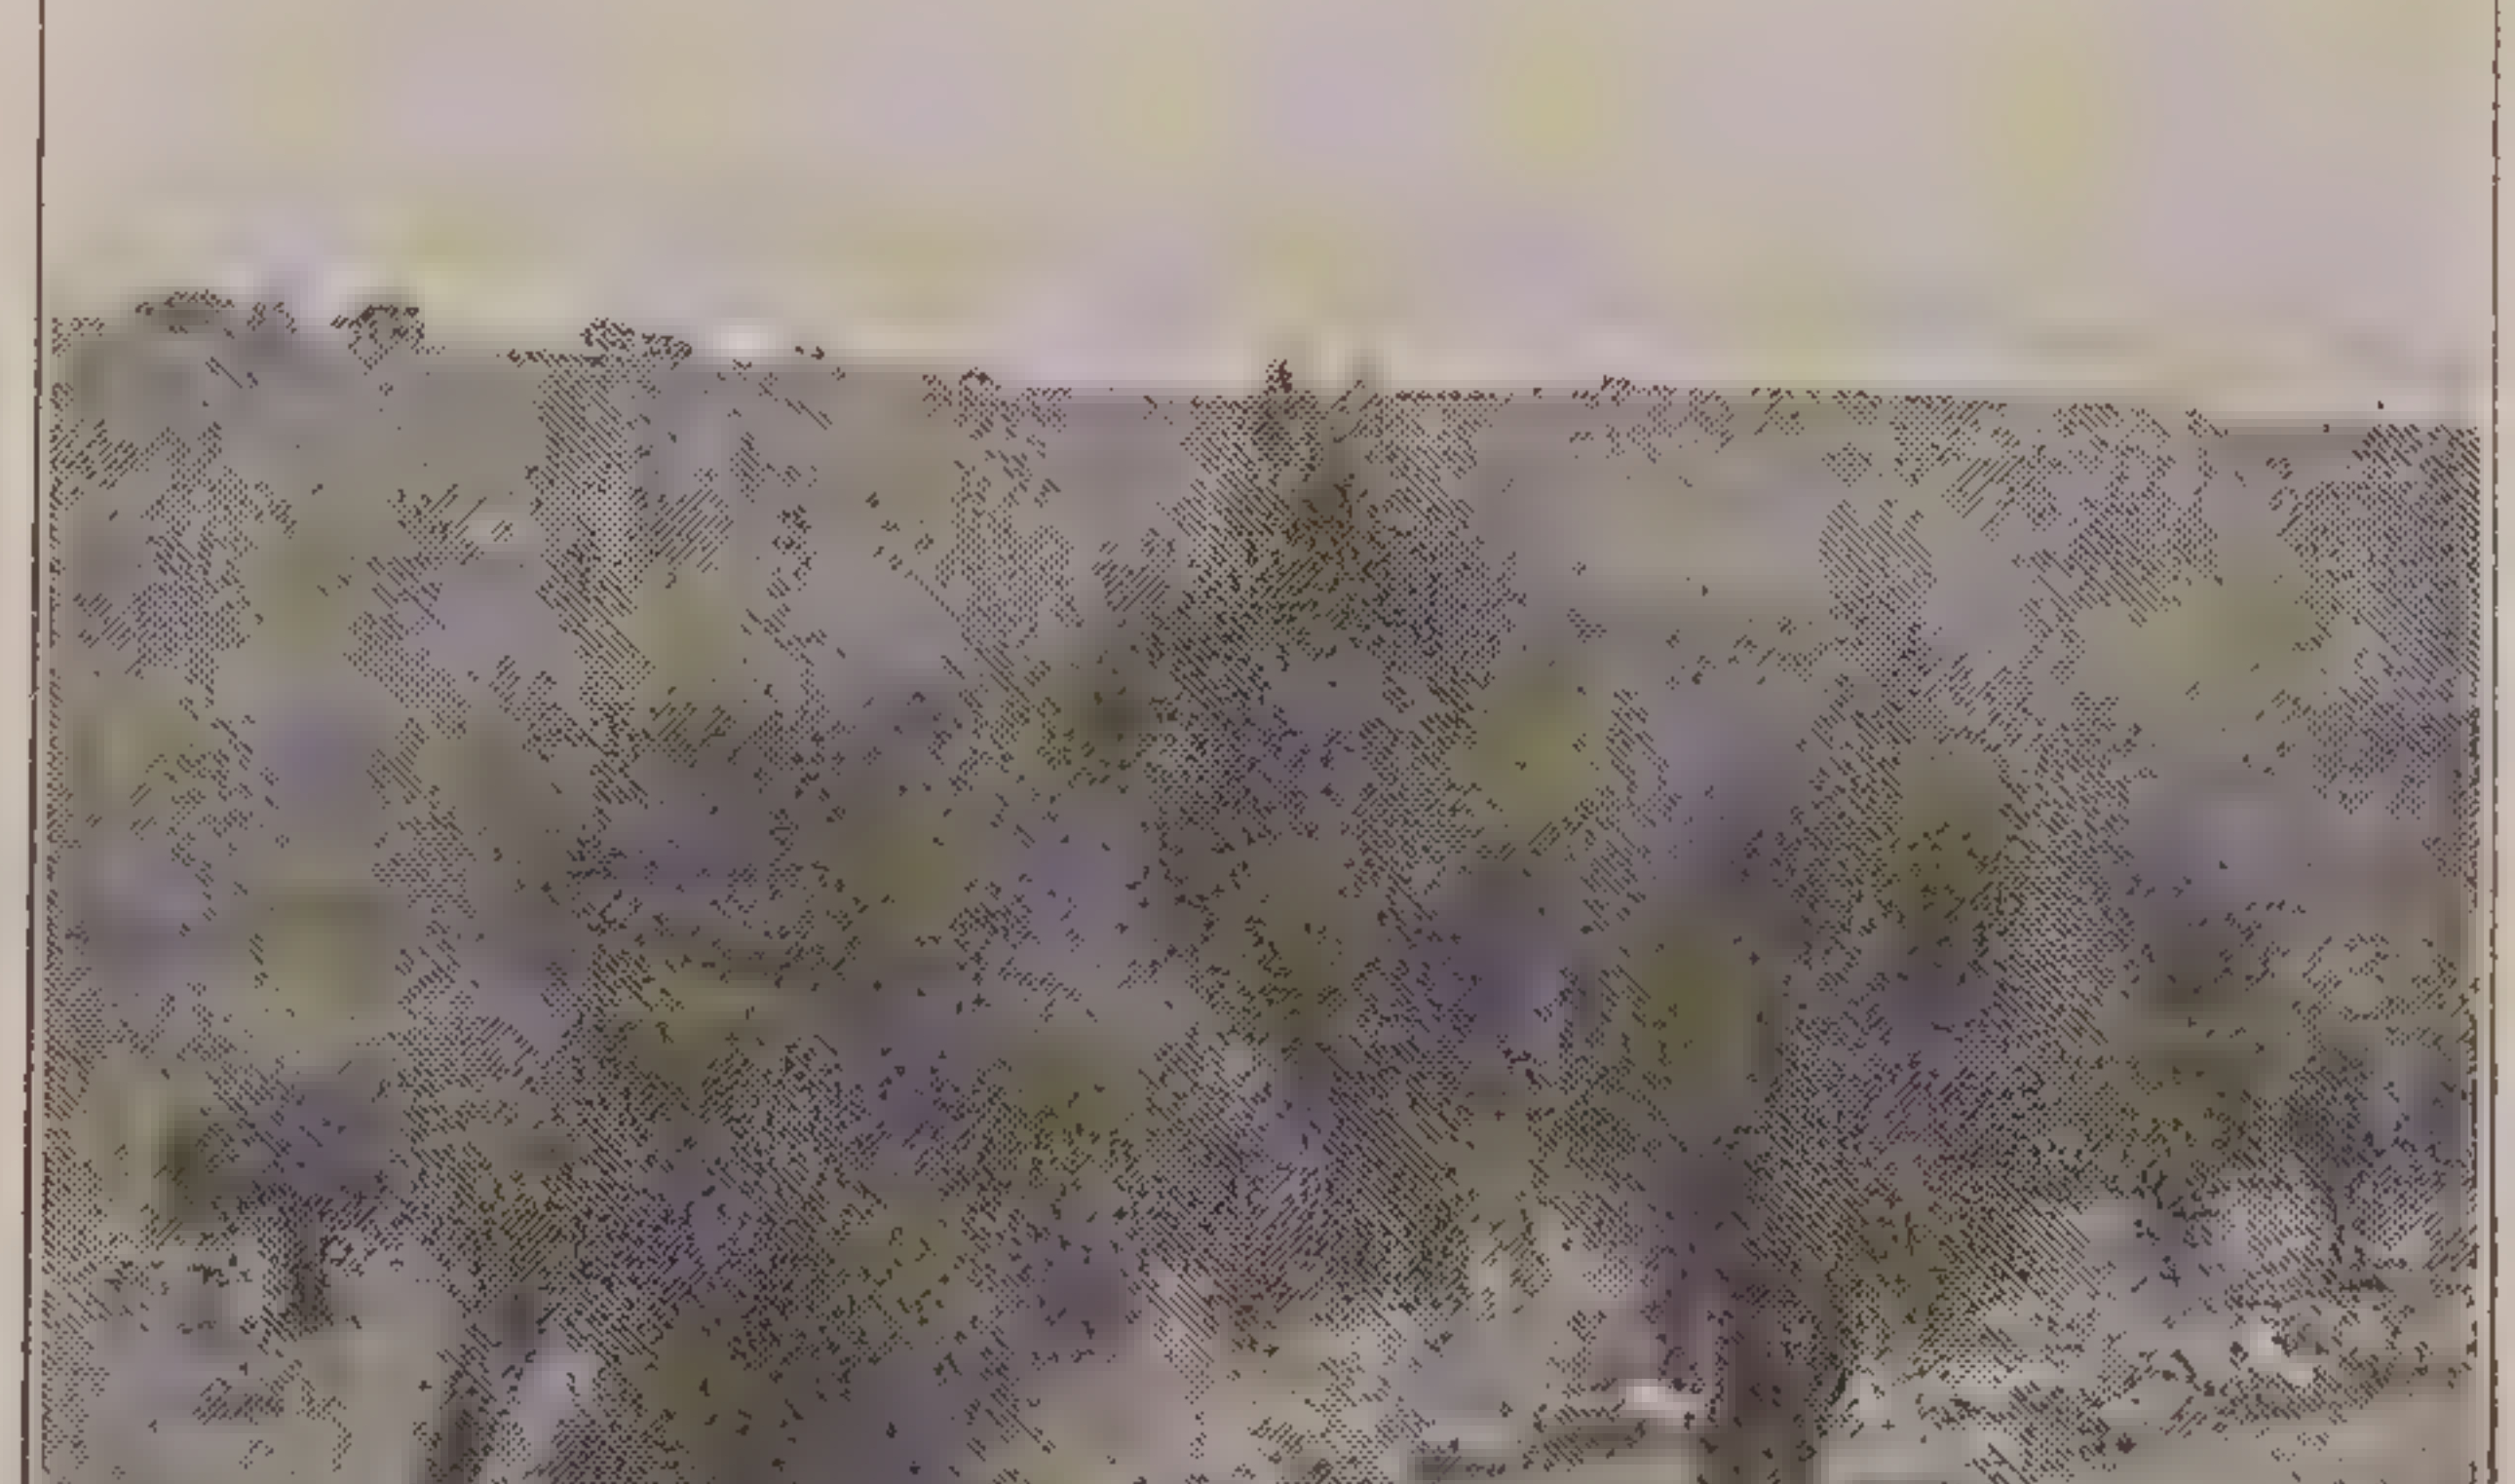
A Cairn to mark a holy memory.



The Shepherd's Field—Bethlehem

THE GREAT NEEDS OF A GREAT RACE

Twelve Millions of People Cry for Opportunity

I have told you of some of the needs of

Howard University

Follow me further.

School of Law

The only Law School for colored youth in the United States; and this one must be a night school, because we have no funds to make it a day school and help worthy students to prepare themselves. Often we are beseeched to send some community a colored physician and lawyer. We cannot become a member of the American Association of Law Schools, and so put our students on an even footing with other students, until we become a day school. We cannot become a day school without financial help.

Who Answers?

Schools of Engineering, Architecture, and Domestic Arts are all in one small building! Do I need to say more? What heroes and heroines those teachers are! What do they sacrifice for service! I wish the voices from these Schools could ring in the hearts of those who have money to give. The voice of ten millions of people cries through these four schools. The stability of any race is measured by such schools. Here are trained the leaders.

What man of money hears the cry?

School of Music

Not an organ do we have here, save a little $35 reed organ in the classroom of the School of Religion. Yet this great race sobs and cries for opportunities for expression. $6,000 would put a small organ in our chapel. Some person, or persons, is obligated to give it!

Is that person YOU?

Our School of Music is overcrowded even with our pitifully inadequate equipment. How they plead with us to let them come—these boys and girls with musical genius clamoring for expression. Could you once hear this University choir sing "The Messiah" or "Hiawatha," you would know what I mean. I wish some one would pay their way to Boston just to let that city hear their marvelous, mysterious, at times awful, appeal.

Who will help the School of Music?

The Chapel

A beautiful little ivy-covered building seating 634 people, and yet in our academic department alone we register over 900 students! We cannot even hold daily chapel services with all of them present. You know the irreparable loss. Yet this is the largest hall on the campus! We have no gymnasium; we have no real athletic field. Then think of the great white schools with their equipment!

Will you refuse the colored student every chance and yet hold him to similar attainments?

I marvel that he does match white students with such awful handicaps.

The highest paid Professor in the Academic Department receives but $2,200 per year. If some of these teachers were white and in white schools, they would be getting a yearly salary of from six to eight thousands dollars.

Is American philanthropy fair?

Send in your gifts, tell how you would have them used, to
J. STANLEY DURKEE, President, or to EMMETT J. SCOTT, Secretary-Treasurer,
Howard University, Washington, D. C.

The Congregationalist and Advance

December 23, 1920

Volume CV. Copyright, 1920 All rights reserved Number 52

By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

CONTENTS

Transmuting Praise into Service—An Editorial Message 813
What the Christian World is Doing 814
Editorial—The English-Speaking Peoples 815
Dr. Boynton to Be Freed for a Larger Ministry
A New Day for the Ministry
The Needs of the Troubled World
A Turning Point in the Woman's Board
Disarmament
The Parable of the One-Course Dinner
Why I Gave Up Business, by William E. Sweet 818
The Forum Marching On, by George W. Coleman 819
Women in the Federal Council, by Mary Louise Daniels 820
"Little Brothers of the Manger," by Margaret Cable Brewster 820
Los Angeles' Greeting 821
Elects New President 821
League of the New Day 821
Our Pilgrim Pulpit—Carrying Back the Christmas Glory, by George D. Owen 822
Election and League 822
Woman's Board of Interior 822
Department of Religious Drama, conducted by Mary Alice Emerson 823
The Herring Memorial Fund 823
Favorite Poems 823
In the Church School 824
The Hour of Prayer—Comment on Midweek and Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topics—Closet and Altar 825
Among the New Books 826
With the Children 828
In the Congregational Circle—Church News 830

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. Howard A. Bridgman, D. D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
Associate Editor, Rev. Isaac Ogden Rankin
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D. D. (Chicago)
Literary Editor, Rev. Parris T. Farwell
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Contributing Editor, Rev. William E. Barton, D. D.
Advertising Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou
Circulation Manager, Miss Ethel M. Wentworth

The Congregationalist and Advance succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Congregationalist, 1849; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday, by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

Rates: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions are discontinued on date of expiration, appearing on the address label of the paper. Remittances: Should be made payable to The Congregationalist and Advance, and will be acknowledged by a change of date on the label. Receipt will be sent if two-cent stamp is enclosed with remittance. In renewing do not fail to send exact address as on label. Change of Address: Both old and new addresses must be sent in and be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies may be obtained at the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Subscription correspondence may be directed to The Congregationalist and Advance, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Talk of the Sanctum

Mr. Sweet's Noteworthy Article

A layman widely known in Congregational and Y. M. C. A. circles throughout the country, speaks in the article this week on "Why I Gave Up Business." Mr. William E. Sweet has been for many years a prominent investment banker in Denver and has proved himself a sterling citizen and forward-looking churchman. He was one of the over-sea workers of the Y. M. C. A., and is soon to assist Mr. Sherwood Eddy in a campaign among the colleges on the Pacific coast. At our request he has written this article, which sets forth cogently the motives which have led him to sever his connection with a profitable business. One of his partners, Mr. J. H. Causey, a leading Methodist layman, is taking a similar step.

Mr. Sweet writes in excellent temper. At the same time some of his sentences are exceedingly pungent, as for example: "My ideas of what constituted justice did not agree with the views held by most men in the business world." "In business, where the ideal of brotherhood interferes with profits, brotherhood must step aside." "A business man must conform. If he does not he is guilty of the worst crime in the catalogue of business; he is a 'scab.'"

We wish the many business men who read this paper would write us frankly whether or not they agree with Mr. Sweet and whether in their judgment he might have accomplished more for the kingdom if he had stayed in active business.

Five Minutes with The Congregationalist

"Five Minutes with The Congregationalist" in the midweek service is the way in which Rev. Stephen Lang of First Church, Somerville, Mass., has presented our paper to his people. Copies were distributed at the door, time being given for a quick perusal. In the opening service an opportunity was given to name the articles of major interest. Many responses were given, among them:

Dr. Bridgman's "Pilgrim Virtues in Modern Life."
Graham Taylor's "The Interchurch Steel Inquiry."
"The European Situation as Dr. Mott Sees It."
"Parables of Safed the Sage," and more than twenty other subjects.

Incidentally the pastor called attention to the advertisement of a changeable-letter bulletin board—much needed by the church—with the result, on the following Sunday, of a letter on the collection plate with these words, "To help the pastor buy the bulletin board for the front of the church, and may it be erected soon." Signed, "A member," and with a substantial bill enclosed.

How would "Five Minutes with The Congregationalist" go in your midweek service? Try it. Let us know.

From Our Mail Bag

"I cannot neglect to say how much we who have lived in Turkey appreciate the able and persistent attitude of The Congregationalist on America's duty in the Near East. No question is settled until it is settled right, and I still believe you must hammer away at the consciences of the people. I never see anything to criticize in your news matter on Turkey nor in your geographical information." E. C. P.

I am enjoying your paper more every year, and if this is the case, you can realize how much pleasure I must have by this time, for I think I subscribed for it in 1856, and have had the reading of it ever since. F. A. M.

LAST CALL FOR

THE CHRISTMAS FUND of 1920

You are surely intending to have your share this year in dispensing Christmas cheer among our veteran and disabled ministers and their wives.

There is still time to mail your check.

The Books are kept open for the Christmas Fund until and including December 31st.

Amounts received after Christmas are sent as a New Year gift.

We Are Still Far Behind Our Goal of $35,000.

Something is Needed from Everybody Whose Heart Responds to this Appeal.

All Under the Care of the Fourteen State Societies Share in the Distribution.

For the pathos and urge underlying the need of this Fund, see the Christmas Fund Announcements in the recent issues of The Congregationalist, beginning with November 25th. If you have not read them, please read them now.

One of the Christmas Checks already received this year is accompanied by these words:

> "I enclose my personal check as a slight contribution for the Christmas Fund, which I regard as one of the most beautiful institutions in connection with our Congregational ministry."

The latest addition to our list of beneficiaries is a widow with four children, the youngest three years of age, whose husband died suddenly last month. The defective heart that caused his death had also prevented his securing any life insurance. A Christmas Check is going to this bereaved family.

Remember! Never before was there such need that the Christmas Checks be large.

Remember! The size of the Christmas Check depends on the amount sent for this purpose by the people.

Remember! The average grant for 1920 has been $215. The Christmas gift is added to the grant.

Please send your remittance at once to

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

William A. Rice, Secretary. Charles S. Mills, D.D., Associate Secretary. B. H. Fancher, Treasurer.

The Congregationalist
and Advance

Transmuting Praise into Service

WE reach this week the climax of an ascending series of tributes to the past and to great spirits who incarnated the life of God, who by their words and deeds changed the course of history and pushed the human race toward its divine destination.

To Jesus, our supreme Lord and incomparable Leader, rises a volume of praise from innumerable voices. At Christmas millions of hearts are freshly stirred with impulses of love and devotion. They break forth spontaneously in the "Magnificat" and "Come, let us adore Him!" No outpouring of gratitude by a single devout worshiper, no swelling chorus of adoration arising from many lips seems too fervid to express our estimation of Jesus Christ after the world has tested him nineteen hundred years.

But interblended with the Christmas outburst of rejoicing this year have been heard strains of other hymns. These recount the heroic adventures of men and women like ourselves who, three centuries ago, crossed an unknown ocean in order that they might work out their own salvation and contribute something to the salvation of the world. In every English-speaking land and colony the globe over, this week has been sacred to the Pilgrims. Orations, poems, sermons, pageants, books old and new have told once more the thrilling story of flight, exile, voyage, and settlement. Not even the Christmas carols themselves can drown these other strains of rejoicing. The two are not discordant. They blend in one grand symphony, with one prevailing theme, even praise to our God, who followed his unspeakable gift of two millenniums ago with the gift of the Pilgrim Fathers to be the founders of our nation.

BUT when all their virtues have been celebrated and magnified, and when next week the beauty and mystery of the Christmas festival shall have vanished in the atmosphere of commonplace days, what next? How can the quickened national feeling, how can the renewed sense of the wonder and glory of Christ be capitalized in the interest of the things which Christ and the Pilgrims loved—real democracy in Church and State, clean and decent homes, the perpetuation of the free church and the free school, a righteous social order, prevailing good will in industry, high minded and courageous leadership and a national character which manifests to the world the strength, integrity, unselfishness that reside in multitudes of individual lives of which it is itself the composite.

It is time, now that we have declaimed and sung and feasted and applauded, to listen to two voices.

One is that of the Master saying, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord and do not the things which I say?"

The other proceeds from the men of Plymouth and says, "If ye would be our true children, ye must do the works that Robinson, and Bradford, Winslow, and Brewster and the rest of us sought to do."

AN ounce of imitation is worth a pound of adulation. We have not stressed too much in song and speech, in pageant and public assemblage, the glories of those who have gone before us, but the moment has come for action, exertion, hard, prolonged, persistent. We have difficult things to do, but they are not impossible. Compared with the world of the seventeenth century, compared with the world into which Jesus came, even this distraught world with which we have to deal offers an immensely more promising field for consecrated effort.

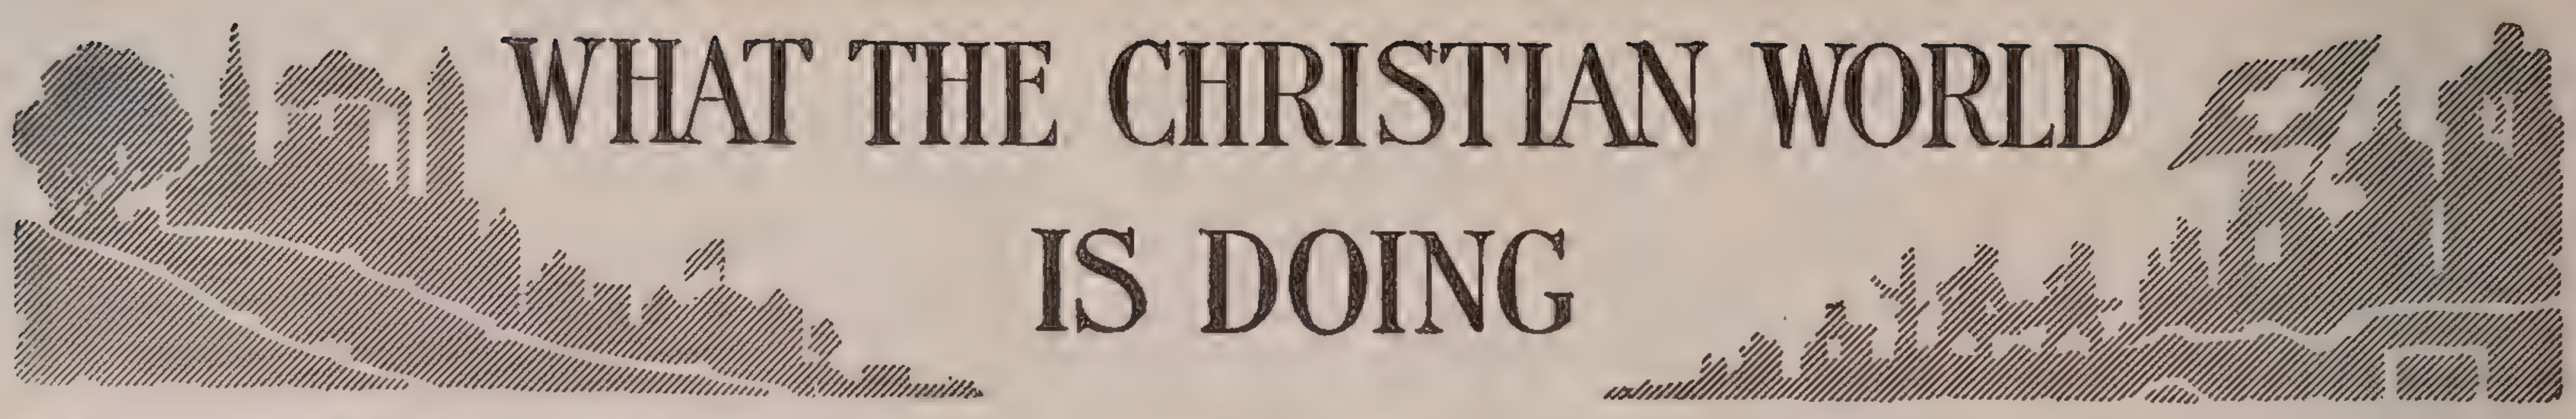
Resources and allies are at hand not available to the men of Plymouth. "How hard a thing it is to be a Christian!" said Robert Browning. Yes, but no harder in our day than in his, or in the year when the Pilgrims landed or in the year when Jesus was crucified. The thought of mankind the globe over is penetrated with the ideals of Jesus Christ to an extent that was never true of any other age.

NO more truly does our Tercentenary conclude a period than it inaugurates one. We also are beginners and founders. Three hundred years in the life of a great nation is but a span of years. America compared with Greece or Egypt or even its older sister, England, is but an infant of days. Three hundred years from now, a hundred years hence, some men and women now living will be venerated as the builders of a new civilization because they were true to the simple, everyday fidelities, because they utilized the everyday opportunities of service in the home, the school, the shop, the office, the neighborhood.

Why not be a forefather or a foremother yourself?

Why not do your part toward making the world Christian by being a better Christian yourself?

H. A. B.



WHAT THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IS DOING

A New Alignment of Protestant Forces

At the invitation of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America there met in New York City on Dec. 13 representatives of six organizations which federate the missionary and educational activities of the Protestant churches. These were the Foreign Missions Conference, the Home Missions Council, the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions, the Council of Women for Home Missions, the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations, the Council of Church Boards of Education. In addition to these groups there appeared, by special invitation, the Reorganization Committee of the Interchurch World Movement, of which Bishop Nicholson of the Methodist Episcopal Church is chairman. This meeting was the outgrowth of the action at the Boston meeting of the Federal Council looking to a closer co-ordination of all the federated movements of the Protestant churches.

The time was spent in a frank discussion of the entire situation, with special reference to the suspension of the activities of the Interchurch World Movement. The result has been announced as a distinct advance in the matter of co-operation.

It was found that several of the missionary organizations have been able to secure a larger degree of co-operation than had been possible in the Federal Council. For instance, in the Foreign Mission group we find representatives of the Protestant Episcopal Church and of several of the Lutheran bodies, together with representatives of all the Foreign Boards of Canada. Obviously it would not be wise to sacrifice in any way this larger unity for the purposes of a smaller group. Similarly each organization felt it must conserve what it had already gained in the way of co-operation. It might be argued that the easiest way would be for all these groups to associate themselves with the Federal Council and become, in a sense, departments of that organization. It appears, however, that the time has not come for such general merging of forces.

Moving Toward Federation

The upshot of the day's deliberation was that a Consultative Committee was constituted in which the Missionary Federations with the Federal Council will be represented, which committee will meet statedly for the study of co-operative activity in the various lines of denominational endeavor. Although this committee will have no authority, its findings are bound to receive serious consideration on the part of the participating bodies and the national organizations of the denominations. While this is in no sense a complete federation of our forces it is a distinct advance in that direction and should be welcomed by all who believe in co-operation and unity. The movement would seem to be in the direction of making the Federal Council the gravitating center for affiliated Protestant activities.

An important incident of the conference was the consideration of a request of the Reorganization Committee of the Interchurch World Movement for advice as to the future of that enterprise. A unanimous decision was reached to the effect that the Interchurch might wisely adjust and bring to a close its activities. In case this is done it was suggested that the Surveys and other materials amassed by the Movement might appropriately be distributed among the missionary Federations, with the Missionary Education Movement becoming residuary legatee for what might be left over. These recommendations will need to come before the General Committee of the Interchurch, but it is the opinion of Bishop Nicholson, who has been giving a generous amount of his time to the study of this problem, that the advice is likely to be followed.

Growing Breadth Among Episcopalians

It was notable in connection with the Boston meeting of the Federal Council that Episcopalians played a prominent part not only in connection with some of the meetings, but as hosts, the chairman of the Committee of Arrangements being an Episcopalian. Moreover, one of the important sessions was held in the Cathedral and another at Trinity Church. The same leaven is working in Brooklyn, where a service of worship and fellowship was held in the Tompkins Avenue Church Sunday evening, Nov. 28, two Episcopal churches uniting with Dr. Huget's congregation. The full Episcopal service was carried out, the rectors of the two churches and the choir of the Church of St. Matthew conducting the service. As an indication of the distance traveled in the way of mutual recognition, this service was unusual.

The Noonday Prayer Meeting

That is an excellent project which the Greater Boston Federation of Churches has launched—the holding of a daily prayer meeting as near the business center of the city as possible, beginning Ash Wednesday, Feb. 9 and continuing through Holy Week. Properly nourished, this meeting may come to be to Boston what the Fulton Street prayer meeting in New York for many years was to the Christian business men of that vicinity. Another sign of the aggressive leadership of the new administration of which Dr. Doremus Scudder is the head is the planning of two union meetings of all Boston ministers, one on Dec. 27, when Bishop Lawrence will speak on the inner story of the Lambeth Conference, and another on Jan. 24, when Dr. Charles L. Goodell will conduct an institute on parish evangelism, a mass meeting of laymen following in the afternoon.

Fruit in Old Age

If there is anybody on either side of the Atlantic who illustrates the statement so frequently made that a man is as old as he thinks he is, it is Dr. John Clifford, the veteran London Free Church leader. He celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday by preaching in the afternoon for forty-five minutes and speaking vigorously at an evening meeting. When the Bishop of London greeted him with "My dear old friend, how are you?" Dr. Clifford replied, "Quite well, but who are you calling old?" Octogenarians on this side of the water take notice and take heart.

Bringing Religion to the People

A United Christian Campaign under the challenge "Christ or Chaos?" has been carried on in Leeds, one of the great English industrial centers, beginning in October and concluding this month. The whole city was systematically mapped out, and scores of business houses, mills, and factories were visited, usually at the noon hour, by an Anglican and a Free Churchman together, the one acting as chairman and the other as speaker. Sometimes the speaker mounted a motor truck in the yard and addressed the "hands"; in other cases the meeting was held in a business office, with clerks and stenographers sitting and standing in every available space. Or the speaker went to a canteen, crowded with three hundred men smoking and talking. The message was, of course, brief and vital. The question was plainly put: Is there any power other than the spirit of Christ that can provide the dynamic for international, industrial, and individual reformation? In every case the Anglican and Free Churchman went together, and this visible sign of unity was in itself an object lesson of co-operation which impressed the minds of the people more than many Lambeth Conferences. In this way the church people of Leeds reached a class of people who rarely go to the churches and brought them a straightforward message about things that really matter.

Disciples Unite their Boards

The six national boards of the Disciples of Christ have joined in the formation of one board, under the name of the United Christian Missionary Society. This one organization continues the work of the American Christian Missionary Society, its Board of Church Extension, and Board of Ministerial Relief, Christian Woman's Board of Missions, Foreign Christian Missionary Society, and National Benevolent Association. This denomination started Dec. 12 an extra campaign to pay off its Interchurch underwritings. Other than this it intends to make no special campaign or drive this year.

EDITORIAL

The English-Speaking Peoples

We are Christians and we abominate violence. Deliberate assassinations and reprisals of blood and fire such as are making certain parts of Ireland a shambles are alike hateful to our souls. But, of course, we hate most thoroughly the deeds of those who began this mad devil's game of murder. And we are concerned about the situation in Ireland, not merely because it represents a state of mind which is wholly contrary to the wish of Christ, but also because it seems to be just now one of the chief hindrances to the peaceful reconstruction of the world. The fact that Irishmen of the party in which the plan of secret assassination arose were our enemies in war time, stoned and cursed our sailors in the streets of Cork and conspired with Germany for the overthrow of freedom, does not count in the least for our feeling in the matter. That is one of the things which we are quite ready to forgive and forget. Nor does the fact that most of us are of pure British descent count for much. We are Americans first, last, and all the time, and we never dream of putting a hyphen to our names or hating people because their ancestors once upon a time were cruel to our forefathers.

The reason why we hope that there may come an end to the brutal deeds which have provoked almost equally brutal reprisals in Ireland is that they hinder the peaceful reconstruction of the world. That reconstruction, in our sober judgment, depends mainly on a lasting understanding and good will among the English-speaking nations of the world. Canada, Australasia, South Africa, Great Britain, and the United States, with those other peoples who are naturally their friends, have in their hands, if never raised in hostility one to the other, the greatest possibilities of peace and progress of any existing group of peoples. But the war in Ireland and some of the methods of English commercial diplomacy are having their repercussion just now in a revival of dislike to England in the United States which is already a threatening element in the life of the world. And this aroused enmity on the part of many has its effect not only in making it harder for the United States to take its due place in international affairs, but also in arousing a second effect of dislike in England for the United States. Irish propaganda here makes the worst out of every act of the British government in Ireland. Irish riots in New York try to pull down and trample the British flag. British patience is tried by the reports which are sent across the ocean of violent words and deeds and constant plotting against England. Rumors and threats of war between Great Britain and the United States—a war which would be a suicide of modern civilization—are printed in flaring headlines by unscrupulous newspapers of our great cities. It is a vicious circle which we should like, in the best interests of the whole world, to see cut and ended.

The fact of the matter is that war between Great Britain and the United States is not imaginable. For the vast majority of citizens of the United States are friends and well wishers of their Mother across the sea. We have not the least desire to see the British empire overthrown, for we believe in its essential democracy and its potential service for the cause of civilization. Not that we think it perfect, or even perfect in good manners. But neither are we. All the talk of war comes out of the throats of people who cherish grudges or accept the windy talk of orators or speak in moments of irritation over the costly and sometimes cruel blunders of a neighbor. If the question were put to a vote in the United States whether the British have handled the Irish Question wisely in the past twenty years, the people of the United States would roll up as vast a vote in the negative as they gave in favor of the Republican candidates in the last election. If the question were whether we should go to war to allow a party in Ireland to do with the minority in Ireland what they desire, the majority against such interference would be larger yet.

The British Empire and the French Republic, Italy, and the republics of South America, with Japan, could insure peace for a generation, and perhaps for all the future of the world, if they would only work together, ban suspicions, cultivate consideration and courteous speech. But the keystone of that hoped-for arch of the triumph of peace is the sympathetic co-operation of the English-speaking peoples.

* *

The Roman Catholic Church leaders in Ireland have now apparently reached the conclusion that the policy of massacre in the attempt at freedom has gone far enough and if pursued further will be dangerous to Irish hopes. A direct excommunication of murderers by the Primate and something that looks like an overture toward negotiation on the part of the present head of the Sinn Fein movement, who is a Roman Catholic pastor, are signs of this. As the Roman Catholic Irish people of the South look to their pastors for political guidance in an unusual degree, this is the first real sign of hope we have seen on the dark horizon. In the meantime the Irish of the six counties of the North are preparing quietly to set up their parliament as soon as the Home Rule bill passes its final stages in the British House of Lords.

Dr. Boynton to Be Freed for a Larger Ministry

The resignation by Dr. Nehemiah Boynton of the pastorate of Clinton Avenue Church, Brooklyn, is not to be construed as a retreat from the arena but a regirding of himself for larger service. It is a great thing for any minister at sixty-four to enlarge rather than restrict his area of operation. In Dr. Boynton's case the finger of Providence seems to point to this particular step. In excellent health, with intellectual strength and personal influence at their zenith, and with many doors of opportunity opening before him, he is in a position to make the next few years one of the most productive periods in his life.

It is nearly forty years since Dr. Boynton assumed his first pastorate in Littleton, Mass. The North Church, Haverhill, Union Church, Boston, First Church, Detroit, were successively his scenes of labor until fifteen years ago when he accepted the Brooklyn call. There he has become the recognized leader of the Congregational group and widely influential in the life of Brooklyn and New York. His church, in debt at the time of his coming, is now financially unincumbered and has been and is a most generous supporter of all our benevolences. He has borne his full share of the common load locally, nationally, and internationally. The Congregational fellowship of the country has been enriched by his unique personality. Congregational enterprises have always found in him a stanch friend. In turn the denomination has honored him with the highest gifts in its bestowal. He has been moderator of the National Council, has served on the boards of all our major societies and is today President of the American Missionary Association.

Dr. Boynton's particular interest today is in the field of internationalism. He is Chairman of the Executive Committee of the World Alliance for the Promotion of International Friendship. That office will necessitate frequent trips to Europe for consultation with religious leaders there like the Archbishop of Canterbury, who is President of the organization. Meanwhile it is to be hoped that a generous portion of his time will be available for preaching in schools and colleges, where he has been so warmly welcomed through the years, for occasional addresses and for that service of denominational and interdenominational undertakings in which he is already an adept.

On another page we publish Dr. Boynton's letter of resignation. The bearing of the step upon the contemplated merger with Central Church is suggested in one of the paragraphs. Dr. Boynton's interest in the plan has never involved in his own mind the idea that he would himself be anything more than an introductory factor, leaving in Dr. Cadman's competent hands, at the earliest moment, the main responsibility. Undoubtedly Dr. Boynton, without any official relation to the combination, if it comes about, will be able in many ways to further its success.

The greetings of his great host of friends in churches East, West, North, South, go forth in overflowing measure to their big brother, Dr. Boynton, at this turning point in his life.

* * *

We are glad to see Bulgaria enrolled among the members of the League of Nations. She has learned her lesson, we hope, and will turn her face to the future of national brotherhood and work, rather than to the call of ambition and war. And Austria in her distress is welcome also.

A New Day for the Ministry

The year 1921 marks a new stage in the development of the far-reaching plan for the protection of the ministry through the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers. Three years ago the outline of the plan was unanimously adopted by the National Council with the expectation that it would be completed and that the Pilgrim Memorial Fund would be sufficiently in hand by January 1, 1921, to warrant its inauguration. The hope now has fruition. The plan, completed by the painstaking study of years on the part of the Boards and their expert advisers, commands the highest praise of foremost actuaries. Other fellowships are taking advantage of its skillful out-working. The Baptists, for example, have adopted it with only the slightest variations to suit their needs.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund, which acts as an endowment of the Annuity Fund, has now over two million dollars in invested funds toward the five million regarded as the minimum to make the work effective. The plan assumes the full payment of future installments on subscriptions to the Fund. The conception of the plan and its endowment, through the prompt and generous response of the churches, was the finest piece of constructive work in the history of the denomination.

It was never contemplated, however, that the Pilgrim Memorial Fund would finance the plan completely. That would involve a far larger sum. The contributory payments of the ministers and their churches are essential to its success. The ministers are awaking to the opportunity. The present need is the education of the conscience of the churches so that they will do their part. The plan calls upon each church to share equally with its minister in the annual dues. This is usually a comparatively small item. A glance at the statement on another page will enable each church to calculate the approximate expense. For the church paying a salary of $2,500 it would involve, the first year, seventy-five dollars, and after that approximately fifty dollars per year, the difference being in the probable credit from the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund.

The Commission on Missions has recommended to our missionary societies that they co-operate with all their ordained secretaries and missionaries, doing for them what the church is expected to do for its pastor. The Congregational Home Missionary Society has voted to co-operate with the Home Missionary churches in making all their pastors members of the Annuity Fund and proposes that membership in the Fund be made a condition of a man's commission since it is bound to promote his effectiveness. The American Board is earnestly considering a plan to put all its missionaries into the Annuity Fund.

Our churches are not likely to take a lower standard than that of our great missionary organizations. Every Board of Trustees should take immediate steps to put the item in the annual budget for 1921 providing for one-half the pastor's dues for that year. It is a privilege to have a part in this movement which is bound to promote powerfully the standards of the ministry, the recruiting of its ranks and the efficiency of its service.

* * *

Only Cambridge now is left among the English universities to harbor those English undergraduates who feel that their researches in classics and mathematics, in cricket, rowing and football, will be blighted if there are any women around who may hope to be admitted to a degree. But there is more than one among the universities of the United States which holds the women at arms' length. And we have just seen a revolt among the undergraduates of so modern a school of knowledge as Cornell against the very idea of co-operation in study by women and men.

The Needs of the Troubled World

There is confusion in the minds of many because of three appeals now before the American public: The Near East Relief, with its appeal for the children of the Near East; Mr. Hoover's appeal for the destitute children of Europe; and the appeal for the starving millions of China. Our readers will bear in mind that these appeals are wholly distinct and separate.

Mr. Hoover is providing only for the children of Europe, while the Near East Relief assumes a responsibility for the destitute children on the east of the Bosphorus extending from the Ægean Sea to the Caspian and down into Mesopotamia. All three appeals are urgent and imperative, but the children of one area should not be robbed for the sake of the children of the other. There ought to be enough for all in the benevolent heart of America at this Christmas season. The children under the care of the Near East Relief have no government protection. They are surrounded by officials who would be glad to see most of them perish. They must be cared for during this winter with the hope that somehow by another spring a government may be established that will insure peace and good order.

Mr. Hoover, as the head of the associated organizations for relief of the suffering children of Europe has now put their case squarely before our people. With the influence of these well-known forces thus allied and led we do not doubt that the response will be generous. And there is need of generosity, not only because the suffering is great and the cold of winter bitter, but because we need to do something to rehabilitate the good name of the United States in these countries where our refusal to join in official action for the works of peace has brought us suspicion and dislike. The President's example in becoming a foster-father for individual children should be widely followed by those who are able. The President-elect has also made a generous contribution to the project.

The President's appeal for China must also have a generous hearing and response. We can hardly hope to save all these millions of people alive in their dreadful starving time, but at least we can save some of them. The problem of their crowded life and the recurring droughts and floods of China is one of the great problems of the future. But at least we can help prevent the blotting out of a people who are in number a full third of the population of our own nation.

All these appeals mean self-denials and restriction of all superfluities and extravagances. They come, we recognize, as an appeal to a community which is turning a sharp financial corner and many of whom are themselves in distress. We shall have to weigh the claims of many personal satisfactions and the appeals of many charities. It will be for our spiritual health to do this weighing and comparing soberly and prayerfully at this Christmas season.

* * *

While we are good Congregationalists, let us do some of our thinking also as members of the one holy universal church of Christ by which, through baptism and confession, we all belong.

A Turning Point in the Woman's Board

Missionary enthusiasm and capacity for service runs in the veins of certain families. This is illustrated at the moment both in the new President of the Woman's Board of Missions, Mrs. Franklin Warner, and in the Chairman of the Board of Directors, Mrs. Everett E. Kent, who will share with her the major responsibilities in guiding the organization during the coming years. Mrs. Warner is a daughter-in-law of Dr. Lucien C. Warner of New York, for many years a leader in our denominational affairs, who, though past seventy, keeps his shoulders under heavy denominational burdens. Mrs. Kent is the daughter of Herbert A. Wilder of Newton who, through his generous gifts and the wisdom shown at the council table, has also put the denomination under exceptional obligation to him. It is the first time that the Woman's Board has gone outside of New England for its president, but as our characterization of her elsewhere in this paper shows, the Board has chosen a woman of experience, executive gifts and of devotion to missions. She has the best of all foundations to build on, that furnished by the consecrated labors of her predecessor, Mrs. Charles H. Daniels.

Congregationalists the country over view with satisfaction the expansion of the Woman's Board. None of our societies is more conservatively administered. It spends its money as received, thus obviating any debt, though it is constantly faced by serious moral obligations to its 141 missionaries. It has a great asset in the capacity and loyalty of its twenty-five Branches throughout the East. Gifts from these sources have increased at the rate of $22,000 a year during the last three years, but what is still better, this policy of placing responsibility upon the local units avoids the danger of over-centralization, and at the same time keeps hundreds of women vitally interested in the work of the Board. They do not have to be enlightened and aroused by banquets and exciting campaigns, as is the case with too many Congregational men. Meanwhile the work on the field was never so successful and the relations with the two other Congregational Woman's Boards and Woman's Boards of other denominations are increasingly close and profitable.

The Congregationalist improves the opportunity afforded by this administrative change, so happily consummated, to congratulate the Woman's Board on its important place in the network of our denominational machinery and on its indispensable part in pushing forward the Kingdom of God.

Disarmament

Of all the perplexing questions with which the League assembly was faced at Geneva, none was more bothersome than that of disarmament. George Barnes, one of England's delegates, himself a prominent labor leader, said, "This is the acid test." Only a tiny beginning was made in the direction of the desired goal, but that was better than nothing. So long, however, as the United States goes on increasing its navy, we are estopped from championing what three years ago everybody hoped would be one outcome of the world war. The moral forces of this country should not remain supine in the presence of an issue like this and take their cue from those who say, "The world being what it is, big armies and navies will always be necessary."

There are at the moment only three nations which have great armaments afloat—Great Britain, Japan, and the United States. If these armaments can be reduced—or at least kept where they at present are—it will be a long step toward the disarmament of the world. Senator Borah is right and Secretary Daniels is wrong, the one proposing an agreement between Japan, Great Britain, and the United States to stop warship building, the other in demanding the carrying out of the program of 1916 for the building of many ships to make us the strongest naval power in the world. The effect of that program is seen in the open statement of the Japanese government leaders that Japan cannot stop the increase of her armaments while the United States continues. Neither Japan nor the United States can afford these enormous expenditures. It is criminal lunacy to keep on with them. We hope the Senate will act at once on Senator Borah's resolution and put us in the ranks of those who are not anxious to be armed to the teeth against neighbors whom we have not the least desire to fight.

The Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the One-Course Dinner

When I and Keturah had been married for the space of one month, she spake unto me saying, Tonight thy Dinner shall have but One Course, and there shall be enough of it.

So we sat down to meat, and we gave God thanks, and I lifted the cover of the dish, and behold, there was a Short-cake, made of Blackberries, for it was the season of that kind of fruit.

And we ate each of us one piece, and Keturah said, That is thy Soup.

And we ate each of us another, and she said, That is thy Fish.

And we ate each of us another, and Keturah gave it the name of another course. And she ate no more. But I ate as long as Keturah could think of the names of more courses. For it was the first time in my life that I had eaten enough of Short-cake.

And when the next Summer came, Keturah did likewise again, save that she did it with Strawberries.

And when she found that I liked Strawberries, but that I like Red Raspberries still better then she did it with Red Raspberries.

And it would be of no use to tell any one else how good those Short-cakes were. And when we had them, we had nothing else, save the Sugar and the Cream.

And now and again Keturah still maketh for me a Dinner with but One Course, and it sometimes is Flannel Cakes with Hot Maple Syrup, and sometimes it is Hot Biscuit and Red Raspberries, and sometimes it is Hot Corn Bread and Honey.

And at the beginning I was wont to say to her, Keturah, let us have it ever thus.

But I have ceased to say that. For Keturah hath often told me that even the best of meals are better for Variety, and that meals of One Course, and that a mighty good one, are desirable chiefly when they themselves are a variety. And the same is true of many good things in life. For goodness hath often been made unlovely by its infernal monotony.

In Brief

The National Drainage Congress has been in session in Atlanta. That it has a field for work may be gathered from the statement of Dr. Andrew M. Soule of the Georgia State College of Agriculture that it is quite possible to reclaim in the United States swamps and overflowed lands of a larger aggregate than the whole extent of the British Isles.

* *

We are pretty well nationalized already according to the just published report of the Civil Service Commission which shows that one out of every 159 of the whole American people is in the employ of the Government, or of those engaged in some gainful employment, one out of every 68. No wonder the taxes are heavy and the dispensers of "patronage" are overwhelmed with applications.

* *

Surely church treasurers will respond promptly to the appeal from our missionary societies through the Congregational World Movement for payment of funds in their hands from the Emergency campaign last spring. The delay in forwarding these funds has caused serious embarrassment to the missionary societies, but happily it is being relieved by the church treasurers. Every-Member Canvasses this month have brought encouraging results. Definite reports regarding them will be in hand by next week. A large proportion of the canvasses are postponed until next spring.

* *

We haven't happened to notice in any of the appeals denominational, interdenominational, and local, that are going out for everyone to gird up his loins, financially speaking, the following jingle, which we quote from the parish magazine of a church in Ireland:

He dropped a penny in the plate,
Then meekly raised his eyes,
Glad the week's rent was duly paid
For mansions in the skies.

But the point made by the poet has its application to other lands than Ireland.

* *

Senator Dillingham, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Immigration, has introduced a bill providing that the number of immigrants of any nation admitted be limited to five per cent. of those of that origin already living in the United States. The outstanding exception proposed is that the bill is not to apply to immigrants who are native born or naturalized in any country of the Western Hemisphere. There is a good deal to be said for such a plan as this, either as a basis of congressional and public debate or as a substitute to the plan of absolute exclusion of all immigrants for a year or more which has been proposed in the House of Representatives.

* *

France is predominantly a Roman Catholic nation, though it has complete religious freedom. It has also just now larger outside relations and responsibilities than ever before in its history. Add to these considerations that the heroic self-devotion of France in war kindled religious earnestness in many souls, and we are far upon the way toward an explanation of the considerable majority by which the French parliament has voted to follow the example of Great Britain in maintaining an embassy at the Vatican and to receive an agent of the head of the Roman Catholic Church in Paris. The aid and sympathy of the Roman church authorities will be no small matter for the French policies in Poland and all Eastern and Southern Europe; and in Asia Minor and Syria in particular.

Why I Gave Up Business

The Motives of Service

By William E. Sweet

To give up business, with its multiplying cares and responsibilities, while still in middle life, has meant the carrying out of a long cherished plan.

When, just out of college, I entered business, I determined, if circumstances would permit, to retire while I could still give to other pursuits the same energy and enthusiasm that I would give to business. I am now retiring from business for the very same reason that actuated me when I entered it—the belief that I can better serve God and my fellow men out of business than in it.

I gave up business because it seemed to me there were other things more worth while than the accumulation of money after one has provided for his family. I believe supremely in the efficiency of the Gospel of Christ to solve the problems of the world. If civilization fails, it will be because the church has failed properly to represent Christ in the world, and if civilization is saved, it will be because the world accepts the teachings of Christ. Christian and non-Christian unite in this belief. When the great war started the world declared that Christianity had broken down. The church replied that Christianty had never been tried. This is true, but the world will not again accept any excuse for the failure of Christianity to penetrate and permeate the whole of Society. The teachings of Christ must become dominant in the world if the conflict between self-interest and justice is to be kept within the limits of law and order. Unless the church concerns itself with the manner in which men live, men will not long make it their concern how the church itself shall live.

The New York Churchman, an organ of the Protestant Episcopal Church, recently made the following statement:

> The church has reserved for itself the responsibility of announcing the doctrine of the brotherhood of man, but has left the application of that doctrine to statesmen and business men.

It deplores this peculiar division of labor and asks how far the world has progressed after nineteen hundred years. It urges that the church try another tack and says that unless this is done, it should be honest and declare that the church has nothing to do with the "brotherhood of man."

The Need of Time for Service

I gave up business because I wanted to give more of my time to this cause. The ministry stands almost alone in this conflict between two opposing forces in the church. A certain majority group of leaders will not tolerate the church's having any relation to mooted industrial questions. This is illustrated by the division of opinion as to the propriety of the report of the Interchurch World Movement on the Steel Strike. There is as yet no lay leadership on this subject. One can scarcely blame a minister for giving up in despair when he finds little or no response from the pew to the social message which he believes constitutes the very heart of the Gospel. Winston Churchill's "The Inside of the Cup" would be a true story of many churches if the preacher said what he honestly thought. If I can, I want to help create a more Christian, a more just and a more humane public opinion in the church on the question of the church's relation to social and economic justice. This requires the expenditure of much time and effort and demands freedom from business cares and responsibilities.

The Call of Present Need

I gave up business because it seemed to me that too few men are thinking about those conditions which since the war have resulted in industrial conflicts throughout the world. No nation is free from these social crises. Too few men—especially business men—are sufficiently interested in the cause of justice—that higher justice that regards human rights as of greater importance than property rights. As part of the great business machine I found that my ideas of what constituted justice did not agree with the views held by most men in the business world. To have remained in business, piling up profits under existing conditions, would have been to lay myself open to the charge of inconsistency. On the other hand, I am well aware that as society is organized a man cannot withdraw himself entirely from business affiliations. I am confident that many men are thinking seriously on this subject but through force of circumstances they are caught up in the whirl of business and are powerless before the mighty tide of public opinion.

The fact is that the Christian man in applying the teachings of Christ with respect to brotherhood and service starts from an entirely different premise than the non-Christian business man. Indeed, in business where the ideal of brotherhood interferes with profits, brotherhood must step aside. While there are some notable examples to the contrary, they constitute a mere fraction of the business world. Christian men in business cannot practice the Christian principle of brotherhood under the competitive system—to do so is to invite disaster. "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" characterizes business in most of its relationships. Certain Labor groups are criticized for promoting the class-conscious spirit, but if one wants to meet a thoroughly class-conscious group of men, let him visit the ordinary Chamber of Commerce of a large city, especially during a Labor disturbance. Any man whose views differ from those of "Big Business" would do well to keep silent. There is absolute solidarity of opinion in business.

Freedom to Express Convictions

I gave up business because I desired to be perfectly free to express my convictions on public questions whether or not they were in accord with the views of my business friends. The unconscious influence working in the minds of most business men is the question, "What will be the effect on my business if I express my convictions publicly?" A business man must conform. If he does not he is guilty of the worst crime in the catalogue of business. In Labor parlance, he is a "scab." In a great crisis he cannot be independent, he cannot even be neutral. What the business world needs today more than anything else is a group of business men who are not afraid to utter their honest convictions on the subject of social and economic justice. Unfortunately the voices of such men would be scarcely audible in the business councils of the nation.

There is no man quite so narrow as the average successful business man. He is narrow because he is unacquainted with affairs which do not touch his business, and he is ignorant because his whole thought is on markets. He feels that his leisure must be given to exercise and amusement, while the needs of the great seething tide of humanity scarcely touch him.

Need of Knowing Men

I gave up business because I wanted more time to mingle with people who are thinking and doing things in the world, outside of business—more time to cultivate the friendship of those who are living unselfishly for the world's betterment. While it is true that a man in business has a certain influence which he loses when he retires, nevertheless, there is a greater service which a man outside of business can render. If he is interested in the study of human relationships and the problems confronting the world, he may well give up business in order that he may devote himself more intelligently and ardently to the pursuit of those altruistic tasks which make for his own culture and the well being of society.

Edward Bok in his recent article in the Atlantic Monthly, "Just Because I Wanted to Play," says that a man should divide his life into three periods: first—that of education, acquiring the fullest and best within his power; second—that of achievement, achieving for himself and family, and discharging the first duty of any man—to see that in case of his incapacity, those who are closest to him are provided for; third—service for others. That is the acid test, Mr. Bok says, where many a man falls short.

Brotherhood is one of the greatest words in the English language and it must have a wider and deeper significance in the days to come. It means more than neighbor or comrade. It is not confined to a continent nor to those using a common language.

Christmas

By Marion P. Guild

Mid all the mighty changes
  Of this most changeful time,
Love shines in steadfast radiance,
  Immutable, sublime.
Today we gird ourselves with joy
  Once more for love's high quest;
For Christmas is the birthday
  Of Love made manifest.

When hand grips hand in brotherhood, there is no need of the spoken word. The practice of brotherhood is a grace which men must cultivate. To do this takes time, but it is the highest form of service. Men who can give up business for such service can be, of all men, the happiest. Again, in the words of Mr. Bok, "Time is of more value than money and it is that which the man who retires feels that he possesses." Free from care, a man can find no greater joy than giving his time to those forms of service which help to establish "good-will among men."

DENVER, Colorado.

The Forum Marching On

The Leader of the Movement Reports Successes

By George W. Coleman

The idea and spirit of the Open Forum grows more pervasive all the time. Individual forums come and go with varying local conditions and changing managements but the forum idea is sweeping over the country and the spirit of it is continually finding new forms of expression. Even the name of the Open Forum is employed for a wide variety of purposes, all having a more or less close relationship to the fundamental idea of the forum.

The Congregationalist itself, like many another publication, prints contributions from its readers in a department designated "Our Readers' Forum." There is a widely circulated publication representing national farming interests which has named itself The Farmers' Open Forum. Hundreds of Bible Classes, private clubs, women's groups, Chambers of Commerce and all sorts of social and political organizations are using the forum name to characterize their open discussions. And a very much larger assortment of quasi-public organizations are regularly employing the forum technique and adopting its spirit without any thought of ever using its name. All of which is most gratifying to those who are earnestly giving themselves to the promotion of this dynamic method for inculcating genuine tolerance, mutual understanding and friendly good will even among those who are supposed to be at daggers' points toward each other.

THE FORUM IN SUMMER

Even during the hot vacation months the forum interests were busily at work widely extending the knowledge of the forum. At Chautauqua, N. Y., as the readers of this paper have already learned through the admirable report of Dr. Chrystie, thousands of local leaders from all parts of the country were given visible and audible demonstrations in the great amphitheater at Chautauqua of what the forum can do in stimulating, leading and guiding public discussion of vital questions in audiences of three and four thousand people.

Earlier in the season at the Winona Assembly in Indiana the forum idea was given a setting and acquired a vogue quite unlike anything it has yet experienced. Here in the midst of one of the oldest, largest and most conservative religious assemblies in America, the forum, one of the newest methods of handling public discussions, received a hearty official welcome and won a complete popular approval.

On Sunday afternoons for six consecutive weeks, beginning on the Fourth of July, an open forum was conducted in the auditorium where Dr. G. Campbell Morgan was preaching to a large congregation morning and evening. Sunday afternoon at Winona has long been a favorite time for taking a prolonged nap and many wise ones prophesied it would be impossible to get any considerable audience at that hour, especially for a new kind of meeting that was unknown and of course therefore of a more or less doubtful character.

About four hundred brave auditors greeted the writer as the speaker of the day on this first afternoon. It was not easy for me to impress them with the need and power of the forum idea and the discussion following the address was only moderate at the best. In the following weeks appeared such speakers as Dr. Henry E. Jackson of Washington, Judge Robert H. Terrell, a colored jurist from the municipal court of our national capital, and Louis F. Post, Assistant Secretary of Labor. The audiences increased at every meeting, the discussions grew intense, feeling was aroused, ideas clashed, but the forum spirit of openness, fairness, toleration and kindliness were so beautifully exemplified in the chairman of the meetings, Mr. Robert S. Holmes, a consecrated Baptist laymen from Daytona, Fla., that every threatened disruption was successfully healed, every storm of emotion was happily weathered, and there was registered every week an increasing sense of satisfaction with the results that were being realized.

Col. Raymond Robins was the sixth and last speaker in the course. His life and character were so misunderstood that the announcement of his coming created a storm of disapproval, but Mr. Holmes, the wise and careful chairman, well practiced in forum management, held on quietly but firmly. The auditorium that Sunday afternoon was packed to its capacity (3,200) and overflowing as well. Colonel Robins made the big hit of the entire series. Not only did the great throng vote unanimously inviting the forum management to return next season but the authorities were eagerly seeking Colonel Robins' promise to lecture before the regular Winona Bible Conference next year.

Now this is but an illustration of what the forum can do to remove misunderstanding and bring folks together. But of course, great as was the value of the forum to the crowds attending Winona this summer, its greatest significance lay in the fact that it demonstrated to thousands of ministers and lay workers from all over the Middle West what the forum can do as an agency for promoting in a big way an intelligent, intense, yet restrained and orderly discussion of the great interests of life that concern the Kingdom of Heaven on earth.

DAYTONA'S COMMUNITY FORUM

This man Holmes who did this splendid piece of work at Winona, at the suggestion and with the backing of Dr. Sol Dickey, who manages the Winona enterprise, is doing an even more wonderful piece of fourm work in his home city at Daytona Beach, Florida. Beginning some years ago with a little forum in the local Methodist Church, the rapid growth of which required a large addition to the meeting-house every year or two, he has now on his hands, as the inspiring leader and indefatigable manager and impartial chairman, a great Community Forum which is a civic, intellectual and moral beacon light for the whole country for miles around. In this little city with only a few hundred population in the summer time it has been necessary to build an auditorium that will accommodate 3,500 people in order to provide for the crowds that attend the Sunday afternoon forums. It is put to similar uses also during the week. Mr. Holmes is one of those men, who, finding that he had to choose between the business of making money in real estate operations and the intoxication of forum service, deliberately gave up business in order that he might freely, without any material compensation, give himself heart and soul to the forum work. Mr. Holmes is well known among the Baptists of Michigan, having lived in Lansing most of his life, and has served the larger interests of his denomination with marked devotion and great success. At Chautauqua this summer he was elected Secretary of the Open Forum National Council.

IN TERRE HAUTE

Out in Indiana a young Congregational minister, Rev. John W. Herring has launched a Community Forum with a courage of initiative, a thoughtfulness of preparation, and a success of accomplishment that reminds me of the great qualities of his lamented father, who by the way gave me the right hand of fellowship in all my forum work. The first Congregational Church of Terre Haute, as the result of young Herring's labors, is the seat of a promising forum enterprise which fills the auditorium on Sunday evenings with a throng representing every element in the city. I made the address on the opening night, Nov. 14. For nearly two hours, following a half-hour's musical program, we talked over together the purpose and value of the forum. A week later the house was again filled to listen to an expert on City Planning and another vital discussion followed. It has been my privilege to inaugurate many forums in various parts of the country. Never have I seen one started under such favorable auspices as in the case of this Terre Haute Open Forum.

IN CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE

There is still another recent development of the forum work which is proceeding at a great pace. While the forum idea first found expression in connection with more or less radical audiences such as gather at Cooper Union, New York, Ford Hall, Boston, and the Church of the Ascension in New York, it is very interesting to note that the genius of the thing is just as easily applicable to the most conservative group that can be found in any community, namely the Chambers of Commerce.

A year ago I had the privilege of addressing a great company of Chamber of Commerce secretaries assembled at their summer school at Eagles Mere, Pa. I was much cheered with their eager interest in the forum message. They absorbed in a twinkle what I had thought would be a bountiful supply of literature and called for more. Now I find the American City Bureau, the organization under whose auspices we met and whose function it is to establish Chambers of Commerce all over the country and revitalize those that have missed their mark —this organization is advancing the idea of the "Members' Forum" as the center around which all Chamber of Commerce activities should revolve. They publish a pamphlet giving detailed instructions on the subject and have a competent man in the field giving his whole time to the establishment of Members' Forums in Chambers of Commerce. It is only a step, and a short one at that, from a Members' Forum to a Community Forum. The idea of a tolerant discussion of varying ideas is at the heart of both. Just widen the circle to include the community and there you are with a full-fledged Open Forum.

SPREADING RAPIDLY

With such influences behind the forum idea, and I have just sketched a few of the more recent developments, it is easy to understand why the forum is spreading so rapidly in every direction, even in the South. Every day brings to my desk inquiries from all over the country asking for information about the forum. If I had a dozen lives I could use them all fulfilling earnest invitations to speak to Chambers of Commerce, Women's Clubs, Rotary Clubs and the like, all wanting to hear at first hand an interpretation of the forum idea.

Is it any wonder? What a hunger there is in all our hearts for something that will draw us together. How eager the mind is to find a way toward harmony and good will. How sick we all are of the bickerings of partisanship, of the bigotries of sectarianism, and of the brutalities of the class conflict. Our hearts faint within us as we contemplate the rising international anarchy; we are dismayed over the failure of Protestantism to find a common working basis; we look into the face of a dying Europe torn asunder by national jealousies and hatreds; we feel the rumblings of race antagonisms in our own body social. We grasp at anything that has in it a promise of mutual understanding, good will and sympathy by which we may generate a safe and sane atmosphere in which to make the great change in our civilization for which the hour has struck.

THE FORUM SPIRIT IN RHODE ISLAND

In the Congregational Church at Central Falls, R. I., on the night of Oct. 4 we had a foretaste of this brotherly communion in which we all stand in such great need. The church was celebrating its seventy-fifth anniversary. No, excuse me, on this one special night the community, through a dozen representatives, including every breed and creed, was celebrating this joyous occasion. It was given to me to make the closing address. The pastor, Rev. James D. Dingwell, and I have been like comrades in arms for years. Without having a forum in his church he has radiated the forum spirit throughout the entire community. And Jews and Gentiles, Catholics and Protestants, natives and foreigners, employers and employees, conservatives and radicals were all there in one happy family attesting their joy in having found an atmosphere where they could all feel kindly toward one another in spite of the wide differences that separated them.

Notwithstanding all the things that differentiate us let us insist on having at least one place where we can meet each other on even terms. However we differ in breed and creed, we are all human. It is even truer today than it was in Ben Franklin's time—if we do not hang together we will all hang separately. The forum is the one place where every one is welcome, no one is excluded, where there are no majorities and no minorities, where there is no partisanship, and no sectarianism—just folks in a family gathering seeking the way of life.

Women in the Federal Council

Extending the Spirit of Unity

By Mary Louise Daniels

The feminine element in the Federal council, which has just met in Boston, was naturally a slender one. Twenty women delegates represented such groups as the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America, the Council of Women for Home Missions, the International Young Woman's Christian Association. Mrs. Harold Spender, accompanying her husband, was welcomed as the one much-appreciated link between English and American co-operative movements among Christian women.

On two occasions only did the slender element become prominent. Friday morning Mrs. Fred Smith Bennett for the Council of Home Missions and Mrs. H. R. Steele, former President of the Federation, in the absence of Mrs. William Boyd, President, spoke for the thousands of women behind them as they voiced a spirit of co-operation and a purpose to face new problems courageously.

The second occasion was a supper given Monday evening, Dec. 6, to the women delegates by various woman's societies, at the Twentieth Century Club. If any of the hostesses had previously felt a pang of conscience over "one-fifty a plate," they became reconciled because of value received. The roast beef and ice cream with their satellites began the process of reconciliation and Dr. van Dyke set the seal.

The "feast of reason and flow of soul" began around the long tables when, as in one case, Episcopalian, Unitarian and Congregational strangers introduced themselves and fell to chatting on such popular topics as community schools for religious education!

As the brethren were under bonds for a "three-dollar plate" at the City Club of course they required longer time to prove themselves honorable, while the women waited for two speakers to be kindly passed along over Beacon hilltop. But not idly did they wait. Mrs. George W. Coleman, presiding gracefully, had feminine material at hand in the form of Mrs. Steele and Mrs. Bennett, to speak briefly for the Federation and the Council, and Miss Butler, secretary, to bring a word about the church at work for girls through the National Young Woman's Chistian Association.

Miss Charlotte Willard, missionary for twenty-three years in Marsovan, Turkey, under the Woman's Board of the Interior, proved a climax to these greetings and also as Mrs. Coleman said, a "time-filler." In both capacities Miss Willard showed the same poise, grace and modesty which mark all her public speaking. As told by her the story of deportations is not too harrowing. The noble ministries of her students call out admiration, the Moslem receives Christian sympathy, the chaotic conditions of the present challenge America.

Just there the itinerating speakers arrived bringing with them the lighter mood which relieved hearts burdened for suffering children.

Rev. Alexander Ramsay assured us that he and every man in Great Britain he had ever seen would have done just what the colonists did for freedom and he had taken off his hat at the old Concord bridge. Still he thought it best to avoid tea parties in Boston and hold strictly to coffee, for our tea might be flavored even now with salt water! For our womanly sakes the Pilgrim Mothers were extolled and we relished the praise rolled out in rich Scottish brogue. Dr. Henry van Dyke, with quips and sallies, took us "a fishin'" among the Puritans and Pilgrims to point out similarities and differences.

After talking with some of the many women who sat at supper or in the galleries of Ford Hall or in the great gatherings at St. Paul and Trinity Churches, it appears that the bits of pure gold deposited in their memories fall under certain heads.

1. The spirit of unity actually grows. This

"LITTLE BROTHERS OF THE MANGER"

By Margaret Cable Brewster

In the hollow of the hay
The little sleeping Lord I lay.
Little Brothers of the Manger
Guard Him till the day.

Round His head the starry shine
Makes a crown of purest gold.
Ox and ass and gentle lambkins
Shield Him from the cold.

In His sleep He softly smiles,
Dreaming now of near-by Heaven.
Angels out of God's dominions
Watch o'er Him this even.

He is Brother to the meanest,
Brother to the highest too.
Little Brothers of the Manger
Guard Him all night through.

was illustrated by a symbolic tableau on the platform of Ford Hall when Dr. Robert E. Speer, presiding, stretched out both arms and two bishops of the Episcopal Church grasped each a hand.

2. American women are placed high in privilege and therefore should carry a sense of far-reaching responsibility.

3. The whole world calls America to "play the game." One anecdote, told by Mrs. Spender at a dinner tendered herself and husband by the Woman's City Club, shows the feeling of our English sisters on this point.

A little girl in England was an only child and often lonely. One day she cried, "I wish I was two little dogs!" "Why so?" asked her mother.

"So that I could play with each other!"

4. We must take new hold on God to find power for new tasks. Another symbolic picture will abide in memory to enforce this thought. Secretary Penson, of the Methodist Church, South, speaking Saturday evening, lifted high his arm and stretched a forefinger upward. "With earnest desire we must reach out and touch God's resources of power."

Los Angeles' Greeting

Dear Mr. Editor:

May I express through your columns, on behalf of the First Church and the twenty-five other Congregational churches of Los Angeles, the Southern California Conference, and the Congregational people of this state, the warm welcome that awaits all comers to the National Council next July.

The dates of the Council have been unavoidably put one week ahead, and the Council will open on Friday, July 1 and close Friday, July 8. Nearly all visitors will thus be able to leave their homes after Sunday and be here for the opening session. It is probably safe to predict that the trip across the desert will be warm. But it will be a fine experience for those who have not had it; those who have had it will be innured to it, while the charm of the desert is one that never fails. California is always delightful in July. Visitors may leave their umbrellas and rubbers at home; we guarantee it not to rain. We also guarantee the thermometer not to register higher than 75 to 80, nor lower than 60. The nights, mornings and later afternoons will be cool. People who have been planning for a trip, sometime, to California, should take it in connection with the National Council.

We will stretch our hospitality to the limit. We want the Council to be not only a large but a representative one. We appreciate the expense and labor of the journey from New England; but just because we are so far away we are the more anxious that the dwellers in the original land of the Pilgrims should do us the honor to come and see what we have tried to do with our Pilgrim inheritance on this other side of the continent. This meeting of the Council should contribute to a truly national consciousness among our Congregational people.

The name of the chairman of our Hospitality Committee will be published in The Congregationalist within a few weeks. To those who do not realize how far away California is, July may seem to be still a long way off. But time flies; the postal service is slow; trains are crowded; make all your plans far in advance. Our people are anxious to see you, hear you, and give you the welcome of the Pacific Coast.

Very cordially,

CARL S. PATTON.

Pastor of Entertaining Church.

First Church, Los Angeles.

Elects New President

Mrs. Warner Succeeds Mrs. Daniels

After fourteen successful years as the President of the Woman's Board, Mrs. Charles H. Daniels has resigned that office and a worthy successor has been found in Mrs. Franklin Warner of White Plains, N. Y.

Mrs. Warner's early life was spent in different parts of the Middle West and Western states, as her father, a railroad man, was transferred from place to place. She graduated from Mills College, Cal., and after her marriage to Mr. Warner, in 1899, went to New York to live. She has long been interested in missions, and since 1917 has been speaking on an average of at least three times a week before gatherings large and small on the subject of Foreign and Home Missions. Two journeys which Mr. and Mrs. Warner made have given her an excellent opportunity to observe and inform herself with regard to missions. In 1916—1917 she went to Ceylon as one of a party of four on a deputation for the Centennial celebration for the founding of missions in that country, and visited Congregational mission stations in Japan, India and the coast of China. In 1919, on a motor tour through sixteen states, she visited home missions, particularly those in New Mexico and Arizona.

Mrs. Warner has had wide experience in executive positions and is now Corresponding Secretary of the Woman's Home Missionary Federation and woman representative on the Executive Committee of the Home Mission Extension Board. That Mrs. Warner's interests extend beyond the mission field is shown by her active interest in the Y. W. C. A., of which she is a member of the National Board. She is also a member-at-large of the Congregational World Movement Committee of One Hundred.

MRS. FRANKLIN WARNER
New President of the Woman's Board

The Retiring President

It is thirty-two years since Mrs. Charles Daniels formed the official connection with the Woman's Board which has inured in so many ways to its advantage, and lifted her to a conspicuous place among the Congregational women leaders of the nation. At the end of this period, having served eighteen years as vice-president and fourteen as president, she is the same modest, self-effacing person whom her Smith College classmates knew and loved, and who later proved herself the ideal pastor's wife. Her clear judgment and irenic spirit have helped to shape the policies of the board. She has spoken at innumerable gatherings, and written frequently and illuminatingly of various phases of the work. She has even fallen into line as a regular office worker, as when she took charge of the Candidates Department during Sec'y Helen Calder's recent trip around the world. The fact that her husband, the late Dr. C. H. Daniels, was for years secretary of the American Board, coupled with her own constant study of missions, has enabled her to maintain an outlook on the field broader than that covered by the area of the W. B. M.'s work, extensive though that is.

The sole reason why Mrs. Daniels now retires is because of her conviction that rotation in so important an office should take place about once in so often. Seldom does the retirement of a denominational official after long service occasion so universal a chorus of regret, and the best thing remains to be said about Mrs. Daniels; namely, that through these thirty-two years her simple, genuine spiritual life has been the chief source of her power over others.

MRS. CHARLES H. DANIELS
The Retiring President

League of the New Day

Next Week's Readings and Prayers

Week of Dec. 27–Jan. 2

Monday. The Loving Father. Luke 15: 11-32.

Tuesday. A Prayer for Pardon. Ps. 51.

Wednesday. The Holy City. Rev. 21: 1-14.

Thursday. The Heavenly Citizens. Rev. 22: 1-16.

Friday. The Good Will of God. Luke 12: 22-38.

Saturday. A Child Dedicated to God. Luke 2: 21-32.

Sunday. The Pure in Heart. Ps. 24: 1-6.

Object for Intercession

For Men Out of Work and Those Who Are Dependent on Them:

Lord God, who workest and callest us to work in our vocation, remember in thy mercy those who are willing to do their part and are deprived of opportunity. Open a way for them and make their lives fruitful and helpful in the earth. Sustain them and those whom thou hast given them in days of want and uncertainty. And renew for us, if it please thee, the flowing springs of our prosperity that there may be opportunity for all thy children in the world which thou hast made for the needs and the enjoyment of all alike. In the name of Jesus Christ, our comrade and our leader.—R.

OUR PILGRIM PULPIT

Carrying Back the Christmas Glory

By Rev. George D. Owen

Smithfield Ave. Church, Pawtucket, R. I.

And the Shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen.—Luke 2: 20.

Looking out on a perfect day over the ocean's majesty and mystery a young man was heard to say, "To think of mending shoes after all this!"

Does our work shut out the glory from our souls? Is our holiday a garden of experience and our task the waste? Cannot our common life be transfused with the glory of higher experience so that it too becomes uncommon?

The Shepherds were startled by the sudden light that grew brighter and took shape, while holy messengers announced: "Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ, the Lord." The air became eloquent with praise: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, and good will amongst men." Led by the star to Bethlehem, they found the Babe, the Son of God, alike and yet so unlike other babes. Then, after worshiping and musing on the wonder of it all, they returned to care for the sheep. "To think of tending sheep after all this!"

The shepherds tended sheep as aforetime, but with hearts elated and ecstatic. Hopes were becoming realities, dreams coming true. They had heard the angels' song confirming the descent of God to man. Henceforth no dreary round could cause the glory to vanish from their sky. They went out into the night, but the night shone. They saw one less star, but the wonder of that star grew.

We too have visited the Child and are astounded by the greatness of the Father's love. We too have heard the song with fellowship of home and loved ones. What then of daily tasks? Must all that glory fade? Must we leave the mountain and descend into the valley? May not our common life be glorified by what we have seen and felt in our most exalted moments?

Christ came to infuse life with the glory of Heaven. He has made possible a halo about every task. He would have us find gold amid the dust. Happy is he who listens to the angelic music and is ready to transfer its rhythm to hastening feet and praising lips.

We may carry our vision with us from the heights. We have Christ's fellowship. Back to hard service after this! After vision and insight, inspiration and uplift, having looked into the lovely face of Christ, we can serve anywhere with joy. As travelers by the Simplon from Switzerland toward Italy see behind the rugged mountains and ahead the sun-kissed hills and valleys of the South, so we should pass into a richer experience. When Christmas Day is behind us it should mark the frontier of the old, and the bringing in of new and higher experiences. Life will not seem like the old life if we have caught the vision. New light will shine upon it. The Shepherd will lead us into green pastures of experience and beside still waters of the soul's refreshing. We shall return and take up the work of life where we left off; but it will be holier, brighter and contain more of the divine, because we have caught the Spirit of Christ. Christmas is but one day, but we may extend its glory and uplift by keeping the beautiful vision in our own lives.

Election and League

By Rev. A. Z. Conrad, Ph.D., D.D.

Extravagance, waste, inefficiency, mismanagement have been so generally believed to characterize the Democratic administration that the defeat of the party in November was a foregone conclusion. Add to this the imperialistic, self-sufficiency of President Wilson and you have an adequate explanation of the great political overturn.

The assumption that the Republican victory was an adverse pronouncement on the League of Nations is absolutely gratuitous. Indeed, the very opposite is true in so far as the voting of a multitude of educators and religious leaders is concerned. It became perfectly evident to those who heartily favored the United States lining up with other great nations of the earth in a solemn pact to prevent war that the Democratic administration would be impotent to effect such a covenant. It was in confident belief that the Republican administration would engage to work out the conditions whereby America might recover her place in moral leadership, that we voted for Harding and Coolidge. We were also mightily influenced by the fact that we knew that Governor Coolidge confidently believed in the imperative necessity of America's redeeming the unwritten pledge to our soldiers in the Great War, both dead and living, that we make an end of the arbitrament of the sword, and that there should be realized international relationships, such as a workable League of Nations alone could realize.

The vote of that great body of men who in religious conventions, Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, repeatedly declared for a League of Nations, went to Harding and Coolidge, while maintainnig as zealously as ever the importance of the United States occupying the "vacant chair in the Great Council."

The big Republican majority in Massachusetts was in no sense an endorsement of the utterances and attitude of the "anti-league" senators. It was the expression of devotion and confidence in our broad-visioned and high-minded Governor Coolidge, together with an expression of utter dissatisfaction with the present administration. Thousands, like myself, voted the Republican ticket, while vehemently opposed to that fatuous group of "Irreconcilables" who advocate for our Republic a narrow, self-centered policy, as far removed from true Americanism as darkness is removed from light.

Every humanitarian consideration demands that we play our part in world emancipation and regeneration. Self-respect and self-interest alike require that we shall take our place with the democracy builders and peace promoters throughout the world. It is proclaimed from political platforms amid noisy-handed and shallow-headed rapture, that "we owe the other nations of the world nothing." Could any utterance be more revealing as to the utter incapacity of those who speak thus, to think and to act on the higher moral levels of life? We owe a measureless debt to the hundreds of thousands of English, French and Belgian dead who kept back the hordes of war-intoxicated, demoniacal, brutal, world-wrecking Teutons, until we were able to assist in driving them back beyond the Rhine. We owe an incalculable debt to the British Navy for putting an impassable barrier between us and the ugly Pythons of the sea that would have destroyed our coast cities but for such protection.

But away beyond that is our moral obligation. What is America's wealth and power but a trust from God to be faithfully administered for the benefit of humanity by a people more favored of heaven than any other on the face of the earth. Of course, all this involves the safeguarding of our liberties and the true protection of our national interests. Neither the nationalist nor the internationalist is the true patriot, but he who advocates and upholds the best in both.

A supercilious independence can easily defeat its own interests, and it is by no means sure that we shall not greatly need the co-operation of other nations involved in the League. Self-satisfied isolation might easily bring about a combination against us that would be disastrous. Is it impossible that the envious eye of countless Asiatics might sometime be fixed upon our nation with the intent to appropriate to themselves all of its treasures? Should such a time come, to be in league with the best nations of the earth would be of unspeakable value.

Aside from these possibilities, could anything be more inexcusably insane than for the great nations of the world to proceed with the prodigal expenditure for the building of navies and armaments, breaking the backs of the toilers of the world with unnecessary taxation, and making economic progress difficult if not impossible? This cannot and will not be stopped without a definite Covenant Agreement to limit armaments and to provide an international force to police the world. Peace is impossible until the powers of the nations are pooled. It is perfectly safe to say that 80 per cent. of the voters of the United States want war forever ended and see in a League of Nations the sanest and wisest method whereby that end will be gained.

No more heartening word has been spoken since the election than that of our own Governor Coolidge, the Vice-President-elect. His pronouncement that the Republican majority was in no sense a voice against a Covenant with the nations of the world is true and heartily accepted by those best acquainted with the facts.

Nothing is inevitable that God condemns. He condemns the brutality and insanity of war. Nothing is impossible that God commends. He commends international peace. The most significant thing in both human and divine economy in all history has been the "Covenant" basis of human progress.

Boston, Mass.

Woman's Board of Interior

Ohio Branch Meets at Ashtabula

The forty-seventh annual meeting of the Ohio Branch of the W. B. M. I. and the thirty-eighth of the O. W. H. M. U. was held in Ashtabula Nov. 16-18. The meeting was placed a month later than usual to make it possible to receive reports from recent denominational meetings and to go forward promptly on plans formulated by the larger bodies. The latest word from the Congregational World Movement was received and the women voted to undertake to raise the increased apportionments so vitally needed to carry on their work. Ohio as a whole has accepted $275,000, about three times larger than any previous apportionment.

Tuesday evening a pageant, The Pilgrim Spirit, introduced the First Thanksgiving, Pilgrims in a New World and Pilgrims Across the Sea. Three new stars were added to Ohio's service flag for Miss Helen Crockett, Miss Elsa Rickman and Miss Jessie Martin, who have gone to the foreign field in 1920.

Reports from state workers showed progress all along the line. The treasurer for the W. B. M. I. announced the apportionment more than met and the thank-offerings again doubled after a 100 per cent. increase in thank-offerings the previous year. The Union was happy in the completion of two special funds—the Brown Memorial in honor of Mrs. George H. Brown, many years efficient state treasurer, and the Schauffler School Building Fund.

Eight foreign missionaries, past and present, were at the meeting. Strong messages were received from Miss Minnie B. Mills of Smyrna, Rev. W. L. Beard of Foo-Chow College and Miss Ella Hoxie, soon to return to India.

A group of "motion pictures" was given in vivid word pictures by pastors in Ohio frontier fields, Rev. H. A. N. Richards of Barberton and Rev. J. M. Brown of Fairport. Mrs. Caroline Richardson Smith told of experiences at Pleasant Hill, and Mrs. Hubbard and Mrs. L. L. Davis gave glimpses of conditions in Dakota in the early days and now. A loving tribute was paid to Miss Mary C. Collins, for thirty-five years Ohio's missionary to the Indians. Rev. J. H. Grant and Rev. F. G. Blanchard gave inspiring addresses.

Although the meeting was held in the northeast corner of the state the attendance was large, the program excellent, and the Ashtabula meeting will go down in history as one of the most successful Ohio women have held.

C. L. S.

Department of Religious Drama and Pageantry

Conducted by Mary Alice Emerson, Ph.D

TWO NEW SEASONAL DRAMAS

On Dec. 11 at the Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service in connection with the demonstrations of Christmas services for churches was given an abridged version of a pageant which combines the anniversary messages of Christmas and Forefathers' Day. The outline of the pageant, "Pilgrims of the Star," is as follows:

Tableau—"Longing for the Dawn." (Group of Prophets looking toward the East.)

Prologue—(Bethlehem) "The Message of the Star." (Visit of Magi and Shepherds.) Music, "The light of the world is Jesus."

Tableau—"The Star Shining Still." (Pilgrims in prayer just after landing on Plymouth Rock.) Music, "Faith of our Fathers."

Episode I—Africa Leaves the Jungle.

Episode II—China Awakes from Her Sleep.

Episode III—Armenia Escapes from Turkey.

Episode IV—Russia Regains Her Faith.

Episode V—The Red Man Smokes the Pipe of Peace.

Episode VI—America Accepts Her World Leadership.

Recessional—Angel of the Star, America, Church, Religious Education, Faith, Service, Love, Loyalty and the Other Nations. Hymn, "We're Pilgrims of the Fuller Day."

At the crisis of each episode a distant call is heard:

"Come, ye needy ones and lonely,
From far lands where'er ye are,
Come, the loving Jesus calls you,
Be ye Pilgrims of his Star."

When the workers have been persuaded to the right decision the Nation sings to the same tune "What a friend we have in Jesus."

"We will follow Jesus only
From far ——— where we are,
We will go where Jesus calls us,
Be the Pilgrims of his Star."

On Friday, Dec. 17, in the Brighton Congregational Church, Rev. Silas W. Anthony, pastor, was given most successfully the Pilgrim play of "The Coming of the Mayflower." This was prepared from a text by Miss Rosamond Kimball and published in the Youth's Companion of Oct. 14, 1920. The cast included the pastor, the organist, members of the standing committee and other prominent members of the church. This might well be given by schools or clubs, but had especial significance under the auspices of the church.

Briefly the outline is as follows:

Hymn by audience, "O God, beneath thy guiding hand."

Message of Spirit of the Past.

Message of Spirit of the Wilderness, introducing Liberty.

Episode I—The Landing of the Pilgrims.

Message of Spirit of the Past.

Episode II—The First Winter.

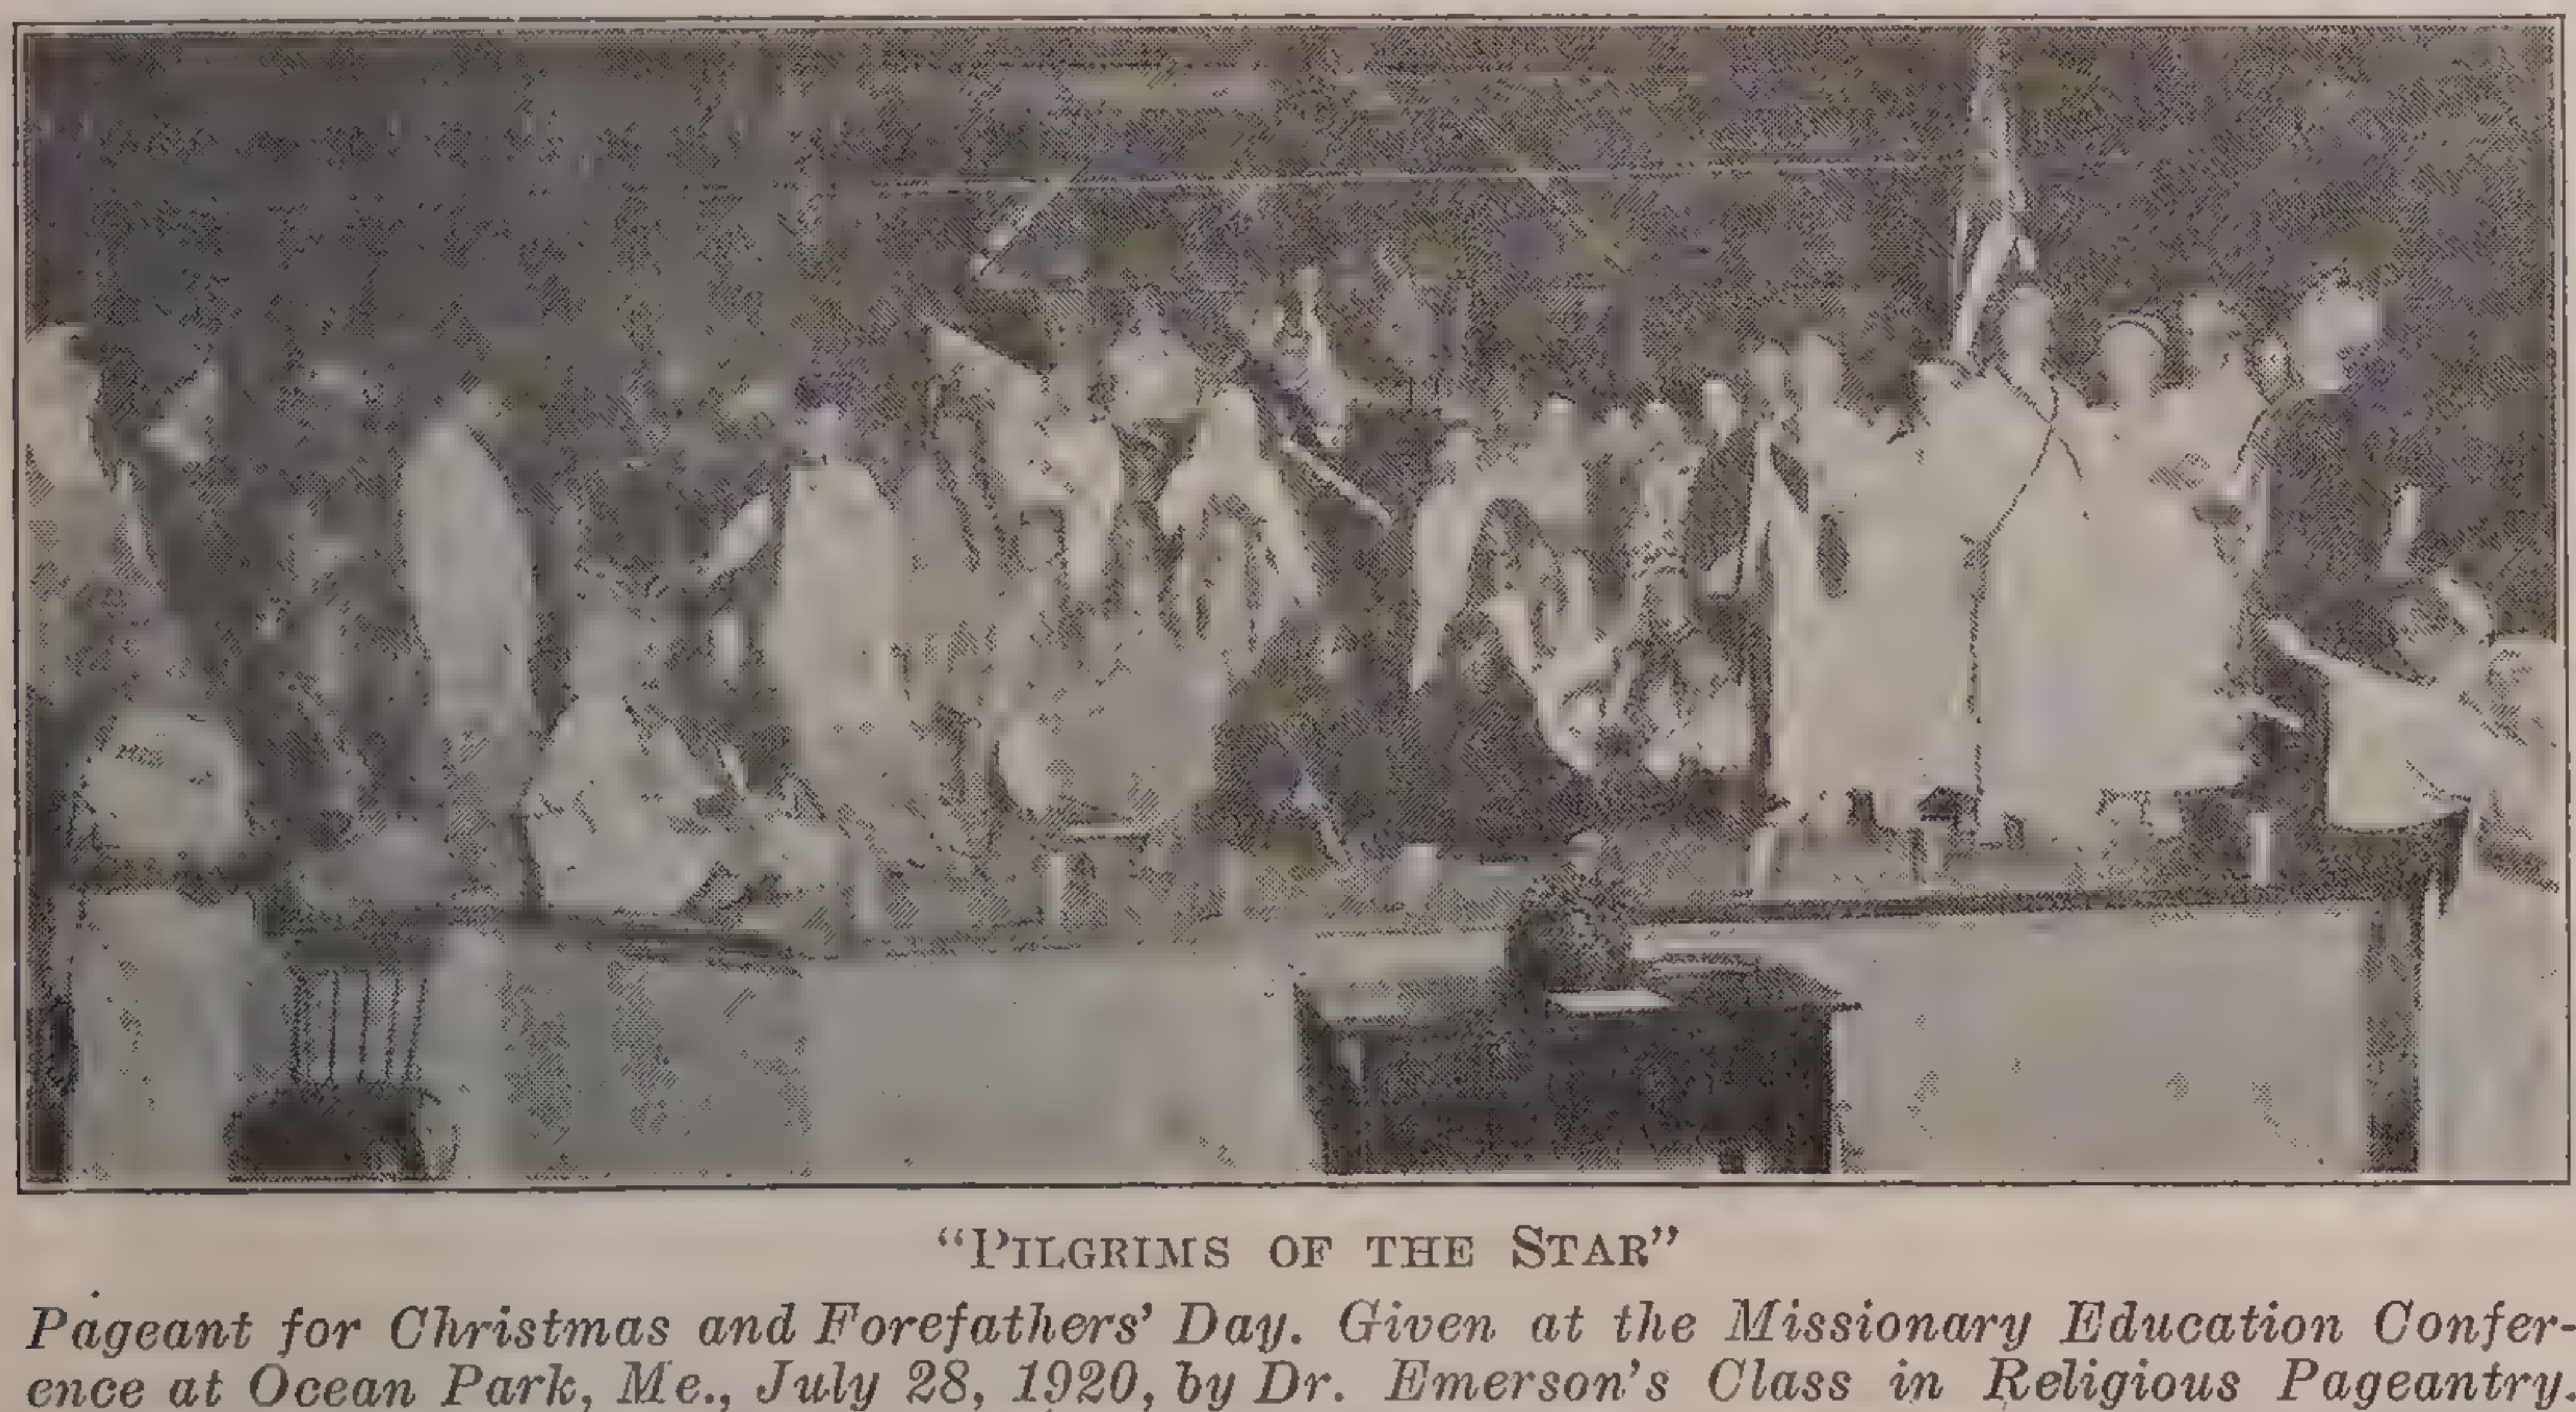
Episode III—The First International Treaty.

Episode IV—The First Thanksgiving. Guardian Spirit introduces America. Hymn by audience, "Mayflower Still Sailing On."

The Herring Memorial Fund

(Designed to be serviceable to Mrs. Hubert C. Herring while she lives. After her death the Trustees of the Annuity Fund, in perpetuation of Dr. Herring's devotion to his brethren of the ministry, distribute the income, as their judgment shall deem best, to ministers who, in order to secure the benefits of the Annuity Fund, need special assistance in meeting their requisite annual payments. In case any part of the income in any one year is not needed for such purpose it may be used to supplement the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund. The minimum hoped for is $20,000).

Harwood, A. P., Upland, Cal.
Leavitt, Frederick W., St. Louis, Mo.
Means, Miriam B., Dorchester, Mass.
MacKenzie, H. S., Spring Lake, Tex.
Seelye, L. Clark, Northampton, Mass.
Warren, Henry Kimball, Yankton, S. D.
Church, Central Congregational, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Edwards, Grace I., New Hartford, Ct.
Hay, R. R., Osborne, Kan.
Morse, I. H., San Francisco, Cal.
Pease, Mrs. L. H., New Britain, Ct.
Turner, D. C., New York City.
Wooden, G. A., Hill City, S. D.
Van Horn, F. J., Oakland, Cal.
Bollinger, E. S., Vancouver, Wash.
Evans, Mr. and Mrs. E. A., New York City.
Fox, Alice M., Arlington, Mass.
Fox, Edith M., Arlington, Mass.
Gould, George L., Malden, Mass.
Sanford, C. E., New Haven, Ct.
Church, The Shrewsbury Congregational, Mass.
Thayer, Charles S. Hartford, Ct.
Wells, Herbert J., Kingston, R. I.
Chamberlain, Frederic W., Chicago, Ill.
Chase, Helen E., Waterbury, Ct.
Dawes, Elizabeth B., Petersham, Mass.
Falconer, R. C., Nutley, N. J.
Henderson, Thomas, Oberlin, O.
Jeffrey, Celia C., Columbus, O.
Perkins, Mabel H., Hartford, Ct.
Beard, William S., Flushing, N. Y.
Calkins, Raymond, Cambridge, Mass.
Deerberger, P. W., Chelsea, Mich.
Dudley, Guilford, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
Mead, Giles W., Glen Ridge, N. J.
Vial, Mrs. George M., La Grange, Ill.
Hathaway, Martha N., Long Beach, Cal.



"PILGRIMS OF THE STAR"

Pageant for Christmas and Forefathers' Day. Given at the Missionary Education Conference at Ocean Park, Me., July 28, 1920, by Dr. Emerson's Class in Religious Pageantry. In the center are Rev. Asa M. Parker of Bridgewater, Mass., who represented Brotherhood, and Rev. J. Stanley Durkee of Howard University, who represented Interchurch.

Favorite Poems

From one of our California readers, Mrs. C. C. Winn of Novato, comes the following "favorite poem," which the sender hopes "may give as much comfort and courage to some other hearts as it has given to mine."

New Every Morning

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new,
You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you;
A hope for me, and a hope for you.

All the past things are past and over,
The tasks are done and the tears are shed.
Yesterday's errors, let yesterday cover.
Yesterday's wounds, which smarted and bled
Are healed—with the healing which night has shed.

Yesterday, now, is a part of forever;
Bound up in a sheaf, which God holds tight.
With glad days, and sad days, and bad days which never Shall visit us more, with their bloom and their blight—
Their fullness of sunshine or sorrowful night.

Let them go, since we cannot relive them,
Cannot undo and cannot atone;
God in his mercy receive and forgive them;
Only the new days are our own,
Today is ours, and today alone.

Here are the skies all burnished brightly
Here is the spent earth all reborn,
Here are the tired limbs springing lightly
To face the sun and to share with the morn
In the chrism of dew and the cool of dawn.

Every day is a fresh beginning;
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain;
And spite of old sorrow, and older sinning,
And puzzles forecasted, and possible pain,
Take heart with the day and begin again.

—SUSAN COOLIDGE, in the Christian Union.

IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL

DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS

The Child and the Kingdom

International Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 2.—Matt. 18:1-14.

Study this lesson with the sharp contrast in mind between the foolish ambitions of the disciples and the quick response of the child when Jesus called him. This is the point of the whole lesson. They were indulging in a silly squabble as to who was to be the greatest in the Kingdom, which they were quite sure would soon be established. Jesus used an incident to set forth a truth, as he often did. He called a little child to come to his side. Without a moment's hesitation, never asking what he would get out of it, never debating or doubting, the child did what Jesus asked. There! said the Master; that is what it means to enter the Kingdom. Do like that; stop discussing who is to hold the offices and enjoy the privileges. Let us now analyze the incident.

1. Conversion. This is the long word for the simple one, turn. Entering the Kingdom of Heaven means changing the direction of one's life. It means acting from a new set of motives. It means "right about face," if our purposes have been self-centered and grasping, as those of the disciples surely were. The Kingdom of God is a different arrangement of life from the one in which we live when we put ourselves and our privileges first.

2. Obedience. The child trusted Jesus and obeyed him without a moment's delay. A similar decision is involved when we enter the Kingdom. We must yield our wills to its laws. We must subject our actions to its great imperatives. Men do not like to submit; but they must. There is no other way. Obedience to the law of love is not bondage. It is the pathway into the highest freedom and joy.

3. Humility. Perhaps it should have been considered before obedience, which is its finest product. But also true humility is the finished result of obedience. The two go hand in hand. Each strengthens and confirms the other. The entrance to all the high privileges of the Kingdom is through the lowly door of humility.

4. Service. This great principle of the Kingdom is treated in vs. 5-14. The details are interesting and worth careful study.

a. Serving Christ in Others. We may not be able quickly and wholly to explain what Jesus meant by asserting that those who serve others in the name of Christ serve him; but the general content of the statement is clear. "One such little child" and "one of these little ones" refer to members of the Kingdom of God who have entered it in a childlike spirit. Jesus is not speaking in vs. 5, 6 of the child who was at his side, but, rather, concerning the children of the Kingdom of Heaven. They and he were so closely identified that service to men was service to Christ when it was performed in the Master's name. What worth and dignity are imparted to all our human relations in this statement!

b. The Instrument of Service, a Blameless Life. Jesus now brought out the principle, so timely and important, that the only way in which service can be rendered in the Kingdom with supreme effectiveness, is by means of a complete life. Therefore whatever causes any one to "stumble," that is, impairs their own highest life, must be put away from us, in order that we may render the highest service to our generation. It is a searching condition. It calls for an inventory of all our powers. Is there a fault in our personal character or a weakness in our conception of life which makes our influence over others injurious? If there is, it simply must be remedied. We cannot take our full part in the Kingdom of God with an incomplete or crippled life.

c. The Value of the Individual. There is an obscure verse in the closing part of the text. Just what Jesus meant by the angels beholding the face of the Father is difficult to explain to our modern mind. It must have expressed an intelligible and timely thought to those who heard Jesus speak. The main point, however, is perfectly clear. The warrant for all zealous service in the Kingdom of Heaven is the priceless worth of the individual soul. The shepherd goes into the wildest gorges of the mountains to seek his lost sheep. So God does not mean that any soul should perish. What is the practical result of this principle in reference to: the safeguarding of public health; the labor of women and children; the crushing out of vice; war?

Ozora S Davis

Chicago Theological Seminary.

The Study of the Bible

XII. The Bible a Living Book

The view of the Bible suggested in these articles may help us to find its real message. When the lower may be judged and interpreted in the light of the higher, the Bible becomes the supreme book for the redemption and religious education of the race. It has a surpassing variety and wealth of material. There is history, legend, law, folklore, drama, tragedy, poetry, philosophy, proverb, sermon, epistle, parable, and historical romance.

Instead of systematically discussing human nature and needs, the Bible plunges us into the sea of human experience. It is a book of life, where every human experience is portrayed, every type of humanity moves across the stage. By finding the historical, social and religious situation out of which our Bible grew and then using our imaginations to reclothe the whole with flesh and blood, it becomes a book of action throbbing with human and divine life.

A paraphrase of two pages from John Watson's book, "God's Message to the Human Soul," will help to bring this out. "The reader is plunged into an ocean of human details": the love affairs of man and maid; quarrels and reconcilations between brothers; bargains in business; feuds between rival tribes, with raids and captures; the choice of kings and their anointing; the evil doing of kings and their assassination; the orations of statesmen as they warn and comfort their nation; the adroit arrangements of ecclesiastics; the collision of parties in the Christian Church; radiant records of chivalrous deeds; the black story of acts of treachery; the romance of unselfish friendship and the blind enmity of religious bigotry; the career of the successful man and the unmerited suffering of the martyr; the devotion of mother to child, and the jealousy of women fighting for the same man's love; the idyll of childhood, the strength of young manhood, the mellow wisdom of old age; nomads of the desert, dwellers in the city; prophets and sages, ploughmen and vinedressers, soldiers and traders, rich men and beggars, holy matrons and women who are sinners; patriarchs with huge herds and apostles empty-handed, priests offering sacrifice and publicans collecting their gains—all these, and manifold more, appear in unarranged and natural procession. How artless and yet how fascinating! The whole comedy and tragedy of life are here; it is a more glorious Homer, and a more enticing Scott; it is a larger and more vivid Shakespeare.

But is this just an unarranged mass of material without a unifying thread? Not at all. There is reason for this entirely and unreservedly human portrayal. The story of the patriarchs is not recorded because they were successful stock farmers, but because they were pioneers in the quest of the soul for God. Joseph's victory over temptation and his attainment of splendid character, rather than his success, immortalize him. Moses' career was a romance, but his sterling points are his choice of the unseen above the seen and his identification of himself with the suffering people of God.

The prophets were statesmen and forceful writers, but spiritual vision and fellowship with the eternal give them their permanent worth. The psalmists were poets of high rank, but they seized the heart of humanity because they sang the epic of the soul. "As you travel down Old Testament history you may find yourself in strange by-ways, but sooner or later you are brought face to face with God. Righteousness is what the writers demand and God is the one person they ever seek. There is upward progress; from the valley the path climbs the hillside until it reaches the finer air of the gospel uplands. The details of the book are only the body; the living soul of the book is religion, the fellowship of man with God." "One purpose governs and illuminates, invigorates and glorifies the Bible, and that purpose is spiritual. It is the supreme book of religion."

Would that we knew how to use and teach this Book! It is in the interest of larger, more intelligent use that these articles are written. A finer collection of pedagogical material for teaching religion and morals cannot be found. Here we see action, good and bad, bringing forth its logical results. There is some chaff, but there is far more wheat, and the wheat may become for us and for our children the very bread of life.

F. M. SHELDON.

THE HOUR OF PRAYER

Calling to Remembrance: An Hour of Praise

Comment on the Midweek Prayer Meeting Topic for Dec. 26–Jan. 1 1921

BY ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN

Scripture Passage. Ps. 103.

The Mercies of the Ended Year. There was a woman who persisted in wearing a garment wrong side out! There are Christians who cannot review their experiences with God in a time just past without showing a pattern of grumbling and complaining. The thought of what God has given is hidden behind an aching opinion of what they think God has denied. The thing to insist on in this hour of praise is that thanksgiving should have the right of way. It might be a good plan to stir up the minds of the brethren by a special invitation and a request for some one ground of personal thanksgiving. It will be well for us all to seek praise first and let the disappointments wait their turn for expression.

The Light of Experience. We make our own lamps as we go along through life, though the sacred fire that lights them is of God. A Christian should be able to recount experiences parallel to those of the old Hebrew singer: "Bless the Lord, O my soul—who forgiveth all thine iniquities—who redeemeth thy life from destruction, who satisfieth thy mouth with good things." Perhaps the trouble is that we take most of what we call our ordinary blessings for granted and complain that God has not given us the unusual and exceptional gifts about which we dream. So a child might say, "My father is obliged to provide bread and butter and a place to sleep and a roof, and to send me to school, but he is a poor and worthless father because he has not given me an unlimited credit at the movie show and the candy booth nor a pony or a motor car."

The Guiding Hand of God. I suppose a good many of us are so anchored here with the anchor of circumstance that we find it hard to give thanks that we are going on. We might add, then, the real thought that makes change and journeying and the flying years all joyful, the thought that we are going on with God. If we are journeying through strange countries, at least we are personally conducted and are safe. It is a wonderful thing in our experience to feel grateful every day for the loving care of God. It takes the fear out of both life and death. For it speaks to us in the words of the Good Shepherd: "Fear not, little flock, for it is our Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom."

The Open Door of Opportunity. While we remember the blessings of the ended year we must not forget the opportunity which the new days offer. Thanksgiving ought to be an incentive to activity. It should lift us over the threshold of our listlessness and laziness and set our feet in the way of living so that our whole lives shall be alight with joy and gratitude. "Ye are the light of the world." Is there nothing in that for which we should give thanks?

Closet and Altar

THE COMING OF THE CHILD

His name shall be called Emmanuel, which, being interpreted is, God with us.—Matt. 1:23.

This is, indeed, the true Advent; the realization of the Incarnate One in the soul.—W. L. Watkinson.

In Christ God gives us himself. Perfect love can never stop short of that. It must give and give until the giver has exhausted his treasure, and finally gives Himself. And what shall we give back? One thing only we have to offer—one thing only he will accept. It is the best that is in us—good will.—William Henry O'Connell.

Enough of dreams! No longer mock
  The burdened hearts of men!
Not on the cloud, but on the rock,
  Build thou thy faith again.
Oh, range no more the realms of air,
  Stoop to the glen-bound streams.
Thy hope was all too like despair:
  Enough, enough of dreams.

An earth-born creed? We may not praise
  The Eternal's lowly house:
Yet through the rude beams may we gaze,
  And the interwoven boughs,
If on the little Child thou shine,
  Whom, though we dream no more,
Here, in the heart's hushed Palestine,
  The magi still adore.

A lowly creed, a wayside inn
  For wayfarers! Oh, come,
Now that the long dark hours begin,
  Lead thou the nations home!
Shine on the little roof, fair star,
  The thatch in silver steep,
That kings may come to it from afar,
  And the shepherds from their sheep.

—Alfred Noyes.

We cannot rise to it; but we have the capacity for the revelation; Christ can so inpour himself to our being, can so quicken our diviner selves into life, that it may truly be said the miraculous birth of Bethlehem takes place anew in every soul that welcomes the holy advent.—R. J. Campbell.

Blessed Lord, who having all things to bestow didst choose the best for man, we thank thee for the joy of Christ's appearing, for the advent of peace, the blessing of good will. We come rejoicing with a child's serenity of trust in thy beloved Son, whom thou hast not refused for our redemption. Let us have sweet thoughts this Christmas Day of the humility which stooped to want and despised not the manger. Let all childlike hearts be glad together in the remembrance of their Lord who was a child. May the joy of giving and receiving which we have made the sign of thy great gift be perfect in our hearts; and where we cannot give or help remember thou to bless. Give us the peace of which thine angels sang. Hasten the glory of thy Kingdom and let our love of thee bring forth good fruit in every heart. In the name of him who came to Bethlehem and died on Calvary and ever lives to be our Saviour and our hope. Amen.

—Isaac Ogden Rankin.

The Kingdom in Human Hearts

Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic for Jan. 2–8

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: Thy Kingdom Come. 1. In my heart. Matt. 6:7-15. (Consecration Meeting.)

Light from the Bible Passage

The whole "talk on the hill" is centered on the thought of the Kingdom. It starts out with a characterization of the subjects of the Kingdom (5:1-16). It touches on the laws of the Kingdom (vs. 17-48) not in a complete way, of course. Then certain economic phases are mentioned (6:1-14). Following that are given some suggestions for the deeper religious life of the "citizen." Prayer, for instance, must not be ostentatious, but humble and with a sense of talking with the Father and not talking before others. Empty formulas and phrases mean nothing. We do not pray so much to tell God certain things (v. 8) as to get in touch with him. The heart of the model prayer Jesus gave us seems to be in the phrase: "Thy Kingdom come." If our hearts are in the prayer, our whole activity will be to help to bring its askings to pass within our hearts.

Leads for the Leader

For the next six months our consecration meetings will have the phrase, "Thy Kingdom Come" as their central thought. This is a fine plan and the forcibleness with which leaders present it will condition the intensity of our feelings of loyalty to the King and his Kingdom. Various outreachings of the subject are to be: Thy Kingdom Come—In my Heart; in my Home; in my Church; in my Community; in my Country; in the World.

How much does the coming of the Kingdom depend upon our prayers? Does the daily repetition of the phrase, "Thy Kingdom come," deepen our longing to have it take a greater hold on our thought?

How does the yearning for the Kingdom in our own lives keep us from being self-centered and self-satisfied? How greatly is this desirable?

Can you have a Kingdom without a King? Must we not give greater thought to him, if we are to catch the kingdom-thought?

Thoughts for Members

The Kingdom of the Lord—
  It cometh not with show;
Nor throne, nor crown, nor sword,
  Proclaim its might below:
Though dimly scanned through mists of sin,
The Lord's true Kingdom is within.

—W. W. How.

Where in life's common ways
  With cheerful feet we go,
When in his steps we tread
  Who trod the way of woe,
Where he is in the heart,
City of God, thou art.

—F. T. Palgrave.

A Moment of Prayer

O God, who art the King of all the earth and who willeth to have all its people thy subjects, show us, O Father, the beauty of that Kingdom and its worth when we and all thy children shall own its sway and serve its weal. Amen.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Spoon River Again

Domesday Book, by Edgar Lee Masters (Macmillan). "Poet fiction" is the publisher's name for this study of a group of people in the region where the Spoon River flows. It centers about the suicide of a woman and brings out her history, told, each according to his acquaintance with her character and affairs by the witnesses at the coroner's inquest. The story overlaps the war and tells of the woman's activities in France and her relations with soldiers and others in that work. The technique of the poem is that short-lined blank verse which Mr. Masters has made familiar to us in "The Spoon River Anthology," which is used without variation through the 396 pages of the poem. Such a novel in verse suggests comparison with the Brownings, with "The Ring and the Book" more especially in method than with "Aurora Leigh." But the differences are more striking than the resemblances. Browning took the mystery of his plot from old and obscure romantic days of Italy. Mrs. Browning came nearer to Masters in choosing the history of a woman of her own day. What romance there is in Domesday Book is entirely the innate mystery of human nature in its varying aspects, the romance of a fully seen and pictured reality of human nature. For Masters believes that his own neighbors are the proper subject of poetic sight and diction. These neighbors, family friends and foes and lovers of Elenor Murrey are as much the kind of everyday people of the Middle West as Chaucer's Pilgrims were the people Chaucer met on London streets or on the country roads of England. And there is every reason to approve the poetic theory, not as the only one for the poetic art but as sound and true for a department of it. The one question is whether the artist has the insight into human nature and is complete master of his tools of expression. About this in the case of Mr. Master's poem there may be wide differences of opinion. But his qualities of sincerity, directness, insight and a sense of form which too often, however, fails to be a sense of charm or music, make this ambitious psychological and sociological study notable.

Recent Fiction

The Noon Mark, by Mary S. Watts (Macmillan). A delightful story of the plain people, rich and poor, boys and girls who grow up together and fall in love and out again, who presently take their place among the workers and experience the comedies and tragedies of real life. The plot is slight, but the interest is maintained from beginning to the end. Somewhere near the middle of the story America enters the war and its varied results are indicated—but it is not a war story. It is in the main, perhaps, a study in democracy, in contrasted ambitions and standards and habits and careers. And it seems quite real, as if the author was describing what she had observed in the development of a group of people whom she has known.

Mehitable, by Katharine Adams (Macmillan). Cooped up in a small Vermont town, the dreamy, imaginative girl with the quaint name longs for adventure. When she is sixteen there comes a chance to attend a boarding school in Paris. She enjoys everything ardently, not least the memories of her home town. Her adventures sound most interesting in the telling and the end in 1914 seems to indicate further news from this vivid young heroine.

The Sleuth of St. James Square, by Melville Davison Post (Appleton). Sixteen mystery stories of marked distinction, with a method unlike the general run of such stories. The scenes are laid in many lands and English, American and Oriental play varied parts, though the central figure is generally Sir Henry Marquis of Scotland Yard. In two or three of the tales the skill of women as detective agents is the theme. Sometimes the whole mystery is unrevealed till the closing sentence of the tale turns on the light.

Macmillan From The Noon Mark

Resurrection Rock, by Edwin Balmer (Little, Brown). The simple and effective formula that "dead men tell no tales" no longer holds true! At least that is the case in this story. Witnesses cannot be disposed of by drowning or shooting them. The new spiritism opens up a new possibility for the story writer. This is one of the advance guard of a fresh field of fiction. The man whose birth is shrouded with mystery gains information through friendly spirits, and the villain of the story—but the reader will wish to discover this for himself. It is an exceptional tale.

The Beauty and the Bolshevist, by Alice Duer Miller (Harper). If you are "a tired business man" and wish for a first-class short story, read this. It is full of fun and withal of wisdom, and deals with the present-day clash between radicals and conservatives, neither ones understanding the others very well. It is also a good love story with a delightful heroine.

Puritan and Pagan, by Elizabeth Corbett (Holt). 'Twixt Puritan and Pagan, impersonated respectively by Nancy and Mary, Roger Green's love affairs gathered a somewhat stormy aspect. The last sentence of the book calls attention to his hair "which was beginning to be sprinkled with gray." One does not wonder at it. Everything is quite in accordance with the layman's ideas of life in the artist colony of Greenwich Village.

A Library for Youth

Under the general title "The King's Treasuries of Literature," E. P. Dutton & Co. are publishing a series of classics for children and youth, similar to the famous Everyman's Library, though smaller in page. Twenty-two volumes have been issued. Two of these are poetry, The Lay of the Last Minstrel, and Modern Poetry, an admirable collection. Seven volumes are devoted to fairy tales and legends, Hawthorne's Wonder Book, Andersen's Fairy Tales, Adventures of Odysseus, The Heroes, by Charles Kingsley, Evergreen Stories, Child's Book of Saints and Bee, by Anatole France. Three are fiction, A Tale of Two Cities, Black Beauty and Tales from Tolstoi. Four are essays, De Coverley Papers, Macaulay's Essay on Clive, Alpha of the Plough, and The Lore of the Wanderer. Four deal with drama, Lamb and Shakespeare, Richard the Second, A Shakespeare Progress, Form-Room Plays. And one, Faraday's History of a Candle, is an introduction to Chemistry. These are attractive little volumes, many of them will be read by adults as eagerly as by the younger folk. It is an admirable undertaking. Children provided with such works as these will soon cultivate a taste for the best in literature which will stay with them through life. It will be a pleasure to call attention to this series as further issues appear.

Books Received

The following important books recently received will be reviewed later:

Social Scandinavia in the Viking Age, by Mary W. Williams (Macmillan).

The Outline of History, by H. G. Wells (Macmillan).

New England in France, by E. G. Taylor (Houghton Mifflin).

Last Days of the Romanovs, by George G. Telberg and Robert Wilton (Doran).

Venizelos, by Herbert Adams Gibbons (Houghton Mifflin).

Steeplejack, by James Gibbons Huneker (Scribners).

The Hyphen, 2 vols., by Lida C. Schem (Dutton).

The Influence of Puritanism, by J. S. Flynn (Dutton).

George Tyrrell's Letters (Dutton).

My Three Years in America, by Count Bernstoff (Scribners).

The Book of Job, by Morris Jastrow, Jr. (Lippincott).

The International Critical Commentary: The Revelation of St. John, 2 vols., by R. H. Charles. The Epistles to the Galatians, by Ernest DeWitt Burton (Scribners).

The Religious Consciousness, by James B. Pratt (Macmillan).

The Beginnings of Christianity, Part I. The Acts of the Apostles, Vol. 1., by Foakes Jackson and Kirsopp Lake (Macmillan).

The Power of Prayer (Macmillan).

The Philosophy of Faith and the Fourth Gospel, by Canon Scott-Holland (Dutton).

Ambassadors of God, by S. Parkes Cadman (Macmillan).

The Heroes of Early Israel, by Irving F. Wood (Macmillan).

East and West, by Prof. E. C. Moore (Scribners).

CONTRIBUTIONS

... TO ...

Congregational Benevolences

THROUGH THE EMERGENCY FUND

CHURCH TREASURERS! PLEASE TAKE NOTICE!

THE BOOKS OF THE CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT will be kept open until January 10th for the crediting of remittances on account of the denominational benevolences through the Emergency Fund.

CHURCHES WILL BE CREDITED IN THE YEAR BOOK to be issued soon after January 1st with any amounts received up to and including the date named.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETIES AND EVERY CAUSE AIDED BY THE FUNDS OF THE CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT ARE IN GREAT NEED OF MONEY TO MEET THEIR NECESSARY EXPENSES

EVERY DOLLAR RECEIVED will be distributed to the Missionary Societies and participating organizations according to the percentages agreed upon and previously announced.

WILL PASTORS and other officers of churches PLEASE REMIND THEIR BENEVOLENCE TREASURERS of the facts as stated above and urge them to SEND ALL MONEY COLLECTED FOR THE EMERGENCY FUND either to State Conference headquarters or to the

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Charley Willy Helps Santa Claus

By Gene Burns

It was Christmas morning at Charley Willy's home. He and his brothers had emptied their stockings, eaten all they could comfortably hold of candy, nuts and fruit. Running to the Christmas tree, they peeked at the mysterious packages secured to the branches.

When their father awoke, permission was given to open the bundles on the tree. There was a scramble, followed by the rustling of paper, and then shouts of joy.

"Hurrah!" cried Fred, aged twelve, as he held aloft a shining Boy Scouts' hatchet. "I'll make use of this, all right!"

"Hurrah!" cried Bennie, two years younger, as he displayed a glistening pocket-knife on the end of a silvered chain.

And, "Hurrah!" chimed in Charley Willy, as he held up for examination two brightly painted picture books.

Their father came in then, and was happy to behold the beaming faces of the boys. They crowded around him, boasted of the merits of their particular gift. Charley Willy listened to his brothers explaining what they could do with hatchet or knife to help about the farm, but said nothing.

"Well, boys," said the father, when the boys had finished of their boastings, "we'll see at the end of the day whose gift has been the greatest help. I shall give a silver dollar to the one that does the most good with his present."

A shout of still greater joy rose from the older boys' lips, they dashed out of the house to search about the farmyard for a task requiring knife or hatchet for its execution. But the father's words only tended to cause Charley Willy's spirits to lower still more. The flaring pictures before him seemed to cry out and mock him. He had asked for picture-books, gotten them; but of what use were they other than to afford pleasure for himself only?

Charley Willy was not a selfish boy. The thought that the books were of no value but to himself took away his happiness. He brushed aside the tears that gathered in his eyes, pulled on his hat, coat and mittens, left the farmhouse.

Thinking to himself, the small boy trudged down the road. He had no object in view except to hide himself until he could calm his emotions. He stopped in front of the farmhouse of Jean Blanchard, watched the good-natured Frenchman splitting logs into stove lengths. The lad walked slowly into the yard, fascinated by the crashing of the axe on the wood and the flying of chips.

"Merry Christmas!" he called to the chopper, and smiled, forgetful of his troubles.

The Frenchman glanced up, nodded recognition to the boy before him.

"Yep, it's Christmas," he admitted, "but dunno's it's a very 'merry' one."

"Why," Charley Willy cried in surprise, "didn't Santa Claus come to your house last night?"

The man shook his head.

"Mrs. Blanchard and little Peter and Nell are sick in bed; today the youngsters sat up for the first time in a week. I clean forgot it was Christmas, an' they never said a word."

Charley Willy's eyes opened wide. No Santa Claus! No Christmas! No presents! His heart went out to the little sick children, the tears started again from his eyes. He turned from the chopper, stumbled homeward.

When he reached the barnyard, heard the yelling and shouting of his brothers, the hack of a hatchet, his own troubles of the morning came back with a rush. He stopped short, gazed blankly ahead of him, a new thought in his mind. For a few moments, the emotions of evil and good struggled in the lines of his face, he remained motionless. Then the light of goodly triumph suffused his tearful countenance, he dashed into the house. A few minutes later he burst from the doorway, a parcel under his arm, and raced down the roadway. He was soon a speck in the distance.

After supper that evening, the Charley Willy family gathered in the front room of the farmhouse. The two older boys whispered and chuckled among themselves in the enjoyment of a secret. Charley Willy sat upon a low stool near the fireplace, his father beside him.

"Well, boys," began the father, after he had squirmed his feet into the slippers Charley Willy held for him, "who gets the silver dollar? Who has put his present to the most use?" He looked at his oldest son. "Show what you have done, Fred."

The lad spoken to dived out of the room, to return a moment later with a huge basket.

"Firewood!" he cried boastfully, as he set the receptacle on the floor. "By the help of my trusty axe!" He waved the gleaming hatchet above his head majestically while he spoke these words.

His father smiled.

"Now Bennie!" he said, nodding to the next younger of the boys, "What have you accomplished with your knife?"

From a large card-board box, Bennie proudly displayed a number of articles carved from wood: a small bread-board, a crumber and tray, a match-box, and a little bank. He held each piece singly in his hand; explained the uses of all. Triumph gleamed in his eyes.

"Well done," his father praised. Then placing his hand upon Charley Willy's curly head, he said: "Now, what did sonny do with his gift?"

There was no cry of exultation this time. The little lad at his father's feet sat very still, gazing soberly, rather sadly, into the blazing fireplace. His parent looked down at the boy, jostled his frowsy head. He was about to urge the lad to speak when his mind recalled the nature of Charley Willy's Christmas present. He started to change the trend of the matter when the small boy spoke.

"I gave my things away—" Charley Willy began, then choked. "And I ain't sorry, either," he added, as the tears coursed down his cheeks.

"Eh? What's that?" his father spoke up eagerly. He had caught the meaning of the lad's words. Reaching down, he lifted the small boy to his knees, coaxed the story from him.

A hush settled over the room as Charley Willy stammered out how he had made a Christmas-less home happy with his two bright picture-books, and two stockings of candies.

That night, a small lad of a certain farmhouse dropped into slumberland with something clutched tightly in his little fingers. Who do you suppose he was? And what was that something he clutched in his hand?

The Comrades' Corner

Dear Comrades:

I have quite an accumulation of odd names and will give a few now.

Comrade Eleanor Knight of Newburyport thinks some fine names have been given but wishes to add these: "B. Little and B. I. Smart." (This latter sounds very ungrammatical, doesn't it?) Alvan B. Le Porte, Mountain View, N. J., says: "There is a girl at school named Mary Christmas. (Sure it isn't "Merry"? —Mr. A.) And another, Dorothy Mitton, also Elmer Boob (pretty tough!).

Prescott Dennett of Bangor, Me., sends a newspaper clipping from a paper published in his city which states that "Mr. Fish is auditor of the East Coast Fisheries Co." (That is what I call "fitness to purpose."—Mr. A.)

Mrs. Luella C. Perry of Boston has been particularly interested in the letters containing queer names and wishes to say: "We have North, South, East and West—a whole family of Footes that we might naturally think would be Feet—a family of Bones who have Leggs for cousins, a Ham and a Hammer. No Hand but several who are Handy, a Star, a Starbird and a Starbuck. We have some metals: Silver, Golden, Brassey (that's almost golf.—Mr. A.) and Steele. A few Woods, such as Appel, Apple, Appleyard, Birch, Oakes, Achorn and Pine; both Tarr and a Feather. Some drinks: Water, Beer and Coffey. Lambs, Foxes and Bullocks. And some Jolly girls."

Now for a list of those who have sent in contributions to our Lunch Fund: Ovil I. Brown, "Young Cornerers and Old Comrades," Mrs. M. P. Farrington, Frances Louise Peck, G. S. and M. A. Aldrich, Mrs. C. A. Skinner, Marjorie W. Brown, Miss Maria A. Barlow, Anon ("from one who has enjoyed The Congregationalist over fifty years"), Mrs. Charles H. White, Miss Charlotte E. Alden, Everard Webster, Edicott, Muriel and Horace Hanson, Eleanor Knight, Prescott Dennett, Miss Jessie Barlow, Mrs. Helen G. Rice, Miss "Do-not-quote-my-name." Mrs. M. W. Mather and Paul and Richard, Mrs. Carmeline Ledoux.

I will close with a letter which pleases me, and at the same time perplexes me.

"Dear Mr. Alden:

We want to tell you how much we enjoy your talks to the Comrades. We are very glad that you started the 'hot lunch' fund and are enclosing a 'small contribution.'"

Now listen to this part of the letter: "Our church is considered the most beautiful for situation of any in New England. Can you guess in what town we live?"

They did not sign any name, give any address, and the letter was post-marked at Boston. Could anything be more blind? Now how am I going to be able to tell where that church is? I see no other way than to put it up to the editors of The Congregationalist. Perhaps they will not dare say. It might get them into trouble. If any of you feel sure you know, let me know.

Comradely yours,

Mr Alden

The New Year Opens a New Era for the Ministry

The Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers

endowed by

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund

Will make provision for an Old Age Annuity for the Minister.

Provided that:

1. Subscriptions to the Pilgrim Memorial Fund are paid promptly;
2. The minister becomes a member of the Annuity Fund
3. And each year pays the requisite annual dues
4. With the co-operation of the church he serves.

The Part of the Churches

The National Council, October, 1917, looking forward to January 1, 1921, when the Expanded Plan goes into effect, recommended that the minister's annual dues in the Annuity Fund should be divided between the minister and the church he serves; and that churches be urged to regard this as one of the regular items of their budgets.

This is not an item for the benevolent offerings. It is as much a matter of business as the pastor's salary. Trustees, or any other responsible officers, are requested to see that it is put in the budget. Several churches have already taken the following action:

VOTED—"To assume as part of the regular annual budget and to instruct the Treasurer to pay annually one-half of the dues on the Pastor's membership in the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers, this action to apply to any Pastor regularly settled over this parish."

How much does this involve for the Church?

The Original Plan, which offers the greater advantage, in most cases, for men over fifty years of age, is based upon dues rated according to the age of the member on his entrance to the Fund, and which, for men over fifty years of age, range from $71.77 upwards for annuities at sixty-five years of age, and less if the annuity goes into effect at sixty-eight, or seventy years of age. Nine hundred ministers are already members under the Original Plan and have paid nearly $300,000 in annual dues. For many the payment has been a severe ordeal. The Church is asked to share the burden.

The Expanded Plan will be found ordinarily to offer the greater advantage to men under fifty years of age. Annual dues are an amount equivalent to 6% of the total salary, cash and parsonage, the rental value of the parsonage being taken as uniformly equivalent to an addition of 15% of the cash salary. The first year the entire dues are paid by the minister and the church he serves. After the first year the minister receives a credit of his share in the distributable income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and the minister and the church share equally in the remainder.

Examples of payments after the first year:

Cash Salary	Parsonage	Total Salary	Annual Dues	Pilgrim Fund (approximate)	Payment by minister	Payment by Church
$1,000	$150	$1,150	$ 69.00	$50	$ 9.50	$ 9.50
1,500	225	1,725	103.50	50	26.75	26.75
2,000	300	2,300	138.00	50	44.00	44.00
3,000	450	3,450	207.00	50	78.50	78.50

If these payments begin when the minister is thirty years of age and continue until he is sixty-five, they will provide an annuity of approximately one-half the average salary which the minister has received for the period. A proportionate annuity will be available for any one whose payments cover a shorter period.

EVENTUALLY

Every self-respecting church will surely do its share in providing for the old age of its pastor through the Annuity Fund.

WHY NOT NOW?

Further information for Trustees, or other church officers and application blanks for membership under either plan may be obtained by addressing

CHARLES S. MILLS, D. D., General Secretary
The Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers
375 Lexington Avenue, New York

IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE

Another Leader Fallen

Another one of our leaders has fallen!

After a brief illness, not without previous warnings, Rev. Reuben L. Breed, D. D., Superintendent of the Chicago Missionary and Extension Society, passed away at his home Nov. 30. With Drs. Herring, Sanderson and Breed gone, men who were working untiringly here together nine months ago on the C. W. M., our losses are heavy! Dr. Breed's illness dated back to childhood days when an attack of inflammatory rheumatism probably permanently affected his heart and health. Born in 1874 in Utica, Mich., graduating from Olivet College in 1894 and from Chicago Seminary in 1899, he has been active in service alway. He served our churches at Moline, Ill., Wabasha, Minn., Menominee, Wis., and Fort Dodge, Io., and was then called to the national work with the Home Missionary Society of New York. In 1915 he began his important leadership in Chicago where he has exerted a strong and ever-growing influence.

Dr. Breed was greatly beloved and respected among his colleagues and friends for his unselfish fidelity and broad statesmanlike grasp of the great problems before the Christian forces all over the great city. He was irenic in spirit and gave himself with sacrificial loyalty to his task. Like many another minister he did not work on "a union schedule" but put in all the hours of every day in the week in arduous service. As "pastor-at-large" among the more than 100 Congregational churches in the Chicago area, he has endeared himself to his brethren by an understanding of their tasks and problems and given them every encouragement. Not the least of his varied labors lay in his contribution to the settlement of problems of Christian unity and service. On various interdenominational boards his counsel was much sought and respected. He saw that the problems of the city today must be met by the united forces of the Christian Church. "With charity toward all" he wrought with fine fervor and helpfulness in meeting the big task of the church in our city.

The funeral services were held in Pilgrim Church, Oak Park, and were conducted by Dr. Breed's pastor (both in college and in Austin), Dr. C. T. Brown. They were marked by an impressive earnestness, and the floral tributes gave evidence of the widespread esteem in which Dr. Breed was held. Brief addresses were made by Dr. Brown, for the home and church; by Dr. J. R. Nichols, of Rogers Park, for the Missionary Society; and by Dr. Ernest Bourner Allen, his college-mate and friend. A large number of personal friends, all the Directors of the City Missionary Society, and many pastors were present at the services. They gave glad assent to the tributes paid "the happy warrior" who has gone on! "He was always helpful in his wise counsel, always inspiring in his cordial fellowship and brotherhood, always heartening in his steadfast faith and his unfailing spirit of service. . . . He was a tireless worker in the vineyard of his Master. He fell fighting for righteousness, for truth, for the churches, for the Kingdom of God, for the great Christian ideals. . . . While he was not unaware of the danger signals flashing across his pathway, he never spared himself or sought an easier place as he might have done."

Besides his many friends, Dr. Breed leaves to mourn his loss and cherish his memory, his bereaved wife, two daughters, Eleanor and Clara, his father, Rev. Dwight P. Breed, D. D., and mother, two brothers—Mr. Dwight Breed, of Austin, Tex., and Rev. Noel J. Breed, of Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.

Ernest Bourner Allen.

Ministries in Provincetown

The Congregational church in Provincetown, Mass., known as the Church of the Pilgrims, was organized in 1714, when the town was a little village of fishermen's homes. For approximately 100 years it was the only church in the community. The changes of the last century, including the development of four other Protestant churches and one Roman Catholic church, left this oldest church, at the approach of the Pilgrim Tercentenary, depleted in numbers and without a pastor. It has had no resident pastor since the autumn of 1917. Services had been held for brief periods only, in the summers of 1918 and 1919.

With the Tercentenary celebrations planned for 1920 and the turning of many travelers toward Provincetown, it seemed important that this old church of the Pilgrim fellowship, with its meeting-house a close neighbor to the Town House, should open its doors and renew its ministry. Rev. J. L. Sewall, now of Lake Helen, Fla., was commissioned by the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, with the concurrence of the church, to serve as its pastor.

Mr. Sewall, by spirit and experience, was the man for such a service. He rallied the church forces, perfected the reorganization of the ecclesiastical society (which had almost lapsed), and laid out a program of work that would have seemed too ambitious for many a church of larger resources. The church building was repaired and its equipment improved; its interior was given an old-fashioned house-cleaning. On July 1 of the past summer it opened its doors and daily thereafter it offered its hospitality as a place of rest and comfort for the visitors in Provincetown. Approximately 5,000 responded to its invitation, representing all parts of the United States, and the entire English-speaking world.

It was due to Mr. Sewall's initiative that a session of our International Council was held in Provincetown on July 4, in conjunction with a community celebration, with addresses by Chaplain Bridger of New Zealand and Secretary Emrich of Massachusetts. A picturesque part of this celebration was the visit to the Pilgrims' spring in North Truro. A later event which received much notice in the newspapers was the special service in the Church of the Pilgrims on Aug. 29, when participants in the North Truro pageant, in their Pilgrim garb, attended the service.

These were among the outward and visible ministries. More important, however, was the renewal of the witness to the Pilgrim faith, civic and religious, a ministry effective throughout the whole community and upon many summer guests. It counted not so much for the rebuilding of this church as an institution—little could be hoped for in that—but it was the

(Continued on page 832)

Church of the Pilgrims, Provincetown, Mass.

Rev. J. L. Sewall stands at left of door. The people, in Pilgrim costume are participants in the North Truro pageant who attended a special service at the Provincetown church on Aug. 29

A College of Ideals in a Land of Opportunity

WHERE IS THIS LAND OF OPPORTUNITY?

It is the great Southwest—a region larger in area than the original thirteen colonies; a region of great potential wealth and marvelous resources and rapidly increasing in population.

In this region of vari-colored races there is among the white people as large or a larger proportion of pure Anglo-Saxons than in any state North of the Mason and Dixon line.

There are no finer types of sincere-minded youth in the world than are to be found here. None to whom the message of Christian education appeals more strongly. None who will furnish more or better leadership for the church at home or abroad, if properly trained.

WHAT IS THIS COLLEGE OF IDEALS?

Kingfisher College at Kingfisher, Oklahoma.

Kingfisher College stands for all that is best in education and religion. If Congregationalists care to possess this wonderful land of charm, and marvel and almost infinite possibilities, a strong college is the key to the situation. A college realizing in itself the best we know—thoroughly Christian and a hundred per cent. loyal to Christ.

This College must be adequately equipped and endowed. When this is done the people of the region will appreciate and maintain it.

These larger things must be secured as soon as the return of normal conditions permits.

WHY THIS STORY?

NOW THIS YEAR IN ORDER TO LIVE THE COLLEGE MUST SECURE AT LEAST TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS.

$5,000 of this would have been covered by the last year's World Movement had it been fully subscribed.

$15,000 is to pay this year's bills which are not otherwise provided for.

Next year will be cared for by the next year's allotment of $15,000 from next year's Congregational World Movement, in case it is all secured.

This should make it unnecessary for further appeals for current expenses after this year.

We read that "SAUL WAS CONSENTING UNTO STEPHEN'S DEATH." That was before Saul was awakened. People who can give must be awakened in time or this and other institutions similarly placed will perish.

These are the hard times of readjustment after the war. We are therefore not now appealing for large sums though there is no place better than the Southwest in which to invest large sums in Christian education.

We are only asking for the opportunity to live.

We appeal to awakened men and women that they be not consenting unto our death but consent that we live.

Will you who read so consent? If so please send your consent with your check to

KINGFISHER STUDENT VOLUNTEERS
One of whom is now in Africa and one now in Boston doing post-graduate work in preparation for the foreign field

President HENRY W. TUTTLE, College Hill, Kingfisher, Oklahoma.

(Continued from page 830)

renewed ministry of the church of the Mayflower to the inner life of the community.

After Mr. Sewall's return to his Florida pastorate the services of worship were continued until the end of October. Local conditions did not warrant an attempt to maintain them through the winter; but it is to be hoped that in the later spring of 1921 the doors will be opened again and the ministries renewed.

Dr. Boynton's Resignation

On Sunday, Dec. 12, Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, for 15 years pastor of CLINTON AVE., BROOKLYN, N. Y., read his resignation. The letter was prepared to be read on Nov. 21, Dr. Boynton's 64th birthday, but was withheld for a few weeks at the request of the church board. The letter follows:

Nov. 21, 1920.

To the Clinton Avenue Congregational Church and Society: My Very Dear People—Birthdays are human indicators, especially as they increasingly bear witness that "we spend our years as a tale that is told."

At 64 the tale is twice told and the minister, whose hearing is unimpaired, recognizes the surprising and shrill command of the captain with his scythe and hour-glass announcing "it is time to take in sail."

Today I enter upon my 65th year, and by age limitation am discharged—honorably let me hasten to say—from my military service as chaplain of the 13th Regiment of Brooklyn, whose colonels, like Davis, Thurston and Grant, and whose chaplains, like Beecher, Talmage, Behrends and Rhoades, have given our regiment as great distinction in her official personnel as her soldiers in the field of war, in bravery, loyalty and service.

I count it the crowning honor of my life to have been a soldier, a comrade and a chaplain in the service of my country, beneath the Stars and Stripes. This rare privilege, however, could not have been mine but for the good fortune which brought me by your invitation to Brooklyn to become the minister of the Clinton Avenue Congregational Church in the year 1905.

I came to you at the beautiful Easter time, 15 years ago, bringing with me rugged health, buoyant spirit and a will to fulfill an earnest and a faithful ministry. All these, thank God, still abide with me.

We have worked busily and fraternally together, keeping our mutual faith in the sunshine and the shadow of these swift-footed years. Your great patience, your royal comradeship, your unquivering fidelity, have made my years as your minister, like Jacob's in his love quest: "They seemed unto him but a few days for the love he had for her."

Every sensible minister, however, knows that it is time and past—when the golden fingers upon the exact chronometer of years point suspiciously to 65, for him gratefully and lovingly to commit his parochial tasks to others and himself turn to those more representative services which are the doorkeepers of the later goals affording an anticipated relief together with dignified and leisurely opportunities.

As I came to you at Easter time, it seems proper that at Easter I should take my leave, returning to you with profound affection and gratitude the trust you committed to my humble keeping, and therefore I ask that my official relation as your proud minister may conclude on March 27, 1921.

I am very confident that the coming months will afford abundant opportunity for the confirming of any judgments regarding the future of our church and that freedom from embarrassment regarding the ministerial office and a definiteness of understanding will contribute positively to the greatly-to-be-desired adjustment. It does not need to be said that any service I can render at any time will be as freely yours as a member of the church as in my official relation to this choice flock of God's own.

It is my expectation to give myself to the representative ministry and to fulfill a long-cherished desire to become a minister-at-large in the City of New York, which holds for me the abiding affection of one who has seen not alone her shortcomings, her problems and her sins, but also the genuineness of her enlarging and benevolent purpose of soul, together with her prophetic significance.

Let me express my thanks for the trust reposed in me, my joy unalloyed and pride almost sinful in the honor of having been your minister, and as well my grateful confessions of faith.

"I thank my God upon every remembrance of you" and also "I thank Jesus Christ our Lord, who hath enabled me for that he counted me worthy, putting me into the ministry."

Commending you to the grace of God, I am, forever, your minister,

NEHEMIAH BOYNTON.

While there will be universal sorrow among both the church people and the general public in the thought that Dr. Boynton is leaving the active pastorate, there will be comfort in the fact that he will not leave the city. He says that he will now be known as "Nehemiah Boynton, Minister-at-Large," and his hosts of friends, national and international, will wish for him long years of fruitful ministry in the larger field which he has chosen. B. A.

Juvenile Chautauqua

WAVELAND AVE., CHICAGO, ILL., is in the seventh year of an especially successful work for children. A meeting is held each Wednesday afternoon from 3.30 to 5, and this year the average attendance has been over 90. All children in the community between the ages of five and fifteen, irrespective of creed, are invited.

HOW ONE CHICAGO CHURCH INSTRUCTS ITS CHILDREN
Juvenile Chautauqua at Waveland Ave., Chicago

The plan began during the fall of 1913 with a simple religious meeting, at which was present a group of 25 children. The hour was spent in devotional service with a short object talk. The purpose was to help the children to become acquainted with the pastor and to train them for the work of the church. The interest and regular attendance during the year encouraged the pastor, Rev. E. L. Reiner, to continue the plan and the work has been growing steadily ever since. Various new features have been added from time to time as the needs of the situation seemed to call for them. The earnest desire was to meet the real needs of the growing children, and the program was molded with this in view. It was hoped that these meetings would make the children good neighbors, true friends and useful citizens.

Story-telling by a trained worker was soon introduced and with striking effect, for interest and attendance increased immediately. It was thought that Jesus, the Master story-teller, was the vital sanction for this part of the work. It was soon felt that the physical welfare of the children should be considered. With this in mind various games and contests were added to the program.

As the work has grown, its purposes and methods have become steadily clearer. In the beginning of the fifth year a more definite program was outlined. Its purpose was to inculcate kindliness, generosity, fairness, courage and justice. The plans for the year were based upon the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians. At each meeting, through text, story, song and object talk, some lesson from this chapter was taught. With the beginning of the sixth year the plan of making the object talks in story form was tried. The rapt attention of the children immediately approved this innovation.

The seventh consecutive year began this fall with a regular program—singing, object talks, stories and games. The program is planned for character building and has been well termed steps in character building. During the early years partial programs were printed. It is now deemed best to print the complete program for the year and to follow it carefully.

The work has proved tremendously rewarding. The pastor, Rev. E. L. Reiner, says there has been no finer experience in the 20 years of his ministry. The interest of the children was shown again this year when 97 appeared for the opening meeting of the fall. As we look into the eager faces of the children, we feel that the most important question in the world today is, "What will become of the children?" We are trying to help answer that question for as Longfellow says:

What would the world be to us
  If the children were no more?
We should dread the desert behind us
  Worse than the dark before.

For what are all our contrivings,
  And the wisdom of our books,
When compared with their caresses,
  And the gladness of their looks?

Surely there is great need for more activity of this kind today.

MAYME R. LEONARD.

Careful Study of the Bible

In the belief that much good may be gained from a simple reading of the "Book," Rev. C. C. Rowlison, pastor of FIRST, LA CROSSE, WIS., is devoting the hour of the midweek service to such reading. These are Bible readings, not sermons, expositions, or criticism; but literary forms and archaic usages will be briefly explained. The following topics indicate some of the proposed readings:

Creation Stories.
Israel a Chosen People.
Moses and the Deliverance of Israel from Egypt.
Primitive Days in Palestine.
Israel becomes a Nation.
Israel's Failure and Fall.
Israel Redeemed.
The Poetry of Redemption.
The Drama of Job.
Love Stories.
The Poetry of Worship.
Jesus the Prophet of Galilee.
The Teachings of Jesus.
The Parables of Jesus.
The Death of Jesus.
Early Days of the Church.
The Apostle Paul.
The Epistles of Paul.
Other Epistles.
Apocalypses.

Thanksgiving for "Away-from-Homes"

Would you be sorry for yourself if business or the high cost of railroad tickets kept you in a city far distant from your family and old-time friends on Thanksgiving day? Perhaps. But it would be your own fault if you were in a city which, like Portsmouth, Va., had a church where the pastor and his wife and the congregation opened the doors of the parish house for a real family dinner party, and let you know through the daily paper and other natural means that you, and others like you, were truly wanted; also that it was not "charity" but that each one was to be allowed to share in the expense. This actually happened in the above named city, Nov. 25, 1920, at First Church.

The parish house has been made one with the parsonage by the recent building (a gift by the pastor and his wife) of a homey little reception room which has the cheeriness of warmth, good lighting and a mass of lovely ferns. Large double doors are no barrier, for when not open they always are unlocked.

In response to invitations that could be felt only as personal, there were 51 guests—men and women, boys and girls—who sat down to the best possible home-cooked dinner, in a room made festive with greens and large branches of red berries.

The kitchen conveniences, the best table linen, silver, china and glass were some of the things used to prove still further the oneness of the parsonage with the parish house.

The tables were set U-shape with a small one at the opening. In the center of one was the Mayflower sailing in the troughs of a heavy sea (of green tissue paper) toward Plymouth with its sandy beach, pines and tepees (center of another table) where an Indian warrior in his birch-bark canoe, sailing on the quiet waters of the bay (a mirror), awaited the white sailor visitors who, in a small rowboat, approached (from another table). At each guest's place was a small walnut shell boat with a full sail of white paper held in place by a toothpick mast. Names written on the sails indicated where the guests were to sit. The realism was further carried out by the individual bon-bon dishes covered with sea-green paper and hold-

BIBLES of every description, size and price. We are always pleased to quote prices, send catalogues, or to fill orders promptly.

14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

Endless Delights
from these three Bubble Grains

Have the three Bubble Grains ever ready—Puffed Wheat, Puffed Rice and Puffed Corn.

Some like one best, some another. And each best fits some way of serving. You need them all.

Then let children revel in them, morning, noon and night. There is nothing better for them, nothing that they love so well.

100 million steam explosions

Each Puffed Grain has been created by a hundred million steam explosions. Every food cell has been blasted. Digestion of the whole grain is made easy and complete.

These are Prof. Anderson's inventions—the best-cooked cereals in existence. Serve them any hour.

Some folks treat Puffed Grains as tidbits—as food confections for some extra-dainty meal. But one is whole wheat, remember, and one whole rice. All are scientific grain foods. What better food can children get from morning until bedtime?

These are flimsy dainties, flaky and flavory, puffed to eight times normal size. Yet the supreme food for children is a dish of Puffed Wheat in milk.

Puffed Wheat Puffed Rice Puffed Corn
Also Puffed Rice Pancake Flour

Nut-like pancakes

Puffed Rice flour is blended now in an ideal pancake mixture. It makes the pancakes fluffy and gives a nut-like taste. Simply add milk or water—the flour is self-raising. The finest pancakes ever tasted are now made with Puffed Rice Pancake Flour. Ask your grocer for it.

The Quaker Oats Company
Sole Makers

3457

ing small green mints, making safe seas on which the place-card boats might ride.

Then came the dinner. The Doxology was sung and a prayer of Thanksgiving was offered by the father of this big family, Rev. M. S. Poulson. A Thanksgiving hymn was sung as a solo by one of the guests. In a few minutes all were served to turkey with dressing and gravy, fried oysters, candied sweet potatoes, white potatoes, macaroni au gratin, cranberry sauce, celery, jelly and hot rolls from the parsonage oven. Then came stories, jokes and games. In due time also appeared the pudding, pie, cheese, apples and coffee, and then a happy talk from Mother Poulson which caused much merriment.

Dinner was over but the fun barely begun. A member of the National Community Service staff was a guest and at the request of Mr. Poulson, directed a round of games and stunts which provided an afternoon of laughter and frolic. All went away with songs in their hearts because a church could be a home in reality.

Mr. and Mrs. Poulson say that a spirit of good-fellowship, hospitality and genuine Christian democracy existed in this church when they arrived two years ago, but we see in the teamwork of these two leaders of a church organization the joy of whole-hearted, nothing-withholding service.

EDNA G. MEEKER.

From West to East

OREGON

Splendid New Church for Forest Grove

One of the triumphs in the church life of Oregon occurred when the beautiful new church building at FOREST GROVE was dedicated last summer. The pastorate of Rev. W. W. Blair with Forest Grove began on June 1, 1919. Just 50 days after his coming to the field a fire, which destroyed quite a section of the city, totally devoured the church building. Within less than 11 months of the disastrous fire, the fine new church edifice was completed and dedicated amid great rejoicings on the part of the congregation and the city in which the church stands.

The new building is one of the best equipped churches in the state. First Church, being at the seat of Pacific University, has a large place to fill, and this new enterprise was carried through with a view to large service for the city and the college. The architecture is splendidly adaptable to the use of every inch of the space within the walls. The auditorium has a seating capacity of 300 on the main floor and two balconies in addition seating another hundred. Beside the auditorium on the main floor there is an ideal Sunday school department with 14 classrooms, all so arranged that they may be made into one room, which upon opening into the main building gives a seating capacity of 800, with every person in full view of the pulpit. There is also a church office, choir room, ladies' and men's parlors on the main floor. The basement contains a large social room, boys' and girls' rooms, amusement room, dining-room, kitchen and lavatories. Every department through the building is fully equipped. The two large main entrances are so arranged that an equal invitation is suggested to both the religious and social features of the church's life. The building is finished throughout in slashed native Oregon fir, exceedingly attractive in its color and beauty. The interior color effect has been wonderfully harmonized from the carpeted floors to the ceilings. The acoustics are faultless in every section of the building. On Oct. 3 a fine new pipe organ, built for the church by the Hinners Organ Company, was dedicated, completing the entire plant for efficient and modern service to the life of the entire community. The entire project, furnished, has cost a little over $42,000, and has only a slight debt, covered by a loan from the Church Building Society. This is the eighth church building Mr. Blair has assisted in building during his ministry.

This church entertained the State Conference Oct. 12-14, and in conjunction therewith celebrated its 75th anniversary, the organization being the oldest strictly Congregational church organization west of the mountains. Backed by a loyal membership the church in addition to its wonderful record of building, has, during the same year, contributed $1.500 to the Pilgrim Fund; $700 to the C. W. M.; overpaid on all its benevolent apportionments to quite an extent, and advanced the pastor's income $200, paying $500 more for the pastor's salary than ever before in the church's history. About 50 have united with the church during the present year, and with the strongly increasing attend-

READY

New England in the Life of the World

HOWARD A. BRIDGMAN

This graphically told summary of the hardy New Englanders' wonderful contribution to Western development and world progress abounds in fascinating incidents which will delight any reader anywhere.

An Ideal Christmas Gift
From Parishioner to Pastor
From One New Englander to Another
From an Easterner to a Westerner

"Dr. Bridgman has written a book which is exceedingly interesting and full of inspiration, and which is the result of long and scholarly research. It will be a valuable addition to our historical literature."—The Christian Work.

$4.00. Postage, 15 cents

14 Beacon St., Boston
THE PILGRIM PRESS
19 W. Jackson St., Chicago

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

The Congregational Training School For Women

Trains for Christian leadership.

The work of Church Assistant, Director of Religious Education, and Instructor in Week-day Religious Education offers opportunity for the finest and highest type of social service.

One and two year courses. Expenses low.

MISS MARGARET TAYLOR, Dean,
5603 Dorchester Ave., Chicago, Ill.

ANDOVER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

Cambridge, Massachusetts

Affiliated with Harvard University

A professional training school for Christian Ministers, with a three years' course of study leading to the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. Courses in all departments of Theology, with liberal privileges of election.

For catalogue and information apply to the Dean.

BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

105th year opens Sept. 29, 1920. For College or non-College men. Courses, regular and elective; leading to diploma or degree; modern, thorough, practical. Expenses low. For Catalogue or information address

Prof. WARREN J. MOULTON, Cor. Sec'y.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.

Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.

Degrees of M. A., B. D. and Ph. D., may be obtained by students.

For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

The Fisk Teachers' Agencies

2A Park St., Boston 225 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Birmingham, Chicago, Denver, Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles. Everett O. Fisk & Co.

Chicago Theological Seminary

Is affiliated with the University of Chicago. Seminary instruction is supplemented by the varied and limitless opportunities of the University and the Divinity School. Tuition free.

Trains for
Pulpit and Pastorate
Missionary Work
Community Service
Religious Education

Opportunity is offered to secure the M. A. degree during preparation for the B. D.; also an annual two-year honor fellowship for post-graduate work.

5757 University Ave., Chicago, Illinois.
OZORA S. DAVIS, President.

CARLETON COLLEGE

Liberal Arts
Science Music

D. J. COWLING, President

Northfield, Minnesota

The Graduate School of Theology

OBERLIN COLLEGE

A strong, well balanced course, preparatory to the work of the ministry at home or abroad.

Second semester's work begins February 8 with all the regular faculty teaching.

Address G. W. FISKE, JR., Dean, Oberlin, Ohio.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION

An undenominational training school for

The Ministry Religious Education
Foreign Missions Social Service

Curricula high grade and modern. Graduate degrees. University of California privileges. Opportunities for the study of Oriental peoples. Open to men and women of all Christian denominations. For catalogue address

WILLIAM FREDERIC BADE, Dean, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

The Pratt Teachers' Agency

70 Fifth Avenue, New York

Recommends teachers to colleges, public and private schools in all parts of the country.

Advises parents about schools. WM. O. PRATT, Mgr.

New First Church, Forest Grove, Ore.

ance at the services, the prospects are bright for a splendid growth during the coming months. Three young people's societies have been organized during the past year, each of which is doing a great work, with large memberships. The Bible school is enjoying a growth surpassing any record for many years.

MINNESOTA

New Member for Each Mayflower Passenger

Olivet, St. Paul, received 14 new members at the November Communion service, making 102 for the year. The pastor, Rev. G. M. Miller, announced it as "one new member in the Tercentenary year, 1920, for each passenger who came over in the Mayflower in 1620." There have been many losses during the year by death and removals, but the large net increase puts the present membership of Olivet at 658.

WISCONSIN

Around the State

Randolph, Rev. Thomas Hoffman, pastor, on Nov. 14 dedicated the new basement of the church building, Rev. Robert Allingham assisting in the celebration. On Rally Sunday, Nov. 7, with snow six inches deep, the report of the Sunday school of Solon Springs, Rev. C. J. Jenson, pastor, showed an average attendance of 34 and a total attendance for the year of 1,800. One hundred dollars was raised for supplies and gifts. Clothing sent for dstribution by the pastor and his wife has brought great relief to the needy families in this developing pioneer region.

Mineral Point, Rev. A. H. Schoenfeld, pastor, was given a legacy of $200 in the will of the late James Jackson, for many years a leader in all uplift activities. All departments of the church are alive and active. The 1920 apportionment has been paid in full.

ILLINOIS

Increased Program at Granville

Granville, Rev. W. C. Barber, pastor, is planning an enlarged program for the future and has decided to increase its benevolence program. The people met their apportionment during the year and gave over $3,200 to the Pilgrim Fund. The church is comparatively alone in a parish of 5,000 people, a Swedish Lutheran church of 70 members and a small Catholic church being the only other churches in action within a radius of seven miles. To allow the pastor more time for his parish work Granville has secured the services of Mr. Henry M. Ward as assistant. Mr. Ward will have charge of the music in addition to the more general work of the parish. He began his services Dec. 1.

Walker's the Best Concordance
Over 50,000 more references than any other low priced concordance to the Bible. 980 pages. Cloth $3.00. ½ leather $3.75. Postage 20 cents.
14 Beacon Street Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

New Members for Stillman Valley

Since the beginning of the pastorate of Rev. George Milne, a few months ago, Stillman Valley has taken on new life. At the last communion service nine children were baptized and 12 adults received into the fellowship of the church, 11 of these by letter and one (man) baptized and received on confession. It was a day of encouragement to both church and pastor.

MASSACHUSETTS

"Why I Entered the Ministry"

In these days of a scarcity of theological students, the attendants at the Boston Ministers' Meeting, Dec. 13, were keenly interested to hear two theologues, Charles D. Kepner, Jr., of Andover Seminary, and Oscar T. Green, of the Episcopal Theological Seminary, tell what led them to choose the profession of the ministry. The former had planned from childhood to be a minister but, growing older, humanitarian interests and the lack of consecration in the church led him to question whether he might not better serve in other ways than in the ministry. His experience in France in the war raised many doubts. Finally he decided that the fundamental need of humanity is the Spirit of Christ. That is what generates reforms. He says he was led by love for man to love for God.

The other student made his decision for the ministry while in army service abroad. A neighbor upon hearing of his decision asked, "Has he got shell shock?" Among the influences that led him to this decision, he named the influences of his Christian home, a college professor who valued above money his opportunity to influence the best young men in the land, a clergyman who showed that a man could be intellectually honest and still be a Christian, and another minister who showed what kindness is.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

When a man tells me that he can learn more of God beside a brook on Sunday morning than the minister can teach him from the pulpit, and I find that his name is not Wordsworth, neither Coleridge nor Tennyson, I break it gently to him that I am not impressed.

Stirring Sermons at Highland, Lowell

At Highland, Lowell, the pastor, Rev. A. S. Beale, has been delivering some stirring messages on "The Sermon on the Mount and Our American Problems." At a recent Sunday morning service the response to the pastoral prayer consisted of a poem, "My Upper Room," written by the pastor's wife, Ethel Merrill Beale, and set to music for organ and violin by the church organist, Miss Clara Heal Fenton. At a recent midweek service, all the music used, aside from the hymns, was composed by Miss Fenton. There were two instrumental selections, a most appropriate musical setting of Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," for a quartet, and a cheery little song entitled, "Through the Rain," the words as well as the music by Miss Fenton.

The Quality Investment
Guaranteed Farm Mortgages
Forty Three Years In Business--- Without Loss to A Client
J.L.Pettyjohn & Co.
OLATHE, KANSAS

Write for this Booklet
"Bibles and Bonds" tells the interesting story of a world-wide work and a safe investment yielding as high as 8%.
Ask for Booklet J
American Bible Society
Bible House Astor Place New York

WOMEN INVESTORS
Mrs. Currier, of our organization, will be pleased to talk over with you the character of the management and the history of the following seasoned New England industries.

	Div.	Organized
LOWELL BLEACHERY	10%	1833
MERRIMAC CHEMICAL	10	1853
SULLIVAN MACHINERY	8	1850
NAUMKEAG STEAM COTTON	20	1839

Mark X opposite your choice and mail
EARNEST E. SMITH & CO.
Specialists in New England Securities
52 Devonshire Street, Boston
Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges

Notable Recognition of Dr. Bradley's Service

Dr. H. S. Bradley closed his 11 years' pastorate of Piedmont, Worcester, Nov. 14, his last public service being marked by preaching the ordination sermon for his junior colleague, Rev. C. J. Wood, educational director. The closing days of Dr. Bradley's stay in Worcester were full of tokens of love and esteem and of great regret at his departure.

Monday evening, Nov. 8, the Chamber of Commerce arranged a dinner in his honor in the banquet hall of the Bancroft Hotel, which was attended by 200 men from all departments of the city's life and by many ladies in the gallery seats. Pres. I. N. Hollis of Worcester Polytechnic Institute was toastmaster, and the speakers included Mayor P. F. Sullivan, George A. Gaskill, President of the People's Savings Bank, Dr. V. E. Tomlinson of the First Universalist Church and former Congressman C. G. Washburn.

A farewell reception was given by the church and parish Nov. 15 and the attendance filled the social rooms of the church to overflowing. It required nearly two hours for those present to pass in line before Dr. and Mrs. Bradley and say their farewells. Addresses were given by Dr. L. A. Nies of Trinity M. E. Church, Rev. W. R. MacNutt of First Baptist, and Rev. F. T. Rouse of Pilgrim who spoke for the Congregationalists of the city. Rev. Dr. Leavitt H. Hallock, a member of State Street, Portland, Me., was present and unannounced took the platform to promise the loyalty of State Street to Piedmont's retiring pastor.

A large hall clock with three sets of chimes and a magnificent tea and coffee service with tray were presented to Dr. and Mrs. Bradley, and from within the clock the traditional gift of a pair of hand-wrought slippers was brought forth for Dr. Bradley. After a tender response and the singing of "Blest Be the Tie," the gathering received the benediction from Dr. Bradley and adjourned at the midnight hour. F. D. T.

Pilgrim Charter
Oldest Legal Document in America
We should be pleased to send circular on request
DAVID W. BUTTERFIELD CO.
8 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

PELOUBET'S
Select Notes
The World's Greatest Commentary on the International Sunday School Lessons
By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.
Let us send you a pamphlet containing the first lesson taken from the volume of 1921
Price, $2.00 Net; $2.10 Delivered
W. A. WILDE COMPANY
120 BOYLSTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.
Rand-McNally Building, Chicago

Crannell's Pocket Lessons for 1921
Contains all of the International Sunday School Lessons for 1921, with References, Daily Bible Readings, and Analyses. Vest pocket size. About two hundred pages clearly printed on good opaque paper. Size, 2¾ x 5¾ inches. Substantially bound in cloth. Just the thing for the busy teacher or scholar.
Price, 40 cents
THE JUDSON PRESS
1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THOMAS Individual Cups
Used by over 35,000 churches. Clean and Sanitary. Send for catalog and special offer. Trial free.
Thomas Communion Service Co, Box 5 Lima, Ohio

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Desks—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.
DeMoulinBros&Co.Dept. 14 Greenville, Ill.

BRONZE
HONOR ROLLS
AND
HISTORICAL TABLETS
REED & BARTON, TAUNTON, MASS.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER is known all over the country. Four thousand churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars. THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio.

MENEELY BELL CO
TROY, N.Y. AND
198 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY
BELLS

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
79 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

Achenbach, S. T., Fryeburg, Me., to Bethel. Accepts.

Bissell, H. M., Gallup, N. M., to Columbia, S. D. At work.

Claris, C. C., Quechee, Vt., to Pittsford and Florence. At work.

Clark, W. C., Wilmington, Vt., to Bakersfield. At work.

Lynch, H. C., Bethlehem, St. Louis, Mo., to Isabel and Firesteel, S. D. Accepts to begin Jan. 1.

Lyon, E. S., Enfield, N. H., to Second, West Newbury, Mass. Accepts to begin Jan. 1.

Machatton, B. R., Great Falls, Mont., to Plymouth, Des Moines, Io. Accepts to begin about Jan. 1.

Poor, W. G., Upton, Mass., to West Parish, Haverhill.

Rollason, H. D., Hanover, Ct., to South, Middletown. Accepts to begin Jan. 15.

Ross, G. G., recently of Hutchinson, Kan., to South Hero, Vt. Accepts.

Street, Thomas, Ashland, Mass., to Winthrop. At work.

Tuttle, G. A., Second, Amherst, Mass., to Darien, Ct.

Young, E. V., New Haven, Vt., to North Troy. At work.

Resignations

Boynton, Nehemiah, Clinton Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Merchant, I. K., Mt. Zion, Cleveland, O., to enter social service department of settlement house operated by Northern Baptist Home Missionary Society at Pittsburgh, Pa.

Tuttle, G. A., Second, Amherst, Mass.

Ordinations

Lewis, A. M., o., Vienna, S. D., Oct. 26. Sermon by Dr. L. L. Sowles; other parts by Rev. Messrs. J. D. Whitelaw, Robert Hall and H. C. Juell.

Schriver, L. O., formerly acting pastor of South, Middletown, Ct., o., at South, Middletown, Dec. 13. Sermon by Rev. Douglas Horton; other parts by Rev. Messrs. J. K. Thomson, C. H. Peck, A. W. Hazen, D. D., A. J. W. Myers, Ph.D., E. E. Lewis and S. E. Evans.

Siegle, S. C., Osborne, Kan., o., at Northwestern Association Meeting, Oct. 13. Sermon by Rev. T. B. Smith; other parts by Rev. Messrs. F. R. Bush, C. D. Shoemaker and J. B. Gonzales.

Thomson, M. K., Portland, Ct., o., at South, Middletown, Dec. 13. Sermon by Rev. Douglas Horton; other parts by Rev. Messrs. J. K. Thomson, C. H. Peck, A. W. Hazen, D. D., A. J. W. Myers, Ph.D., E. E. Lewis and S. E. Evans.

Recognition

Lytle, J. A., r., Bradford, Vt., Dec. 7. Parts by Rev. Messrs. W. J. McNeill, F. W. Bates, O. J. Anderson, T. P. Frost, D. D., Donald Fraser, C. W. Carvell and C. C. Merrill.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
IDAHO
Grandview, First	17	31
MASSACHUSETTS
Boston, Old South	1	6
MINNESOTA
Minneapolis, First	18	55
NEW JERSEY
Hackensack		12
VERMONT
Bennington, First	11	11
Ludlow	1	3
Newfane	3	6
St. Johnsbury, North	3	9
Tyson	1	1
Weybridge	10	10
WYOMING
Green River	4	21

Personals

Longenecker, G. W., Neillsville, Wis., was happily honored upon his recent birthday by a large church social gathering. He was presented with a generous sum of money and there were other expressions of high regard for himself and family. Mr. Longenecker was pastor here for eight years some time ago, and this second pastorate of four years makes a total of 12 years' service which he has given the Neillsville parish.

Parkhurst, C. H., who is serving Manhattan, New York, N. Y., as acting pastor until next June, was for many years pastor of the Madison Square Presbyterian Church. Since the Madison Square Church entered into consolidation with

Cuticura Soap
—Is Ideal for—
The Complexion
Soap, Ointment, Talcum, 25c. everywhere. For samples address: Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. V. Malden, Mass.

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.

Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

Emergency vacancies in colleges and universities. American College Bureau, Walter Agnew (Ex-President Hedding College), 419 West 119th St., New York.

PASTORATE WANTED

Ordained Congregational Minister, 25 years old, ten years' platform and pulpit experience, now in Middle-Western pastorate, desires church in some industrial center where social gospel may be preached along liberal, democratic, and non-sectarian lines. Prefer New England, New York, Pennsylvania, or New Jersey; others considered. Good references. Interested parties address "Preacher," care Congregationalist.

PASTORS WANTED

Superintendent A. J. Sullens, of Oregon and Idaho, leaves Portland for Chicago Jan. 1. Wishes enroute to interview pastors considering Pacific Coast pulpits. Write him for appointment, P. O. Box 905, Portland, Ore.

Young man, good mind, good speaker, liberal theology, some promise of human success, church near Chicago, salary $3,000. Give ample references. Address "V. W.," Congregationalist.

the First Presbyterian and with the University Place Church, Dr. Parkhurst has been pastor emeritus in the resulting foundation. In the work at Manhattan he will be assisted by Mr. W. H. Bartlett, Harvard 1917, who is still pursuing his studies in Union Seminary after serving as a Second Lieutenant in France.

PARRY, J. B., Hope, Springfield, Mass., is at the Chapin Memorial Hospital, Springfield, to which he was taken suffering from a sudden attack of appendicitis. The pulpit is being supplied by Drs. Reed and Strycker of Springfield. Dr. Swartz attended the Every Member Canvass banquet and spoke on Apportionate Giving to an attendance of over 400. It is expected that Mr. Parry will resume his work in January.

Events to Come

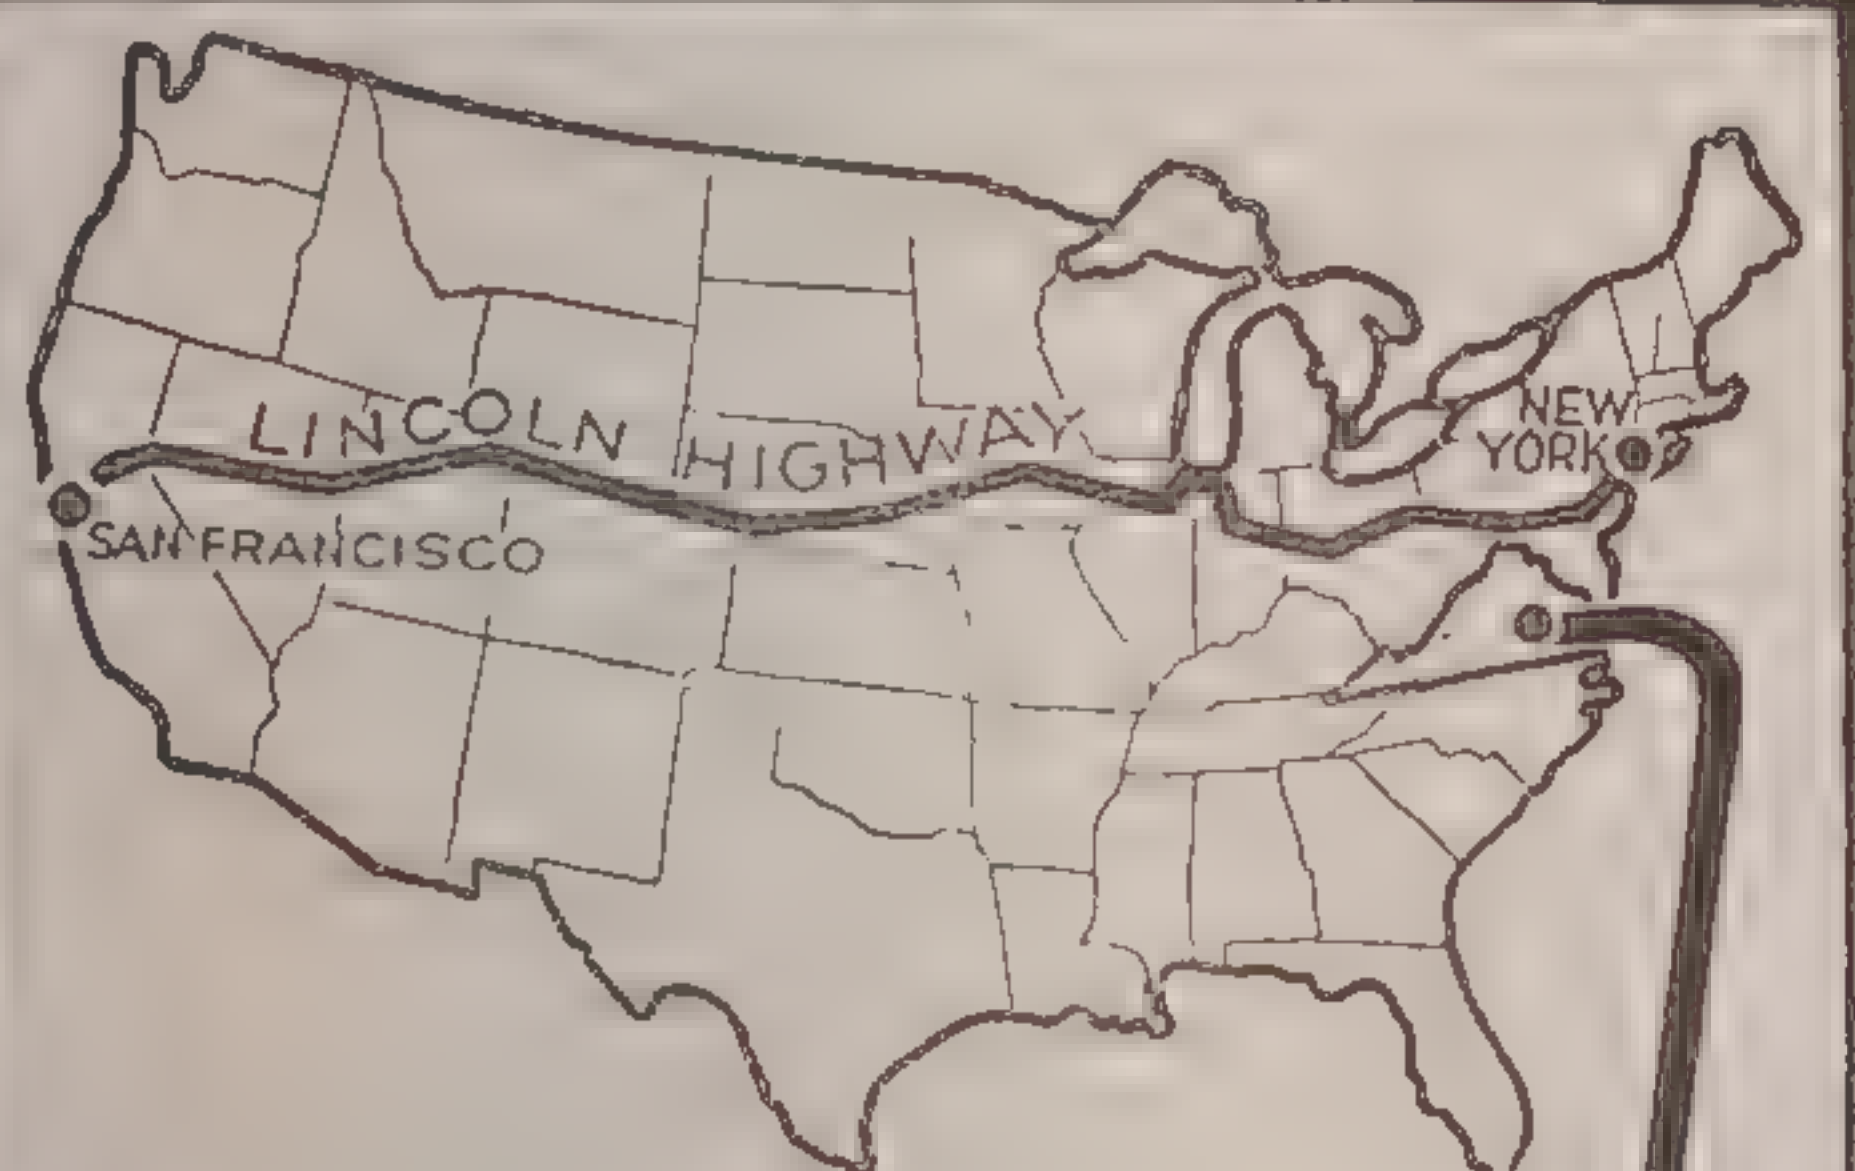
National Congregational Council, Los Angeles, Cal., July 1-8.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, Monthly Meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Jan. 7, 10.30 A. M. Speakers: Dr. John E. Merrill, Aintab, Turkey; Mrs. Murray Frame. New Year's Prayer Service.

DAY OF PRAYER FOR MISSIONS, Feb. 18, 1921.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING. Congregational ministers will omit their regular meeting in Pilgrim Hall and will unite with other denominations in a meeting in the Church of the New Jerusalem on Bowdoin St., at 10.30 A. M., to hear Bishop Lawrence speak on the Lambeth Conference.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, New Year's meeting for field reports and prayer, Pilgrim Hall, Boston, Jan. 14, 10.30 A. M.



If the millions of envelopes which Duplex—Richmond, Va., prints for Church and Sunday Schools in a year were placed single file, the line would extend three times as far as the Lincoln Highway does.

The Duplex Envelope Co.
RICHMOND, VA.

UNLESS IT'S Duplex RICHMOND, VA. IT'S AN IMITATION

INTERCOLLEGIATE TOURS
BOSTON U.S.A.

SUMMER CRUISE
THROUGH ST. PAUL'S
MEDITERRANEAN

Palestine by auto and camp. The glory that was Greece and the mystery that was Egypt. University credit for Biblical History and Geography.

Prof. Albert E. Bailey
Leader
65-K Franklin St., Boston

Massachusetts General Hospital

Training School for Nurses. Established 1873. 1,350 Graduates. Prepares its students for advanced positions. For particulars consult Circular of Information. Address SALLY M. JOHNSON, R. N., Supt. of Nurses. Boston, Massachusetts.

BROOKE HOUSE
79 Chandler Street, Boston
(Founded in 1892 by the Rev. Stopford W. Brooke.)

A comfortable home for young working women, near Copley Sq. and the Common. Transients accommodated in summer. Apply to Supt.

Margaret Slattery's Books
The Charm of the Impossible, 50c.
The Girl in Her Teens, 85c.
The American Girl and Her Community, $1.35
The Girls' Book of Prayer, 35c. cloth 60c.
The Girl and Her Religion, $1.25.
Just Over the Hill, $1.25.
The Costly Star, 60c.
Add 10% for postage
14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

Deaths

MRS. AUGUSTA STOREY THURSTON

Mrs. Augusta Storey Thurston, widow of Rev. John R. Thurston, died in Worcester, Mass., Nov. 29.

She was born in Newburyport, Mass., in 1835. She was educated in private schools in that city and in Miss Catherine Beecher's seminary in Hartford, Ct. She was married to Mr. Thurston in 1871 at the beginning of his forty years' pastorate in Whitinsville, Mass., where she shared with him the respect and affection of the parish and the community.

Five children were born to her, two of whom died in early childhood. Rev. J. Lawrence Thurston, pioneer of the Yale Mission in China, died in 1904. The two remaining are Charles Storey Thurston, a lawyer in Saranac Lake, N. Y., and Isabel Storey Thurston of Worcester.

Her retentive memory, her appreciation of the beautiful, her keen sense of humor, which found quick and apt expression in words, combined with her love of home life, fitted her to be the center of a bright and happy household. During the years of college and professional study, the friends of the two daughters who were hers by marriage and of her own children received hospitable welcome into this home. Many leaders in the active life of the present day cherish their memories of the Whitinsville parsonage.

When separation and sorrow came they were bravely borne with added thoughtfulness for those who remained. At the close of the Whitinsville pastorate the family removed to Worcester to a home whose wide western outlook with its sunset glories was typical of well-earned rest.

After Mr. Thurston's death in 1916, failing physical strength restricted activity but not the manifestation of interest in all that had made life rich and beautiful. The work of her hands, still quick and skillful, went into many homes. Her greatest happiness was found in giving. Her generous thought was extended to little children as well as to active workers and there was tender consideration for those who had borne the heat and burden of the day and who were not receiving the affectionate care and generous provision which were crowning her days.

There was only an interval of a few days between the quiet enjoyment of this life and the entrance into the larger life of which she had loved to think and read. "So he giveth his beloved sleep."

Clergy Rates for 1921

Official announcement has been made by Western railroads that a clergy rate, based on two-thirds of the regular one-way fares will be authorized for 1921. Certificates to be limited to the calendar year 1921. A Clergy Bureau will be established in St. Louis, Mo., for issuance of Certificates to applicants living in Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas; the present Bureau at Chicago will be operated next year and will serve the states west of and including Illinois and the Mississippi River, except the states in the Southwestern territory enumerated above. Application blanks are available and can be secured from ticket agents.

Certificates in hand will be good for the period for which they are issued and those holding unexpired certificates should not apply for new ones until two weeks previous to the expiration of the old certificate.

In the Eastern and Southern states ticket agents should be able to render similar service wherever clergy rates are granted, but the New England railroads are not inclined to grant such rates the coming year, chiefly on the ground that they are heavily in debt and cannot afford to do so.

One item in one issue of your magazine may mean $10,000 for us. We cannot afford to be without it.

It was in these words that the president of a large construction company voiced the opinion of thousands of men in his business regarding a well-known builder's magazine that has a reputation for publishing only modern and interesting items in the building game.

Successful business and professional men will tell you that it would be absolutely impossible for them to conduct their affairs in an up-to-date way without having for ready reference every high-grade periodical that is published on the subject to which they are devoting their lives.

What then of the men who are devoting part or full time to the profession of religious education? Can those in charge of religious education in the church expect the best results if they are unaware of what the rest of the world is doing in this field? This is where THE CHURCH SCHOOL fits in. It is the trade journal of religious education. It is a New Magazine for a New Day. No progressive Church-school worker, no one interested in religious education as an effective agency for the building of Christian character can afford to be without this publication.

What more appropriate Christmas gift could you make to the teachers and officers in your Sunday school than a year's subscription to THE CHURCH SCHOOL, a magazine whose fundamental purpose is the instruction of adults in the Christian training of children!

Price, per year, $1.25; in clubs of six to one address, each per year, $1.00.

SEND FOR COPY OF THE SPECIAL CHRISTMAS NUMBER
Price, 15 cents

THE PILGRIM PRESS
14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

YOU WHO SUBSCRIBE

to

The Congregationalist
and Advance

Can help your pastor, your church and your denomination by urging your church friends who are not among our readers to send in their subscriptions. Tell them, if you will, the enjoyment and help you derive from its pages, that from cover to cover its pages are well worth while.

You might mention the

Weekly Editorials
Current Events
Women's Interests
The Congregational Circle
Book Reviews
News of the Christian World
Children's Stories
Readers' Forum
Hour of Prayer
Interesting Church Problems

1921 Is to Be An Eventful Year

Every one is intensely interested and needs to be well informed. If their attention can be brought to the need of our paper in their home the great work of our beloved faith and its earnest leaders will be helped immeasurably.

$3.00 per Year
$2.75 in Church Clubs

Department of Circulation

14 Beacon Street
BOSTON

19 W. Jackson Street
CHICAGO

Two Honored Laymen

Two of the leading Congregational laymen of Massachusetts have just died; both were successful business men in a large way; both were loyal and devoted members of the churches to which they belonged and both were generous and strong supporters of our denominational causes. George Marston Whitin of Whitinsville, Mass., died Dec. 7, and George Eldon Keith, of Brockton, died Dec. 8. Both had passed the allotted four score years and ten.

Mr. Whitin began business with his father in the Whitin Machine Works and came to be prominent in the textile industry being connected with many mills scattered throughout the country. He never held public office but was a strong and influential figure in the public affairs of his home town, and took a deep interest in the church of which he was a member, his pastor being Rev. Walter Commons.

In the death of Mr. Keith, Brockton loses its best loved citizen. He was the founder and president of the George E. Keith Company, shoe manufacturers, and had built up a large and successful industry; he was also interested in other important business enterprises. He was prominent in Y. M. C. A. work and a general supporter of it, and one of the most generous supporters of the Brockton Hospital. In the South Church of Brockton he was always ready to serve and modestly and faithfully supported the work of the church and pastor in every possible way. For ten years he was superintendent of the Sunday school. His gifts have added to the church a fine Sunday school building and an excellent athletic field, which is a memorial to his son Eldon B. Keith, who died two years ago, in London, while serving the Industrial Board for the government. Mr. Keith was chairman of the Brockton School Board for many years, and had served as alderman and park commissioner.

A Minister's Son

E. Cornelius Benedict, the New York yachtman and one-time noted stock broker who died recently, was the son of a Congregational clergyman. The father was Rev. Henry Benedict, Connecticut born, a graduate of Yale, whose ministry began at Waterbury. In 1840 he was stated supply at Westport, a service continued for twelve years. During this pastorate the Commodore was born. The son never forgot that ministry and in 1907, on the occasion of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the church, he responded to a request for his father's portrait to complete the pastoral group, and accompanied the gift with a check for $1,000.

The Religion of the Pilgrims

Emigration nowadays is seldom an act of religious protest, still more seldom an endeavor to found a more perfect state. Man emigrates now to obtain greater personal opportunity, or in tacit confession of incompetence. . . . A generation fond of pleasure, disinclined toward serious thought and shrinking from hardship will find it difficult to imagine the temper, courage and manliness of the emigrants who made the first Christian settlement of New England. For a man to give up all things and fare forth into savagery in order to escape from the responsibilities of life . . . is common. Giving up all things in order to serve God is a sternness for which prosperity has unfitted us. . . . They were plain men of moderate abilities, who, giving up all things, went to live in the wilds at unknown cost to themselves in order to preserve to their children a life in the soul.—John Masefield, Preface to "The Pilgrim Fathers."

Benevolent Societies

Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D. D., Secretary; Rev. John J. Walker, Associate Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 609 Congregational House, Boston.

Congregational Board of Pastoral Supply, maintained by the Congregational Conferences of the six New England States, offers aid to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies in New England and elsewhere. Congregational House, Boston, Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Secretary, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D. D., Chairman.

Massachusetts Board of Ministerial Aid: Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Zeigler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

The Congregational Church Union of Boston and vicinity (Incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel C. Bushnell, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Fred L. Norton, Sec., 919 Tremont Building, Boston.

Women's Organizations

Woman's Board of Missions, 503 Congregational House, Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

Woman's Board of Missions of the Interior, 19 S. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas., Friday Meeting, 10 a. m.

Woman's Board of Missions for the Pacific, 760 Market St., Room 421, San Francisco. Mrs. Ernest A. Evans, President; Mrs. W. W. Ferrier, Treasurer; Miss E. S. Benton, Secretary.

Congregational Woman's Home Missionary Federation, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Mrs. P. S. Suffern, Treas.; Miss Miriam F. Choate, Sec.

Woman's Home Missionary Association (of Massachusetts and Rhode Island), Mrs. Amos L. Hatheway, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec., 607 Congregational House, Boston.

Boston Seaman's Friend Society

Incorporated 1829

306 Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

President, Samuel Usher; Cor. Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton. A Congregational Society devoted to the material, social and moral welfare of seamen of all nations and supported mainly by the New England churches. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Room at Tarpaulin Cove. Bequests should be made payable to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society. Contributions from churches and individuals solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis.

American Seamen's Friend Society

76 Wall St., New York, Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational National and International Seamen's Society.

Maintains a Sailor's Home and Institute, 507 West Street, New York.

Loan Libraries ($25 each) placed on vessels sailing from New York.

Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.

Publishes the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).

Officers: John B. Calvert, D. D., President; George Sidney Webster, D. D., Secretary. Send contributions to Clarence C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 76 Wall Street, New York.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817.

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps all churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. Carver, Supt.
8 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Connecticut Societies

The Fund for Ministers provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

The Missionary Society of Connecticut, a Constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trusts for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS can reach every principal city and town in the United States through the advertising columns of The Congregationalist and Advance.

For rates and other information write

Kenneth S. Ballou,
Advertising Manager.

National Agencies

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Moderator, Rev. Henry Churchill King, Oberlin, O.
Secretary ad interim, Rev. Edwin D. Eaton, 289 Fourth Ave., New York
Assistant Secretary, Truman J. Spencer, 289 Fourth Ave., New York
Treasurer, Frank F. Moore, 287 Fourth Ave., New York

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon Street, Boston
19 West Jackson Street, Chicago

Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Harry M. Nelson, Treasurer
Vernon M. Schenck, General Sales Manager
A. A. Hagstrom, Western Manager
Kenneth S. Ballou, Advertising Manager

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.

Established by the National Council at Grand Rapids, in 1919

Dr. Lucien C. Warner, Chairman
Rev. Herman F. Swartz, General Secretary
Rev. James E. McConnell, Ass't Secretary
Walter E. Bell, Treasurer
Rev. John Luther Kilbon, Financial Sec'y

Program for the coming year to include Missionary Education, Stewardship, and a Financial Campaign in behalf of our denominational work.

Regional Directors for 1920-21

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont: Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Massachusetts, Rhode Island: Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D. D., 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Connecticut, New York: Rev. Charles E. Burton, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Porto Rico: Rev. George L. Cady, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee: Rev. L. H. Keller, D. D., Central Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Colored Churches of South: Rev. Alfred Lawless, Jr., D. D., 45½ Auburn Ave., Atlanta, Ga.
Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia: Rev. John Luther Kilbon, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska: Rev. Robert W. Gammon, D. D., 19 West Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.
Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota: Rev. William F. English, Jr., Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., and 19 So. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana: Rev. W. W. Scudder, D. D., Fountain and Aubert Sts., St. Louis, Mo.
Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico: Rev. W. J. Minchin, D. D., Guardian Trust Bldg., Denver, Col.
Southern California, Arizona: Rev. George L. Kenngott, Ph.D., 831 So. Hope St., Los Angeles, Cal.
Northern California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Alaska: Rev. H. H. Kelsey, D. D., Phelan Bldg., San Francisco, Cal., and Plymouth Church, Seattle, Wash.

All correspondence relative to the local work of promotion should be addressed to the Director of your Region.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

Conserves the welfare of the ministry by making modest grants to meet the needs of aged ministers, or their widows and children.

Rev. William A. Rice, Secretary
Rev. Charles S. Mills, Associate Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

375 Lexington Ave., New York City

A sound, scientific, contributory system of old-age pensions for the Congregational minister, affording also protection for disability and the defense of his family in case of his untimely death; endowed by the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. William A. Rice, Associate Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

A Permanent Tercentenary Memorial Fund of $5,000,000 held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council, the income used to endow the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers by providing funds to supplement the minister's annual payments toward old age annuities.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, Executive Secretary
Lucius R. Eastman, Chairman Executive Committee

National Societies

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Edward Lincoln Smith

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Wm. E. Strong
Candidate Secretary, Rev. Alden H. Clark
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. Lasalle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast District, Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco
New York Office, 287 Fourth Ave., N. Y.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Rev. William S. Beard, Secretary of Promotion
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Secretary of Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Nineteen self-supporting state organizations are in Federated relations with the National Society. The state Superintendent or Secretary is the official representative of all home mission interests.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. George L. Cady
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee
Corresponding Secretaries
Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis, Associate Secretary
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese and Hindus; in Island Territories of Porto Rico and Hawaii. New work in Southwest taken under instruction of National Council.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

289 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
(Church Extension Boards)
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Rev. Charles H. Richards, Editorial Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. In sixty-six years it has helped to build 4,982 churches and 1,334 parsonages.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Rev. A. E. Holt, Social Service Sec.
Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Missionary Education Sec.
Samuel F. Wilkins, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service and Missionary Education; aids Colleges, Academies, Training Schools, Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities and among immigrants.

THE CONGREGATIONAL COMMISSION ON EVANGELISM

287 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Established by the National Council at Des Moines in 1904.

Rev. William Horace Day, Chairman
Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, Executive Secretary

Promotes an all-the-year-around program of church work to enlist men in the worship and service of the church and provides helps for the use of pastors and churches.

Record Books for Church and Church School

For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Superintendent, the Secretary. Roll Books, Class Books, Collection Envelopes.

ASK FOR CATALOGUES

14 Beacon Street
Boston

THE PILGRIM PRESS

19 W. Jackson St.
Chicago

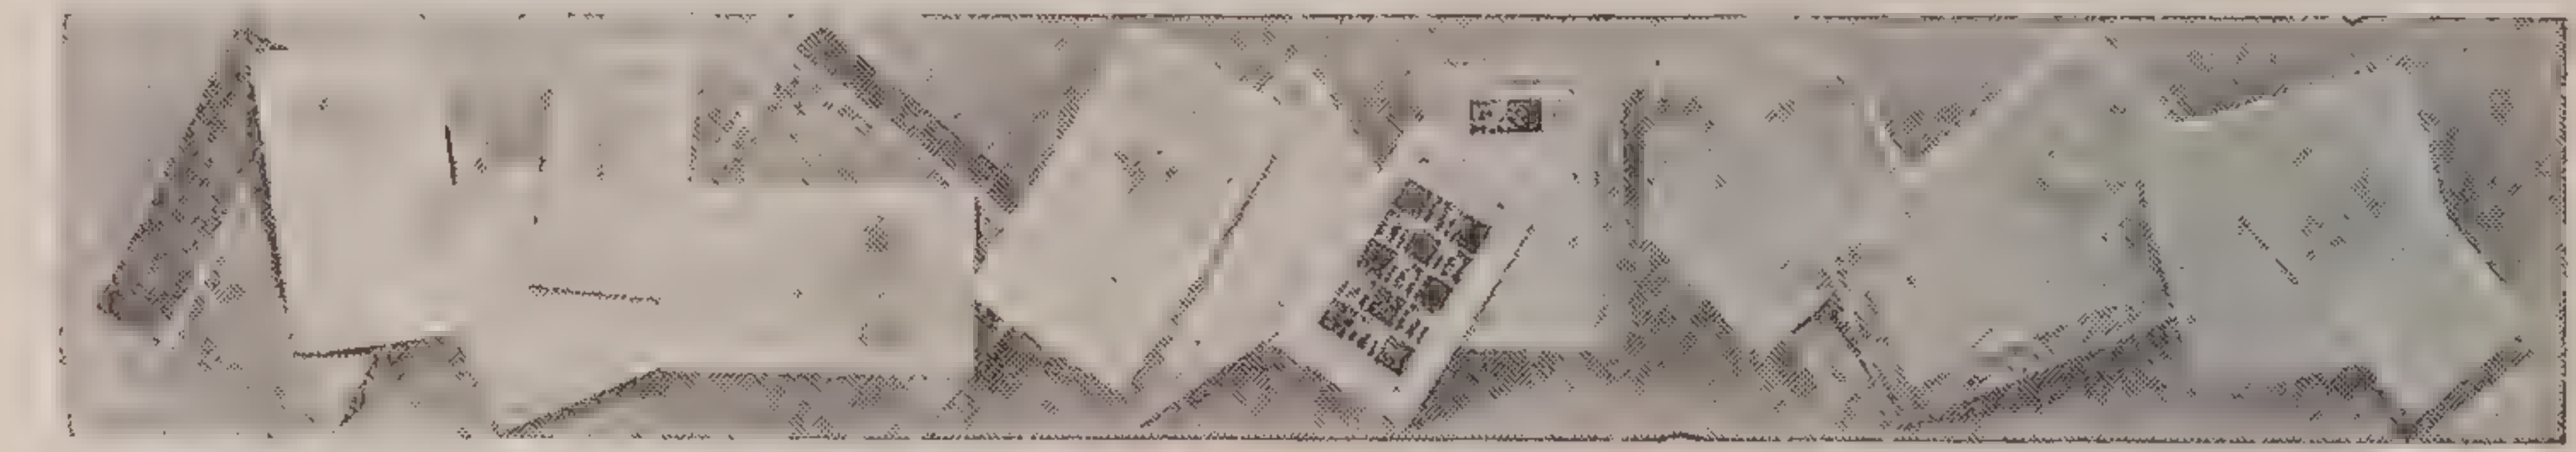
For Father or Mother, Uncle and Aunt

It's a problem sometimes to know just what to buy for father's Christmas, in particular, and ofttimes young folks are perplexed as to what will please the other "old folks."

For 35 Cents

Postage 3 cents

THESE BOOKLETS CANNOT BE EQUALLED



The Unique Envelope Series of Little Gift Books

Harmoniously printed in two colors, each with border decoration of distinct and effective design. The covers are in art papers, double folded. Each enclosed in an envelope uniform with the covers. Size 4¾ x 7¾ in. 35 cents, postage 3 cents.

Abram's Freedom	Edna Turpin
By the Still Waters	J. R. Miller
Charm of the Impossible	Margaret Slattery
Closet and Altar	Isaac Ogden Rankin
Crossing the Bar	George A. Gordon
Deacon's Week, The	Rose Terry Cooke
Face Angelic, The	Hiram Collins Hayden
Fealty to the Ideal	George A. Gordon
Genius of the Pilgrim	George A. Gordon
Girls, Faults and Ideals	O. S. Marden
Growth	Henry Churchill King
Joy and Power	Henry van Dyke
Land of Pure Delight, The	George A. Gordon
Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled	Raymond Calkins
Letter to the Rising Generation, A	Cornelia A. O. Comer
Little David of Smyrna	Wm. Allen Knight
Love's Song of Life	C. B. Patterson
Loving Father, The	Ambrose W. Vernon
Man's Faith, A	Wilfred T. Grenfell
Mission of the Prophet, The	George A. Gordon
Mystery of Peace, The	George T. Smart
On the Trail of the Blossoming Desert	Mary Louise Daniels
Practice of Immortality, The	Washington Gladden
Quest for Health and Happiness, The	Chauncey J. Hawkins
Resurrection of a Soul, The	Bruce Barton
Sermon on the Mount, The	J. Edgar Park
Ships and Havens	Henry van Dyke
Song of Our Syrian Guest, The	Wm. Allen Knight
Spirit of Truth, The	George A. Gordon
Story of the Child That Jesus Took, The	Newman Smyth
Thorn Tree That Blossomed at Christmas, The	Oliver Huckel
Thoughts About Good Cheer	O. S. Marden
Together in the Heavenly Home	Jason Noble Pierce
Valley of Troubling, The	Grace Duffield Goodwin
Victorious Surrender, The	Henry Turner Bailey
Vision of the Dead, The	George A. Gordon
What is Success?	Walter Taylor Field
What Will You Do with Jesus Christ?	Wilfred T. Grenfell
When Little Souls Awake	Henry Turner Bailey
Whence Cometh Help	John W. Buckham
Where Love Is	Leo N. Tolstoi
Why I Belive in Immortality	F. M. Sheldon
Woman's Hope, A	Alice Freeman Firman
Young Men, Faults and Ideals	O. S. Marden

THE GOSPEL IN ART

By ALBERT E. BAILEY

One of the most beautiful books on religious art ever published.

120 beautiful half-tone reproductions of paintings of the Great Masters on the Life of Christ, arranged in biographical sequence, and two pictures in their original colors. $4.50, postage 15 cents.

THE WISE MAN'S STORY

By Albert E. Bailey

An unusual Christmas tale told by one of the Magi. Beautiful half-tones show the magic equipment of an Eastern astrologer. A fascinating gift-book. Illustrated. 50 cents, postage 7 cents.

ON NAZARETH HILL

By Albert E. Bailey

This book about Palestine is Different.

It is not a record of travel, yet every one who is interested in Palestine will want to read it. An admirable Christmas Gift for any one. 23 full-page illustrations and outline map in two colors, Price $1.00 net, postage 10 cents.

THE WIT AND WISDOM OF SAFED THE SAGE

The long winter evenings are ahead of us and many firesides will be enlivened and incidentally edified in the reading of these bright, crisp bits of philosophy.

One Dollar

with ten cents for postage is all we require in return for this cheer-spreading book.

THE CROWDED INN

By John M. Foster

Here is a Christmas Story Worth While

An attractive allegory of the birth of Christ which was first presented by the author to his congregation in the Church of the Messiah, Boston, as a Christmas service. It shows the forces which crowd Christ out of human life. Attractively printed and bound in paper. 50 cents, postage 3 cents.

CHRISTMAS CANDY BOXES AND OFFERING ENVELOPES

Order early, and name a second choice in case the one you select has been sold.

No. 1. "Electric" Candy Box

A unique design, with holly and outlined flowers to represent electricity. ½-lb. size. $2.50 a hundred, not prepaid. (Weight 4 lbs. a hundred.)

No. 2. "Knickerbocker" Candy Box

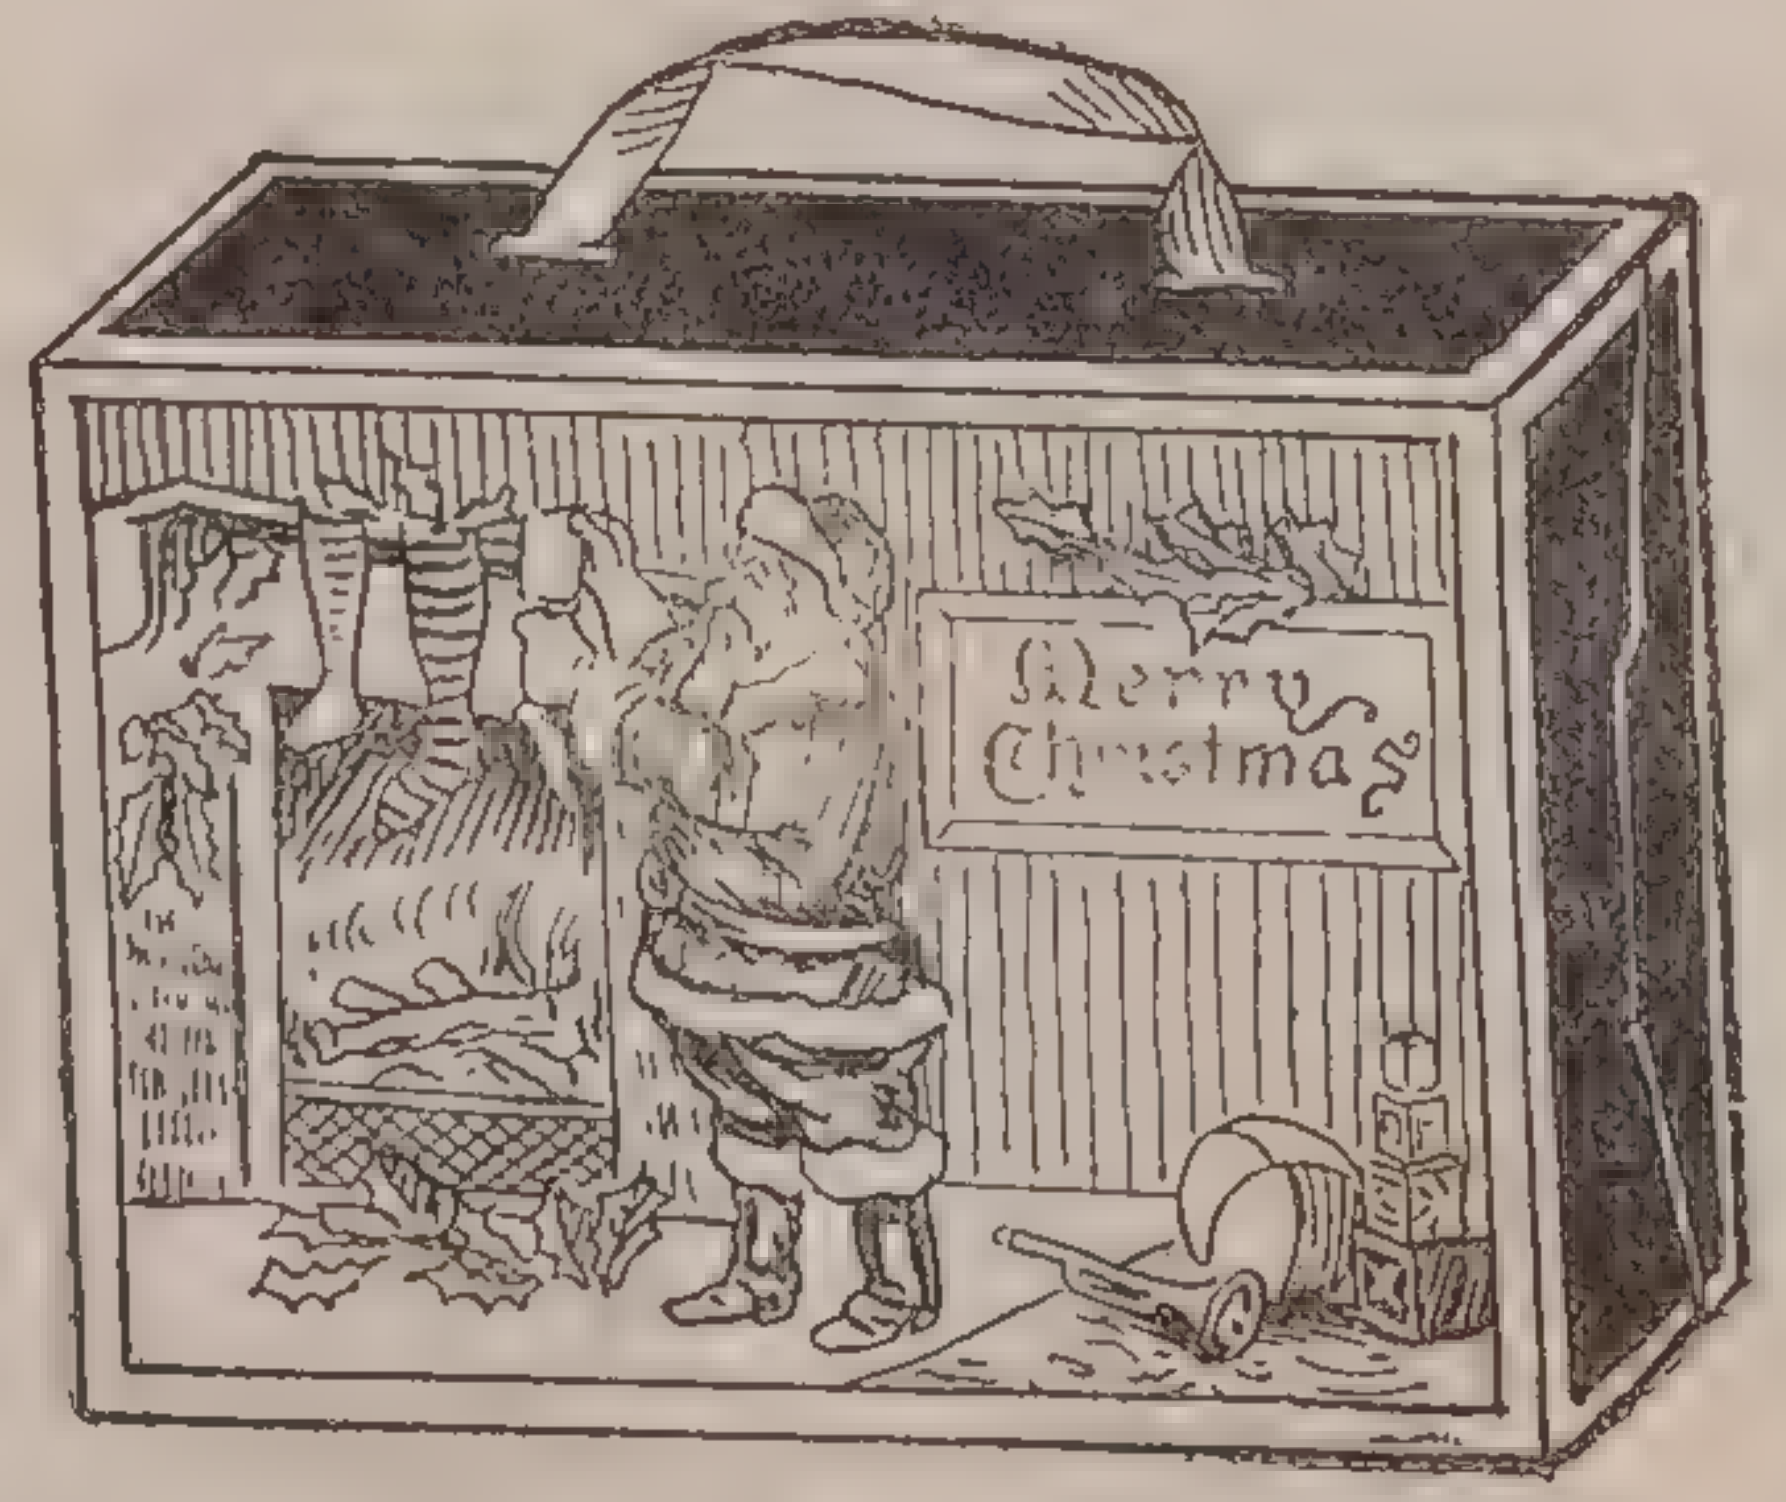
Two little Dutch children waiting for clock to strike 12 M. ½-lb. size. $2.50 a hundred, not prepaid. (Weight 4 lbs. a hundred.)

No. 3. "Brick" Candy Box,

a box always in demand for building chimneys and fireplaces. ½-lb size. $2.25 a hundred, not prepaid. (Weight 4 lbs. a hundred.)

No. 4. "Tile" Candy Box

Similar to the above style, only the sides of each brick represent a number of bricks instead of one. ½-lb. size. $2.50 a hundred, not prepaid. (Weight 4 lbs. a hundred.)



No. 3

No. 5. "Blizzard" Candy Box

Santa Claus among snow-covered hills. ½-lb. size. $2.50 a hundred, not prepaid. (Weight 4 lbs. a hundred.)

No. 6. "Holly" Candy Box

A very attractive design, combining sprays of holly with large red poinsettias. ½-lb. size. $3.00 a hundred, not prepaid. (Weight 4 lbs. a hundred.)

No. 7. "Reindeer" Candy Box

This box is in the Christmas colors, red and green, and pictures a little child reaching into his stocking for the gifts left by Santa Claus, while Santa himself is shown driving his reindeer over the snow on his annual joy-bringing journey. ½-lb. size. $3.00 a hundred, not prepaid. (Weight 4 lbs. a hundred.)

14 BEACON STREET
BOSTON

THE PILGRIM PRESS BOOKSHOP

19 W. JACKSON STREET
CHICAGO

The Congregationalist and Advance

Vol. CV. No. 53

December 30, 1920

CENTRAL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, DALLAS, TEX.
Dedicated October 31, 1920
In our series of Notable Church Edifices

THE GREAT DAY AT PLYMOUTH, by Charles P. Marshall

SNAGS AND SUNRISE, A New Year's Story, by Kathryn Culver Bradley

THE GREAT NEEDS OF A GREAT RACE

Twelve Millions of People Cry for Opportunity

Have you read the two preceding issues of this paper? Then you begin to know much of

HOWARD UNIVERSITY

HOWARD is not a Government School. Unclé Sam gives a small donation each year. Uncle Sam owes the colored race millions. He pays the Indians many millions each year. He ought to do so. But he should pay at least a part of his debt to the colored people. I think he is coming to the mental and spiritual attitude which demands educational justice to this race. But white philanthropy must now give at least a portion of its gifts to this great colored race.

Give it to their School of the Prophets; their University, where the future leaders are being trained; their University that now must turn away hungry, eager, ambitious young men and women, for lack of means, while great white schools have their millions and live in plenty.

Did you ask if the race is capable of receiving higher education?	Did you ask if the students are ambitious and have real stamina?
One visit to Howard and never would you ask such a question again.	I could tell you stories by the hour of their heroic struggles.

A young man came to the President asking for assistance in securing a job at the Government Printing Office. After a little sympathetic approach, this was the need. The young man was supporting a mother and family of five little children while he was putting himself through the college of liberal arts at Howard University. He is finishing this year with all that awful load upon his shoulders and on his heart.

Is that stamina?

A position was offered from one of the hotels of the city. It was night work, answering telephone, blacking shoes of guests, etc., etc. The prize man in our School of Religion said—"Give me that job, please. It will help me earn my way through." Will those who listen to that young man preach the Gospel dream of the price he has paid for an education?

Is that consecration?

A young man was taken to the hospital from the Medical School. He died. An investigation was made. It was found that he had been living for months on stale bread that he might succeed in finishing his course. Another student said—"But he was not careful of his diet. I had pork and beans for dinner, beans and pork for supper, and next morning I had bean soup for I washed out the can."

Is that pluck?

Howard felt the woe and weight of the war. One of her girls is a war widow. She receives so much per month from the Government. She uses that money to put herself and her sister through college.

These stories are told in a word, but they represent the struggle, the striving, the hunger of uncounted thousands of the colored race.

Yes, they have stamina. They put to shame vast numbers of white students.

Have I stated my case clearly? Do you hear the voiceless pleading? Can you see the yearning faces?

Can you hear the Master say—"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me"?

If so, send gifts (and tell how you would have those gifts used) to

J. STANLEY DURKEE, President, or to EMMETT J. SCOTT, Secretary-Treasurer,
Howard University, Washington, D. C.

The Congregationalist and Advance

December 30, 1920

Volume CV. Number 53

Copyright, 1920
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

CONTENTS

FINE NEW PLANT FOR DALLAS CHURCH 842
THE YEAR OF OUR LORD, 1920 845
EDITORIAL—LODGE VERSUS WEBSTER 846
SAVE THE STARVING
THE PARABLE OF THE MAN WHO HAD PLENTY OF TIME
ALONG OUR STREAM OF FREEDOM 849
THE STATUS OF OUR MINISTRY 849
FROM OUR GOLDEN GATE WINDOW 849
AN OUTSTANDING NEW BOOK 850
THE INTERPRETER 850
WHAT THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IS DOING 851
SNAGS AND SUNRISE, by Kathryn Culver Bradley 852
MEETING THE 1921 APPORTIONMENT, by James E. McConnell 853
THE GREAT DAY AT PLYMOUTH, by Charles P. Marshall 854
MAKE YOUR BOOKS WORK, by Raymond A. Beardslee 856
THE WAY ONE COLLEGE IS DOING IT 857
OUR PILGRIM PULPIT—THE CHRIST OF THE FUTURE, by Frank Dyer 857
WITH THE CHILDREN—CONSTANTA'S PLAN, by Pauline Carrington Bouvé 858
AMONG THE NEW BOOKS 859
IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL—DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS—MAKING THE BIBLE A LIVING BOOK 860
THE HERRING MEMORIAL FUND 861
THE HOUR OF PRAYER—COMMENT ON MIDWEEK AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR PRAYER MEETING TOPICS—CLOSET AND ALTAR 862
IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE—CHURCH NEWS 863

Editor-in-Chief, REV. HOWARD A. BRIDGMAN, D. D.
Managing Editor, ROLFE COBLEIGH
Associate Editor, REV. ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN
Western Editor, REV. R. W. GAMMON, D. D. (Chicago)
Literary Editor, REV. PARRIS T. FARWELL
News Editor, MISS ELIZABETH G. WHITE
Contributing Editor, REV. WILLIAM E. BARTON, D. D.
Advertising Manager, KENNETH S. BALLOU
Circulation Manager, MISS ETHEL M. WENTWORTH

The Congregationalist and Advance succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Congregationalist, 1849; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday, by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions are discontinued on date of expiration, appearing on the address label of the paper. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to The Congregationalist and Advance, and will be acknowledged by a change of date on the label. Receipt will be sent if two-cent stamp is enclosed with remittance. In renewing do not fail to send exact address as on label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses must be sent in and be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies may be obtained at the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Subscription correspondence may be directed to The Congregationalist and Advance, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 West Jackson Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Talk of the Sanctum

"An Outstanding New Book"

Under this title it is our purpose, from time to time, to review at some length a current book which in our judgment is of special moment to our particular household of readers. The inexorable space limitations of our distinctively Literary Department, which necessarily ranges over a wide field, usually prevents extended notice of any one book. In order to supplement this page which we have reason to know our readers find helpful in their choice of new books, we institute this new feature, starting out this week with a review of Dr. Cadman's "Ambassadors of God."

A Correction

Unintentionally in our editorial comment last week on the article by William E. Sweet of Denver on Why I Gave Up Business, we misrepresented Mr. Sweet's partner, Mr. Causey, when we said that he also had retired from business, influenced by similar considerations. Naturally the firm to which they both belong is undergoing some change, but Mr. Causey is still to remain in business, and it should be understood that he and Mr. Sweet are in thorough accord as to the general principles on which they believe modern business should be done.

We again express the hope that this unusual article by Mr. Sweet will call forth comment of other men who have been or are concerned with setting standards of modern business.

In Our Circulation Department—

We wish you a Happy New Year. And we are going to do our part to make the New Year a happy and helpful one for our ever growing and goodly fellowship of readers. We have a strong and attractive array of features for the immediate future and we hope to make The Congregationalist better and more helpful than ever in 1921. We hope to help to deepen the spiritual life, to inspire and give practical help in the life of the home and church and community. Loyal friends among the gifted writers are coming forward with their best efforts for us all.

Be sure to renew your subscription promptly that you may not lose a single issue, and remember that Uncle Sam makes us stop papers as soon as the time for which they are paid is up. And pass along the word to your neighbors and friends that now is the time to subscribe. You and they need The Congregationalist and we need you and them.

The New Year will be happier for all of us if we are all helping each other.

From Far-Away Australia

I should like to take this opportunity of paying a tribute to that great religious organ, your Congregationalist. I am a subscriber to the paper and regularly read it through each week. We in Australia are no strangers to it. A copy is always on the table of our largely frequented Congregational Reading Room in Melbourne.

Melbourne, Australia. REV. A. R. STEPHENSON.

From Our Mail Bag

I cannot too highly commend your editorial in The Congregationalist of Nov. 4, "The Layman's Witness." It ought to do good. Our Committee on Evangelism is conducting a campaign which endeavors to interest laymen by direct appeals. Of course we do it in co-operation with the ministers. I also commend, "Is Preaching Futile?" It has the right ring and I shall mark it for future reference. C. T. P.

Concord, N. H.

BEGINNING THE NEW YEAR

The Congregationalist and Advance

will have features of special interest to our readers. They comprise the best thoughts of men and women who have inspiring, informing and interesting stories to tell us.

We mention here but a few to suggest the variety and general character of the good things that are coming in the near future. Many more are to follow through the year.

The Church That Walks Like a Business Man	George Lawrence Parker
Being a Minister's Wife	Mrs. J. R. Wilkie
British Industry	Sherwood Eddy
The Unchanging Unit	The late Hubert C. Herring
Our Infirmities in Prayer	Dr. J. H. Jowett
Unique Community Work	Frank T. Lee
Italy and the Social Revolution	Henry A. Atkinson
Ye Shall Dwell in the Land (A Pageant)	Wm. E. Barton

Inspiring Short Sermons
Successful Church Methods
Women's Interests
News of the Churches
Timely Editorials
Dr. Davis' Bible Class
Children's Stories
The Christian World

Week by week a treat of inspiring articles

$3.00 per Year
$2.75 to Church Clubs and Ministers

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

14 Beacon Street
BOSTON

19 W. Jackson Street
CHICAGO

The Congregationalist
and Advance

The Year of Our Lord, 1920

The year ends, and the New Year opens, in a time of trouble and uncertainty, of "distress of nations, with perplexity—men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." It is the time of the inevitable aftermath of a great war, the bringing home of trouble, the demand for the payment of debts, of temptation to greed and profiteering, of the collapse of speculation, of too often distressful readjustment, of the apparent eclipse of hopes for good which were cherished through the unchaining here and there of the worst features of human nature, as in the waves of crime which at the moment seem to be sweeping over our great cities, the shambles in Ireland, the world-wide passion of unrest. It is a time, that is, for faith and work and good will among all those who are assured that God reigns and that his plans for the future both demand our assistance and cannot in the long run fail.

Some of the great events or signs of the times in the past year are these:

1. The Real Beginning of Social and Economical Rehabilitation After the Strain of War.

Everywhere in the nations that took part in the war the enormous expenses of modern scientific fighting were largely met by the inflation of the currency. We who in proportion to our strength did perhaps least of this enforced borrowing see the effects of it in a more than double cost of everything we buy and a vast increase not only in taxes but in governmental extravagance. Our legislators have largely lost the sense of the value and the source of money and talk in sums of billions, or at least of tens and hundreds of millions. The legislator forgets that he is planning for the paying out of other people's money. The ear and eye are wonted to reckless extravagance and we all suffer together. Men have bought goods and entered into contracts at prices which they can no longer recover at the prices for which they must sell the goods. Farmers have stored their crops in the hope of a better return than the market now affords. There is a clamor for measures of relief by shifting the load to the shoulders of the taxpayer through governmental intervention, so postponing the day of reckoning and retaining the complaint of high prices to the consumer. The period in which the year ends will be known in history as the period of cutting down of debts and prices, a time of unemployment, which might be vastly worse than it is, and of financial strain for everybody which might easily have ended in panic and widespread ruin, followed by despairing and unconsidered social changes.

If we feel the pinch of this process of cutting down of inflated values in the United States, it is immeasurably worse in many other lands. Measured by the value of the gold dollar of our currency, the British paper pound sterling, the French franc and vastly more the German mark and Austrian krone, have tumbled down toward worthlessness. The Austrian coin of standard is nominally the equivalent of twenty cents, but in Vienna nowadays one buys a breakfast with thousands of kronen. In Russia the printing press has been used so constantly that the paper currency has ceased to be current except in great nominal sums for petty and local exchanges. The process of getting back to a gold basis which older readers will remember after our War for the Union is one which engages all the nations of the world at present. It is painful but salutary and there are hopeful signs of progress in most of the nations even in the war-afflicted zone.

2. A New Experiment of Co-operative Internationalism in the Assembling of the League of Nations.

The first session of the League adjourned Dec. 18. That it could meet and organize and debate and act, both in special cases and for the general regulation of the relations of its members, is in itself a new mark of attainment in world history. The preliminary arrangements proved efficient. There was a healthy expression of differences of opinion in debate. The clashing and discordant claims of legislative and executive authority in the Council, which was meant to express the authority of the constituting Powers, and the Assembly, in which spoke the voice of all the leagued nations, did not pass the limits of claim and counter-claim and was met by a wise refusal to act upon proposals of amendment at the initial session. The replacement in the Council of Greece by China, Dr. Wellington Koo taking the place which Venizelos had left open, still further emphasizes the world-wide jurisdiction which the League claims for itself. The withdrawal of the representative of Argentina, already partly repented of, represents the policy of an autocratic president rather than the action of the Argentine people.

In international relations, then, as the new year opens, the initially successful existence of the League is the important fact which must be reckoned with. The nine points of possession are in the hands of the existing League. We do not see how any program of a fresh start can displace that start in international relations which has been already made. And this is all the more true because not only have such enemy Powers as Austria and Bulgaria been admitted as members of the League, but also because the membership of the League is already world wide and the small peoples have found it a satisfactory medium of self-expression. The part taken in the meetings of the Assembly at Geneva by representatives from South America, South Africa, Canada, and the smaller European states shows that the lesser nations are not only articulate but also capable of coalitions and will demand a hearing. Leadership, but not domination, seems to be the part reserved in the practical working of the League for the Great Powers. This first meeting of the League and its manifested achievement and hopeful tendencies must make the ended year a landmark in the story of humanity.

3. The Final Decision of the World that Russia Must be Allowed to Work Out Her Own Problems in Her Own Way.

For the first time since August, 1914, the head of the army in Russia is able to proclaim at the close of the year that there is peace on all the borders. Had it not been for the declared and reiterated purpose of the leaders of the Russian government to incite revolution all over the world, the withdrawal of aid for Russian revolt would have come long ago. The world has learned, we think, that outside meddling only confirms the government in authority in its control. For Russians soon become a unit in refusal of outside dictation. What form the reconstruction of Russia will ultimately take it is impossible to guess at this stage of the game. Russia, broadly speaking, is a nation of peasants and is even more so by the reduction to obedience or exile of what is left of its educated classes. The most that can now be said is that Russia seems likely for a long time to be outside the European circle of nations. The total collapse of its finances, the lack of value for its inflated currency, the isolation of the peasant communities are not elements conducive to trade or confidence. But the world has made up its mind, barring the bursting forth of Russian armies over the borders of Poland and Roumania next spring, to let the Russians alone. That is one of the great events or conclusions of 1920. Its result in history 1921 may at least begin to show.

4. The Revivification of Turkey and the Ruin of Armenia.

At the time of the armistice Turkey was the one completely and utterly defeated nation. It would then have been possible by quick and decisive action to settle the Turkish question once for all and to give new life to the Armenian people. At the end of the present year the leader of the Turkish Nationalists is demanding as the price of peace the retrocession, subject to a popular vote, of Thrace to Turkey, and the departure, bag and baggage, of Greece from Smyrna and its neighborhood. European selfishness, shortsightedness and lack of decision seem to have reawakened the fallen Turkish pride and self-consciousness. Great Britain is occupied elsewhere. France is eager to secure her dominance in Syria by giving the Turkish Nationalists what they want. The Greek army is weary of war, the Greek finances exhausted, Venizelos, their one capable and trusted statesman, is in exile. Can Constantine hold back the Turkish forces and rescue the threatened Greek communities around Smyrna? For the triumph of the Turkish Nationalists will mean the massacre of the Asiatic Greeks, as it has meant a renewed massacre of the Armenians. Divided, selfish, and dilatory counsels have put this burden back upon the neck of the world.

5. Continued Unsettlement in Industrial Relations.

In Great Britain, in France, and Italy, in the United States, and other countries the process of adjustment involving the relations of owners, employees and the general public has gone on, but is far from having reached its termination. In England the coal strike seemed to come close to the verge of revolution, so that the government made full plans to guard against public suffering and starvation in case of a strike which would seek to stop the wheels of all industry. In Italy the striking workmen took possession of the factories until a compromise was reached. In Germany there have been strikes put down by the strong hand. In Ireland, until recently railroad men in a large part of the island refused to do their work with trains that carried either munitions or soldiers and police in the direct interest of the revolution. In the United States that economic and industrial debate has run through the year, while the demand for better pay has only died down as the slowing down of factories through refusal or cancellation of orders has raised the menacing specter of wide unemployment. The great coal strike in England turned at last on a question of an increase of pay proportionate to larger production. On the whole the experiences of the year, involving voluntary acceptance of reduction in pay in many cases to keep the factories at work, have brought to the front the common interest of all the people in continuous production and the necessity of considering the risks of management and of unemployment.

6. The Decision on Governmental Method and Responsibility in the United States.

All the world was in an unusual degree attentive to the great debate of the presidential election in the United States. But as the smoke clears away it becomes increasingly evident that the real issue decided by the voters of the United States was not that of the League of Nations—much less of the promises the President may have made or hinted at in the Peace Conference of direct help by military assistance or financial allowance to our allies—but of a redetermination and settlement of theory and practice in our governmental system. The President's theory was that the executive head of our government is also to a certain extent a dictator as well as counselor in legislative action, and also a premier and party leader. He had expressed that theory in print before he came to the presidency. He acted upon it consistently, taking the gravest steps of committal without consulting either the people or their representatives. It was this theory of presidential authority which the people passed upon, and it stands condemned by a great popular majority.

The ended year becomes, therefore, an epoch in the constitutional history of the United States and also in the history of our foreign relations. It is, we are sure, the will and purpose of our people to be helpful in their dealings with all the world and to do their full part in an effective association of the nations. A larger majority than was given to the Republican candidates, we are sure, is of that mind. But we have no single man, not even the executive head of our state, who can commit us by his single voice to any definite course of international action. Our constitutional processes, with their clear distinction of functions and points of shared responsibility and co-operation, must be taken into account abroad as well as at home. This may slow down our international efficiency, but at least we shall get somewhere and not be stalled upon the road.

These are a part of the happenings and tendencies of the time. We might speak of other tendencies which are showing. In the sphere of morals, like all the rest of the world, we are suffering from a wave of crime, a laxity of conscience, an insensitive allowance of violence which is one of the teachings of war. In the sphere of religion the year has seen certain great movements which tend toward the recognition of our common responsibility as members of the Holy Universal Church of Christ. Such an overture of appeal as that put forth by the assembled bishops of the Anglican Church and its daughters at Lambeth has caused heart searchings in many quarters. There are movements of church reunion or coming together in Scotland, in India, in Canada, in Australia, as well as in America, some of which promise important results. In this matter the atmosphere is changed. In place of criticism and controversy we have desire and effort and consideration for the beliefs of others. Our communions are getting together and working together. The vast endeavors for the feeding of the children of stricken Europe, the hungry of the Near East, the starving provinces of China, have turned our thoughts from debate to co-operation. There is a growing sense that the Church must show itself a body of people with a message for the needs of the world, a call to repentance and a life of justice, mercy, and brotherhood. May God raise up leaders for us who shall show the forward way and that there may be long steps forward in the days of the coming year!

A Word for Our Times

The little band of humble men, who landed in wintry weather on the bleak Plymouth coast, planted among you those principles of ordered freedom and self-government which have spread from ocean to ocean and become a beacon light to the nations of two worlds. Your whole history is a witness to their powers. The common faith of the American and the English peoples in those principles—I speak of peoples not of governments, for governments sometimes misrepresent their peoples and make them misjudged—the common devotion of these peoples to the same ideals of justice and liberty as the foundation of peace, mark them out as specially called to stand side by side in trying to rescue the world from the abyss of calamity into which the war has plunged it. In the cordial co-operation of these two peoples, animated by the same high traditions, lies the best hope for the future peace of the world. —VISCOUNT JAMES BRYCE.

In response to an invitation from the Colonial Society of Massachusetts to attend the Tercentenary.

Lodge versus Webster

It was fitting that Senator Lodge should have been the orator of the day at the celebration in Plymouth of the Tercentenary. He is New England born and combines, as perhaps does no other living New Englander, the gifts of the orator with the tastes and achievements of the scholar. At Plymouth last week he did not disappoint popular expectations. In the vividness with which the oration delineated pivotal events connected with the Pilgrim migration, in the freshness of its point of view, in the aptness of its literary allusions, in its keen analyses of present-day conditions and in the charm and finish of its style it justified the speaker's right to stand in the great succession of Plymouth orators which has included such men as Robert C. Winthrop, Charles Sumner, and Daniel Webster.

It was the latter's address at the two hundredth anniversary of the Landing around which Mr. Lodge built the later portions of his address. He paid high tribute to it and quoted extensively from its famous peroration, but went on to say that Webster, representing the dominant optimism of the nineteenth century, failed to draw a distinction between the general recognition of the historic fact of progress and the idea of progress as a law governing humanity and constantly operating. Mr. Lodge admitted that material progress in the nineteenth century went far beyond anything which Webster predicted, along with a movement of altruism, the beneficence of which was far reaching, uprooting slavery, liberating Italy, and bringing constitutional government to many countries. But Senator Lodge would deprecate too great reliance on progress as a constantly operating law. He does not think it is clear that we surpass our ancestors in brains, though we do in knowledge. The war shattered many hopes and dreams and revealed primitive man "lurking behind the demure figure of nineteenth century respectability," and particularly active in that country—Germany—which carried her materialistic conceptions to the highest point of perfection.

As he neared his peroration Senator Lodge declared that our exhausted and prostrate world breeds pessimism over a wide area, and in its trouble and desolation needs to recall the men of the Mayflower, their unfailing courage when the clouds hung low, their active sense of public duty, their willingness to sacrifice each a part of his own liberty that all might be free, and the primary object of their quest, which was religious freedom.

To the Pilgrims Webster's idea of the law of progress was unknown. They faced the world as they found it, and did their best. That would seem to be, according to Senator Lodge, the best point of approach to our imitation of the fathers, maintaining also their clear discrimination between moral and economic values and always, like them, setting character first.

Senator Lodge paused at this point, just when some of us wish he might have struck a more decided note of cheer and leadership. Undoubtedly he went as far as he conscientiously could. The difference between the Webster commemorative address and that of Mr. Lodge is partly a difference in the age of the respective orators. Webster was thirty-eight; Mr. Lodge is seventy. Another difference arises from the lapse of one hundred years, and the production during that period of an entirely new situation in the life of the world. Perhaps, also, the absence from Senator Lodge's address of the confident, forward-looking note so marked in all that Webster said, may be due to some extent to their differing temperaments and religious outlook. Webster was allied with the standing orthodox order of New England and accepted, probably without much questioning, the doctrine of the steadily working and ultimately triumphant purposes of God. Mr. Lodge, like many a thoughtful man, viewing a world "wracked with war and crime," to quote one of President Briggs' effective lines at Plymouth, shrinks from dogmatic affirmations that tomorrow is sure to be better than today. To do that requires an ardent and deep-going Christian faith.

There will be many who will sympathize with Senator Lodge's reticence on this point. Many others will rejoice that two of the orators at Plymouth last week, Governor Coolidge in his wonderful tribute to the spiritual vision of the Pilgrims, and Dr. J. L. Barton, in his sermon emphasizing the broader internationalism that must come to pass unless the Pilgrims lived in vain, fixed public thought upon those eternal verities which lie at the center of God's moral government of the universe and of God's gracious purposes in Jesus Christ for our human race.

* *

All this combination for special and hidden profits in building and building materials took place in a time when rents were coming down and there were vacant houses in every street! Not a bit of it! It went on just at the time when hundreds of families could not find a roof to shelter them for love or money. For that is the nature of the profiteering beast.

Save the Starving

Never in modern times have so many people been starving as at the present time. Unless the favored people come forward quickly and generously millions of men, women, and children are sure to die of hunger this winter.

Three great areas are in extreme distress—Europe, the Near East, and China. Separate organizations are engaged in relief work for these three areas. Our hearts are sure to be touched and our purses will open to the urgent appeals of Herbert Hoover, who is in charge of the work of saving the children of Europe. It is estimated that between three and four million children must be cared for this winter by charity, and that charity must come largely from the United States, if these children are to be saved. Mr. Hoover is trying to raise $23,000,000 for this work. Contributions may be sent to American Relief Administration, 42 Broadway, New York city.

A large part of what was formerly known as Asiatic Turkey is still in extreme distress and hundreds of thousands are threatened with starvation this winter. The territory affected includes all Asia Minor, with Koordistan, and both Turkish and Russian Armenia. The only relief organization operating there is the Near East Relief, of which Dr. James L. Barton of our American Board is chairman. Over a hundred thousand orphans are under its care, more than half of whom are absolutely depending upon the Near East Relief for food, clothing, and care. The care of these orphans and the hospital relief and welfare work imperatively needed in the Near East will, at the very lowest estimate, cost between fourteen and fifteen million dollars. These sufferers include the Armenians who still survive the persistent attempts of the Turks to exterminate the whole race, and other Christians who have nowhere else to turn for help except the Near East Relief. Its ministrations have been wonderfully effective and will continue up to the limit of the resources which come to it from generous Americans. Contributions to this cause may be sent to Cleveland H. Dodge, 1 Madison Ave., New York city.

In far off China a large area of the northern part of the country is stricken with famine. Between thirty and forty millions of people are literally starving to death at the present time. Following two years of floods and a drought year in which the crops were almost a failure has come this second year of drought, with an absolute failure of crops in the extensive and thickly populated districts where distress is greatest.

Many millions of dollars will be required to give the help that China needs this winter. America is the one country in all the world that is able to save the starving Chinese. However quickly and generously we act, we are already too late to save many thousands who have died and are now dying. For this cause we may give through our American Board of Foreign Missions and all money sent to the Board for this purpose will be sent directly to China, to be used by the Board's own missionaries, who are working in the famine districts.

Whatever other causes may command our generosity, we can hardly fail to respond to the great need of these stricken peoples. Even though our gifts may have to be small, we should remember that every dollar is a substantial help. To be most effective our money should be given quickly.

The Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Man Who Had Plenty of Time

A certain man essayed to go unto New Orleans; for he said, It is now Winter, and I prefer to take my exercise with the Fishing Pole and the Golf Club and not with the Snow Shovel.

So he arranged his Business, which was not very Brisk just then; and he bought for himself a Ticket and a Berth upon a Sleeping Car. And he said unto all his friends,

Me for the Balmy Breezes of the Gulf, with Tarpon Fishing and Magnolia Blossoms and a side trip to Cuba, and maybe a Look-in at the Big Ditch at Panama. Now, therefore, this Wintry Clime shall know me no more until after the Mardi Gras, and I will return with the Flowers that Bloom in the Spring, tra-la.

And on the Appointed Day he arrived early at the Station with his Ticket in his Pocket; for he said, I like to have Plenty of Time.

And his Train, which was called the Panama Limited, had not yet Backed In to the Station; for it was more than the half of an hour before the time of the Train to leave.

And he said, I will buy a Magazine, and I will sit and read; for it is Great to have Plenty of Time.

Now about the time he got going in his Magazine, a Man shouted through a Megaphone, saying:

E-e-e-e-elinois Central, Panama Limited Train for Cairo, Paducah, Memphis, Vicksburg and N'Orleans, now ready on Track Number Six.

And the Man with the Magazine looked up from his Magazine to the Clock, and said, I have my Reservations, and I have my Tickets, and the Light here is good, and this story is a Corker, and I will not hurry. I have Plenty of Time.

And the Man with the Megaphone called a second time, and said the same words. But the Man with the Magazine said within himself,

It is a Long Ride to New Orleans, and I shall weary of the Train. I will remain here for a Little Space. I have Plenty of Time.

And the Man with the Megaphone called yet a third time. But the Man with the Magazine was at an Interesting Place in his Story, and he had grown accustomed to the Noises of the Station, and he looked not up, neither did he hear. And the Great Big Clock was moving slowly but surely on.

And he came to the end of his Story, and he rolled his Magazine and put it in the Pocket of his Overcoat. And he said,

I may as well go on board.

And he picked up his Bag and moved toward the Gate. And as he walked he glanced up at the Clock. And the Cold Sweat started upon him. And he rushed to the Gate in time to behold the Tail Lights of the Panama Limited disappearing in the Dim Distance.

And he Swore at the Man at the Gate; and he said,

Let me through, for I must catch the Panama Limited.

And the Man at the Gate answered him, saying,

Thou mayest catch the Panama Limited tomorrow or the day thereafter. Swear not, for thou hast Plenty of Time.

Now when I beheld this, I considered the case of certain men whom I know as I meet them on the Journey of Life. For they behold the Arrival and Departure of Opportunity, and it disturbeth them not. And there are kind words which they ought to say, and loving deeds they ought to do, and noble habits they ought to begin. And the Angel of Time shouteth through the Megaphone of the Passing Years. And they say, Behold, this I should do, but I have Plenty of Time.

Now I fear for some of them lest there be a Day when they shall Hammer at the Gate of Heaven, and Fume and Swear because they find it shut. And I sometimes think I hear the Angel that Keepeth the Gate answering them, and saying,

Use not thy Language so Wastefully, lest thou need it in the Ages to come. For behold, thou hast Plenty of Time.

In Brief

Carry courage as the companion of faith, whatever else you leave behind, into the responsible days of the New Year.

* * *

Another judicial decision under the Sherman Act requires the Lehigh Valley Railroad to divorce its coal mining from its train running. But will the householder pay any less for coal because two companies are concerned in getting it toward the bin where there was only one before?

* * *

The sudden death of Bishop Burch, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York, brings a note of sadness into the Advent time for many friends. He was a man of affairs, an unusual executive as well as a strong Christian. The choice of a successor will be difficult and must engage the earnest attention of the leaders of his communion.

* * *

The Governor of Jerusalem, Roland Storrs, by name, has refused to let the open bar come into the Holy City. Sir Samuel Montagu, British High Commissioner, immediately extended this prohibition to the whole of Palestine. Governor Storrs calls himself the successor of Pontius Pilate. He declares that the first section of a rail line to Bethlehem or the Mount of Olives would have to be laid over his body. It is evident, therefore, that Jerusalem is not to be made a feeble copy of Paris—or East St. Louis—so long as he is governor.

* * *

The investigation of our marine force in Hayti has resulted in a report of no real grounds of complaint. The killings of bandits ran up to considerable figures, but, with about two cases which are disputable, they were all in active war against the bandit nests where the old African rites with their attendant, if only occasional, cannibalism were carried on and from which there was always a threat for peaceable inhabitants. But from all that was testified this bandit war and other police duty must have been a sore strain upon the patience and self-restraint of the constabulary and the marines. The American marine can fight, but he is by nature neither cruel nor bloodthirsty.

* * *

We call special attention to the program and the needs of Howard University at Washington. This institution leads in the higher education of the Negro, and its location at the national capital gives it commanding influence, which is being considerably strengthened under the presidency of Dr. J. Stanley Durkee. It greatly needs and fully deserves generous support. Congregationalists, especially, should come to the front to provide adequate resources for its School of Religion. An imperative need of the colored people is a well educated ministry, and more and more they are turning to Howard for its service in that field. Read "The Great Needs of a Great Race," as set forth on the second page of this issue and the two preceding issues of The Congregationalist.

* * *

In reading the Pilgrim chronicles one is struck by the winning and assimilating qualities of the leaders and the members of the transported church. Edward Winslow happened into Leyden and was never afterwards able to get away from the charm of the Pilgrim life. Miles Standish was a soldier and had had a different history from that of any of the rest. But he ended up as an enthusiastic Pilgrim. They hired a cooper at Southampton, John Alden by name, and by the time the voyage was ended he was as good a brother of the people as any of them. The Indians who got to know them, like Samoset, believed in them. The real question for today is whether the Congregational churches, which are the lineal successors of the Scrooby Church, have retained enough of these genial and winning qualities to make them as much a leaven of faith and confidence in their several localities as the Pilgrims were in Holland and America.

ALONG OUR STREAM OF FREEDOM

(Ps. 126)

The year before the Pilgrims came to Plymouth the first cargo of African slaves arrived at Jamestown, and on this three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims there is observed among these ante-Pilgrims an emigration movement not unlike the one that brought the Pilgrim Fathers to these shores.

There are three reasons behind the movement which has transferred a million Negro Americans from the South of the Mason and Dixon line to the North of it within the last four years. The first is the repression measures of the South; notwithstanding the progress made toward the better treatment of the Negro by the better element of Southern whites it has not kept pace with the need of the case. The second is the industrial call of the North in view of the vacuum made by the world war, the Negro being the only available source of unskilled labor open to the North. The third is the desire of the Negro for his self-realization in a democracy; under the new impulse for larger liberty all over the world the Negro, too, seeks for similar self-expression.

Clearly, this movement has been a good thing for all involved. It has been good for the South, where the Negro labor had become a drug on the market; blessings brighten as they pass. It has been good for the North; who would have done the heavy tasks necessary for the prosecution of the war had not the Negro come? It has been good for the Negro himself; held back as he has been from participation in the privileges of the democracy he is at last getting the chance for which he has been striving all his lifetime.

It is not strange, however, that in a great center like the Metropolis there should be observed the beginnings of radicalism among Negroes. A stroll through Harlem any pleasant evening will reveal knots of agitators appealing to Negro auditors, detailing every type of doctrine within the limits of the law. One of these agitators is advocating a back-to-Africa movement, making the appeal on the basis of wrongs to the Negro in America. The appeals made reek with hatred and ill-will. This should certainly be met with a specific.

The best cure I know is in the hands of the churches of the Pilgrims. The present conditions among this population that is drifting northward can best be improved by a chain of modern churches stretching from the Statue of Liberty to the Golden Gate. Already little churches are springing up all along the links of such a possible chain. But these churches should be well equipped for larger service to this people who need an all-round training for life. This would also be a mighty fine chance for Congregationalism to get more of the rich red blood it needs.

The fact that our Home Missionary Society has sensed this need and opportunity is evidenced by the fact that it has made the Rev. Harold M. Kingsley, a talented young colored man, superintendent of church work among colored people in the North. Mr. Kingsley is now located at Detroit where he is working on one of the links in this chain across the continent. His next point is Buffalo. This new work accentuates the need for the A. M. A. schools in the South, for just as leaders for the white churches of the East must come from the West even so leaders of our colored churches here must come from the South, where they are trained in the atmosphere of racial passion.

One of the causes for the overwhelming vote in favor of the Republican party in the recent election was the "scatteration" of the colored people throughout the nation. This vote of the "dispersion" went almost solidly for the winning party. This is the secret of the breaking of the solid South. Now that the Grand Old Party is in power again in all branches of the government, Negroes are expecting certain remedial legislation, such as the making of lynching a national offense, the securing to every man the right to vote in any part of the land and the breaking up of such disloyal organizations as the disreputable Ku Klux Klan recently revived. Failure to do this will mean the breaking up of the solid Negro vote in the next election.

* *

A new interest in the Negro question is noticed in progressive circles in the North. The writer recently had the privilege of presenting a view of the new racial situation before the Men's Forum of Binghamton, N. Y., the largest forum in the state, Rev. J. L. Halliday, president. The volley of questions that followed indicated a new type of interest in this perennial question.

* *

The recent burning of Plymouth Church has fired anew the interest of the people of the city in burning questions for which this historic church stood in the stormy days of the Republic. Particularly, it has stirred a new sense of gratitude in the colored people for Mr. Beecher. There is an aged colored man who never fails to hang a wreath on the monument of the great preacher which stands in front of Burrough Hall. It is gratifying to know that the successors of the great clergyman have preserved his spirit in this regard. An ocular demonstration of this is found in the memorial windows put in under the ministry of Dr. Hillis. Prominent among these is that in memory of Lincoln, partially destroyed in the recent fire.

H. H. P.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Status of Our Ministry

To the Constituency of the Congregational Churches of America:

The Commission on The Status of the Ministry was created by the National Council at Grand Rapids, as a laymen's movement to bring to the churches of our order the imperative need for a substantial increase in the pay of ministers and religious workers.

By communications to the churches and by co-operation with the Home Missionary Society and other agencies the Commission has done what it could to stimulate interest and action. Information has come to the Commission of increase in salaries by nearly 2,300 churches. Doubtless many have made increases that did not report.

This we feel is cause for satisfaction. It is a movement of material proportions in the right direction, but it has not gone far enough and it should be continued and pressed until every pastor and religious worker is receiving adequate financial compensation.

Through The Congregationalist the Commission earnestly urges keeping prominently in mind this important question in preparing for the year 1921. Do not be content till it has been faced and dealt with by your church.

The members of the Commission stand ready to give all possible assistance.

M. A. Myers, Chairman (19 S. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.), H. M. Beardsley, Carl Kimball, Frank Kimball, William W. Mills, Charles F. Pettyjohn, William E. Sweet, Ernest N. Warner, Franklin H. Warner, Commission on the Status of the Ministry.

Dec. 15, 1920.

From Our Golden Gate Window

It is the function of the fellow who is set to look out of this wonderful window to remark when notable things hereabouts come to view. He observes concerning a recent event in Berkeley that it was unique and very significant.

The Earl Lectureship in the Pacific School of Religion is widely known. The greatest men are brought here for this service. This year two courses are given. The first was a course of three lectures, Nov. 16, 17, and 18, by Rev. Richard Roberts, pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y., upon the general theme, "Jesus and Our Times." The particular topics were: "Life and Things," "Right and Wrong" and "The Son of Man."

Dr. Roberts was known here as University preacher at Leland Stanford. We anticipated much and were in no respect disappointed. Dr. Roberts is a preacher of unusual eloquence, having a wonderful command of pure English. In these lectures he also displayed his profound grasp of the economic and religious problems of our times. In a masterful way he analyzed the principles which are operative in world affairs now and set over against them the principles which obtain in the teachings and practice of Jesus. On three consecutive nights a capacity audience in the First Congregational Church of Berkeley was held spell-bound by the eloquent preacher as he laid bare the sin of the world and set forth the redemption of men and nations which God is seeking to achieve through the person of Jesus Christ.

But the unique feature of this occasion was in the fact that these notable lectures were made a part of an Interdenominational Pastors' Conference. The Pacific School of Religion became the host of 150 ministers of 12 denominations, who for three days spent morning and afternoon in a conference which each day climaxed in the evening lecture.

How vital, grasping, instructive, inspiring these conference sessions were will be at once evident if I name some of the topics considered and the speakers.

"The Inner Life of the Minister" was presented by Dr. James M. Campbell, well-known author of devotional and other books, still young at eighty. His presence was a benediction.

Prof. G. A. Johnston Ross of Union Seminary chanced to be here on his way to the Orient. He gave a brilliant, unforgetable address on "The Minister and the Bible."

"The Minister and His Message" was the theme of Prof. J. W. Johnson of the Berkeley Baptist Divinity School.

Dr. Roberts spoke twice in the conference upon "The Intellectual Life of the Minister" and "The Minister and the Conduct of Public Worship." Other similar themes were presented by ministers of the region and professors of the seminary. All the topics were related to the intimate life of the minister and their consideration was broken by periods of silent meditation and prayer.

These were three days of intense intellectual quickening and equally helpful uplift and inspiration of the spiritual life.

The occasion was notable in many respects. The enthusiastic response of every man, the unity of spirit as together we sought to connect ourselves afresh with the sources of Life and Power evidence the increasing desire in the churches for spiritual reality, the experience of the life that is in Christ and the Christianizing of the life of the world.

Henry H. Kelsey.

San Francisco.

An Outstanding New Book

A Master Preacher on Preaching and Preachers

The volume just issued by the Macmillan Company from the pen of Dr. S. Parkes Cadman and entitled AMBASSADORS OF GOD will take a prominent place beside the classic books wherein the task and missions of the preacher are adequately set forth by men who themselves illustrated the great potentialities of the Christian pulpit—Dale, Beecher, Brooks, Simpson, Burton, Horne and one or two others. Even the most sanguine admirers of Dr. Cadman, who have been carried along with the force and charm of his spoken words, will find their expectations more than met in this embodiment of his convictions, touching the background, material, form and purpose of present-day preaching. The cumulative strength of the book, its orderly movement, its range, poise, its abundant evidences of scholarship, the warmth and richness of its style, the keen analyses of situation and of men, together with its practical serviceability to the preachers of today and tomorrow, make it one of the great books of the year.

It explains Dr. Cadman himself, his popularity and power as a preacher, his acceptability alike to the simple minded and those who want in the sermons to which they listen a body of solid and consistent thought. It reveals him as a modern thinker, deeply rooted in the evangelical tradition, never having altogether discarded the accent and even the point of view of the followers of Wesley, with whom he was associated ecclesiastically until he came into the Congregational fellowship. At the same time he shows himself to be deeply appreciative of the best contributions that science and criticism have made to an understanding both of the world and of the sacred writings. Neither liberalism nor radicalism in theology, sociology or in matters ecclesiastical can claim Dr. Cadman as its devotee. He keeps to the main highway, but travels with his eyes wide open to what is going on about him and around him.

The book is almost too opulent, too packed with crystallizations from the alembic of a remarkably active and fertile mind. It holds and feeds one on the first reading, but he who returns to it a second and a third time will be doubly and triply rewarded.

Dr. Cadman devotes his first chapter to a vindication and clarification of the scriptural basis for preaching. His second chapter on prophets and preachers of the Christian Church deserves to be printed by itself as a characterization of the great preachers of the past from Chrysostom and Augustine down to Phillips Brooks and Beecher. In few but luminous words he sets forth the salient qualities of scores of men who in their day made the Christian pulpit their throne of power. One may dissent here and there but on the whole his analyses seem as just as they are keen.

In the middle portion of the book where Dr. Cadman describes the modern attitude toward preaching, cross currents which affect it and present-day intellectualism, there is also room for divergences from certain conclusions. Yet here, too, one is impressed with his insight into historic and current theological, scientific, literary and practical tendencies as well as with his understanding of that rather indefinable entity called the spirit of the age.

The later chapters which deal respectively with the Nature and Ideals of the Christian ministry, Preaching, its Preparation and Practice, and the Relation of Preaching to Worship are a rich mine of suggestion. This section of the book must have been peculiarly helpful to the students at Bangor, Hartford and Drew Theological Seminaries, for whom the material was originally prepared. Back of all counsel is the exemplification of his own advice in the author's long and laborious hours in his study, in his faithful round of pastoral visitation, in omnivorous reading and in frequent reconsecration of himself as a herald of the old gospel of the incarnation and the atonement, set in its right relations to the thinking world of today. The method of preaching which he commends on the whole as most satisfactory is that of writing carefully and in extenso the sermon, then delivering it not memoriter but in substance as written but with the fresh suggestions afforded by the immediate situation.

For the minister who would become a skilled workman and a successful ambassador of God and for the thoughtful layman who would see more deeply and with spiritual eyes into the tendencies of our age, this book has no superior among the books of the year. To fortify this judgment the reviewer ventures to quote with his permission Dr. George A. Gordon's estimate:

"'Ambassadors of God' is an extraordinary book. It goes to the right source for the preacher's ideal, the Bible. It expounds that ideal with vital insight, wide learning and great wealth of historical illustration. Its characterizations of famous preachers, ancient and modern, are true to living, full of insight, breadth of treatment, and they make instructive and admirable reading.

"The environment of the preachers of today is described by one who knows it well. The call for an ampler equipment of intellect and spirit, in the modern prophet, is a trumpet call to this intellectual and spiritual conscience of all young men in preparation for the Christian ministry. In Milton's great words, this book is 'the precious life-blood of a Master' preacher; it is a rich and valuable addition to the literature of its subject."

"I rejoice in the book, in the vast service it is fitted to render to the rising generation of preachers."

It Will Pay You to Read

PALESTINE, by MRS. ROSITA FORBES (Fortnightly Review, November). An interesting and informing overlook of the history and geographical features of the Holy Land as the meeting place of nations and that history's result in the Palestine of today.

WHY THE TSAR WAS MURDERED, by JOHN POLLOCK (Fortnightly Review, November). A study of the situation after the treaty with Germany at Brest-Litovsk, and an attempt to show that the murder of Nicholas and his family was the direct result of German intrigue in order to support and insure that treaty.

BIBLE STORIES THROUGH CHINESE EYES (Asia, December). Paintings of Bible stories in the Chinese manner and settings, reproduced with explanations.

MARCUS GARVEY—THE NEGRO MOSES, by TRUMAN HUGHES TALLEY (World's Work, December). A sketch of a great leader and of the movement for independent self-expression of Negroes in the United States in its relations to the Africanization movement.

WHAT DOES BUSINESS WANT FROM THE GOVERNMENT? by CHARLES M. SCHWAB (Collier's for December 11). A clean-cut statement of the case for the big corporation and of the impossibility that, if run as a monopoly, it can succeed.

The Interpreter

A Godless People

Over at the meeting of the Federal Council the other morning Prof. Samuel G. Inman quoted a song which he says is known by practically every schoolboy in Latin America, blaming the pride and greed of the United States, the "future foe of Latin America," and ending: "And though you count on all, one thing thou lackest—God."

It is a lamentable thought that we are thus regarded by so many of the peoples south of the Rio Grande. It was not so in the days of Bolivar and San Martin. It will not be so, we hope and pray, a few years hence as intercourse grows and we all come to understand one another. But it is no pharisaic self-laudation to be glad at least that such a song of suspicion and dislike seems quite impossible for our own North American schoolboys. You may say that this is because they are quite too much taken up with baseball and football and the colorful life of school; or that Latin America is far less important to them than the United States seems to be to the boys of Latin America. But the real fact is, I am sure, that schoolboys of the United States are not very capable either of abstract hates and grudges, or of religious bigotry in particular.

Perhaps some of the Latin American peoples will feel that this lack of the habit, or even capacity of religious hate is proof of the charge that "one thing thou lackest—God." Godlessness is indeed a peril that threatens every nation. Especially the prosperous are tempted to forget and forfeit the presence of God. But we do not think this is at bottom true, even of our North American schoolboys. Their manners are not all that we might wish. They are not as reverent as they should be, nor as regardful of hallowed places and the sacred associations of others. They do not, a majority of them, think of God as residing on the altars of the churches. But the right appeal of word or of occasion still finds reverence and good will in the hearts of the boys and girls of North America.

But what a proof of a lack of generous charity toward others such a sweeping charge of godlessness implies! Think of thus lightly challenging a hundred millions of people! It is a lesson to us that we guard—yes, and improve—our own international manners and our manners one toward another. And it is well for us to be reminded of the real and imminent perils of forgetting God. The fact is that men are often more divided by their manners and their jealousies than by their morals or their aims in life. The people of Latin America have been educated in a different school of expression from ours. They think us brusque and cold and selfish. They like to bargain. We like a settled price. The language of courtesy, the pulse of action are different. We call our nearest neighbors among them "Dagoes" and naturally they do not like it. They tell us we are godless, and I am afraid we laugh.

The fact is that we and they are both far too provincial in our thought. We both too often value our own ways more than courtesy and consideration or even understanding. It is time we both reformed. But we, as the older democrats, and in our own opinion the more advanced people, though in our hearts we are neither proud, disdainful nor godless, certainly ought to do a little outlooking and reforming first. If our manners were more genial and our thoughts more considerate all round, good neighborhood on the big American continent ought easily to be within reach.—R.

WHAT THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IS DOING

An International Christmas Gift

SINCE Dec. 1 the Joint Committee for Union Colleges for Women of the Orient have been working to secure one million dollars for the equipment and upkeep of the seven colleges for women in the East. The movement was timed to culminate on Christmas Day, when the committee hoped to cable the million dollars as an international Christmas gift. The seven colleges, two of which are medical schools, are Peking Medical and Medical College at Vellore, India, Peking College, Ginling College at Nanking, Tokyo College, Lucknow College for Women and the Women's Christian College at Madras. Each is in desperate need, overcrowded, underequipped and facing a large enrollment. Most of the schools are interdenominational in character, the Woman's Christian College, for example, combining in the Board of Governors six mission boards in Great Britain, five in the United States and one in Canada. Under existing arrangements Mission Boards cannot appeal to churches or missionary societies for funds not included in denominational budgets, so that the Joint Committee is putting the situation straight to the general public. Great Britain is giving about a quarter of a million to the medical school at Vellore and the college at Madras, on condition that American women match this sum, dollar for dollar. Rev. James L. Barton is at the head of the Joint Committee, and Mrs. Henry W. Peabody was the director of the work.

A Boston Preacher in England

DR. THOMAS SIMS, recently pastor in Melrose, has been making a very favorable impression on English audiences. He preached on a November Sunday at Marylebone for Dr. R. C. Gillie, who has been for some weeks in the United States, speaking at Tercentenary meetings under the auspices of the American Mayflower Council. He gave a brief address to the children in the congregation, and told them the origin of the American Thanksgiving. He said that "Remember your manners" was always a good maxim, and that he had been delighted by the politeness everywhere shown in English shops and restaurants. The British Weekly speaks of Dr. Sims as "in the front rank of the many able preachers who have visited us in recent years from the other side of the Atlantic," and reports his sermon at length.

Features of the Tercentenary

OUR news columns this week give a hint of the quality and extent of celebrations held last week in honor of the Pilgrims. Not only in Plymouth itself but in every English-speaking land there was recognition of this pivotal event in history. Sons of New England scattered abroad met in reverent groups in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis and up and down the Pacific Coast. They responded to the same deep emotions, the same high sentiment which moved in the breast of those who at Plymouth thronged to listen to Senator Lodge and President Briggs. If we could visualize in one composite picture these numerous assemblages, if we could blend in one grand symphony these individual choruses, they would constitute an impressive witness to the fact that our age, however materialistic it may seem, however absorbed in things of today and tomorrow, has not totally lost the desire or the ability to praise famous men of yore. A demonstration it was on a nation-wide scale that the spirit of the Pilgrims live and will live.

Prolonging the Tercentenary

AT Boston last week Congregationalists and Unitarians affiliated to their mutual pleasure and profit and Dr. Boynton, the representative of the Trinitarian branch did not hesitate to express his hope that these two streams from an original common fountain might again come together. At Hartford Prof. Williston Walker of Yale was the orator. At other gatherings within and without New England men competent to estimate the Pilgrim migration and its bearing on the nation and the world gave of their best to appreciative listeners. Naturally many ministers keyed their sermons to the same general thought. Not too much has been made of an anniversary the like of which we now living shall not see again. Current celebrations do not by any means bring to a close the Tercentenary period. It will come to a second and its most spectacular climax in Plymouth next summer, when Professor Baker's pageant will be a leading feature. The six months between now and then offer an excellent opportunity for continued commemoration in many localities throughout the country.

English Baptists Increasing Stipends

THE united drive has evidently not spent its force in Great Britain, where Baptists are rejoicing over the success of their united effort during "Victory Week," Nov. 21-28. The objective was the sum of $1,250,000, half to be used for increasing ministerial stipends in Great Britain and the other half to be added to the allowances of missionaries in foreign fields. Evidently both ministers and laymen joined heartily in the undertaking, for it seems certain that the total has been reached and almost all the money has been paid in, few people taking advantage of the promise to pay in 1921. The women of the country were responsible for $250,000, and that sum will be reached. There has been everywhere an intense interest on the part of the public and the generosity of small churches, in response to the six months' campaign, has been surprising, some of them more than doubling their assessment.

The Status of the Baptist New World Movement

THE Northern Baptists have undertaken to raise one hundred million dollars by May, 1921, for missionary, educational, and other denominational purposes. This is the largest per capita giving ever asked of any large religious body in the history of the Christian Church. This goal was fixed not because it was a big round sum, but because it was the total asked for by the various enterprises of Northern Baptists. The General and State Boards of Promotion are the agencies held responsible for getting the money. Each state makes its own plan, but West Virginia will serve as an example of the general method. The State Board has appointed in each association a "Victory Committee" of ten. Conferences are being held so that laymen will meet these associational committees. A special committee of two is appointed for each church, to see it through, and they are expected to enlist the church to which they are assigned. Pastoral conferences will be held where "Doubting Thomas" may ask his questions, and where the fullest information is given as to fact and method. Then, and perhaps most important, there are Women's Conferences, where Mary and Martha may learn just how each may use her gifts to further the work.

Prospects for the Coming Year

THE amount to be raised is so large that success must be planned on the basis of the co-operation of every church and every member. Last year 4,500 churches reported some participation in the campaign. The task, therefore, is to lead those who have not completed their campaign to "perform the doing of it," and persuade the other four thousand churches to take their part in the world program. A half million persons have made pledges, and excluding single gifts of more than forty thousand dollars, these pledges average more than ninety dollars each. More than half the fund has been raised and the appeal is to be brought to the nine hundred thousand Baptists who have given nothing.

The Sunday School Council

THE annual meeting of the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations will be held in the Hotel Severn, Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 18 to 21. This meeting is the first since the Council was reorganized to include the officers of the Territorial organizations, and is therefore of more than usual importance. The membership of the Council is made up of all the editorial, education and publication officers of the Associated Evangelical Denominations, and the employed officers of the International, State and Provincial Sunday School Associations of the United States and Canada.

Snags and Sunrise

A Story of the Turn of the Year

By Kathryn Culver Bradley

As the time for the Annual Meeting of the Church drew near, a pronounced gloom seemed to settle over Rev. Thomas Keith. To be sure, he was young, and young ministers, although given to periods of elation, seem also to be marked for moments of most profound dejection. But this was no ordinary mood of depression with Rev. Thomas Keith. It was the gloomiest gloom that he had ever known. And Mrs. Keith, being a good little wife, and being like her husband, young, shared with him the murky shadows.

They faced each other now across the blue and white breakfast table, and Rev. Tom solemnly buttered his toast. "It's been going on for weeks," he remarked, "this general slumping off. Attendance much lower than a year ago." He consulted a card at his plate and read off a series of figures. "You see? The average is lower. And why? It baffles me."

Mrs. Tom spoke valiantly. "Well, your sermons, Tom, are much better than they were last year. Lots more interesting and more worth while. People ought to come out—"

"Well they don't, Sally. And then strangers come, and there aren't enough members of the congregation there to welcome them. So of course they never return."

Mrs. Keith tried a crumb of consolation. "Of course, the cold weather, Tom—"

"Oh, the weather!" cried Mr. Keith, suddenly rising to pace the floor. "That isn't the reason. People will go out in a blizzard, you know, if they think it's worth while."

"Well, more calling, perhaps—" suggested Sally.

"Calling? You know I call, my dear. None of the people I called on last week were present Sunday," he added grimly. "No, I ask myself this question," continued Tom, taking another turn across the room, "Is it really counting for anything?"

"I wonder—" mused Mrs. Tom.

Mr. Keith came to an abrupt halt. "What? Sally? Do you ever feel that way too?"

"Oh, often, often. Why there are times when I ask myself—is it really worth while after all?" She gave him a scared little glance with the confession. "And sometimes, Tom, I almost think it isn't."

"We mustn't think that, dear, because of course it is worth while. But the thing is this —without more enthusiasm on the part of the members, can we go on? And now we come up to the Annual Meeting when things ought to be at their highest pitch, and instead, here's this slump."

"Oh, Tom! I don't know what to think. But it is discouraging, isn't it?" And Mrs. Keith rose to start the daily routine of dishes and dusting. But before she left the room her husband had fought through a layer of gloom and reached a decision.

"I think I'll write a letter," he announced. "I must send one out anyway in regard to the meeting. I'll just add a few remarks about the situation as I see it."

He went to his study, and presently the typewriter began its staccato clackety-clack. Sally, in the kitchen, attacked the dishes in a rather dreamy fashion, a small frown puckering her forehead. Somehow, nothing seemed just right this morning, and she felt depressed. She cut her finger on a can and burned her arm on the electric iron. The beans burned dry, giving out a scorched, discouraging odor; and the baby, as if sensing the prevailing atmosphere of gloom, wailed miserably with colic, and would not be comforted. Through it all the typewriter clattered, and Sally plodded doggedly about her tasks, thinking over and over in circles the same indigo thoughts.

In an hour the study door opened, and Rev. Tom emerged. "Well, see what you think of this," he said, leaning against the window to read a closely written sheet.

"Why, Tom, it's really fierce, for you!"

"I know it is, but I feel fierce. Great guns! I've been mild enough in the past—too mild. Perhaps that's the trouble. Maybe this will make them see the situation."

Sally ruminated. "Well, something has to be done," she admitted, "and this may be just what is needed to stir folks up."

"I'll take it right down to the multigrapher's now," said Mr. Keith, folding the letter and slipping it into his pocket. Action had provided an outlet for his mood, and he went off to town with almost his old-time briskness.

At four o'clock the letters were finished, and he made the trip again to get them. A driving wind had come up, snow was falling, and indoors and out a bitter, insidious cold crept over things. Sally wrapped the baby in extra blankets, then pulling the collar of her faithful old sweater close around her neck, she went to the window to watch for her husband's return. He came stamping through the snow, head down, hands in pockets, with the great square package under his arm. She saw, as if for the first time, that his overcoat had lost the debonair look of honeymoon days, that his hat brim sagged and he needed a new muffler. Disheartening discoveries, these, for any wife to make; but for Sally, at this time, most cruel of all! She let him in with a smile that masked a feeling of complete rebellion.

"Now I must sign and address these letters," said Rev. Tom.

"All right—I'll help with the folding," volunteered Sally.

They seated themselves at the desk and fell to work. Tom affixed his signature with a flourish to each sheet, while Sally monotonously folded the letters and thumped the stamps into place.

"What are we going to have for dinner?" Rev. Tom asked, presently, sniffing the air.

"Oh—beans!" was the laconic answer. "Just nothing but beans. Burnt ones, too. I wish I had something awfully good to eat, Tom. It would help to lighten the gloom."

"By gravy, a mince pie would," Tom said fervently.

"Don't! There isn't any, and it makes it worse to talk about it," Sally reminded him severely. "We'll just eat our little beans and get back to work on these letters."

Again, as at breakfast, they faced each other across the blue and white table—a rather subdued Rev. Tom, after a day of depression—a rather worried looking Sally, with the pucker still in her forehead.

"Oh, I do hope they'll come out to the Annual Meeting, Tom. Surely they will, after that letter of yours."

"Well, I think myself it ought to stir 'em up a bit. I put things pretty strongly, but it's the way I felt. I—listen! Some one is coming."

There were honkings from an automobile, voices, scufflings and bumpings on the porch.

Mr. Keith and his wife dropped their napkins and pushed back their chairs. "You go, Tom—my hair—"

Sally dashed to the bedroom and hastily patted an imaginary stray lock into place. She heard Tom at the front door with a tone of genuine surprise and welcome in his voice.

"Why, Mrs. Chisholm, this is good of you—'way over here in all this snow—"

"Oh, Mrs. Chisholm—" Sally was out in the living-room, both hands outstretched in greeting—"you dear, to come on such a night!"

Mrs. Chisholm, smiling and crisp with cold, slipped a holly wreath from her arm and laid it on the mantle. "We can't stay a minute, Mrs. Keith—the children are alone and we've got to get right back. But we just came out to wish you a Happy New Year. We've been trying to get over for weeks now, but Mr. Chisholm's been short of men at the store, and you know what that means."

"Well, I haven't been to church, either, parson," Mr. Chisholm boomed in his big wholesome voice. "I sure have missed those A1 sermons of yours, too. Guess I can make it pretty regular though, now."

"We just wanted to bring you something for the New Year," Mrs. Chisholm added breathlessly—"things from the farm that you can tuck away on your shelves. She nodded her head over her shoulder at a box just inside the door. "Mr. Chisholm would put them in that awful old soap box. So I brought the wreath along to make it more festive."

"Why—but—" Mr. Keith and his wife stood open-mouthed—"are all those things for us?" Sally asked.

Mr. Chisholm chuckled delightedly. "Sure they are, Mrs. Keith, including the soap box. Hope you'll like 'em."

"Now we've got to run right along, dear," cried Mrs. Chisholm. "Don't come to the door, it's so cold. Good-night, and Happy New Year! We'll see you at the Annual Meeting."

They were off almost before the Keiths could thank them. The machine rumbled and puffed for awhile in the snow, then leaped forward with a snort and was gone. Sally and Tom were left standing by their fireplace, very much dazed, staring down at the box.

"Did you ever see anything so surprising? There never were such people! Think of coming 'way over here in a storm like this!"

"Why, it's wonderful!" cried Sally. "It did me good just to look at Mrs. Chisholm. She simply sparkled with good cheer."

"Let's see what's in the box," said Rev. Tom, kneeling to pry off the cover. Sally dropped down beside him. "O-ooh! Look at the canned asparagus! And peas—and marmalade! And pickles!"

"And what's this? A bottle of grape juice!"

"And that thing in the corner—what's that?"

"Why, Sally, I do believe it is—"

"Is it? Yes, it is—"

"A mince pice!"

They began to laugh like children, rocking back and forth on their heels—then facing each other across the pile of jars and cans, suddenly grew sober.

"This makes my letter seem like poor stuff," Mr. Keith said slowly.

"Yes, it really does, doesn't it, Tom?"

"I—I wish I hadn't written it. The more I think of it, the less I want to send it!"

"That's the way I feel," cried Sally. "Oh, Tom, don't send it!"

"What'll I do then? Something must go out tomorrow about the Annual Meeting." He opened a drawer and began to rummage. "Here you are! A bunch of postals! Not so good as a letter—but better than that letter anyway."

"I'll help you," volunteered Sally as before. "It's a lot of work, but what do we care?"

Again they seated themselves at the desk, but this time the mood had changed and their pens fairly danced.

"What are you going to say, Tom? Give me a card to copy."

"Say whatever you like. They're all different. I'm making each one personal," he added.

There was a long interval of silence while they both worked like beavers. Then Sally asked—"And what'll you do with the letters?"

"I'll use the backs to write sermons on," Rev. Tom answered. "They'll be better sermons, too—it will be good discipline for me."

"And I'll steam the stamps off of the envelopes. That'll be good discipline for me. Tom, it just makes my hair stand on end to think what we almost did!"

"Ouch! Me too! Wouldn't it have been ghastly? The trouble with us was that we let a mood get hold of us, and it carried us clear to the brink—"

"—where we were rescued by the Chisholms in the very nick of time," added Sally. She stuck her pen over one ear and thought awhile. "Do you know, Tom, it's just as the wise man said—'pass through a fit of the blues, and when it's over, nothing will have changed except yourself.' This morning everything was all wrong—tonight everything is all right; and yet really things are exactly the same. There's still that slumping off, you know."

Rev. Tom finished the last card and closed the ink-well with a snap. "That slump doesn't worry me now," he said. "Somehow, I feel sure that things are going to pick up. It's so clear, I wonder why we didn't see it before. To quote Shakespeare—'The fault, dear Sally, is not in our church, but in ourselves—' "

"Well, if you're not worried, neither am I," cried Sally, the typical wife. She went to the fireplace and hung Mrs. Chisholm's wreath above it. Then, from her perch on the rush-bottomed chair, she smiled down at Rev. Thomas Keith.

"Tom, it's wonderful, isn't it, to climb over snags together—and then get a hint of the sunrise!"

* * * * * * *

The Sunday following the Annual Meeting, Mrs. Chisholm gave Sally's hand a squeeze as she passed her in the vestibule.

"My dear, that was the best meeting I ever attended. I never saw such enthusiasm in my life, and every one is saying the same thing—it was those personal messages on the postals that brought them out. Where did you get that inspiration?"

Sally hesitated, drew back with a little flush, and then she laughed.

"I'm coming over to return your pie plate tomorrow," she answered, "and then perhaps I'll tell you all about it."

Meeting the 1921 Apportionment

The Every Member Canvass as Thus Far Conducted

By Rev. James E. McConnell, D.D.

The Congregational World Movement has been kept guessing regarding the plans of the churches for their Every Member Canvass. At a meeting of the Commission in Boston last summer, the advice was given to the churches to conduct their canvass in the spring but it then appeared that many of them would prefer the December date. As December has approached, however, many of the churches which had determined to put on their canvass in December, for one reason and another, decided to postpone it until a later date. It is therefore not unlikely that the canvass will be made in some churches during the winter while others, and perhaps most, will defer it until the spring date.

As far as the churches that have made their canvass in December are concerned, there comes to us the uniform feeling and conviction that the financial depression has been a handicap and a hindrance in the carrying out of their plans. From all over the country come reports of financial stringency, and that leads many people to be cautious in the making of pledges for the ensuing year.

However, the news from many churches and indeed from large areas, sometimes including whole states, is distinctly encouraging.

It will not be amiss to note, first of all, that of the 59 conferences and districts, large and small, concerned in the apportionment for 1921, 42 have accepted their full share of the $5,000,000 amount as originally suggested to them, eight of the 42 having adopted sums considerably in advance of those which were suggested.

The 11 conferences and districts which decreased the amounts did so by the percentages varying all the way from 13 per cent. to one-half per cent. Six districts including Hawaii, the other five covering only small areas and including but few churches, have not reported any action. All of which is distinctly encouraging from the standpoint of the apportionment; but it must be understood that the action represents only the mind of the state and association apportionment committees. The final verdict rests, as always, with the churches themselves.

Referring to states and regions, Dr. Kenngott reports for Southern California: "Most of our churches made their Every Member Canvass Dec. 5, with more or less thoroughness. I shall be unable to tell the results until the first of the year." Dr. Kenngott goes on to say that the Conference set a standard of 15 cents per week per capita at its annual meeting last year.

The following churches have adopted a standard of 20 cents per week per capita: Los Angeles, Long Beach, Redlands, and several others.

Dr. Kenngott says they are hopeful of raising the 15 cents per week per capita for all of their more than 18,000 members, although the amount may fall a little short of that.

Southern California accepted as it apportionment $140,000.

For Northern California, Dr. Kelsey reports that the canvass was taken in 31 churches and that the estimated amount secured was $32,500, 25 churches having postponed their canvass until spring, while 49 of the smaller churches have not yet done anything. The outlook in Northern California, Dr. Kelsey says, is for $70,000 and that state accepted $108,000. With the right kind of follow-up work, it would seem as though the $70,000 might be considerably increased, if it did not even reach the goal of $108,000.

Montana's Methods

From Montana, Rev. E. H. Johnson, Regional Director, reports as follows, although the canvass in that state for benevolence will not be made until spring:

> We have gone from church to church and urged that the first concern of the C. W. M. was to serve the local church and show the way to highest efficiency there—"Beginning first at Jerusalem." We have said that, through the C. W. M., the stronger churches wish to help the weaker. The C. W. M. is not primarily a program of money raising, but of service that involves money raising. What help is needed to bring your church up to the highest standard of service in its parish? We are urging each church to use the book, "Serving the Neighborhood," as a text for study classes.
>
> When we have pressed home the needs of the work of the local parish we will shift the emphasis to Home Missionary, and then Foreign Missionary education. The material is splendid in the courses prepared by the Interchurch. "Frank Higgins, Trail Blazer," beat me out of dinner. I became so interested in it that I forgot to eat until it was too late to get dinner. "Shepard of Aintab" is quite as fascinating.
>
> The C. W. M. Institutes helped greatly in completing the work of canvassing for the 1920 Apportionment and E. F., and also helped set in motion the machinery for the ingathering of the funds pledged.
>
> Some churches have greeted us with the triumphant announcement, "We have already sent in the last dollar for our apportionment and E. F.!"
>
> At Custer a pastor has been settled and a church building project launched as a direct result of the C. W. M. Institute.
>
> The churches appreciate the fact that we have come to them with our offers to help especially with the development of the local work, and have asked for no money.

Coming farther East, Superintendent Sutherland of Michigan telegraphs as follows:

> About 75 churches report $70,000. Very few complete returns have been received. The canvass is progressing rather slowly on account of industrial conditions. Many churches both large and small will postpone canvass until after the New Year. A disposition to do the best possible is manifest.

Churches That Lead

Some of the more notable reports that have come from individual churches are as follows:

Glen Ridge, N. J., with $17,000 apportionment as against $4,500 under the old $2,000,000 apportionment, made its canvass several weeks ago and went over the top.

Appleton, Wis., oversubscribed its apportionment 50 per cent. and has enrolled 151 stewardship members, using the Congregational World Movement card.

Naugatuck, Ct., refused its apportionment on the ground that it was not enough. That church expects to go well beyond the amount which was named to it.

The High Street Church, Auburn, Me., conducted its canvass Dec. 12, going out for a budget of $14,000 which included the church's full apportionment. The first day they raised $12,138 and had yet to see about 75 people. Their budget will be met in full, including the apportionment.

Newport, N. H., and Nashua, N. H., Pilgrim, have not yet met their full apportionment but have doubled their pledges of last year.

Concord First, Nashua First and Manchester First have made substantial advances over last year.

Brattleboro, with its canvass not completed, has subscribed $4,000 of the $5,400 asked. Their old apportionment was $2,000.

Ansonia, Ct., has raised its apportionment of $3,030, the former apportionment of that church being $1,210.

Dr. Hodgdon narrates the following story:

Three weeks before they were to make their canvass for an apportionment of $1,237, a Massachusetts church, which had been slow on the Pilgrim Memorial Fund, suddenly waked up and asked me to come and get $1,300 to complete their P. M. F. quota. I put up the P. M. F. as persuasively as I could. Then paused—asked them to forget it for the time being. Then I put up the C. W. M. just as frankly and persuasively. Then I pleaded with them not to give a dollar to the P. M. F. unless they were sure of meeting their apportionment.

I asked for the P. M. F., $1,300. It is still coming in but is now $1,565.

The apportionment is $1,237. The canvass last Sunday yielded $1,650, with several more to see. I am persuaded that this is the psychology with victory in it.

To sum up, using the words of one of the Regional Directors in making his report to the New York office: "The situation seems to us full of promise. Congregationalists can if they will and will if they know. That is my creed. We are doing all we can to furnish that information which stirs the soul in a man, if he has one. This is not a matter, as you know, of financial ability but merely of a right state of mind."

The Great Day at Plymouth

Tercentenary Anniversary Celebration

By Charles P. Marshall

One hundred years ago Webster said, at Plymouth Rock, that the voice of acclaim raised here should be heard across the continent and lose itself in the murmurings of the Pacific. While Senator Lodge was giving the Anniversary address, as Daniel Webster gave it one hundred years ago, the telephone bell rang and Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts and Governor Stevens of California spoke together. Governor Coolidge sat in the chair of Governor Carver of Mayflower days and sent to California the greetings of Massachusetts. "Massachusetts and Plymouth Rock greet California and the Golden Gate. The sons of the Pilgrims, according to the prophecy, send the voice to you that it may be lost in the waves and the roar of the Pacific Ocean." This was about the most striking incident of the whole celebration.

The Speakers

It was a great day for Plymouth. All summer long outsiders have been among us, enthusiastic and wondering. They have felt that Plymouth itself cared little for these things. We have felt so ourselves at times, but we awoke. Not simply by putting on bunting and declaring the day a holiday, but we got into the spirit. We listened to Senator Lodge's great, though somewhat pessimistic, speech. We heard Dean Briggs read his fine poem, in which he brings the spirit of the Pilgrim down to this day, the day of the World War, and shows it at work among our contemporaries. We shall hear for days to come and read again and again the great, simple, and dignified words of the Governor as he reached down into the heart and spirit of the Pilgrim and in words that fit all time he tells us that the Pilgrim was a revelation. We heard all this, and in the afternoon at the Town Community Meeting we got more. Dr. Ashley Leavitt, of Brookline, spoke of our heritage, of the meaning of Plymouth Rock in the lives of the Pilgrims themselves, while Vittori Orlandini, of Boston, in English that shows plainly that it is not his native tongue, pleads for a place in this heritage for the foreigner. He pleads that we give up speaking of two kinds of Americans, the new and the old. Not so thought the boys who went overseas. There is only one kind of American. Dr. Thompson, Superintendent of Schools of Boston, asked the new-comers for but one thing—to be as true to the ideals that brought them here as were the Pilgrims to theirs.

Altogether, it was a great day for Plymouth. It was great so far as the weather was concerned. No breaking waves dashed high on her coast. Even the surf on Brown's Bar was lacking. The bay was calm and flat and the air clear and warm. One can hope that the Pilgrims had as good a day when they came. People flocked from everywhere. A special train brought state and national dignitaries, Governor Coolidge, Senator Lodge, the Belgian minister, Congressional Commissioners, Mayflower Descendants, and others.

The Old Pilgrims and the New

Plymouth is a cross section of this big land of ours. The Pilgrims were common folk. They were from the workers of that day. Plymouth is today a working town—a typical New England factory town. The summer tripper who rushes in and out again does not always realize that. About half of the town are descendants of the Pilgrims and the other half are themselves Pilgrims. For this reason the Town Committee in planning their community program thought of the relation of the old Pilgrims to those of later arrival. Thus the place on the program of an Italian.

In spite of Governor Coolidge's speech of faith on those "who sailed out of the infinite" seeking "a city . . . whose builder and maker is God," and of Dean Briggs' poem of courage, the morning celebration left one with a depression due to a somewhat pessimistic tone in Senator Lodge's oration. But the afternoon meeting, that touched the greatest problem before us as a nation today, the immigrant, lifted one up on its optimism. "Daughter of Truth and Mother of Courage," Dean Briggs says. Mr. Johnson, speaking to the Masonic body on Sunday afternoon (the most enthusiastic group of all) said, "Ideals are worth more than all possessions, and the Pilgrims, who were idealists, thus will never die."

One hundred years ago Daniel Webster pictured the glorious future ahead of the nation founded on Plymouth Rock and wondered with what thoughts and emotions we would be celebrating it today. One cannot but try to think the same thoughts for the next hundred years. As I sat waiting for Senator Lodge to arrive I talked with a woman and child from Virginia and an older man passed who was telling the usher that he had come all the way from Wisconsin. He had enlisted in the Civil War and gone West and this was his first time back. I talked with two men from Alaska. Across the hall was an Italian woman, bareheaded and in a red sweater. Near me was a Portuguese boy in an army overcoat, and all about were sons of Pilgrims and those who came in later boats. Any pessimism that I may have had vanished after the meetings were all over and I thought on these things. All these came to drink of the Pilgrim spring, the fountain of democracy, to breathe the air of liberty. Their words for liberty may not be the same any more than their name for God, but their ideals will fit into the ideals of the Pilgrim. And one hundred years from now when the ideals of all these who have fought for liberty on a hundred battlefields mingle with those of that little company of Englishmen who landed on Plymouth Rock, then shall we have a larger, broader, and more abiding freedom.

From Senator Lodge's Address

What meaning have the Pilgrims to us who have one and all been bred up in the nineteenth century spirit, who, carried away by the vast material progress of the past century, for the most part looking no farther than the physical effects and thinking too little of the higher meanings, now find ourselves beset by doubts, surrounded by dangers, and with the theory of life which seemed so fixed and permanent trembling in the balance? What has the foundation of New Plymouth, so full of the inspiration of hope to Webster and his time, to say to us as we look about us in this troubled and desolated world?

Their Stern Sense of Duty

As the little group of men and women who gathered here in 1620 stand out before us very luminous in the pages of history they have a stern, an austere, look, due perhaps in a measure to our own consciousness of what they believed and what they suffered and did. No doubt they lived and toiled and loved and married and were given in marriage and met the little events, hurrying on from day to day, much as human nature in all ages has commanded. But it is to be feared that they did not face all these daily incidents of life with a smile. To them life was very serious, perhaps a safer conception than the other extreme, which finds money and amusement and restless movement the most desirable objects of existence. But whether light-hearted or grave, the Pilgrims encountered the demands of life with unfailing courage, a quality always essential, never more so than when the clouds hang low and the minds of men are filled with apprehension. They had a very strong and active sense of public duty. It is possible that by their example they can on this point teach us something. Just at present there seems a great deal of concern about rights, and a tendency to forget the duties which rights must always bring with them, and without which rights become worthless and cannot be maintained. They were never so absorbed in their personal affairs as to forget those which concerned the public—the public meaning to them the entire body of men and women who had come to the New World together.

In this spirit, before they founded and established their little state, they drew up and signed the famous compact of the Mayflower—a very memorable deed, this voluntary act. They combined themselves into "a civil body politick," and agreed to make laws in accordance therewith, and to those laws and "offices" they promised "all due submission and obedience." It was a very simple little statement expressed in very few words. It is quite true that all that is vital in the compact may be found in Robinson's farewell letter received at Southampton, or in the patent itself. The Pilgrims may not have originated either the words or the principles of the compact, although the principles embodied were few and the words not many. But the fact remains that they had thought enough about government to agree upon these principles and be guided by them. It was only an agreement, if you please, but they made it. The act was theirs. They gave life to the thought. After all deductions made, here was a Constitution of government which is in its essence an agreement among those who accept it, made by the people themselves—an idea which has traveled far and wide, even to the ends of the earth and around the habitable globe since the Mayflower lay at anchor off Provincetown. Here, too, written in this same small paper was the proclamation of democracy, something which had quite faded away in Europe, and had never before been declared in the American hemisphere. The election of municipal officers was common enough in England, familiar no doubt to all the signers of the compact.

What was of vital importance and entire novelty was that the signers of the compact arranged for their rulers and representatives in a new and unoccupied country. In an unknown land, with no surrounding pressure from an established society and an old civilization, when each man could easily have broken away and sought for license and opportunity to do his own will, especially as they had founded their settlement outside the territorial limits of the patent, they promised to obey the laws made and accepted by the community. Each and every man of them sacrificed a part of his own liberty that all might be free. "Liberty," said Georges Clemenceau, a great man of our own time, "liberty is the power to discipline oneself," and this was the spirit which inspired the Englishmen who signed the Mayflower compact. No greater principle than this could have been established, for it is the corner-stone of democracy and civilization. They knew that there could be no organized society unless laws made by the state were obeyed by all, and this mighty principle they planted definitely in the soil of their new country, where it has found its latest champion in a successor of Bradford and Winslow, the present Governor of Massachusetts. It was their palladium and it must be ours, also, for when it is reft from any state or nation the end of civilization in any form conceivable by us is at hand. . . .

Doers of a Mighty Work

In these days of celebration, when public attention is strongly drawn to the Pilgrims, the voice of detraction is not stilled. There are always people, few happily in number, but very vocal, who cannot bear to acknowledge greatness, and to whom genius seems an offense. They seek in literature and in history to bring those whom men reverence and celebrate down to their own level. They search for the flaws, the errors, the shortcomings, and forget that those are not what concern us. No one regards the Pilgrims as perfect. They themselves had no such conception. They had a very deep and intimate conviction of sin. But what matters is their greatness, not their littleness. They did a great deed; there it stands, ineffaceable and beyond forgetfulness. They fought a good fight; they made mistakes and some other things besides. They had strong characters and unyielding courage. They had deep convictions. They were close kin to Macaulay's Puritan. "He prostrated himself in the dust before his Maker; but he set his foot upon the neck of his king." Whatever their failings, however simple, uneducated and undistinguished the mass of them may have been, they did a mighty work and their work lives after them. . . .

Examples of Great Principles

These Pilgrims of Plymouth stand forth exemplars of certain great principles which never can grow old and which can never be of better service than in days of doubt and trouble such as now beset the world. On one great point they made their meaning clear. They never confused moral and economic values; they never set material advance above the higher qualities of heart and mind. They never for a moment thought that life and its mysteries could be expressed in economic terms, which seems, if not actually avowed, to be the tendency among all classes today. They set character first. They reverenced learning and did homage to intellectual achievement. They succeeded marvelously. As we look at the world today, at what it seeks and what it apparently longs to be, is there not a great lesson to be learned and followed by us as it shines forth in the aspirations and deeds of these plain people whom here we celebrate? The wild new land, the unconquered wilderness which gave them the freedom they sought, seized with surprising quickness upon the deepest affections of their heart. It seems as if they said that here and not elsewhere will we live and strive—

Striking Sentences from Senator Lodge

Nations which neglect their past are not worthy of a future and those which live exclusively upon their past have the marks of decadence stamped upon them.

The inalienable companion of the spirit of progress is optimism, which is not a system of philosophy, but a state of mind.

The earth was all they had, and brief life was here their portion as it is with us. Yet they did not live in vain.

Until at last this love of earth reveals
A soul beside our own, to quicken, quell,
Irradiate, and through ruinous floods uplift.

A noble aspiration always, and when the "ruinous floods" came, as they did, these Pilgrims still pressed on, won through, and lifted up the cause for which they came, in the land they had made their own.

In all probability they still held to the belief of the Ancient World and of the Middle Ages that our minute planet was the center of the universe, to which, if I am not mistaken, Francis Bacon, regardless of Copernicus, Kepler and Galileo, still adhered. The earth was all they had, and brief life was here their portion as it is with us. Yet they did not live in vain. They strove to do their best on earth and to make it, so far as they could in their short existence, a better place for their fellow men. They were not slothful in business, working hard and toiling in their fields and on the stormy northern seas. They sought to give men freedom both in body and mind. They tried to reduce the sum of human misery, the suffering inseparable from human existence. Whatever our faith, whatever our belief in progress, there can be no nobler purposes for man than thus to deal with the only earth he knows and the fragment of time awarded him for his existence here. As we think of them in this the only true way, our reverence and our admiration alike grow ever stronger. We turn to them in gratitude, and we commend what they did and their example to those who come after us. While the great republic is true in heart and deed to the memory of the Pilgrims of Plymouth it will take no detriment even from the hand of Time.

The Pilgrims as Freedom Bringers

The conquerors of untrodden continents, the founders of great nations, are not so common as unduly to crowd the highways of history, and when we meet with them it is wiser, more wholesome, to venerate them for what they did than to belittle them because they were not perfect in all the details of life demanded by their critics in the much-abused name of the truth of history which the Pilgrims would have been the last to fear. Yet the greatest of all still remains behind. The founders of New Plymouth came here to find freedom to worship God in their own way. They sought to preserve their race, their allegiance to their native country and their language, but their religious freedom was the primary object to which all material purposes, all hope of bettering their worldly condition, were entirely subordinate. . . . When the Pilgrims achieved their purpose through much sacrifice and suffering they opened the door to the coming of freedom of conscience, and freedom of conscience meant freedom of thought upon everything within the mental range of humanity. Of all the possessions painfully won by the race of men throughout the centuries nothing approaches either in value or meaning the right of each and every man and woman to think their own thoughts in their own way. Can we longer wonder that the coming of the Pilgrims to these shores towers ever higher as a decisive event in history, for the battles won in the fields of thought make all other battles look small indeed, as the procession of the centuries moves slowly by.

Governor Coolidge's Tribute

Governor Coolidge delivered this tribute to the Pilgrims at the opening exercises of the Tercentenary celebration at Plymouth:

"Three centuries ago today the Pilgrims of the Mayflower made final landing at Plymouth Rock. They came not merely from the shores of the Old World. It will be in vain to search among recorded maps and history for their origin. They sailed up out of the infinite.

"There was among them small trace of the vanities of life. They came undecked with orders of nobility. They were not children of fortune but of tribulation. Persecution, not preference, brought them hither. But it was a persecution in which they found a stern satisfaction. They cared little for titles, still less for the goods of this earth, but for an idea they would die.

"Measured by the standards of men of their time they were the humble of the earth. Measured by later accomplishments they were the mighty. In appearance weak and persecuted they came, rejected, despised, an insignificant band, in reality strong and independent, a mighty host, of whom the world was not worthy, destined to free mankind. No captain ever led his forces to such a conquest. Oblivious to rank, yet men trace to them their lineage as to a royal house.

"Forces not ruled by man had laid their unwilling course. As they landed, a sentinel of Providence, humbler, nearer to nature than themselves, welcomed them in their own tongue. They came seeking an abiding place only on earth, 'but lifted up their eyes to heaven, their dearest country,' says Governor Bradford, 'where God hath prepared for them a city.' On that abiding faith has been reared an empire magnificent beyond their dreams of paradise.

"Amid the solitude they set up hearthstone and altar; the home and the church. With arms in their hands they wrung from the soil their bread. With arms they gathered in the congregation to worship Almighty God. But they were armed that, in peace, they might seek divine guidance in righteousness, not that they might prevail by force, but that they might do right though they perished.

"What an increase, material and spiritual, 300 years has brought that little company is known to all the earth. No like body ever cast so great an influence on human history. Civilization has made of their landing place a shrine. Unto the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has been intrusted the keeping of that shrine. To her has come the precious heritage. It will be kept as it was created, or it will perish, not with an earthly pride, but with a heavenly vision.

"Plymouth Rock does not mark a beginning or an end. It marks a revelation of that which is without beginning and without end, a purpose, shining through eternity with a resplendent light, undimmed even by the imperfections of men, and a response, an answering purpose, from those who, oblivious, disdainful of all else, sailed hither seeking only for an avenue for the immortal soul."

From the Forefathers' Day Ode

Following are extracts from the ode written for the Plymouth celebration by Professor Briggs of Harvard:

Land of our fathers, when the tempest rages,
When the wide earth is racked with war and crime,
Founded forever on the Rock of Ages,
Beaten in vain by surging seas of time,

Even as the shallop on the breakers riding,
Even as the Pilgrim kneeling on the shore,
Firm in thy faith and fortitude abiding,
Hold thou thy children free forevermore.

* * * * * * *

And when we sail as Pilgrims' sons and daughters
The spirit's Mayflower into seas unknown,
Driving across the waste of wintry waters
The voyage every soul shall make alone,

The Pilgrim's faith, the Pilgrim's courage grant us;
Still shines the truth that for the Pilgrim shone.
We are his seed; nor life nor death shall daunt us.
The port is Freedom! Pilgrim heart, sail on!

—L. B. R. Briggs.

Plymouth Church Reunion

The real celebration of the Tercentenary of the Pilgrim Landing began on Dec. 19, the Sunday before Forefathers' Day. On that day the old First Church brought back its children for a reunion. Seven churches are the offspring of this old church. Four of these churches are now Orthodox Congregational and three are Unitarian, and as all of them were asked to be present with their pastors and delegates at the service of Sunday morning, it was a real Congregational reunion. The spirit in which the invitation was sent was carried out in the meeting. It was one of fraternity and fellowship. It was a truly religious celebration of an event whose deepest meaning was religious, a fact that has somehow been forgotten in many of the celebrations that have taken place already.

The service consisted of Pilgrim hymns including one written for the occasion by Rev. Frederick L. Hosmer, the hymn writer. The sermon was by Dr. James L. Barton, Foreign Secretary of the American Board. It was a sermon full of inspiration and power and of the spirit of the time. A truly Plymouth dinner of Forefathers' succotash was served the delegates.

In the evening the same thought was carried out in a service held in the Church of the Pilgrimage at which the pastors of these churches were invited to take part. Three of the pastors and Dr. Barton taking for a main thought "Aids to noble living," as shown by the lives of the Pilgrims, spoke of the consecration of the will, the power of example, the divine fellowship, the service of God in the service of man. The congregations of the churches united in the common service.

The old Pilgrim Church never was a strong church. Plymouth never was a large place. At one time, we are told that it seemed through the spreading out of the people in search of better farming land that the church could not live. It did, however, send out seven other churches. Very early the church at Duxbury, in 1632, separated from the church at Plymouth, then in the same year the church at Marshfield was set apart. In 1646 a group of the people migrated down on the Cape to Eastham, now Orleans, and became a church. Plympton and Kingston separated in 1698 and in 1717. It was not until 1738 that a second church in what is now Plymouth was established, the one in Manomet Village being founded then. In 1801 came the separation of the Church of the Pilgrimage. It was these seven churches that came back in the persons of their delegates to speak not only of the influence on them of the Fathers but of the wider and greater influence on the whole English-speaking world and through the world of the whole wide world.

"The greatest things in the world are ideals." This was the thought of a most helpful and not the least of the religious celebrations of the Landing of the Fathers held by the Masonic Fraternity in the theater in Plymouth on Sunday, Dec. 19. The building was crowded to its very doors and an inspiring program of music, song and address was given. Mr. Melvin M. Johnson, representing the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, gave an oration in which the religious and political ideals of the Fathers were presented in all their power—idealism put into practice; faith that works; democracy that works itself into law and order.

From Dr. Barton's Sermon

Delivered in First Church, Plymouth, Dec. 19, 1920

When we together glorify that body of men and women whose chief distinction was that they loved religious liberty and justice and respect for law more than they loved personal gain or safety or comfort or the achievement of honor among their own people, then we confess to the world that their ideals and devotion and willingness to sacrifice for the common good are, or should be, our ideals. . . .

If we honor the Pilgrims we must be ready to perpetuate their deeds. It is a wanton waste of time to celebrate the achievements of the Pilgrims without awakening in us and in those who participate a new purpose to be more worthy of such an inheritance. If we sincerely honor these founders of that which we hold as sacred in the state and in the church, we are bound to transmit this exalted trust unimpaired to the generations yet to follow.

We cannot in common honesty follow the story of their achievements through suffering, and straightway forget what manner of men and women we have become and what solemn responsibilities rest upon us because of their life and deeds. This generation must be the channel through which shall flow the currents of reverent loyalty to liberty and law which issued forth from them. This generation is twice blessed in that it has the inspiration of this tercentenary period and because it is placed in this transition hour in the world's history, when we are passing from an era of national isolation to a period of sweeping internationalism.

There is a startling significance in the synchronism of these two commanding situations. There is in this conjunction of circumstances adequate dynamic to change the face of the world. As the successors and heirs of those who released forces three centuries ago which have wrought mightily in moulding the religious, social and civic order of our generation, we cannot, without proving recreant to the sacred trust imposed in us, fail now to take up the task.

Tercentenary at Middlebury, Vt.

For seventy-eight unbroken years under the direction of the Middlebury Historical Society a gathering in honor of the Pilgrims has been held on the 21st of every December. Citizens and members of Middlebury College join in a reverent assemblage in the beautiful Congregational edifice and listen to addresses and appropriate music. Then what has invariably been called "The Ladies' Social Party" is held in the lecture room, beginning with a dinner and followed by music and speeches. Pres. J. M. Thomas presides and this year a number of the local ministers and the recently elected lieutenant-governor of Vermont were the after-dinner speakers. The speaker from outside the community was Rev. H. A. Bridgman, whose theme was "The Glory of New England."

Boston's Forefathers Celebration

The Boston Congregational and Unitarian Clubs joined in celebrating the Tercentenary of the Landing of the Pilgrims at a reception and banquet in Paul Revere Hall, Monday evening, Dec. 20. Over eight hundred were present. It was a pleasant social occasion and the good fellowship and common interest and enthusiasm in the event made it notable. Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, president of the Congregational Club, and Hon. Joseph Walker, president of the Unitarian Club, shared the honors of presiding. Dr. Paul Revere Frothingham of the Arlington Street Unitarian Church gave the invocation. The addresses were by Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Harvard and Dr. Nehemiah Boynton of Brooklyn, representing, respectively, the Unitarian and Congregational fellowships.

Dr. Eliot gave a thoughtful and informing study of "Constitutional Aspects of the Mayflower Compact." He emphasized the voluntary democratic character of the civil body politic created by the Pilgrims through the Compact signed in the cabin of the Mayflower, and said that it was the first time in the world's history that a chief magistrate was elected by the entire community, which submitted of its own accord to his authority. He referred to the importance of the church in this great enterprise, to the business aspects of it, and to the fact that practical religion was always dominant.

Dr. Boynton's subject was "Pilgrim Processionals." He gave a strong, inspirational message on the spiritual aspects of our Pilgrim heritage, emphasizing the power of such ideals as are maintained by the Pilgrim spirit. Among them are law and order, respect for others, the development of education and loyalty to the church. Dr. Boynton paid stirring tribute to the purpose which brought the two clubs together and encouraged closer relationship between the Congregational and Unitarian branches of the Pilgrim descendants in the coming days.

The Way One College is Doing It

By H. A. B.

"Dear old Alma Mater" is getting something besides cheers these days, whether her last name be Harvard or Amherst or Wellesley or Smith or Wheaton or Mt. Holyoke or some other cognomen. As from her high watch tower she surveys her children she must have a swelling lump in her throat and a rapidly growing fund of pride in her heart, for she beholds them not struggling every instant for money or fame, but pausing in the rush of life to think of her and work for her. What a tribute to the lasting idealism engendered by a college education are these groups of graduates intent on one thing—putting it across for alma mater's sake.

These college drives have so much in common that a little picture of the way one college—Amherst—is doing it may represent the broad lines of initiative and attack pursued by all the others. For the past ten years graduate enthusiasm has been mounting higher and higher, culminating in the establishment several years ago of the Alumni Council which co-operates with the trustees in major matters. A year ago this last autumn the Council convened on the hill where its members had studied and frolicked together. Some returned in a critical mood, asking why Amherst was not growing as fast as Dartmouth, or why the religious fervor there was not stronger. They had a bit of the attitude which sometimes characterizes freshmen when they come back to the old homestead after the first term and are troubled because the wall-paper is fading and the driveway needs repaving. But as these Amherst graduates lingered on the old hill the bright visions of their own college days began to live again. They asked what was their share in making the Amherst of the future. Some things about the dormitories, the recitation buildings and the college church looked shabby. The gymnasium was too small. As they talked with president and professors they learned what was lacking in various departments in the way of equipment. Compared with what successful alumni were earning out in the world the salary of these professors and instructors looked small. The outcome of consultation and inspection was the determination to make the outward equipment of the old college commensurate with the demands of the twentieth century. In due time able business and professional men of Boston, New York, Chicago, St. Louis and other cities outlined the framework of a three-million-dollar campaign.

This last November the initial rally was held at Amherst, four or five hundred key men in the undertaking coming from all over the country to perfect the final details and to get the personal thrill that should send each one back to do his full part. On the evening of Nov. 27, thirty alumni associations from the Atlantic to the Pacific held their annual dinners. Probably no American college ever before mobilized its sons the country over at one time and in just this way. Exchange of greetings by telephone and telegraph heightened the sense of fellowship. Within forty-eight hours picked men were at their task of pulling door-bells and buttonholing their brethren. The campaign had all the zest and movement of a great Red Cross drive. Men whose time commands a remuneration ten times that of the average college professor contributed their days and nights and signed checks running into the thousands. By the end of ten days two millions and three-quarters were in sight. The rest will come before Amherst shall celebrate next June with great exultation and deep gratitude its first centennial.

* *

Simply from a psychological point of view this Amherst campaign was interesting. It showed the concrete value to the college of certain traditions. A mighty asset was the fame of Lord Jeffery Amherst, the bluff English soldier who gave his name to the college that sits upon the hill. He is a comparatively recent discovery and really did not have as much to do with the foundations of the institution as did President Zephaniah Moore and his small staff of professors and the Connecticut River farmers whose gifts from their small incomes helped lay the foundations of the college. But Lord Jeffery is immortalized in the snappiest song known to American collegians, which along with "Cheer for Old Amherst," written by Jason N. Pierce of Washington and other relatively recent compositions have made Amherst a singing college. Many a victory on diamond, field and track is due to the way in which those undergraduates can sing. Undoubtedly the swing and music of these songs heard in many a banquet room through the month of November helped bring the campaign to its present gratifying point. Would that our churches today were singing churches! They would then be victorious churches.

Sabrina, that ancient goddess, whose statue once quietly dominating the flower beds near the college chapel, is now footballed back and forth between the odd and even classes, spending much of her time in old barns, wells and bank vaults, had her part, too, in the glorious outcome. Who will say that sentiment, even in this materialistic age, has lost its driving power?

* *

The Amherst campaign also showed that the little college in the country gets a hold on its students unequaled by any metropolitan institution. The memory of the view of the Pelham hills, of the "Hamp" road, of the Holyoke range and of the lovely Connecticut valley sweeping up toward Sugar Loaf and Tobey had its influence in unclasping many a purse and leading its owner to go down deeper than he would had the appeal simply been to pay back part of the thousand dollars or more which it cost his college to educate him over and above what his parents paid. Touching indeed were some of these gifts out of altogether too slender ministerial and teaching salaries, for this was not a rich man's campaign chiefly. An alumnus ninety years old, dependent upon others for care and actual sustenance, insisted on squeezing two dollars out of his small weekly allowance. From the Master's point of view his may have been the largest gift of all.

* *

And the college that stands for religion strongly, broadly, unflinchingly, may well derive encouragement for its future way from this successful Amherst campaign. Arthur Curtis James of New York City, the chairman of the Committee of One Hundred, in what he said to the assembled alumni in November lifted the movement to a high spiritual and even missionary plane. The cold fact is that men in the rush of the middle years will do more for an institution that has bred in them some sense of the value of unseen things, of the inevitable pull of duty, of the greatness of the unselfish life, than they will for an institution which simply undertakes to fill them full of facts and to equip them for a money-making vocation.

The five thousand Amherst alumni who with few exceptions have joined in this drive have done something more than put their college in shape to duplicate in the next century the magnificent service rendered in the last hundred years. They have become young and brave and strong again and thus Christ's own words have been freshly verified. "He that loseth his life"—in a great cause—"shall find it."

OUR PILGRIM PULPIT

The Christ of the Future

By Rev. Frank Dyer, D.D.

First Church, Tacoma, Wash.

"The Unsearchable Riches of Christ."—Eph. 3:8.

Standing as we are at this moment with the door of three hundred years of spiritual history closing behind us and at the portal of another three hundred years opening before us, it is fitting to inquire how we stand in relation to the supreme fact of our Faith: Jesus, the Christ! What are some of the gains made and the prospects before us concerning him whom we worship and adore?

When St. Paul spoke of the unsearchable riches of Christ, he did not mean that none of them could be discovered, he only meant that they could not be exhausted. Certain it is that we are vastly richer in the possession of Christ than were our Pilgrim Fathers. They had a great sense of the sovereign sufficiency of God, but Christ was not in their prayers, their hymns, their meditations, their preaching, as he is in ours.

Christ has grown immeasurably in his church. He is higher, deeper, broader, bigger and more vital to us than to our fathers. They had not the developed material that we have for thinking and feeling Christ. Christ is increasing—not decreasing. Every historic "Life of Christ" outside the Gospels has been written during the last century. We can scarcely count their number. How mightily Christ has grown in his Church through them. The Pilgrim Fathers missed all these.

Christ had not yet risen into the great hymnology of the church: "Joy to the World the Lord Is Come," "Come Thou Long Expected Jesus," "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night," "It Came upon the Midnight Clear," "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing," "Holy Night, Peaceful Night," "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old," "There Is a Green Hill Far Away," "Rock of Ages," "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," "Abide With Me," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Crown Him with Many Crowns," and Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus," have all been written since the Pilgrim time. In these and other ways we are richer in Christ than they were.

Have we now exhausted him? It is my profound conviction that our discoveries have only well begun. All man's growing nature and every artifice of his invention shall yet do the Christ greater honor. We cannot foresee or imagine how gloriously the next three hundred years shall discover and universalize the resources of Christ. His name shall endure as long as the sun. Of his increase there shall be no end. Beyond what we can do alone, who have longer known him, will come the revelations of his glory from the nations of the East. The world that has seen in him the highest conception of God and of the possibilities of humanity through him, will not desert him for any impostor or usurper. He has ploughed his name into history and posterity will reap the harvest. Bushnell saw it: "Others have paved the way for us, we for posterity, but Christ has paved the way for us all to the stars." His name is above every name now. All nations shall yet worship him. Let us all take down our harps and begin a new epoch of worship of our Messiah, for he is indeed the Saviour of the World.

"Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring in the Christ that is to be."

WITH THE CHILDREN

Tales of the Mayflower Children

V. Constanta's Plan

By Pauline Carrington Bouve

"What news is this you bring concerning Desire Minter?" inquired Mistress Hopkins, somewhat sharply, as Constanta stood twitching her kerchief with nervous fingers.

"Desire is going back in the ship that sails this day week," replied Constanta, eager to tell the news before any one else could do so.

"A silly maid's talk," said Mistress Hopkins. "No doubt there be others who would fain see England's shores again, but there be little chance that their wish be fulfilled!" and she sighed.

"Why, mother," said the little girl, "I thought our people would never, never wish to go back to the land that wickedly drove them forth because of their faith?"

"True, child, but 'tis a hard life on this lonely coast for those who have known comfort in civilized lands, and the heart is but human to yearn for 'the flesh-pots of Egypt' even as the Israelites did in the Wilderness, for all our good Elder Brewster says to the contrary." A tear rose to her eye, but was hastily brushed aside, as though in shame. "But tell me of Desire and this talk of her going back on the ship."

"All that I know is what Love Brewster told to Humility Cooper, and Humility told to Elizabeth Tilly, and Elizabeth told to me, that Elder Brewster had a letter from Desire's friends in Austerfield (brought by the ship's captain) saying that she be sent to them. Love heard his father read the letter out to Mistress Brewster, and, O mother, there was a packet also for Desire, and within it was a red fustian mantle cloak, a lace collar with points, and a gold neck-chain."

"Red cloak, lace collar, gold neck-chain!" repeated Mistress Hopkins, scandalized but interested. "Already the Evil One hath set a trap for the vain and ungodly! Verily, 'tis a good thing the baggage goes away before she sets a bad example to silly maids with her gewgaws and makes mischief among those who should be of sober mind. But what else said the letter, Constanta?"

"I know not what else. Love was in such haste to go with John Billington to hunt for bayberries that he would not tarry."

"John Billington, alack!" cried the good dame, throwing up her hands piously. "I wonder the Elder lets him go about with that mischief-making lad who is ever ready to get himself and others into trouble."

"John knows where the biggest berries grow and where the birds and fishes are plentiful, and he brings in food when he goes out," said Constanta, more sturdily than was usual for the children of those times to speak when talking with their elders.

"Say no more. You are grown a froward child and unmannerly," rebuked her mother. "A pretty affair he made for our good Governor Bradford, when he roamed off into the woods and was lost for five days among the savages, and a shallop must needs be sent to fetch him back to his parents," she continued severely. "And it was not mischief-making to meddle with firelocks and set a fire a-blazing in the ship, forsooth! But who comes there now but Desire herself! She can best tell us the news about her leaving the Plantation."

"Good-morrow, Mistress Hopkins and Constanta," said Desire, as she stood at the open door a moment later, her pinafore filled with dogwood blossoms and cherry blooms. "I plucked these for you, Constanta; I pray you do not forget me till they fade."

"I will never forget you, Desire," said the little girl, seriously.

"Fie! Fie! My table is just white from the sand-scouring Edward Lister gave it, and these flowering things will undo his work," and Mistress Hopkins swept the blossoms from the deal table where Desire had spread them, into a birch-bark basket that stood near. "So you would leave us, Desire, if what gossip Constanta brings be true?"

"Yes, Mistress Hopkins, I go back in yon ship that rides there in the harbor," answered the girl, a wistful look in her blue eyes.

"And does the thought give you joy?"

"Yes—and no. Of a truth I scarce can tell which it be," said Desire. "When my good friends brought me, a motherless child, from Austerfield to Leyden and then across the stormy seas to this land, I looked upon them as my very own parents, knowing no others. But when Master Carver, our Governor, died, and then within five weeks his lady also died, I was sick at heart and wearied to go—but now, when my kinsfolk have sent for me to return, I do not wish to go, though I needs must, but would stay here with you if I might. I pined for the good house at Austerfield that had the glass windows, and for the fresh milk, the cheeses, and sweet butter"—

"Mark the child! Sweet milk and cheeses, and butter in a land where there was never seen cow or bullock!" cried Mistress Hopkins, a note of bitterness in her voice.

"But there will be cows and bullock some day." It was Constanta who spoke. "Wrestling Brewster says that Master Edward Winslow will bring them when he comes back from London. He says after a year or two Master Winslow will go there to make them send food and clothes and tools and whatever we need." Little Constanta spoke hopefully, with the faith of a child.

"Mayhap we shall not be in need of them by the time they come," said her mother, dryly. "But Desire will not suffer cold 'neath her warm cloak, and she will grow fat on butter, cheese, biscuit-cake and butcher's meat." She touched the maiden's thin cheek with a gentle finger as she spoke, and laid a kind hand on her fair hair.

"And I will send a plum pudding with 'To Constanta from Desire' pricked out in the frosting on the top!" and she clapped her hands, then blushed.

"Forgive my boisterous manners, I pray you, Madam!"

"Tut, tut, a joyous laugh makes a light heart as well as the other way round, and all of ye children have the burden of much toil and care for young shoulders to carry, so laugh when ye can—that is, when your elders be not near by to be disturbed or take it amiss."

Reassured by her mother's rather unusually lenient mood, Constanta came close to her side and, clasping her small hands before her, said: "Would it not be fine to give Desire a fare-ye-well party before she sails away across the sea? We could have for the feast"—

"Merrymaking and feast! What ails the child, that she talks of feasting when there is no more than enough to keep us from starvation with ships coming laden with burchinglane clothing instead of the food we require—though we are glad enough to get that, I am bounden to say!"

"What is it that troubles you, good wife?" inquired Stephen Hopkins, who at this moment entered the room. "Has aught gone amiss, that you look so harried?"

"Nothing save that Constanta here is prating of a farewell merrymaking to be held because Desire sails back to England this day week. The child must suffer from a disorder, to speak so wildly."

"Nay, wife, nay," said Master Hopkins, "'tis but the nature of youth to lack wisdom. Perchance she remembers in her mother's time how the young people held games and had tables set out with biscuit-cake, sweetmeats, and bread and honey for their pleasure. Times are changed now, lassie," he added, turning to the little girl. "We are living in a strange, wild land, and for young as well as old it is toil and hunger, struggle and hardship, not ease and fat-living, playing and merrymaking." Then, seeing the tears in Constanta's eyes, he added, "If so be the young people could furnish the food, the rest were an easy matter, methinks, but since that is out of the question—"

"But, father, I have a plan in my head by which, an you and mother consented, we could get together all the food for the feast and trouble no one."

"How now? Out with your plan, whatever it be," said Master Hopkins, anxious to please his motherless daughter and at the same time not to annoy her step-mother.

"It is this, father: to let all of the boys and girls get the food for the feast. The younger boys can dig for shellfish and gather wineberries, while the older ones can hunt and fish. John and Francis have brought in a deer more than once, and they might again—between this day and a week; and Love and Wrestling and Henry Samson will get partridges and wild ducks and geese and mayhap a young turkey. These will make a great feast! And we will not mind if there be no biscuit-cakes or sweets. Is it not a fine plan, father, and may we not do it? We will not make trouble for mother or any of the older folk."

"Not make trouble?" echoed Mistress Hopkins. "And who will roast your venison and geese and partridges and turkeys—if it chance ye should have any of these dainties? Ye cannot eat them raw, I trow."

"Priscilla Molines!" exclaimed both Constanta and Desire in one breath.

"Of a truth, wife, Priscilla showed much skill in the broths and possets and gruels she made for the sufferers during the sickness," remarked Master Hopkins.

"Since ye be all agog to encourage these silly children in their foolish whim, I need say nothing for your counsel," said Mistress Hopkins, stiffly. "But I would not have Damaris and little Oceanus so pampered to their destruction!"

"There be little danger of pampering one

(Continued on page 870)

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

A History of Missions

West and East, The Expansion of Christendom and the Naturalization of Christianity in the Orient in the 19th Century, by Prof. E. C. Moore (Scribners). Dr. Moore deals in successive chapters, in a masterly fashion, with the spread of Western civilization and the Christian religion in the Eastern World; with the relation of religion to civilization: the effect of the secular influence and also of the missionary work with its manifold agencies. The study of these secular and religious factors in their mutual relations and their effects upon the East is the main aim of the author. He sets himself a new and tremendous task in showing the mutual relations and influences of these factors, particularly, of Christianity in organic relation to modern history as a whole.

The field covered by these lectures is very extensive, but it is done in a thoroughly scholarly fashion, and with a wonderful grasp on all the essential facts and factors. Wide reading, foreign travel, and large experience in the administration of our Foreign Missionary work have admirably qualified him for his task. The spirit of the author leaves nothing to be desired in the way of catholicity. There is much appreciation of the East and a generous recognition of what it has to contribute to the better life of the world. And in his treatment of large problems of missionary administration there is an exhibition of real statemanship. The book is destined to be of great service, and to have large influence in making for a better understanding between the West and the East, in bringing about a new and better relation of nations and races, and in giving men a new appreciation of the mighty work of missions in raising the level of peoples, and in unifying the world. It is a book which every minister and intelligent layman should read, and if they do "missions" will have a greater meaning and a larger place in their thought and work.

Daniel Evans.

The Pilgrim History

Bradford's History of the Plymouth Settlement, rendered in modern English by Harold Paget (Dutton). A piece of work well worth doing has been done in admirable fashion. The memorial volumes of this New England classic are large and heavy and the text is encumbered by a kind of spelling which is now unfamiliar. Mr. Paget has made the changes with excellent judgment and literary sense. An occasional phrase is better in the original as Bradford's quaint expression "the innocent trade of husbandry," which is changed to "the innocent pursuit of farming." But the best test is to take as a whole, one of the exquisite chapters for comparison of versions, such as The Flight to Holland or The Reasons Which Led the Congregation at Leyden to Decide upon Settlement in America. In the new form they lose nothing of force or effective expression.

On Religious Themes

Ethics and Natural Law, by George Lansing Raymond (Putnam). In this study of ethics the author determines "to draw no inference and advance no theory not warranted by known facts as ascertainable in connection with the operations of natural law." The larger part of the volume is a discussion of "keeping the mind's desires uppermost." At the same time the desires of the body are not to be suppressed, but both classes are to work together in harmony. It is a decidedly healthy and timely discussion, dealing with such matters as money-making, gambling, dancing, the theater, dress, chastity, temperance, industrial liberty, etc.

A Moslem Seeker After God, by Samuel Zwemer (Revell). This is a thorough-going study of the life of the Persian Moslem mystic, Al-Ghazali, who lived in the eleventh century. He is regarded as the greatest Moslem after Mohammed himself and the leader of his faith who came nearest to Christianity. Dr. Zwemer's attitude is deeply sympathetic with one whose life was seeking truth and earnestly endeavoring to live and learn and teach the religion which he believed to be true. Special emphasis is given to the benign influence of Jesus Christ as Al-Ghazali knew him through the literature of Islam—so near and yet so far.

Helps to the Study of the Bible (Oxford University Press). In all matters of historical Biblical criticism this volume presents the conservative position, asserting the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch, the single authorship of Isaiah, the historical value of Jonah, etc. It presents, with apparent approval, the Ussher chronology, placing the Creation at 4004 b. c. and follows throughout the scholarship of a century ago.

Encyclical Letter (Macmillan). Gives the latest conclusions of the Bishops of the Anglican communion (August, 1920), including the Encyclical letter and reports of committees, on such matters as International Relations, Industrial Problems, Position of Women, Problems of Marriage, Spiritualism, Christian Science and Theosophy, Church Union, etc.

Modern Premillennialism and the Christian Hope, by Harris Franklin Rall (Abingdon Press). A thorough discussion of the fallacious doctrine of premillennialism. The author begins with a study of the place of hope in religion. He shows that premillennialism "means despair as to the power of spiritual forces to redeem this world." It involves denial of the authority of Jesus, rejects the idea of a growing Christian social order and the larger program of the Church today, a Christianized world. The Church, it declares, is not God's agent for saving the world, but will itself be lost. It thus undermines loyalty to Jesus and to the Church. On the positive side the author sets forth the inspiring Christian hope of the Kingdom of God. We commend the volume to our readers.

Houghton Mifflin — From The Dangerous Inheritance

Recent Fiction

Homespun and Gold, by Alice Brown (Macmillan). It is rare to come upon a collection of stories so even in merit. They all concern the plain people of New England and the field is rich and varied. As set forth by the author, the whimsies, perversities and loyalties of this "peculiar people" furnish a full measure of enjoyment. The well-chosen title admirably describes the contents of the volume and is not taken, as often happens, from a single story.

The Dangerous Inheritance, by Izola Forrester (Houghton Mifflin). Beauty, temperament, and a chest of rare jewels—these were the elements of Carlotta's inheritance. She found it a very troublesome one; and the tale of her difficulties contains plenty of action, mystery, romance, and all the other ingredients of a pleasant evening's reading.

Dead Man's Plack and An Old Thorn, by W. H. Hudson (Dutton). The longer of these two stories is a new venture by this great master of style. He takes us into an English wood and on the traditional scene of it makes living for us a famous tragedy of nearly a millennium ago. It is a wizard's feat, done with the simplest means, without pose and apparently without effort—and Edgar and Elfrida and Dunstan live before us. The shorter story belongs in the cycle of the author's "A Shepherd's Life," and is earlier work. They both are worthy additions to the company of Mr. Hudson's widely variant records and imaginings of life.

Returned Empty, by Florence L. Barclay (Putnam). The author of "The Rosary" has struck a new vein, a dramatic and daring story of reincarnation. There is a mixture of material splendor, luxury and things of the spirit—but with a message of the folly of things which are of the earth, earthy. The story has for its frame work as to chapter headings and so on, Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar." What one thinks of the story will be largely governed by one's attitude to the psychic.

A Tenderfoot Bride, by Clarice E. Richard (Revell). Though fiction, this story of the experiences of an Eastern girl-bride in the "wild and woolly West" is true to life. That life is pictured in all its present-day phases—wild rides with untamed horses, the sheep business, roping and cutting out cattle and the rest. The book has been called "the first-hand epic of Western ranch life" and it deserves the name. There are some fine photographs of ranch life.

The Valley of Silent Men, by James Oliver Curwood (Cosmopolitan). This is a story of the Royal Northwestern Mounted Police. On what he believes to be his dying bed Sergeant Kent takes on himself the responsibility for a murder which he did not commit. He did not die but fled, branded as a murderer, with Marette, the girl of mystery. They fled into the Far North from Athabasca Landing, where the book begins. All sorts of adventures, hair-raising and thrilling, mounted police, trappers, voyageurs and all kinds of denizens of the Far North fill the book.

IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL

DR. DAVIS' BIBLE CLASS

Jesus Teaching Forgiveness

International Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 9. Matt. 18:21-25.

Begin the study of the lesson by reviewing your conception of what forgiveness means. It is not simply a pleasant Christian grace. It has a profound meaning and it fills a great place in the development of the highest life of mankind. So long as sin exists in the world and the finest relations of men are disturbed by it, forgiveness is a force, a factor of supreme importance. Think of the social power of forgiveness. All human experience proves that many of the finest issues of life are the result of forgiveness, God's forgiveness of man and man's forgiveness of man.

1. The Boundless Reach of Forgiveness. Do not cramp the lesson into the mere boundaries of mathematics. It is not a matter of a literal seven times, or seventy and seven, or seventy times seven. Seven was a complete number; seventy times that would mean completest completion if that were possible. That is, forgiveness knows no boundaries that can be set to it by arithmetic. We must take this statement of Jesus just as it reads. If God's nature is the background of the moral and spiritual universe, then forgiveness cannot be cramped by arithmetic, because God has put no limit to the range of his pardoning love. The worst sinner or the least may come to God sure of the answering forgiveness of the infinite Love.

2. The Power of Forgiveness. It may seem absurd to claim that forgiveness is a moral and spiritual force; but the truth is so important and has been stated so clearly recently that we shall quote from a book, the reading of which we strongly recommend. The Christian Adventure, by Rev. A. Herbert Gray of Glasgow, published by the Association Press, contains these clear and forceful statements:

"Christ would account that man happy who had most generously and freely forgiven his enemies. And he made his demand absolute. He would hear of no limitations. To one of his disciples, who had stretched his spirit to the point at which he thought it might be right to continue this policy until seven times, Christ replied by saying, 'No, but unto seventy times seven.' The world of that day gasped at such a doctrine. And it still does so. It is almost universally held that such forgiveness is sure to be interpreted as a sign of weakness. The refusal of it has been justified of late a thousand times on just that ground. But forgiveness—real forgiveness and not merely a cowardly refusal to display resentment—involves great strength. Aristotle, in drawing the picture of that high-minded man whom he accepted as his moral ideal, declared that he would be too great to notice small offenses, and would pass them by in sheer pride, while for great offenses he would take a truly great revenge. But Christ, with a far deeper moral insight, declared that real greatness of mind would show itself in a forgiveness that would never fail. He had climbed to heights undreamt of even by that great Greek moralist, when he prayed, 'Father, forgive them.'

"The secret of Christ's demand lies in the fact that forgiveness is the only ultimately successful way of overcoming evil. It is so, to begin with, in the case of individuals. Threats and punishments fail to eradicate the evil in man. At best they only force it underground. Bribes and promises fail to produce the virtuous heart. Their ultimate appeal is to the greed in man. Evil is a stronger thing than either the fear of pain or the hope of future reward. But it is not stronger than forgiving love. Jesus used that weapon with the Magdalene, with the thief on the cross, with Peter, and with Zacchæus. And in all these cases it achieved the great result. . . .

"One thing alone can deliver the world, and usher in a new day for mankind. And that one thing is forgiveness. It ends evil because it wins the evildoer. It gets at the root of evil, and undermines the spirit that produces strife. It saves the sinner because it makes its appeal to the good that is in him, and calls it into life. In individual cases it may seem to fail, but for all that it is for the race the supreme escape from evil."

This is searching, radical teaching. Does that mean the criminals should be pardoned? Should France forgive Germany and trust her? Should we trade with Russia? Dare we follow Jesus?

3. The Warrant for Human Forgiveness. Jesus as was his custom told a story to illustrate the truth. The warrant for human forgiveness is the forgiveness of God. It seems so foolish and wicked to harbor a grudge against a comrade when we have been so freely and so fully forgiven by God. But do we feel that we have been forgiven by God? Is there clear and actual meaning to our own experience in the words God's forgiveness? If not, ought there to be? How can we, the members of this Bible class, gain any definite and compelling meaning from the experience which we can hear affirmed in the testimony of a mission hall at any meeting of converts? Has God forgiven our sins? How, therefore, ought we to treat others?

Ozora S. Davis

Chicago Theological Seminary.

The Study of the Bible

XIII. Making the Bible a Living Book

What a wealth of material, touching almost every phase of life, the Old Testament furnishes. Abraham, that forerunner of the Pilgrim Fathers, generous, courageous, faithful, righteous, seeking a new home under the call of God, stands out majestically in the midst of his dim antiquity; Isaac and Rebekah are splendid examples of what divided counsel between parents will do in troubling a family. For genuine love and devotion, Jacob serving seven years for Rachel, which "seemed to him but a few days, for the love he had to her," is a beautiful illustration. Had we come upon the story of Joseph in booklet form for the first time, it would fascinate us by its plot, rivet our attention by its rapidity of action, and lift our ideals by its revelation of lofty character.

Where in history will you find more splendid unselfishness than in Moses, who left the side of Pharaoh to become the champion and leader of a horde of slaves, or truer mark of leadership than when he identifies himself with his rebellious people and asks God, in case he cannot save Israel, to blot him out with his own people? The Ten Commandments are as true and binding as they ever were. To be sure, a person who has the love of God in his heart does not need them, but that does not make it any less true that a man should not steal. The book of the covenant, the heart of the Mosaic legislation, has ideals of national co-operation and well-being, which put many of our own to shame. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" and "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy might" are found in Leviticus and Deuteronomy. There is the transient here, but also the permanent; there is the provincial but also the universal.

In all literature there is not a more beautiful pastoral than the story of Ruth who, leaving kindred and native land in her love for Naomi, insists, "Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest, I will die, and there will I be buried." Where will you find a choicer elegy than David's lament over the death of Saul and Jonathan, where he forgets Saul's attempts upon his own life and sings, "Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided"? So long as friend shall value friendship, and unselfish comradeship shall be esteemed, the friendship between Jonathan and David will lift our souls toward the sublimest human relationships. So long as we immortalize deeds of valor in songs of praise, so long as youth shall aspire to patriotic and heroic endeavor, the story of David and Goliath will thrill the hearts of our young.

The problem, why do the righteous suffer, has never received more dramatic treatment than in the book of Job. The Psalms cover every range of human life, express every type of religious sentiment, and reach from deepest sin and darkest human passion to divinest ideals and sublimest trust.

But the prophets are the superlative religious teachers of the Old Testament. Here we listen to statesmen of the first rank, strong, virile men, standing in the midst of their nation's political, social and religious life, daring to speak for God, to kings, princes, priests and people.

Isaiah scorns their religious ceremonies, and sacrifices, demanding that they "seek justice, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow." "What mean ye that ye crush my people, and grind the faces of the poor?" "Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no room, and ye be made to dwell alone in the midst of the land!" Here is a man with a social as well as an individual message. God's ideal is of a king, reigning in righteousness, princes ruling in justice, and of man as a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest. The second Isaiah, a prophet of the exile, is the spiritual guide of his captive people, sublime in his thought of God working his will among the nations, tender as the love of a mother, when he pictures God as feeding his flock like a shepherd, gathering the lambs in his arms, carrying them in his bosom and gently leading those that have their young. With penetrating vision he sees that God's redemption cannot be wrought by the nation as a whole, nor even by a considerable remnant; but finally by the suffering servant. He calls his people to break every yoke, to let the oppressed go free, and finally sees the Spirit of God upon one who shall bring "good tidings to the poor, bind up the broken-hearted, proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound."

Amos, with God's indignant righteousness burning in his pure soul, turns from his sycamore trees, and calls those who have "sold the righteous for silver, and the needy for a pair of shoes," that crush the poor, that oppress the needy, that are at ease in Zion, that are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph—calls them to prepare to meet God, who will set a plumb-line in Israel; calls them to "hate the evil and love the good, and establish justice in the gate."

Hosea, prophet of God's tender and unfailing love, with an evangel winsome as the Gospel, exposes his people's sin, sees them unfaithful as a wife who has become a harlot, yet woos them back from their degradation by telling them of God's care for them: "When Israel was a child, then I loved him. I taught Ephraim to walk; I took them on my arms; but they knew not that I healed them. I drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love. How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? How shall I let thee go, Israel?"

Jeremiah, prophet of the bleeding heart, burdened with his people's sin, yet sees the day when God shall write his law, no longer on tables of stone but in their hearts.

Micah, prophet of the poor, has a message which burns through his people's individual and social sin like a consuming fire. He cuts away their pretensions, rejects their burnt offerings, and brings them face to face with God, whose sole requirement is that they "do justly, love kindness and walk humbly with God."

Around the heart of these Old Testament messages we may build the actual situations which existed until they glow with living interest. (Answers to questions in a later issue.)

F. M. SHELDON.

The Herring Memorial Fund

(Designed to be serviceable to Mrs. Hubert C. Herring while she lives. After her death the Trustees of the Annuity Fund, in perpetuation of Dr. Herring's devotion to his brethren of the ministry, distribute the income, as their judgment shall deem best, to ministers who, in order to secure the benefits of the Annuity Fund, need special assistance in meeting their requisite annual payments. In case any part of the income in any one year is not needed for such purpose it may be used to supplement the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund. The minimum hoped for is $20,000).

Cummings, Mary K., Lisbon, N. H.
Leavitt, Darwin A., Chicago, Ill.
Moore, Frank L., Nutley, N. J.
Newcomb, E. H., Keene, N. H.
McAllister, Frank B., Worcester, Mass.
Ashby, Thompson E., Brunswick, Me.
Bagnall, Frederick, Rapid River, Mich.
Butler, Emily O., New York City.
Eggert, Mrs. Frederick, Portland, Ore.
Goodwin, Thomas O., Chicago, Ill.
Herbert, William, Sheldahl, Io.
Kilbon, John Luther, New York City.
Reasoner, Mrs. J. S., Lincoln, Neb.
Clark, James S., Brookfield, Vt.
Morse, Frank A., West Rutland, Vt.
Reed, Lewis T., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Stacy, A. P., Minneapolis, Minn.
Buttrick, Helen, Lowell, Mass.
Anonymous, Grinnell, Io.
Rhodes, Charles M., Taunton, Mass.
Russ, Charles C., Hartford, Ct.
Beard, M. L., Oberlin, O.
Beard, Gerald H., Bridgport, Ct.
Benedict, A. W., St. Louis, Mo.
Booch, H. R., Abingdon, Ill.
Bridgman, H. A., Boston, Mass.
Austin, L. H., Seeley, Cal.
First Congregational Church, Montclair, N. J.
Fowle, Luke W., Woburn, Mass.
Reeve, F. E., Western Springs, Ill.
Ropes, James Hardy, Cambridge, Mass.
Searing, Henry, Upper Montclair, N. J.
Williams, Mrs. E. M., Northfield, Minn.
Cutler, H. W., North Wilbraham, Mass.
(423 subscriptions aggregating $13,608.60)

A Tribute to George E. Keith

South Church, Brockton, Mass., has suffered a great loss. George Eldon Keith, called without exception by individuals in every walk of life "Brockton's greatest and best," came to his eternal rest on Dec. 9, as he was nearing his seventy-first birthday. Joining South Church in July, 1866, Mr. Keith always held that church close to his heart. He gave us the best of business advice, for it was his genius that built up the great "Walkover" shoe industry, the first to enter foreign stores activity, and now operating in almost every civilized country. He gave us of his time, his greatest service being to our children among whom he served for thirty years as Superintendent of the Primary Department, and ten years as Superintendent of the entire school. He gave us of his wealth, his greatest gift being the fine hall in which the Sunday school is housed, and in which hangs a magnificent painting of Christ among the children, the work, by special direction of Mr. Keith, of Gabrini, of Rome.

How much he gave himself could only be imagined as one watched the thousands who passed in that sad line on the day of his funeral. The finest of clothes mingled with rough shirts and some overalls in that line. Such a wealth of floral tribute as the city never saw had within it "close to Mr. Keith" the pine twig in the midst of a few sprays of red berries, the token of a former employee, now unknown to the family, who personally brought it to her "best friend and helper."

It is no surprise to us to find that his life continues to bless. Immediately after the funeral that great mass of the most beautiful flowers was distributed to every hospital in the city, to two tuberculosis hospitals in near-by towns, and to the aged residents of the poor farm. A fund of $100,000 is left in trust for special pension to faithful employees. Local organizations are remembered with endowment, among them, hospital, $50,000; Y. M. C. A., $25,000; Y. W. C. A., $10,000. The Northfield Schools, of which he was a trustee, receive $20,000; 10,000 is given to the American Board of which Mr Keith was a corporate member. The church which he served so well is given outright $50,000 for endowment, and also a fine helpful challenge of $25,000 to be held in trust, all principal and accumulations to be used in the erection of a new building if the church shall build within the next twenty-five years.

S. K. T.

Sabbath Situation in New Hampshire

The nation-wide discussion over Sabbath observance makes the New Hampshire situation, where something is being done about it, the more interesting. The Governor's Committee on Sabbath Legislation has held two important hearings in preparation for a report upon what promises to be one of the most important subjects before the coming Legislature. Probably no state ever before gave such careful consideration to the matter of Sabbath legislation.

At the first hearing the two chief recommendations were, first, the retention of the present law, chiefly based upon religious grounds, and, second, a tentative revision whose objective is stated in an interpreting clause as follows:

> "This law shall be so interpreted as to provide one day's rest in seven, to prevent commercializing the Lord's Day, to protect the rights of those who worship, and to secure the moral and religious training essential to citizenship."

The former position was taken under the leadership of the Lord's Day League of New England; the latter by the Sabbath Conference of New Hampshire, whose Legislative Committee is composed of officially appointed members of the leading denominations, but which of course compels no individual's assent to the bill.

The present law has been upon the statute books since 1842, but has long since been repealed in practice, and lacked but two votes of being repealed by the last Legislature. If the state has a right to compel religious observance and if the authority of the Sabbath has been transferred to the Lord's Day, and if the present law is a transcription of the Fourth Commandment, the statute should be retained unmodified. If, however, the basis of Sabbath Legislation is the public health and the public morals, and to provide a day for religion, leaving the manner of its observance free to the individual, provided that he does not interfere with the rights of others, then the proposed revision should be the basis of the new Sunday law.

The time of the second hearing was given largely to the Seventh Day Adventists who opposed all Sunday laws on the ground that they were religious laws and therefore unconstitutional. Sunday laws which are religious and coerce conscience should be repealed. The proposed draft requires no religious act on Sunday, and forbids no religious act on Saturday. Every man is free to do as his conscience leads. The state selects as the day for the civil Sabbath the one most convenient for the majority. Such an institution is not religious and is not unconstitutional. Indeed it is in the constitution itself which, in the case of the President, specially frees him from Sunday labor.

The Sabbath Conference has been anxious first to get the principles on which Sabbath legislation should be based and then to crystallize them into words which shall give a just and equal and enforceable law. It would neither see red nor blue. It would make no compromise of principle, but would make any compromise or change in words to protect the civil Sabbath as of inestimable value to the state. But when all this has been done, it would recognize "what the law could not do" and that the infinite values of the Lord's Day are still a matter of persuasion, so that they who have only observed it as a civil institution may be so attracted by its blessedness that they will also want to keep it as a religious institution.

The next step will be the report of the Governor's Commission in January.

EDW. A. TUCK.

Sec'y, The Sabbath Conference, Concord, N. H.

THE HOUR OF PRAYER

In the Beginning, God

Comment on the Midweek Prayer Meeting Topic for Jan. 3-8

BY ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN

Scripture passages. Gen. 1:1; Rom. 11:33-36; Heb. 2:6-18.

A Year with God. Is that what we look forward to? We shall then order our thoughts and our behavior accordingly. And this will not be our burden but our opportunity and joy. A man is known by the company he keeps and to walk with God is to become godly. What better can a man wish for himself, his neighbor or his friend than to keep that high companionship? Is it possible, then? It is not possible otherwise. The question is not whether we shall spend the year with God; but whether we shall be aware that we are doing so and make the most of the opportunity. That is religion—to walk with God. It is not a matter of creeds or even of ordinances, except as these express and help the personal relation. And this accepted and improved personal relation is the very aim of that life for which we were sent on earth. It is, for one thing, the great opportunity of individuality, of separate personal expression. For individuality is at bottom a social thing, and the highest part of our social relations is with God. To have acquaintance with him is to have a key to all social relations.

God at the Beginning, in Order that God May Be at the End. Our Bible would hardly be a Bible at all if it did not assert God at the beginning of our world's life. We do not know what time means. We are wiser to think of it as succession, the following on, one after another of experiences and events. Nor would our Bible be a Bible if God were not at the end of it. For each of us life is a journey from our home with God to our home with God. Our experience of earth is like a year at school. We move on toward what for each of us is a dramatic climax—the return of the student to his home. But we shall feel ourselves welcome there only in proportion as we have had the thought of our home in mind in hours of school.

God as Our Father. One thing which Christ came to do was to make it plain that God is our Father and is interested in what we do and learn. If he had not meant to show us that he could never have thought of the story which we call the parable of the Prodigal Son. I like Luke's version of our Lord's words of encouragement: "Fear not, little flock, for it is your father's good pleasure to give." We do not have to urge God to be generous. His loving-kindness runs before our wish, if it does not always take the same course as our imaginings.

Considering God First. Our best hopes, then, of life and for the world are bound up with the will of God. And this is true of our best hopes for ourselves. That is why Christ taught us to begin our prayer with the words, "Thy Kingdom Come!" We are blind or misguided or out of the way when we imagine that the best thing for us in this year with God would not be what God most wants. For that is heaven's law and must become the law of earth if human life is to flourish and grow strong.

Closet and Altar

IN THE MIDST OF THE YEARS

O Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make known, in wrath remember mercy.—Hab. 3:2.

Fear ye not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows.—Matt. 10:32.

Remember always that the days before you are God's days, for training first and then for final victory and peace, and you shall not be betrayed either by futile hopes or hindering disillusionments.—Bolton Jones.

Be at war with your vices, at peace with your neighbors, and let every year find you a better man.—Benjamin Franklin.

We sleep and wake and sleep, but all things move;
The sun flies forward to his brother suns;
The dark earth follows, wheeled in her eclipse;
And human things, returning on themselves,
Move onward, leading up the golden year.

Fly, happy, happy sails and bear the press;
Fly, happy with the mission of the Cross;
Knit land to land, and blowing heavenward
With silks and fruits and spices, clear of toll,
Enrich the markets of the golden year.

But we grow old. Ah! when shall all men's good
Be each man's rule, and universal Peace
Lie like a shaft of light across the land,
And like a lane of beams across the sea,
Through all the circle of the golden year?
—Alfred Tennyson.

Life is a fabric woven upon the loom of time by the shuttle of the days with thoughts and deeds for thread. We ourselves are the weavers and God is above it all. Each new year sees some pattern set, each year concluded is measured by the breadth we have woven.—Gaius Glenn Atkins.

Father in heaven, who hast sent thy Son to be our Saviour and our Brother, we come to thee with contrition of heart in the ending of the year. Remember not against us the evil we have done, but pardon and guide us into all righteousness. Give us the aid and teaching of thy Holy Spirit and let this year that stands at the door of our experience be a year in which thou shalt show thy hand and purpose in the affairs of men. Thy will be done, thy kingdom come, in our hearts first, we pray thee, that we may be true witnesses and instruments of thine. Amen.

—Isaac Ogden Rankin.

The Endeavorer's Vade Mecum

Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic for Jan. 9-15

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: The Most Helpful Passages in the Bible. Ps. 119:129-136.

Light from the Bible Passage

The enthusiastic commendation of the writer of this Psalm is echoed by any one who has made the Bible his "meditation all the day" (v. 97), whose attitude toward it is indicated in the words: "Oh, how I love thy law!" (v. 47). His continual prayer is "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law" (v. 18). To him the Bible gives light on life's dark problems and ways (vs. 105, 130), steadiness as he goes through them (v. 133), a fine spirit of cheer in his heart (vs. 54, 111) and an antidote to despair (v. 92, 114). To him it means life (v. 116) and salvation (v. 41). His very great concern was, as should be ours, that so many either do not know the Bible, or if they know it, do not observe it (v. 136).

Leads for the Leader

It is no disparagement of the Bible as a whole to admit what our topic suggests, that some parts of it are more helpful than others. Great sections of it are pure history, which has its helpful side. Much of it is minute legislation which has no influence on our personal life. There remain large sections which have a practical value for us.

Read (in advance) and indicate the practical everydayness of many of the Psalms, such as 1, 8, 15, 19, 23, 24, 27, 32, etc.

Consider the freshness even today of much of the wisdom of Proverbs.

Among the gospels, Mark's, is peculiarly appealing to young people. "Straightway" is a characteristic word in it.

Paul's letters have a modern note that cannot but attract our attention. The twelfth chapter of Romans, I Corinthians 3, Ephesians 6, Philippians 3, and the letters to Timothy are "just our kind."

Thoughts for Members

(The Bible) is a living, ever up-to-date guide book, a storehouse of all necessary wisdom. It is written in the history of men's lives, who fought exactly the battles I have to fight, who faced the same difficulties, temptations and doubts that I have to face.

I acknowledge that the Bible often seeks to rebuke me. I sometimes find it a hard master, bidding me do things that at the time I hate to do, go to places I certainly should not seek myself.

Extracts from Grenfell: A Man's Helpers.

A Moment of Prayer

O Thou who hast brought down through the ages thy Word of Words, we thank thee for that fortune which brought us to a land where that is an open book. May it become day by day more open in its light and leading for these lives of ours that become so easily darkened and wayward. Amen.

Fine New Plant for Dallas Church

Sunday, Oct. 31 of this year was a memorable and inspiring day for Central Church, Dallas, Tex., a picture of which appears on this week's cover. On that day its fine new sanctuary was dedicated. Central Church is only about 20 years old but from the first it has been one of the outstanding and highly useful organizations of the denomination in the Southland. During the pastorate of Rev. J. B. Gonzales it came to be felt, because of encroaching business on its downtown location, that removal to a residential district would be wise. A site was purchased and an advantageous sale of the old property negotiated. Even plans for the new building had been drawn when the war brought a pause. Later, however, under the efficient leadership of Mr. Gonzales and a loyal Planning Committee the enterprise was carried bravely forward.

The new building is dignified, churchly, beautiful. Modified Gothic, it has flying buttresses and high-arched windows supplied with attractive art glass. The auditorium is finished in dark exposed timbers, the walls are tinted in light tan, and the harmonious furnishing is completed by the splendid Watson memorial organ, presented by the widow and son of the late Alexander Watson, charter member and beloved leader in Central Church from the beginning. A gallery, foyer, rest and office rooms on either side supplement ample worship facilities. The departments, however, on which almost more care has been expended are those designed for the educational and social activities of the church. These are at the rear, entrance being had from both front and side streets. Assembly, primary department, class and club rooms, parlors, kitchen and dining-rooms are conveniently arranged. The entire plant involves an investment of about $100,000 and there is no debt-burden on the organization, neither was any appeal for funds made on dedication day.

In spite of inclement weather large audiences attended both the Sunday school and dedication service of the morning. The sermon was delivered by Dr. W. W. Scudder, old-time friend and co-laborer of the pastor, Rev. Thomas H. Harper, D. D., and was a statesmanlike presentation of the world-wide progress of the church. The pastor led in the act of dedication and offered the prayer. At night fitting addresses were delivered by Dr. H. B. Harrison, Supt. A. E. Ricker and Dr. Scudder. It was altogether a joyous and heartening day.

The finest significance of this dedication for Congregationalism in Texas arises from the strategic relation of Central Church to the Central South. For 20 years a downtown church, despite the supposed unfriendliness of the religious climate to Congregational work, Central has gathered strength and assumed effective leadership in city and state. Dr. Gonzales, who came to this field six years ago, had at an earlier date served as superintendent of Texas missionary work, and his broad sympathies allied the organization with all far-reaching Christian interests. Now, with the acquisition of the better location and the larger equipment, together with the coming as pastor of Dr. Thomas H. Harper, whose wide experience in the pastorate and in state work in Washington fits him to a remarkable degree for aggressive leadership, the outlook is most encouraging for a strong and successful advance all along the line in the state and indeed the Central South. Already in the two months since Dr. Harper came twenty-five new members have been gained, widespread community interest in East Dallas is evident, and the musical and social events of dedication week have served greatly to quicken friendly feeling and to strengthen Central's hold on the field. Dr. Harper and several members of Central have been elected to the Texas Missionary Committee which will suggest forward-looking plans and programs of Christian service in the state, and Central Church bids fair to be a real Cathedral Church for Texas Congregationalism for the days to come.

A. E. R.

Favorite Poems

Rev. Walter H. Riley, who sends the following verse, is minister of the First Congregational Church in Weeping Water, Neb. He writes that this poem, read first a good many years ago, has been a constant source of inspiration to him. It is from the pen of Edward Rowland Sill.

Forenoon and afternoon and night—forenoon,
And afternoon, and night—
  Forenoon, and—what!
The empty song repeats itself. No more?
Yea, that is Life: Make this forenoon sublime,
This afternoon a psalm, this night a prayer,
And time is conquered, and thy crown is won.

Gordon Meetings in Boston

The Evangelistic Association of New England will launch a series of noonday meetings at the Park Street Church, Boston, on Jan. 3, which will continue through the entire first month of the New Year.

Mr. S. D. Gordon, author of the famous "Quiet Talks" series of books, is to be the daily speaker. Mr. Gordon has just completed a most successful series of meetings in Chicago.

FRANKLIN ACADEMY

1881 Fortieth Anniversary 1921

DR. HERRING wrote

My dear Mitchell:

I am heartily interested to know that you are finding friends for the work of Franklin Academy.

It is more than eighteen years since you and I began to work together for it and similar interests in Nebraska. I believe very thoroughly in the work which the Academy is doing.

Wishing you the greatest success, I am,
Faithfully yours,
(Signed) HUBERT C. HERRING.

Note Well Three Things

1. Every dollar given on this pledge will be used exclusively to help wipe out our interest bearing debt.
2. Every dollar so given (up to $7,000) will secure for us for the same purpose another dollar from the Congregational Education Society. 100 per cent. on your investment.
3. At your option, your gift may be without condition, or on the condition that the full $9,000 be secured.

Liberty Bonds received at par. Send us a shower.

THE PROCESSION OF THE FORTIES

We are paying interest on a debt of	$15,000
(The accumulation of forty years)
The Congregational Education Soc. Boston, offers	7,000
On condition that the Academy raises balance	$ 8,000
Add interest on $15,000 for one year	1,000
Total for the Academy to raise	$ 9,000

40 gifts of $100 each	$4,000
40 gifts of $ 50 each	2,000
40 gifts of $ 25 each	1,000
40 gifts of $ 20 each	800
40 gifts of $ 15 each	600
40 gifts of $ 10 each	400
40 gifts of $ 5 each	200
280	$9,000

100 per cent.—where every dollar counts two. Come, let's go!

THE PLEDGE OF THE FORTIES

To help secure the conditional offer of $7,000, described above, to clear Franklin Academy of debt, and to meet accruing interest, I will be one of the forty persons to give to Franklin Academy,

One Hundred, Fifty, Twenty-Five, Twenty, Fifteen, Ten, Five, ($.............)
(Underscore)

....DOLLARS
(Write here the sum you will give)

Payable on or before February 9, 1921, the 40th anniversary date. Date ....

Name .... Address ....

Remit to G. W. Mitchell, President, Franklin, Nebraska

IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLE

How They Do It

An Exchange of Methods in Church Work

Musical Services of Worship

A solution has been found for the problem of the Sunday evening service by PILGRIM, DORCHESTER, MASS., PROSPECT HILL, SOMERVILLE, MASS., and other churches of Greater Boston. Mr. Paul Shirley has perfected a plan by which members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other musical artists assist the pastor and organist in attractive "Sunday Evening Musical Services of Worship."

"Musical artists," whether of the "high-brow" order or of the Bolshevist "rag-time," do not always speak the language of church worship. The quality of the musical selections as well as the conduct of the musicians has not jarred the most sensitive minds and they have left the people in a receptive mood for the message of the minister.

Fortunately for the high and popular character of these services the director is familiar with the history and aims of the church as well as the spirit of the true worshiper. In his published articles Mr. Shirley has revealed the secret of his ability to use his musical genius and skill in voicing the religious emotions. "Through the centuries, religion has been as great a stimulant to art as art has been to religion." "Both art and religion reveal their true inwardness in the high moments of inspiration." "Take art away from religion and you strip the cathedral of its architectural beauty, you rob the liturgy of its choicest treasures, you deprive the temple of much that emphasizes its holiness." "The early fathers of the church were well aware of the value of music when they drew on it to lend color and beauty to the church service. And the primitive hymn-chant, and the interchange of prayers and responses between the clergy and congregation, led up to Bach's 'Passion' and Handel's 'Messiah,' whose music actually comprises the religious service within itself."

"If religion is really to perform the function of a great socializing and humanizing institution, it cannot rely solely upon theology and dogma; it must be truly the great, all-embracing heart into which the blood of the community flows for purification, streaming out again to impenetrate individual and communal life with its ideals."

During the past year 134 "Musical Services of Worship" have been given, under the direction of Mr. Shirley, in nine different churches in Boston proper. The usual order of these services has been about as follows: organ prelude, call to worship, the Doxology and invocation; followed by five musical numbers. Then has come a hymn for the congregation, the offering and a twenty-minute sermon or address; concluding with four musical numbers, a prayer, the benediction and organ postlude.

At each service new musicians, new instrumental combinations, and new vocalists have appeared. Thirty-nine members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and 20 other Boston musical artists assisted in these services during the past year. None of the musical selections lasted over seven minutes.

The pastor and his people have great satisfaction in knowing that they are giving to their community music of the highest order that is not lacking in popular qualities. The continued appearance in the congregations of people from the humblest walks of life alongside of people of the finest culture is gratifying. It is a pleasure to share these services with many people who cannot afford to attend concerts in Symphony Hall. As a rule the offerings have covered the expenses.

Varying the Every Member Canvass

The Every Member Canvass no longer needs defense. It has demonstrated its effectiveness. It need not be perpetuated year by year along stereotyped lines, however, and a satisfactory adaptation was executed on Dec. 5 in the CHURCH OF THE MESSIAH, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Having carried out the conventional program for several years, the pastor, Rev. H. D. French, varied the method this year. Following sermons on loyalty Nov. 28 and Dec. 5, and general preparation for the canvass, the whole affair was efficiently consummated between 11 and 12.30 A. M. on the canvass date. One essential feature of preparation had involved the pastor's urgent request that every member be present on the given Sunday for one or both of the services. So genuine is the loyalty of the church that this was almost entirely accomplished.

The church treasurer preceded the minister's sermon by a businesslike statement of financial progress during the 13 years of the church's history. Following the sermon, pledge cards were distributed to the congregation. A prayer from the pulpit immediately preceding the signing of the cards gave the act a spirit of consecration not always attached to a financial canvass. Immediately each person found his place in the line before the table assigned to his initial, there being stationed in alcoves of the church men who held in their hands the list of all the A to C's, D to J's, and so forth, on the membership list. These tabulations showed what Mr. Smith had given in past years, so that his pledge when presented could quickly be added to the data at hand. Upon presenting the card, he received his packet of envelopes for the year 1921 and within a relatively short time after the last person had been so provided the workers could total their statements and have the canvass results in black and white.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

Embodying the spirit of Jesus in remarkable measure, laboring to supply the deepest needs of men, providing the motive power for their best institutions and achievements, and ever holding up the standards of the kingdom of joy and peace, how essential is the church and how glorious!

The few members not present on this Loyalty Sunday were followed up later and the results of the canvass have been in every way gratifying, albeit the budget involved a large increase both in benevolences and current expenses. One portion of the latter addition provides for an increased salary to the pastor.

While this method would not prove satisfactory in the large downtown church with a membership but loosely attached, it did prove effective under the conditions at the Church of the Messiah and should be equally workable in any other similar situation.

Another unique event in this neighborhood church was the rental by the Young Women's Guild of a nearby moving picture theater on a recent Thursday night, when the proceeds of the "good clean show" supplemented by local talent netted over $250 toward the Crippled Children's Guild, a special project of this group.

S. E. B.

Hospitality Week at First, Toledo

An event eagerly looked forward to by the "shut-ins," sick and other members of FIRST, TOLEDO, O., is hospitality week, held in the spring. The Deaconess Board, numbering 22, with an efficient chairman, secretary and treasurer, have the program in charge. Each deaconess, with a group of ten women, call upon the entire membership of the church, leaving an Easter greeting and an invitation to the Holy Thursday evening communion.

The plan has been worked out as follows: The entire membership having been divided among the 22 deaconesses, each deaconess asks 10 women to help on her list, and to these women are given a certain number of calls to make, during the three days preceding the Holy Thursday communion.

The calls have been systematized, grouping streets and numbers, so that a person calling will have her ten or five calls all on one street or in one location. On Monday of Holy Week all who are to make calls assemble at ten o'clock in the church, for a brief word of prayer from the pastor.

In making calls, if unable to find any one at home, the personal card of the caller is left with the Easter greeting.

The chairman keeps an accurate list of those calling and the list of members, so if any one is forgotten or overlooked, she can quickly rectify the mistake.

Over 700 people were present at the Holy Thursday communion last year when a large number of new members were received. This is always one of the most beautiful and impressive services of First Church.

On Making Use of Your Local Papers

By the Parson

The Parson is pastor in a small Wisconsin city, in which are published two weekly papers. One of these papers claims 5,000 readers, and the other says it has over half as many. They are widely read.

Every week in each of the papers the Parson conducts a column which goes under the caption, The Parson's Corner. In the Corner appear notices, reports of church activities, brief synopses of sermons, striking quotations in prose and in verse, which have special reference to religious living, and church news of the town.

Occasionally the editors call the attention of the Parson to references to the Corner in their exchanges, who raise the query why more pastors do not help their work and that of the editors, by writing for the papers in their towns. One editor remarked that if he wanted to get any church news he "had to pry it loose from the preachers." Beware of false modesty, my brethren. Editors will gladly give you large space as regular contributors, if you will be wise, racy, newsy and helpful, boosting other churches and workers besides your own. In your column be the religious editor, but don't say you are.

Some weeks the Parson has used more than fifty inches of column space, and he has reached thousands with his messages. Be sure your Corner will be widely read. Make a New Year resolve to make more use of the local paper, and editors and readers will arise and call you blessed if you are not too prosy.

Annual Meetings

It's annual meeting time again and the reports are beginning to come in, reports, too, that sound an optimistic note for the future at the same time that they are emphasizing work accomplished. We must stress brevity in the reports of these meetings and ask those who send them to us for publication to put in only the essential features. We want to publish all the accounts sooner or later but perhaps it is needless to say that there must be a waiting line—and please bear in mind the request for brevity.

Interlaken, Mass., Rev. J. P. Trowbridge, pastor, heard cheering reports from the church officers. The missionary offerings for the last 10 months amounted to $182. The home expenses have been $1,200, and the church has $300 in the treasury.

Park Manor, Chicago, Ill., Rev. J. R. Heyworth, pastor, reports a remarkable increase in every department. The church school grew during the year from 450 to 591. Two Young People's Societies reported growth and steady work. The Women's Society showed special offerings of money and gifts to various worthy causes, all of this being above the regular apportionment gifts. The church accessions for the year total 71. An increased budget and greatly enlarged benevolence budget were unanimously approved. The program complete in every department was outlined by departmental leaders and pastor and was discussed in detail and then adopted. The church is building steadily in every section of its work.

Antigo, Wis., Rev. W. R. Dixon, pastor, has had a successful year. All branches reported their membership increased, all bills paid, and a nice balance in each treasury. The present membership is 353. The pastor has been voted a $300 increase in salary.

Wabasha, Minn., Rev. E. D. Gallagher, pastor. Every organization reported a balance in the treasury. Over 200 people enjoyed a splendid supper served by the ladies and an Every Member Canvass for the next year's budget was started auspiciously after a financial address given by Secretary Shaw. Words of praise were given for both the pastor and his main assistant, Mrs. Gallagher.

From East to West

MAINE

Leaves Bangor Pastorate

Rev. H. S. Capron, who recently resigned the pastorate of Hammond St., Bangor, to accept that of United, Newport, R. I., brings to a close a pastorate which began in September, 1916. He came to Bangor from Irondequoit, N. Y. His pastorate in Bangor, beginning during the war, has been marked by all the distractions and perplexities of the war and its consequences—divided interests, rising costs of living, and unrest. Amid it all, though not ignoring the great moral and spiritual issues raised, Mr. Capron has continued preaching the plain, straightforward message which is his, in the plain, oftentimes homely, always lucid and intelligible style characteristic of him in all his public utterance. His sermons have been well conceived, thoughtfully wrought out, and ended when their burden was delivered. He has been deeply interested in Sunday school work, a hearty friend of missions and missionaries, and a leader in state-wide young people's work. As the latter he has served as President of the state Y. P. S. C. E. Union and been active in the sessions of the summer school held each year at Pittsfield, Me. For the past three years he has been county director on the Board of Directors of the Congregational Conference and Missionary Society of Maine, being active on some of the most important committees. Mrs. Capron, a trained kindergartner, has been not only active in the parish, so far as a large family would permit, but has done good service in the Sunday school.

In going to Rhode Island Mr. Capron returns to the state in which he was born and lived till his graduation from Brown University in 1900. The United Church in one of its constituents represents the church of which Dr. Samuel Hopkins, the eminent theologian and famous opponent of slavery, was pastor during the last third of the 18th century. Of the United Church Henry van Dyke was once pastor. By its situation, size, history and importance it may well challenge the best and strongest work of a man in the prime of his manhood.

C. C.

New Hampshire

Impressive Observance in Nashua

The Pilgrim Tercentenary was observed by First and Pilgrim, Nashua, with services of unusual interest. On Forefathers' Sunday, Dec. 19, the pastor of Pilgrim, Rev. L. L. Barber, arranged a service following the ancient Pilgrim order of worship. No musical instrument was used duing the service. Two of the ancient psalm tunes, one from the Bay Psalm Book of 1640 (the 23d Psalm), the other from the Geneva Psalm Book of 1561, were reproduced with the ancient spelling and form, lined out by the musical leader, set by the pitch pipe and sung by the congregation. The "expounding of ye doctrine" or the sermon was on the Pilgrim Spirit Three Hundred Years Later. Throughout the service explanation was made of each item. An hour-glass upon the pulpit lent additional interest. The service was thoroughly appreciated by a large congregation.

On Sunday evening First and Pilgrim Congregational, First Unitarian and First Universalist churches united in a great service attended by more than 1,100 people. The combined choirs of the four churches rendered a notable musical program. The responsive reading prepared for the service consisted of selected passages from William Bradford's "Historie of Plimouth Plantation." The speaker for the occasion was the Hon. Arthur H. Wellman of Boston, who delivered an inspiring address on the Pilgrim Spirit. Unusual interest has been aroused in Nashua in the Pilgrim venture by these services, by a united service in which the stereopticon told the Mayflower story and by a series of addresses by the pastor of Pilgrim Church on the Pilgrims and Their Venture. It is hoped early next summer to present a great pageant as the culmination of the tercentenary.

MASSACHUSETTS

Unitarians and Congregationalists Get Together

The Boston Ministers' Meeting on Dec. 20, by the invitation of the Unitarian Ministers' Meeting, united with them in Unity House, Park Square. A large number of the men of the two bodies was present. Luncheon was served, after which Rev. H. F. Burns of Dorchester, who retains his Congregational affiliations, was introduced to preside over the joint meeting.

The first speaker was Mr. Edwin O. Childs, Mayor of Newton, Mass., an active worker of Eliot Congregational Church. He spoke of the applications of our national motto, E Pluribus Unum, of many states one nation, of many races one people, of many creeds one faith, of many bended knees one God. He paid a tribute to the Pilgrims who were willing to change their sphere of life for an ideal, a test where many fail, and said that the ministers compose the one group in the community who have never let go of the belief that the world is growing better.

The other speaker was Mr. Ernest G. Adams, a Boston business man and Chairman of the Unitarian Forward Movement. He said he had been "a retired Christian" but had "gotten religion." He said that the great United States is getting irreligious when the principles of our flag do not mean service. History tells us civilized society has rested on religion and that free government prospers best among religious people. God is yearning for our co-operation. Reading the Old Testament story of the exodus, as a business man, he charted it and found that whenever they thought of God's interest and his plan, the line went up on the chart, and whenever they became idolaters, i. e. dollar-worshipers, the line went down on the chart. There is no better Americanism than to build up our churches. "I wish to salute every church I pass as naturally as I salute my flag."

A. J. M.

Donation Party at Middleton

Middleton, Rev. H. A. G. Abbe, pastor, keeps up the old custom of the donation party. The week before Thanksgiving a surprise party was given at the parsonage and a goodly store of vegetable products, preserves and groceries were brought in, besides more handed in afterwards. Altogether $47 in cash was also received. This was the second party this year.

Newton Centre Church Forward-Moving

First Church in Newton, Newton Centre, has begun the publication of a weekly parish paper, called The Welcome, which is mailed to each family on Saturday, and replaces the calendar formerly distributed in the pews. Similar papers are found useful by the churches in Auburndale, Melrose and other places.

The vesper services which proved successful last year have been resumed and will be continued through the winter. The first of the series, held Nov. 7, attracted an audience which taxed the capacity of the meeting-house. The church is fortunate in having an orchestra of 52 pieces, conducted by the organist, Mr. D. Ralph Maclean. Under his inspiring leadership it has won an enviable reputation. The orchestra furnished the musical program for the opening vesper service.

The adult department of the Bible school has been reorganized as a Bible Institute, with a paid membership of over 100. Prof. A. E. Bailey of Boston University is the leader and is conducting a series of studies in the development of the religious consciousness in the Hebrew nation, tracing the growth of the religious ideas of the people in the Old Testament, and comparing them with the New Testament and modern standards.

Nineteen new members were received into the fellowship of the church Nov. 7, of whom nine came on confession. The pastor, Rev. E. M. Noyes, recently preached his 26th anniversary sermon.

Tablets to Dr. Burnham and Dr. Swift

A beautiful and impressive service was held Nov. 14, in Central, Fall River, when memorial tablets were unveiled for Dr. Michael Burnham (1870—1882) and Dr. Clarence F. Swift (1902—1918), former pastors, both now deceased.

It was a red letter day for the church, for it marked the 78th anniversary of its organization (Nov. 16, 1842), and gave tribute to two of its beloved pastors whose terms there were the longest of the seven pastorates, besides that of Dr. Eli Thurston (1849—1869).

The tablets, given by the congregation, were of Botticino marble (52 x 28), with mosaic borders and brown lettering. As each tablet was unveiled, the congregation rose. Eloquent and affectionate tributes to each pastor were given by Messrs Henry H. Earl and Simeon B. Chase and an appropriate address on the "Significance of the Ministry for Our Times" was made by Dr. T. S. Devitt, the present pastor.

Printed in the program was a testimonial to the late C. V. S. Remington, for 70 years an active member and many years an officer of the church; also an original poem written by Miss Mary L. Holmes for the memorial service. Special music and flowers, violin and organ chimes added to the solemnity of the services.

Chicago Theological Seminary

Is affiliated with the University of Chicago. Seminary instruction is supplemented by the varied and limitless opportunities of the University and the Divinity School. Tuition free.

Trains for
- Pulpit and Pastorate
- Missionary Work
- Community Service
- Religious Education

Opportunity is offered to secure the M. A. degree during preparation for the B. D.; also an annual two-year honor fellowship for post-graduate work.

5757 University Ave., Chicago, Illinois. OZORA S. DAVIS, President.

The Congregational Training School For Women

Trains for Christian leadership.

The work of Church Assistant, Director of Religious Education, and Instructor in Week-day Religious Education offers opportunity for the finest and highest type of social service.

One and two year courses. Expenses low.

MISS MARGARET TAYLOR, Dean,
5603 Dorchester Ave., Chicago, Ill.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION

An undenominational training school for

The Ministry Religious Education
Foreign Missions Social Service

Curricula high grade and modern. Graduate degrees. University of California privileges. Opportunities for the study of Oriental peoples. Open to men and women of all Christian denominations. For catalogue address

WILLIAM FREDERIC BADE, Dean, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

The Graduate School of Theology
OBERLIN COLLEGE

A strong, well balanced course, preparatory to the work of the ministry at home or abroad.

Second semester's work begins February 8 with all the regular faculty teaching.

Address G. W. FISKE, Jr., Dean, Oberlin, Ohio.

BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

105th year opens Sept. 29, 1920. For College or non-College men. Courses, regular and elective; leading to diploma or degree; modern, thorough, practical. Expenses low. For Catalogue or information address

Prof. Warren J. Moulton, Cor. Sec'y.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Research and Training in Five Departments:
1. Pastoral Service.
2. Service in the Foreign Field.
3. Religious Education.
4. Practical Philanthropy.
5. History and Philosophy of Religion.

Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.

Degrees of M. A., B. D. and Ph. D., may be obtained by students. For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

The Pratt Teachers' Agency
70 Fifth Avenue, New York

Recommends teachers to colleges, public and private schools in all parts of the country.
Advises parents about schools. WM. O. PRATT, Mgr.

In Memory of Former Pastors

Tablets erected in Central Church, Fall River, Mass., to Dr. Burnham and Dr. Swift, former ministers of that church.

RHODE ISLAND

Celebrate Raising of Parsonage Fund

Darlington, Pawtucket, Rev. E. E. Frederick, pastor, on Nov. 5, celebrated its success in raising its parsonage fund. After a profitable fair the people who loaned upwards of $1,600 to the fund a year ago without interest, received their checks, surrendered their receipts and listened to stirring words by Rev. J. D. Dingwell and Rev. G. A. Burgess on Cheer, Thrift, and Outlook. G. A. B.

Westerly Raises Apportionment

Pawcatuck, Westerly, in its canvass for the Congregational World Movement, which was made Dec. 12 and the week following, reached the goal of $1,400 before Dec. 19. Rev. F. A. MacDonald, pastor of Pawcatuck, has strongly presented the matter of stewardship to his people and their response is evidence of the work of the pastor and the loyalty of the people to the causes for which the C. W. M. makes appeal.

NEW JERSEY

Splendid Response at Plainfield

After an inspiring sermon delivered to an audience that so crowded the edifice that chairs had to be carried in for the first time at any service in its history, and without any previous notice, Rev. H. E. Clarke of Plainfield last week asked for a cash offering to be paid for famine relief in China and Armenia and for the international Christmas gift for the colleges of the Orient for women. He said: "I would not ask anything for ourselves on an occasion like this, but there is nothing I would not ask for Christ and his needy children. I am asking this morning for the modest offering of $1,000 for these causes and we can give it."

The congregation responded with $915.15 for this special cause. The total offering for the service, including church support and other missions, amounted to $1,044.06. The Young Women's Mission Society has raised over $100 additional for these causes. H. E. C.

ILLINOIS

Elgin Rededicates Church Building

After seven months of strenuous effort the damage done the church building of Elgin by the tornado of March 28, has been more than made good and the rededication service was held on Nov. 7. The plant is now in every way more convenient and adequate than it was before. A $4,000 heating plant and two new pianos, costing $1,700, have been added, making the total amount expended at this time about $50,000, all of which has been subscribed. The new roof and interior decorations, new modern lighting system and acousticon, new exits and vestibules, and the enlarged dining-room and kitchen were greatly needed and would have been required soon regardless of the devastating storm, so that not all of the present expenditure is paying for a loss. The church now has more contributing members than ever in its history. Its income has more than doubled in the past five years, having increased annually during the present pastorate. Rev. J. W. Welsh is pastor.

Church Bell Rings Each Morning

Much interest has been centering around the Sunday evening service at Waverly as a result of the question-box conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Fuller. Mr. Fuller has prepared daily Bible readings also for the use of his parishioners in the observance of family worship. The church bell is rung at eight o'clock every morning as a reminder that the day should be begun with God.

MICHIGAN

Pontiac a Growing Church

Pontiac has received 135 new members during the year, 102 of these on confession. In the last eight years the church has received 518 members on confession and 172 by letter, bringing the present membership up to 770. During the same period the budget has increased from less than $3,000 to more than $15,000. Rev. M. J. Sweet is pastor.

WISCONSIN

Milwaukee Tercentenary Celebration

A remarkable Pilgrim celebration was carried out under the auspices of the Young People's Union of Grand Ave., Milwaukee, on the nights of Dec. 9 and 10. The program included a drama of six episodes, using 116 characters in costume and a special choir of 40 voices. No effort or expense was spared to make the pageant complete and perfect. The material

PELOUBET'S
Select Notes

The World's Greatest Commentary on the International Sunday-School Lessons

By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.

Let us send you a pamphlet containing the first lesson taken from the volume of 1921

Price, $2.00 Net; $2.10 Delivered

W. A. WILDE COMPANY
120 BOYLSTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.
Rand-McNally Building, Chicago

Crannell's Pocket Lessons
for 1921

Contains all of the International Sunday School Lessons for 1921, with References, Daily Bible Readings, and Analyses. Vest pocket size. About two hundred pages clearly printed on good opaque paper. Size, 2¾ x 5¾ inches. Substantially bound in cloth. Just the thing for the busy teacher or scholar.

Price, 40 cents

THE JUDSON PRESS
1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

INTERCOLLEGIATE TOURS
BOSTON U.S.A.

SUMMER CRUISE
THROUGH ST. PAUL'S MEDITERRANEAN

Palestine by auto and camp. The glory that was Greece and the mystery that was Egypt. University credit for Biblical History and Geography.

Prof. Albert E. Bailey
Leader
65-K Franklin St., Boston

Massachusetts General Hospital

Training School for Nurses. Established 1873. 1,350 Graduates. Prepares its students for advanced positions. For particulars consult Circular of Information. Address Sally M. Johnson, R. N., Supt. of Nurses, Boston, Massachusetts.

was arranged and written by various members of the Church and the Young People's Union. The splendid impression of the whole pageant was enhanced by careful costuming, expert staging and the best of lighting effects. All of this produced an effect never to be forgotten by the audience that crowded the church.

KANSAS

Memorable Services at United, Wichita

UNITED, WICHITA, recently concluded a week of memorable services, conducted by Dr. W. E. Barton, of Oak Park, Ill. Three years ago the pastor of the church, Rev. H. C. Herring, arranged for Pres. O. S. Davis, of Chicago, to spend a week as the guest of the church, speaking every night on fundamentals of Christian doctrine, and conducting what was virtually a theological school during the days, attended by a goodly number of ministers from over the state. The great success of this series of meetings made it seem wise to secure Dr. E. A. Steiner, of Grinnell College, for a similar series the next year, and Dr. C. F. Aked, of Kansas City, for the year 1919. Each series proved to be eminently successful in sustained interest on the part of the community, and all looked forward this year for another week of noble addresses.

Dr. Barton's service with the church began at a banquet for the men of the community, attended by nearly 150 men, to whom he spoke on "The Longer Voyage of the Mayflower." The general theme of his evening addresses, which he called "sermon-lectures" was "Great Affirmations," and the several themes were: "I Believe in Man"; "I Believe in God"; "I Believe in Jesus Christ"; and "I Believe in the Atonement." In the afternoons of the four days, Dr. Barton gave four notable addresses on "Prophets of the Puritan Spirit." "The Prophets" whom he selected were Cotton Mather, Jonathan Edwards, Horace Bushnell and Washington Gladden.

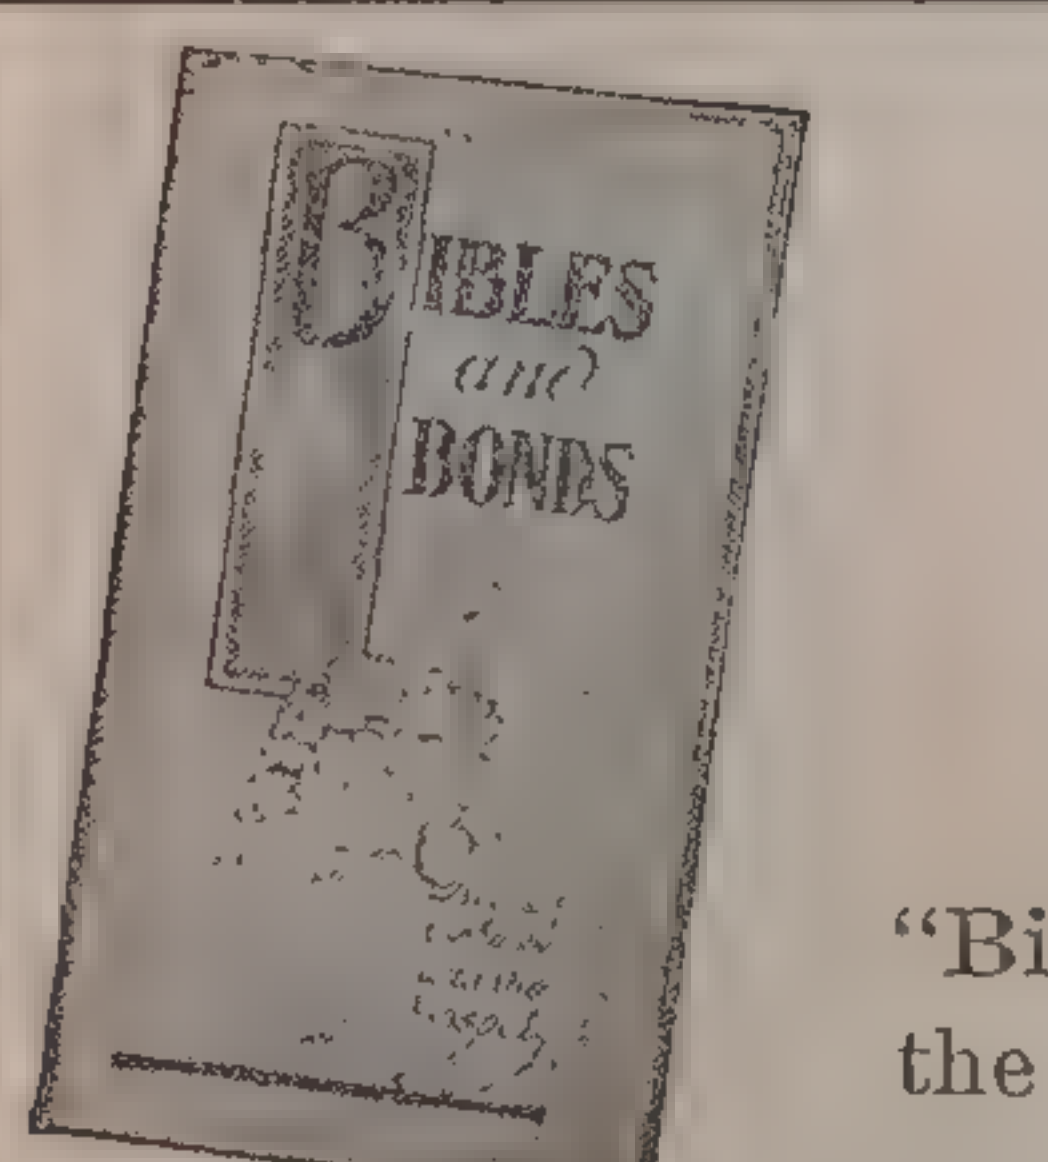
Dr. Barton was also secured for the services of the following Sunday, Nov. 14, when he preached to great audiences on the "Deluge and the Rainbow," and "The Geography of the New Jerusalem." At the Sunday evening service a minute was adopted by the church expressing its deep appreciation of Dr. Barton's addresses.

G. S. R.

TEXAS

Austin Observes Pilgrims' Coming

Especially notable is the fine way in which AUSTIN observed Pilgrims' Day. The largest theater was used for the meeting place. The governor of the state, W. P. Hobby, was the first speaker; the mayor of the city and professors of the university were also on the program. The Junior High School of the city helped also with music and tableaux, showing events in the life of Columbus and the Pilgrims. The celebration was given Sunday afternoon, Dec. 19, and was an elaborate and splendid exhibition. Rev. A. D. Shaw, pastor of First Church, who is bringing his pastorate of 15 months to a close, was a member of the leading committee.



Write for this Booklet

"Bibles and Bonds" tells the interesting story of a world-wide work and a safe investment yielding as high as 8%.

Ask for Booklet J

American Bible Society
Bible House Astor Place New York

Offering Envelopes
For all purposes. Prompt Service
Ask For Prices
14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

CALIFORNIA

Alturas Reaches Young People

ALTURAS is getting a good hold on the entire community, especially the young people. Drs. L. D. Rathbone and G. W. Hinman visited the church recently and gave the members much encouragement. The Ladies' Missionary Society recently held a thank-offering service which netted $75. Rev. A. P. Orth is pastor.

Resigns from Pasadena Pastorate

The resignation of Rev. A. E. Shattuck from the pastorate of LAKE AVE., PASADENA, has just been made known, the resignation to become effective Feb. 1. Mr. Shattuck came to Pasadena from Kokomo, Ind., three years ago this winter, and in that time has led his parish in a strong way, especially concerning himself with a constructive work along lines of religious education.

The establishment of a community playground for the young people of the church and neighborhood was noted in these columns shortly after Mr. Shattuck's arrival. The young people's initiation and execution of this plan under Mr. Shattuck's direction gave it a special value from the standpoint of stimulating their interest in community service. Other activities of the pastor along religious education lines have resulted in co-ordinating the curriculum and instruction of the various departments in the church school and in the development of a junior congregation at the morning service which has gathered the boys and girls en masse. Mr. Shattuck has displayed an unusually happy ability in his talks to the juniors.

Not alone in providing for the younger members of the church but in shepherding the older ones has the work of the last three years been significant. Perhaps the best testimony in that regard is the record of 94 accessions to membership during that period—a large percentage in a church of 435 members in 1918.

Neither the church nor Mr. Shattuck have as yet announced future plans. S. E. B.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

ALLISON, A. L., Dwight, N. D., to Griggsville, Ill. Accepts to begin Jan. 1.

BURGESS, S. J. (Christian), to Mound City, Ill. At work.

MACDONALD, F. A., Pawcatuck, Westerly, R. I., to Pine St., Lewiston, Me., and to First Presbyterian, Long Branch, N. J. Declines.

MILLER, G. M., Olivet, St. Paul, Minn., to First, Billings, Mont. Accepts to begin Feb. 1.

SCHLARAETZKI, WALTER, Dallas City, Ill., to Lockport. Accepts to begin Jan. 1.

VAUGHAN, STEPHEN, Highland Park and Jackson St., Muskegon, Mich., to Shelby. Accepts.

VIEHE, P. G., Mulford, Muscatine, Io., to Clarion. Accepts to begin Jan. 15.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM, formerly of Mt. Carmel, Pa., to Mt. Zion, Shamokin. Accepts.

Resignation

FAIRBANKS, F. J., South Royalston, Mass.

Installation

DUNCKLEE, M. J., i., Bethany, Bridgeport, Ct., Dec. 9. Sermon by Rev. R. H. Clapp; other parts by Rev. Messrs. J. E. Rees, W. H. Day, D. D., Sherrod Soule, D. D., H. S. Brown, Ph.D. and R. L. Swain, Ph.D.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
CONNECTICUT
Bridgeport, United	32	76
HAWAII
Honolulu, Central Union	7	32
ILLINOIS
Chicago, New First	14	20
MASSACHUSETTS
Newbury, First	8	11
MISSOURI
Kansas City, First	1	8
OREGON
Portland, First		13

Personals

BOCKOVEN, P. J., recently ordained at St. Charles, Minn., is a graduate of Carleton College, class of '17. During his senior year he was the efficient pastor of our churches at Rose Creek and

The Quality Investment

Guaranteed Farm Mortgages
Forty Three Years In Business--- Without Loss to A Client

J·L·Pettyjohn & Co
OLATHE, KANSAS

1921

As the New Year begins serious thought should be given to your investments. Are you obtaining the greatest income with a due regard to safety?

Let us give you information about tax free New England stocks and bonds with established records of earnings.

Earnest E. Smith & Co.
Specialists in New England Securities
52 Devonshire St., Boston
Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges

Toopi, Minn. He served two years as a Marine during the war. He is the son of Rev. W. A. Bockoven of Cresco, Io.

Lane, G. H., of Hartford Seminary and son of Rev. C. H. Lane, a Hartford Seminary professor, is the possessor of the coveted navy cross, issued on Nov. 11. Mr. Lane was a lieutenant, junior grade, in the naval reserve force and at the time he distinguished himself was in command of the U. S. submarine chaser No. 86 "engaged in the important, exacting and hazardous duty of patrolling the waters of the war zone, and operating against enemy submarines." While on patrol duty in the English channel sub chasers 84 and 86 detected a submarine through the listening devices. They immediately engaged the submerged submarine and after bombing it with depth bombs no more was heard of it. The British secret service confirmed the report of the officers of the chasers some time later. Mr. Lane also received a certificate from the British Admiralty for his services in getting a submarine. His older brother, Rev. Stoddard Lane of the Community Church in Bogota, N. J., was twice decorated by the French authorities for his work in the Amherst Ambulance Section.

Larsen, Ernest, has been unanimously chosen as the successor of Rev. E. P. Inglis, as director of Young People's activities of Pilgrim, Oak Park, Ill. Mr. Inglis leaves Jan. 1 to take up study in Union Seminary. Mr. Larsen was Mr. Inglis' room-mate in college. He is a graduate of Franklin Academy and of Grinnell College. He entered army service and received his commission while overseas. His work in the "Y" and in playground work while at college, as well as pastor during that time, gave him experience which he will no doubt fully utilize in his work at Pilgrim. He took up his duties Dec. 1, so as to have a few weeks with Mr. Inglis in preparation for the new task.

Reed, L. F., Boulder, Col., was presented with a fine new Ford Sedan, by the Men's Club of his congregation recently. The presentation occurred at the banquet held in celebration of the Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers, and in the presence of about 300 members of the congregation.

Events to Come

National Congregational Council, Los Angeles, Cal., July 1-8.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Jan. 7, 10.30 A. M. Speakers, Dr. John E. Merrill, Aintab, Turkey; Mrs. Murray Frame. New Year's prayer service.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, New Year's meeting for field reports and prayer, Pilgrim Hall, Boston, Jan. 14, 10.30 A. M.

SUNDAY SCHOOL COUNCIL OF EVANGELICAL DENOMINATIONS, annual meeting, Hotel Severn, Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 18-20.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, Jan. 3, 11 A. M.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Advertising Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

JAMES—Died, John A. James, aged 67, Dec. 14, Weybridge, Vt., as a result of being struck by a tree. Genial, sympathetic helper, pillar of the church, public-spirited citizen, friend of little children, devoted husband and father, a man who carried out in his life the principles he believed.

LEWIS—Died instantly at his home in Bridgton, Me., Dec. 11; Edward L. Lewis, in his sixty-ninth year. Member of First Congregational Church fifty years, clerk and treasurer twenty years; director of Maine Missionary Society.

REV. FREDERICK A. HOLDEN

Died suddenly at Melrose Highlands, Mass., Nov. 22, Rev. Frederick A. Holden, aged 66 years.

Mr. Holden was born in Fitchburg, Mass., and educated at Amherst College and Andover and Hartford Theological Seminaries. Consecrated by his mother's wishes and prayers to a life in the ministry, he held pastorates in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Vermont. All through his life he showed appreciation of thorough educational preparation for one's life work, both for himself and others, and he stimulated many young people to obtain an education. His chief characteristics were great enthusiasm and also firm determination to succeed, no matter how great the obstacles.

He worked heartily through all the agencies of the church, emphasizing the value of the Sabbath school and Christian Endeavor as training schools for developing the young. He also spent some time and energy in promoting community life in the regions around his parishes, through Old Home Week Celebrations and the editing of papers concerned with rural history and life.

He is survived by his wife and seven children.

MRS. HARRIETTE S. NOYES

On Sunday morning, Nov. 21, Mrs. Harriette Sherman Bouton Noyes passed into the light beyond.

She was the daughter of Rev. Nathaniel Bouton of Concord and Mary Ann P. Bell of Chester, granddaughter of Gov. John Bell and Persis S. Bell. She was a member of the Congregational Church for over 70 years. While health permitted her activity in the spiritual, benevolent and social life of the church and the community was a power everywhere felt. When cut off from this she still found expression for her enduring love and interest. The alchemy of her loving spirit transmuted her own sorrows and sufferings into a sympathy with others that passed from her to them almost without words. To one who connects Mrs. Noyes with her earliest memories she seemed the visible expression of grace and peace and love.

The beautiful and gracious presence, beloved of this community from childhood to the end of her

Park Street Church
Beginning Monday, January 3
and continuing for 4 weeks.
EVERY NOON
(Sunday excepted)
"Quiet Talks"
By
MR. S. D. GORDON
He captured the West.
He captured the South.
He will capture Boston.
A heritage for the New Year.
Come in when you can, slip out when you must.
Under the auspices of
The Evangelistic Association of New England

BE GENEROUS

There are many charities, and one of the most deserving is sending The Congregationalist to ministers, Home missionaries, and others whose circumstances do not admit of their meeting the expense of this paper themselves.

These ministers and missionaries are devoting their lives to Christian service, in sacrificial ways that touch the hearts of those who know of their unselfish devotion. They are so limited in resources, and have so few of the advantages which most of us enjoy, that the inspiration and practical help of The Congregationalist from week to week is a Godsend to them.

Would you not like to have a part in this good work? We should be glad of any amount of money donated to our

"Good Will Fund"

$5.00 will do a great deal of good. One lady writes, "I take pleasure in sending you $5.00 for the Good Will Fund, for if I had to get along without The Congregationalist, I should feel that I had lost one of my oldest and most valued friends."

THE CONGREGATIONALIST
14 Beacon Street, Boston 19 W. Jackson Street, Chicago

Margaret Slattery's Books
The Charm of the Impossible, 50c.
The Girl in Her Teens, 85c.
The American Girl and Her Community, $1.35
The Girls' Book of Prayer, 35c. cloth 60c.
The Girl and Her Religion, $1.25.
Just Over the Hill, $1.25.
The Costly Star, 60c.
Add 10% for postage
14 Beacon St. Boston THE PILGRIM PRESS 19 W. Jackson St. Chicago

nearly 89 years, has gone from us, but the fragrance of that lovely life abides. M.

REV. DAVID EVAN JONES

Rev. David Evan Jones was born in Ystalyfera, Wales, Jan. 1, 1840, and died at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. Eugene A. Giddings, West Hartford, Ct., Dec. 9, aged 80 years. Mr. Jones was graduated from Yale Divinity School in 1871 and was one of the best known and loved of the Connecticut clergy, having given his whole ministry of nearly 50 years to this state, serving the churches in Roxbury, Broad Brook and Ellington. Direct and original in his preaching, exceptionally faithful as a pastor and possessing a genius for friendship, his was a most fruitful ministry. He was buried in Roxbury, his first parish, and is survived by his wife, Emma Lathrop of Dinwiddie County, Virginia, and his daughter, Mrs. Giddings, and four grandchildren.

REV. EDWIN J. SINGER

The sudden death of Rev. Edwin J. Singer on Nov. 24 was a profound shock to his many friends throughout the state. His apparent recovery from a critical illness in the summer had brought him back into full service and he was in the midst of his missionary work and plans for the future when the call came to him. He had lunched with Dr. William Ewing, with whom he had been associated for years in the work of the Sunday School Society, and was talking over with him the work of the Kingdom when he was stricken with apoplexy and never recovered consciousness, passing away two days later, on the evening before Thanksgiving.

Mr. Singer came to California from Sunday school missionary work in Washington in 1898 and through all these 22 years has been actively engaged in the missionary work of the Conference. From 1898 to 1908 he was the superintendent of the Sunday School and Publishing Society and assisted in the organization of many schools in out of the way places. For the past ten years he has been connected with the California Home Missionary Society and the Sunday School Extension Society as a joint field worker, except for several intervals when he acted as pastor for various churches for longer or shorter periods. His own characterization of the capacity in which he served so often was as a "doctor of sick churches" and many of the strong churches of Northern California owe to him in large measure their reawakened interest and their present vigorous life. His faithful work and his kindly, genial personality will be greatly missed in the many places that have profited by his service and not least in the Conference office in San Francisco.

For a number of years Mr. and Mrs. Singer had made their permanent home in San Francisco, where they were members of the First Church. The funeral services were held in this church on Nov. 27, under the direction of the State Conference, Pres. F. J. Van Horn of the Board of Trustees presiding. Others who had part in the service were Rev. J. L. Gordon, the pastor of the church, Rev. R. C. Brooks of Berkeley, and Rev. Walter Frear of Oakland.

Make Your Books Work!

By Raymond A. Beardslee

"A book's a book, though there's nothing in it!" And a book's a book, though it stands idle on the shelf, condemned to monotonous oblivion for untold years.

But the real book is the one that both has something in it, and is diligently circulating among likely readers. Public libraries keep their books at work. Why should private libraries suffer from "poor circulation"? Reluctant lendings and tardy returnings are no fit fate for high-spirited books.

One Chistmas the professorial father-in-law of a certain young minister gave him a forty-eight page booklet by Doctor Clarence C. Ussher, entitled "Before Governors and Kings."

He read it.

Craving a repetition of its warm human glow, he read it again on New Year's day.

Then came the bright-idea reaction.

Turning to the front inside cover, he wrote at the top the following inscription:

Summerfield, Vermaine.

Jan. 1, 1919.

Read.

Sign your name.

Give it away.

To be returned Jan. 1, 1920, to

Rev. August Raymond.

That afternoon the little book fared forth in the minister's overcoat pocket, to be given away to the first man met on the street—who happened to be the Superintendent of Schools. And so it disappeared.

For a twelvemonth no word of it was heard, and no attempt was made to trace it, but punctually on Jan. 1, one year later, it came back to the parsonage bearing thirty-nine signatures.

What an itinerary! The Superintendent had given it to his wife. She passed it to a twelve-year old schoolboy across the street, who read it and gave it to his mother. Two women at the other end of the town then read it, and handed it to a young married couple nearby. Thence it went to the house of a neighbor, but before she could read it, her twelve-year old boy and ten-year old girl recorded their names as having read it, together with a girl playmate, the daughter of an earlier reader. A grand new mansion next harbored the pilgrim volume, where it was read by the lady of the house and her sister and their aged mother; and, wonder of wonders, the man of the house also recorded his name, though he must have known from the rest of the family that it was a militant missionary story, and they, when they recommended it, of course knew that he never attended church oftener than once in ten years, by actual record! The next readers were a young married couple, newly come to town, and a young widow, their landlady. Then it was read by an aged deacon, together with his daughter, a minister's widow. They gave it to the sick neighbor next door, and she gave it to a machinist across the way. Then it came back to the center of

PIPE ORGANS
of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.
Electric Organ blowing outfits for organs of any make.
Write, stating which catalog is desired.
HINNERS PIPE ORGANS
Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

BILHORN FOLDING ORGANS THE BEST
TELL THE TALE
BEGINNING with STYLE X. We Guarantee
Send for Catalog. Makers of the famous 3 and 5-ply OAK CASES
BILHORN BROTHERS, 136 West Lake St., Chicago Style O

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
is known all over the country. Four thousand churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio.

MENEELY BELL CO
TROY, N.Y. AND
198 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY
BELLS

Church Chime Peal BELLS Memorial Bells a Specialty
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY CO., BALTIMORE, MD., U. S. A.

Duplex
RICHMOND, VA.
PATENTED D E TRADE MARK

Pastor's Salary Increased 20%

Duplex—Dear Sirs: At the last meeting of the official board our minister's salary was increased 20%. This I feel is entirely due to the Under Shepherd's Service. In addition to the salary increase, there seems to be a great deal more thought and prayer in behalf of the minister.

Paul D. Maneval
Williamsport, Pa.

The Under Shepherd's Service referred to by Mr. Maneval is a simple plan devised by Duplex — Richmond, Va., whereby any church can increase its minister's salary. It need not cost you a penny. Shall we tell you about it?

The Duplex Envelope Company
Originators of the Duplex Envelope System
Richmond, Virginia

the town again by the hand of the deacon's granddaughter, just married, who gave it to the aged Town Clerk, in whose home she formerly worked. He read it, and so did his two daughters and their helper. An aged saint and her caretaker, a banker-deacon and his wife, a young lady stenographer, two old ladies, a Tech student, and two more old ladies, all enrolled their names as the year wore along; and the list finally closed with the teacher of a large class of girls in the Sunday school.

Vapo-Cresolene. Used for more than forty years. The benefit derived from it is unquestionable.
(Established 1879)
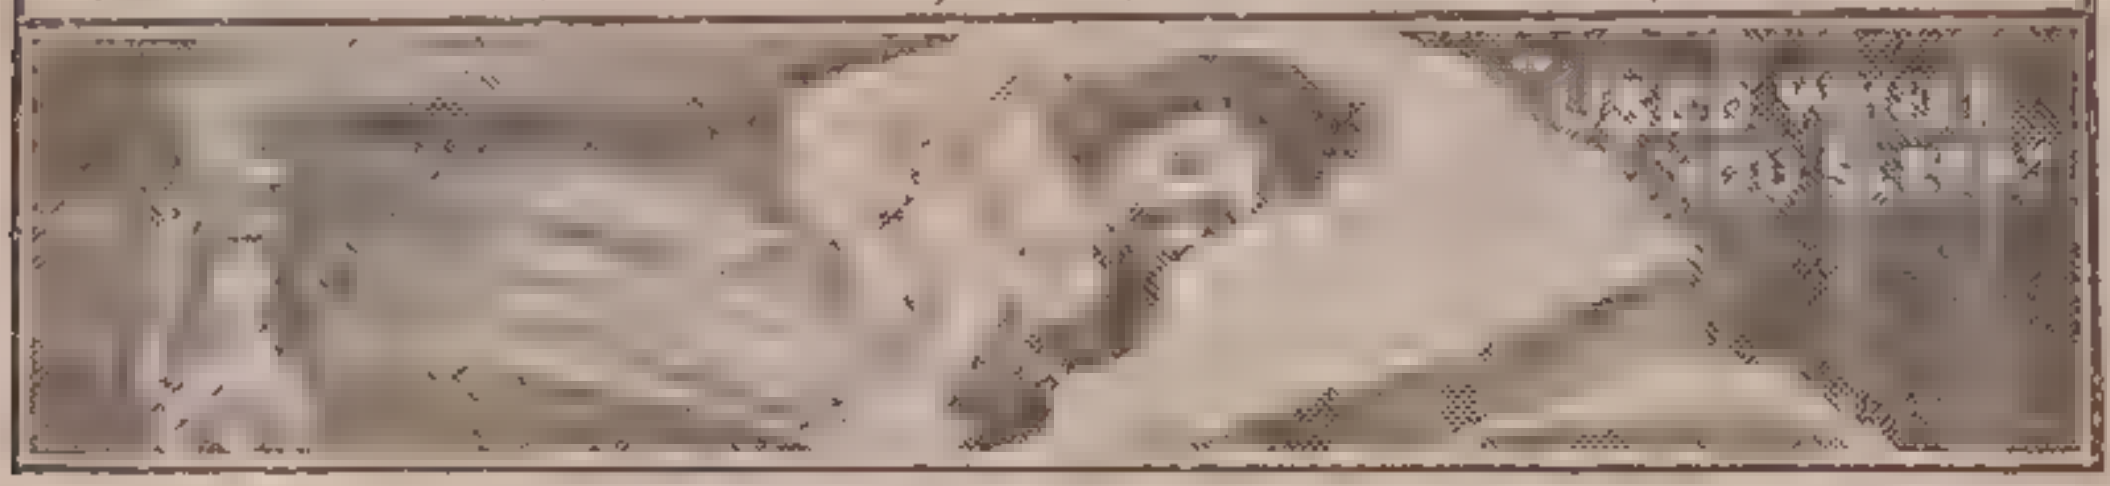
FOR more than a generation we have been receiving grateful testimony to the virtues of this thoroughly tested and proven treatment. It stops violent coughing, and difficult breathing, assuring restful sleep because the antiseptic vapor carries healing with every breath. Booklet 60 tells why the diseases for which Cresolene is recommended yield to this simple and dependable treatment.
Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists
VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt Street, New York



OVER 70 YEARS' USE proves Superiority in bringing prompt relief from coughing, tickling in the throat, inflammation, hoarseness and other bronchial discomforts. Guaranteed safe. Prices: 15c, 35c, 75c and $1.25
JOHN I. BROWN & SON, Boston, Mass.
BROWN'S Bronchial TROCHES

MR. C. E. BROOKS

Don't Wear a Truss
Brooks' Appliance, the modern scientific invention, the wonderful new discovery that relieves rupture, will be sent on trial. No obnoxious springs or pads.
Brooks' Rupture Appliance
Has automatic Air Cushions. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No lies. Durable, cheap. Sent on trial to prove it. Protected by U. S. patents. Catalog and measure blanks mailed free. Send name and address today.
Brooks Appliance Co., 473 C State St., Marshall, Mich.

ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION
RELIEVES SAFELY AND PROMPTLY
CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH
Also wonderfully effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.
All druggists or
W. EDWARDS & SON London, England
E. FOUGERA & CO. 90-92 Beekman St. N. Y.

Cutícura Soap
—The Healthy—
Shaving Soap
Cuticura Soap shaves without mug. Everywhere 25c.

Why not keep about a score of different books working like that all the time, reporting themselves automatically once a year? If it is a boys' book, stipulate that it shall be given away to another boy. Confine some of your choices to men. Start a few through the Post Office and direct that they be given away by mail. Leave one at the hospital every now and then and let it gather names under its wing as it dispenses cheer.

The system is automatic. The possibilities are infinite.

"I shot an arrow into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For so swiftly it flew, the sight
Could not follow it in its flight.

"I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For who has sight so keen and strong
That it can follow the flight of song?

"Long, long afterward in an oak
I found the arrow, still unbroke;
And the song, from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend."

It pays to shoot arrows, and sing songs—and give away books with strings on them—at random. The arrows and the songs you may expect to lose; but the books will come back with their autographic itineraries of very precious associations.

V. Constanta's Plan

(Continued from page 858)

among us, good wife," he replied patiently. "Damaris looks peaked enough to stand a full feeding with good grace, and as for Oceanus, who has not his milk-teeth yet, there is time and to spare for trouble."

"Then, father, we may try my plan?" Little Constanta's face was full of pleading.

"If Elder Brewster think it fit and seemly, and Governor Bradford consent to excuse the lads from their stints of labor—yes. But mark you, I have not yet promised it."

"But we may ask the others?"

"That can do no harm, if you make no rash promises among ye."

"Then come, Desire, let us haste to tell Priscilla and Humility and Elizabeth all about the plan—if mother permits us—and on the way we can look for the early flowers that are showing, so we may know where to find them for the farewell party," and the children walked soberly down the road, looking with eager eyes up toward the Governor's house, which stood at the crossing of the two streets of Plymouth Towne. So busy were they talking over Constanta's plan, that they walked farther than they intended.

"Let us go back," suggested Desire. "If we go farther, it will be near sunset before we get home, and that is against the rule."

"But look," cried Constanta, "at that clump of ferns there amid the rocks. Are they not like lovely green feathers? 'Twill take but a minute to pluck a spray, and will they not make our feast-table beautiful?" And running toward the spot she stooped and plucked one of the long and beautiful fronds. As she did so there was a rustle among the leaves and moss, and Constanta uttered a cry of pain and fear!

"What is it?" cried Desire, starting forward toward her friend, when a voice said sharply, "Do not move!" and a tall Indian woman sprang from the neighboring trees and underbrush and ran swiftly to Constanta, who was swaying dizzily and would have fallen had not the strong brown arms steadied her. With a swift movement the Squaw stooped and, drawing off the child's shoe and stocking, pressed her hands so closely about the ankle that again Constanta cried out.

"Snake-bite," said the woman. "Snake-weed kill poison." And she took from the pouch that hung from her waist an odd-looking weed that had tiny red and silvery blossoms and wrapped it about the little girl's ankle, tying it securely with long spears of grass. Then motioning for Constanta to put on her shoe and stocking, she said: "Dew-of-the-Moon knows many things. She has the healing secret. Go back to the wigwams of the white strangers and say Dew-of-the-Moon is the white man's friend." And before the wonderstruck children could ask a question she had vanished among the thick pines that bordered the road.

"O Constanta, Mistress Hopkins will be angered and perchance blame me!" cried Desire, who was rather timid. "We will surely be scolded and mayhap lose the party!"

"Nay," said Constanta. "Mother and father never break their word; and besides, Desire, they will be too thankful that the snake-bite did not hurt me. But anyway, we have had a great adventure. And was not that a funny name—Dew-of-the-Moon? I shall never forget her. And now we know where to get green things for the party."

"You will get them in other company than mine," replied Desire, a little ungratefully, maybe. "If we do not hasten, it will be curfew-time, and there will be more of a fuss than when John Billington was lost," and Desire half dragged Constanta, who, in spite of Dew-of-the-Moon's cure, had a stiff ankle and limped along painfully, and with a good deal of misgiving in her mind, though she tried to bear a bold front.

Copyright, 1920, by
Congregational Publishing Society

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost fifteen cents additional.
Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

PASTOR WANTED

Young man, good mind, good speaker, liberal theology, some promise of human success, church near Chicago, salary $3,000. Give ample references. Address "V. W.," Congregationalist.

PASTORATE WANTED

Ordained minister, higher degree in Sociology, doing promising original work in social science, seeks a pulpit near a university. Church must value thoughtful Christian interpretation of the times, pay good salary, and relieve minister from minor parish details. Ten years' experience. Best references. Address "M. J.," Congregationalist.

POSITION WANTED

College Presidents—A psychologist of training, experience and proven ability, whose work is receiving recognition, will leave a University position for permanent connection in a field of greater service—The Christian College. If your school offers an opportunity for genuine service and you care to strengthen your staff, write "Rendus," care Congregationalist.

Housekeeper or companion by middle-aged lady of refinement and ability. Good manager. Highest references. "S. N.," care Congregationalist.

MISCELLANEOUS

One hundred sixty acres improved farm, also three hundred twenty acres partially improved. Fine climate, water, school, church and soil. In New Mexico. Write owner for terms. Box 262, Nogales, Arizona.

Benevolent Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D. D., Secretary; Rev. John J. Walker, Associate Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 609 Congregational House, Boston.

CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, maintained by the Congregational Conferences of the six New England States, offers aid to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies in New England and elsewhere. Congregational House, Boston. Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Secretary, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D. D., Chairman.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Zeigler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BOSTON and vicinity (Incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel C. Bushnell, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Fred L. Norton, Sec., 919 Tremont Building, Boston.

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 503 Congregational House, Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIOR, 19 S. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas., Friday Meeting, 10 A. M.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIFIC, 760 Market St., Room 421, San Francisco. Mrs. Ernest A. Evans, President; Mrs. W. W. Ferrier, Treasurer; Miss E. S. Benton, Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Mrs. P. S. Suffern, Treas.; Miss Miriam F. Choate, Sec.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION (of Massachusetts and Rhode Island), Mrs. Amos L. Hatheway, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec., 607 Congregational House, Boston.

Boston Seaman's Friend Society

Incorporated 1829

306 Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

President, Samuel Usher; Cor. Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton. A Congregational Society devoted to the material, social and moral welfare of seamen of all nations and supported mainly by the New England churches. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Room at Tarpaulin Cove. Bequests should be made payable to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society. Contributions from churches and individuals solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis.

American Seamen's Friend Society

76 Wall St., New York, Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational National and International Seamen's Society.

Maintains a Sailor's Home and Institute, 507 West Street, New York.

Loan Libraries ($25 each) placed on vessels sailing from New York.

Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.

Publishes the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).

Officers: John B. Calvert, D. D., President; George Sidney Webster, D. D., Secretary. Send contributions to Clarence C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 76 Wall Street, New York.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817.

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps all churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.
8 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, a Constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trusts for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS can reach every principal city and town in the United States through the advertising columns of The Congregationalist and Advance.

For rates and other information write

KENNETH S. BALLOU,
Advertising Manager.

National Agencies

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Moderator, Rev. Henry Churchill King, Oberlin, O.
Secretary ad interim, Rev. Edwin D. Eaton,
289 Fourth Ave., New York
Assistant Secretary, Truman J. Spencer,
289 Fourth Ave., New York
Treasurer, Frank F. Moore,
287 Fourth Ave., New York

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon Street, Boston
19 West Jackson Street, Chicago

REV. FRANK M. SHELDON, General Secretary
HARRY M. NELSON, Treasurer
VERNON M. SCHENCK, General Sales Manager
A. A. HAGSTROM, Western Manager
KENNETH S. BALLOU, Advertising Manager

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT

287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.

Established by the National Council at Grand Rapids, in 1919

DR. LUCIEN C. WARNER, Chairman
REV. HERMAN F. SWARTZ, General Secretary
REV. JAMES E. MCCONNELL, Ass't Secretary
WALTER E. BELL, Treasurer
REV. JOHN LUTHER KILBON, Financial Sec'y

Program for the coming year to include Missionary Education, Stewardship, and a Financial Campaign in behalf of our denominational work.

Regional Directors for 1920-21

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont: Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Massachusetts, Rhode Island: Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D. D., 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.
Connecticut, New York: Rev. Charles E. Burton, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Porto Rico: Rev. George L. Cady, D. D., 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee: Rev. L. H. Keller, D. D., Central Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Colored Churches of South: Rev. Alfred Lawless, Jr., D. D., 45½ Auburn Ave., Atlanta, Ga.
Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia: Rev. John Luther Kilbon, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska: Rev. Robert W. Gammon, D. D., 19 West Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.
Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota: Rev. William F. English, Jr., Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., and 19 So. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana: Rev. W. W. Scudder, D. D., Fountain and Aubert Sts., St. Louis, Mo.
Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico: Rev. W. J. Minchin, D. D., Guardian Trust Bldg., Denver, Col.
Southern California, Arizona: Rev. George L. Kenngott, Ph.D., 831 So. Hope St., Los Angeles, Cal.
Northern California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Alaska: Rev. H. H. Kelsey, D. D., Phelan Bldg., San Francisco, Cal., and Plymouth Church, Seattle, Wash.

All correspondence relative to the local work of promotion should be addressed to the Director of your Region.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

Conserves the welfare of the ministry by making modest grants to meet the needs of aged ministers, or their widows and children.

Rev. William A. Rice, Secretary
Rev. Charles S. Mills, Associate Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

375 Lexington Ave., New York City

A sound, scientific, contributory system of old-age pensions for the Congregational minister, affording also protection for disability and the defense of his family in case of his untimely death; endowed by the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. William A. Rice, Associate Secretary
B. H. Fancher, Treasurer

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

375 Lexington Avenue, New York

A Permanent Tercentenary Memorial Fund of $5,000,000 held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council, the income used to endow the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers by providing funds to supplement the minister's annual payments toward old age annuities.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, Executive Secretary
Lucius R. Eastman, Chairman Executive Committee

National Societies

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Edward Lincoln Smith

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Wm. E. Strong
Candidate Secretary, Rev. Alden H. Clark
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr.
19 So. Lasalle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast District, Rev. Henry H. Kelsey,
Phelan Bldg., San Francisco
New York Office, 287 Fourth Ave., N. Y.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Rev. William S. Beard, Secretary of Promotion
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry,
Secretary of Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Nineteen self-supporting state organizations are in Federated relations with the National Society. The state Superintendent or Secretary is the official representative of all home mission interests.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. George L. Cady
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee } Corresponding Secretaries
Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis, Associate Secretary
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Woman's Work

Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese and Hindus; in Island Territories of Porto Rico and Hawaii. New work in Southwest taken under instruction of National Council.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

289 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
(Church Extension Boards)
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Rev. Charles H. Richards, Editorial Secretary

Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. In sixty-six years it has helped to build 4,982 churches and 1,334 parsonages.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, General Secretary
Rev. A. E. Holt, Social Service Sec.
Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Missionary Education Sec.
Samuel F. Wilkins, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service and Missionary Education; aids Colleges, Academies, Training Schools, Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Charles E. Burton, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary

Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities and among immigrants.

THE CONGREGATIONAL COMMISSION ON EVANGELISM

287 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Established by the National Council at Des Moines in 1904.

Rev. William Horace Day, Chairman
Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, Executive Secretary

Promotes an all-the-year-around program of church work to enlist men in the worship and service of the church and provides helps for the use of pastors and churches.

Record Books for Church and Church School For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Superintendent, the Secretary. Roll Books, Class Books, Collection Envelopes.

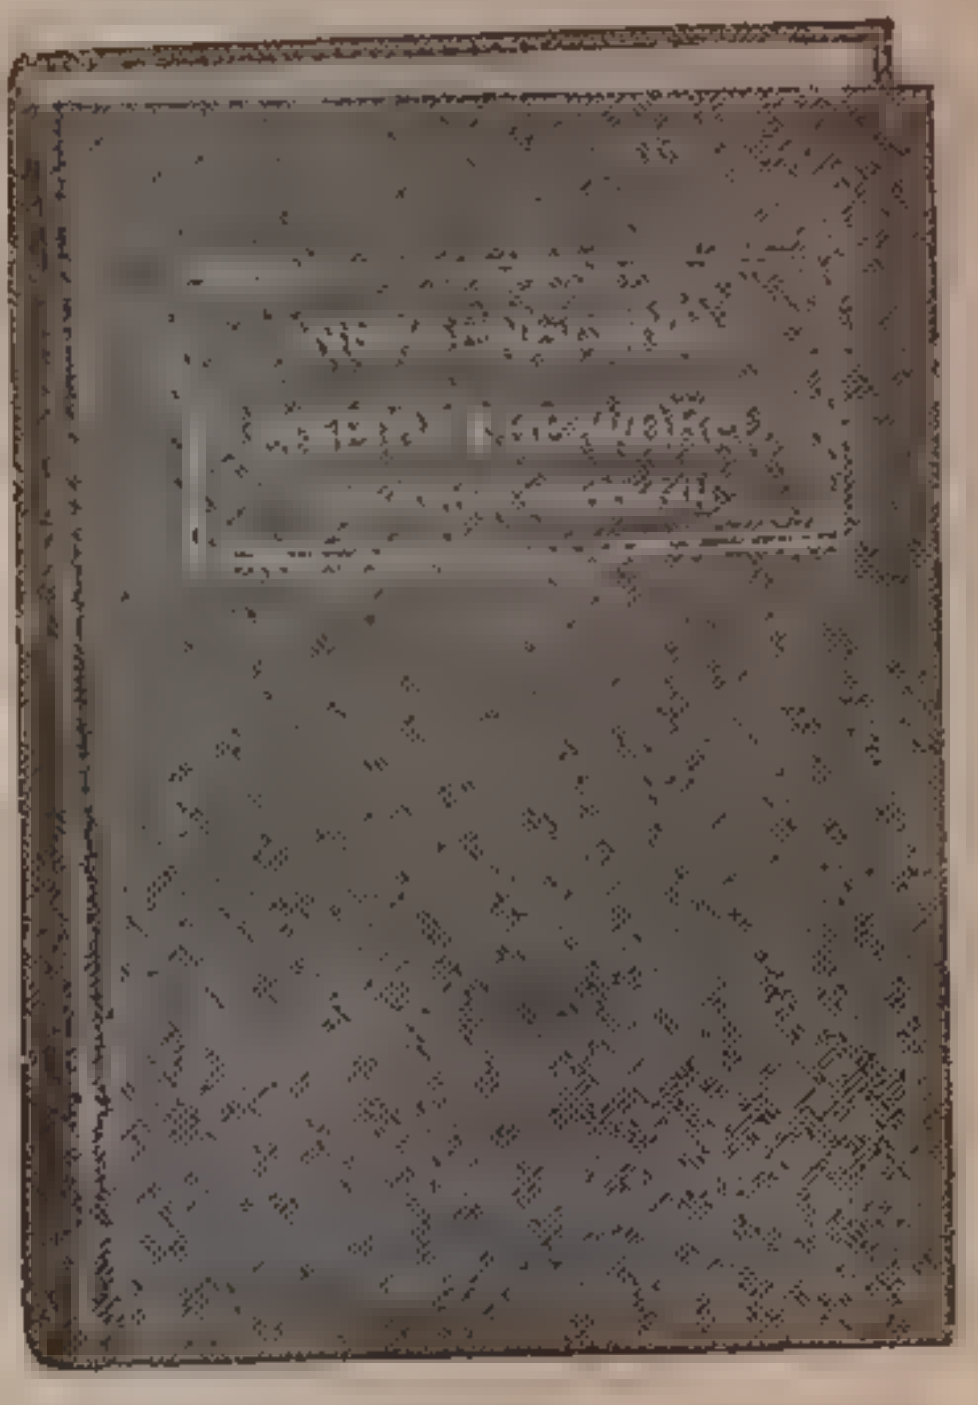
ASK FOR CATALOGUES

14 Beacon Street
Boston

THE PILGRIM PRESS

19 W. Jackson St.
Chicago

New England in the Life of the World



By DR. HOWARD A. BRIDGMAN

The Boston Herald in a leading editorial of December 31st, under a caption of "The Other New Englands," says:

> The Other New Englands
>
> Less than a century and a half after the Pilgrims had landed at Plymouth the long series of migrations from New England to the westward began. Before England had acknowledged the independence of the United States a Governor of Connecticut, the famous Jonathan Trumbull, called by Washington "Brother Jonathan," had written of the desirability of removals westward on a large scale because thus other New Englands would be created. And soon there was another New England in Western and Central New York, another in Northeastern Pennsylvania, another in Northern Ohio; there was a New England in Southern Michigan, one in Central Illinois, and yet another in Upper Illinois and adjacent Wisconsin. And clear across the continent the Yankee settlers went until finally they came to rest "where rolls the Oregon."
>
> The story makes an epic often told, a thrilling tale of courage and patience, a fitting sequel to the history of the settlement at Plymouth, whose tercentenary is commemorated today. The Pilgrim and the Puritan distributed themselves over all the northern half of the United States because theirs was the spirit of enterprise, individualism and thrift. Wherever they made their homes they founded the institutions distinctive of New England.
>
> * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *
>
> Every page in the long story of the filling up of the interior and the far coast by the "wandering Yankees" from New England has its interesting incident, often of an amusing kind. One day a man from Boston and another from Portland, Me., stand in a little hamlet near the Pacific Coast and toss a coin; the Maine man wins and therefore the name of Boston does not today apply to the thriving city in Oregon.

This is the wonderfully fascinating story which Dr. Bridgman tells. Every page is full of interest and the facts of New England's hardy pioneers now for the first time brought together will be read and treasured from coast to coast.

CONTENTS

Chapter — Page
Foreword ix
I The New England Dynamic 3
II Transplanting the Pilgrim Seed 21
III New England and New York 29
IV New England and Ohio 41
V New England and Michigan 61
VI New England and Wisconsin 75
VII New England and Illinois 91
VIII New England and Minnesota 109
IX New England and Iowa 123
X New England and Kansas 141
XI New England and the Dakotas 165
XII New England and California 183
XIII New England and the Pacific Northwest 205
XIV New England and Hawaii 231
XV New England and the Near East 251
XVI New England and India 273
XVII New England and China 303
XVIII New England and Japan 323
XIX New England and Micronesia 345
XX The New England Type Modified by World Contacts 357
Bibliography 369
Index 373

$4.00. Postage 12 cents

---

14 BEACON STREET
BOSTON

THE PILGRIM PRESS

19 W. JACKSON STREET
CHICAGO